Verſ.9. Mine heritage is to me as a ſpeckled Bird. From Verſ.7. the Lord declares to Ieremiah, that although Iudea were his inheritance, and he hath hitherto greatly tendered it, although full of all manner of ſinne, cauſing the Prophet to ask complainingly, why the wicked, ſuch as they generally were, proſpered ſo: yet it ſhould no more be dear unto him, but as a Lion in a wood, crying out againſt him, verſ.8. and here as a ſpeckled Bird, whereby Jerom, Hugo and Thomas Aquinas, underſtand a Peacock, or Parriot, that a man keeps for his delight, ſome a night-Owl, which is white and hath ſpots; ſome the Jack-daw in Æſops Fables, becauſe againſt both theſe the other birds come to beat them and peck them, as being envied by them for their different colour, ſome birds ſpotted with bloud. But forſomuch as the ſame inheritance is compared before to a Lion, and it is moſt probable, that another ſimilitude to the ſame purpoſe added, taken from Fowls, muſt be of ſuch a Fowl as is likeſt to a Lion; Calvin rather holds that a ſtrange bird is meant, that is, a bird of prey that cannot be cicurated, but flieth wildly about making a prey of the tame, as Kites and Hawks which are ſpeckled, and flie one alone. For ſuch was Iudea, that is, the Princes and mighty men thereof to the poorer ſort, as is often complained. But I ſee no cauſe of going from the firſt expounding it of a Peacock; For both the words ſignifie a divers coloured Fowl, and ſuch is the Peacock more then any other, and for the glorious tail proudeſt; and the Jews were notorious not only for cruelty, for which they are often compared to a Lion, but alſo for pride, for which they are here compared to a Peacock for their pride: ſee more Chap. 23.9. 15.18. And it is to be noted that he ſaith, My heritage is to me as a Lion, as a ſpeckled Bird to me, denoting, that the cruelty, pride and contempt of the wicked againſt the Prophets of God, is againſt him, by reaſon of their near union unto him. So Moſes ſaid, Your murmuring is not againſt me but againſt God, and the Lord to Samuel, They have not rejected thee, but me: and Chriſt to his Apoſtles, He that deſpiſeth you deſpiſeth me; and to Saul, Why perſecuteſt thou me? And what ſhall be done to Gods heritage thus degenerating? The birds are againſt her round about, and come all ye beaſts of the field to devour; wherein he continueth the Allegory, She is as a proud and contemptuous bird, and as a ſavage Lion, therefore this ſhall be her doom, the people of all Nations, as birds and beaſts of prey ſhall come about her, as Lions, and Tygers, and Eagles againſt her alone, and ſo ſhall eaſily overcome and deſtroy her, and this was done when the Caldees came. Hieron. Hugo. Th.Aquinas. Calvin. Note.

Verſ.10. Many Paſtours have deſtroyed my vineyard. Some by Paſtors here underſtand the Prieſts and wicked Prophets amongſt the Jews, bringing deſtruction upon them by their ſins. But others better, the Princes coming with Nebuchadnezzar, before alſo thus called Chap.6.3. For this agreeth beſt with the words before-going, wherein they are called beaſts.

Verſ.11. Being deſolate it mourneth to me, Vulgar, Mourned upon me, and this is according to the Hebrew, being expounded of their lamentable complaining againſt God, as dealing moſt cruelly by them, when they ſuffered ſuch grievous things, by Lyra, Hugo, Vatablus, Caldee, &c. Calvin takes it to be meant of the contrary diſpoſition to that which they were now in, as following Lyra. Raban. Calv.

ing the former reading, now they rejoyced in evil doing, and could not be moved by any denouncing of judgement to repent, but then they mourned, and came humbly craving help of the Lord.

Verſ.13. They have ſown Wheat, but ſhall reap thorns, they have put themſelves to pain, but reaped no profit, and they ſhall be aſhamed of your revenues. Hebr. They have received for inheritance, but profited not. For the word is נחלו and the Vulgar renders it ſo. Vatablus, They have been ſick through travel and labour amongſt you by inſtructing and admoniſhing, thus ſowing wheat, as it were, but ye brought forth of this good ſeed nothing but thorns, that is, the curſed fruits of ſinne and rebellion, ſo that their great pains profited you not, but they were even aſhamed hereof. Thus he, underſtanding the Prophets ſent amongſt them from time to time. And the word נחלו he deriveth from חלה to be ſick, to make his Expoſition the more probable, and who elſe can be ſaid to ſow wheat, but holy Prophets? And were not the Jews hereupon as thorns unto them, pricking and vexing them with contempt, deriſion, and evil entreating them? And might they not be aſhamed to ſee no better fruit of all their care and pains, on the peoples part brought forth? And to ſhew that they are not the ſame that ſow, and that bring forth fruit, he ſaith, They are aſhamed of your encreaſe or revenue. Yet Calvin and other Expoſitors reject this, and expound it of the wicked Jews, who are ſaid to ſow wheat, but to reap thorns, becauſe according to their own opinion they ſow good ſeed, whereof ſafety and preſervation ſhould come in time of danger, by their enemies, in making a league with the Ægyptians, providing arms and men, and ſtrong places for defence: but it fell out clean contrary, the Caldees coming the product of all this was nothing but thorns, they had no more benefit thereof, then a laborious Husbandman of his ſowing good ſeed in his field, that yeeldeth thorns and thiſtles through Gods curſe upon his labour, as it was threatned to Cain, that when he ſhould ſow the earth, it ſhould bring forth thorns unto him. And whereas he addeth, They ſhall inherit but not profit, for thus the word may beſt be tranſlated, it notably agreeth, the Jews had received Canaan for an inheritance by Gods ſingular gift, ſeating them there hitherto againſt the attempts of all enemies that ſought to diſpoſſeſſe them, but now this peculiar favour ſhould benefit them no longer, but they ſhould be left to the will of their enemies to be carried away captive. And whereas the change of the perſon is againſt this Expoſition, They ſhall be aſhamed of your revenue, the Vulgar and Junius alſo render it, Ye ſhall be aſhamed; and Calvin becauſe it is, They ſhall be aſhamed, Hebr. ſaith, it is thus ſaid per Enallagen, which is ordinary in Scripture, it being meant, Ye ſhall be aſhamed; I cannot ſee how that of Vatablus can ſo well ſtand, although agreed to by Iſidor, becauſe both before and after the wicked Jews, not the holy Prophets are threatned, and whether they prevail or no by their labours, it cannot be ſaid, that they profit not, for their labours and reward are with the Lord, *Iſa.*49.4. and they are not aſhamed, when they prevail not to convert, but have the glory of true Prophets by the event anſwering to the judgements by them threatned. Wherefore I conclude, that when he ſaith, They ſhall be aſhamed of your bringings forth, he changeth the perſon for nothing elſe, but to ſhew that they were the men of whom he ſpake, and whom he threatned all this while, that by thus coming home unto them, he might the more affect them.

Verſ.14. Thus ſaith the Lord againſt all mine evil neighbours. Here the Lord after ſuch terrible threatnings, as go before againſt the Jews, to pull them out as ſheep to the ſlaughter, that the elect amongſt them might not be utterly diſcouraged, threatens revenge upon their evil neighbour-Nations, Ammonites, Moabites, &c. that had divers times oppreſſed them, and now rejoyced at Iſraels miſery by the Aſſyrians, and would do the like out of their imbred hatred againſt the Jews at their ſufferings by the Caldees. He threatens that for their malice and oppreſſions, whereby they had oppreſſed Iſrael, in favour of them, his peculiar people, they ſhould be plucked out of their Lands, and to Verſ.15. Pluck the houſe of Judah from amongſt them, and to reſtore them in much compaſſion to their own Land. For many of them moſt probably at ſundry times being taken in warre, when the Jews were grown weak, were made ſlaves by them; but now the Lord promiſeth to take a time to pluck them even by force out of their hands, intimating, that otherwiſe they would never let them go free. But withall, to magnifie his mercy the more towards all Nations, he alſo promiſeth after the plucking out of them, that he will reſtore each people to their own inheritance again, provided that they turn to the Lord; to expreſſe Verſ.16. which, he ſaith, If they ſhall ſwear, The Lord liveth] learning this of the Jews, as the Jews had before learned of them to ſwear by Baal, whereby he fore-telleth their converſion under the Goſpel, and not of neighbour-Nations only, but of all others throughout the world, theſe being ſpecified, but the reſt underſtood, becauſe they were to the Jews unknown.

Verſ.17. But on the contrary ſide he addeth, If they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and deſtroy that Nation. Fore-ſhewing hereby, that ſome of thoſe amongſt whom the Goſpel ſhould be preached, ſhould a long time oppoſe it, as they did indeed, perſecuting thoſe that believed and ſought the propagation of the faith, but it ſhould turn to their own utter ruine, and ſo it ſhall of all particular perſons that obey it not to repent and believe. For Jeſus Chriſt is both a rock to build upon, and a rock to ſtumble at and break in pieces unbelievers.

that it is ſaid, If they ſhould learn of his people to ſwear, &c. where ſwearing is put

CHAP. XIII.

Verſ.1,2,3, &c. to V.12. HEre for twelve verſes together is nothing elſe but a relation, how the Lord commanded Jeremiah to take a linen Girdle, and having worne it a while to go and hide it by the river Euphrates at Babylon, and after a certain time to go and take it up out of the ground again, which he doing found it corrupted ſo, that it was good for nothing. Whereupon the Lord ſaith, That Iſrael was to him as a Girdle, which he had put near about his loins, the ſeat of his affections, to ſhew his great love unto that people, but whereas he expected to have had praiſe and glory from them, they contrariwiſe by their wickedneſs were ſo corrupted that he had now rejected them. All the queſtion that can be moved here is, at what time this was done? Why the Lord would teach this by a Girdle, and whether Jeremiah did indeed, as it is here Hieron. ſaid, or ſpiritually and in viſion only? Ierom thinks that it was done in the dayes of Zedekiah when Nebuchadnezzar came againſt the Jews, and that therefore it could not be done indeed, but in viſion, for want of time; and he thinketh it ſomewhat abſurd, that he ſhould indeed go ſo long a journey in a looſe-garment girt to him amongſt a people at ſo great enmity with the Jews to do this thing, as not being likely to be permitted by them, And this is alſo Calvin. followed by Calvin, ſaying, that it is abſurd to hold that it was done ſo indeed, becauſe to go to Euphrates, and come again, and after many dayes to go and come again, would require a long time, the journey being ſix hundred and eighty miles from Ieruſalem to Babylon, where this river was, and Anathoth was within three miles of Ieruſalem, ſo that it would require many moneths to do this, beſides the time coming between one going, and another which is ſaid to be At the end of many dayes, and this phraſe, At the end of dayes, is commonly put for a year, as *Gen.*4. therefore by theſe words, From the end of many dayes muſt be meant a year at the leaſt, if not more, unleſſe we ſhall hold that the dayes wherein this Girdle lay in the cleft of a rock there, were numbered as anſwering to the years that the Jews ſhould continue in captivity, ptivity, viz. ſeventy in all, which time they ſhould lie in obſcurity, putrifying and corrupting through manifold miſeries. For ſo he ſeems to underſtand the hiding of this Girdle there, till it was corrupted, as ſignificative of the Jews being carried thither, and detained there in miſery. It is therefore ſaith he, ſpoken per hypotypoſin after the manner of Rhetoricians, who are wont to ſet forth things, as ſo or ſo done, the more lively to expreſſe that which they would, the more to affect the hearers. And of this kinde of teaching the Jews had need, by reaſon of their great ſtupidity and dulneſſe of underſtanding. And if this had been really done ſo, it muſt be granted, that Jeremiah intermitted his Miniſtry all this time, which is improbable. Thus alſo Lyra and Vatablus. But the moſt learned of the Hebrew Expoſitors take it to have been really done, becauſe the Lord ſet his Prophets not only to teach by word, but alſo by their actions for more evidence, ſo *Iſa.*20. he went naked, and *Ezek.*4.12. he ate the dung of beaſts; the one to ſhew the naked carrying away of the Jews into Captivity; the other, the famine that ſhould be amongſt them, forcing them to eat moſt baſe food. Thus alſo Theodoret, Hugo, Thomas Aquinas, Iſidor. And if it were the Lords will that Jeremiah ſhould go and do thus, and ſpend much time ſo, and till that he had done all this, did forbear any other propheſying, I ſee not any abſurdity in it. For the time when this was done, from *Chap.*3.6. hitherto the time is not ſet down of his propheſying, but only there, In the dayes of Joſiah. Only Chap. 21. mention is made of the time of Zedekiah, and *Chap.*22. of Jehoiakin or Choniah, who reigned immediatly before him a very ſhort time. But after Joſiah before Jehoiakin was Jehoiakim an eleven years, and before Jehoiakim, Jehoahaz three moneths; and *Chap.*1. without diſtinction of the times of the Kings reigns, it is generally ſaid, in Joſiah his time, anno 13. of his reign, and of Jehoiakim to the eleven years of Zedekiah. So that this muſt needs be either in Ioſiah his time or Iehoiakims, not in Zedekiahs, as Jerom conjectureth, for of that there is no probability. For the thing taken, a linen Girdle, and that unwaſhed with water, hereby is meant one black and not whited nor ſmooth, but rough, and ſo without all beauty, and undecent and unpleaſing to be worn: for a linen Girdle or any thing made of linen is firſt put in water, and then laid a whiting, and finally waſhed with lie and ſope. But the Lord would not have this Girdle waſhed, but taken as it is firſt made, to ſhew, that the Jewiſh Nation when the Lord firſt choſe it, was black by ſinne, and nothing amiable, but by him taken and girt, as it were, to him, by that dear affection which he bare unto it, being by this election ſanctified and made white and glorious before all the Nations round about, in expectation that it ſhould be a glory and praiſe *verſ.*11. unto him, which the Church is, when ſhe liveth in obedience to his Laws, but otherwiſe a diſhonour and occaſion of blaſpheming his holy name, as it is ſaid *Rom.*2. Calvin ſaith, That the word may either be rendred linen Girdle or Breeches, ſuch as the Prieſts ſometime did wear; but it is generally taken for a Girdle, and ſo it beſt agreeth. For a linen Girdle ſignifieth chaſtity, as Pierius ſheweth in his Hieroglyphicks both amongſt the Hebrews, Greeks and Latins, and therefore the Virgins of the Trezenians being to marry, dedicated their Girdles to Pallas. And the Prieſts of the Jews muſt wear a linen Girdle in their miniſtration, to put them in minde of continency. Here a Girdle is an embleme of the chaſt love, wherewith God loved Iſrael, eſpouſing that ſtate only to himſelf, and requiring that it ſhould likewiſe be knit in chaſt love unto him. But Iſrael contrariwiſe committed adultery by worſhipping ſtrange gods, for which he biddeth Ieremiah to go and carry this Girdle to Euphrates, and hide it in a cliff of a Rock there for many dayes, to ſhew the Captivity in the Countrey where Euphrates was, that is, into Babylon, ſhortly to come, where they ſhould lie rotting, as it were, in baſeneſſe and ſervility, and ſinne together many years, ſo that if God ſhould have dealt with them after their deſervings, even thoſe ſeventy years being expired, he might have left them ſtill in miſery, as a man leaves his rotten Girdle to become dung, but that for his mercies ſake, and to magnifie his power he was pleaſed to bring them home again. Moreover a Girdle is an enſign of honour, being curiouſly wrought with gold and precious ſtones, for which Jonathan is ſaid to have given his Girdle to David, and *Iſa.*22. that Eliakim ſhould be girt with Shebnahs Girdle, and that all the glory of the houſe of David ſhould be hanged upon him, and *Revel.*1. Chriſt appears glorioully girt about with a golden Girdle. And in this ſenſe it is added here, That thou mighteſt be unto me a glory and praiſe. 3. A Girdle is a military implement, for which it is ſaid, Epheſ.6. Your loins girt about with the girdle of verity, which is when we are firm and ſtedfaſt in the truth; and Reſiſt the devil ſtedfaſt in faith, 1 Pet.5.9. as the loins being girt with a Girdle are ſtrengthned to travel. Note. As Iſrael, ſo every faithfull perſon without any deſert on his part is dear to God, and is near to him, not as a leather or woollen Girdle above all our apparel, but a linen worn next the skin, as one ſaith Travellers were wont to ſew ſome money into a linen Girdle, and put it next their skin, that there it might be hidden from thieves. But as God bears ſo dear an affection to the believer, ſo he expects reciprocal love again; and if we love him, that we ſhould keep his Commandments, which will be to his glory, and if the believer doth thus, he ſhall be as his Girdle; but if not, to Euphrates he ſhall be carried to putrifie in his ſins, after which the Lord will reject him, as being unuſefull for him any more.

Verſ.12. Every bottle ſhall be filled with wine. Having by the ſimilitude of a Girdle ſet forth the baſeneſſe that the Jews ſhould be brought unto, now he ſheweth their deſtruction by another of bottles, wherein men put wine to carry to any place, viz. earthen bottles, which if when they be filled they be broken one againſt another, are good for nothing; yea much good wine is ſpilt by the means, and ſo they are worſe then nought. In like manner he ſheweth, that it ſhould be to the chief of the Jews, Kings, Prieſts and Prophets, they ſhould be filled with drunkenneſſe, and then be broken one againſt another, whereby he meaneth not the drunkenneſſe of wine, but by the ſpirit of errour, as is expreſſed *Iſa.*29.9, whereby one ſhould draw another on to ruine, by making one another ſecure againſt Gods judgements coming by the Caldees, whilſt they would not believe Gods Prophets threatning them, but that they being Gods peculiar people, and having his Temple amongſt them, and Sacrifices there continually to him offered, ſhould be ſafe enough, notwithſtanding all theſe menaces. For in the time whilſt they were thus drunken, the Caldees coming deſtroyed them all, and their ſtrength upon which they did bear themſelves, proved no better then that of earthen bottles, being preſently broken with a knock of one againſt another, although none other force be uſed. And thus he ſaith, They ſhall be broken and not ſpared, inculcating this for their ſtupidity three times over. And he doth not plainly bring a ſimilitude from pots, but to ſtirre them up to more attention, he ſpeaks at the firſt, as to give them occaſion to ask, as wondering why he ſhould tell them ſuch a thing as this from the Lord, that all bottles ſhall be filled with wine. For hereupon they reply, who knoweth not this, what meaneſt thou to come to us with ſuch a meſſage. Then they being prepared he makes his application the more effectually, *v.*13,14.

Verſ.16. Give glory to God before he makes it dark, and your feet ſtumble at the Mountains of darkneſſe. That is, ſeeing the Lord threatens you with ſo great a judgment, and this ſhall certainly come, believe it, and fear before him, acknowledge his Power and Juſtice, as if execution were already done. Thus *Joſh.*7. Achan is bidden to give glory to God, and to tell the truth, by acknowledging it to be ſo as he had by lot diſcovered, it being before hidden from all mortal eyes: but now by confeſſing what he had done ſo wickedly to provoke God, he meaneth, that he ſhould give glory to his wiſdom in finding out, and to his juſtice that would not ſuffer ſo foul a ſinne to go unpuniſhed. Note. And in ſaying thus both there and here, it is intimated, that he doth not give glory to God, but robs him of his due, that is not moved to fear at his threatning of judgements againſt his ſins, as he is not that goeth on ſtill therein, hardening himſelf againſt his terrible threatnings. He ſhall therefore undoubtedly periſh that doth ſo, as wronging God in his chief Attribute, but he that by his threatnings is moved to believe and repent, giveth him glory and ſhall have mercy and pardon, and according to his promiſe, Him that honours me I will 1 Sam.2. honour, he ſhall have glory and happineſſe in heaven for ever. By the darkneſſe, which otherwiſe he threatneth, is meant miſery, making a man fall, as one going in the dark ſtumbleth at the mountains, becauſe in the dark he cannot ſee them, though never ſo great. And he nameth dark mountains, becauſe where the ground lieth in their ſhadow it is dark ſooner then in other places that be plain; ſo that in ſaying thus, he meaneth the coming of their miſeries upon them very ſpeedily. And whilſt ye look for light he turn into the ſhadow of death, that is, when ye expect peace and proſperity, the ſad calamities of warre come upon you.

Verſ.19. The Cities of the South ſhall be ſhut up. That is, the Cities of Judah, which lay South in regard of Caldea, ſhall be beſieged and deſtroyed.

Verſ.20. Where is the flock that was given thee? That is, O Iudah, or King of Iudah, to whom he ſpake *verſ.*18. where is the multitnde of thy Subjects which were a glory unto thee? As it is ſaid, The glory of a King is in the multitnde of his Subjects, but where be they now, when this deſtruction is come out of the North Countrey Caldea amongſt them? Verily it ſhall be diſperſed and brought to nothing.

Verſ.21. What wilt thou ſay, when he ſhall puniſh thee, for thou haſt taught them to be Captains? That is, when God ſhall puniſh thee by bringing the Caldeans againſt Iudah, for it ſhall be juſtly done when this ſhall come to paſſe, becauſe thou haſt taught them the way to come and exerciſe dominion over thee, that is, thou (O Iudah) firſt when Ahaz ſent for the King of Aſſyria to come and help him againſt the King of Iſrael and Syria, Iſa. 7. and ſecondly when Hezekiah ſhewed the Embaſſadours of Merodach Baladan, King of Babylon all his treaſures in way of vain glory, hereby to tempt that people to come againſt Iudah to get ſo great a booty. For ſo the Britiſh Princes Vortiger and Vortimer firſt taught the Saxons to be Captains, and to get dominion here in England by falling out between themſelves, whereupon the one to get the Crown from the other, ſent for the Saxons to help him, and having learned to conquer, being alſo taken with the fertility of the Land, they gat it in poſſeſſion, the Britains the old inhabitants being driven into Wales and places adjacent.

Verſ.22. For the greatneſſe of thine iniquity are thy skirts diſcovered, and thy heels made bare. The uſe of garments being to cover mans ſhamefull parts, as we may ſee *Gen.*3. it came into a Proverb, Thy skirts ſhall be diſcovered, when it is meant, Thou ſhalt be put to ignominy and ſhame; ſo the ſervants of David had their garments cut off by the buttocks by Hanun King of Ammonites, and when 1 King.10. the enemy prevailed, he ſtript his Captives naked, and carried them away, as it is often threatned, that the Jews ſhould be uſed by the Caldees. And this calamity is here ſet forth by their skirts being diſcovered, and heels made bare.

Verſ.23. Can the Ethiopian change his skin. The skin of the Ethiopian is black, and by no waſhing can be made white, ſo cannot one accuſtomed to live in ſinne turn righteous. But by thus ſaying the Prophet meaneth not either that God cannot do it, where he meeteth not with reluctancy in mans will, for in this caſe he denieth that he can do it, *Iſa.*5. *Matth.*23.23. that is, according to that way, which he hath propounded to himſelf in dealing with ſinners about their converſion, which is to move their wils inwardly by his Spirit, as outwardly by his Word; as that there is no free-will in man, as Calvin acknowledgeth, Calvin. but only that theſe Jews were more deſperately enthralled to ſinne by their long uſing of themſelves thereunto; ſo as that there was now

Note. no hope of their converſion, or of their eſcaping the deſtruction threatned. Which ſhould be a warning to us all to take heed of continuing in ſinne, and therefore the ſame day that we have ſinned, to repent and break off from it Auguſt. again, as it is, To day harden not your hearts, for, Conſuetudo peccandi tollit ſenſum peccati.

CHAP. XIV.

Verſ.1. THe word of the Lord that came to Ieremiah concerning the dearth or reſtraint, That is, of rain cauſing dearth. It is uncertain in what Kings reign this was, and what dearth it was. Jerom and moſt Expoſitors conjecture, that the famine in Zedekiah his time is meant, when Nebuchadnezzar beſieged the City Ieruſalem in his eleventh year, and in the fourth moneth, 2 Chron.36, it is ſaid, There was a famine in the City. But the word [reſtraints] plainly ſheweth, that it was a dearth through the reſtraint of rain coming ſometime before that ſiege, and cauſing their ſcarcity then the ſooner; and becauſe it is ſaid verſ.3. ſome were ſent out for water and found none, which could not be done, when the enemy beſieged them ſo ſtraightly that none could go in or out. And the ſame is further confirmed verſ.4,5,6. where the Ploughmen which could not plow then, are ſaid to have been aſhamed, and the Hindes to have forſaken their calves for want of graſſe, and the wilde Aſſes for the ſame want to have ſnuffed up the winde. Yet when ſuch a famine by drought came in thoſe Kings reigns, wherein Ieremiah propheſied, it is no where ſaid in holy Scripture, but onely it is here propheſied of, as that drought in Ahabs time by Elijah, 1 King.17. that when it ſhould come, ſecondary cauſes might not be ſo much looked at, as the wrath of God againſt ſin cauſing it.

Verſ.7. O Lord, do it for thy Names ſake. That is, although our ſins cry for judgements againſt us, do this great thing for us to ſave us from this famine and ſword threatned, although our ſins call for them, and therefore we can plead nothing for any worthineſſe in us, but for thy names ſake, that it may have glory of ſaving us, whom thou haſt taken to be thy peculiar people. And in thus praying he teacheth the people what they ſhould ſay, if by any means they would be ſtirred up hereunto.

Verſ.13. The Prophets tell them, Ye ſhall not ſee the ſword. This Jeremiah relateth not without great grief, that even Prophets coming in the name of the Lord wrought againſt him and his threatnings, to make the people deſpiſe them, and continue ſecure to their deſtruction. And he declareth both what he prayed and ſaid further to the Lord, that the people might be the more affected with it, as acknowledging him to be moſt loving to them, and carefull of their good: but theſe falſe prophets that ſoothed them up in their ſins, bold and preſumptuous braggadochians, that they might not be ſeduced by them. Verſ.15. And ver.15, and 16. to move them the more he threatneth or rather telleth how the Lord threatned them and the people alſo that hearkned to them, that they ſhould die by the ſword and famine, and lie without a burial, both they, their wives and their children, as they had all conſented together to commit Note. Idolatry, for ſo they are ſhewed to have done, Chap.7. And if it ſhall ſeem too great ſeverity, that the people who were ſeduced by the deceitfulneſs of the falſe prophets ſhould ſuffer ſuch grievous things, it is to be conceived, that they were as willing to be made drunken by them with the errour of impunity, notwithſtanding their ſins, as they to make them drunken, ſo that the Lord doth but permit the wicked to their own choice, as they delight more in unrighteouſneſs then in the truth, ſo leaving them to be drawn after it, and then as they are well-worthy, making them to partake in judgement with their ſeducers. The like to which is threatned, 2 Theſ. 2. 11. and is daily done. A number of unſound and hypocritical hearted people meet with falſe prophets in many places, and being unſtable in their faith, are ſoon carried away by every new blaſt of Doctrine, as by a new light, in compariſon of which that they had before is nothing in their eſteem. But let all ſuch conſider to what both they and their Prophets are tending, viz. to horrible deſtruction by Gods judgements that they may in time beware and repent.

Verſ. 18. Both the Prieſt and the Prophet go about into the Land that they know not. Heb. Go about to a Land, and they ſhall not know] by Kimhi expounded thus, into Babylon, to which, becauſe it was a very long way, they went not directly, but by many turnings and wayes about, and they are ſaid not to know it, becauſe they would not for any threatnings of this judgement believe it, till that it came upon them. By Vatablus thus, They go about to other Countreys, to which they fled to ſave themſelves, not knowing that in the end they ſhould be taken there, and carried to Babylon: or becauſe the word סחר here uſed, ſignifieth alſo to make Merchandize, Gen. 34. 10. they were intent to their own profit, and went about propheſying of peace to pleaſe the people, to win their love the more, and conſequently to procure from them the more liberality, till that upon the ſudden they were taken by the enemy and carried, ſo many of them as eſcaped the ſword and famine, into a Land which they knew not, nor never ſaw before. By Calvin, They go about the Land, ſeeking vainly means of ſafety and preſervation from the danger at hand; and they know not, that is, will not know by all their warnings the deſtruction hanging over their heads, till they ſuffer it, and there is no eſcaping, it being juſt with God to dement them, and to take all right underſtanding from them, as they had infatuated and inebriated the people by their falſe propheſying of peace and ſafety. And herein I reſt, becauſe thus the words agree beſt to the former part of the verſe, ſpeaking of the deſtruction by famine in the City, and the ſword in the field, whereinto theſe Prieſts and Prophets fleeing out of an opinion to eſcape the danger, they fell there contrary to their expectation, for which it is ſaid, They knew not; and ſo by the Land here ſpoken of cannot be meant the Land of Caldea, but their own Land, the fields into which they fled to hide them, and then the particle את may be taken as redundant, they went about, or go about the Land ſeeking for hiding places, as was before-ſaid, but their deſtruction by the ſword comes upon them, and they ſhall not know it till it comes, for it ſhall be ſudden.

Are there amongſt the vanities of the Gentiles that can cauſe rain? From verſ. 19. hitherto, the Prophet prayeth for the people, and in their name, although he were forbidden ver. 11. as he had done before after the like prohibition, Chap. 7. 16. and 11 24. whereby it appears, That the Lord never inhibits his Prophets from praying for his people, but to ſtimulate them the more unto it, for he loves to ſee a Moſes ſtanding up in the gap to oppoſe him in his judgements, or a Jacob that will earneſtly wreſtle with him, and not let him go. although he commands him to do it. And he prayeth according to their preſent neceſſity, as we may ſee by comparing her with verſ. 1. in theſe words, In the drought] He pleadeth with the Lord from his unparallel'd power, no Idols, or heavens themſelves can give rain, but God only; for he is ſaid to give the early and the latter rain, the heavens being only his creatures by their influence, as ſecondary cauſes doing it, when he will, but not otherwiſe, when he in judgement will not that they ſhall produce any, as at this time, and in the dayes of Ahab. For which he concludes, Thou haſt made all theſe] That is, as Expoſitors generally ſay, all the celeſtial bodies, by whoſe influence rain commonly cometh, as God hath appointed, although Calvin turneth it another way, by all theſe underſtanding all the judgements ſent upon them. But I ſee no reaſon of his going from the common expoſition herein, ſeeing it followeth ſo aptly upon the premiſſes, The heavens cannot do it without thee, and why can they not? becauſe although from them rain commonly cometh, yet God made them and governs them at his own will, not ſuffering them to do it, but when he pleaſeth, or by all theſe underſtand both the conſtellations and rain, or drought cauſed hereby, all which were laſt ſpoken of. Finally to move the Lord the more, he ſaith, thou art our Lord, and expectation is to thee, for this is a great motive, when our hope is not in any thing elſe, but in God alone, *Pſal.*20.8. A thing to be thought upon by thoſe that expect the changes of the Moon for the weather, expecting then undoubtedly rain or fair weather, becauſe it is ſo moſt commonly, and ſo obſerve the Lords providence the leſſe to love and fear him, which we ought to do even when weather comes thus, according to the common account; for the heavens cauſe not rain by any virtue in themſelves, but as God willeth or nilleth, even when ſigns of rain concur.

C*Aſt them out of my ſight.* That is, Denounce from me this judgement, whereas thou perſiſteſt to pray unto me for them. For although Moſes and Samuel ſhould ſtand before me in their behalf, and pray alſo, I would not be moved. And he nameth Moſes, as moſt famous for ſtanding in the gap once, *Exod.*32. and Samuel for obtaining a ceſſation of a terrible thunder, and rain in harveſt time, 1 *Sam.*12. and in bidding Caſt them out, he alludeth to *Chap.*1.10. to pluck up, root out, &c.

Verſ.3.

Note. Læſa patientia furor.

I will ſet over them four families, the ſword, the dogs, fowls and beaſts. Vulg. I will viſit over them four families; So indeed the word פקד alſo ſignifieth, but becauſe this is ſenſleſſe, the other ſignification, I will ſet over, is to be preferred. He had ſpoken *verſ.*2. of four wayes of deſtruction, death, whereby the peſtilence is meant, the ſword of the enemy, famine and captivity. Here he holds to the ſame number, but for the peſtilence dogs are named, for famine and captivity, fowls and beaſts; it being meant that ſuch as died in the City by famine or peſtilence, the dogs ſhould eat, ſuch as by the ſword abroad, the beaſts of the field, and fowls of the air, according to the diſtinction before made. *Chap.*14.17,18. and a little before he ſaith, There ſhould be none to bury them, therefore they muſt needs lie for a prey to theſe creatures. Hereby is meant the extremity of miſery that they ſhould ſuffer. And it is to be noted, that the Lord being unreaſonably provoked proves at length inexorable; There is a time when he may be found by thoſe that ſeek unto him, but there is a time again when the moſt faithfull ſhall have no hope of ſucceſſe in praying for the wicked, as Jeremiah had not, nor ſhould Moſes or Samuel have had, if they had then lived; ſee the like *Ezek.*14.

Verſ.4.

Note.

For Manaſſeh the ſonne of Hezekiah. It may ſeem ſtrange, that the ſinne of this King ſhould now be ſpoken of ſo long after his death, and his repentance and mercy thereupon ſhewed him before that, and ſpoken of as the cauſe of the captivity now at hand. For this was in the time of Jehoiakim, if not of Zedekiah about four years after, and moreover it repented him, and he did the works of repentance long before he died, as appeareth 2 *Chron.*33. But it is to be known that he is ſpoken of, becauſe in his time God was moſt provoked, and then he began firſt to threaten the people with captivity; and although he repented, yet they continued ſtill in their wickedneſſe, waxing rather worſe and worſe, as his former invectives againſt them ſhew, eſpecially *Chap.*13.23. For although God will not puniſh the children for the fathers ſins, yet when they live in the ſame, the ſcore of their fathers ſins ſhall be added to theirs to make their judgements the more terrible, according to the ſecond Commandment. And although Manaſſeh alone be ſpoken of, yet both he and the people together with him, that then holp to ſhed ſo much innocent bloud, were all meant. And he is called the ſonne of Hezekiah, to aggravate his wickedneſs the more, and theirs alſo, for that he having ſo godly and zealous a father, did ſo greatly degenerate, and they were moſt hard to be moved to piety by Hezekiah, and that which they were brought unto, ſoon vaniſhed again as the morning-dew; but to impiety and idolatry they were moſt ready to runne with Manaſſeh, and being once in that evil way, neither could his charging them upon his repentance to ſerve the Lord, nor the labours of Gods Prophets amongſt them ſince, prevail with them to bring them out of it again. Whence note, That God is offended with wicked children of godly parents moſt of all others, ſo farre is he from favouring them for their ſake; and this aggravates the wickedneſs of a people, to be hard to be brought to the pure worſhipping and ſerving God under good Rulers, but eaſie to be corrupted under evil Rulers and ſuperſtitions. Note.

Verſ.7. I will fan them in the gates of the Cities. A Metaphor taken from ſuch as winnow corn in a windy door from whence the chaff is blown away: to ſhew that they ſhould be as chaff, as the wicked are compared, *Pſal.*1. Luk. 3. Some by gates underſtand Cities, as if he had ſaid, I will turn your Cities into fields, the wals and buildings being broken down, becauſe there were threſhing-floors and places to winnow corn, or becauſe the gates were places of judgement, he meaneth, that he would ſentence againſt them that they ſhould be uſed like chaff, that is, ſcattered into all parts, as is expreſſed, *verſ.*4. Some the uttermoſt parts of the Land, becauſe gates are at the ends of Cities. Some, I will make you poor, ſo as that ye ſhall beg at the gates of Cities at rich mens gates there, but the firſt is beſt.

Verſ.8. I brought upon them, upon the mother of the young men a Waſter at noon day. But it may better be read, Upon the mother a choſen Waſter; for it is בחור ſignifying choſen, without any particle prefixed, denoting the genitive caſe. It ſignifieth indeed a young man alſo, but not without this Epithete, A choſen young man, but the ſingular is put for the plural, Waſters or Spoilers choſen for their extraordinary valour to make this deſtruction. And by the Mother may be underſtood either mothers likewiſe, the ſingular being put for the plural; As if he had ſaid, not onely innumerable widows ſhall be made, their husbands being deſtroyed, according to the firſt hyperbolical words of the verſe, but all mothers together as one ſhall then be made childleſſe, the Caldean youth being brought upon them, who ſhall waſte and deſtroy your children; or the mother City, as the Greeks give the name Metropolis to a chief City, which ſignifieth a Mother-City. At noon-day, that is, not ſecretly or treacherouſly coming upon them, but openly by force unreſiſtible, make the beſt defence that they can. I have cauſed him to fall upon it ſuddenly, and terrours upon the City. Hebr. ועיר ובהל the word Ir rendred City, ſignifying alſo enemy, and the next word tumult or terrours that will make him to fall upon it ſuddenly, the enemy and terrours. It is abſurd, as Calvin alſo noteth, to render the word City here, I will make to fall upon her the city and tumults, for what ſenſe can be in this, unleſſe he had meant, that the City ſhould be beaten down about their ears, whereas they came not thus to deſtruction, but by the famine and the ſword of the enemy taking them fleeing and ſlaying them? and the New Tranſlat. altereth and miſplaceth the words, which needs not, the ſenſe being very good, I will make him to fall upon it, or her ſuddenly, that is, the mother before-ſpoken of, The enemy and terrours. Theſe laſt words ſerving to ſhew whom he meant by him; as if he had ſaid, I will cauſe him to fall upon it, that is, the enemy and terrours concomitating his coming, filling them all with horrible fear. And for this maketh Tigurina Tranſlation, and the Septuagint and Caldee, which two laſt for the City falling upon it have Exercitum Caldæorum, for the multitude of ſouldiers ſtiled a City, and for their Tents ſet up City-faſhion. Calvin.

Verſ.9. She that hath born ſeven languiſheth. That is, The mother of many children ſeeing them all deſtroyed pineth away with ſorrow; and this is ſpoken according to *verſ.*8. Upon the mother the Waſter.

Verſ.10. Woe is me my mother that thou haſt born me a man of ſtrife. It may ſeem ſtrange that Jeremiah ſhould thus break out through impatience for the enmity that he

Calvin.

Hieronym.

he met withall amongſt the Jews againſt his mother that bare him, as though ſhe were in any fault. But this his crying out is not to be taken, as an effect of impatience, but of his zeal and earneſt deſire to convince the Jews of their malice, from whence it proceeded that they were ſo fell againſt him, ſeeing that if there were fault in him, for which there was in his mother for bearing and bringing him forth into the world, and if they would be aſhamed to ſay, that for this there was any fault in her, they might be aſhamed to ſay there was any in him. For ſince he grew up to be a man, he declined all occaſion of contention,forſomuch as he neither lent nor borrowed upon uſury, wherby he meaneth, that he had no traffick with them according to the manner of other men, whereupon ſtrife commonly ariſeth, one way of trafficking being put for all, and yet they all were mad with him, and curſed, and ſpake bitterly againſt him. For from hence it was plain, that they hated him, and were at variance with him for nothing elſe, but out of their own malignancy, which was commonly againſt Gods Prophets for their reprehenſions of their groſſe ſins, and threatning Gods judgements againſt them, as he commandeth. Thus Calvin who inferreth hereupon, That it is good for Miniſters of the Word of God to have no negotiating with men about worldly things, becauſe who ſo hath, cannot live free from envy and hatred by reaſon of their worldly-mindedneſs ſtirring them up againſt the Miniſter, when they ſee part of their gains to be by him exacted for his maintenance. Wherein we cannot but all conſent unto him, but it is Scandalum acceptum non datum, and therefore the blame of it will light upon them only, and conſequently the puniſhment, and we ſee by Jeremiah his example, if there were no ſuch occaſion, yet the very reproving and threatning their ſins, would be occaſion enough to malicious and wicked minded men. Yet I deny not but it were good in a Chriſtian Kingdom that this ſhould be taken away as much as might be,by cauſing Tithes in every place to be converted into moneys, ſo that it might be without fraud and diminution to the wronging of Gods Miniſters. But be it that Miniſters took no Tithes, yet they cannot live without all trafficking, neither did Jeremiah himſelf, for Chap. 32. he buieth a field, and therefore he meaneth not all trafficking, but that which is ſcandalous only. For uſury in particular here mentioned, it is not agreed amongſt Divines what it is, neither is this a place properly giving occaſion to ſpeak of it, and therefore I referre the Reader for that to Exod. 22.22. where I have purpoſely ſpoken of it. And he mentioneth not only taking of uſury, but alſo giving, becauſe both wayes contentions ariſe, when one would take more, and the other give leſſe. Jerom applieth it to Chriſt, who was moſt truly a man of contention with the Scribes, Phariſees, Sadducees, Prieſts and Herodians, and none would take to uſury of him, becauſe they returned no encreaſe or fruit of his doctrine, and ſo he took none neither.

Chap. 5.10.

Calv.

Verſ. 11. The Lord ſaid, Verily it ſhall be well with thy remnant, Hebr. If not thy remnant to good. Which words have the force of an Oath, If I bring them not to good, by delivering them from captivity, I am not God, or ſay, that I am not juſt, for he had before ſaid, Deſtroy them, but make not a full end, and in many places he ſpeaketh comfort to a remnant, and becauſe verſ. 9. he had threatned ſo univerſal a deſtruction, now he qualifieth the terrour of it by promiſing good to a few faithfull that ſhould remain of the Jews, adding further, I will cauſe the enemy to intreat thee well in the time of evil and of affliction, Heb. If I ſhall not cauſe the enemy to meet thee for good, or by doing thee good in the day of evil, &c. Theſe laſt words ſerving for nothing elſe, but to explain further the former; Thus ſome; but Calvin underſtands it as ſpoken to Jeremiah in perſon, anſwering to his complaint, verſ. 10. by promiſing him good in the remaining part of his life, and that even when he ſhould be come into his enemies hands the Caldees, as the event afterwards ſhewed. If not thy remnant to good then is, if the remnant or following part of thy life. Although his own kindred and countreymen were cruelly bent againſt him, yet he made him know before, that he ſhould finde favour amongſt thoſe Heathens, and to publiſh it, that when it ſhould come to paſſe at the leaſt they might believe it, although they would not before, that he was a true Prophet, and this I think to be the true meaning.

Verſ.12. Shall iron break the Northern iron, and the ſteel? Here he fals to threatning them again by vilifying their ſtrength, in compariſon of that of the Caldees. For they in the pride of their hearts thought themſelves ſtrong enough, yea iron againſt their Northern enemies, whom he to deter them by them compares to iron and ſteel, and therefore ſheweth to be far ſtronger.

Verſ.15. Revenge me of my perſecutors. Here Jeremiah to ſhew how greatly he was moved at the obſtinacy and malice of the people turns from them again to the Lord, crying for revenge againſt them; See the like before *Chap.*11.20. For the words following, Take me not away in thy long-ſuffering. Hebr. In lengthning thine anger. The meaning being, whilſt thou art long in bringing deſerved deſtruction upon them, leaſt they, as they plot, work miſchief againſt me to the taking away of my life, or according to ſome, Be not ſo long in deſtroying them in thy wrath by ſo many kindes of judgements that I ſhall not be preſerved, but ſwept away together with them alſo. Take it which way ye pleaſe, but the N.T. turning it, In thy long-ſuffering, is both erroneous and troubles the ſenſe.

Verſ.16. Thy words were found, and I did eat them. That is, I took not this prophetical Office upon me, for which I am ſo hated through mine own ambitious ſeeking, but when I thought not upon it, thy words came unto me, and whether I would or no I was forced unto it, That thy words were found by me, as appears *Chap.*1. and yet I ate them, that is, received them into my heart, and not into my mouth only, as many do, applying my ſelf with a true heart to obey them, and to do as thou commandeſt, believing them to be thy words, for whoſo doth thus, to him Gods Word becometh food that is eaten, and nouriſheth to eternal life, and ſo is his ſubſtantial Word Chriſt. And it was ſweet unto me, wherein he was like to *Ezek.*2.8. they both had unſpeakable inward joy by this ſpiritual eating, and ſo ſhall all others have that eat likewiſe, although they meet with much bitterneſs in this wicked world, of which they are forced to complain ſometimes as Jeremiah doth; See the like in David, Pſal.19.7. and Job 23.12. And Gods words are ſo ſweet to the believing heart, becauſe moſt ſweet and comfortable things are therein contained, and they come cloſe to the heart, and enter into it as meat into the belly. And he addeth, I am called by thy Name, O Lord, not as every one that was within the Covenant under the Old Teſtament, or is under the New, for all the Jews had Gods name called upon them, when they were called the people of the Lord, and all now baptized when they are called Chriſtians: But more ſingularly, becauſe he was a true Prophet of the Lord, called in the power of his Spirit, as his inſtrument, to pull down Kingdoms and Nations.

Verſ.17. I ſate not in the aſſembly of mockers, but alone, for thy hand, for thou haſt filled me with indignation. Hebr. I ſate not in the ſecret of the mockers, and I rejoyced before thy hand; I ſate alone, becauſe thou haſt filled me, &c. Vulg. I gloried from the face of thy hand, &c. Becauſe thou filledſt me with commination; but the word זעם ſignifieth wrath or indignation. The meaning is, I was delighted in thy words, as was before-ſaid, whereas others in mocking at them. But I abhorred from the wicked conſultations which they had in ſecret to this effect, and againſt me and other thy faithfull ſervants ſpeaking thy word unto them. My joy and glory in the mean ſeaſon being in thy good hand towards me, ſetting me up to be thy Prophet and inwardly comforting me. Yet I ſate alone, becauſe I was filled with ſuch words by thee to be ſpoken to them, as brake all friendſhip and permitted no ſociety betwixt me and them, for they were words of indignation and denunciations of judgements moſt terrible. Cald. Vatabl. Calvin. In theſe laſt words Caldee, Vatalus, Calvin ſay the ſame that I do: but upon the former, they joyn theſe words And rejoyced, with theſe, I ſat not in the aſſembly of mockers, rendring them, nor rejoyced, as if herein were nothing elſe, but a denyall of taking any pleaſure to do as they did, and contrariwiſe Pagnin. an implying of ſorrow therefore; and Caldee, Pagnin, Dionyſius, following Dionyſ. the vulg. expound, and by nor, as if he meant, that he joyed not in his propheticall office by reaſon of the judgements, which he was hereby inforced to threaten. But to me the firſt, though followed by none hitherto, ſeemeth moſt plain and perſpicuous.

Verſ.18. Why is my pain perpetuall? Here the Prophet leaving again the diſcourſe in which he was, of the joy that he had in the Lord, returneth to complaints, as *verſ.*10. as if he had ſaid, Sith it is thus, that thou (O Lord) haſt ſet me up in this office, and miniſtred words unto me of comfort, and better uſage one day by the enemy, as *verſ.*11. why do my own kinsfolk and countreymen go on ſtill to gall, and renew my wounds by their curſed and malicious ſpeaking againſt me without all meaſure or end? for by reaſon of their ſpite againſt me, there is dayly but a ſtep betwixt me and death, and ſo I am in danger of being cut off before I ſee the good promiſed. Why wilt thou be as a lyer, waters that are not faithfull, or true? or that hold not but fail when a man hath moſt need of them, that is, in the time of heat; for ſo ſhould the Lord be to Jeremy, if he preſerved him not from the fury of his enemies, as he had promiſed, eſpecially all this enmity being ſtirred againſt him for his ſake, and his faithfull dealing with them, as he commanded. And in ſaying, Wilt thou be as a lyer, he is not to be underſtood, as uttering any thing blaſphemous, for that was impoſſible for one ſo full of the ſpirit to do, but the uttering of theſe words is, as if he had ſaid, Wilt thou (O God) who art true, though all men be lyers, be as lying and deceitfull waters in this particular of perſerving me, having promiſed it? certainly thou wilt not, the ſprings of water ſhall fail in a dry time, or ciſterns having holes, but thou the Fountain of living water canſt never fail, but be a comfort to him that truſteth in thee, when his need doth Jer.2.13. moſt require, for ſo the Lord is ſtiled the Fountain of living water. And for this expoſition maketh the interrogation, and that nothing is ſpoken by way of affirmation. He ſpeakes thus, as if a man ſhould in his ſtreights ſpeak to his aſſured friend, who had promiſed him help in his greateſt extremity, but finding no help yet to come from him, Wilt thou be a lyer to me? to ſtir him up then more to reach out his helping hand and not to delay ſo to do. Calvin, Galatin. to avoid an evil imputation, that might be laid upon the Prophet, if theſe words be taken as ſpoken in his own perſon, ſaith, that he ſpeaketh thus in the perſon of the people murmuring at their evil caſe, whenas God had choſen them and made them his peculiar people above all others, and to this interpretation he thinks further light to be given *verſ.*19. If thou turn unto me, thou ſhalt return again: that is, thou art too much affected with the judgements to come upon the Jews to expoſtulate ſo with the Lord in their behalf. For if the words of *verſ.*18. be thus underſtood, theſe anſwer well unto them; ceaſe from thus complaining, which he meaneth in bidding him turn, and then he ſaith, he ſhall ſtand before him, and be as his mouth, ſpeaking only that which he commandeth, as his faithfull Prophet and meſſenger. To explain which further he ſaith, if thou ſhalt ſeparate the precious from the vile, that is, if thou ſhalt not for fear, or flattery, ſpeak or yield to any thing divers from the truth, which I command thee to ſpeak, for that is the precious, and flattery is the vile, and conſequently he ſeparates the precious from the vile that ſpeaks freely and boldly the truth not being moved to ſpeak otherwiſe by affection, fear or favour. And this doth further appear in the next words; Let them turn to thee, turn not thou to them, that is, ceaſe not reproving and threatening them till they be converted, and be not by an inordinate love of them becauſe they are neer unto thee in the fleſh moved to bear with, or to ſpeak pleaſing things unto them, or for any fear of what they can do unto thee: ſome refer the expoſtulation before going to the Jews, by whom the Prophet ſuffered, as if in ſaying, why art thou as a lyer, he meant that his pain, to which they put him, ſhould be as lying waters that fail? but this, though followed by grave Authours, is againſt all good ſenſe, becauſe it was never known, that any man would complain of his pain failing, or compare it to a ciſtern or ſpring of water, of which not pain, but joy cometh to the thirſty. Neither doth that of Calvin ſo well agree, although he makes it ſeem well agreeing by verſ. 19 for by theſe words, if thou ſhalt turn, he meaneth not from being by naturall affection, &c. from ſpeaking thus in the behalf of thy brethren the Jews, for ſo the next words would not agree, if thou ſhalt ſeparate the precious from the vile; for that this is not ſpoken of things or words, but of perſons, the laſt words declare, they ſhall turn to thee, thou ſhalt not turn to them, which ſhew the meaning to be, If thou ſhalt apply thy ſelf with all thy power to convert them, and of evil to make them good, (for wicked men are vile, and converts precious) thou ſhalt be as my mouth, then which no greater excellency can be attained by any mortall man. According to Chryſoſtom ſpeaking of them that are fallen into ſin; If thou ſhalt pour the oyl of heavenly Doctrine into them, if thou ſhalt bind the wounded with humanity, and temperance, he ſhall make thee richer then any treaſure, for he ſaith, if thou ſeparate the precious from the vile, thou ſhalt be my mouth. What can be equalled to this? neither faſtings, nor watchings, nor lying upon the ground, for none of all theſe are comparable to procuring the Salvation of our brethren. And the Caldee Paraphraſt, If thou ſhalt reclaim the wicked that he becomes juſt, thou ſhalt do the ſame that the word of my mouth doth, and ſo be my mouth, for ſo *Pſal.*19. it is ſaid that the word of God converteth the Soul, thus alſo Gregory; *Moral, lib.*18.*c.*23. Hugo, Lyra, &c. For the firſt words of this verſe. If thou will turn I will make thee to return and ſtand before me, Jerome; Raban; and ſome others underſtand it, as if it had been ſaid, if thou ſhalt turn this people, I will put an end to thy tribulation of which thou complaineſt, Caldee, Lyra, Hugo. If thou turn and be no more ſo impatient and querelous, but quietly depending upon me, then will I provide for thy deliverance from the ſufferings, of which thou complaineſt, and thou ſhalt ſtand, that is, continue unmoveable in this high propheticall office, yea thou ſhalt be as my mouth, if thou goeſt zealouſly on to convert the wicked. I ſubſcribe rather to Jerom, and the word השׁוב ſignifying, ſhalt make to turn, will bear it. And then it aptly anſwers to the words of *verſ.*18. according to the expoſition given thereupon, For to the Prophets asking whether his plague ſhould be perpetuall, or God would deceive him of his hope, that he might be further confirmed, the Lord anſwers here; Go on in thy office doing thy beſt to turn them, and then take no care of thy preſervation, I will look to that, but rather take care to make them come precious out of vile, for ſo the words may be rendred, and the laſt words agree to this, Let them turn or come to thee, the vile to the precious by being formed anew to righteouſneſſe, and holineſſe according to thy teaching, not the precious to the vile by being corrupted and overcome through their malice, and made impatient or fearfull to go on in the miniſtry committed unto him. And he promiſeth not only, that in thus doing he ſhall be his mouth, but he ſheweth further verſ. 20.21. how he will make him to ſtand firm againſt all their aſſaults, as a brazen wall impregnable, ſee, Chap.1.18.

HEnce the Prophet is bidden by another ſign, to declare that which he had propheſied of the evil death whereby they ſhould die that were of the Land of Judea, viz. by not taking a wife there, nor begetting children, becauſe the people of that Land ſhould die miſerably, and their dead bodies ſhould be as dung upon the earth. It is impertinent here, either to queſtion whether Jeremy were not marryed already, or it be hereby intimated, that a ſingle life is commended to Prophets. It is moſt probable, that he was not, for if he had, this prohibition ſhould not have been needfull, ſeeing he would not have taken another wife doubtleſs, when he had one living. For although Polygamy was practiſed by other men in thoſe dayes, even by Abraham, and Jacob occaſionally and for a myſticall ſignification, yet it was not by any other Prophet, but rather condemned, Mal. 2. 15. And what a weak argument were this, God forbad Ieremy to take a wife, and beget Children in a Land being now ready to be deſtroyed, therefore it is his will, that Prophets ſhould take none, but lead a ſingle life? It doth rather ſhew, that ſuch as well as other men were commonly left to their own liberty for this matter; and now to reſtrain from the liberty given by God, is a thing that cometh from a contrary ſpirit, that is, the Devil, as is plainly taught, 1 *Tim.*4.1.

Verſ.5. Enter not into the houſe of mourning, for mourning Hebr. is מרזח ſignifying, either mourning, or a mourning Feaſt made for the dead, to which Friends being called, the Friends of the dead did ſomewhat lighten their ſorrow by their company, and to this agree the words of v.7. Verſ.7. Neither ſhall men give them the cup of conſolation to drink for their Father or Mother. Calvin. And Calvin obſerves from ſome paſſages in Tully, that Feaſting was uſed amongſt the Romans at burials to put away ſorrow, and to procure mirth, as who did think their dead friends to be Hieron. now taken into the number of the gods. And Ierom ſaith, It was the manner in mourning at Funerals both amongſt the Greeks and Latines, to make Feaſts called by the Greeks περίδειπνα, by the Latines Parentalia, becauſe they were made, when they buried fathers or mothers, and Prov. 31.6. It it ſaid give wine to them that mourn. Of this alſo ſee Tob. 4. 18. Of this alſo Perſeus, Pliny, Lucian, Pollux, and Herodotus write: the Vulg.Lat. therefore renders it, go not into the houſe of feaſting. But this is improper, and if it be ſo rendred, the ſame thing is forbidden twice, for verſ. 8. he ſaith, go not into the houſe of Feaſting, as oppoſing that to this, and ſpeaking ſo both here, and there, as that he plainly meaneth contrary things: wherefore this is better expounded by mourning, or Feaſting made to lenify mourning in reſpect of the dead. And the reaſon was, becauſe, as followeth in the next words, they that died ſhould not be buryed, but lye partly for a prey to Beaſts, and fowls, and partly for dung upon the earth, as was ſaid before, therefore to ſhew before, that ſuch doings, as had been uſed at burials, and were ſtill uſed, ſhould ceaſe, he muſt not come to any place upon ſuch occaſions. For hereby he made a more full Declaration of that which he ſpake by word of mouth, that the deeper impreſſion might be made by that which they ſaw in him, of their miſerable caſe, when every ones own ſorrow, that lived ſtill, ſhould be ſo great for his own ſufferings and dangers, as that none ſhould intend Funerall rites any more, as they had uſed to do, not doing any more like men, but as bruit Beaſts ſuffering dead corpſes to lie here and there, to rot upon the ground without any burying or lamenting them, as men of all Countreys, and Nations uſed to do; Levit.21.1. whereas he addeth, that they ſhould not pluck off their hair or cut themſelves, he doth not hereby approve ſuch doings out of paſſion and extremity of ſorrow, for it is forbidden, as heatheniſh; but becauſe they probably did ſo, as well as idolize after the manner of the heathen.

Verſ.7. Neither ſhall tear themſelves in mourning to comfort them for the dead; Vulg: neither ſhall break bread to him that mourneth, to comfort him over the dead. Hebr. They ſhall not break to them upon the mourning, or the mourner, to which it is to be thought, that bread is to be ſupplyed, becauſe the next words are, neither ſhall they drink to him the cup of conſolation, neither doth the word פרס ſignifie tearing, but breaking cutting or dividing, and of cutting and tearing their hair enough was ſaid before *verſ.*6. And forſomuch as at Funerals Feaſts were made to mitigate ſorrow, as hath been ſaid, and this was uſed amongſt the Jews, how can we expound the word breaking, more aptly, then by breaking bread, and giving, and moving the ſorrowfull friends of the dead to eat, that through grief had already faſted too long, according to Lucian, ſpeaking of Funerall rights, and ſaying, After all theſe, a Funerall Supper remaineth; and now friends are preſent to comfort the Parents of the dead, and they perſwade them to take meat, although they be unwillingly in a manner forced unto it, albeit through a three dayes faſt, almoſt killed with famine. And this expoſition is confirmed further by the next words of drinking to them, whereas if it be expounded, tearing themſelves, here would be no congruity. And of Feaſting at Funerals both Clemens makes mention amongſt Chriſtians, and Chryſoſtom alſo. Clem.lib. 8.Conſt. 24.Chryſ.Hom. 37.in Math.

Neither go into the houſe of Feaſting, that is, hereby to ſhew, that their Feaſtings, and merry meetings ſhall ſoon have an end, when all things ſhould by their enemies be brought to ruine, as is declared verſ.9. Whereby we may gather, that when ſin abounds in a Land, and Judgements therefore approach Note. or even begin to ſeiſe upon it, God would not have Feaſtings at ſuch times, and if there be, the faithfull ought like Jeremiah to refrain from going to them, leaſt men be hereby blinded from ſeeing the evils hanging over their heads, and ſo remain ſecure, and hardened in their ſins, all care and ſorrow being drowned in cups and good chear, ſee *Iſa.*22.12. Verſ.10. Here is ſhewed, that when the Prophet ſhould ſo ſeverely threaten the wicked Jews, they ſhould with a brazen face ask what their great ſins were, for which they ſhould be thus puniſhed, as who ſhould ſay, Thou doſt us wrong, we are not ſo notoriouſly faulty as thou wouldſt make the world beleeve. For this is the manner of hypocrites, what fowl ſins ſoever they live in, to juſtifie themſelves and have indignation at the Preacher, who reproveth them; but in ſuch the way to repentance is dammed up, their caſe is deſperate.

Verſ.11. Becauſe your Fathers have forſaken me, and ye have done worſe. Here is a double reaſon of Gods judgements now coming. 1. The Lord was long ago provoked by their fathers, which were enough to make him full of wrath againſt them: for he threatens to viſit the ſins of the Fathers, upon the Children to the third and fourth generation. 2. They did worſe, both becauſe not only their own ſins, but their Fathers were together looked upon in them, foraſmuch as they tread in their ſteps, and ſo made them their own, and alſo becauſe they had more Prophets to inſtruct, admoniſh and preſſe them to do well, as is intimated in the laſt words of *verſ.*12. That they might not hearken to me. Verſ.13. Therefore he threatens to carry them into a land, that they knew not, and that there they ſhould ſerve other gods, that was, into Caldea, the inhabitants whereof were idolaters, and the Jews being made their ſervants were by them made to ſerve their idols by doing all ſervile offices about them, as the Gibeonites were ſometime made to ſerve the ſervants of the true God by Joſh.9. being hewers of wood, and drawers of water, to all the congregation: and in this work the Caldees ſhould work them day and night without all mercy, to the waſting of their bodies, and wearing out of their ſtrength, and haply ſometimes by ſacrificing their children, which would be a great grief unto them. For to ſerve other gods would not otherwiſe have been counted ſo grievous a puniſhment, ſith they did this voluntarily at home, acted, preferred it before ſerving of the true God, but then, when they ſhould be compelled to do it in baſeneſs and toyl, in deriſion and hunger, thirſt and nakedneſs, being under the whip alſo, as the Turks gally-ſlaves, they ſhould find it to be an intollerable ſervitude, and ſo grow to a loathing of their ſervice, repenting that they were ſo beſotted, for ſuch cruell gods, as they proved to them, and helpleſs to ſave them from this captivity, to forſake the gracious & true God of their fathers, who had alwayes been ſo beneficent unto them; a like threatning to which was uſed to Rehoboam, when he cryed to the Lord againſt the King of Egypt, that he ſhould be brought into ſubjection by him, that he might know the difference betwixt ſerving him, and other gods. Or it may be conceived, that however the Jews now ſerved other gods, yet being ſmitten and brought to ſo great miſery, and finding no help from the gods which they ſerved, they Note. then changed their minds, and reſolved not to ſerve them any more, but were by their imperious enemies compelled to vex their Souls the more. And ſo ſin was puniſhed in the kind, that abomiuation which they had choſen they being now proſtituted unto, even to the wearing of them, and the encreaſe of their miſery.

Verſ.14. Therefore the dayes come, ſaith the Lord, that it ſhall no more be ſaid, The Lord liveth, &c. That is, becauſe the miſeries of the Jews ſhall be far greater, in their Babyloniſh captivity, then the miſery of their fathers in Egypt, forſomuch as this ſhall not only be corporeall, but ſpirituall; for they ſhall be left to ſink, as it were, into the gulph of all abominations, in ſerving other gods, as *verſ.*13. when they ſhall herefrom be delivered, the benefit ſhall be counted ſo great, that hereby the memory of that out of Egypt ſhall be drowned, and lie under oblivion, never to be ſpoken of any more; but this ſhall be remembred and God ſhall be praiſed for it throughout all generations. And under this deliverance that by Jeſus Chriſt is alſo pointed at, whereby a perfect deliverance is made not only from idolatry, and that baſe ſervitude, but from Joh.8.44. all ſin, which whoſoever liveth in, is the ſervant of ſin. And this appeareth further, *Chap.*23.6,7,8. where the ſame words are uſed again, and this deliverance is expreſly ſaith to be by the righteous branch and King raiſed up to Hieron. Raban. Iſidor. *David, verſ.*5. wherefore Jerom is for this, and after him Rabanus and Hugo. And Iſidor without taking in the deliverance from the Babyloniſh captivity, reaſoneth ſtrongly to prove it to be a prophecie, not of that deliverance, but only of the deliverance by Chriſt. 1. Becauſe it is ſaid to be ſo great, that it ſhould obſcure the deliverance out of Egypt; but ſuch was not that out of Babylon, if we compare them together: for in Egypt they were longer, viz. above 200. years, in Babylon but ſeventie, out of Egypt they were delivered in a more wonderfull manner by prodigies and miracles, in ſpight of the King; from Babylon not: and being brought out of Egypt they were made a free people, but when out of Babylon they continued under the Perſian Kings; Again, when they were brought out of Babylon they kept the Paſſeover ſtill, even till the time of the deſtruction of the Temple. in remembrance of their deliverance out of Egypt, whereas is ſaid here that this ſhould be no more be ſpoken of. Laſtly becauſe a clauſe is here added, into a Land which he gave for inheritance to your Fathers, and from all countreys, whereas Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, their Fathers, never had it given them, but only promiſed and therefore bringing again into Judea cannot be meant, neither were they carried into all Countreys, but into Babylon; yet ſome take it as a prophecie only of deliverance from the Babyloniſh captivity, as Cald. Theod. Tho. Aquin. &c. Againſt whom moſt of Ca'd.Par. Theod. Lyra. Dionyſ. Vatabl. the reaſons beforegoing are very ſtrong. Neither do the words ſo well agree to that of Iſidor, ſeeing that when the Jews came to be delivered by Chriſt, they ſhall be no more delivered from the north, then from other parts of the World, where they are ſcattered. But to the firſt expoſition all things do excellently agree, both deliverances being here underſtood together, that out of Babylon from the north, and that by Chriſt from all parts towards the end of the World, according to Rom. 11. where it is ſhewed, that the Jews ſhall not alwayes continue in infidelity, but be again graffed in and ſaved. Calvin Calvin. alone here ſtands againſt all others, denying theſe words to be Propheticall, only he ſaith, that their deliverance is obliguly touched upon, but who ſo ſhall look into *verſ.*15. ſhall find it plainly propheſied of, for it is ſaid, I will bring them again into the Land, that I gaveunto their Fathers, which words are peculiar to their return from Babylon, and not pertinent to their deliverance by Chriſt, which when it ſhall be wrought, it is not neceſſary hence to hold, that they ſhall be brought out of all Countreys to inhabit the Land of Canaan again, ſeeing the Apoſtle Paul, that ſpeaks moſt of it, ſaith nothing of this, but Verſ.16. only of their converſion. I will ſend for many fiſhers, and they ſhall fiſh them. This hath been againſt all ſenſe and reaſon drawn by many ancient expoſitours to the Apoſtles, becauſe the Lord ſaith,

I will make you fiſhers of men, as by Ierom, Auguſt. tract. 10. de util, jeiunij, Origen hom. 12. in Ieron. Tertul.lib. 4. *adverſ. Marcion. cap.*9. *Ambr. in Pſa.*118. For this is not ſpoken in way of comfort, but of terror. Having interlaced ſomething conſolatory, *verſ.*14.15. for the faithfuls ſake, now he proſecutes the matter before in hand, ſhewing how he would carry them into a ſtrange Land, viz. by ſending fiſhers, and hunters, that is, the Caldees, to whom they ſhould be but as fiſhes to the fiſher, taken in nets without reſiſtance, and as conies running into holes, or Foxes, whom the hunters purſuing thither, ferit them or dig them out. So that hereby is meant, that not only ſuch, as appeared, but even they that hid themſelves under coverts, as fiſhes under water, or beaſts in burrowes, or in woods, ſhould be fonnd out and carryed away to ſuffer, as was before threatned. Thus Theod. Hugo, Lyra, Vatabl. Ezek. 12. 13. It is ſaid, I will ſtretch over him my net, ſee alſo 2 King. 25.4. Habac. 1.14. and to this Calvin alſo agreeth. And this is confirmed further, *verſ.*17. Becauſe mine eyes are upon all their wayes, they are not hid from my face.

Lyra.

And firſt, I will recompenſe their ſin double. Theſe words have reference to the promiſe made *verſ.*14. as if he had ſaid, I will bring them again into their own Land, but firſt I will by bringing fiſhers and hunters againſt them, recompenſe their ſin double, where by double he meaneth both by fiſhing and hunting them, not double to their deſerts: ſee the like threatning before *Iſa.*40.1.61.1. Jerom will have by double meant, double to the puniſhments of other people, becauſe they had more means, or according to their double ſinning in word and in deed, or againſt God and their neighbour. Iſidor, becauſe their ſin was double to their Fathers, ſith their Fathers and theirs were now looked upon together. Some as *Levit.*26. he threatneth puniſhment ſevenfold, that is, abundance of puniſhment: they have defiled my Land with the carkaſes of abominable things, that is, ſacrifices offered to idols, for as ſacrifices offered to God, ſuch Calvin, yields a ſweet ſmell unto him, ſo thoſe that are offered to idolds ſtink, and the bodies of beaſts killed for that purpoſe are ſtinkiug and abominable.

Verſ.19.

My Lord and refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles ſhall come unto thee. Having propheſied, *verſ.*14. of the converſion of the Jews, after their abundant puniſhment, now for greater comfort he propheſieth alſo of the Gentiles converſion, whereby a far greater increaſe ſhall be made of ſpirituall Jews and ſo of Abrahams ſeed. And in preparing to ſpeak of this he calleth God his fortreſſe and refuge in affliction, ſpeaking in the name of the faithfull Jewes, as if he had ſaid, Thou wilt certainly be a refuge for us to come unto in all one ſufferings before threatned, for even the Gentiles from one end of the world to another ſhall come unto thee, and be ſaved, therefore we thy firſt born and eldeſt ſons much more. The beleevers of the Jews and Gentiles making one Church, over which God would be the Protectour, is here intimated. And when this ſhonld be, he ſheweth, that they ſhould ſee into their vanity in ſerving other gods and abhor from it, from thenceforth acknowledging and worſhipping one only true God.

Verſ. 20.21.

CHAP. XVII.

THe ſin of Iudah is written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a Diamond, and graven upon the Table of your heart. It is a fond conjecture of Euſeb. Cæſar, that this was ſpoken of Iudas the Traitour, and touching the ſin of the Jews in crucifying Chriſt; for it is plainly ſpoken of the ſin of Idolatry, in turning of them therefrom, and therefore no blotting of it out by forgiveneſſe, but it muſt needs remain for ever conſpicuous to the eyes of the omniſcient God, that ſeeth the heart provoking him to take revenge: The meaning is according to Calvin, that they were moſt obſtinately ſet upon this ſin, neither could the love and corrupt affection, that was, and had long been in them to falſe gods be any more expunged, then the graving that is made upon hard ſtone with iron pens or Diamonds points. And the table of ſtone, whereupon this ſin was thus written, was their heart, in which it had made a moſt deep impreſſion, and was not as a writing with ink, which may eaſily be done out again; whereby he intimateth, that when in Ioſiah his time they were outwardly reclaimed from idolatry, it ſtuck ſtill in their hearts, and upon the change of their King to an Idolater ſoon appeared again in their practice; wherefore as before he had ſet forth their incorrigibility by likening them to the *Ethiopian, Chap.*13.23. ſo now by a ſimilitude taken from ingraving deeply in ſtone he further ſetteth forth the ſame. And leaſt they ſhould ſay, How knoweſt thou what is ingraven in our heart? he addeth, and upon the horns of their Altars, as if he had ſaid, that it is ſo is apparent by the Altars by you ſet up to Baal and your ſacrifices openly made upon them, and the bloud put upon the horns of theſe Altars, the ſtain of which any man might eaſily ſee. For when ſacrifices were offered upon the Altar of the Lord, ſome of the bloud was taken and put upon the horns thereof, *Exod.*29.12. Levit. 8.15.16.18. and I doubt not, but in making their Idolatrous ſacrifices upon Altars ſet up to idols they did likewiſe. Some think that their ſin is ſaid here to be written, becauſe the names of their idols or their own names were graven thereupon, but this is only conjecturall, the other certain. Vulgar Latine, for the point of a Diamond hath ungue adamantino, but the word צפרן rendred unguis, is a inſtrument, wherewith it is ingraven in ſtone by ſcraping therewith as birds by their nailes or talons. Note. From hence we may note, that the ſin, wherein any man liveth, and is reſolutely bent to go on therein, is ingraven in his heart and conſcience, and ſo remains till the day of judgement, at what time it ſhall as plainly appear to his condemnation, as letters ingraven in ſtone with the point of a Diamond, that all men may take heed of ſetting their hearts upon ſin.

Verſ.2. Whilſt their Children remember their Altars, that is, they go one generation after generation to ſacrifice upon theſe Altars and in groves, their ſin remains written, as hath been ſaid, for a teſtimony againſt them, and they ſhall be accordingly judged. For it is the manner of ſuch as are blindly lead on in a falſe Religion, carefully to bring up their children in doing as they have done, charging them moſt ſtreightly herewith, and not to yield therefrom to their dying day.

Verſ.3. O my mountain in the field, I will give, &c. the vulgar Latine, ſacrificing in the fields, but contrary to the Hebrew in which is no word ſignifying to ſacrifice, but my mountain. Calvin (O montanous place,) I will give in the field, thy ſubſtance, &c. and this reading the words will beſt bear, the meaning being, although thou glorieſt and beareſt thy ſelf upon mount Zion, where my Temple ſtandeth, and in other hils, where thou haſt ſet up Altars to idols, yet thou ſhalt fall by the ſword of the enemy; and thy treaſure hid in caves in the fields ſhall come into thy enemies hands, as ſpoils.

Verſ.4. For ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which ſhall burn for ever. Becauſe this is ſpoken of Iudea lying deſolate ſeventie years, whereas they would not let it reſt every ſeventh year according to the Law, it may be doubted, how Gods wrath could be ſaid this way to burn for ever. Ierom to cut off this doubt referreth it to the time of Jeruſalems deſtruction by the Romans, & I see not but that this threatning may be extended to that alſo, the Babyloniſh captivity being firſt meant, which ſhould be for a determinate number of years, and then that farre longer laſting deſolation, yea even for ever. Hieron. Raban. For although the Jews ſhall be ſo in time converted, yet they ſhall not dwell again in that Land, neither ſhall it come to its former fertility for ever; but as now by the report of travellers it is as a barren wilderneſſe for many miles about Jeruſalem, ſo it ſhall continue a ſpectacle of Gods judgement ſomewhat like Sodom and Gomorrah to the worlds end; or for ever till a double recompence paid her for all her ſinnes, as *Chap.*16.18. the like threatning was made before in Iſaiah.

Curſed be the man that truſteth in man, and maketh fleſh his arm. This is ſpoken Verſ.5. in reſpect of the confidence that they had in the Egyptians help, often complained of, for they are expreſly ſaid to be fleſh and not Spirit, *Iſa.*31. that is, very weakneſſe. But it is univerſally true, To truſt in any man, or our ſelves, or any ſtrength that we can make by horſes, munitions or arms, is to be accurſed: becauſe ſuch depart in their hearts from the Lord, as in the next words. They may ſay, that they love and honour the Lord ſtill indeed, but he that knoweth the heart giveth ſentence to the contrary. And this is here added by the Prophet to the threatning before going, becauſe whatſoever judgements were denounced, they were not moved by them ſo long as they had other ſtrength to truſt unto.

Verſ.7. Bleſſed is the man that truſteth in the Lord, and whoſe hope is the Lord. For this ſheweth who it is that truſteth in him, not every one that thinketh he doth ſo, but when triall cometh doth indeed by hope depend upon him, which is the caſe of a very few. And to deterre from truſting in man and to encourage to truſt in God, the firſt is compared to an heath, a Land of drought and ſaltneſſe, moſt barren; but the ſecond to a tree planted by the waters, &c. *Pſal.*1.

Verſ.9. The heart is deceitfull above all things, deſperatly wicked, who can know it? Having pronounced the man accurſed that truſteth in man, &c. now becauſe he knew, that the wicked Jews would elude this by imagining, that they were not guilty of the ſinne ſo ſeverely cenſured, for they truſted in God and their hearts were not gone from him, as Jeremy objected, although they expected help from the Egyptians: In oppoſing this he ſaith, that mans heart is deceitfull, neither can man know it, yea it may lie hid from a mans ſelf, being alſo miſtaken in it, but God knoweth the heart and reins, and will give to every one according to his works, neither ſhall his fair ſhewes benefit him, or hide his naughty heart from Gods ſight. A thing to be thought upon by all hypocrites, to make them, if poſſible, to turn ſincere. Verſ.10.

Verſ.10. As the Partridge ſitteth on egs and hatcheth them not, ſo he that gathereth riches not juſtly. It is written of the Partridge, that ſhe gathereth to her at ſitting time other Partridges egges, which being brought forth, when they hear the voice of their own damme, and by an inſtinct of nature know it, leaving her that ſat upon them, they flee away to their own dams and leave her: ſo Ambroſ. Hieronym. Albertus, and according to this expoſition the Caldee, Paraphraſt hath it, the Partridge gathereth egges which ſhe layed not; ſo likewiſe Hebr. Calvin excepteth againſt this, as an invention of the Rabbins, and not written of either by Ariſtotle or Pliny, but that theſe birds are ſo ſalacious both the he and ſhe, that he being impatient of her abſence during the time of ſitting upon her egges, breaketh them whereſoever he finds them with his bill or claw, and ſhe although ſhe hides as many of them as ſhe can, yet during the time of her laying, keepes ſo little out of his company, that ſome of them come from her in his preſence, which he breaketh, and ſo never hatcheth them. But forſomuch as the words in Hebrews are, ſhe gathereth egs ſhe brought not forth, the firſt expoſition is to be preferred: neither doth the hiſtory want atteſtatours, and this doth not ſo well agree, becauſe he ſaith not, the partridge ſitteth on eggs, but gathereth them, which moſt aptly agreeth to that for which this ſimilitude is brought of a man gathering riches by unjuſt means, that they leave him: whereas if it be taken the other way for ſitting and not hatching, it neither agreeth to the Hiſtory brought from Ariſtotle, ſeeing ſhe ſitteth not upon the egges that are broken by the he, not to the preſent caſe of one unjuſtly gathering riches that depart from him in the midſt of his dayes, theſe egges are preſently broken and come to nothing. Some others make another relation, that the Partridge ſeeing the Fowler nigh her neſt, cometh neer unto him, and goeth upon the ground and fleeth not, feigning her ſelf unable, whereby ſhe provokes him to follow her, but having drawn him far off from her neſt, ſhe fleeth away and ſo he is deceived. But this agreeth nothing to the preſent purpoſe. Theodoret, and Iſidor upon another property of a Partridge, which one bringeth up tame, that by the cry thereof other Partridges may may be called together, and then he takes them in his net, underſtand Nebuchadnezzar to be hereby ſet forth, who gat abundance of goods unjuſtly, and then loſt all again, being driven from amongſt men, and becoming fooliſh as a bruit beaſt. But this agreeth worſt of all, becauſe not the calling together of other Partridges, but gathering egges is here ſpoken of. I reſt therefore in the firſt, it is a deſcription of the caſe of the rich Jews, who in their fruitfull Land gathered abundance of wealth by hook and crook, and herein thought themſelves happy and ſurely ſeated in their own habitation againſt all enemies,but the event proved contrary, in the midſt of their dayes, whilſt they were thus ſecure and bleſſing themſelves, the Caldees came and all their be underſtood of King Jechoniah who then reigned, as may further appear *Chap.*22. where his Father is ſaid to have executed juſtice and proſpered, but he contrariwiſe being intent to gather riches, is threatned that he ſhould now he addeth ſomewhat to erect our minds to God and to make us truſt in him. As if he had ſaid,God hath a glorious Throne in heaven, whereupon he ſitteth and ruleth over all things, a repreſentation whereof is our ſanctuary, before which we worſhip, therefore let us put our whole truſt in him. All that do not, but forſake him,ſhall be aſhamed, *verſ.*12. but let us, as they that the faithfull by propounding unto them the heavenly glory to come figured Lyra. out by the Sanctuary, as Lyra, Th. Aqui. Dionyſ. Some laſtly take theſe words, as ſpoken to ſhew how worthily the Jews ſhould be deſtroyed, becauſe that having ſo glorious a God dwelling amongſt them,they ſo baſely forſook Cal.in. him to ſerve idols, as Calvin: and to this I ſubſcribe, as beſt agreeing both to the words before going and following: to the words before, there is and alwayes hath been a juſt Judge, by whoſe juſt doom it muſt needs be, that unjuſt gatherers of riches ſhal loſe them again and periſh:to the words following, this Throne being repreſented in Judea,and ſo gracing it above other Lands, giving therefore occaſion to Iſrael of confidence in him that ſitteth thereupon, will therefore be revenged upon the Jews becauſe that bearing themſelves upon this priviledge they are ſecure in their ſinning ſo fowlly againſt God by forſaking him, the Fountain of living water, as was alſo complained before, *Chap.*2.13. The Rabbins, as Calvin further noteth, becauſe it is ſaid, a Throne from the beginning and our Sanctuary, ſay that Heaven, where Gods Throne is,was before the Creation, and the Sanctuary likewiſe: but it is not ſaid before the beginning, but the place of our Sanctuary is the Throne of glory on High from the beginning, that is, from the beginning in Gods eternall Counſell determined to be a moſt glorious and High Throne,although ſet up in time.

Here, and beginning verſ. 20. is another prophecie againſt the Jews for breaking the Sabbath day by carrying burthens and working. About which if it be demanded, why the Lord ſhould be ſo ſtrict about this,being but an externall ceremony, and ſometime ſlighted by him, as *Iſa.*1.13. and ſince under the Goſpel condemned *Gal.*4.10. *Col.*2.16? It is anſwered by Calvin,firſt, Calvin. becauſe it was an eaſie precept to ceaſe from labour one day in ſeven, and therefore they that would not herein obey were worthy of all ſeverity, as Adam groſſe neglect of upholding the memoriall of the greateſt priviledge that ever was beſtowed upon mortall men. 3. Becauſe the Lord would by their keeping of a reſt now from ſervile works,draw them to a reſt from the ſervile works of ſin, as he reſted from the works of Creation; unto which a fourth may be added,that it might alwayes be remembred,that the whole World was created by God, That we might acknowledge his infinite Power and Wiſdom herein appearing, till a greater work wrought by the Son of God, that is, the work of our Redemption, betwixt whoſe reſting from which, and the Fathers from Creating, ſome compariſon is made, *Heb.*4.9.10. Laſtly by keeping the Sabbath, as wherein all Religious duties were done,all the exerciſe of Religion is meant, which if it had been purely upheld, both Princes, Nobles, Prieſts and Commons ſhould have flouriſhed for ever,as verſe 2.

CHAP. XVIII.

HEre the Lord directeth Jeremiah again to teach by an outward and familiar Verſ. 1.2. ſign,he muſt go to a potters houſe,andthere when he had ſeen how he made a veſſell of clay, that pleaſed him not, which he therefore brake and made another of the ſame matter as he thought good, the Lord bad him ſay to the houſe of Iſrael, that he had the like power over them, to make them, 3.1. and to break them, by an Argument a minore ad majus, becauſe the potter is not ſo abſolutely over his pots and clay, as the Lord is over men; both in this regard that the clay is none of his creature, neither hath he abſolute Power without God giving him ſtrength to break and make, but God hath. And therefore whenſoever he threatens a Nation to pluck it up, or deſtroy it, if it 3.6. repenteth, he will not do it, and when he promiſeth to plant and build any, 7.8. if that Nation doth evil he will repent him, that is, turn from doing what he 9.10. promiſed, leaving ſuch a Nation to deſtruction. And the Lord would have Jeremiah thus to teach the Jews, becauſe they were ſo ſtupid, that verball teaching without ſigns would not work upon them, and when being both wayes taught they would not be moved to repentance, he might bring his judgements before threatned the more juſtly upon them. For by this teaching he ſheweth firſt that the Iſraelites came not to be ſo glorious and flouriſhing a Nation, but of Gods meer good will and pleaſure,and the ſame is true touching any other Nation in the World. 2. That they were not ſo ſetledly built, but that by their ſins they ſhould be pulled down again, the Covenant and promiſe made to Abraham and his ſeed notwithſtanding,becauſe in Covenants betwixt God and man, conditions are alwayes ſet, to which man muſt ſtand for his part,or elſe the Covenant is broken, to ſhew which God ſaid to Abraham, Gen.17.1. I am God alſufficient,walk before me, and be upright, whereby both he, and his poſterity ſtood bound throughout all generations, and if it were ſo with the Iſraelitiſh Nation, much more with any other. 3. That the welfare or deſtruction of a Nation comes according to their repenting or evil doing, as Nineveh repenting,although threatned with deſtructionw,as ſpared, but Jeruſalem doing evil, although built by gracious promiſes, was deſtroyed. 4. That deſtruction or deliverance to a Nation,when God willeth either upon their evil doings, or repentance, cometh ſuddenly, as upon Sodom, and the old World,Jericho,and the other Canaanites,deſtruction ; and to the Hebrews in Egypt, to Samaria, and to Hezekiah and Jeruſalem, deliverance. The ſimilitude taken from the potter is uſed before Eſa.45.9. and after Rom.9. but there in reſpect of election and reprobation, here of temporall deliverance or deſtruction, yet as in this, ſo in that it is to he held, that however God hath abſolute Power, yet he electeth none, but ſuch as perſit conſtantly in well doing;neither condemneth any,but the impenitent only,although his decree of election and reprobation precedeth Jacobs and Eſaus doing good or evill actually.

Verſ.14. Will a man leave the ſnow of Lebanon, that comes from the rock of the field? Vulgar, will the ſnow of Lebanon leave, or fail from the rock of the field, thus alſo the Hebrews, that is, Doth the ſnow of Lebanon ceaſe to be at any time upon the top of the rocks ? certainly it doth not, for the nature of the rocks there is to hold ſnow both Summer and Winter, from whence that place had the name Lebanon from whiteneſſe, as Laban ſignifieth, no heat of the Sun being able to melt it. Now the Lord was to the Jews, as the ſnow of Lebanon, a cooling and refreſhing to them, what hot perſecution ſoever was raiſed up againſt them, but by their ſins they now made him to leave them, ſo that the ſnow of Lebanon contrary to the accuſtomed manner was now gone. This ſenſe is followed by Ierom, Raban and others, but ſomewhat diverſly, the ſnow faileth not by melting all off the rocks of Lebanon, yet Iſrael is fallen away from the Lord to go after Baal, which I confeſſe, is alſo more agreeable to verſ.15. but then Iſrael muſt be the cool ſnow, wherein refreſhing againſt extream heat lyeth, whereas God was this comfort to them, not they to him, yet they departing from him to falſe Gods, he would hereby ſhew, that he would forſake them. Iſidor, Lyra, Vatabl. following the firſt reading, give this for the ſenſe,Will any man be ſo mad in a hot time, to leave the ſnow of Lebanon commonly coveted by all men to be drunk for cooling, and go to other places to ſeek waters, that be corrupt and without this refrigerating vertue ? and this either may well ſtand. For the next words, Shall the cold flowing waters that come from another place be forſaken? Vulgar, or can cool waters coming from any other place be pluckt out, that they ſhould not flow? Hebr. ſhall cold flowing ſtrange waters be pluckt away, by ſtrange waters others being meant beſides thoſe of Lebanon before ſpoken of, about which there is the ſame difference amongſt expoſitours that was about the ſnow of Lebanon,ſome taking it, as if it had been ſaid, Shall any thing hinder the courſe of flowing waters that they ſhould be put from it,from what place ſoever they come;and ſome as if it had been ſaid,Will any man leaving cold waters in time of heat flowing into the City by pipes from any place, ſeek out for others uncertain or worſe ? and to this effect alſo Calvin, ſaying, that they are charged here with the ſame foul fault that they were charged with Chap.2 13. viz. Forſaking the Fountain of living waters; which was God, here likened to the ſnow of Lebanon and cold waters flowing in unto them for their refreſhing from other places ; and this they did, when they left the pure worſhip of God to ſerve Baal.

Verſ.15. They have cauſed them to fall in their wayes,from the ancient wayes to walk in pathes, a way not caſt up. Hebr. in their wayes, the ancient wayes, or wayes of Eternity. Vulgar, the wayes of the World, a long time gone in: and according to this the ſenſe is thus given by Jerom, their falſe Prophets made them fall in their evil wayes, which were wayes of Idolatry that the Nations of the world had long walked in, and ſo they went in wayes not beaten by their godly forefathers, or not caſt up or made by God for them to go in, and therefore were a way tending to deſtruction. So likewiſe Lyra, Tho. Aquin. Hugo, calling theſe evil wayes of wicked men, ſuch as are ſpoken of Job 22. That ſay to God, depart from us, we care not for the knowledge of thy wayes. But Calvin, Vatabl. and Cald. following the firſt reading, they make one another to fall in the wayes by God appointed them to walk in, which are wayes ſo long ago gone in, that it is a wonder, that they ſhould now ſtumble and fall in them by taking a diſtaſt at them, and preferring the abominable wayes of Idolatry which are ſo dangerous, as being like unto wayes that were never made, as common wayes are by cauſing and evening them, that men may go ſafely upon them without ſtumbling or falling. And this is the caſe of all the wicked, they take no liking to the good way wherein is ſafety, but turn into wayes moſt dangerous for pits and quagmires, into which they ſink, and can get out no more till they periſh everlaſtingly. Wherefore John Baptiſt is ſaid to have prepared the way of the Lord by filling valleys, &c. when he brought them by repentance unto Chriſt, for then they went in a plain way, but before in wayes wherein they might fall ſo, as never to riſe up again, even the valley and ſhadow of death, ſuch as all ſinfull wayes are.

Verſ.18.

For the Law ſhall not periſh from the Prieſt, nor Counſell from the wiſe, nor the word from the Prophet. Say what Jeremiah could in exhorting or threatning them, they were ſo far from being reformed thereby, that they were the more ſtirred up againſt him, ſometime to kill, and ſometime to vex him with ſcoffs and mocks, as here, where they ſtirre up one another, to ſmite him with the tongue: In ſaying the law ſhall not periſh from the Prieſt, &c. they meant, that they had prieſts and Elders, and Prophets among them, that were ſufficient to direct them, for the Prieſts lips ſhall preſerve knowledge, &c. Mal. 2.7. ſee alſo, Deut. 17. and therefore they might ſafely contemn whatſoever Jeremiah ſaid, therefore come and let us threaten him, as he threatens us, and deviſe to ſay ſomething to him, ſo that he may be aſhamed and have little heart to go on in propheſying againſt us any more, as, That he is a fool or a mad man, a Prieſt that affecteth ſingularity, and to bear rule over all others, and a common enemy to all. And by ſuch a common Argument Calvin noteth that the Papiſts elude whatſoever is brought againſt their abominations in divine worſhip. Do ye tell us of error and ſuperſtition, we have an holy High Prieſt, the Pope, that cannot erre, and a repreſentative Church of Cardinals, Biſhops and learned Prieſts that cannot erre, for the Spirit is promiſed to the Apoſtles, and them their ſucceſſours, to lead them into all truth: ye are therefore but giddy-headed and phanatical hereticks and novelliſts, that reprove and ſpeak againſt our doings, and if we can deviſe any means to be revenged upon you for ſo doing, certainly we will by opprobrious ſpeakings, curſings, killing up and maſſacring, or plotting againſt you ſome terrible blow, which ſhall one day be your ruine. But as the Jews, ſo they do but herein fight againſt God and his truth, for which they indeed are accurſed as in the words following, verſ. 19.20. and 21,22,23. where his praying againſt them is in way of propheſying, as being ſuch as the Lord would not forgive, but do according to all that is here threatned, becauſe that in combining againſt Jeremiah they plainly impugned God, in whoſe name and words only he ſpake unto them from the beginning.

CHAP. XIX.

After teaching by one ſign of a potter making and breaking his pots at his pleaſure, *Chap.*18. now the Lord diverteth Ieremiah to teach by another of a pot taken to the valley of the ſon of Hinnom, and by him broken there in the ſight of ſome Prieſts and Elders called thither by him. By the former having ſhewed, that they were in his hands, as the pots in the hands of the potter, ſo that he could whenſoever he diſliked, break them by his Judgements, and being broken, when he was reconciled by their repentance make them again a more proſperous and flouriſhing Nation then they were before: now he ſheweth by this, that he could not only break them ſo, as that they ſhould not be repaired again, but that he would certainly do it for their obſtinate going on in their ſins, that is, the wicked Jews then living, the remnant alwayes excepted, whom he promiſed to replant and build again. And this Calvin. other ſign, as Calvin conjectureth, is added, leaſt any ſhould think, that although the Lord could do by them as the potter by his pots being new made, yet he could not do ſo by them, that had been ſo long formed into a glorious ſtate, ſo that they were ſafe enough and needed not to fear his Judgements to come to their utter ruining as Ieremiah threatned. But by this reſemblance he made the contrary moſt plain, that they ſhould not only be broken in pieces, but alſo broken ſo as never to be made again into ſo excellent a body, as they had formerly been, as indeed they were not, no not after their return from Babylon, becauſe they were under other Kings, the Perſian, the Grecian, &c. and had never more any ſuch Kingdom again as in Davids and Solomons time. And the Prophet is bidden to ſhew this in the valley of the ſon of Hinnom, otherwiſe called Tophet, of which ſee before, *Chap.*7.32. where the ſame threatning with this is made, that where ſuch abominable ſinnes were committed ſuch dreadfull judgements ſhould be executed, as they had ſinned therein unnaturally burning their ſons and daughters in ſacrificing to Molock; ſo in Jeruſalem which was neer unto it they ſhould eat the fleſh of their ſons and daughtres for extream hunger in the time of their ſiege, wherewith their enemies ſhould beſiege them: of which ſee, 2 King,25. *Levit.*26.29. And he is bidden to take of the Prieſts Verſ.1,2. and Elders with him to this place: vulgar Latin, take an earthen veſſell of the potter from the Elders: but Hebr. it is, get or buy an earthen pot, of the potter, and from the Elders, that is, ſome choſen from amongſt them both of the people and Prieſts, to hear and ſee what thou doſt, but none of the common ſort, becauſe they were lead and guided by the Elders, and they had not ſo much underſtanding. The Elders of the Prieſts were the chief and moſt ancient of their ſeverall families, as they are ſpoken of, *Chron.*24. the Elders of the people governours amongſt thoſe of other tribes: and go to the valley of the ſon of Hinnom, which is at the entrance of the Eaſt gate, Vulg. of the potters gate, but the word ſignifyeth the Suns gate, which was eaſtward where the ſun aroſe. But becauſe the word חרש ſignifying a potters veſſell, and חרס the Sun, which is here uſed, are ſo near the one to the other, yea the ſame in pronunciation, becauſe ש hath the point in the left horn, the Vulgar Latine hath it, the potters gate, and to juſtifie that reading it is alledged that the gate next to the valley of the ſon of Hinnom ſtood not Eaſt, but Southward, as may be ſeen, *Joſh.*15.8.18.16. and the ſame was alſo called the dung gate, affirmed alſo by Brocardus to ſtand Southward. Againſt this nothing makes, but the word חרס here uſed and not חרש; of which becauſe ſo good a reaſon hath been rendred before, I cannot for my part, but be ſatisfied in it, and therefore determine with the vulgar Latin that the beſt reading is the potters gate, ſo called for the potters dwelling near unto it and thereby carrying forth their potſheards, for which being as dung, R. Solomon ſaith it was called the dung-gate, Cald. Par. for the dung carryed out by it. And in bidding him go by the potters gate, there is an alluſion to the pot, which he was bidden to carry that way.

And have burnt incenſe to ſtrange gods, which neither their fathers nor they have known, that is, ſaith Jerom, their fathers, that were godly, for they that lived not long before ſince Idolatry took place amongſt them, are not here looked at, as unworthy to be counted fathers, but only the moſt ancient, Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, Moſes, Samuel and David, whoſe knowing and acknowledging was regulated by the Law of God. And therefore the like may be objected againſt the Papiſts now, Ye offer and pray to Saints departed and images, which neither your fathers, nor ye have known, that is, Peter, and Paul, and other Apoſtles, and firſt Preachers of the Goſpel, nor ye from their example, and whereas ye pretend, that our forefathers did ſo, it is true, that they did indeed, but not any except thoſe of later & more corrupt times, who are not therefore worthy of his name, for they worſhipped, as Chriſt to the Samaritane Woman, they knew not what, becauſe they knew them not to be ſuch as ſhould be worſhipped by the rule of Gods Holy Word, and without this to know, as Calvin well noteth, is not to know. Some yet by theſe words, which neither your fathers, nor ye have known, underſtand, to have any power to ſave, or help you in the time of danger, which neither is to be diſliked. Verſ. 4. Hieron. Cal in.

I will bring to nought the Counſell of Judah and Ieruſalem in this place, that is, when they ſhall fall by the ſword here, and ſuffer as hath been threatned, the Counſell that they took together of ſaving themſelves by ſuch or ſuch means ſhall all be fruſtrate, thus Hugo, from whom others differ not, but that ſome ſay, that in this place the bringing of their Councels to nought is threatned, to ſhew that their Councell and wiſdom was by ſerving Baal here, and plying him with humane ſacrifices ſo to ingratiate themſelves with him, as that they might ſurely truſt unto him, for preſervation, come the greateſt danger that might come: and the Paranomaſie in the word בקי here uſed, is to be noted as anſwering to בקבק a Pot, v. 1. Whereas he threatens, that they ſhall be as a pot broken that cannot be made again, but before Chap. 18. that upon repentance they ſhould be planted and built, that is to be underſtood, if before the Judgements come they repented, they ſhould be like unto a pot, not yet burnt and hardened in the fire, which may be made into any form, though broken: but Judgement being once come by the Caldees, their caſe ſhould be as of a pot burnt and then broken, which is irreparable; ſo they till the ſeventie years expired, and not then neither ſo fully as before, according to that which hath been already ſaid. Now all this is ſet forth by a pot broken in pieces, to ſhew, that wicked men are like earthen pots, and if they continue in ſin, death will ſuddenly come and break them, their place ſhall be as Tophet, a dark ſtinking filthy valley, where the fire of Gods wrath ſhall burn for ever, &c. For from the valley of Hinnom, which was Tophet, being Hebr. גיהנום Gehenna hell, the fire whereof is ſo much ſpoken of by our Lord, that never goeth out. ſome arreptitious Prophets did, he uſed him ſo harſhly as is ſaid v. 2. For which was by the houſe of the Lord, Heb. in the houſe of the Lord, that is, within the bounds of the Temple, as Lyra and Vatable note. For the gates of Benjamin, Ierom ſaith, that there were two ſo called, ſtanding towards Benjamin, which poſſeſſes the North part of the Temple, as Iudah the South: one more to the gate were they judged that came under the cenſure of the high Prieſt moſt properly as Prophets, and ſuch as lived about the Temple, according to that Ierem. 29. 26. Zephaniah is ſaid to be made high-Prieſt, that he might put in priſon and in the ſtocks, every one that is mad and feigneth himſelfe a Prophet, by Shemaiah. Some there are that agree not to this touching the gate here ſpoken of, but I will ſpend no more time about circumſtances, Note. but come to the matter. The madneſs of ſome in authority even in the Church is ſuch, that they are inraged againſt the true ſervants of God reproving ſin, and going according to the Word of God in all things, ſo as that in taking revenge upon them, they paſſe the bounds of moderation that ſhould be in Judges: as Paſhur, who firſt ſmote Ieremiah, and then committed him to be brought forth the next day to be judged; whereas it is the duty of thoſe that be in Authority, firſt to apprehend Offendors, and then to bring them to a triall; and after Sentence given to puniſh, and not before. Therefore we may ſee, that all things were now out of order in Ieruſalem to the provoking of God, the more to haſten his judgements.

Verſ. 3. The Lord hath not called thy name Paſhur, but Magor-Miſſabib. Of the laſt word a reaſon is rendred, v. 4. fear round about; for he ſaith, I will make thee a terror to thy ſelf, and to all thy friends, that is, which are about thee, and have been deceived, by thy falſe propheſying, as is intimated, v. 6. But for the word Paſhur, it is not agreed amongſt Expoſitors, ſome ſay, it comes of Pe, ſignifying a mouth, and Shear black, ſome of Paſhah to encreaſe, and Sar, a Prince, as Calvin ſaith; but he enforceth another denomination of his own, from Shappah, to cut, or to open, one opening the light. That of Pagninus ſeemeth to me to be ſo right, that all others are nothing to it, he derives it from פוש Puſh growing, and חיר, whiteneſs, a name ſetting forth one in eminent place, and ſhining in glory, as the bright light; for ſuch was he in his ruling Office: but he ſaith, that he ſhould be brought down to miſery, when looking round about him, he ſhould ſee nothing but matter of terrour and fear, when he ſhould fall into his enemies hands, together with his friends in Ieruſalem, and be carryed captive to Babylon, and dye there. And in telling Paſhur thus after his ſmiting and putting him in the ſtocks, Ieremy ſhewed the magnanimity of a Prophetical ſpirit, which abates not by ſuffering diſgrace and pain, but rather encreaſeth, and ſpareth not to ſpeak to men of power any more than to ſuch as be of the common ſort.

Calvin.

Note.

Verſ. 6. Thou ſhalt be carryed to Babylon and dye, and be buried there. Here firſt is Babylon plainly mentioned, as the place from whence judgment was threatned, in ſaying that it ſhould come out of the North; and not only Paſhur is threatned thus, but all his houſe, and friends to whom he had propheſied lies, that is, made faire promiſes of peace, as from the Lord, whoſe prieſt he was, to make them ſlight Ieremiah his threatnings: whereby we may ſee what it is to have ſuch a Prieſt as to procure the friendſhip of men will daub with untempered Morter, and ſpeak peace to them, to whom there is no peace, he ſhall bring both himſelf and them to ruine, whereas his dying, and being buried in Babylon, is ſpoken of as a judgement, becauſe it was out of the holy Land, and before being ſuffered to lye unburied, it is to be underſtood, that it is ſo to the wicked, but not to the righteous, who are bleſſed and happy whereſoever they die, or howſoever they be uſed after death, whether buried or unburied.

Verſ. 7. O Lord! I was deceived, and thou haſt deceived me. This is not ſaith Calvin ſpoken ſeriouſly, but ironically, as if he had ſaid, O yee Prieſts, that are ſo mad againſt me for ſpeaking as I have done; it is true indeed, I have abuſed you by ſpeaking ſo bitterly againſt my own Nation in the name of the Lord; and the Lord that ſet me awork is deceitfull, if I ſhould herein yield unto you to ſay thus, would yee not be aſhamed? but yee do in effect ſay ſo, when yee ſay that I am a falſe Prophet, and come with feigned meſſages from the Lord unto you. Thus alſo Lyra and Iſidore: But Hierom, Raban, &c. Thou haſt deceived me, in telling me that I ſhould propheſie unto Kingdoms and Nations, whereby I thought that heathen Nations only had been meant, and not Judah. And ſome, Thou haſt deceived me; becauſe thou didſt promiſe, that I ſhould be a brazen wall, Chap. 1. 18. Chap. 15. 20, 21. againſt which none ſhall prevail; but now I finde it otherwiſe, for Paſhur hath violently ſmitten me, and diſgraced me, as is aforeſaid; and to this doe I ſubſcribe, becauſe it is not probable, that Jeremiah being ſo vexed, as he had been, would now utter any thing ironicall, but out of grief ſpeak all things ſeriouſly; and the goodneſs of his conſcience might make him thus bold to challenge the Lord, as he had done in part before, Chap. 15. 18. ſeeing he was ſo unwillingly, and upon ſo great promiſes drawn to this propheſying: and he ſpake thus alſo to move the Lord the more to ſtand for him, and confirm him againſt the aſſaults of his enemies, and not to ſuffer him to be put down by the wicked in his juſt cauſe, ſith that to ſtand to him, and to haſten to take the power to hurt him out of their hands, would make ſo much for the glory of his truth and power, in approving him to be his faithfull ſervant, which together with his credit now lay at the ſtake, and being inſeparable the one from the other, for ſo much as his cauſe was Gods, and Gods cauſe his.

againſt them of deſtruction and ſpoile to come for their ſins, but to none other effect, but to make my ſelf a ſcorn and deriſion, through Gods delaying to bring the judgements threatned, for that was the thing troubled Jeremiah, as we may ſee by his often calling to the Lord, to take revenge upon them: as Jonah was provoked to impatience by his ſparing Nineveh, when he had ſet him to threaten it. Calvin, I cryed out againſt their groſs ſins, whereupon I ſaw them to be ſo ſet, that milde ſpeaking to turn them therefrom would do no good. Any of theſe waies the ſenſe will be good; but I prefer the ſecond, becauſe the Prophet met not with violence ſo long agoe, but more lately; neither were their oppreſſions the ſins, againſt which he cryed out ſo much, as their Idolatries and groſs Superſtition.

Galvin.

Verſ. 9. The Prophet ſeeing their contempt after ſo long and much labour, through the infirmity of the fleſh, grew ſo weary, that he thought to propheſie unto them no more: but the ſpirit, as a fire in him, would not ſuffer him to ſit ſtill. This ſheweth the ſtrife between the fleſh and the ſpirit that is in Gods ſervants, but in time the Spirit prevaileth in all ſuch.

Note.

Verſ. 10. For I heard the reproaches of many, and terrour round about: Magor-Miſſabib. The ſame words there were uſed before in threatning Paſhur verſe 3. whereunto he alludeth the reproaches and blaſphemies increaſing upon his ſilence, being a terrour to him to hear, coming from the wicked Jews; which his zeal not ſuffering him to bear, he brake out from his ſilence reſolved upon, and went on in prophecying againſt them. Whereupon Gregory: The ſame force that moved him for zeal to the glory of God to hold his peace, leſt by the encreaſe of reproach, cauſed through his ſpeaking, it ſhould ſuffer more; now cauſed him contrariwiſe to ſpeake again, when he ſaw that by holding his peace, reproaches were more encreaſed. It oftentimes happeneth, that wiſe men ſeeing that they are not heard, ſilence themſelves: but then perceiving through their ſilence ſins to encreaſe more, they are by a kinde of fear of the Spirit, compelled again to break out into open reproof. So Jeremiah, when he outwardly held his peace, through the tediousneſs of ſpeaking, he ſuffered a fire within, out of the zeal of Charity. Thus alſo Jerom, but Theod. Lyra, and Tho. Aquinas take not theſe words for a reaſon of his breaking out again into ſpeaking; but as having reference to verſe 8. and as a proceeding further to declare his ſufferings, as if he had ſaid; I cry out of violence, and ſee that none other effect comes of it, than the turning the Word of God into deriſion; ſo that I was for a time in ſuſpenſe whether it were not beſt to forbear ſpeaking any more: but when I thought thus, the Spirit within me would not ſuffer it, the reproach was ſo great, and ſo many combined herein together; whereat I was terrified which way ſoever I looked; becauſe it is a trouble to a godly heart to hear blaſphemies againſt God, and the more, the greater; this agreeth ſo well, that we may reſt in it: See the like of the fire burning within David, Pſalme 39. 3. Report, and we will report it: That is, my enemies ſaid thus one to another, Tell the King and his Councell what he ſaith againſt the State, and we will joyn with you in accuſing him: All my familiars watched for my halting; peradventure he will be enticed: That is, they with whom I lived in peace, as the words ſignifie, in former times, now give themſelves to intrap me in my ſpeeches; and for this end come about me, and provoke me to ſpeak, that they may have ſome advantage againſt me to accuſe me to the higher powers, and ſo be revenged of me: The like complaint was made by the Prophet David in the Pſalmes, and afterwards the like is ſaid of Chriſt, Matth. 22. 15.

Verſ. 13. Sing unto the Lord, praiſe him, for he hath delivered the ſoule of the poor, &c. The Prophet in the midſt of his ſufferings and dangers having looked up to God by the eye of faith, as being on his ſide to ſave him, and to bring his wicked enemies to confuſion, verſe 11, 12. Now being fully perſwaded of his help at hand, and that his prayer was heard for revenge to be taken upon them, he breaketh out into ſinging and praiſing of God, as if it had been already, as David alſo oftimes did in the Pſalmes.

Curſed

Verſ. 14.

Calvin.

Curſed be the day wherein I was born. It is ſtrange, that Ieremiah having praiſed God, verſe 13. out of the confidence that he had in his help, ſhould now ſo ſuddenly break out into theſe ſpeeches of impatience: Therefore Calvin underſtands them not as belonging to this place, but to verſe 8, 9, 10. they being only ſet down here by way of commemoration of what he had ſaid in the bitterneſs of his ſoul, before the comfort expreſſed upon his prayer, verſe 12, 13. But I ſee no cauſe thus to determine; for the like may be ſeen before, Chap. 15. verſe 18. after joy expreſſed in the Word, verſe 16. he cryeth out, as ſmitten with a diſeaſe incurable, and expoſtulates with the Lord for lying unto him, as in this Chap. v. 8. for deceiving him. It is therefore rather to be conceived, that Ieremiah was ſo troubled by the hard meaſure which he met withall, ſpeaking nothing but the words of the Lord: hearing therefore, and ſuffering ſuch intollerable reproach, that in zeal for God he counted himſelf a moſt unhappy man; for that diſcharging his Office ſo faithfully, he could move none to repentance, but by his prophecying was a means to aggravate their ſins to Gods greater diſhonour, and their own utter overthrow: He was, I ſay, ſo troubled at this, that he thus cryeth out, wiſhing, that he had rather never been born, than to live to encreaſe the ſins of his people, that it ſhould go worſe with them by his means, and conſequently to be a cauſe of Gods greater diſhonour, Iob 3. 5. The like is ſaid by that holy man for his bodily ſufferings, and yet he is juſtified in his ſayings, Chap. 42. 7. Therefore Ieremiah much more, who had greater cauſe thus to utter himſelf, viz. a cauſe joyned with Gods cauſe, whereby he was brought into theſe troubles; ſo that whatſoever he ſaid came not ſo much out of any impatience, but zeal, which is ſo highly accepted of before God, and makes a man in ſuch caſes ſometimes to complain, ſometimes to rejoyce, and ſuddenly again to cry out as the moſt miſerable of all other men, as David did, and Paul, Rom. 7. 21. Whereas his curſing the day of his birth, and the man that brought tidings of it is aggravated againſt him by ſome, as being no leſſe than blaſphemy: It is better noted by others, that he uttered not a word againſt God, by whoſe Providence he knew that he ſuffered thus, and what he uttered is not to be looked at as the words ſound, but according to the meaning, which was only, that there had never been any ſuch day, a meſſenger, and therefore that he had never been born, rather than to live to heare, and ſee, and know the horrible things before ſpoken of. And he ſpake ſo, the rather to move the Jews, if they had any moving in them, to deſiſt from this their malice and cauſeleſs hatred againſt him, ſeeing this office of propheſying things ſo unpleaſing, was not a thing by him affected, but neceſſarily impoſed upon him, as Chap. 1. 17. and it was ſo grievous unto him, that he was even weary of his life, through Gods preſſing him on to it on the one ſide, and their maligning of him therefore on the other. Other Expoſitors ſeek to excuſe him otherwiſe, as Origen, ſaying that the day of his birth was paſt, and therefore nothing now; ſo that curſing it, he curſed nothing. Theod. is Ierom, that it is not credible that Ieremiah ſinned herein, who was ſanctified from the womb. Iſidore, That this curſing is but conditionall; if any, let that day be curſed. Chryſ. He curſed not any day made by God, as it was his day, but as his owne; the day of the birth of one ſinfull and miſerable, or he was as a man cut by a Chirurgeon extremely pained, and hereby moved to ſtrike at and to bite thoſe about him that hold him. Gregory, Let the day of mutibility periſh, that the light of eternity may break forth. But Cajetan is for the firſt, that it is only to be taken, as if he had wiſhed, that he had never been born; not that ſuch a day had not been, nor ſuch a man, but that he had had no cauſe by his birth to bring ſuch tidings. And all this is ſpoken alſo out of ſome anger againſt God, as his friend, that he ſuffered it to be thus, as one friend may ſpeak to another, to provoke him the more to ſtand for him, whom he ſeemed too much to neglect, upon ſuch quarrels amongſt men that are friends, it being common to renew their mutuall love.

CHAP. XXI.

Verſ. 1. JEremiah having upon his hard uſage by Paſhur Chap. 20. made his complaint to God, and by all means ſought to ſtir him up with ſpeed to be revenged upon ſuch a generation of mock-Gods, and fighters againſt him; now ſeeth the judgement beginning by Nebuchadnezzar, which he had ſo long threatned, in the ninth year of Zedekiah his reign, as we may ſee 2 Kings 25. 1, 2. For it is not to be doubted, but that was the time of Zedekiah his ſending to Ieremiah here ſpoken of: and therefore this comes in by hyſteron-proteron in this place; for Ieruſalem was not beſieged till Chap. 32. and Iehojachim reigned, Chap. 25. who was before Zedekiah, and after him Iehojachim. Paſhur ſaid here to be ſent, was not the ſame Prieſt before ſpoken of, but another of that name, whom the King thought to be more gracious with the Prophet, and ſo the more likely to obtain ſome comfortable anſwer from him. But Ieremiah nothing moved by this honour done by him, by the King himſelf, in ſending Embaſſadors thus, as it were, unto him, returns a terrible anſwer, even what the Lord ſaid unto him; as it becometh every faithfull Miniſter of God to do, without reſpect of perſons, declaring his Word truly and fully, without detracting or altering it in any Deut. 4. 2. thing: This Paſhur yet ſeeing Ieremiah his inflexibility, counſels the King to put him to death, Ier. 38.

Verſ. 12. Execute judgement in the morming. Here the Prophet is ſent to the Court, after that the King had ſent to him, and he is bidden to ſay, Hear the Word of the Lord (O houſe of David; ) not to honour the King the more, by mentioning ſo worthy a King as David, from whom he was deſcended; but meet with him in his vain confidence, becauſe he was of his line, that he ſhould continue in his Royall Dignity, by vertue of the promiſe made to David, and to his ſeed, 2 Sam. 7. For if he executed judgement, he ſheweth that he ſhould better provide for the eſtabliſhment of his Throne, from which he ſhould otherwiſe be ſuddenly removed. And he ſaith, Execute judgment in the morning. That is, diligently, without any further delay, doing juſtice to every one that was oppreſſed; not deferring to hear the cauſe of the widow and fatherleſs, becauſe they were poor and could not bribe him, as the rich could; a great ſin taxed Eſa. 1. Vatabl. 23, 24. Vatablus, In the morning, before that by drinking and exceſs he had made himſelf unfit to judge aright. Note hence, that no priviledge of alliance to the moſt excellent, nor humbling a mans ſelf outwardly before God and his Ser- Note. vants, will prevail for mercy in time of danger, ſo much as breaking off from ſin; and eſpecially the ſin of a mans Calling, as oppreſſion and injuſtice in Judges. For Zedekiah was of Davids line, and being in danger, humbled himſelf to ſend to Ieremiah; yet he was not for this accepted of, no more than Ahab; but turning from ſin makes acceptable, Iſa. 1. 16, 17, 18.

Verſ. 13. I am againſt thee, O inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain. That is, O Ieruſalem, called alſo a valley, Iſa. 22. 1. becauſe compaſſed about with Mountains, although it ſtood high, and it was firm as a Rock, and a ſtrong defence to the fielding round about. And for the ſtrength of the place they were confident againſt all enemies: but the Lord threatneth to come againſt them, and then what are the ſtrongeſt holds to defend men? Myſtically it is called valley, becauſe baſe and brought low by ſin, having nothing now eminent or excellent in it.

Verſ. 14. And I will kindle a fire in the Forreſt thereof. He continueth to threaten Ieruſalem, calling the ſtreets of houſes, that ſtood ſo thick as trees in the Forreſt of Lebanon, a Forreſt: the fire which he threatens to kindle therein, being the fire wherewith the Caldees ſhould burn them all down: and to a Forreſt they are likened, becauſe without any good fruit; according to which he ſaith, that he would recompenſe them, in the former part of the verſe. For what are trees Luke 3. 7. good for that bear no good fruit, but to be hewen down, and caſt into the fire? And this is oppoſed to that which they had ſaid before, verſe 13. Who ſhall come to our houſes? of the houſe of the King, as the head of the Forreſt of Lebanon: See alſo Chap. 22. 6. Some will have Ieruſalem ſet forth by the name of a Forreſt, not ſo much for the houſes therein, as for the Towns about; but he ſpeaks plainly of the City it ſelf, which might for the magnificent buildings therein of Cedars out of the Forreſt of Lebanon, wherein they gloried, be called the Forreſt, and ſet forth but as fuell for the fire, that the thing wherein they had gloried, might be turned into matter of miſery and afrightment, when they ſhould ſee it all of a light fire.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſ. 1.
Hieron.
Raban.

G*O down to the houſe of the King of* Judah. By this King Ierom underſtands Zedekiah, of whom Chap. 21. 1. and 12. 13. where he was before bidden to ſpeak to him; and he will have the ſame to be Shallum, ſpoken of verſe 11. But I have ſhewed before, that Chap. 21. is miſplaced; and by that which followeth in this Chapter, and Chap. 25, &c. to 32. the things ſaid in other Kings reigns are ſpoken of, and not in the reign of Zedekiah; although Ierom brings a reaſon from the ſignification of the word Shallum, Conſummation, to prove Zedekiah to be the King here meant, becauſe that in him the Kingdome of Iudah was conſummated; for ſo the Hebrews at the end of a Boook uſe to write this word שלום Sellum, it is ended; and therefore for the ending of the Kingdome in him he is thus called. Some will have him to be Iehojakim, and ſome Iehojakin; but I have already determined this queſtion in 2 Kings 23. 30. ſhewing, that Iehoahaz was otherwiſe ſet forth by this name, who was made King next after his Father Ioſiah, although younger than Iehojakim: Only 1 Chron. 3. 15. ſeems to make againſt it, where Shallum is ſaid to be the fourth ſon of Ioſiah; Iohanan the firſt, Iehojakim the ſecond, Zedekiah the third. But three of them only reigned, and Iehoahaz that reigned firſt was not Iohanan, for he was but 23 years old when he was made King; and he having continued but three moneths that reigned firſt, Iehojakin his ſucceſſor is ſaid to be 25 years old when he began; therefore he muſt needs be elder than Iehoahaz, and Iehoahaz the youngeſt, otherwiſe called Shallum, and Iohanan dyed young, before his Father: as for the ſignification of the name, for this the Hebrews called all the ſons of Ioſiah, that reigned, Shallum, becauſe then began the conſummation of the Kingdome wen they began to reign; for they were all put down, and the Kingdome in them from the firſt, who was ſeen carryed into Egypt and dyed there, who was Jehoahaz, or Shallum; then Jehoiakim after him was but a tributary and no free King, and ſo was Zedekiah, before called Mattaniah, as Jehojakim was Eliakim.

Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon. Gilead was on the other ſide of Jordan, in former times a fruitfull Countrey, eſpecially of Ballſam, but now being in the lot of the ten Tribes, that were long agoe carryed away Captive, a ſpectacle of deſolation, as Shiloh ſpoken of before, that had flouriſhed by reaſon of the Arks being there, when the Ark was gone, grew a deſert place. So the Kings Palace, the head houſe of Jeruſalem, called Lebanon for the frequency of houſes therein, as was ſaid before, Chap. 21. 13. ſhall be made deſolate. And Gilead is called the head of Lebanon, becauſe that Forreſt beginneth there, and extendeth far ſouth. And it is to be noted, that Gilead had the name firſt from an heap, becauſe Jacob and Laban made a Covenant there; and for a witneſs thereof made a great heap of ſtones, becauſe Gilead, Hebr. ſignifieth an heap. It was a kind of a mountain, and therefore not unaptly ſpoken of, to ſet forth Mount Zion, where the King dwelt: and in Zion a Covenant was made with God by Sacrifice, as in Gilead betwixt Iacob and Laban; and the Covenant made here was notoriouſly broken, therefore it was more worthy to be made a Deſart, than Gilead.

Verſ. 10.

Weep not over the dead, but weep for him that is carried away. This Calvin thinks to be ſpoken generally of the Jews that ſhould dye in Ieruſalem, and of Cal in. them that ſhould be carried away Captive into Babylon, and verſe 11. applyed in particular to Shallum, whom he takes to be Iehojakim, who was carryed into Babylon, and dyed there. But forſomuch as the Propheſie is expreſly directed to the King, the meaning ſeemeth rather to be, Weep not for Ioſiah ſlain in battell by Pharaoh Necho, but for Iehoahaz his ſon, otherwiſe called Shallum, as was before ſhewed, becauſe he was carryed into Egypt a priſoner, and after much miſery ſuffered at the hands of his cruell enemies, dying there, and never ſeeing his own Countrey more, or being dead, brought thither to be buried: For this was counted more grievous than to be ſlain out-right, and to be buried in that Land where Abraham lay, and Iacob and Ioſeph deſired to be brought, and to have their bones laid there. And theſe words, verſe 11. Which reigned in ſtead of Joſiah his Father, further confirm, that Shallum was Iehoahaz, having two names, as well as his other two brethren, Iehojakim called alſo Eliakim, and Zedekiah called Mattaniah; for it is ſaid, 2 Kings 23. that the people of the Land took Iehoahaz, and made him King in ſtead of Ioſiah his Father.

Verſ. 13. Woe to him that builds his houſe by unrighteouſneſs. Having ſpoken againſt Shallum, that reigned next after Ioſiah, now he cometh to Iehojakim, that wicked King, that by Necho was ſet up next after him; he was ſubdued by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Kings 23. and became his ſervant, ſwearing fealty to him; but after this, 2 Kings 24. he was taken again, and bound to be carryed into Babylon, but was not; but upon agreement reſtored again; but being falſe the ſecond time, he was at length ſlain by the Caldees, and ignominiouſly caſt out of Ieruſalem, as an Aſſe, or any unclean beaſt, as is threatned verſe 19. But an Aſſe is named as one of the baſeſt.
Verſ. 14. It is probable, that to gather the Tribute laid upon the Land by the King of Egypt, mentioned 2 Kings 23. he uſed great exactions, and being in a way of exaction he took more, being drawn by the love of gain to enrich himſelf alſo, that he might live the more royally, and flant it out in magnificent buildings; not regarding in the mean ſeaſon, as the office of a King required, to execute juſtice and judgement, to the ſaving of his poor Subjects from wrong, of which it is complained, verſe 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. the example of the good King Ioſiah his Father being propounded unto him: And for this is ſo baſe an Verſ. 18. end threatned unto him, and for his oppreſſions and palpable wrongs that he did, no man ſhould lament him, as they commonly did good Kings, and ſpecially Note. the fore-named godly Ioſiah. A notable example to be lookt at by all Kings and Potentates, to make them flee Exactions, whereby the people are pilled and polled, and imbittered againſt them, waiting but for an opportunity of revolting from their obedience, as they did by Rehoboam: And Richard the ſecond of England, by his Exactions to maintain a great Court and Favourites, brought his Subjects upon him to his own ruine. And what was the beginning of King Charles his miſeries, but Exacting likewiſe Ship-moneys, Knight-moneys, Forreſt-moneys and Monopolies? But God give him to ſee into it and to repent, that his end may yet be better to the comfort of us all.

Verſ. 20. Aſcend to Lebanon and cry, utter thy voice in Baſhan. Here the Prophet derides Ieruſalem, not Iehojakim, as ſome think, of whom he ſpake laſt; for Regis ad exemplar totus componitur urbis. the verb is Feminine; and when the King is wicked and ſuffereth, the people muſt not think to go ſcotfree, but to ſuffer alſo; as they alwayes are either drawn by him to the like ſins, or ſome of them by their evill counſell draw him. Now for the places ſpoken of in this ironicall paſſage, they were both beyond Iordan towards Egypt, and were very high, therefore in bidding them go up to theſe Mountains, it is as if he had ſaid, Go cry for help to the Egyptians againſt the Caldees, ſith that by the King of Egypt their King was ſet up, when as they 2 Kings 24. 7. 28. knew, that Egypt could not help them, for Nebuchadnezzar ſmote the Egyptians alſo, and took away a great part of their Territories. Cry from the paſſages, Hebr. מעברים, from Abarim, which is the name of a Mountain in Moab, whereupon Moſes dyed, Deut. 32. 49. the vulg. Lat. Cry to the Paſſengers; but it is moſt probable, that another high place Mount Abarim is meant, as two had had been before named: For all thy lovers are deſtroyed.] That is, all the Nations about, to whom they were wont to ſeek for help in diſtreſs, the Syrians eſpecially; and ſometime the Aſſyrians, for ſeeking to whom, and not relying upon the Lords help, they were often reproved. But now the Aſſyrian Empire was brought under by the Babylonians, and the Kingdome of Syria was long before that ſubdued by the Aſſyrian, in the time of King Ahaz.

Verſ. 21. I ſpake unto thee in thy proſperity, &c. This hath been thy manner from thy youth. Judah did not now only firſt begin to ſhew this treachery towards God, who was as a husband and protector unto her; but this was her manner always, when the kingdoms were firſt divided under Rehoboam, Abijah, Ieboram, Ioaſh, Ahaz, &c. In all whoſe times the Lord ceaſed not by his Prophets to ſpeak unto them, and to warn them againſt this perfidiouſneſs, even at the beginning of each ones Reigne, whilſt they were in proſperity; as Rehoboam was for five years together, and Abijah, &c. Ierom and other Expoſitors go higher, and ſay that the time of their being brought out of Egypt is meant: but rather if we take it as ſpoken to all Iſrael, their proſperity under Ioſhuah in Canaan muſt be meant chiefly.

Verſ. 22. The winde ſhall eat up thy Paſtors. That is, thy Kings, Rulers, and Prieſts, and Prophets (for Paſtors is a common name to them all) ſhall be driven away, and vaniſh as the duſt or chaff before a ſtrong wind: Or becauſe wind ſometime ſetteth forth the fruſtration of mens counſells, and bringing them to nothing; as where it is ſaid, They conceive miſchief, and bring forth the wind: The periſhing of their Princes and Counſellors, (whom they thought to be wiſe) by their own evill counſels againſt the Lord is meant. And ſpecially their being fed with vain hopes of help out of Egypt, is called their being eaten up of the wind, as is moſt commonly held: Then thou ſhalt be aſhamed of all thy wickedneſs. That is, of this thy treachery againſt the Lord, being turned to thy confuſion, and of all other thy ſins, in which thou wenteſt on, contemning and mocking at all admonitions to the contrary.

Verſ. 23. O Inhabitant of Lebanon, that makeſt thy neſt in the Cedars. As he began ironically, verſe 20. in ſhewing the vain confidence of the Jew in other help whereto they truſted, bidding them, Go up to Lebanon, and cry; ſo he concludeth in the like alluſion, meaning, that their high and magnificent buildings with Cedars out of Lebanon, wherein they dwelt, neaſting themſelves as it were therein, ſhould avail them nothing in the day of their calamity by the enemy, nor be any grace or glory to them, as now they thought them; but as groaning Chambers to women in travell in Child-birth; this being all that they ſhould be able to do to help themſelves; therefore in ſaying, How gracious ſhalt thou be? He meaneth, How ridiculous; ſo Ierom, Theod. Raban, &c. But Calvin, Thou that imagineſt thy ſelf to be as ſafe as the birds neaſts, that are build upon the top of Cedars in Lebanon: but the firſt is moſt favoured by the Context before ver. 13, 14. ver. 6. & Chap. 21. 14.

Verſ. 24. Though Coniah were the Signet of my right hand, yet I would pluck him thence. Now the Prophet having done with Iehojakim, and Iehoahaz, called alſo Shallum, two Kings of Judah after Ioſiah, he comes to ſpeak againſt the third, as they were all worthy for their wickedneſs. His name was Iechoniah, the ſon of Iehojakim, or Iehojakin, as 2 Kings 24. but the ſyllable Ie being part of the name of Iehovah is cut off, and he is called Coniah; as when God would honour Abram and Sarai, he added ה a letter of his own name to his, calling him Abraham, and to hers, calling her Sarah; ſo contrariwiſe from the name of Iechoniah he takes away Ie, and ſpeaks of him by the name Coniah, ſignifying Prepared; hereby intimating, that he was prepared for miſery, and yet he was now but eighteen years old, 2 Kings 24. 8. a warning to them that are young, and not yet come to full age, to receive into their hearts impreſſions of Piety betimes, as Ioſiah did at ſixteen, and not to do even then what their nature, or evill breeding inclineth them unto, as thinking, that becauſe they are young, they ſhall have Indulgence at the hands of our heavenly Father. Nay, nay, youth

ſinning ſhall be ſpared no more than age; this young King ſmarted for his evill doing moſt ſharply, being in three moneths, after his beginning to reign, deveſted from his Royall Dignity, and made a Captive and Priſoner in a ſtrange land: Eccl. 21.9. For it is commanded Eccl. 12. Remember thy Creator in the dayes of thy youth: And, Go to young man, follow the luſts of thy heart, and delight of thine eyes, but know that for this thou ſhalt be brought to judgment. Memorable is the example of Henry 5th for this, ſometime King of England, who at eighteen years of age coming to the Crown, although diſſolute before, yet then upon the ſuddain he changed, put away all his old companions, and was moſt ſtayed and grave, as became his Royall place: And Edward 6th was alſo another rare example of marvailous virtue, being of more young and tender age. For the compariſon of a Signet here uſed, it is taken from the manner of men; the husband giveth to the wife, whom he dearly loveth, a Ring, putting it upon the fourth finger of her left hand, hereby declaring his hearty love unto her. For as the Anatomiſts Cal. Paraphraſt. Vatabl. have obſerved, from the heart there cometh a Nerve extending, thither and there it endeth; thus Cald. and Vatabl. or becauſe the word properly ſignifieth a Seal, and it is ſaid to be on the right hand, upon a finger whereof a Ring with a Seal is put ſo faſt, that it can hardly be plucked off, that it may at all times be ready to ſeal any inſtrument for further confirmation. Hieron. Raban. Lyra. Ierom, Raban, Lyra, &c. underſtand it of this; although he had fixed it to his right hand, as the off-ſpring of David, to whom he had bound himſelf by promiſe, as by Hand and Seal; yet he failing on his part of keeping this Covenant, the Lord threatens to pluck him off, and reject him. It is the prayer of the Spouſe, Cant. 8. 6. Set me as a Seal upon thy heart, upon thine arme: That is, through love joyn me ſo firmly unto thee as never to be parted: an Iſa. 49.16. I have graven thee on my right hand, ſo that the ſenſe ſeemeth beſt, which is for moſt affectionate and unmoveably ſetled love. Another uſe there is of a Ring for oſtentation, to ſhew ones wealth: and ſometime when in love to any perſon a Ring hath been worn, his picture hath been ſtamped upon it, Cicero de finibus. according to that of Cicero, Our familiar friends have our Image, not only in Tables or Pictures drawn at large, but alſo in Cups and Rings. Note. Nazianzen. This is by Nazianzen applyed to Preachers, whom God uſed as ſeals to ſeal up ſuch as they convert to eternall life; yet if in their lives they be wicked, God will caſt them away as moſt vile, as it followeth ver. 28. touching Coniah, who is called a Verſ.28. deſpiſed broken Idoll: Vulg. an earthen Veſſell broken. Symmach Nunquid quiſquiliæ viles & projectæ? but the firſt agreeth beſt with the Hebrew, as an Idol, when the vanity thereof is ſeen into, is broken in pieces and caſt away as an abominable thing; ſo he ſheweth, that Coniah ſhould be for his abominations. The word עצב rendred Idoll, ſignifieth ſorrow; becauſe whoſoever makes him an Idoll, ſhall reap nothing but ſorrow by it in the end; and hereby Coniah is ſet forth, to ſhew the world of ſorrows that he ſhould goe into and live many years in, as we read that he did 2 Kings 25.27. even 37 years being kept a Priſoner in Babylon, and as it is threatned verſe 26. that he ſhould be carried away, and his mother alſo; ſo it ſhewed, that they were 2 Kings 24.12. when they had yeelded themſelves.

Verſ.29. O earth, earth, earth, hear the Word of the Lord, Write ye this man childleſs: Heb. ערירי childleſs or ſolitary: It is a Propheſie of the line of Kings coming of David, failing in this man, till the coming of Chriſt Jeſus; and therefore as Calvin noteth, to be expounded by that Ezek. 21. 26, 27. where having mentioned the Diadem and Crown, he ſaith, overturn, overturn, overturn it, till he cometh to whom it belongeth: That is, Chriſt Jeſus, the branch out of the ſtump of Jeſſe, Iſa. 11. 1. And here it is to be noted, that he meant not, that he ſhould have no ſon; but no ſon a King, ſitting upon the Throne of David, who was but a meer man; for he had a Son called Salathiel, 1 Chron. 3. 17. and he Zerubbabel: See alſo Matth. 1. 12. and how this line reached to Jeſus, in whom the Kingdom of David was renewed, to continue according to promiſe for ever. But becauſe none coming of Jechoniah, ſat upon his Throne ruling as a worldly King after him, it is thus ſaid, and written here for memoriall to all generations. There was after the Captivity again a Principality in his line beginning in Zorobabel, and continuing till the Aſſamoneans, and in them being of his line by the mother ſide, till Herod: but they were no abſolute Kings, ſome little lights: and when Jeſus came, his Kingdom was not of this world, as he ſaid John 18. Thus alſo Ierom, who beſides this hath another way of ſatisfying this doubt, viz. by ſaying that Zerubabel, and other Princes ſucceſſively coming of his line, had not the chief power of the Jews; but the high-Prieſts; the Prince that was, being only as a Generall to defend them, and to fight their battels; and laſtly, that Salathiel, of whom thoſe Princes came, Jeſus deſcended, not Jechoniah, who came of Solomon, but of another line, drawn from Nathan, another Son of David; of which ſee more in my Expoſition on Mat. 1. 12. And touching the Princes that came of Jechoniah, ſome ſay, that this Propheſie was verified in that he lived not to ſee any of them come to ſuch honour, and the Kingdome was not given to any ſon of his after his deprivation; but to his Uncle Mattanias, called afterward Zedekiah, in whom it periſhed. And this may fully ſatisfie the queſtion about a King ſitting upon the Throne of David, in ſaying, that no man deſcended from him ſhould, nothing elſe was meant, but that none ſhould, whilſt the Kingdome ſtood as then it did, for the little time of the continuance thereof none did, and at the end of that little time Davids worldly Kingdom was annulled, and never ſet up more, but only his myſticall Kingdom, which was the only Kingdom meant, when ever it was ſpoken of as everlaſting. For his ſpeaking to the earth trebling the word, herein he did as Iſa. 1. Hear O Heavens, and hearken, O earth; to intimate the ſtupidity of the Jews, and ſlowneſs to believe the thing here ſpoken, or to regard it, as being fore-ſtalled in their judgments, with an opinion, that the worldly Kingdom of David ſhould never fail; and therefore not Iehojakims poſterity from being Kings after him. Wherefore he ſpeaks to the earth, as more obedient, and readier to hear her Maker ſpeaking than they. For the great Creator of all, can make even Creatures without life to hear his voice, when wicked men will not, and to ſpeak alſo in accuſing and teſtifying againſt them, as Gen. 4. Hab. 2. 11. His trebling of the word is, as Ezek. 21. 27. for the more aſſurance that it ſhould thus come to paſs, His bidding [write yee,] is to men believing; as if he had ſaid, Put it upon publick Record by writing, as things concerning the weal publick are, that it may never be forgotten, but men to all poſterities may learn by this example to take heed how they provoke the Lord by obſtinately going on in ſin, the ſon after the father, eſpecially Kings, and ſuch as are in higheſt authority, who according to their diſpoſition either to pride, crueltie or covetouſneſs, are ready to forget their duty, as being Gods Vice-gerents, and gods upon earth, many times turning devils. See (O yee Potentates) if yee grow to this, how ſhort your time of proſperity is like to be, and how ill yee provide for your dear children, who are through your default in danger to be cut off, and brought down, and never to riſe again to your glory and regall power.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verſ. 1. VVOe to the Paſtors that deſtroy and ſcatter the ſheep of my Paſture. After Prophecies againſt three wicked Kings, Chap. 22. now he propheſieth for the comfort of the faithfull, of more joyfull and bleſſed times to come, when the ſheep, which had been under ſuch evill Paſtors to their ruine, ſhould have better Paſtors ſet over them, being firſt gathered from all places, where through the fault of theſe evill Paſtors, they had been ſcattered and ſuffered much miſery. And it was neceſſary, that this conſolation ſhould follow immediately after the former threatning. leſt the faith of the Elect ſhould be ſhaken, when they heard Coniah their King of the line of David ſo threatned, not only in reſpect of himſelf, but alſo of his poſterity. For none of his line ſhould ever ſit upon the Throne of David again, where was the promiſe made, and ſo fully ſet forth Pſalme 89. that Davids line ſhould never fail, but that his Kingdome ſhould in his poſterity be everlaſting? To ſatisfie this doubt here, *v.*5. he ſaith, The Lord ſhall raiſe up to David a righteous branch, that ſhall reign in righteouſneſs. But before he comes to this, he cries, Woe to the wicked Paſtors, or Kings before threatned Chap. 22. and Zedekiah ſpoken of Chap. 21. although out of his due place: Thus alſo Theodoret and Dionyſius; but Ierom ſaith, that becauſe the Kings were deſperately evill, and the Prophet had accordingly ſpoken to them before, he now bends his ſpeech to the Governours of the Church, the Prieſts and Prophets that fed them with teaching and Counſel; and after him, Rabanus, Hugo, Thomas Aquinas, Calvin. But they underſtand not Ecleſiaſticks alone, but both Kings and Rulers, and Prieſts alſo, which is beſt, ſeeing both ſorts were before ſpoken againſt, as we may ſee Chap. 5.31. Chap. 20.1. and 21. 1. two of them come as Counſellors of the King. And it is ordinary to call Kings Paſtors, aſwell as Ecleſiaſticks; as David is ſaid to be a Shepheard over his people of Iſrael; and in Ahabs time, when Micaiah foreſaw the fall of Ahab at Ramoth Gilead, he ſets it forth by the ſimilitude of a people ſcattered and without a Shepheard: See alſo Chap. 22.22. Woe to the Shepheards tken that ſcatter my ſheep; is as much as if he had ſaid to the Kings, Rulers, Prieſts, and Prophets, who by their evill teaching, counſell, and example cauſe them to ſin ſo greatly, that I am enforced to bring this terrible judgment of the Caldees upon them, by whom they ſhall be carried and driven away and diſperſed into all Countreys, living lives moſt miſerable. And he calls the people, although moſt wicked, and ſo ſeverely judged by him, the ſheep of his Paſture, becauſe of the Covenant made with their Fathers; for which his compaſſion was moved towards them even when he brought his ſevereſt judgements upon them; for which he calleth them his ſtrange work. Iſa. 28.21.

Verſ. 2. Againſt the Paſtors that feed my people. It is ſtrange that he ſhould ſay, that feed my people, and yet chargeth them with ſcattering them, and not viſiting them; but he ſpeaketh of their place and office, which was to feed them with wholſome food of good teaching and Laws; but they contrariwiſe fed them with their own imaginations, whereby they were deſtroyed. They viſited them not for good then, that they might have comfort hereof, but terror, which was all one with not viſiting them.

Verſ. 3. And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all Countreys, whither I have driven them. This is by ſome Hebrews expounded of their being brought again out of Babylon, when they had faithfull Paſtors, Zerubbabel, Jeſhua, Ezra, Nehemiah, Haggai and Zachariah, of which Iſaiah ſpeaking, Chap. 1.25. ſaith, I will reſtore Judges and Counſellors as at the beginning. But this cannot ſtand, becauſe they were not then gathered out of all lands; and if their return then were meant, who was the righteous branch ſpoken of verſe 5. that ſhould reign? for Zerubbabel could not be he, becauſe he never reigned as David, neither was Judah and Iſrael both ſafe then, as verſe 6. for Judah onely returned, and they dwelt not ſafely or ſecurely then, as is alſo promiſed, but they were put in fear by their enemies, and hindred in building the Temple and Walls of the City, as appeareth in Ezra and Nehemiah: neither doth the title of the branch, being further called Iehovah Tſidkenu, the Lord our righteouſneſs, agree to any meer man; for which other Rabins of ancient expound it of the Meſſiah, and ſo do all ours generally. Neither doth that which followeth verſe 7. of the famouſneſs of this deliverance in compariſon of that out of Egypt agree to that, as I have ſhewed before upon the like paſſage, Chap. 16.14, 15. where Ieremiah firſt propheſied of this deliverance more obſcurely, here more plainly. And it is to be noted, that he ſaith, I will gather the remnant of my flock, whereby he meaneth not all the Jews, but a few Elect ones of them; as Iſa. 1.9. and Chap. 10.22. it was ſaid before, that a remnant of them only ſhould be ſaved, Rom. 11.5. For whilſt Chriſt lived here in the fleſh, a few only beleeved, the reſt were hardened. Although there be ſome that by this remnant underſtand the Gentiles of all lands; but they are plainly in an errour, as appears both by the Text, wherein nothing is ſpoken of the Gentiles, but Jews only; and from the other parallel places alledged. And it is ſaid expreſly Acts 2. that there were at the Feaſt of Pentecoſt ſome of all Nations under heaven, Jews and Proſelytes, that heard the Apoſtles ſpeaking in ſtrange tongues, and were aſtonyed at it, and converted; and James 1. 1. it is ſaid to the twelve Tribes that are ſcattered abroad; but the next words of their encreaſing and being fruitfull, are ſpoken of the encreaſe of the Church of the faithfull by the acceſſion of the Gentiles, who are often ſpoken of by the Prophet Iſaiah, as the children brought forth to the Jewiſh Church. Iſa. 49. 18. and 60. 4. and will bring them to their folds; that is, unite them in the true faith of Chriſt, who were before ſcattered not only into divers Countries, but carried away, and divided amongſt themſelves by divers errours.

And I will ſet up ſhepheards over them. That is, the Apoſtles and other Preachers at the firſt going out of the Goſpel, who aimed at nothing elſe, but the converting and ſaving of ſouls; And they ſhall fear no more, nor be diſmayed or lacking. That is, theſe Paſtors ſhall be of invincible courage againſt all adverſe powers, although they be perſecuted, ſtanding to the faith of Chriſt unto the death; and although ſome of them be cut off by perſecution, yet there ſhall be no want, but others ſhall immediately be raiſed up; and ſo it ſhall be with Chriſtian people, the ſpirit of courage and reſolution, which ſhall be in their Paſtors, ſhall enter into them alſo, and when ſome are cut off, others more ſhall ſtand up; according to which it was obſerved, that The bloud of the Martyrs was the ſeed of the Church. Of Preachers then called Paſtors, ſee Eph. 4. 12. 1 Peter 5. 1. and Peter accordingly is bidden, Feed my ſheep, feed my lambs, Joh. 21. Of their courage in ſtanding to the truth; ſee Acts 7. & Ch. 4. 12. & 21. and more abundantly in Ecleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

Verſ. 5.

I will raiſe up to David a righteous branch. Of Chriſt thus called; ſee before Iſa. 11. 1. c. 4. 2. And after, Jer. 33. 15. Zech. 3. 8. c. 6. 12 Hebr. it is נצר, of the reaſon of which name ſee the places before quoted, and alſo of his reigning and executing Juſtice and judgement everlaſtingly.

Verſ. 6.

This is his name; the Lord our righteouſneſs; for he is made of God unto us Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification, and Redemption, 1 Cor. 1. 30. And he was made ſin for us, that we might be made the righteouſneſs of God through him, 2 Cor. 5. 20. And then is he our righteouſneſs, when we by faith reſt upon his righteouſneſs only, and in no part upon our own, according to the example of the Apoſtle, Phil. 3. 7, 8. And yet caſt not away the care of righteous living, but endeavour to find in our ſelves the power of his Reſurrection in riſing up to newneſs of life, and after a conformity to his death, in patient ſuffering for righteouſneſs ſake, as he did, as it followeth v. 10. Rom 8. 16.

Rom. 6.

Verſ. 9.

My heart within me is broken, becauſe of the Prophets. That is, becauſe the falſe Prophets by their flatteries and promiſing peace, made the people to harden themſelves in their ſins; ſo that he foreſaw that the terrible words which he had ſpoken againſt them ſhould be made good, and they ſhould by no means eſcape moſt horrible deſtruction, as the next words do ſhew, Becauſe of the Lord, and the words of his holineſs. And if Gods threatnings againſt ſinners make ſo holy a man as Jeremy ſo terribly afraid, how ſhall ſinful and wicked men be able to bear it, when ſuch & greater judgments without end come to be executed upon them?

Verſ. 10.

For Adulteries the land mourneth, and for Oathes. Here he mentioneth the foul ſins in particular, that reigned amongſt them, two being named, and the reſt underſtood. The word rendred Oathes is אלה ſignifying to ſwear; but becauſe ſwearing is never without curſing expreſſed or underſtood, ſome render it curſing, or forſwearing; take it every of theſe wayes, and ſo we ſhall beſt attain the true and full meaning, With ſuch horrible ſins did that land abound, for which it is ſaid the land mourned by a proſopopeia, to make the Jews aſhamed, and ſpecially the falſe Prophets, to whom he chiefly ſpeaketh, verſe 9. and chargeth them again by name with Adultery, verſe 14. both Prophets and Prieſts. For, ſhall the dumb and dead creature be affected with ſorrow, and men, yea Teachers who provoke to ſo great a judgement, be without all ſenſe of ſorrow; whereas he addeth, Their courſe is evill, and their force is not right; He meaneth not, of the pleaſant places, ſaid before to be dried up: but of the foreſaid wicked Prophets, he meaneth that they ſtudied and bent all their forces to do wickedly, and to incourage othets both by Doctrine and Life to do likewiſe.

Verſ. 10. Even in my houſe I have found their wickedneſs, ſaith the Lord. Here he chargeth the Prophets and Prieſts not only with prophaneneſs in the courſe of their lives, when they were out of Gods houſe, doing not as perſons ſanctified, but common notorious evill worldlings; but alſo with ſin in Gods own houſe in 2 Sam. 2. unfaithfully executing their office there, either as Hophni and Phineas the wicked ſons of Ely, who robbed Gods Sacrifices, and committed Adultery with women that came thither, or corrupting the Doctrine of the Law by teaching ſo, oppoſing the teaching of true Prophets ſo, as that they hardned the people in their wickedneſs to their utter undoing. And this is by Calvin not amiſs applyed Note. againſt the Pope and his Biſhops, who they ſay cannot erre as they are Eccleſiaſtical perſons, although in their lives they be wicked as other men are; no Doctrine yet that comes from them in the houſe of God can be corrupt, becauſe the ſpirit is there always with them, according to promiſe to lead them into all truth. For if the high Prieſt, and Prieſts under the Law, who were by God himſelf ſet up, had not this infallibility; who but fools will beleeve, that the Pope now hath, that was never made high-Prieſt of God, but by his own ambition and arrogancy?

Verſ. 14. I have ſeen alſo in the Prophets of Ieruſalem an horrible thing. Here to aggravate the ſins of their Prophets, he ſaith verſe 13. I have ſeen folly in the Prophets of Samaria: but coming to ſpeak of the Prophets of Jeruſalem: [I have ſeen an horrible thing.] Samaria was the Chief City of the ten Tribes, where they conſtantly in one Kings time after another, worſhipped Baal, or at the leaſt the golden Calves that Ieroboam had ſet up, and after many judgements brought upon them for this and their other ſins, they were delivered into the hands of Salmanaſor King of Aſſyria, 2 Kings 17. Jeruſalem was the chief City of the Kingdome of Judah, where the Temple ſtood, and the true God had Sacrifices offered unto him, where alſo the high-Prieſt, and other Prieſts lived continually to guide them aright. Yet even here the Prophets and Prieſts did more abominably, neither took warning by the ſufferings of Iſrael; for which they might juſtly fear greater judgements to come upon them, as they were threatned. Then in ſhewing wherein they did more abominably, he ſaith, They committed Adultery, and went about with Lies, and ſtrengthen the hands of evill doers, that they turn not;] being for this in Gods account as Sodom and Gomorah. Vulg. Lat. for an horrible thing] hath the ſimilitude of thoſe that commit Adultery. Whereupon Ie- Hieron. rom, and others after him underſtand hereby Idolatry, which is like Adultery, and therefore commonly ſet forth by this name, as if nothing elſe were meant, but that they did, as the Idolatrous Prophets of Samaria. But the Hebrew ſignifieth an horrible thing, as all confeſs; and if it be thus expounded, we ſhall come ſhort of the full ſenſe of the Prophet, whoſe drift is not to ſhew, that the Prophets of Jeruſalem were onely like to thoſe of Samaria; but much worſe, for which he doth uſe a word ſetting forth an hairy horrid form wherein Devils ſometimes appeared; hereby intimating them to be as Devils in the ſhape of men, transformed into Angels of light, becauſe that coming in the name of the Lord, and as ſent and inſtructed by him by dreams and viſions, as is expreſſed Note. verſe 17. 25. 31. they vented their own lying imaginations. And whoſoever preſſeth to the people corrupt and falſe Doctrine, under the name of the truth of God, doth likewiſe act the part of that horrid Fiend, and ſhall be proceeded againſt as a Devill, as Iudas was afterwards for his Treachery called: For the next word it is not, They commit Adultery; but Hebr. [Adultery.] I have ſeen an horrible thing, Adultery, and walking with a Lie; where Adultery is properly to be underſtood, and not myſtically only, that which is Idolatry, according to v. 10. and Chap. 29. 23. where two falſe Prophets were executed by roaſting with fire for Adultery with other mens Wives. For their lying, it was by ſaying, Thus ſaith the Lord, when the Lord never ſaid ſo, but the contrary; for under this pretence, they ſpeaking peace to the wicked, made them confident of ſafety, although they went on in their ſins, and ſo their hearts were hardned againſt turning therefrom. Of the Jews, being likned to Sodom and Gomorrah, ſee before Iſa. 1. 10. 3.9. For their groſs ſins, here they are thus ſet forth, both for their ſins, and the terrible deſtruction that ſhould come upon them therefore, ſaith Calvin; but that their like deſtruction is not meant, appeareth Iſa. 1 9. becauſe none of Sodom were ſaved, but of the Jews a remnant. Calvin.

Verſ. 15. From the Prophets of Jeruſalem prophaneneſs is gone out into all the land. Heb. pollution or hypocriſie: whilſt by their evill example, and ſpeaking peace to the wicked, they incourage them to go on in their ſins. Of their being fed with wormwood or bitterneſs it hath been ſpoken before; bitter and killing ſufferings being here meant.

Verſ. 18. Who hath ſtood in the Counſell of the Lord? Becauſe theſe falſe Prophets ſaid, Thus ſaith the Lord: he here asketh, Which of them had ſtood in his counſell; as if he had ſaid, not one; for that which they ſaid came not from the Lord, but from themſelves in deep diſſimulation.

Verſ. 20. In the latter dayes ye ſhall conſider it perfectly. Having threatned his judgements coming in an impetuous manner, like a whirl-winde, which none can reſiſt, verſe 19. Now he addeth, that although now they would not know or believe it, they ſhould hereafter to their ſmart, when theſe judgments ſhould be executed, and there ſhould be no more place for repentance to eſcape them, as now there was, according to the common Proverb, Serò ſapiunt Phryges, Fools are wiſe too late, Heb. They ſhall be made often to underſtand knowledge in it. That is, in this threatning, which now they ſo much ſlighted, and had no knowledge in, nor would, but in their ſufferings they ſhould often think what ſots they had been, that before would take no warning; and this is the caſe of all the wicked, now they are fools, and neither underſtand, nor will underſtand in what danger of Gods wrath they are; but they ſhall underſtand, when they come to feel the ſmart thereof, and ſhall never be delivered out of their miſeries. Note.

Verſ. 22. But if they had ſtood in my Counſell, and cauſed my people to hear my words, they ſhould have turned them, &c. Here the Lord works further upon that which was ſaid verſe 18. proving that none of theſe Prophets ſtood in his Counſell, becauſe if they had, they would have applyed themſelves to ſpeak ſo, as to turn the people from their ſins, that they might have eſcaped his judgements. For whoſoever is a true Prophet of God, bends himſelf altogether in teaching his Word, to expound and to ſpeak ſo upon it, as that his Hearers may hereby be converted; therefore if any contrariwiſe teach liberty to ſin, or vaniſheth away in his teaching in vain ſpeculations, or ſoareth aloft in high ſtrains of eloquence, or broaching errour, he is not one that ſtands in Gods Counſell, but rather like the falſe Prophets here taxed and threatned. Note.

Verſ. 23. Am I a God near at hand, and not afar off? Here he meeteth with an opinion that might be in theſe wicked Prophets, that although they pretended revelations from God, which they never had, yet he ſhould not know it, becauſe he he was afar off in heaven above, and could not ſee or know it: againſt this he ſaith thus, meaning, that he could as well ſee from the higheſt heavens into the very thoughts of their hearts, as if he were neareſt unto them, or within them: Verſ. 24. whereof he rendreth a reaſon, verſe 24. ſaying, I fill heaven and earth; as is further ſet forth Pſalme 139. That is, I am alwayes ſo in one place, as well as in another, and do ſo ſee things cunningly hidden by men, as manifeſtly and openly acted, as that no plot or device of the moſt ſubtle can be hid from me. For the Tranſlation of Sept. I am a God near, and not afar off; although expounded by Jerom in reſpect of time; as if the meaning were, I know things now, and that ſhall ſhortly be done; and not things done long agoe only; it is neither to the purpoſe here, nor a true, but a Tranſlation contrary to the Hebr. verity.

Verſ. 28. What is the Chaff to the Wheat. Having taxed the falſe Prophets, verſe 25, 26, 27. for coming with their dreams to make the people to forget the Lord; in this Verſe he chargeth them, when they publiſh their own dreams, to publiſh them as dreams, and not as the Word of the Lord; but whoſoever he be that comes pretending the Word of the Lord, let him do it truly, that is, ſpeak no other words than thoſe that come from his mouth. And hereof he yields a reaſon in theſe words; What is the Chaff to the Wheat? meaning, that whatſoever elſe is brought by any man, although it be pretended to be a Revelation in a dream from God, it is but as Chaff, light and without ſubſtance or worth, being by any blaſt of winde coming from God, made to appear to be ſuch: as when contrary to ſuch dreams of peace and proſperity, miſery and deſtruction cometh; or when Luk. 3. Chriſt cometh with his Fan in his hand, by his divine Doctrine blowing away all ſuch vanities, and finally burning all that teach and embrace them with unquenchable fire. And hereby we may know what is a dream of a falſe Teacher, Note. and not the Word of God, although it be pretended: If it be without true ground in the Word, or if it tendeth to draw men to any thing contrary to it, or to make them ſecure in their ſins, ſee Deut. 13. Iſa. 8.20. Gal. 1. 8. Wherefore the Invocation of Saints departed, adoration of Images, the Doctrine of Note. Purgatory, and prayers for the dead, and of the neceſſity of Prieſts leading a ſingle life, taught amongſt the Papiſts, but founded upon Revelations and feigned miracles, are undoubtedly Chaff, Hey, and Stubble that ſhall be burnt, when the day of triall cometh: See 1 Cor. 3. 11.

Is not my Word like a Fire, or an Hammer that breaketh the Rocks in pieces?
Verſ. 29. Having compared the Word of God to Wheat, verſe 28. now he compares it to a Fire, and an Hammer. It is as Wheat to them that hear, believe and obey it, to feed and ſtrengthen them to eternall life; whilſt the ſeduced by lying imaginations Ch. 15, 16. to hold errours, or to pleaſe themſelves in their ſinfull doings, are fed with Chaff or Husks with the Prodigall Luke 15. and ſo are hunger ſtarved. And the very Word, which is ſo precious to the godly, is as a Fire or Hammer breaking Rocks to the wicked; becauſe, as is herein threatned, the Fire of Gods anger, ſmoaking, as it were, againſt them in his Word, ſhall one day break out into an hot burning Flame; and although the threatnings thereof ſeem now unto them to be but as an empty ſound beating the aire, yet they ſhall prove an huge and moſt ſtrong Hammer breaking them in pieces who have hardned their hearts Pſal. 2. like a Rock; as a bar of Iron breaks a Potters Veſſell all to pieces, ſo as that it cannot be made up again. The Word of God indeed, as Calvin noteth, is alſo a Calvin. Fire to them that obey it, as Ch. 20. 4. and an Hammer, to purge out corruption, when the Spirit accompanying it inflames their hearts with the love of God, and the hatred of ſin, and to break their hearts with godly ſorrow for their ſins.
But it is not a Fire to them, as to the wicked, neither ſhal ever be. Therefore ſerve the Lord with fear, &c. Kiſs the ſon leſt he be angry, and ſo yee periſh, &c. Pſal.
2. 11, 12.

Verſ. 30. That ſteal my Word every one from his neighbour, or fellow. Here the Lord further deſcribeth a falſe Prophet; he is ſuch an one as in ſecret compacteth with others what he will tell, as a Revelation from God, and ſo by mutuall conſent he beginneth to utter it, then another, and another likewiſe comes with the ſame, ſaying, Thus ſaith the Lord; as the firſt man did, when as indeed he ſtole his Prophecie from him his fellow Pſeudo-Propheta. Verſe 31. he deſcribeth the Verſ. 31. ſame further by this, That uſe their tongues, ſaying, He ſaith. Some render it, That ſmooth their tongues, expounding it of Flattery; ſome by tollunt, they lift them up: Expounding it by ſpeaking magnifically of themſelves, as the undoubted true Prophets of the Lord. And hence ſome note three ſorts of falſe Prophets.
1. Such as ſteal ſomwhat out of other mens writings. 2. That apply themſelves to ſpeak in high ſtraines of Eloquence, or ſo as that they may be accounted learned. 3. That ſpeak flatteringly: as Lyra, Dionyſ. Vatabl. Iſidor.
But the word uſed is לקח, which is, to take; and then the ſenſe is, taking their their tongues as the inſtruments of their lying ſpeeches, to ſay He ſaith;] when as in their hearts they know, that the Lord never ſaid ſo, but the contrary. This part of the falſe Prophets then is now notoriouſly acted over again, or hath been by Fryers and Prieſts of the Church of Rome, who likewiſe by compacting together, have one ſeconded another, to make the people believe all their inventions introduced in matter of Religion to have come from God, whereby they have bred in them ſuch a blinde faith, and venerable opinion of their lying Legends, that they think it a deadly ſin once to queſtion any of them. Their ſtealing from their fellows ſpoken of verſe 30. is by ſome underſtood, from the true Prophets of God, of whom they took ſomewhat to credit their falſe Propheſying the more; but it is not likely that he would ever have called them their fellowes, if he had meant them; wherefore the firſt is beſt, that they ſtole from one another, as they compacted together: Thus alſo Calvin.

When they ſhall ſay unto thee, What is the burthen of the Lord? From hence to the end of this Chapter is ſhewed, how both People, Prieſts and Prophets, derided the true Prophets of the Lord for ſaying, The burthen of the Lord; for this was common with Iſaiah, Chap. 13. 15. 22, 23. and ſome other Prophets when they threatned judgements. And their ſin in ſaying ſo lay in this, that they asked, What is the burthen of the Lord? in contempt and hatred againſt thoſe Prophets, that came with this ſaying, as if they had ſaid, Speak theſe words as moch as ye will, but know that when ye ſpeak them, ye are but unwelcome Meſſengers to us, ye ſhall reap nothing but enmity at our hands for ſo ſpeaking, or to that effect. For we love to hear ſuch as come unto us ſpeaking comfortable things; neither do we indeed regard what ye ſay in this kinde, becauſe it hath been the manner of ſuch as thou art thus to terrifie us many years agoe, as Iſaiah did; but we thank God, we feel not yet any ſuch burthen as ye threaten, and we hope never ſhall. But againſt them that thus deſpiſed and mocked at the Verſ.33.

deth, Every ones word ſhall be his burthen; that is, that dares to ſpeak thus, it ſhall be counted an intollerable ſin in him, the burthen whereof he ſhall never be able bear, but ſink and be cruſhed to death under it. And finally, that they might not think, that the Lord would haply make ſome few examples of his judgments for ſpeaking thus contemptuouſly contrary to his command, and that the Nation ſhould ſtill eſcape, and continue in proſperity, he concludeth, ſaying, Verſ 39. I will utterly forget and forſake you, and your Nation, and caſt you out of my preſence.

Verſ 40. And I will bring an everlaſting reproach upon you. Whereby he ſheweth their utter deſtruction to come upon them and their City, they being left to the will of their enemies to be ſlain, and captived, and their City burnt. Where we may ſee, Note. that it is not a ſmall judgement for the Lord to forſake any people for the contempt of his Prophets, leaving them deſtitute of light and means of grace, but the greateſt puniſhment that can befall mortall men; for if he thus forſakes a Nation, woe unto it, for together all bleſſing and good forſakes it, and all evill and miſery to utter ruine cometh inſtead thereof. Whereof he ſaith, I will bring everlaſting reproach. Whereas this judgement continued but ſeventy years, it hath been reſolved before Ch, 18. 10. and Chap. 25. 9 11. will reſolve it more clearly.

Verſ. 37, 38. Whereas they are directed to ask, What is the Word of the Lord? not the burthen. The meaning is, that they ſhould thus enquire with an heart deſirous to learn, beleeve and obey. For when a people is thus affected, the Lord will Note. dwell amongſt them with his Word and Bleſſing, otherwiſe he forſakes them.

CHAP. XXIV.

Verſ. 1. IN this Chapter the Lord would have Jeremiah teach again by Signes. He ſhewed him two Baskets of Figs ſet before the Temple, after that Nebuchadnezzar had carryed away Jechoniah Captive into Babylon, and the Princes, Carpenters, and Smiths. By theſe he teacheth what ſhould be done to them, and to the people ſtill remaining in the Land. Theſe might haply think, and did think themſelves more happy that remained, than thoſe that were carried away; but God hereby ſhewed the contrary, the Captived ſhould finde more favour and ſuffer leſs, and ſuch as remained ſhould finde none, but ſuffer all manner of miſery, becauſe moſt probably they, upon their eſcape at that time, took more courage to themſelves to go on in their ſins, deſpiſing all admonitions, as thinking the brunt of danger to be now over, and that they ſhould never come into it again: whereas Jechoniah, although a moſt wicked King, as he is ſet forth, Chapter 22. yet by the Prophets admonitions and threatning and advice to yield to Nebuchadnezzar when he came againſt him, he and his Princes ſubmitting themſelves, and going out unto him, and not obſtinately ſtanding out contrary to Gods will, as Zedekiah afterwards did, came into more grace, and Note. was with his company carryed away with him, comforted. Whereby we may ſee what good cometh of obeying God at the laſt, although a man hath before ſinned moſt notoriouſly, and what evill of obſtinate and continued diſobedience againſt all admonitions, threatnings, and counſels of Gods ſervants, his Prophets. For this manner of teaching, it hath been ſpoken upon before, Chap. 18. and 19. where he teacheth by a Potters making and breaking his Pots; and Ch. 13. by a girdle, he would have him teach not only by word of mouth, but by a ſenſible outward ſigne, as being more moving. The two Baskets of Figs ſtanding before the Temple, are thought by ſome to have been ſet there right over againſt the Temple, where ſome ſate to ſell fruits, and that this opportunity was taken by the Lord; but it is rather to be thought according to others, that they were ſhewed him in viſion. The Hebrews conjecture, that the Basket of Figs which was worſt ſhewed beſt, and the other worſt; but being taſted, the contrary appeared; If this were ſo, the ſimilitude did the more aptly ſet forth the thing for which it was brought, they that continued in Jeruſalem ſeeming to be in the beſt caſe, but were in the worſt; and thoſe that were carried away ſeeming to be in the worſt, in the beſt. And theſe Baskets ſtood before the Temple, the more aptly to ſet forth the Jews of both ſorts, they belonged both to one and the ſame God, that dwelt in the Temple, but from hence, as from his Judgement Seat, he paſſeth a divers Sentence upon them.

Verſ. 6. I will bring them again to this Land. Many gracious promiſes are here made of good to be done to Iehojakin and the Captives that were carryed away with him upon their ſubmiſs yielding, related 2 Kings 24. For which probably they that ſtayed behind, derided them, as ſome conjecture, which was fulfilled in the Ezra 1. King, 2 Kin. 25. and in his ſon Zorobabel returning at the time ſet, Jer. 29 10. and many more, yea all of them that were then living. The King indeed came no more to Jeruſalem in his own perſon, but in Babylon his head was lifted up, and he found great favour, and his poſterity returned, he being then dead, and Daniel and the other three Children came to great preferment in Babylon, as Daniel ſheweth: And it is not to be doubted, but that other Jews alſo by their means found great favour, even beyond expectation in that Countrey.

Verſ. 7. And I will give them an heart to know me. Here is a far greater bleſſing ſpoken of, the bleſſing of knowing God, and turning to him with the whole heart; not going herewith in part after him, and in part after Baal, as ſome formerly did, or in part after the profits or pleaſures of the world. He that attaineth not this bleſſing is unhappy ſtill, notwithſtanding all his temporall bleſſings, but attaining this, he is perfectly bleſſed, as Chap. 9. 23. Let not the wiſe glory in his wiſedome, wiſedome,&c. but that he knoweth me, ſaith the Lord. But note, that no man attaineth to this of himſelf, but it muſt be given unto him, againſt Pelagians and Papiſts.

Verſ. 8. And them that dwell in Egypt. Some think, that ſuch Jews are meant, as before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, or at the coming of the Caldees fled into Egypt to be out of their danger, as amongſt their confederates; but others better, thoſe that would needs remove thither, contrary to the Lords command, *Chap.*43. for againſt them is the like threatned to that which is threatned here. And this Chapter as well as Chap. 21. is placed out of order, as appeared by the next, viz. Chap. 25.

CHAP. XXV.

THE Prophecie of this Chapter is noted by the time, the fourth of Jehojakin, the firſt of Nebuchadnezzar, but Dan. 1. 2. the third of Jehojakin; Verſ. 1. for the reconciling of which difference, ſee my Comment upon 2 Kings 24. This 2.3. was the year wherein Nebuchadnezzar came firſt againſt Jeruſalem; the former 4.5.
Prophecies of Jeremiah beginning to work, ſo that it was a moſt fit time to 6.7. ſpeak as he doth in upbraiding to people for their hardning of their hearts againſt all his admonitions given them early and late for three and twenty years together, and of other Prophets before him, according to that which is ſaid, verſe 2, 3, 4, 5, &c.

Verſ. 9. I will ſend and bring all the kindreds of the earth, and Nebuchadnezzar my ſervant. Becauſe he ſaith, I will ſend and bring. Some of the Ancients have thought, that it is meant of ſending his Angels good or evill to ſtir up the Caldees forces, lying far and wide in the North parts; for all the Countries about were under them, and were at their command to go forth to war, as they were required, with them; for which they are called all the Families of the earth. But Calvin better, I will ſend; that is, by Nebuchadnezzar my ſervant, who ſhall ſerve my Providence herein, although not knowing me, and gather them an huge Army. And he calleth Nebuchadnezzar his ſervant, partly to confound the Jews the more, who were peculiarly choſen to ſerve him, but rebelled againſt him, and partly to terrifie them by his coming, not of himſelf ſo much, as by Gods appointment, who doubtleſs would therefore be with him, and make him by any power irreſiſtable. He is not called his ſervant, as Moſes and other godly men, but as one made by a ſecret power to ſerve and do the will of God unwittingly, by executing his judgements upon the Jews, and other Nations round about them for their ſins. He was inded carryed by his own ambition and deſire of revenge to theſe wars, but withall he did the work that God would have done, who knoweth how to puniſh ſinners by ſinners, and ſtrengthens them to it, being yet without all tincture or ſtain of ſin; yea, ſo far from it, as that he cannot be ſaid to be the cauſe thereof, but the ſinners that ſuffer are the only cauſe of it to themſelves; and the ſinners that ſerve in this work, ſhall have none other reward in the end; but as a Rod, wherewith God corrected other ſinners, be caſt into the fire, and therein burn for ever, for their malice, cruelty and pride, wherein they have done this work; and not in obedience to the Lord, as Gods faithfull ſervants do; as Joſhuah in deſtroying the Canaanites, and other faithfull perſons. Of the King called Gods Rod, ſee Iſa. 10. Whereas it is added further, And all the Nations round about. The cauſe was, that the Jews might not feed themſelves with hope of help from them againſt Nebuchadnezzar, as the common enemy. For when any Potentate, as the Turk, armes to come againſt any Chriſtian Kingdome, or againſt one petty Kingdome at once, a jealouſie ariſeth in the reſt round about, ſo that they joyn their Forces together to repell him. But the Lord here ſheweth, that it ſhould not be ſo in reſpect of Nebuchadnezzar; but although they ſhould combine, yet they ſhould not be able to ſtand before him; but indeed they were ſo infatuated, that they did not, that we read of, but each Nation kept timerouſly at home, when this ſtorm aroſe, and ſo he ſet upon them one after another, overcoming them with the more facility. Verſ. 12. Whereas he addeth, that they ſhould be made an hiſſing, and perpetuall deſolation, the 11th Verſe makes it plain, that the word לעולם here uſed, doth not alwayes ſignifie for ever, that is, everlaſtingly, but ſometimes for a long time, which yet ſhall have an end, as Jeruſalems deſolation, in ſeventy years; although ſometime it is put for ever and ever, as verſe 12. where it is ſaid of Babylon, that it ſhall be an everlaſting deſolation.

Verſ. 13. And I will bring upon that land all my words which are written. Having threatned perpetuall deſolations to Babylon, as he had done, verſe 9. to all Nations round about Judea, now he exemplifieth the caſe of Babylon by the ſame Nations, ſhewing hereby, that the Babylonians ſhould be brought into ſervitude, as Verſ. 14. Calvin. they had been by the Babylonians. To expreſs which, verſe 14. it is ſaid, Many Nations and great Kings ſhall ſerve themſelves of them alſo. Calvin, Quia fecerunt in illis ad ſervitutem etiam ipſi, gentes multæ, &c. Expounding it as the cauſe, why Babylon ſhould be puniſhed, as is aforeſaid, verſe 13. viz. becauſe they had brought the Jews to ſervitude; or rather as the reaſon of that which was before ſaid, verſe 14. or the means whereby the Babylonians ſhould be brought ſo low, the Jews ſhould have them and other Nations under them, being many, and having mighty Kings over them, and ſo it ſhould be rendred to them according to their doings. But I muſt needs confeſs, that in this paſſage I underſtand not either the ground of his Expoſition, or his meaning, and ſee not how it can be made good, becauſe although the Babylonians were ſubjugated, yet it was not by the Jews, whom they had formerly ſubdued; but by the Perſians and Medes; neither were other Nations brought under them, but they even after their return continued ſervants to the Perſians. Or if by Jews the faithfull be underſtood under the Goſpel, to whom many Nations were ſubdued by the power of the Goſpel, how can the next words agree, where this ſubduing is ſpoken of as a judgement, whereas ſubduing to the faith was a favour? The Vulg. Latin, Becauſe they ſerved them, when they were many Nations, and great Kings. That is, being compelled by them, all the Nations before ſpoken of, and Judea alſo, were ſervants to them, that is, to the Caldees, yea and mighty Kings alſo, who were taken and Captived by them, and kept as ſervants under that great Monarch, as we may ſee 2 Kings 25. where King Jehojakin and more Kings are ſpoken of, as priſoners to Nebuchadnezzar, and his ſon Evilmerodach, but his head was then lifted up above them all. And this is rendred as a reaſon, why they ſhould be done to accordingly, as in the latter part of the Verſe, viz. becauſe they made them ſerve in pride, glorying in having ſo many Nations and Kings ſubdued unto them, as if by their own ſtrength they had brought them under, thus robbing God of his glory. But the word כי may be alſo rendred Glory. For as in N. Tr. before going, and then rendring it word for word according to the Hebr. For many Nations ſhall ſerve in or with them, even them. Where to make ſenſe, this word themſelves muſt needs be underſtood, and then the meaning will eaſily appear to be this; As they have brought many Nations and Kings under, ſo it ſhall be done to them: Nations and Kings, that is, the Medes and Perſians and their Kings ſhall ſubdue and make ſervants of them, and they ſhall never more get up to Imperiall Power again; and to this Expoſitors generally agree, and this is the ſame in effect with the Expoſition given before upon the Vulgar Latin, though the reading be divers, and confirmed Chap. 27. 7.

Verſ. 15. Take this Wine-cup of my fury, and cauſe all Nations to drink of it, to whom I ſhall ſend thee. Having threatned the Jews, and all Nations round about, and laſtly the Caldees in the Verſes before going; now he hath in a viſion the cup of Gods indignation given into his hand to make them all to drink hereof, as the efficient cauſe of the foreſaid deſtruction and miſery. And by the cup of Gods wrath, he meaneth his wrath againſt them for their ſins, aſſimulating it to a Cup of Wine; becauſe as that intoxicateth the brain, and makes ſome fooliſh, ſome infirm, and ſome mad, and to ſpue and fall ; and if they be dead drunk, to fall ſo as never to riſe again, but to dye in that drunken fit : ſo the Wrath of God by horrible deſtructions coming upon theſe Nations , ſhould make them at their wits end, not knowing what courſe to take for their preſervation , and make their hearts ſo faint and timerous, that they ſhould be without all ſtrength to reſiſt, and mad through vexation, and finally ſick as it were to ſpuing and inability to ſtand any longer, ſo that they fall by the ſword, or are brought under, not being able to riſe up, and to ſhake off the yoke any more. Which Expoſition we may gather upon theſe words, verſe 16. and 27. And he ſaith not onely that he took and gave it them to drink, but made them drink it, verſe 17. 28. Here-ſignifyeth, *Exod.*12.38. Nehemiah 13. 3. And thus Jerom expounds it , and Hieron.

Theod, Rabane, Hugo, &c. Although Vatabl. is for people of divers Nations gathered together, and dwelling in the Deſarts near to Judea ; but the firſt is moſt probable : For the Kings of Uz next named ; for Uz the Septuagint and Vulgar have Auſilidis , it was a Countrey near to Idumea, which lay on the South, where Job dwelt ; of whoſe cattell therefore it is ſaid , that the Idumeans and Sabeans made a prey, it had the name moſt probably from Huz the firſt-born of Nahor ; and it ſeems to have been a part of Idumea, *Lam.*4. 21. where it is Gen. 22.20. ſaid, Daughter of Idumea, that dwelleſt in the land of Uz. Azotus was one of the five Lordſhips of the Philiſtims, whereof three more are alſo here mentioned, and for Gath the fifth moſt probably it is ſaid, the remnant of Azotus ; becauſe Gath ſtood near unto it. Of Azotus ſee more Iſa. 20.1. meaning the ſucceſſion of them. For Elam, that was Media, of which after-

And therefore others expound it better of the King of Babylon, as Jerom, Theod. Hieron.

nation [the King of Babylon] and they conjecture, that he is called King of Sheſhak by inverſion of the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, בבל having two letters next unto the firſt, and ל a middle letter; but turn the name into letters of the end of the Alphabet, taking two, which are laſt but one, שש, and a middle letter כ, we have the name ששך, ſignifying, Thy ſilk, for Babel confuſion; but the ſignification is not ſo much reſpected, as the inverſion of Calvin. the letters, the latter being now put for the former, to intimate, as Calvin noteth, that the time ſhould not haſtily come, wherein that King ſhould drink, but all others having drunk before, as ש is after all the reſt of the letters, but ת. Or we may look at the ſignification of the word, thy ſilk, becauſe when other Kings were in miſery, and were habited accordingly, the King of Babylon ſate glorioriouſly apparrelled in ſilk, and gold, and ſilver: whereas it is commonly conceived, that the Prophet thus obſcures his name, leſt he ſhould offend that King, Calvin ſheweth well that this cannot be the reaſon, becauſe Chapter 50. and 51. he ſpares him not, but ſpeaks terribly againſt Babylon, yea and more than againſt any other Kingdome: wherefore the reaſon before going may ſuffice, he changeth the name, that in the very name there might be a Propheticall Prediction.

Verſ. 30. He ſhall roare from his habitation, he ſhall give a ſhout, as they that tread the Wine preſs. Having threatned all Nations with his judgments after Jeruſalem, he yields a reaſon to perſwade them, that it ſhould certainly be ſo, verſe 29. and to terrifie them the more, he aſcribeth roaring to the Lord, and ſhouting, as in treading Grapes they make a great noiſe, and one by his voice ſtirs up another to work luſtily in treading, and making the bloud of the Grapes to run out; ſo he would ſtir up himſelf to the effuſion of their bloud in greateſt abundance.

Verſ.34. Howl ye Shepherds. Here by the conſent of all Expoſitors, Jeremiah returneth in concluſion of this terrible Prophecy againſt Jeruſalem, and all other Nations before mentioned, to the King, Princes, Prieſts and Prophets of Judea, according to the word Paſtors before uſed *Chap.*23.1. ſeeing ſo great calamities to come, ſaying, Howl and cry. And he giveth four Reaſons. 1. Becauſe they ſhould be broken, as a precious Veſſell, or a pleaſant Veſſell: For ſuch the Jews

Metaphor of Shepherds and Sheep, by their Paſture, meaning their fruitfull Countrey, full of Corn, and Wine, and Oyl, now made deſolate and deſtitute as a Wilderneſs, and their houſes cut down; becauſe being burnt down, they were Verſ.38. as trees in a Forreſt in times paſt a ſhelter, cut down. 4. He hath forſaken his formerly to him like a Lions Den, into which no Beaſts durſt enter, whilſt he was there; but being gone, any dare come and enter, and take what they finde, and devour it without fear. As in the next words is ſhewed, that the King of Babylon did; For their Land is deſolate; becauſe of the fierceneſs of the oppreſſor; But here becauſe the word Oppreſſor is יונה Expoſitors differ, ſome applying it to the Lord, being as the word ſignifieth, a Dove, for mildneſs and innocency, when by their wickedneſs he was forced to deal with them: Some to Nebuchadnezzar, deriving the word from יגה to oppreſs; others alſo that apply it to him, follow the firſt interpretation of a Dove; becauſe the Caldees had in Guidius. their Standard the picture of a Dove, in regard of this, that Semiramis the Queen Diodor. of the Aſſyrians, whoſe Monarchy was tranſlated to the Babylonians, had been Sicul. in her infancy expoſed and nouriſhed by Doves; for which they alwayes after, that ruled that Monarchy, carried in their Standard a Dove; by which name, Nebuchadnezzar the preſent Monarch was here ſet forth; as if one ſhould by the Eagle ſet forth the Roman Emperor; for the Eagle, his Armes, and pictured in his Standard, and ſo ſpeaking of him ſay The Eagle.

CHAP. XXVI.

Verſ.1,2. 3,4. 5,6. HEre the Prophet is bidden to threaten them, that the Houſe of God ſhould be like Shiloh, unleſs they turned to the Lord by true repentance; to which effect he had ſpoken before in the time of Joſiah, Chap. 7. in 13. or 14 Verſes together. But now threatning them with the ſame in the firſt year of Iehojakim, his ſon, he was hereupon conſpired againſt by the Prieſts and People, that would have murthered him. Whereby we may ſee how wickedneſs aboundeth under a wicked King. In ſaying that it was the firſt year of his reign, he ſheweth plainly, that the former Chapter is miſplaced; becauſe things done anno 4. of his reign are therein related. Verſ.10. When Jeremiah had this tumult raiſed up againſt him by the Prieſts, Prophets, and people, the Princes hearing it, came and ſate in the entry of the new gate of the Lords houſe: the Caldeans call this the Eaſt gate; Lyra and Vatabl. ſay it was that built by Jotham, 2 Kings 15. 35. Lyra. Vatabl. which might well be, becauſe it was but lately built, viz. not much above one hundred years before; whereas the Temple was built in Solomons time, betwixt whom and Jotham was Uzziah 52 years, 2 Kings 15. Amaziah 29. 2 Chron 25. Ioaſh 40. 2 Chron. 24. Athaliah 6. 2 Chron. 12. 12. Ahazia 1. Jehoram 8. 2 Chron 21. 5. Jehoſhaphat 35. 2 Chron. 20. Aſa 41. 2 Chron 16. Abijah 3. 2 Chron 13. Rehoboam 17. 2 Chron. 12. Solomon 16. after the houſe finiſhed; for he began anno 4. of his reign, and finiſht all in twenty years; ſumma tot. 228 years. And this new gate was of great note, and called for divers reaſons by divers names, as David Kimhi obſerveth, 1 Sur. 2 Kings 12. 6. becauſe the unclean were there ſeparated. 2 Jeſod. a foundation, 2 Chron. 23. 5. becauſe there the foundation of Doctrine was laid, by teaching the rights of the Lords houſe. 3 Harſith, becauſe it ſtood Eaſt-ward to the Sun riſing, Ier. 19. 21. 4. The gate Ithon; that is, of entrance. 5. Hatanath, the middle, becauſe it was between two gates. 6. Aſharahalta, the upper, for the height thereof, and becauſe it was over the Court, the place of Prayer. 7. The new gate, as here. To this the Princes come and ſit, to hear the matter betwixt Ieremiah and the Prieſts, Prophets and People; ſo that it ſeemeth here was a place to ſit, and hear, and determine cauſes concerning God, betwixt one man and another; and herein the Princes had a power. Note. And it is to be noted, that when they heard the cauſe of Ieremiah, they judged truely without reſpect of perſons, for him, a deſpiſed Prophet alone, againſt all the other; yea, the Prieſts, that were of great authority, who neither being moved with reverence of good, whoſe ſervants in a peculiar manner they were, nor by this conſideration, that Ieremiah was one of themſelves, were carried altogether with envy and wrath, raſhly to deſtroy him; ſo impetuous a thing is wrath and malice for reproof, although never ſo juſt. For hereby Ieremiah firſt incenſed Paſhur, Chap. 20. and then all of them, Ch. 23. where he moſt bitterly inveighed againſt them, not ſparing the Princes alſo But they could eaſilier forget it, than the Prieſts, who indeed ſhould have been examples of all vertue to them. But even the Princes ſoon after turned his cruel enemies alſo, Chap. 37. 15. for his free reproving of them for their ſins, Chap. 34. and threatning their deſtruction.

Verſ.17. Then roſe up certain Elders of the Land. When the Princes had ſpoken, certain ancient men, here called Elders, that beſt knew what had been done long agoe, took courage to themſelves to ſpeak for Ieremiah alſo: Calvin. for ſo Calvin underſtands Elders in this place, Elder-men; and reaſon makes it moſt probable, and that they were not of the Elders preferred by Moſes, Numb. 11. of whom the Synedrion magnum conſiſted, for they were the Princes of the Land. And they alledge the example of Micah, Mich, 3.12. threatning that Ieruſalem ſhould be ploughed, that is, ſo deſtroyed, as it ſhould have none appearance of a City, but be as a field ploughed and ſown with Corn; as the Poet ſaid of Troy, Et ſeges eſt ubi Troia fuit; as now Ieremiah threatned ruine likewiſe; but Hezekiah, in whoſe dayes he lived, did nothing againſt him, but feared before the Lord, and beſought him, and ſo the Lord repented of the evill, and did it not. Thi was done above eighty years agoe; for between Hezekiah and Iehojakim was Manaſſah 52, Amon 2, Joſiah 32: yet there might be old men then living, that might remember it, eſpecially being godly, as it ſeems theſe were; and therefore ſuch as kept a Record of ſuch famous paſſages betwixt Prophets and Kings.

Verſ. 20. There was alſo a man that propheſied againſt this Land; then Jehojakim, &c. Here Expoſitors differ, ſome thinking, that in theſe words the foreſaid old men go on ſtill in their ſpeech, and ſome, that ſome other man, an enemy to Ieremiah, ſpake this in oppoſing what they had ſaid, becauſe they think it not probable, that the ſame men ſhould bring a contrary example, to make the example before brought leſſe moving; and becauſe in concluſion it is added, verſe 27. Nevertheleſs the hand of Abikam was with Jeremiah, the adverſative particle here implying ſomething done in his behalf, notwithſtanding the example before going, which tended to fruſtrate the ſpeech of the old men, and to ſtir up the people againſt Jeremiah, by ſetting before their eyes what the way now was that they had Jehojakim for their King, wherein it ſtood them in hand to goe whatſoever they had done in Hezekiah his time; for we ſay, New Lords, new Lawes yet becauſe in ſome relations, if after ſome, other ſome ſpeak, an hint hereof by ſaying; but others ſpake thus, or contrariwiſe there were that ſaid thus; and here is no word intimating a divers ſpeaker; the firſt Expoſition ſeems moſt probable, that the foreſaid Elders go on in producing this example alſo; whereas it may be objected, they durſt not certainly after they had related, what was done in Hezekiah his time, and made application by ſpeaking of a good event, bring another contrary example of a thing done by the King, under whom they now lived, but as it were, the other day, (for it was the beginning of Jehojakims reign, when theſe things were agitated, as appeareth verſe 1.) For what conſtruction could be made hereof, but that this King for this tyrannicall act againſt Urijah, together with his Princes, was already upon ruine? I anſwer, who ſo ſhall conſider the whole relation, there being none application made as before, muſt needs hence rather gather, that the ſame men ſpake thus alſo, and not an adverſe party; for then they would have been bold to have applyed it by ſaying, after they had produced the example; yet Jehojakim ſuffereth no evill for all this. But the old men ſpeaking it, deſcretion required, that they ſhould ſuſpend an application againſt the King, leaving this relation barely made to each ones conſideration, that they may be the more out of danger. And it was enough after the other, barely to relate it, none being ſo ſhallow, but that he muſt needs gather, that Jehojakim and his mighty men by killing that Prophet Urijah had done too much already, to pull down Gods wrath upon them, and therefore it ſtood them in hand to beware, how they added more innocent bloud-ſhed by perſecuting Jeremiah, as they did, to break off from this fury, and rather go to prayer. For the adverſative Particle, verſe 24. the meaning is, ſay theſe old men what they could, or the Princes what they could, the Prieſts and people yet were carried with ſuch a ſpirit of madneſs, that they would have killed Ieremiah, but that Abikam the ſon of Shaphan, ſome man of great power with his men about, came and took him with a ſtrong hand away from them, and ſo he was ſafe for that time. Of Abikam the ſon of Shaphan, and what place he was, we may gather from 2 Kings 22, 12. where he is ſaid to be ſent by Ioſiah together with Hilkiah, and ſome others, as being moſt honourable perſons, to enquire of the Lord, when he ſaw himſelf in great danger. For Urijah, the Prophet, I finde not any other mention made of him elſewhere; but hereby it appeareth, that when Ierem 5. it was ſaid, that he found not a man, he meant not preciſely any one; for this Urias was Cotemporanean with him. And although he fled into Egypt, when his life was ſought, yet it was not out of timerouſneſs, but prudence to ſave himſelf, as long as he could, to do ſervice to God in this world, as Chriſt himſelf did, and Elijah, and the Apoſtles were bidden, when they were perſecuted in one City, to flee to another : for that he was not timerous, appeared, becauſe that being brought back out of Egypt,he retracted not, but ſtood to that which he had ſaid to the death. Whereas Ieremiah fled not, and yet was preſerved ; Gods ſingular providence appeared herein, that the people might not even in the wickedeſt times be deſtitute of one to admoniſh and threaten them, that they might be brought to repentance : Touching Iehojakins ſending and fetching him out of Egypt, it may eaſily be conceived, how he might do this, becauſe Pharoah Necho Hieron.

King of Egypt made him King, 2 Kings 23. 34 : Thus Ierom. For Uriah his being buried amongſt the Vulgar ſort, it is to be underſtood, that every man of note then had his ſeverall burying place for him and thoſe of his Family; and becauſe Prophets were moſt of all ſuch, if they had no ſuch places, the manner was at the publick charge to honour them ſo far, as to build them Sepulchers, and thereupon to ſubſcribe their names; as we may ſee 2 Kings 23.17. and Mat.
23. 22. Uriah then was not onely perſecuted whilſt he lived, but his perſecutors to encreaſe their ſin the more, denyed unto him the honour of a Prophets buriall.

CHAP. XXVII.

THis Chapter beginneth as Chapter 26. In the beginning of the reign of Iehojakin.
Although this Prophecy concerned the time of Zedekiah, which was Verſ. 1. not till divers years after. For the Lord bids the Prophet ſend yoaks to the Kings about Judah, by their Embaſſadors that ſhould come to Zedekiah. But Verſ. 3. the Lord revealed to his Prophet now, that they ſhould all be ſubdued ; and before alſo Ch. 25.19. where he nameth many more, that ſhould drink, ſo that this Prophecy was to lye dormant for certain years, but made known now for Ieremiah his comfort, and better ſatisfaction touching his former threatnings; the execution whereof he ſaw ſtill to be delayed. But now the time is made known unto him, when they ſhould be executed, even in Zedekiah his dayes.
And the Lord goeth on to teach by outward ſignes, as he did before to affect them, to whom the Prophet was ſent, the more. For coming of Embaſſadors from the Kings about to Zedekiah, it was without doubt to confederate againſt Nebuchadnezzar, whoſe power they ſaw to be very great, that although they were not able each nation alone to withſtand him; yet joyning all their forces together they might. But the Prophet ſheweth, that this confederacy would be but vain, becauſe all Kingdomes of the earth are the Lords, and to be given to Verſ. 5,6. whom he pleaſed ; and it was now his pleaſure to give them all to Nebuchadnezzar and his poſterity for a certain time, and then to give them again into the hands of others, as was alſo ſaid before Chap. 25. 13, 14. Wherefore he perſwadeth Verſ. 7. them voluntarily to yield unto him, promiſing that if they did, they ſhould ſtill dwell in their own land; but if they would not, threatning them Verſ. 9, 10, 11. with deſtruction by the ſword, famine and peſtilence. Whence note, that whatſoever God commandeth it is wiſdome to obey him herein ; for in ſerving him we ſhall be in the way to have the earth ſerve us for habitation, and nutriment, but contrariwiſe ready to ſpue us out by deſtructions and conſumptions of divers ſorts. The time for all to ſerve Nebuchadnezzar is limited to him ; His ſon and ſons ſon, that is, Evilmerodach and Belſhazzar; for he reigned 36 years after Iehojakin his captivity, as appears 2 Kings 25. Evilmerodach, as ſome ſay 23, Belſhazzar 3 ; but Beroſ. hath between the two laſt, Nenglich Soroores, in whom ſeventy years may be made up : but of this ſee more 2 Kings 25 8.

Hearken not to them that ſay, The Veſſels of the Lords houſe ſhall be brought back again from Babylon. Of the carrying of theſe precious Veſſels into Babylon, ſee 2 Kin. 24. 13. and that more were carried away afterwards in Zedekiah his time, 2 Kin. 25. 13. But none were brought back again, till the time of Cyrus, Ezra 1. according to this Prophecie, verſe 19, 20, 21, 22. yet ſo impudent were the falſe Prophets of the Jewes, that they dared to promiſe the bringing of them ſhortly back again. So at all times there be Prophets, that flatter the ſtate and make it ſecure, when God is reſolved upon nothing but deſtruction and ruine for ſin.

CHAP. XXVIII.

HEre is a Prophecy in the fourth year of Zedekiah, which was the laſt King Verſ. 1. of Judah: for he did not onely evill as other Kings had done, but worſe; for he ſwore to Nebuchadnezzar, that made him King, and brake his Oath by Verſ. 3. rebelling againſt him; yet a falſe Prophet Hananiah was ſo impudent, as that in oppoſing Ieremiah, that threatned him, he preſumed to propheſy the break-Verſ.10. ing of the yoak of Nebuchadnezzar within two years, and the bringing back of the Veſſels of the Lords houſe; and to purchaſe more credit to his Prophecy, he Verſ.13. breaks the yoke from Ieremiah his neck, and ſaith, Thus will the Lord break the yoke of the King of Babylon; but for it Ieremiah makes an Iron yoke, hereby ſignifying a more ſtrong ſubjection to him, and threatens the falſe Prophet with Verſ. 16. death the ſame year, which came to paſs accordingly. Whereas verſe 6. Iere- 17. miah ſaith to Hananiah his prophecy (Amen) when he knew it to be falſe, and if not, he muſt needs be a falſe Prophet, It is to be underſtood, that his meaning is nothing elſe, but that he could wiſh it might be ſo for the love that he bare to his Countrey, although he knew by the ſpirit wherewith he was indued, Calvin. that it ſhould not be ſo. So Moſes, as Calvin noteth, offered to have his name blotted out of the Book of life; and Paul could wiſh himſelf an Anathema for the Jews his kinſmen, ſo Ierom, Raban, &c. But Vatable thinks, that he Hieron. Vatabl. ſpake thus, as uncertain, whether God would give the people repentance and change his former decree, and ſpare the people, notwithſtanding the former Verſ.7,8. threatnings; for which cauſe verſe 7, 8. he ſpeaks as one expecting the event to prove or diſprove it; and as if Ieremy for the preſent knew not whether he ſaid true or falſe, it is ſaid verſe 11. That he went away; and verſe 12. That the Word of the Lord came unto him to the contrary, and this is moſt probable, and then the ſubmiſs and lowly minde, that was in Ieremiah more than in Ionah, ſhewed it ſelf, in that he could be content to be diſgraced, as a Prophecyer of things not coming to paſs, ſo that God might be glorified in ſaving ſo many thouſands of his Countrey men from ruine.

Verſ. 9. The Prophet that propheſieth of peace, when his word is come to paſs, it ſhall be known that the Lord ſent him. This is not alwayes a true rule, for Deut. 13. a caſe is put of a Prophet not ſent of God, but of the Devill, to ſeduce to Idolatry, that yet might give a Signe, which afterwards cometh to paſs: how then doth Ieremiah give this as a rule here? Anſw. Moſes giveth the ſame Deut. 18. alſo. Wherefore it is to be underſtood, that this is for the moſt part a certain rule to know a true Prophet, when the event anſwers his Prophecy; becauſe that God onely that ſendeth ſuch, knoweth before what ſhall come to paſs, and neither devil nor man, but only by conjecture, foretelling things therfore ſometimes true, and ſometimes falſe; For let them tell what ſhall come, and we will ſay they are Gods. This then is the common rule to know a true Prophet by, and if by this we cannot know him, then we muſt obſerve at what he aimeth, if at the turning of men away from God to Idols, then he is a falſe Prophet, although his ſigne be true; and this is permitted only to try the conſtancy of Gods people in cleaving to him. Now Ieremiah propoundeth the firſt and moſt common mean of triall; to the time of manifeſting which it would not be long; for he pitcht upon two years; and this tryall was fitteſt in the preſent caſe, when two Prophets ſpeaking contraries, contend whether of them is the true Prophet.

Hananiah the Prophet took the yoke from Ieremiah his neck, and brake it, ſay-Verſ.10. ing, &c. He carryed himſelf moſt inſolently and boldly; inſomuch that the people being ready to hear any thing, whereby it might be detracted from Jeremiah his propheſying, were in danger to be ſeduced to think him a falſe, and Hananiah a true Prophet. For how elſe durſt he have gone on from propheſying to ſo high a degree of oppoſing Ieremiah in his ſigne, breaking it, and ſaying, In the Name of the Lord of Hoſts, the God of Iſrael, that ſo the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar ſhould be broken within two years? For if the yoke taken and worn by Ieremiah were a ſigne appointed of God, his breaking it was a plain fighting againſt God; and therefore they might think he durſt not do ſo, except God had ſent him. It was therefore a moſt deſperate fact in him, and a moſt dangerous temptation to the people to ſubvert their Faith in Ieremiah his words. Yet for the preſent Jeremiah departed, as not thinking it beſt to contend, till he knew further of the minde of the Lord, and then he came again, and threatned him with death, as he was well worthy.

Verſ. 13. Thou haſt broken the yokes of wood, thou haſt made for them yokes of Iron. That is, tell Hananiah according to the firſt words, and do thou Jeremiah according to the laſt: make and wear Iron yokes in token of an harder ſubjection of all the Nations threatned to Nebuchadnezzar. Verſ. 14. For whereas wooden yokes were appointed before, that were weaker and lighter; to ſhew, that if they would have yielded at command, their ſervitude ſhould have been the lighter; but now being hardned to ſtand out, it ſhould be more grievous by being carried into other lands; whereas yielding, they ſhould have been ſtill permitted to dwell in their own land, onely paying to Nebuchadnezzar a Tribute. If it be ſaid, But how had the people deſerved to have their miſery thus aggravated by the petulancy of one man Hananiah? I anſwer, he was a means to harden them more thereby, and this was alſo cordiall to them; therefore it was juſt with God too deal thus by them. Note. And all that deſire to hear pleaſing things ſpoken unto them, and reject ſound Doctrine, becauſe it croſſeth their humours, ſhall be likewiſe left to obduration and horrible deſtruction. And it is to be noted, that this fact of a falſe Prophet, took ſuch impreſſion in their corrupt hearts, that although Hananiah dyed the ſame year as Ieremiah threatned, yet there followed after that no relenting in them, but they perſiſted in their obſtinacie to the end.

CHAP. XXIX.

Verſ. 1. JEremiah writes Letters to the captivated Jews in Babylon, who were carried away with Iechoniah, 2 Kings 24. 12. and he ſent them by Elaſah, the ſon of Shaphan. Verſ. 3. For having propheſyed Chap. 25. of a Captivity to continue ſeventy years; but being herein oppoſed by Hananiah, a falſe Prophet, Chap. 28. he thought it neceſſary (leſt they of the Captivity hearing thereof, ſhould be ſtirred up to tumultuate againſt the State wherein they lived, and to ſeek immediately a liberty of returning) to give them warning to be quiet, and patiently to bear their Exile, during their time ſet by the Lord, being comforted by the hope upon good ground to return then, and enjoy their own Countrey again. For the men by whom he wrote thus, they are ſaid to be Embaſſadors ſent by Zedekiah to King Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him King, when he carried away Iehojakin into Babylon. Therefore being made King at his will, and being for this cauſe a Tributary unto him, and not knowing how long it would be his pleaſure to continue him in this royall dignity, becauſe he had with him Iehojakin, touching whom Hananiah had propheſied, that he ſhould return again within two years, he thought it neceſſary to ſend unto him, to ſhew his obſequiouſneſs, that his favour might ſtill be towards him, to keep him ſtill in his place; and Iehojakin there in priſon. And upon this conſideration he might well condeſcend, that his Meſſengers ſhould carry Ieremiah his Letters to them of the Captivity, that hereby they might be moved quietly with their King to abide there, and not think yet of returning to his diſturbance, that he might live all his dayes in this honour in peace. To this effect almoſt Calvin, and Lyra, Hugo, Tho. Aquinas add, that theſe men were ſent to Babylon with Tribute in the firſt year of Zedekiah his reign, which is not improbable. Some move a needleſs queſtion here, Whether the Captives carried away anno 4th of Jehojakim be not here meant, giving ſentence, that they are, and not thoſe that were carried with Jehojakim. But 2 Chron. 36. we read not in the ſaid fourth year of Iehojakim of any that were carried away, but onely of Veſſels of the houſe of the Lord, and of the King bound to be carried; but he was not at that time: Wherefore Ierom without queſtion ſaith, That the Captives who are carried away with Jehojakim, are meant.

Verſ.7. Pray to the Lord for it; for in the peace thereof ye ſhall have peace. According to this 1 Tim. 2. we are commanded to pray for Kings, that under them we may lead a godly life in all quietneſs and honeſty, and yet the Kings were then Heathen, and enemies to Chriſtians. Hereby we learn then, that the vices Note. of Kings are not a Superſedeas to our obedience to them, but we muſt both be ſubject notwithſtanding, and ex animo pray to God for them, as the Saints of God conſtantly did in the Primitive Church; and not rebell againſt them, or plot their deſtruction, as Papiſts have impiouſly done ſundry times. For in their peace, that is in the Kingdome wherein we live is in a proſperous eſtate, we fare the better, although the King be a Tyrant, becauſe all things in time of peace and fruitfulneſs do more abound. Yet this was not true to the Jewes without limitation, but for the terme of ſeventy years; for this terme being expired, Babylon came into miſery, and the time of the Jewes felicity for their deliverance by Cyrus ſubduing that State, came, as was promiſed: when theſe 70 years began and ended, is not agreed amongſt Expoſitors; but of this ſee my Comment upon 2 Kings 25.8.

Verſ. 8. Let not your Prophets or Diviners, that are in the midſt of you, deceive you. Of Prophets amongſt others carried away from Jeruſalem, ſee verſe 1. Theſe it ſeemeth, took upon them amongſt thoſe of the Captivity to promiſe a ſpeedy return, as Hananiah did at Jeruſalem; and of three of them the Prophet ſpeaks verſe 21. 24. by name, viz. Ahab, and Zedekiah, and Shemaiah, threatning them diverſly.

Verſ. 21. Touching Ahab and Zedekiah, they did not onely propheſy falſely in the name of the Lord, but were alſo filthy Adulterers; and therefore Ieremiah threaneth them, that they ſhould be judged accordingly, by being roaſted in the fire. Some will have theſe two to be the two Elders, that accuſed Suſanna and were found Dan. 13. out by Daniel to be falſe Conſpirators, and therefore ſuffered death by ſtarving: but both the manner of their death differing from the death of theſe two, and their Title Elders, but theſe Prophets were the contrary: and therefore Ierom rejects it as a Fable: For Nebuchadnezzar his putting of them to ſo cruell death, he might haply, as Calvin conjectureth, be incenſed againſt them for ſeeking to ſtir up trouble amongſt his people, by their propheſying of a ſpeedy return: but for ſo much as even Heathens lead onely by the light of nature, abominate the the foul ſin of Adultry, it is to be held that the King was moſt exaſperated hereby, as being the more abominable in them pretending greateſt holilines, as being men that took upon them to be Prophets led by divine inſpiration.
Note. And God doubtleſs had an over-ruling hand in it, to terrifie the more from ſuch horrible wickedneſſes; and by the form of curſing taken up, hereupon to notifie the foul conditions of falſe Prophets and Idolaters to all the world; as indeed Idolatry and Adultry go commonly together, as they come both under the ſame name of Adultery; whereof ſee for example Iezabel, and Maacha the mother of Aſa; and the Nuns, Friers and Prieſts amongſt the Idolatrous Papiſts.

Touching Shemaiah the Nehelamite, interpreted by Kimbi the Dreamer, as Verſ. 24. the word ſignifieth, it is ſaid, that he had written againſt Ieremiah to Zephaniah, and the other Prieſts, flatteringly telling him, that he was by God ſet up in the room of Iehojadah; of whom 2 Kings 11. 18. that by by his means Matthan the Prieſt of Baal was ſlain, to ſtir him up to doe the like by Ieremiah, as a falſe Prophet; whereas indeed he was not high-Prieſt, as Iehojadah had been; but the ſecond Prieſt, 2 Kings 25. 18. For Seraias was the high-Prieſt: and he incites Zephaniah againſt Ieremiah, ſaying; For every one that is mad, to put him in the ſtocks. Whereby we may gather, that wicked men counted the Prophets of God mad, becauſe they were ſtrangely moved by the Spirit of God after the manner of arreptitij, that are rapt ſo, that they do madly, as Saul, when the Spirit came upon him, caſt off his cloaths, 1 Sam. 19.24. And according to this, 3 Kings 9. 11. one ſaid to Iehu, touching a Prophet that came unto him to anoint him King, What ſaid this mad fellow to thee? And herein ſometimes falſe Prophets were like unto the true; and therefore the ſecond to the high-Prieſt had authority given him to judge of ſuch; and finding them falſe, to put them in ſtocks or priſon, to be brought forth afterwards to be adjudged to death, if they were found falſe. And therefore Paſhur, who was in this Office before, dealt thus by Ieremiah, Ch. 20. but moſt injuriouſly, and was therefore threatned, and it ſeems, becauſe there was now another in that place, depoſed. But Shemaiah would have had him to have done likewiſe; for which he alſo is threatned, verſe 31. with the deſtruction both of himſelf and his poſterity. And it is further ſaid, that Shemiah wrote alſo to the Prieſts, that they might herein be aſſiſtant to Zephaniah, to which they were prone enough of themſelves; as we may ſee in many other places, eſpecially Chap. 26. 8.

and he calleth it, the time of his trouble; becauſe whatſoever they had formerly ſuffered was nothing in compariſon of this, when the City and Temple ſhould be deſtroyed, the Kingdome of David aboliſhed, and the holy Land made deſolate, and left lying ſo for ſeventy years. But he ſhall be ſaved out of Verſ. 8.
it. Verſe 8. For I will break his yoke from thy neck. All that hath been ſaid hitherto is to make way to ſpeak of the comfort, that this deliverance might be the more magnified: for the greater the miſery of a people is, the more doth Gods mercy ſhine in their deliverance, and ſetling in an happy eſtate, not only according to the time of their ſuffering, but for ever: to intimate which he ſaith, That ſtrangers ſhall no more ſerve themſelves of them.

But they ſhall ſerve the Lord, and David their King, whom I will raiſe up unto Verſ. 9. to them. In which words he leapeth ſuddenly from the joyfull tidings of their deliverance out of Captivity under the Caldees, to another far more joyfull by Chriſt Jeſus, whom he ſetteth forth by the name of David, becauſe he was his ſeed, and is ſaid to ſit upon his Throne to rule, Iſa. 9. 7. For that the Meſſiah is here prophecied of, all, both Jewes and Chriſtians teach; yea Calvin himſelf, Calvin. that impugnes the application of other things here before ſpoken of to the Meſſiah, yet conſents, that this is a prophecie concerning his Kingdome; noting, Note. that ſimply to be delivered from the ſervitude of ſtrangers tyranny, is not a benefit; but when being delivered, a people is brought under a better government.
Becauſe the caſe of ſuch as are under an Anarchy, ſo that every man may do what he luſteth, is worſe than to be under the cruelleſt Tyrant that ever lived, if he were a devill in the ſhape of a man; but to be delivered from ſtrangers, and to be under God and his Son Jeſus Chriſt, ruling by godly Vicegerents, is the height of worldly felicity. That this cannot be underſtood of the time of their return from Babylon appeareth, becauſe then they ſerved not King David, although they were under the Government of one of his Line, Zerubbabel; for he was but a Prince ſubſtituted by the Perſian; neither had the Jews ever after an abſolute King, till Chriſt came, whom they ungratefully rejected and crucified. For although Alexander in the time of the Aſſamoneans made himſelf King, yet his reigne was moſt uncomfortable, by reaſon of the Civill wars betwixt him and the Phariſees; as I have ſhewed in my continuation of the Hiſtory from Nehemiah to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. Again, ſtrangers ſtill ſerved themſelves of them, ſometime the Kings of Syria, ſometime the Kings of Egypt, under whom they were. And laſtly, although Judah returned then, yet Iſrael did not, as is promiſed verſe 3. that they ſhould ſerve the Lord and his King Chriſt, whom he ſet up, as is ſaid here, Whom I will raiſe up unto them.

Verſ. 10. And as v. 9. he paſſeth from one deliverance to another, from that from Babylon, to that by Chriſt; ſo verſe 10. I will ſave thee from afar. That is, by bringing thee from Babylon, a Countrey ſo far off from Jeruſalem; and thy ſeed ſhall return out of Captivity: which is ſpoken of their coming from Babylon, is alſo a Prophecy with another far greater annexed unto it; None ſhall make thee afraid. For they that returned from Babylon were many times much affrighted Acts 4. by their enemies, as is ſhewed in Nehemiah; but through Chriſt ſuch undaunted courage came to the faithfull, that his Apoſtles feared no threatnings of Tyrants, but rejoyced when they were threatned and ſuffered. Some becauſe the Iſraelites never came in yet to ſerve Chriſt, but ſome Jewes onely, and they but a few; whereas this ſeems to be ſpoken of the generality of the Nation, hold, that this is a Prophecy of a time yet to come; when as the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 11. All Iſrael ſhall be ſaved. That is, when the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall come in. But about this there are two groſs errors, one of the Rabbins, teaching that the Meſſiah is not yet come, but then ſhall, and gather together all Iſrael from all parts of the world, and ſet up a moſt glorious Kingdome in Judea: another of ſome Ancients imbraced by the Papiſts, that Antichriſt coming, the Jewes ſhall be gathered to him, as to the Meſſiah; but Enoch and Elias ſhall be ſent to preach, and do miracles, whereby they ſhall be converted to Chriſt, and fall from Antichriſt, for which they ſhall ſuffer much at his hands, but be ſoon delivered; for the whole time of his reign ſhall be but three years and an half. For that this, as well as the other of the Rabins, is a groſſe error, is manifeſt; ſeeing Antichriſt is already come, and hath long reigned, even the Pope of Rome; to whom all things ſpoken of Antichriſt doe ſo agree, as that ſome Papiſts themſelves confeſs him to be the Antichriſt, as the French, and ſo he hath long agoe been proclaimed in Paris. And Gregory the firſt, the moſt pious and learned of all the Roman Biſhops, gave a ſign of him before, whereby he might eaſily be known to be the man, viz. his t[illegible]ing upon him to be univerſall Biſhop; as Gregory the ſeventh, one of his ſucceſſors, by the help of Phocas a murtherer, firſt did. But theſe errours being rejected, we may ſafely hold the converſion of the Jewiſh nation to the faith of Chriſt towards the end of the world to be here pointed at, whereof Iſaiah alſo ſpake oft-times in his Prophecie. At what time the faithful ſhall live without fear of their enemies, and the Iſraelites in particular, never to be brought under again by any humane power, as they were after Ioſhuah, in the time of Judges, then of Kings, and finally of the Romans, being diſperſed into all Countreys to this day: and that the mercy finally to be ſhewed is meant, ſee verſe 24. In the latter dayes ye ſhall conſider.

Verſ. 11. For though I make a full end of all Nations whither I have ſcattered thee, yet I will not make a full end of thee. The cauſe why the Lord will deal ſo favourably with Iacob, as hath been ſaid, is here ſhewed, viz. his ſingular love and favour towards them; for which he would not deal by them, as by their enemies, the Babylonians, who are utterly deſtroyed; as I have ſhewed in writing upon Iſa. 13. 14. And this partiall dealing with the Jewes, and ſaving a remnant of them, hath been often ſpoken of before; and where the deſtroying of them is ſometime ſpoken of alſo, as an utter deſtruction for ever, it is ſpoken in reſpect of the wicked, of which ſort the generality of the Nation was, a few only that feared God ſcarce to be found out, being excepted; as we may ſee Chap. 5. and 1 Kings 19.

Verſ. 12. For thy wound is incurable. Here, and ſo forth to verſe 16. to magnifie Gods mercy the more, he ſetteth forth the deſperate caſe of the Jewiſh Nation, by reaſon of their ſins; that it appearing to be ſo, but deliverance and reſtitution to happineſs for the deſtruction of their cruell enemies then coming, they might be the more ſtirred up to give him thanks and praiſe. For when we finde it ſaid, Thy Wound is incurable: and yet verſe 11. In meaſure I have corrected thee. But verſe 14. I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, a cruell one, Here may ſeem to be a contradiction, and it may be ſaid, How can both theſe be true? But it is eaſily anſwered: Thy wound is incurable, both becauſe thou canſt not of thy ſelf find out how to heal it; neither can the Nations, in whom thou haſt formerly truſted as thy friends, yet the Lord can and will doe it. And the Prophet doth the rather ſet forth their caſe thus as deſperate, to meet with the vain confidence that they had in their falſe Prophets, promiſing them deliverance within 2 year; to beat them from which, he thought he could not ſpeak to much, as Calvin noteth, who alſo, for incurable, hath grievous; thy wound is grievous, holding that the word אנוש here uſed ſignifieth gravitus, and cannot rightly be otherwiſe tranſlated. But becauſe a wound incurable is grievous above all others, it is no errour to render it ſo, eſpecially becauſe verſe 13. he addeth for further Explanation, None to binde it up, no medicines to heal it; or according to the Vulgar Latin, no utility of ſanations, word for word according to the Hebrew. Calvin.

Verſ. 14. I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, and with the chaſtiſement of a cruell one. The miſeries of the Jewes here ſpoken of were by the Caldeans; but becauſe God would have them know and conſider his hand in it, he takes it upon himſelf; the Caldees being but his inſtruments in all their cruelty exerciſing againſt them, and by them he was provoked to ſcourge them for their ſins. But verſe 16. he ſaith; Therefore all that devoure thee ſhall be devoured; that is, Notwithſtanding the Caldees being brought upon thee by me to exerciſe ſuch cruelty, they ſhall be devoured by others, that is, by Medes and Perſians; becauſe that although I did it in Juſtice, yet they in pride and cruelty, as was alſo ſhewed before. Verſ. 16.

Verſ. 18. I will bring again the Captivity of Jacobs Tents. Having promiſed ſalvation to Iſrael, verſe 17. Now he ſheweth how he ſhould be ſaved, viz. by being brought out of Captivity: and he ſpeaks of his Tents, becauſe the habitations in Babylon, where moſt probably like unto Tents, being of the meaneſt ſort: And the City ſhall be built upon her former heap; That is, where the City Jeruſalem ſtood before, but now lay upon ruinous heap, in the ſelf ſame place it ſhall be built: In which words he ſpeaks of the ſtate of things after their return from Babylon under Cyrus. At what time he ſaith, that they ſhould praiſe God, and multiply again, and have Congregations.

Verſ. 19. Verſ. 20. Verſ. 21. And their Governour ſhall proceed from the midſt of them, and he ſhall draw near unto me, and approach; for who is this that ingaged his heart to approach unto me? Here moſt Expoſitors by their Ruler underſtand Chriſt, that ſhould in his due time ſpring up from the Jewes themſelves, as ſupreme; whereas they had alwayes ſince the time of their Captivity been under ſtrangers; yet Ierom doth not underſtand it of Chriſt, but at firſt concerning Zerubbabel, in whom it was fulfilled in part, and afterwards perfectly in Chriſt. Some apply it altogether to him and to the Jewes in thoſe dayes; as Theodore, and Thomas Aquinas. But that of Ierom ſeemeth to be beſt, and ſo the words of verſe 18, 19, 20 are ſpoken alſo of both, the firſt being but a Figure of the other. And being under- Lyra. Hieron. Theod.

ſtood of Zerubbabel, by theſe words; He ſhall draw near unto me, and I will cauſe him to approach. He commends that Prince for his forwardneſs in returning and leading the people to their old land, to build the holy City again, and the Temple: For then God cauſed him to come near unto him. And then in way of admiration, the more to commend his prompt and ready minde, he ſaith, Who is this that ingaged his heart to approach unto me? As if he were for this ſingularly to be praiſed. And the Hebrew expreſſion is to be noted, which is not one word alone, but two, to ſet him forth a rare man, הוא זה, This he; Calvin. Becauſe as Calvin noteth, many by continuing long in Babylon, were ſo taken with the love of that Countrey, that they had no heart to return to the Holy Land, and Temple; and many that returned had no heart to do this, being moved through piety, whereby he is moved that ingageth his heart to approach to God: being underſtood of Chriſt, the meaning is, that he approached unto God ſo as never any man did, or can do, in the perfect fulfilling of his will, being without all ſtain or ſpot of ſin or imperfection, as the beſt are not, neither hath any elſe ever been. For the firſt words of the Verſe, Their Nobles, Hebrew it is His Captain, Vulgar Latin, Fortis, or, Dux ejus & dominator ex eo.
Calvin follows that of Fortis; and therefore the N. Tr. rendring it Their Nobles, erreth.

He concludeth with comfort to the godly; Ye ſhall be my people; But with Verſ. 22,23. terrour to the wicked, againſt whom his wrath ſhall go out as a Whirl-wind, And although little faith was now given to theſe things, yet he addeth further, and ſaith; In the latter dayes ye ſhall conſider it. That is, when all things are come Verſ. 24. to paſs, as I have ſpoken, and the wicked, although now in proſperity, ſhall lie in miſery. And this he ſaith, as to comfort the faithfull, who although they believed, yet met with many brunts of temptation, for which they had need of further confirmation, ſo to the terror of the wicked, that would not believe; for he ſheweth hereby, that they ſhould be made to believe it by wofull experience.
By the latter dayes, he meaneth either towards the end of the world, when the wicked enemies of the truth, not onely Babylon properly ſo called, but alſo myſticall Babylon, Rev. 17. ſhall be deſtroyed, and the Turk alſo, the Jewes being converted that yet remain in unbelief; and all falſe worſhip ſhall every where be put down: or at the day of Judgement, when the wicked ſhall too late ſee into their extream folly, and ſorrow therefore bootleſly; and the faithfull ſhall by experience finde the promiſes of God all verified in being brought to everlaſting happineſs to their unſpeakable comfort; as is notably ſet forth in the Book of the Wiſdom of Solomon, Chap. 2, 3, 4, 5.

CHAP. XXXI.

IN this Chapter the Prophet amplifieth further that which he had Propheſied of Chap. 30. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. for having ſaid in the name of the Lord, Ye ſhall be my people, and I will be your God: Now he ſaith more fully; I will be Verſ. 1. the God of all the Families of Iſrael, and they ſhall be my people. Which becauſe it is the ſame with verſe 22. before going, ſome annex unto Chapter 30. and begin this with verſe 2. But we ſhall not need ſo to do; for by the conſent of all Expoſitors that Prophecie and this are all one, as is alſo intimated in the firſt words, [at the ſame time:] That is, in the beginning of Zedekiah his reign, as Chap. 27. and 28. is expreſly ſaid. And he ſaith, All the families of Iſrael. That this Prophecy might not be thought to pertain only to the Kingdome of Judah, conſiſting but of two Tribes, whereof they all were, that came out of Babylon, and none of them of the ten. Yet ſome will have it a Prophecie onely of that deliverance, but they are confuted plainly by the very firſt words; and it appears manifeſtly to be of that far greater deliverance to come by Jeſus Chriſt, through whom all Iſrael ſhall come in to be the people of God again finally and be ſaved, Rom. 11. 26. Yet as I ſaid upon Chap. 30. the Propheſie is mixed,

ſometimes pointing at the deliverance out of the North ; and ſometimes this greateſt deliverance by Chriſt, as many Expoſitors agree.

Verſ. 2. But before he proceedeth to the Prophecie of deliverance, he makes way unto it verſe 2, 3. ſaying, The people that were left of the ſword found grace in the wilderneſs,&c. ſomething like unto which, ſee before Iſaiah 51. 10. and 41. 1, 2, 3. As if he had ſaid, Thoſe of Iſrael that ſurvived in the wilderneſs, wherein many were conſumed for their Rebellions and Unbelief, were taken and brought under Joſhuah into the Land of Canaan, the old Inhabitants being expelled, and reſted and dwelt there, after that they had bin long kept in the wildernes, even forty years, to the admiration of all men, although the work ſeemed impoſſible, even to the Iſraelites themſelves. Therefore that which is now propheſied of, ſhall alſo by Gods Almighty power be accompliſhed in his due time: For theſe words, Even Iſrael when I went to cauſe him to reſt, Hebr. it is, Iſrael, going to cauſe him to reſt. Where [I] muſt be underſtood, or the Lord] going before him in a fiery Pillar, and a Cloud, and by a divine power making way for him thorow Jordan, and into Jericho, by caſting down the ſtrong and high Walls thereof, and the reſt of the land by fighting from heaven for them.

Verſ. 3. The Lord hath appeared of old unto me. Hebrew from afar : But it may be underſtood, as in reſpect of place, ſo in reſpect of time; therefore this Tranſlation is good; and thus Calvin alſo renders it: and the Vulgar Latin hath it [Longè.] It is ſpoken as by Iſrael, in way of acknowledgement of the truth of that which was ſaid verſe 2. But yet as complaining touching the preſent, as if he had ſaid; It is true indeed, thou haſt of old appeared doing for me according to thine Almighty power; but what is that unto me now, I being in miſery and having no help? ſo Cald. Vatabl. Calvin. To this the Lord anſwers in the next words, I have loved thee with a perpetuall love ; therefore I have drawn thee with mercy; or, I have prolonged unto thee mercy. That is, I was not ſo gracious unto thee once and no more, but from time to time, delivering thee by Judges when thou wert oppreſſed, and after ſetting up Kings to fight thy battels, and to ſubdue thine enemies, as David, Aſa, Hezekiah, and Jehoſhaphat. Jerom, Raban, and Hugo expound it of Gods being far from their help, when they were deſtroyed by the Romans; Lyra, of the time, it will be long before the Lord appears for my deliverance, viz. at the end of the world, or of ſeventy years. But the true ſenſe hath been already given, and theſe agree not to the words.

Verſ. 4. I will build thee again. Having ſaid ſomewhat to eſtabliſh their faith of things done of old, now he cometh to the Prophecie, which is the ſame with Ch. 30. 18. onely verſe 5. and in the end of this verſe he amplifieth it, ſaying, Thou ſhalt again be adorned with Tabrets, and go forth in Dances, and there, there ſhall be the voice of Thankſgiving, and of them that make merry, verſe 19. Which is all one. And verſe 5. Thou ſhalt plant Vines in the Mountains of Samaria: Than which nothing is more chearing the heart.

Verſ. 5. For the next words, They that plant them ſhall eat them as common things, Hebr. it is חללו, They ſhall prophane them. For to prophane, and commonly to uſe a thing, is in the Hebrew phraſe all one; and becauſe eating is not proper in ſpeaking of the fruit of the Vine, but drinking, I ſhould rather render, The Planters ſhall commonly drink thereof, there ſhall be ſo great abundance. Calvin thinks, that the word prophaning is uſed either becauſe that by the Law trees were to be counted, as uncircumciſed, and ſo unſanctified to the fourth year; or becauſe the Heathens poſſeſſing that land ſo long, prophaned it and the fruits thereof. But of fleeing to ſuch reaſons I ſee no reaſon, ſith the ſenſe before given may ſuffice.

Calvin.

Verſ. 8. I will bring them from the North Countrey, and gather them from the Coaſts of the earth, the blinde, and the lame, the woman great with child, and in child-bed. By the North, is commonly meant Babylon; by the coaſts of the earth, all other parts where Iſrael was ſcattered; therefore here not onely the deliverance of the Jewes out of Babylon, but of all Iſrael from all other parts is propheſied of which ſhould be long after by Chriſt, for which he concludeth, verſe 9. ſaying;

I am

Verſ. 9. I am a Father to Iſrael and Ephraim is my firſt-born : For by this name was the Kingdome of the ten Tribes commonly called. For the great company that ſhould return, verſe 8. This further implyes the ſame, and is not unlike to verſe 19. of Chapter 30. For the blinde and the lame coming, which cannot the one ſort ſee, nor the other go; and great bellied Women,&c. This is added, to ſhew what manner of deliverance this ſhould be, viz. ſpirituall; of which the bodily blinde and lame are as capable as the ſeeing and ſound of limbs. But of this ſee enough before Chap. 3. 18. where Judah and Iſrael are ſpoken of as going together to the land given to their Fathers; ſo here; I am a Father to Iſrael, and Ephraim is my firſt-born; both the Kingdome of two Tribes, and that of ten may well be underſtood, Ephraim being called his firſt-born, in alluding to Jacobs bleſſing of Ephraim above Manaſſeh, though he were younger : thus making him as the firſt-born in preferring him before the other brother. Some reſolve the doubt, how Ephraim, that is, the Kingdome of the ten Tribes had this performed to it, Sanchez. (ſith none of Iſrael, but of Judah onely returned; and ſo they onely, Cordel. à Lap. ſome few of them received the Goſpel afterwards) by ſaying, that ſome of Iſrael lived mixed among the Samaritans, and ſo altogether would be counted the children of Iſrael; and accordingly it is here ſpoken of them, it being a prophecie of their Converſion to the faith, of which we read John 4. and Acts 8. and of their glorying to be called of their Fathers, as common to them and the Jews, in the womans ſaying to Jeſus, Our Fathers Worſhipped in this Mountain, becauſe Jacob had done ſo. However when they were converted, they might worthily be thus ſpoken of for their coming into the faith at the firſt, which makes God the Father of any people, and them his firſt-born, as being his heires. Rom. 8. 17. According to this it hath been fulfilled already in part which is here propheſied, and ſhall be perfectly, when there ſhall be a more famous converſion of all that Nation; as hath been before ſaid.

Verſ. 12. And they ſhall not ſorrow any more at all. From verſe 9. hitherto, he ſpeaks of a moſt joyfull time to come to Iſrael, that he ſhould be redeemed from the hands of a ſtronger then himſelf verſe 11. and this muſt be publiſhed to the Nations verſe 10. whereby is meant the deliverance from the devill by the death of Chriſt; for of him the Lord ſpeaketh, as a ſtrong man armed, and the publi- Heb. 2. 15. ſhing of it to the Nations is to none other end, but to ſhew, that the Goſpel, whereby this is effected, ſhould come to them alſo. And then all ſhould come together to the height of Zion, and ſing, that is, to the Church figured out by Zion, Eſa. 2. being filled with unſpeakable joy, for the Corn, Wine and Oyle, &c. That is, for ſpirituall comfort; which that we might the better underſtand, are ſet forth, under the names of Corn, Wine and Oyle, becauſe what theſe or any thing elſe here enumerated are to the body, the like is grace to the ſoul, yea the means of the Word and Sacrament, both which are ſet forth by Bread or Corn and Wine, and by Oyle the gift of the Holy Ghoſt, by the encreaſe of the Flock and the Herd, the encreaſe of the faithfull : or taking it as the words are; The young of the Flock; Fat Lambs, Kids, and Calves, which are delicious Meat; as the comforts of the Goſpel are ſet forth by a Feaſt of Fat things, Prov. 9. Mat. 22. Luke 15. And when it is thus, the ſoul is as a watered Garden : That is, wherein Rom. 8, 28. waters never fail to make it fruitfull, but abound continually, and ſo there can be no ſorrow any more, which is deſtitute of ſpirituall conſolation, for this, that God will turn all things to good to his. For verſe 9. he ſaith, That they ſhall come with Weeping and ſupplication : weeping for their ſins, and in thinking upon him whom they have pierced. And they ſhall go by the Rivers of Waters. Being the ſame with this of a watered garden; unleſſe we underſtand Baptiſm alſo herein intimated : thorow which all the faithfull go to everlaſting joy. And yet, as Calvin hath it, temporall bleſſings are alſo here promiſed; For godlineſs hath Calvin. the promiſe both of this life, and of that which is to come : 1 Tim. 4. 8. And the reaſon why the ſtate of the Church is outwardly no more proſperous, is for ſin abounding therein, and for particulars, that be truely godly, yet either they have their imperfections of covetouſneſs, too much love of the world, pride, or fleſhly luſts, that have need by croſſes to be corrected, or if they be perfect, as Job, God ſometimes draweth forth ſome of them, as his Champions to fight with temptations of great and grievous ſufferings, that his grace of faith and patience, and Chriſtian magnanimity and courage for the truth may ſhine the more in them, to draw others into an admiration of their conſtancy to their converſion, and the working of a greater weight of glory in the world to come, to ſuch ſufferers. And of this ſort were the Apoſtles and innumerable Martyrs in Note. the primitive time, and all the godly that in any place ſtill ſuffer by perſecutors, yet not meerly for conſcience, but for a good conſcience illuminated by the Word, and not by Enthouſaiſm, or a new pretended light, divers from the light of the Word, according to which If they ſpeak not, it is becauſe they have no light in them. Iſa.8.20. And it is not to be thought, but that the faithful did in like manner look at ſpiritual comforts, when all bleſſings of this life were promiſed to ſuch as keep Gods Commandments, and not at them only, as ſome think. For Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, Moſes and Joſeph with many more, of whom a Catalogue is made *Heb.*11. looked for a City not made with hands, for which they were moſt patient in their ſufferings, and remained ſtill elevated to heaven in their enjoyments of theſe worldly things when ever they moſt abounded with them, for which hear one David ſpeaking for all, Pſal. 47. Thou haſt put more gladneſſe into my heart, then in the time when corn and wine increaſed. And therefore being in exile, at what time he was debarred Pſal.42. from the comforts of the Sanctuary, he complains of this only, and not of his being driven from his ſumptuous Palace, treaſures wherewith he abounded, and royal ſtate.

Verſ.14. I will ſatisfie the ſoul of the Prieſt with fatneſſe. In ſetting forth the affluence of all worldly bleſſings, he mentioneth the Prieſts in particular, as a principal part of the ſtate, who amongſt the people of God alwaies fared the better, the more Gods bleſſings abounded towards the people amongſt whom they miniſtred and taught, by reaſon of tithes and offerings coming in in greater abundance, as in the daies of Hezekiah, 2 Chron.31.5. that was ſo greatly bleſſed, and the whole Kingdom under him; and alſo in the time of Nehemiah, Chap. 13. 12. For without Prieſts what doth any Nation differ from the Heathen? and when maintenance fails them, what heart can they have to ſtand in Gods houſe to miniſter? For when their tithes were not paid them, it is noted as a thing that much troubled Nehemiah. Chap.13.11. that the Prieſts were fled every one to his own field. Which would be conſidered by them that would put down this ancient cuſtom of paying tithes in our Kingdom, and introduce a benevolence, whereas if for any inconvenience eſpied herein ſuch a thing ſhould be done, it cannot be otherwiſe lawfull, but by converting them into money, and that not by deduction, but by addition, as of old it was by God himſelf ordered, that whoſoever would turn his Tithe into money, muſt adde Levit.27.31. a fifth part thereunto, even as in caſe of a treſpaſſe done to any man in reſpect of his goods, Levit.6.5. The Vulgar Latine, Inebriabo animam ſacerdotum, Hieron. expounded by Jerom of the Spirit, wherewith the Apoſtles were filled at the coming down of the holy Ghoſt upon them, *Act.*2. So that they ſeemed to many to be drunken, becauſe they ſpake ſo ſtrangely; and the word uſed properly ſignifieth to inebriate. But although this be principally intended, as in ſpeaking of corn, wine and oil, yet worldly bleſſings are not to be excluded, but to be taken in alſo, as pertaining to the faithfull, as hath been already ſhewed.

Verſ.15. A voice was heard in Ramah, weeping and lamentation. Here the Prophet to magnifie the mercy of God the more in the deliverance of Iſrael, makes a commemoration of their lamentable condition, when the ten Tribes ſet forth by Ephraim, were carried away into Captivity, from thence proceeding to propheſie of their return. Touching Ramah, ſome take it for an appellative, and render it an High-place, but it is better taken by others for a City in Benjamin, according to *Joſh.*18.25. of which read alſo *Judg.*10.19. and *Jer.*40.1.

Jeremiah being bound amongſt other Captives, was brought to Ramah, and looſed there. It was, ſaith Hugo, twelve miles from Jeruſalem, and the way to Caldea, and ſo it might be alſo to Aſſyria, ſeeing both are ſpoken of, as lying North. The meaning therefore is, That the caſe of the Kingdom of Iſ-rael was moſt lamentable, making, if it were poſſible, the dead to lament it.
For Rachel was dead many years before, being the beloved wife of Jacob, by whom he had Joſeph and Benjamin, two fathers of the Tribes of Iſrael, and that the principal, one of the ſons of Joſeph, Ephraim being the head of all the reſt, yet their mother Rachel by a Proſopopeia is brought in weeping for Verſ. 16. their miſery at that time. But as great as it was, and ſtill continued, he ſaith, Refrain from weeping, for thy work ſhall be rewarded, and they ſhall come again from the land of the enemy, Mat.2.18. This is applied to the children then ſlain in Bethlehem of Judah; for he ſaith, Then was fulfilled that which was ſaid by Jeremiah, A voice was heard in Ramah,&c. But it is to be underſtood, that it was fulfilled the ſecond time, and that more lamentably then the firſt, becauſe deth him ſet up way-marks; the meaning being nothing elſe, but that he ſhould not do as a man that goeth in a way, in which he never thinketh to go again; paſſe thorow it without once taking notice of any remarkable thing therein, whereby he may help himſelf to remember it, and go right when ever he cometh into that way again, but like one that makes account to return by the ſame, marks every thing, whereby his remembrance may be holpen at his return. And this he ſaith to quicken their faith, becauſe they were ſo hard of belief; as if a father ſhould ſay to his ſon, mark well this way, for thou muſt one day go by it again; ſo the Lord in thus ſaying aſſureth his people of their deliverance, although not altogether according to the letter, yet to the ſame effect, only a ſpiritual deliverance being underſtood by and thorow Chriſt turned unto. Jerom and ſome others will have it the ſame with that Iſa. 40. Prepare the way of the Lord, make his paths ſtrait. Hieron.

Verſ. 22. How long wilt thou go about, &c. The Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman ſhall compaſſe a man. The perſon to whom he ſpeaks thus, is called backſliding Daughter, by the word שובבה not much unlike to which is the word תסובב, Shall compaſſe, there being ſome Paranomaſie betwixt them. It is hereby implied, that it ſhould be long before that Iſrael would come in and imbrace the faith, being for many years firſt carried after a Meſſiah to come againſt the plain evidence of Scripture, Miracles and Heaven it ſelf, declaring Jeſus to be the man. But at length the vail ſhould be taken from before their eyes, that by the eye of Faith they might ſee this new wonderfull thing happening under the New Teſtament, of a womans compaſſing a man, that is, having him incloſed in her womb, ſhe being a Virgin, and having never known man. And this is generally underſtood of the Virgin Mary, bearing her Son Jeſus, for which the word גבר is uſed to ſignifie this man, that is, one ſtrong and mighty, becauſe he was ſo above all other men, as appeared by his mighty works. Calvin ſaith, That this is worthily derided by the Hebrews, and inventeth another, viz. the Jew, who was weak as a woman in compariſon of the Babylonian, ſhall yet prevail againſt him: But forſomuch as this was no ſuch new thing, as to be thus ſpoken of, for a greater wonder had been wrought, when Moſes compaſſed and ſtraightned Pharaoh ſo by his miracles, that he forced him to let Iſrael go, and the Jew indeed did nothing for his own deliverance out of Babylon, but Cyrus that mighty Champion; this of Calvin cannot ſtand. He alſo mentioneth another of the Hebrews, a woman the Synagogue or Church of the Jews, ſhall come about her man, or Husband God again by turning unto him. But before this is that of Oleaſter to be preferred, the Synagogue of the Jews being oft compared to a woman ſhall come about her man, or Husband Chriſt Jeſus at the laſt, by being converted unto him, whom ſhe ſo long moſt unkindly forſook, being yet moſt lovingly invited unto him, according to Cant. 3.2. I will riſe and go about the ſtreets of the City to ſeek him, whom my ſoul loveth; and Chap. 8.1. Pſal. 7.8. The congregation ſhall compaſſe thee. Iſa. 11.5. Righteouſneſſe ſhall be his Girdle, expounded by the Caldee, The righteous ſhall compaſſe him about as a Girdle. Calvin. Hebræi. Oleaſter.

Verſ. 23. Here and verſ. 24, 25. the Prophet returns again to ſpeak of the comfortable condition of the Kingdom of Judah, after their deliverance from the Babyloniſh Captivity, it ſhall then be ſaid thereof, The Lord bleſſe thee thou habitation of juſtice, and mountain of holineſſe, intimating that there ſhould be juſt Judges, inſtead of unrighteous Kings; of which ſee before Iſa. 1.26.

Verſ. 26. Then I awaked as out of a ſleep, and I ſaw, and my ſleep was ſweet unto me. Some expound theſe words, as ſpoken in the perſon of the people; ſome by Jeremiah, and ſome by Chriſt. Of the people who were buried, as it were, in a dead ſleep all the time of their Captivity, but then awaking they were comforted, as a man that hath had a ſweet ſleep. Of Jeremiah, to whom this unſpeakable comfort of the deliverance from Babylon, and after from ſin by Chriſt was revealed by dream, or of Chriſt, who is brought in thus ſpeaking after his paſſion, being paſt, and Vatabl. Iſidor.

Calvin. he raiſed up again to life, it was but as a ſleep unto him. Calvin will have Jeremiah his heavineſſe for miſeries of his people fore-ſeen hear meant, but foreſeeing alſo their deliverance, and the moſt joyful deliverance by Chriſt beforeſpoken of, all his former heavineſſe was but as a ſweet ſleep unto him, and this I prefer as beſt.

Verſ. 27. I will ſow the houſe of Iſrael, and of Judah with the ſeed of man. That is, Men and beaſts ſhall dwell in great multitudes upon their Land that is now deſolate.

Verſ. 29. They ſhall not ſay any more, The fathers have eaten ſowr grapes, &c. That is, being taught by the Spirit, and by experience how gracious the Lord is to repentant ſinners, they ſhall no more blaſpheme, as they had done, as if they were undeſervedly puniſhed for other mens ſins, but ſhould acknowledge, as the truth is, every one that is puniſhed to be juſtly puniſhed for his own ſins, and ſo lay no fault but on himſelf only.

Verſ. 31. Heb.8.8. I will make a new Covenant with the houſe of Iſrael, and of Judah. Here the Prophet returns again to ſpeak of the bleſſing under the Goſpel, and he calleth this Covenant or Teſtament new, becauſe of the new form thereof, and the Spirit given withall to the faithful to regenerate them, and the clear opening of things pertaining to ſalvation that were before vailed under types and figures. For it is the ſame in ſubſtance with the old: But for the manner, that was made by the bloud of beaſts, this by the bloud of Chriſt, and the ſignes of the Old were Circumciſion and the Paſſeover; of the New, Baptiſm and the Lords Supper. 2. The Spirit was not then given in a viſible manner, but now it was, both coming down upon Chriſt, and after upon his Apoſtles, and upon other faithful perſons alſo, although inviſibly, yet ſo as to be perceived by the new tongues wherewith they ſpake, and the power of working miracles, till the Church was planted in all known Countreys of the world, according to that promiſe Mark. 16.17. 3. The myſteries of the Kingdom of heaven were not then ſo clearly, but a little ſeen into, becauſe vailed under types of Temple, Altar, High-prieſt, the Sanctum Sanctorum, divers Waſhings and Sacrifices, but now are made evident. And as it is called the New Teſtament, not becauſe divers in ſubſtance, for the faithfull then through Gods mercy in Chriſt were ſaved as well as now, which is intimated in that Abraham was, and Luk.13.28. his ſon Iſaac, and his ſon Jacob, for they ſhall come from the Eaſt and Weſt, &c. and ſet down with Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of heaven; Rom.4. Gal.4. and to grace the faithfull under the New Teſtament it is ſaid, Abraham is father of the faithfull both of the Circumciſion and uncircumciſion; and again, we are after Iſaac children (not of the bond-woman but of the free) ſo the Old is not diſgraced in adding further in way of preferring the new: By ſaying, Verſ. 32. Not according to the old Covenant. For it is added to uphold the honour of the old ſtill inviolate, that their fathers made it void by their ſins, as they did alſo, not keeping it on their parts, as they ſhould have done, or elſe it could ſtand them in no ſtead. Now he ſaith that the ſame Covenant made anew in reſpect of the form, ſhould be no more irritable, or ſuch as could be made void, becauſe it ſhould not be with an whole generation coming of any one man according to the fleſh, but only with the truly faithfull of them, or of other Nations, who are children according to the Spirit, and in every one of their hearts the Law is written, and not in Tables of ſtone only, as Abrahams poſterity according to the fleſh generally had it, but without benefit for their tranſgreſſing it, whereas theſe in whoſe hearts it is written, do not promiſe fair only, or begin in obedience, and not perform or perſevere, but keep it conſtantly without declining to the right hand or to the left all their daies. Becauſe the Spirit that writes it in their hearts worketh ſo upon their ſpirits that they conſtantly keep and cleave unto it, and as Paul alwaies delight in it, neither can all the powers of hell prevail againſt them to make them do other- 1 Joh.3.9. wiſe, ſith the Spirit in them is as ſeed from which this good fruit ſpringeth, and is not coming and going, but abiding, ſo that they cannot ſin, and who can then aver, that one truly in the ſtate of grace may fall away and periſh?

And a man ſhall not teach his brother any more, ſaying, Know the Lord, &c. Verſ. 34.
The meaning is not, that under the New Teſtament there ſhall be no uſe of teaching, but it is thus ſpoken, to ſhew that the clearneſſe of the light now in compariſon of what it was under the Old Teſtament is extraordinary, as was before propheſied, *Iſa.*54. and is ſhewed Matth 4. 2 *Cor.*3. 2 *Pet.*1.19.
*Rom.*13.12. for the ſame felicity under the New Teſtament is publiſhed *Iſa.*2.
3. in a divers manner thus, one ſhall ſay to another, Come let us go to the houſe of the Lord, he ſhall teach us; whereas if here teaching were ſpoken againſt, there were a contrariety in the Prophets ſpeaking of the ſame thing. Therefore the meaning is only, as hath been ſaid before, Jeremiah propheſieth of the light of knowledge being more by farre, Iſaiah of the means how under the New Teſtament they ſhall attain to this knowledge, viz. by teaching in Zion, that is, in the houſe of God, whereas it is added, From the leaſt unto the greateſt they ſhall know me; He doth not, ſaith Calvin, hereby mean, that they who Calvin. are of leaſt knowledge ſhall know enough, and need to learn no more, but touching the firſt rudiments of Religion, That there is but one only true God, and that ſalvation cometh only by Chriſt to believers, which was not ſo ordinarily known under the Old Teſtament, ſo that even touching Iſrael it is ſaid, There is no knowledge of God in the Land, and they were then notorious Hoſ.4.6. for worſhipping falſe gods, according to the manner of the Heathen: Thus alſo Jerom, who addeth, That the knowledge of God here ſpoken of, is Hieron. the poſſeſſion of all vertues, to know him is to love, fear and worſhip him according to his will, not by mens precepts, and in ſincerity of heart, not in Iſa.29.13. hypocriſie. Wherefore this is not ſpoken of all generally, that profeſſe the Goſpel outwardly, but only of ſuch amongſt them, as in whoſe hearts the Law is written. All ſuch have both theorical knowledge in ſuch a meaſure as is neceſſary to ſalvation, being ſtill deſirous to hold what they have attained and to encreaſe it. And herein lieth their happineſſe, That the Lord forgiveth their iniquity, and remembreth their ſinne no more; Thus bleſſedneſſe is deſcribed *Pſal.*32.1. But here this promiſe is ſpecially made according to the caſe in this Chapter ſpoken of, the people of Iſrael, although in Covenant with the Lord, had him not ſo propitious unto them, but that for their ſins they were delivered into the hands of their enemies, and therefore ſuffered moſt grievous things many years together in Babylon, and afterwards, when Jeruſalem was deſtroyed by the Romans, but now coming into this new Covenant by faith, they ſhall no more be thus left to the will of their enemies, but the cauſe of miſery, their ſinne, being taken away, ſuch effects ſhould for ever hereafter ceaſe. For to ſhew that this is his meaning, he bindeth it by moſt vehement aſſeverations *verſ.*35,36,37. as if he had ſaid, The whole courſe of nature ſhall ſooner be overthrown then his reſolution to ſtand for his people Iſrael, to uphold them for ever, yet not for the whole body, but for ſome of them, as is implied in thoſe words, *Verſ.*37. I will not caſt off the whole ſeed of Iſrael: That is, ſuch as are Iſrael according to the Spirit, by faith and not in the fleſh only, and who theſe be, was ſhewed in the words before-going, I will put my Laws into them, and write them in their hearts. Therefore untill the Iſraelites come in to the faith, this promiſe ſhall not be fulfilled unto them, but then cometh forgiveneſſe when Jeſus comes by faith into the heart, and takes poſſeſſion there. Now this is not ſpoken, as if in the time of the Law the faithfull were not forgiven, and ſaved everlaſtingly, but becauſe this great benefit is peculiar to the Goſpel, and adventitious only under the Law.
For take the Law alone, and keep it in the exacteſt manner that one can, there will be no ſalvation, but damnation notwithſtanding, becauſe no man can keep it perfectly; but who ſo then by the eye of faith looked at Chriſt, as Abraham did, was ſaved even under the Law. The Apoſtle Peter, Heb.10.16. applieth this of the New Covenant to forgive ſins, to Chriſts ſacrificing of himſelf once for us, to the expiation of our ſins, whereas Sacrifices offered often for ſinne, were not of force for this end and purpoſe, becauſe if they had, they ſhould not have needed to be ſo after offered. And therefore it muſt needs follow that where ſinne is perfectly done away, the great judgement of giving a Nation into the hands of their enemies, God thus in wrath leaving them, as it were, is done away alſo. But eſpecially in reſpect of ſpiritual enemies this is fulfilled, where remiſſion of ſins is, devils have no more power to take and carry away captive into hell, then a Jailor hath over a malefactor that is by the Judge pardoned and acquitted.

*Verſ.*35,36,37. Here are three compariſons made to ſet forth the perpetuity of Gods favour towards Iſrael, 1. From the Sunne and Moon, 2. From the Sea, 3. From the profundity of the Earth, and the circumference of the heaven. For as the Sunne and Moon move round about the world daily, neither can this their courſe be ſtayed, and the Sea, though ſwelling with huge waves that came up to the ſhore higher then it, can yet go no further to the drowning of the earth, but is kept divided from it, ſo the mercy of God towards his cannot be ſtaied in the courſe thereof, but that they ſhall ever be ſaved from deſtroying judgements after the Covenant before ſpoken of once entred into, and as the heaven is by man unmeaſurable, and the earth cannot be dived into to the depth thereof, ſo ſhall Gods mercy be without all limitation of time.

Verſ.38. Here it is promiſed, That the City Jeruſalem ſhall be built again, according Jeruſalem again, is thus made, not to ſhew that it ſhould be of ſo great extent at their return out of Babylon, for then it was not ſo ample, and that which was, was demoliſhed again by the Romans, whereas it is promiſed that Lyra. this ſhall ſtand perpetually. Neither is the re-building of Jeruſalem by Elianus Adrianus the Emperor, calling it Elia meant, as Lyra would have it, for that ſtands not upon the old foundations, and ſo this deſcription agreeth not unto it, and little comfort was the building of that City to Iſrael, ſith not the Jews, but the Turks have that in their poſſeſſion. And much leſſe is a building to come meant under the yet expected Meſſiah, according to the Hebrews.

But a ſpiritual building, which is the Church, compared unto a City, *Mat.*5. built upon a rock and impregnable, *Matth.*16.16. and this building is thus ſet forth to ſhew the amplitude of the Church under the New Teſtament to be far greater then that of old Jeruſalem by the acceſſion of the Gentiles, as is made

THis Chapter is hiſtorical, 1. Shewing how King Zedekiah put Jeremiah in and therefore due order is not obſerved here no more then was Chap. 21. as I have noted there, yea Chap.39. goeth in order before this, as may there be ſeen ver.1. but not the reſidue of the Chapter, which declareth the accompliſhment of that which is here threatned.

Verſ. 7. Buy thee my field in Anathoth. Here the Lord by commanding Jeremiah to buy a field when the City and whole Kingdom was ready to come into the hands of the Caldees, and he was in priſon ready to be brought to execution, when the King would, ſhewed, as by a ſenſible ſign that the time ſhould come when the Jews ſhould poſſeſſe the Land of Canaan again, each one returning to his poſſeſſion. And according to the courſe of Law there, two writings were made, one open, the other to be hidden by Baruch, that which was open being then to be ſhewed for the comfort of the faithfull; the other hidden, to be brought forth and ſhewed at the end of ſeventy years for their further confirmation, to ſtirre them up with more confidence to return. The only doubt here is, How Prieſts or Levites, ſuch as Hananeel and Jeremiah were, could ſell and buy Land, ſeeing the Tribe of Levi had none inheritance? Sol. They had little paſtures about the Cities given them, according to their ſeveral Families out of the other Tribes, and he that ought one of theſe might ſell it; but in the year of Jubilee it returned again, unleſſe it were ſold to a Kinſman neareſt, and being made over to him it remained to him for ever.

Verſ.16. Jeremiah having bought the Land, as the Lord commanded, here prayeth, to continue in a ſafe and proſperous eſtate for ever, adding that he would put his fear into them, and that they ſhould be of one heart.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Verſ.2. HEre the word of the Lord is ſaid to have came to Jeremiah the ſecond time, whilſt he was yet in priſon, ſaying, Thus ſaith the Lord that made and formed it to eſtabliſh it, Hebr. Making, forming it, The word it, being of the feminine gender, for which moſt Expoſitors underſtand Jeruſalem hereby, and that either ſet up by God of old in that ſplendour by reaſon of the wals, towers, Temple and Palaces: For the Lord brought his people thither by a mighty hand, and by power given them from him the Jews and their Kings built it ſo magnificently: or to be re-built at their return out of Babylon out of the ruinous heaps into which it had been brought by the Caldees. And the word [Making, forming] will bear either. If it be taken the firſt way, as in the Preter-tenſe, this is the ſenſe, The Lord gave his people the City Jeruſalem once, taking it out of their hands that held it, when it ſeemed impoſſible, therefore they may well believe that he can reſtore it to them again, and becauſe he hath promiſed ſo much, will do it without fail. If it be taken the ſecond way, as ſpoken in the future, as Ierom renders it, the ſenſe is, He that hath promiſed to rear up the City again, is the Lord, whoſe power none can withſtand, and therefore it is not to be doubted; Thus Calvin; But Vatablus ſaith, Jeruſalem, ſet forth here by the word [it] is the heavenly Jeruſalem. Lyra going upon the Vulgar Latine which renders it, Qui facturus eſt, & formaturus illud, underſtands by it, the Kingdom of Chriſt, which was to be ſet up, which was the greateſt work of all others, and wherein the greateſt comfort of the faithfull lay, and divers places of Scripture are brought to ſhew, that the Feminine in Hebrew is often put for the Neuter, illam for iſtud. But this is in effect the ſame with that of Vatablus, forſomuch as the buſineſs of Chriſts Kingdom is the ſpiritual Jeruſalem, and conſequently the heavenly. And to prove this to be meant by it, let us look to the words following, *ver.*3.

Verſ. 3. Call unto me, and I will ſhew thee great and mighty things, which thou knoweſt not. For of their deliverance from Captivity, and the re-building of Jeruſalem in the ſame place, he and all the faithfull that heard him propheſying of it, had been ſo fully informed that they could not but know it, but of the Kingdom of Chriſt, and the forming of the ſpiritual Jeruſalem, the knowledge was not ſo eaſie, becauſe a thing moſt myſtical; and therefore although it alſo had been before propheſied of, yet it was not ſo known, but there was need of prayer to be further enlightned herein.

Verſ. 5. They come to fight with the Caldeans, but it is to fill them with dead bodies. To make way to ſpeak of the great thing that ſhould be done, wherein true comfort lay, he here fore-telleth, that their labour ſhould be but loſt in ſeeking by force to oppoſe the Caldees, for none other effect ſhould follow hereupon, but that ſuch as came to fight ſhould be ſlain, and ſo their dead bodies ſhould but ſerve to fill the places where.

Verſ. 6. I will bring it health and cure. After way made *verſ.*5. he now cometh to the prophecy of thoſe great and mighty things ſpoken of, *verſ.*3. I will bring health and cure unto them; from whence to *verſ.*14. he plainly ſpeaketh of the cure of the great wound made in that ſtate at the deſtruction of Ieruſalem which ſhould be at the end of ſeventy years, they being brought thither again out of Babylon. And of this ſo much hath been ſpoken already upon *Chap.*25. *Chap.*31. *Chap.*32. that I ſhall need to ſay no more in this place.

He reneweth his Prophecy touching Chriſt, of which alſo made in the ſame words I have ſpoken *Chap.*23.5,6, only whereas it is there ſaid, This is the name, whereby he ſhall be called, The Lord our Righteouſneſſe; here, This is the name whereby ſhe ſhall be called, The Lord our Righteouſneſſe, Hebr. And this which he ſhall call in her, The Lord our Righteouſneſſe; where the word זה This, hath manifeſtly reference to the word before-going Branch, and it is no more then if he had ſaid, this man whom the Lord calleth, The Branch, in Ieruſalem is otherwiſe called, The Lord our Righteouſneſſe; Vulg. This is the name which they ſhall call him. But not rightly, becauſe it is לה not לו and therefore even the Jeſuite in this controls the Vulgar, ſaying, that it is corrupted, and that many Copies moſt ancient for him had her, and therefore this is moſt generally followed, and this reaſon yeelded, why the Church ſhould be called, The Lord our Righteouſneſſe, as well as Chriſt, becauſe ſhe is one with him, and ſo whatſoever glorious Attribute or Title he hath, ſhe hath alſo, for that he hath it not ſo much for himſelf, as for her, according to that, He is made of God unto us wiſdom, righteouſneſſe, &c. and by ſome this, becauſe the Church hath this alwayes in her mouth, The Lord our Righteouſneſſe, I deſire to be found, not having mine own righteouſneſſe, but that of Chriſt by faith. Theſe I grant are good reaſons, if it muſt needs be ſo read, [He ſhall, or they ſhall call her] but forſomuch as it is לה, compounded of ל to or in, and ה her, it may better be otherwiſe rendred, as hath been ſaid, and then all doubt, why the Church ſhould be ſo called, is at an end, and indeed when all is ſaid that may be, it cannot but be acknowledged very improper and inſenſible too, to to ſay that the Church or Ieruſalem ſhould be called, The Lord our Righteouſneſſe, neſſe, Iehovah, as it is in the Hebr. a title incommunicable to the Church, though one with Chriſt, and peculiar to God alone. And therefore that Chapt. 23. 6. is commonly brought by ours to prove Jeſus to be very God, which would not be ſo ſtrong, if the ſame title were communicated to the Congregation of Beleevers alſo. Take we notice therefore of this other reading, as more agreeable to the words, and hold us to it; and ſo here is nothing ſaid, but what Chapt. 23. 6. and from both places ſo well agreeing, we ſhall be double fortified to evince the divinity of Chriſt, and confound the Arrian.

Verſ. 17. David ſhall never want a man to ſit upon the Throne, neither ſhall Levi want a man to offer burnt Offerings. Having ſhewed in what ſafety they ſhould be at the raiſing up of the branch, the Lord our righteouſneſs; now he further deſcribes him to be a man, as well as Jehovah, and a King deſcended from David, to whom the Lord had long before promiſed, that his Throne ſhould continue for ever; and not onely a King, but a Prieſt to offer Sacrifice; but the Sacrifice offered by him was himſelf, Hebr. 7.9.10. Whereas he ſaith, that David ſhould not want a man to ſit upon his Throne; Hebr. A man ſhould not be cut off from ſitting, The meaning is not, that there ſhould be a continuall ſucceſſion of Kings for ever without interruption, but that although the ſucceſſion were interrupted about five hundred years from Zedekiah to Chriſt, giving occaſion to doubt, whether there ſhould any King more of Davids line ever ſit upon his Throne, yet one ſhould come and be King, and reign for ever and ever; and ſo David after this ſhould never want a man, &c. And the ſame being a Prieſt for ever, after the Order of Melchiſedech, Levi ſhould never want a Prieſt to offer Sacrifice, or to burn Incenſe; becauſe Chriſts ſacrificing of himſelf once, is more than equivalent to the dayly perpetuall Sacrificing, which was uſed of old by the Prieſts upon the Brazen, and to the Incenſe likewiſe daily offered upon the Golden Altar. And in theſe two Orders of King and Prieſt ſtands the perfect happineſs of Iſrael, for defence againſt enemies, and ſubduing them as King, and for propitiation with God in reſpect of ſin, as Prieſt. It is therefore without ground in the Papiſts, that will have Prieſts ſtill to offer Sacrifice propitiatory for the quick and the dead, and Incenſe, and one to be as King, of Kings over the Church, viz. The Pope of Rome, pretending to reign in Chriſts ſtead. For this is nothing elſe but intollerable pride and arrogancy, and in effect a giving Check-mate unto Chriſt, who alone without Vicars liveth ever to reign, and to make Propitiation for our ſins, 1 John 2. 1. Of the interruption of Davids Kingdome, ſee Ezek. 21. 26. The reſidue of the Chapter from verſe 20. to the end, is added onely to confirm further what is here promiſed of the perpetuity of Chriſts Kingdome, who was the Son of David.

CHAP. XXXIV.

IN this Chapter is the threatning of Zedekiah, that he ſhould come into the hands of the King of Babylon, ſpoken of before Chapter 32. as the cauſe Verſ. 2, 3. why he put Jeremiah in priſon. But here it is further added, that he ſhould not dye by the ſword, but in peace, and be honourably buried in Babylon. Of the Verſ. 4, 5. accompliſhment of the Prophecie of his dying in Babylon; ſee Chapter 52. 11.
But whereas it is ſaid, that he ſhould dye in peace, nothing elſe is meant, but that he ſhould dye his naturall death; which D. Kimbi ſaith, was ſoon after Nebuchadnezzar; but Joſephus, in his time, and that he was by him honourably buried, being kept in priſon till the day of his death. Some following a tradition Joſephus l. 10. Antiq, c. 11 of the Hebrews ſay, that Nebuchadnezzar upon a Feſtivall day, cauſed him to be brought out of priſon, and amongſt his Princes cauſed a laxative drink to be to be given unto him, which he having drunk, purged ſo, that he was made a deriſion to them all; and therefore returning to priſon again, ſuch ſhame and grief ſurprized him, that he dyed ſoon after; and then Nebuchadnezzar being moved with compaſſion, to make him ſome recompence, cauſed him to be honorably bu-

Lyra. T.Aquinas. Dionyſ. Calvin. ried, by burning ſweet Odours, as is here ſaid : and Lyra expounds that of Habbakkuk 2.14. Woe to him that giveth his neighbour drink. Of this although very partially, ſeeing it is meant of all that favour drunkenneſs ſo, as to give to one cup after cup in exceſs. Calvin moveth a queſtion here, becauſe it is propounded by way of ſome conſolation, Thou ſhalt not dye by the ſword, Whether a violent death be alwayes worſe than a naturall ; for it ſhould ſeem not, becauſe it is oft-times with leſs pain, and leſs ſinfull, and to ſome ſalutiferous, as to Martyrs, and Malefactors, as an wholſome medicine, by repentance healing them of their ſins : but contrariwiſe, ſome that dye a naturall death, rave and curſe through impatience, and ſpeak idlely, and ſometimes blaſphemouſly, thus increaſing their ſins. This made Caſar the night before he was ſlain in the Senat, in private diſputation to maintain, that it was beſt to dye a violent death ſuddenly : And he anſwers well, that generally to dye a naturall death is to be preferred, becauſe it is leſs formidable, is a ſigne of the favour of God, and giveth time to ſet things in Order ; for which it is ſpoken of as the death of the righteous, Pſalme 37, 37. and dying by the ſword is often threatned, as a thing moſt dreadfull in this Prophecy. Yet it is to be accounted of, as the quality of the perſon dying is, If he be faithfull, he is not the leſs bleſſed by dying a violent death, and if he be wicked, he is not the more happy for dying thus in Peace. And the ſame is to be held touching burials ; to have an honourable buriall is of it ſelf deſirable, as being a thing, wherein a man is ſhewed to differ from a beaſt ; whereas in his dying there is no difference, becauſe as a beaſt dyeth ſo dyeth a man ; but when the beaſt is caſt forth as dung, and the man is buried ; this ſheweth one that ſhall riſe again to glory, the honour done to him at his buriall being a ſigne thereof. But if the faithfull lye unburied, this diſhonour ſhall be turned into a greater honour ; and the honourable buriall of the wicked ſhall nothing benefit them ; as it did not Dives, of whom we read, that he was buried, but Lazarus not. Object. What comfort then was it to Zedekiah being a wicked King to hear of a buriall, and dying his naturall death ? Sol. God might yet turn his heart before his death, and then it was a ſigne of Gods favour reſtored unto him ; and the very hearing of this might in time work upon him to make him repent, that he might enjoy it. For the burning of ſweet Odours to him, according to the manner of his Anceſtors, The Vulg. rendring it, They ſhall burn there] is neither right according to the Hebrew Text, which is לָךְ. to thee ; nor according to the courſe of their dealing amongſt the Jews with their dead Kings. For although the Romans and other Nations uſed to burn the bodies of the dead, and to put their aſhes in an Urn, and ſo lay them up ; yet the Jewes did not, but onely burn ſweet Odours about them, hereby to dry up the humours, that might cauſe ſtink, and then to lay them into their Sepulchers, as we may ſee 2 Chron. 16. 13. touching Aſa : but Chap. 21. 19. the like is ſaid not to have been done to Joram a wicked King. 1 Sam.31. 12. Yet the men of Iabeſh Gilead burnt Saul and his ſons being dead, and buried their bones : But of theſe things ſee before in my Commentary in their proper places.

Verſ.8,9. From hence to the end of the Chapter, there is an intimation, how that when Nebuchadnezzar with his huge Hoſt beſieged Jeruſalem, Zedekiah proclaimed liberty to ſervants, according to the Law Exod. 21. 3. and that the Princes hearing of it, and all others alſo, whom it concerned, gave their ſervants liberty to depart, coming into the Lords houſe, and ſolemnly binding themſelves by covenant, as to do it now, ſo to continue doing from time to time hereafter. For it ſeemeth, that howſoever they were hardened in other ſins, yet they had ſome ſenſe of this as the cauſe why the Caldees came to bring them under, becauſe they kept their brethren the Hebrews under, when they had ſerved ſix years, contrary to Gods Law. And therefore they reformed this abuſe ; and it ſeemeth, that it ſucceeded accordingly : the Caldees were hereupon cauſed to depart by the coming of Pharoah King of Egypt againſt them : For of this it is written Chap. 37. 5. But they were no ſooner out of that fear, but againſt the Law and their Covenaut made before the Lord, they compelled their diſmiſſed ſervants to return and ſerve them again, being herein moſt injurious unto them, and branded with the black brand of perjury towards the Lord. For this ſo foul a ſin, Ieremiah here threatneth, That the Caldees ſhall come again and burn the City, and take the King and his Princes. And he aggravates their ſin by this, that they brake their Covenant made in paſſing between the parts of the Calf divided, Verſ.18. wherein it is alluded to that which was done Gen. 15. by Abraham taking at Gods command an Heifer of three years, a Goat and a Ram, and dividing them Gen.15.17. into parts, laying one againſt the other; after which done a ſmoak, and then a bright Lamp paſſed between them. From hence it is likely that his poſterity in making Covenants did the like, paſſing between the parts, and praying if they kept not the Covenant now made, that they might be thus cut in pieces, and miſerably periſh. All which notwithſtanding they brake this Covenant, and therefore are threatned. The Romans uſed a like Ceremony in the time of their Heatheniſm, cutting a Sow in pieces, and imprecating themſelves, if they proved perjured. Touching Servants, and whether we may now a dayes have any ſuch, as are called ſlaves, after the old manner, and the manner of the Turks and other Nations, enough hath been ſpoken upon Exod. 21. and 1 Cor. 7. it is plain, that the Goſpel enjoyneth not ſetting ſuch at liberty, but rather commandeth each one to continue in that calling, wherein God hath called him, whether it be bond or free.

CHAP. XXXV.

IN this Chapter Ieremiah is bidden to bring the Rechabites into a Chamber of the Houſe of the Lord, and to ſet Wine before them, and to bid them drink; but they refuſed, becauſe Ionadab the Son of Rechab their Father had laid a charge upon them not to drink Wine, or to plant Vines, or to ſow Fields, or to build Houſes, but to dwell in Tents; and hereupon to upbraid the wicked Jews for their diſobedience to God, and to ſhow, how juſtly they ſhould be puniſhed therefore. Of Ionadab, the Son of Rechab, we read before 2 Kings 10. in the Hiſtory of Iehu, who lived three hundred years before this, which was anno 4th of Iehojakim, whereby the way we may note again, that things ſaid and done in this Book are not placed in order; but things done and ſaid in the reign of Zedekiah, who was after, are ſet before things in the time of Iehojakim, intimating, that the Sermons or Prophecies of Ieremiah were not by him written and placed in order; but being collected by others, ſet down, as he did, and ſpake them without reſpect unto due order, as not being ſo materiall. But to return again to Ionadab the Son of Rechab. Who Rechab was, ſee 1 Chron. 2. 55. where ſpeaking of Suchathites, that is, dwellers in Tents, he ſaith, Theſe are the Kenites, that came of Hemath, the father of the houſe of Rechab. And the Kenites are further ſet forth, Judges 1.16. to be the children of Moſes, his Father in law, the Kenite, who dwelt in the wilderneſs of Iudah, in the ſouth of Arad amongſt the people. Now Moſes his Father in law was Iethro, *Exod.*18. And of Kenites we read again Iud. 4. where Iael the wife of Heber, the Kenite, is ſpoken of. And they had this name of Cynei, or Kenites from Cyn the Father of Raguel, or Iethro Moſes his Father in law; thus for their Pedigree. For their quality, it ſeemeth, that they were Shepherds anciently, and dwelt in Tents, not being uſed to works of husbandry, as planting, plowing and ſowing, and therefore they drank no wine, but that which came of their flocks, viz. Milk, and eat Butter and Cheeſe, buying their Corn whereof they made Bread. And by this means having leiſure, they gave themſelves much to the ſtudy of the Law, and were Scribes expert therein; for which they are called, The Families of the Scribes that dwelt at Iabez, 1 Chron. 2. 55. And of their dwelling in Tents, and drinking Milk, and eating Butter; ſee Iudg. 4. where Siſera coming into Iaels Tent, it is ſaid, that ſhe gave him Milk to drink, and Butter to eate. And as they were learned in the Lawes of God, ſo one of them, viz. Ionadab, is ſingularly noted 2 Kin. 10.

to have been eminent for piety, when King Iehu would have him come up into his Chariot, and ride with him to ſee his zeal for the Lord; and of him they ſay here, Ionadab the Son of Rechab our Father. So that it ſeemeth, he was the firſt that injoyned them to live in this abſtemious manner, as their Progenitors had accuſtomed to do in former times and ages without any injunction. And the rather becauſe he ſaw the wickedneſs of the Iſraelites, amongſt whom they lived, to be ſo great, that they could not long continue, and that Wine and delicious fare was a cauſe of corrupting them by drunkenneſs, and gluttony and buildings made ſo ſumptuouſly by pride. He alſo ſaw that they were a divided State, and hereby made the more weak, and that the Syrians, Ammonites, Moabites, and Edomites were ready to take advantage hereupon againſt them. Now that his poſterity might be the better prepared to endure a change, when it ſhould come, by being inured to hardſhip, and to remove, when they could no longer be in one place, to another, after the manner of the old Nomades, he laid this injunction upon them, to go on conſtantly in ſuch a courſe of life as wherein their Fore-fathers had lived, promiſing that in ſo doing, they ſhould live long in the Verſ. 7. land, wherein they were ſtrangers. Wherefore he did not hereby condemne ſimply planting Vines, or drinking Wine, ſowing or building houſes; but onely preſcribed a rule for them to walk by in reſpect of theſe outward things, that was moſt convenient for them; and it was well done of them herein to be obedient. Whereas the Papiſts, as Calvin ſaith, do hence infer, that the Children of the Church ſhould likewiſe obey and keep all her Ordinances, beſides the Word of God: The Anſwer is eaſie; theſe were onely civill Ordinances about things externall, the foundation whereof is laid in the Word, which commendeth temperance, humility, and to be ſequeſtred from worldly buſineſſes ſo much as to be free to divine Contemplations, and to endure hardſhip, as giving 1 Cor. 9. advantage to the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, which by delicate and full fare will get the predominancy over the ſpirit. And therefore they cannot from hence reaſon to ſuperſtitious obſervances of days, and at ſometimes refraining from fleſh, the uſe of other things being permitted, as a matter of Conſcience; much leſs to the worſhipping of Images, the adoring of the Hoſt, the invocating of Saints departed, praying for the dead, croſſing againſt evill ſpirits, holy water, &c. Onely here is a ground of obedience in civill things to Rulers in a civill reſpect. And whereas this is made uſe of by the Jeſuite, to prove a Monaſticall life lawfull, becauſe the Rechabites obeyed their Father Ionadab, ſo they obeyed the Fathers of their Order: the Rechabites tilled not the ground, but lived in abſtinence, and vacancy from labour bodily, that they might be free to divine Contemplations; ſo Friars, and Jeſuites: When he cometh to the Rechabites having wives, but theſe having none, he hath nought further to ſay; yea, and by his leave there is a further vaſt difference between Rechabites and Friars, who will drink Wine liberally and dwell in ſumptuous buildings, to ſay nothing of their other enormities.

Philo. Of theſe Rechabites, ſaith Philo, were the Eſſees, a ſtrict Sect amongſt the Jewes, living in Deſarts, and faring hardly, amongſt whom John the Baptiſt was brought up, as I have ſhewed upon Matthew 3. and what their opinions were. For the Prophets calling together of the Rechabites to the Lords houſe in a Chamber there to offer them Wine, and that in the Chamber of one, who is ſaid to be a man of God; this was done moſt probably, that it being done ſo publickly, might be the more divulged over the City to the moving of all to repentance that ſhould heare it. That whereby the Prophet ſeeks hereupon to make them aſhamed, is, that they obeyed their Father a mortall man, but the Jewes would not obey God. 2. They obeyed him in a thing harſh and unpleaſing to the body, the Jewes not God, requiring onely things that might eaſily be done, and in reaſon ſhould rather be done for a worldly good, as well as for a ſpirituall. 3. They obeyed a man after his death ſo many years; when as if they had diſobeyed, he could neither reprove, nor puniſh them for it, or know it; but the Jewes obeyed not God, ever living to reprove and puniſh them; and being alwayes near unto them, to ſee all their paths, and all their wayes. And all theſe Pſal. 139.

CHAP. XXXVI.

HEre Jeremiah is bidden in the fourth year of Iehojakim to write his Prophe- Verſ. 1. cies againſt Iſrael and Judah and other Kingdoms in a Book. And he calleth Verſ. 3,4.
Baruch his Scribe unto him, commanding him to write them, and then to go to the Houſe of the Lord upon the Faſt day, and to read them before all Judah; Verſ. 5,6. becauſe he was ſhut up and could not go. Here divers doubts occur. 1. What is meant by Jeremiah his being ſhut up, becauſe he was not put in priſon by Jehojakim, but by Zedekiah who reigned after him, Chap. 32. 3. And the words of the Princes here following, verſe 19. Go and hide thee, both thou and Jeremiah, evince, that Ieremiah was now at liberty to go to ſome ſecret place, and not in priſon. It is there moſt commonly held, that his ſhutting up here ſpoken of, was nothing elſe but the Lord reſtraining him by the Spirit, ſo that he could not go. 2. What Faſt day is meant, when he biddeth him read it upon the Faſt day, when all Judah ſhould be come together to Jeruſalem; becauſe that after this, verſe 9, 10. a Faſt is proclaimed in the fifth year of Iehojakim, in the ninth moneth, and Baruch readeth it then? It is apparent, that there is here a Metatheſis, or tranſpoſition of things; that which was done firſt being placed laſt; for the Faſt was firſt proclaimed in the time whilſt Baruch was writing, or ſo ſoon as he had done, although he began in the fourth year of Iehojakim, and this Proclamation came out the fifth year; for it might be at the latter end of the fourth year that he begen to write, and the Proclamation made at the beginning of the fifth, although not to take place till the ninth moneth thereof, that in all parts they might have time to prepare to come to Jeruſalem And before Iehojakims fifth year, he had been terrified by falling into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar, viz. the third of his reigne, Dan. 1. 1. Therefore having by ſome compoſition obtained his Kingdome again, it is moſt probable, that for fear of ſuffering again by the Caldees, he proclaimed this Faſt, although a moſt wicked King, placing confidence in an outward obſervance without turning by repentance from his ſins. Wherefore the Prophet takes the opportunity of the day, for the publiſhing of his Prophecies, as thinking, that the people would now if ever be wrought upon to turn; and now Baruch ſhould be ſure to have a great multitude reſorting thither from all parts to read it to them, to the better effect. 3. Another doubt here is about the time of writing, in the fourth year of Iehojakim; in which year Nebuchadnezzar is ſaid to have come againſt him, being the firſt year of his reigne; and yet Daniel 1. 1. it is ſaid in the third year of Iehojakim that he was carried to Babylon: But of this ſee before Chap. 25.1. Another doubt is, How the Prophecies of Ieremiah, from the ninth year of Ioſiah his reigne could be ſtill to write, whenas Chapter 30. 1. he was bidden to write them in a Book before? But although that goeth before, yet it appeareth Chap. 29. that it was after, becauſe Iehojakim was firſt carried away Captive, who reigned after Iehojakim; and it was not a Prophecie of threatning, which he was then commanded to write, but of a moſt gracious promiſe of bringing them out of Captivity and unſpeakable bleſſing in Chriſt to be beſtowed upon them. 5. Becauſe Baruch writeth, and then goeth and readeth in the publick place, that the people might be converted; whether one mans reading of another mans weak

Sermon be not hereby juſtified, and whether bare reading of the Word of God be not available to Converſion? and laſtly, whether not reading a mans own Sermon as well as uttering it memoriter? I anſwer, in want of a ſufficient Preacher, it is better to hear one read, than to be without; or for one ignorant and unable to adventure himſelf to preach. 2. To read the Word by Gods bleſſing may be available to convert, but to read and preach upon it far more; and the like is to be held of reading a mans own Sermon; and therefore every Preacher is to be ſtirred up rather to preach memoriter, as Chriſt and the Apoſtles did, and not by Book, which in ſtead of reverence in hearing is apt to move contempt and ſlighting, as arguing a great defect in the Preacher, making him inſufficient for his Office.

The part of the Temple, wherein Baruch read, was the Chamber of Gemariah Verſ.10. the Scribe, in the upper Court, in the entrance of the new Gate. Of which new Gate ſee before Chapter 26. 10. Of Chambers in the Lords Houſe, Chap. 35.4.
Here in the door, as the word ſignifieth, he ſtood and read to the people being in Verſ. 16. the Court, that they might heare when Baruch had read, the Princes being told of it, ſend for him, and cauſe him to read the ſame to them; and when they heard they feared, and ſaid, they would tell the King. So wicked men fear ſometimes in hearing of Gods judgements, but this their fear is not to repentance, but to plunge them more into ſin, by ſeeking to ſtir up perſecution againſt Gods faithfull ſervants. The fear of man works more with them than the fear of Note. God; they thought if theſe things ſhould come to the Kings eare, and they not firſt tell him thereof, they might come into the danger of his diſpleaſure; therefore although they beleeved theſe threatnings to come from God, which made them to fear and tremble; yet the fear of the King did preponderate this fear, ſo that it took none effect in them to work repentance in their hearts. Wherefore he that would fear God, and his wrath, ſo as to eſcape it, muſt not fear man, as is expreſſed Matth. 10. 28. For theſe two fears cannot poſſibly ſtand together.
For Falix alſo trembled in hearing Paul, but he was infalix in this, that he ſoon ſhaked off this fear again, and kept him ſtill in priſon to pleaſe the Jews.
Theſe Princes were yet moved ſo, that they were deſirous, that both Baruch and Verſ.19. Ieremiah might be kept out of the Kings danger, &c. Therefore they councell him to go and hide himſelf, and to bid Ieremiah to do likewiſe: For they knew, that he was a Tyrant, and upon the hearing of theſe Prophecies would ſeek to ſlay them, becauſe he had done the like before to Uriah, Chapter 26. 20. So other wicked men have ſometimes ſome good affections; but they are too Note. weak to work unto true repentance to ſalvation, and they ſhall periſh notwithſtanding.

Verſ.20. As the Princes had threatned Baruch, ſo they did, they went and told the King, and he hearing ſome of the Rowle read, cut it with a Pen-knife, and caſt it into the fire, ſome of them yet praying him not to do ſo: And he ſent to take Verſ. 26. Jeremiah and Baruch, but the Lord hid them: That is, by his Providence they hid themſelves ſo, that their Perſecutors could not find them out, as ſometime Elijah was hid from Ahab. It is alſo hereby intimated, that the Lord directed them to this hiding, giving warrant hereby to others his faithful ſervants to flee likewiſe, and to lye hid in time of perſecution, that being preſerved, they may ſtill live to glorifie God in the courſe of their Miniſtery. Some think, that the Lord held the eyes of the Perſecutors ſo, or made them inviſible that they could not ſee them, though they came into the houſe where they were.

Verſ.27. Then the Lord commanded Ieremiah to ſay to the King, that although he had burnt that Rowle, yet he ſhould not eſcape the judgements therein threatned, but dye an evill death, and be caſt out, as was before threatned, Chap. 22. and Verſ.30. then he cauſed the ſame words to be written in another Rowle, and added more thereunto, ſome of which are here recorded, that his dead body ſhould lye expoſed to the froſt and heat, and that none of his ſhould ſit upon the Throne; becauſe that although his Son Iehojakin reigned in his ſtead, yet it was but three Moneths, which was as nothing, and none of his poſterity ever reigned after;

but

but Zedekiah his Uncle, and yet God failed not of his promiſe to David, that he ſhould not want a man for ever to ſit upon his Throne, as hath been ſhewed upon Chap. 33. 17. Note, that wicked men get nothing by reluсting againſt the the Word of God, and perſecuting his Prophets that come with it unto them; but by thus doing, intangle themſelves more and more, as one that goeth amongſt Bryars: for Gods Word ſhall ſtand, and being impugned ſhall prove yet more terrible to the impugners, of what rank or quality ſoever they be.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Verſ. 17.

IN this Chapter is ſhewed again, what was done in the dayes of Zedekiah. Nebuchadnezzar, that had beſieged Jeruſalem, hearing of Pharoah with his Army coming againſt him, brake up his ſiege, and went to encounter with him. Now the King before this, had in the time of his danger, proclaimed liberty to Servants, according to Chap. 34. 8, 9, 10. But the Caldees being gone, every one compelled his Servants to return, and ſerve again, as thinking themſelves out of all danger of the Caldees return to the ſiege. Wherefore Jeremiah threatneth that the Caldees ſhould return, yea, though they were all wounded men, and burn the City. And having ſaid thus, he offered to go out of the City into the land of Benjamin, but was ſtayed by a Captain of the Ward, who took him, and brought him to the Princes, who put him in priſon in the houſe of Jonathan the Scribe, where he lay many dayes in great miſery. Then the King took him out privately, asking him touching the Word of the Lord; and he freely told him of nothing but deſtruction, unleſſe he yielded to Nebuchadnezzar: Then Jeremiah requeſting it, was not ſent back to the former priſon, but to the Court of the priſon, an allowance of bread being dayly given unto him.

Note.

Touching the going of Ieremiah into the Land of Benjamin; it is to be underſtood, that Anathoth, the City whereof he was an inhabitant, was there, and ſo in offering to goe thither, when he ſaw that he could do no good at Jeruſalem, by threatning and exhorting them to repentance, but was dayly in danger of being impriſoned, and cut off, he did nothing but what he might well juſtifie, and therefore took the opportunity of the ſiege being broken up. But when the ſervants of God doe nothing but well, the devill hath his inſtruments ready to lay hainous things to their charge; from which although they purge themſelves, yet they make them ſuffer, as Malefactors, moſt grievouſly.

Chap. 34. 5, 6.

Touching the Kings humanity to Ieremiah, although he would not obey his Teaching, it went not altogether unrewarded: for as we before promiſed, although he were carryed into Babylon, yet he dyed in peace, and had an hononrable buriall.

Verſ. 13.

Whereas it is ſaid, that Ieremiah went from Ieruſalem, to ſeparate himſelf from thence in the midſt of the people. Expoſitors differ much about it, going upon the word חלק, to divide; ſome thinking, that it is meant of his going to Anathoth to divide his land there amongſt his Kinsfolk. But there is no colour of reaſon for this; for the dividing here ſpoken of is nothing elſe, but as it is tranſlated, his ſeparating himſelf from the place, which he knew ſhould be deſtroyed, going away for this end amongſt the people, that he might not be ſeen and ſtayed, although he miſſed of his end.

Verſ. 16.

2 Cor. 11. 26.

For his being put into priſon, the word ſignifieth as well a Sepulcher, as a priſon, which is moſt dark and horrible to be in; for which it is rendred, and a Dungeon, and therein were ſeverall Cells, called here Cabbins, into which whoſoever was put, could not be put to more miſery. Such they had at Athens, called Barathrum, and at Syracuſe called Latomiæ, into which men were ſhut to be long in dying, at Rome Tullianus; there was alſo a Priſon or Dungeon called Cizicemus, otherwiſe named profundum maris; of which Beda thinks that Paul ſpeaketh, when in reckoning up his ſufferings, he mentioneth this for one, In the depth of the Sea. But that is onely his conjecture, for it is not in the depth of the Sea, but in perils by Sea. For the place into which Ieremiah was now put by the Kings favour, it was not to be ſhut up, as before, but to live in more liberty in the Court of the priſon, where he might have the comfort of the aire, and Verſ. 21. was provided for whilſt bread laſted in the City, and where in all probability there might be ſome reſort unto him of people to hear, and to be ſtirred up by him.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

JEremiah abiding in the Court of the priſon, where the King cauſed him to be put, continued freely to propheſie of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and of the people, if they would not yield to the King of Babylon, but of ſafety to them that yielded, as he had done long before, Chap. 21. 9. yet not ſo long, as Calvin by miſtake would have it, who ſaith, that it was above twenty years before that the Prophet ſpake thus; for Ch. 21. 1. it is ſaid to have been in Zedekiah his time, when Nebuchadnezzar made war againſt him, and therefore moſt probably in the ninth year of Zedekiah, Chap. 39. 2 Kings 25. when Nebuchadnezzar came firſt to beſiege Jeruſalem, before his departing at the hearing of the Egyptians coming; after which it is moſt probable, that he was now come again to renew the ſiege, which from the firſt to the laſt was not above one year and ſix moneths; and therefore it was but little above a year agoe ſince Ieremiah firſt ſpake thus. But now moſt probably he renewing the ſame Prophecie in the eares of all that came unto him into the Court of the priſon; and the Princes Verſ. 1. hearing of it, ſome of them who are here named, go to the King, and accuſe Ieremiah as an enemy to the State, ſaying, that he was worthy for this to dye. And it is indeed an hainous thing for any Subject to perſwade any of his fellow Subjects to fall from his King to his enemies, and therefore he that doth it, is worthy to dye. This is true ordinarily; but for a Prophet, as Ieremiah was, ſet up by God above Kings, to declare his purpoſe againſt them, and to ſhew them the way of eſcaping, it was neceſſary to ſpeak thus; and if Ieremiah had not, the greateſt of all had before threatned to ſlay him, Chap. 1. 17. And therefore it was in him ſo far from being a crime, that he deſerved to be hearkened unto by the King and Princes, and to have been well rewarded for his faithfulneſſe. But example is not from hence to be taken by the ordinary Miniſters of Gods Word in any caſe to perſwade the people to fall from their own King to another, or to any that go out as enemies againſt him and his Kingdome. When theſe Princes Verſ. 5. had accuſed Ieremiah to the King, he tels them, That the King could do nothing againſt them; and therefore he ſaith, That he was in their hands, not that it ought ſo to be, for the King is ſupream, and all others even Princes are ſubject to him. But Zedekiah for his wickedneſſe, and his Princes alſo for theirs, were now left of God, and ſo all things grew into confuſion. Yet it appeareth, that he held his Supremacy ſtill; becauſe that having left Ieremiah to his Princes, and they dealing ſo outragiouſly by him as to put him into a miery Dungeon, where he was in danger of ſoon dying miſerably; when he heard of it, he ſent and took him out, and placed him where he had been before; neither did the Princes herein oppoſe him, as the following part of the Chapter ſheweth.

Verſ. 7. Then Ebedmelech an Ethiopian went to the King ſitting in the gate of Benjamin.
This is a thing greatly to be noted, that there was not one Prince or other of the Jewiſh Nation, that was moved at the cruelty uſed againſt the Prophet of God; onely a ſtranger being an Eunuch in the Kings houſe, was affected at it, and ſought his deliverance, which tended to the utter diſgracing of the Jewes, who bare themſelves upon this, that they were the holy ſeed, and Gods peculiar people; all others being baſe and vile in compariſon of them; yet now one Ethiopian had more piety towards the man of God in him, than they all. And his love and piety is the more commended by this, that he ſhewed himſelf thus for Ieremiah againſt the Princes, that were of ſo great power, and ſo openly, not ſpeaking to the King for him privately in his houſe, but openly, when he ſate upon the judgement ſeat in the Gate; for there were the Tribunals commonly amongſt the Jewes. So that he was without fear of the Princes, and of the envy of the people, who almoſt all hated Ieremiah, in doing this. But God, who ſtirred him up to it was with him ſo, that he prevailed with the King, although ſtanding in awe of the Princes, as appeared before. Yet now he is alſo moved with compaſſion, and bids him take with him thirty men, and go, and pull Ieremiah out of the Dungeon; which he did accordingly, not fearing a greater power, that the Princes could eaſily have made againſt him, and ſo took him out in the beſt manner that he could deviſe. A notable example, teaching us wherein true Religion ſtandeth, viz. in love, and doing for thoſe that are in miſery: as alſo the Samaritan is by our Lord brought for an example, who had compaſſion on the wounded man, when as not one Jew; no, not a Prieſt or Levite would ſhew him any pity. Again, note for our incouragement in doing good, that when humane reaſon ſhewed him ſo many difficulties, for which it might ſeem impoſſible for him to effect this, as the power of the Princes with the King, the hatred and danger that he ſhould incur by attempting it, and the enmity of all the Jews in the Gate, before whom he muſt ſpeak, if ever, becauſe otherwiſe it might be too late, Ieremiah being dead with hunger, cold, and the noiſomneſſe of the place; yet he, all theſe notwithſtanding, attempted it, and prevailed to his everlaſting fame, and obtaining great favour with the Lord, as we may ſee Chap. 39. 15.

Note.
Luke. 10. 30.
Note.

Again note, that God hath the Kings heart in his hand, and turneth it as the rivers of water; he was before ſo puſillanimous, that he durſt do nothing, although he had ſome compaſſion towards the Prophet in him: but now he taketh courage to ſend a power, whereby to deliver him, that we may never ceaſe praying for our King, that God would turn his heart, when it is ſet upon any evill way.

Note:

Laſtly note, that one man, even contemptible and obſcure may ſometime be an inſtrument of great good, if he takes courage to attempt it when need requires, that none may be faint-hearted about things ſo neceſſary, but put on to ſpeak, although he may ſeem to himſelf the moſt unfit amongſt many more, and ſo he may incur the danger of his life; which is alſo further exemplified in Eſter. King Solomon ſaith, that this man was a ſervant of the Kings, as the word Ebedmelech ſignifieth; and that this was not his proper name; and whereas it is rendred, The Ethiopian, he renders it, The Servant of the King, the Ethiopian, in the genitive Caſe, as if the King, and not he, were called the Ethiopian, or Blackamore, for his black and foul manners: as Amos 7 9 it is ſaid to the Jews, Are ye not the Children of Ethiopians to me? But there is no need here to flee to any ſuch Expoſition, but to take it as our Expoſitors generally do, Ebedmelech the Ethiopian. For the word Eunuch, it was ſpoken of before, Chap. 29. 2. Courtiers, that weited upon the King and Queen in their Chamber, were according to the common cuſtome of other Nations called Eunuchs, that is, gelded men, whom they ſerved ſo, that they might without ſuſpition attend upon Queens, and Kings Concubines: but of the Iſraelites it was not lawfull to geld any, Deut. 23 1. But this man might be an Eunuch indeed, as the word ſignifieth, becauſe he was a ſtranger; and that even in Iſrael there were many ſuch, we may gather from Iſa. 56. 4. of whom Kings and Princes ſerved themſelves, being brought from other parts, and ſold unto them.

Note.
K. Solomon.

This Ethiopian is by Ambroſe made a figure of the Gentiles, black by ſin, who lifted up Chriſt, figured out by Ieremiah, when the Jewes had caſt him as it were into the Dungeon, and made him ſtick in the mire, by their calumnies and cruell uſage of him; for then the Gentiles believed in him, and extolled him as their Lord, and moſt mighty Saviour and Redeemer. And whereas old rags are taken by Ebedmelech, that Ieremiah might put them under his armes, when he was by Ropes to be drawn out of the mire, that he might not be hurt; ſo ſaith Gregory, by old examples of the faithfull, that patiently ſuffered grievous things, we we ought to comfort other faithfull perſons now, as Paul doth *Heb.*11.

Verſ. 14. R.David. Vatabl. Lyra. Dionyſ. Then the King ſent and took Jeremiah to him into the third entry of the Lords houſe. That is, ſaith R.David and Vatablus, to the third gate, which was right over againſt the Kings houſe, although Lyra and Dionyſius underſtand the third Court, for there were three, firſt of the women, ſecond of men, third of Prieſts; the firſt ſeemeth to be beſt. Here the King ſecretly asked Jeremiah again, as he had done *Chap.*37.17. and he not being terrified by all that had been done to him, ſaith the ſame that he had before done, exhorting the King to yield to the Caldees: a notable example to be followed by all Gods Miniſters, and finally the King chargeth him not to let the Princes know what he ſaid unto him, but to tell them only that he petitioned the King that he might not return to Jonathans houſe to die there.

Verſ. 19. But in the way to this, *v.*19. The King ſaid to Jeremiah, when he moved him to yeeld, that he feared the Jews already revolted to the Caldees, leſt, if he yielded, he ſhould be delivered into their hands, and be made a mocking or laughing Calvin. Note. ſtock. For ſuch is the condition of Subjects, as Calvin noteth, towards their King, when they have once broken their faith to him by going to another, joyning to fight againſt him, that conceiving their fault to be unpardonable, they are unwilling ever to be reconciled to him any more; and therefore they carry themſelves ever after towards him, as enemies, abuſing him, if he cometh into their power they care not how; but againſt this Jeremiah ſecureth Verſ. 22. him in the name of the Lord. And *verſ.*22. The women ſhall ſay, Thy friends, Hebr. Thy men of peace; That is, Thy Counſellours pretending to ſeek thy peace and good, have infatuated to hold out, Till thy feet ſtick in the mire, and be turned backward, that is, in the mire of miſery, and thou beeſt turned from the ſucceſſe, and ſafety hoped for by doing according to their counſell, the clean contrary befalling thee, as *verſ.*23. plainly ſheweth. Then the conference being ended betwixt the King and the Prophet, he adviſeth him to conceal what communication had been betwixt them, only willing him to ſay, Verſ. 25. that he made requeſt unto him, that he might not be ſent again into the houſe Note. of Jonathan, of the priſon wherein ſee before Chap. 37. and Jeremiah, when the Princes came about him to ask, did accordingly. See here the miſerable caſe that Kings bring themſelves into by their ſins, for Zedekiah becomes therefore of a King only an image of a King, all the power being in his Princes, and he being overawed by them, ſo that he durſt not either do or ſpeak any thing, that might diſpleaſe them, that every King may take warning, and live in the fear of God, and obedience to his Laws, as Deut. 17. for ſo their Subjects ſhall be made to fear and obey them, otherwiſe they ſhall be brought to that condition, that they ſhall fear their Subjects, as Zedekiah did. And if any King hath overſeen himſelf, ſo that he is now fallen into ſuch miſery, his only way to get out again, is to lie down and patiently to bear it, as the ſcourge of God, as Jeremiah exhorted him to do by yielding himſelf to Nebuchadnezzar, and as Jechoniah had done, and therefore was finally exalted 2 *King.*25. And as Lupus Biſhop of Rome, in the dayes of Attila the King of the Goths is ſaid to have done, when he came againſt Rome, for the Biſhop going out of the City to meet him, asked, What he was: the King anſwered, Flagellum Dei, The Scourge of God; he replied, Come in then thou ſcourge of God, and we ſhall patiently bear the ſtrokes, ſo ſetting open to him the gates of the City, into which he entring went thorow it and out again, not doing any hurt unto it, or the inhabitants thereof. For Jeremiah his concealing all other things, but his Petition to the King, it may ſeem blame-worthy in the Prophet, ſo much to diſſemble, and it is in him taxed by Calvin, but others better, rather juſtifie him, as having thus petitioned the King, although it be not related, and ſo he ſaid nothing but the truth, not being bound to reveal other ſecrets unto them. And if he made not this Petition now, yet he did it very lately, *Chap.*37.20. and it was a good providence of God that the Princes would herein reſt ſatisfied, ſeeing it ſtood not with reaſon that the King ſhould ſend for him only, that he might offer a Petition unto him, but for ſome other end.

Verſ. 28. And he was there till Jeruſalem was taken Hebr. It was accordingly, Jeruſalem was taken; for the words are היה כאשר It was according to that, that is, which Jeremiah had ſpoken from the Lord. And theſe words are put by the Septuagint to the beginning of the next, as making way to the Hiſtory there.

CHAP. XXXIX.

IN this Chapter for ten verſes is ſet forth the ſame Hiſtory with that 2 Kin. 25. Verſ. 3. and therefore I ſpare to ſay any thing more upon it in this place. Only verſ. 3. a thing not there recounted is ſet down, viz. that the Princes of the King of Babylon ſat after their coming into the City in the middle gate, moſt probably to ſhew themſelves maſters of the City, that being a tribunall, where Judges that had the rule of the Land uſed to ſit. Calvin. Calvin thinketh, that they ſtayed here only out of warineſs, that their men might firſt go into all parts of the City to ſee whether it were empty, or any ambuſhes were ſecretly laid any where. Touching the middle Gate, it is to be underſtood, that Jeruſalem was walled about with two wals, in either of which was a Gate, the ſecond of which was oppoſite to the Gate of the Temple, and therefore is called the middle Gate. Here ſat Neregal Sereſer, which words ſignifie Præfectus theſaurorum. For Ser or Sir ſignifieth Maſter, and Otſar, Treaſure: Semegarnabu, Præfectus unguentariorum, and Rabſares ſignifieth the ſame. Neregel was alſo Prince of the treaſure, as the firſt Rabmeg, Princeps liquoris; Some will have them to be proper names of his Princes without reſpect to their offices.

Verſ. 10. It is ſaid, That he gave the poor vineyards and fields the ſame day. 2 King. 25. He left the poor to dreſſe the vineyards, &c. The meaning being the ſame, for he gave them theſe to husband for the King of Babylon, and out of them to pay him tribute. And the Scholaſtick Hiſtory, according to Joſephus, ſaith, That the Rechabites ſpoken of Chap. 35. were ſome of theſe, but the courſe of their life being expreſſed not to plant vineyards or to till the ground, makes for the contrary, yet it is probable that they were left, as a kinde of people given to contemplation, and poor, and ſo not to be feared to ſtirre up to any rebellion, and this agreeth with the promiſe of their father recounted Chap. 35. 7. and with that of the Lord v. 19. of the ſame Chapter.

Verſ. 11. Here is ſomewhat added, which was not before 2 King. 25. viz. the charge given by Nebuchadnezzar to his ſteward Nebuzaradan touching Jeremiah, who thereupon took him out of priſon, and delivered him to Gedaliah to carry him home, of which Gedaliah, 2 King. 25. it is ſaid, that he was by Nebuchadnezzar made Governour of the Land. Now the promiſe made to Jeremiah, Chap. 15. 11. I will cauſe the enemy to entreat thee well, took effect to his comfort after his great and grievous ſufferings ſo long a time, to the encouragement of every faithful Paſtor, when he ſhall look at the end.

Verſ. 14. From hence to the end of the Chapter is a Prophecie of comfort to Ebedmelek; of whoſe piety ſee before Chap. 38. he promiſeth to him, whilſt he was yet in the Court of the priſon, that he ſhould not die by the ſword, as the Kings Princes, but that his life ſhould be ſpared, becauſe he truſted in the Lord, as did notably appear in his adventuring his life to life, the life of Jeremiah againſt the conſpiracy of all the Princes. For he that doth thus ſheweth a great deal of confidence in God, and indeed he ſhall be in the way of ſafety, when all others are in danger of deſtruction, in confidence whereof to encourage us to adventure in the like caſe God hath cauſed this to be ſet forth in this place.

CHAP. XL.

Verſ. 1. Chap.39.14. Chap.39.5. Note.

T*He Word of the Lord that came to Jeremiah, after that Nebuzaradan had let him go free from Ramah.* The Prophet having ſummarily ſhewed before, that he was delivered out of priſon to go with Gedaliah into Judea, now he declareth more at large how the ſaid Nebuzaradan proceeded with him. He was firſt carried bound out of the court of the priſon to Riblah in the Land of Hamath, together with other Captives, of which place ſee before *Chap.*31.15. But the carrying of him thither in bonds was not to aggravate his miſery, but that there in the ſight of his Countrymen he only might be ſet free, when they were all carried away into Babylon to ſervitude, that now at length they might acknowledge him to be a true Prophet of God, for whom he ſo wrought by his providence above all others. For although ſome more were ſtill left in the Land, yet it was not as free-men to go whether they would, but to live there as ſervants to the Caldees. Whereby we may ſee, That one day the true ſervants of God ſhall be dealt otherwiſe by, then the wicked of the world, theſe having the comfort of liberty, and a reward in the Kingdom of heaven, theſe being carried Captive into everlaſting confuſion: That the righteous may be encouraged, and the wicked deſpiſers of them and their admonitions, terrified in time ſo as to repent, and eſcape that judgement, otherwiſe they ſhall be vexed then the more by this, that when they go into miſery they ſhall ſee thoſe whom they have deſpiſed and perſecuted moſt highly advanced, as Haman ſaw poor Mordecai, whoſe deſtruction, and the deſtruction of all his cognation, he moſt eagerly ſought, through the hatred he had unto him: Whereas he ſaith, The Word of the Lord that came to Jeremiah, but tels not what this word was in all this Chapter, nor the next, he may ſeem to have forgotten himſelf. But his meaning is nothing elſe, but as if he had ſaid, After things done and ſpoken from the Lord, related *Chap.*39.14. whilſt the City remained untaken, I will now come to ſhew, what word I had from the Lord time after time, when the City was taken and burnt, and I being carried away with other Captives was ſet at liberty, only I will firſt declare the circumſtances of my enlargement, and then come to ſhew what this word was *Ch.*42.7, &c.

Verſ. 2. Note.

And it is remarkable here, that Nebuzaradan ſpeaketh ſo piouſly, The Lord thy God hath pronounced all this evil againſt this place, becauſe ye have ſinned againſt him, and now he hath brought it to paſſe. A ſtrange ſpeech to come from an Heathen man, but God uſed his tongue to ſay thus, the more to confound the Jews that were guilty of that which he charged them withall, that now at the leaſt in their miſery they might be moved to repent, which they would not do in their proſperity, as Balaams Aſſe ſometime rebuked his fooliſhneſs. Thus even prophane men that know not God, may for their own ends ſpeak the truth of God ſometimes, when ſuch as profeſſe him do things moſt contrary, as the Legion in the man poſſeſſed ſaid to Chriſt, I know thee Whom thou art, even the Sonne of God, but God would have theſe things to be ſpoken by them to convince the wicked hypocrites in his Church the more, and to make them aſhamed. In ſaying, Becauſe ye have ſinned, he meaneth not Jeremiah, as one of them, for he knew that he was the man by whoſe Miniſtry this evil was pronounced, and that he was faithfull to execute his prophetical Office in denouncing this judgement, not fearing their threatnings, or being diſcouraged by their falſe prophets, pretending revelations from God, as well as he, and therefore he ſetteth him free, verſ. 3. and diſmiſſeth him not unrewarded. But Jeremiah being now amongſt the reſt, he ſpeaketh to them together, directing his ſpeech to Jeremiah, as the man who had often in the perſon of the people confeſſed their ſins, and prayed for the averting of this great judgement out of his moſt affectionate love towards them. It doth not therefore argue a godly man ſometime to ſpeak piouſly, for as we ſee, even Heathens can do ſo to ſerve their own turn, and the devil himſelf alſo.

Verſ.5. Calvin. Act.8. Galv. 1 Sam.9.8. 1 King.14.

Nebuzaradan is not only ſaid to have ſet Jeremiah free, but alſo to have given him victuals and a reward. Whereupon a Queſtion is moved by Calvin, how the Prophet could lawfully take a reward, which Eliſhah would not do of Naaman the Syrian, leaſt he ſhould ſeem to ſet to ſale the gifts of the Spirit of God, a thing determined by Peter to be ſo odious before God? and ſaith, That for victuals, or proviſion for the way, as the word ſignifieth, he had preſent need thereof for his ſuſtentation; but touching the gift, it is not to be conceived, that it was any great matter, to enrich him, as Naaman offered to Eliſhah, but ſomewhat wherewith to buy him neceſſaries for food or cloathing, after he was gone from him, being by the Princes hard uſage of him made poor and needy, as of old they uſed when they came to a Seer to bring ſome little gift unto him, as we may ſee in the example of Saul and his ſervant going to Samuel to enquire after the loſt Aſſes; And in Jeroboams wife going to the Prophet Abijah. But it is not neceſſary to yield that Nebuzaradan gave him a gift or reward, becauſe the word משא ſignifieth both a reward, and the elevation of honour, haply by diſmiſſing him with reverence, as a man of God. Yet neither muſt it needs ſeem to be ill done of Jeremiah to take a gift, as a kindneſſe before promiſed that he ſhould finde at the enemies hands, Chap. 15.11. after his own peoples uſing him ſo harſhly, becauſe hereby Gods favour promiſed unto him was made good, for which it was not by him to be refuſed, but to be taken with thankſgiving as coming from God.

Verſ.6. Lyra. Hebræi.

Then Jeremiah went to Gedaliah in Mizpah. Gedaliah was a great and wiſe man of the Jews, who upon the admonition of Jeremiah went to the Caldees, and therefore was now by Nebuchadnezzar ſet over the Jews that remained; So Lyra and the Hebrews. And we read of Abikam his father, Chap. 26. 24. that he once ſtood for Jeremiah being in danger of his life, and therefore his ſon is now thus preferred. Mizpah was a City on the border of Judea in the way to Babylon, and therefore moſt fit for him to dwell in; but of it ſee before in my Expoſition upon 2 *King.*25.26.

Verſ.8. Lyra. Toſtat. T. Aquinas. Chap.41.1.

Iſhmael the ſonne of Nethaniah, and Johanan, and Jonathan, Captains, came to Gedaliah. Theſe are called Captains, becauſe the Government of Cities had been at the Caldees coming committed unto them and their men for their defence, but they, it ſeemeth ſoon fled for fear of the enemy, leaving the Cities and lurking about in the fields, till the Caldees were gone, but now both they and others that had fled into other countreys, returned to Gedaliah, although Iſhmael, as afterwards appeareth, came with a deceitfull minde, being ſet on by the King of the Ammonites to kill him. For the reaſon, it is thought by Lyra, Toſtatus, Thomas Aquinas and the Hebrews, becauſe he was of the bloud royal, and therefore envied Gedaliah this honour, and becauſe he had ſo baſely revolted to Nebuchadnezzar, thus inſinuating into his favour to be made Ruler of the Land, thus laying an evil imputation of treachery unto him for his obedience to God, who had by his Prophet warned all that would be ſaved from deſtruction to go out to the Caldees. Gedaliah ſecures the Captains that came unto him, as by ſwearing to them verſ.9. ſo verſ.10. by bidding them go and gather the Summer-fruits, as not fearing any enemy, and to dwell in the Cities, which they had taken, he in the mean ſeaſon abiding at Mizpah to ſtand for them againſt all hoſtile attempts that might be made by the Caldees. In ſaying, The Cities which ye have taken, he meaneth not taken by force, for all the Cities of Judah then lay open, but the Government whereof they had formerly taken upon them, but had lately fled from; thus he ſhewed all love and kindneſs to them, although he were ill-requited by one of them that came to him as the chief.

Verſ. 13.

From hence to the end of the Chapter is nothing elſe ſet forth, but Johanans and the other Captains coming from their fruit-gathering to which Gedaliah had diſmiſſed them, to certifie him what they had heard as moſt certain, that Iſhmael had conſpired with the King of Ammon about his deſtruction, wherefore they adviſed him to beware of that Traitor, and Johanan offered to go and kill him, but Gedaliah being over-confident of his fidelity, would not ſuffer him, and thus he ſoon had an end put to his life and government by Iſhmaels treachery, as is ſhewed *Chap.*41.

CHAP. XLI.

IN this Chapter the Prophet goeth on in relating the Hiſtory of Iſhmaels treachery againſt Gedaliah the Governour, according to the warning given him thereof before Chap. 40. And the time is noted, viz. the ſeventh moneth, that is, three moneths after the taking of Jeruſalem, as we may ſee, *Chap.*39.2.

Verſ.5. Here is ſhewed, how after the killing of the Governour, and the men with him, and the Gariſon left there of Caldeans to guard him, he proceeded to exerciſe more barbarous cruelty amongſt eighty men that came from Samaria, Sichem and Shiloh, with Offerings and Frankincenſe in their hand, weeping, their beards ſhaven, their garments rent, and their fleſh cut, to offer in the houſe of the Lord: for he met them, and feigned ſorrow likewiſe, by weeping for the common calamity, and ſaid, That he would bring them to Gedaliah, Joſeph. l. 10. *Antiq.*c.11. but when he had them in the City, he cruelly ſlew them. He with his ten companions the Captains that came with him, had not only ſlain Gedaliah before, but alſo many others, as hath been ſaid, which as Joſephus ſaith was done thus, They ſlew Gedaliah at the Supper, to which he had kindly invited them, and all the Jews about him, then going out in the night, the Caldees, being ſecure, and not fearing any enemies, and all others that they found in the City. Otherwiſe it were ſtrange that eleven men ſhould kill ſo many. Touching theſe eighty coming together to offer in the houſe of the Lord in ſo lamentable a manner, a Queſtion may be moved, How it happened when the City and Temple were deſtroyed, three moneths before the one, and two moneths the other, they ſhould now come to make Offerings there? Some anſwer, That they yet knew it not: but this is improbable, becauſe Shiloh, from whence ſome of them came, was but twelve miles from Jeruſalem, and the lamentable caſe wherein they came, alſo evinceth, that they knew it, this being the cauſe Lyra. Calv. of ſo exceeding great grief unto them. Lyra and after him Calvin therefore acknowledge, That the deſtruction of the City and Temple was not hid from them, but that ſeeing it was ſo, that no Offerings could now be made there, they came with their Offerings to Mizpah, as a place famous of old for the worſhip done to God upon an Altar there. But forſomuch as we read not of any Altar now re-erected in that place, and it is expreſly ſaid, That they were bent to go with their Offerings to the houſe of the Lord, which could be none other, but the Temple at Jeruſalem, it is rather to be held with ſome others, that they came to Mizpah to Gedaliah, as the Governour, at his direction to go from thence to Jeruſalem to make their Offerings in the place where the houſe of God ſtood, although it were now burnt down, ſuppoſing haply that it was not ſo burnt, but that an Altar or ſome part thereof might be ſtanding ſtill, whereupon ſuch Offering as they carried might be offered, if there were any Prieſt with the Ruler in Mizpah: for it was מנחה a Meat offering and Frankincenſe only, no Sacrifice. And that they might think to go thither to lament the deſtruction of the City and Temple, and to pray even after the Hieron. deſtruction of both, is not improbable, becauſe, as Jerom ſheweth upon *Zeph.*1. the Jews uſed to come ſometimes to the place where the Temple ſtood, after the deſtruction thereof by the Romans, and there to lament it, giving money to the ſouldiers that kept it, to have leave to come and do ſo. For their renting their garments, and coming in a pitiful manner, herein they did nothing ſtrange, but as was uſual in thoſe parts in time of extream ſorrow: but for Levit.19.27, 28. cutting themſelves, this was forbidden to the Jews, as being the manner of the Heathen, or to cut the corners of their beards, How was it then juſtifiable in theſe men to do ſo? Calvin anſwers, That they did it not after the manner of the Heathen in an artificial manner, or affecting to do ſo for imitation of them, but being by extream ſorrow forced hereunto, and to move others to ſorrow. But forſomuch as there is no ſuch expreſſion of the Heathen Levit. 19.28. another ſolution, I conceive, may be better, either to acknowledge an errour in theſe men through ignorance of the Law in thoſe blinde times, or a tranſportation through paſſion to exceed in their outward expreſſions of ſorrow, unleſſe it ſhall be thought that charge given Levit. 19. & Deut. 4. is to be reſtrained to the caſe of ſorrowing for the dead, not extending to a caſe of ſuch a publick calamity as this. The Vulgar Latine to avoid this Queſtion leaveth out that of cutting themſelves, and ſpeaketh only of their beard cut, their garments rent, and their being ſqualidous. But what moved Iſhmael to this unparallel'd cruelty towards ſo many innocent men? Verily nothing, but his pride, diſdaining that Gedaliah ſhould be preferred above him whenas he was of the bloud-royal, and by theſe mens coming to Gedaliah he perceived them to be ſuch as put themſelves under his protection, therefore to ſtrengthen himſelf the more to get the Government into his own hands, he thought it good policy to weaken Gedaliah his part, as much as he could, and to this end he inſinuated himſelf into them by feigning the like grief by weeping alſo, to make them the more ſecure, whereupon Gregory, The Devil transforms himſelf into an Angel of light, to deceive and deſtroy the ſervants of God even in their approaches unto him, getting into their hearts, when they are in their devotions, and even then killing them, ſo that they had need to be very circumſpect and carefull to keep him out, by not ſuffering any by-thoughts in their mindes at the time of Prayer. The ſubſtance whereof I have from Gregory, but to expreſſe it in theſe words, I thought fitteſt for the better underſtanding.

Note.

Gregor. 1. Moral. 38. Iſhmael plorans eſt Satanas, qui ut devotas mentes interimat ſe quaſi ſub velamine virtutis occultat, & dum concordare ſeverè lugentibus ſimulat ad cordis intima ſecurius admiſſus, hoc quod intùs de virtute latet, occidit. Divinis ergo operibus dedita mentes, niſi magna ſe circumſpectione cuſtodiant hoſte ſurripiente dum devotionis hoſtiam portant, in ipſo itinere vitam perdunt.

Verſ. 8.

Amongſt the eighty men againſt whom Iſhmael raged ſo, there were ten that pleaded for their lives, ſaying, We have wheat, barley, oyl and honey hidden, and ſo were ſpared. Whereby we may ſee, that greedineſs of gain wrought as well with him, as ambition and cruelty, in that he ſpared the lives of theſe men for the benefit which he hoped to reap by them. Wheat and barley, Heb. are words of the plural number, to ſhew a great quantity, whereof theſe conſpiratours might have need enough in that time of famine. For thoſe that were ſo unworthily ſlain, and for Gedaliah, a good man likewiſe ſlain before, it may ſeem ſtrange that God ſhould ſuffer goodneſſe and piety to be ſo ill rewarded: but it was for the beſt to them, they were but thus taken away from greater evils that followed ſoon after, Johanans oppoſing the Prophet Jeremiah about going down into Egypt, and the great miſeries afterwards ſuffered by all that went to ſojourn there. Thus Calvin, whereunto we may adde, That in reſpect of outward things, All things fall out alike unto all, to the righteous and the wicked: ſo that one may be unjuſtly murthered as well as another, and Cain is ſuffered to kill Abel for the aggravating of his ſinne and condemnation, and the encreaſe of his recompence of reward: and there can be no greater happineſſe then to die as theſe men did, in the time of their true and hearty devotion to God and his ſervice, as a Captain cannot die more honourably then ſtanding, a Souldier fighting, a Paſtour teaching or praying.

The men ſlain by Iſhmael he caſteth into a pit made formerly by Aſa King of Judah. This pit or lake is not ſpoken of before 2 Chron. 16. where the Hiſtory of Aſa is ſet forth, but only of ſtones taken by Aſa from Ramah, which Baſha had built againſt him, and therewith building Mizpah and Geba, whereby we may ſee, that in the general terms of building or repairing theſe Cities, doing ſomething elſe the more to fortifie them was alſo meant, which is thought by Calvin to have been the building of a Tower with ditches about it in the midſt, that if the enemy ſhould at any time break in, he might be able to goe no further, but have his courſe there ſtopped, and the Citizens might be therein ſaved. But Lyra, Raban, Hugo, take it to have been a pit made and wrought deep and ſtrong, bound about with Stone and Lime to hold water; that upon a Siege they within might be the better able to hold out, and not be forced to yield for want of Water, as ſometimes it happeneth, that they of that place are; and this is moſt probable, becauſe a Tower in the midſt of the City is not uſefull for defence, as at the end thereof, to keep Enemies from entring.

Verſ. 10. Then Iſhmael took and carried away into the Ammonites Land the people that remained, and the Kings Daughters. Moſt probably, he had by this time many ill-affected perſons that reſorted to him, by whoſe help he was able to doe this. And touching the Kings Daughters, here is nothing ſaid repugnant to the Hiſtory Chapter 39. where Zedekiah his ſons are ſaid to have been ſlain before his face; for nothing is there ſaid of his Daughters, they it ſeems were left with Gedaliah, but now by their own kinſman, who was full of all wickedneſſe, carried with many more of his own brethren, Jewes, into the Ammonites Countrey, to ſuffer there, God knowes what miſery and contumely. It ſeems, that he had made a League with the King to doe this, that there being little force of reſiſtance left in Judea, he might come and bring that Kingdome under his Dominion alſo, Iſhmael having large promiſes from him of ſome Principality under him there to effect it, which made him thus active.

Verſ. 11, 12. But this Tyrant having raged hitherto, vengeance now ſleepeth not, for he is purſued by the Sons of Kareah, Captains before ſpoken of, and their men, and overtaken at the great waters and Gibeon, he haply making ſome ſtay there to refreſh his Company. But his Captives ſeeing the new forces coming, revolted from him, together with all ſuch as had formerly taken part with him, ſo that he was inforced to flee into Ammon with fewer men by two, than he had brought with him to Miſpah, which could not but be more ſhame to him before the King of Ammon, and vexation to his proud heart, than death it ſelf.

2 Sam. 19.

Verſ. 17. Johannes the Son of Kareah, having recovered the Captives, returned no more to Mizpah with them, but went to the habitation of Chimham near Bethlehem, to go from thence into Egypt. The word rendred habitation, is גרות, which Calvin takes to be a proper Name, reading it, Geruth Chimham. And ſo the Septuagint, and Tigur. Tranſlation: The Vulgar Latin, Peregrinantes in Kimham: But if the word be taken appellatively, it is, In the Peregrination of Kimham: That is, where Kimham, the Son of Barzillai, went with David when he returned, after Abſoloms deſtruction, to Jeruſalem; for David having found Barzillai a kinde friend unto him in the time of thoſe his ſtreights, would have had him to goe to Zion with him; but he being very aged refuſed, and commended unto him his Son Kimham, whom David accepted; and as Joſephus ſaith, gave him a village near Bethlehem, being ever ſince called Geruth Kimham.

CHAP. XLII.

THis whole Chapter, and the next, is one continued Hiſtory, ſhewing the addreſſes of Johanan, and of the other Captains to Ieremiah, in deep diſſimulation, deſiring him to pray for them, and to conſult with the Lord, and promiſing, with calling God to witneſſe, that whatſoever anſwer he ſhould return, whether pleaſing or diſpleaſing, which they meant by good or evill, they would imbrace it, and do accordingly: But Ieremiah having prayed, and within ten dayes received anſwer, that they ſhould continue in their own land, and not go into Egypt, the Lords protection being promiſed, if they obeyed, and his inclining of Nebuchadnezzars heart to favour them, notwithſtanding the cruelty of there for a Guard unto them, that were all ſlain: but contrariwiſe if againſt the revealed will of God they went into Egypt, terrible deſtruction ſhould befall them. And this he preſſeth home unto them, as ſeeing by their countenances what they were bent to do, to the end of this 43. Chapter. And as the Prophet ſuſpected, which made him to uſe ſo many words to deter them therefrom; Chap. 43. ſo it came to paſſe, as is ſhewed Chapter 43. For they would not believe, that it was the Word of the Lord which he ſpake, but that Baruch ſet him on thus to ſpeak, and therefore they immediately went away, and took both him and Baruch, and all the people that were yet in Judea with them into Egypt, and came to Taphanes, verſe 7. which was the chief City of Egypt, where Pharoah his Verſ. 7.

Court was, verſe 9. being otherwiſe called Tanis, according to Ierom. But Pſal.
78.12. it is ſaid, that God did his wonders in the field of Zoan; whereby it may rather be gathered, that it was then ſo called. They being come to this City, Ieremiah had a word from the Lord, to go and hide certain ſtones near to Pharoah's houſe; and then having done this in the ſight of the Jews, bidding him ſay, that Nebuchadnezzar ſhould come and pitch his Tent there, and ſubdue Egypt, and Verſ. 10. deliver ſuch as are for death to death, ſuch as for Captivity to Captivity, ſuch as for the ſword to the ſword. That is, the Jewes eſpecially, ſome periſhing by peſtilence Verſ. 11. and famine, and ſome by the ſword; for ſo Chap. 42.17. it is threatned, that none of them ſhould eſcape; and it is not to be thought but that he meant that the Egyptians ſhould many of them be deſtroyed alſo; for he ſaith, That he would ſmite Egypt, and many of them ſhould be carried away Captive, as the Jewes had been. And this was not now firſt propheſied of, but before alſo, Chap. 25.19. and Iſaiah 19. where alſo the City, in which Pharoah and his Counſellors kept, is called Zoan. But now it is threatned again for the Jewes ſake, that in rebellion againſt the Lord came to dwell there, and were entertained.
For the place wherein Ieremiah is bidden to hide theſe great ſtones, it was,
In the Clay in the Brick kil. Vulgar Latin, In crypta, quæ eſt ſub muro Lateritio.
Calvin, In Luto in Lacuni, expounding it of the place, where the materials for making Brick were taken out; but the firſt agreeth beſt with the Hebrew. He muſt take great ſtones, and hide them in Pharoahs Brickkill, where all his Brick was burnt, wherewith he built ſtrong Walls and Fortifications againſt the enemy; to ſhew, that although the Jewes ſeemed to themſelves to be hidden here from Nebuchadnezzar, whom they feared, yet he ſhould with his forces even pierce thither, and deſtroy them moſt cruelly.

And he ſhall array himſelf with the Land of Egypt, as a Shepherd with his Verſ. 12. garment, and go away in peace. That is, being full of the ſpoyles of Egypt, there being none there to hinder him either in taking, or carrying them away; as a Shepherd puts his Cloak about him to go into the open fields to keep his Flock, not fearing the cold weather, when he is thus armed againſt it; and being hindred by none from ſo doing, becauſe he puts about him nothing but his own; ſo he intimateth hereby, that Egypt ſhould be Nebuchadnezzars, given him of God, and he ſhould go away ſo from it, after his coming, that he ſhould continue Maſter of the whole Countrey, thenceforth coming and going there, as in a part of his Dominions, without any oppoſition or diſturbance.

How or when Egypt was thus ſubdued, we read not in ſacred Hiſtory, but that both it, and all Kingdomes were ſubdued by Nebuchadnezzar, appeareth Dan. 2. 38. Dan. 4. 22. And Joſephus ſaith, that five years after this he came Joſeph. Antiq. againſt Celoſyria, and having ſubdued it, brought alſo the Ammonites, and l. 10. c. 11.
Moabites under, and then invaded Egypt; the King whereof being ſlain, he ſet up another there, and took the Jewes, that remained alive, away into Babylon.
Thus the land of Judea lay deſolate without Inhabitant 70 years, but the land of Iſrael had other Inhabitants brought and placed there by Salmanaſar the King of Aſſyria, the time betwixt whoſe coming and Iudah's tranſmigration was 130 years, 6 moneths, 10 dayes.

Note from this Hiſtory, that the wicked may make ſo much ſhew of piety, as Note.

to deſire to be prayed for by a Prophet, and promiſe to doe as the Lord ſhall direct; but when it comes to the tryall, they fail notoriouſly of performing what they made ſhew of; which condemneth all ſuch, and withall thoſe that regard not Prophets at all, or their directions, ,but will have them conſult; but having ſo done, and giving in what they find the will of God to be, they will only promiſe to doe what ſhall ſeem good in their own eyes, whereas God will be abſolutely obeyed in all things, which he revealeth to be his Will by his ſervants the Prophets; and in the fail of Prophets, moved immediately by the Spirit, by his other Miniſters and Prieſts, Mal. 2. 7.

Note. Again, becauſe Ieremiah had no anſwer, till the end of ten dayes, we muſt with patience wait for an anſwer, when we ſeek unto the Lord, till he be pleaſed to give it.

Note. Note alſo, that in the wicked the fear of men doth much over-poiſe the fear of God; becauſe theſe men for fear of the Caldees feared not Gods threatnings; but he ſhall repent it too late whoſoever doth ſo, when Gods Judgements come, for he ſhall not eſcape.

Note. Laſtly becauſe verſe 20 he ſaith, That they deceived their own ſouls, in ſaying, that they would obey, and meant not ſo to doe; Note, that a man cannot deceive God by playing faſt and looſe with him, but he ſhall deceive himſelf ſo, as that the greateſt hurt of his diſſimulation ſhall redound to his own ſoul.

CHAP. XLIV.

IN this Chapter the wickedneſſe of the Jewes in Egypt is further ſet forth by Ieremiah his inveighing againſt them for their Idolatry after the Egyptian manner; and for that they would take no warning by the judgements that came upon Jeruſalem for the like. At the hearing whereof, they were ſo far from being moved to repent, that they juſtified their abominable doings in burning Incenſe to the Queen of heaven, ſaying, that ſince they ceaſed to doe ſo, they ſuffered much by the ſword, and famine, therefore they would not deſiſt from doing ſo now, in hope thus to have better times. Note. Whereby we may ſee how wicked men, having begun once to harden their hearts againſt God, go on à malo ad pejus, waxing worſe and worſe, that we may learn to reſiſt the beginnings of ſin, and not harden our hearts at all againſt the inſtructions of Gods Miniſters.

Verſ. 1. For the places of Egypt, wherein the Jewes are ſaid now to have been, beſides Taphanes before ſpoken of, here is Migdol, Noph and Pathros; of Migdol, ſee 14. 2. Of Taphanes, or Daphnis, Iſaiah 30. 4. Of Noph, Iſaiah 19. 3. It is commonly held, ſaith Calvin, to be Memphis, now called Cair. Of Pathros, Gen. 10. 14. Theſe places are particularly ſpoken of, being but four, and not far diſtant one from another, that we might know whither Ieremiah went to ſpeak unto them, not all over Egypt, for that had been too great a work, but onely to theſe places.

Verſ. 14. Here he threatneth deſtruction to them all, but in fine makes this exception, None ſhall return to Iudea, ſaving thoſe that eſcape. Who are again ſpoken of ver. 28. and ſaid to be a few that ſhall flee thither, when they can have an opportunity, that went not into Egypt, but being forced, whom the multitude for this their attempt ſhall think to be utterly loſt.

Verſ. 17. We will do what is good in our eyes, and burn Incenſe to the Queen of heaven. Touching the Queen of heaven enough hath been ſaid, Chap. 7. 18. Note. Onely note here upon what weak grounds they go that are for Idolatry; as the old cuſtome of great perſons and their people; for they ſay, we have done ſo, our Fathers, Kings, and Princes. 2. In Iudah, and the ſtreets of Jeruſalem; that is, it hath been thus done in the Church of God, ſo famous throughout the world. 3. We then had plenty of victuals, and ſaw no evill. For they took no notice of their grievous ſufferings under Idolatrous Kings, till that in Zedekiah his dayes they were utterly ruinated. 4. We will do what ſeemeth good in our eyes. Upon theſe grounds, we think it moſt reaſon to ſerve the Queen of Heaven again, and not to give over a Religion ſo warrantable, and ſtrongly grounded. And are not theſe the four Pillars of Popery at this day, wherein the Virgin Mary is worſhipped as the Queen of Heaven? For, 1. They ſay, this is the old Religion wherein our fore-fathers lived, that were wiſer, and more pious than the people of theſe times. 2. This hath been practiſed and maintained in Rome, the moſt famous for the faith of all other Churches. 3. There was alſo then, when all imbraced this Catholick Religion, more plenty; for all things were cheap, and there were no wars amongſt Chriſtians. 4. This therefore ſeemeth to us to be the beſt Religion, ſay what any man can to the contrary. Whereas indeed all theſe grounds being duely conſidered, are moſt weak; for firſt heathen Idolatry was practiſed alwayes amongſt the Nations, before their imbracing of the Chriſtian Religion, ſhall that therefore be judged beſt? Our Fathers and Kings, and Princes indeed worſhipped before Images, called upon Saints departed, made an Idol of the Hoaſt, beleeved in the Pope and the Church, how corrupt ſoever, without ſearching into the truth; but they were onely Fathers that lived next before us, when Ignorance, as a dark miſt, kept them from ſeeing things in their colours. But what did our Fathers and Kings that lived before them for ſix hundred years after Chriſt, till the ſecond curſed Councell of Nice? all which time there were no Images in the Church, or invocations of Saints departed; no Pope reigning univerſally, or counted of infallible judgement, till Gregory the ſeventh, who attained this honour by Phocas, an Emperour that murthered his Maſter Mauritius: neither was the Hoaſt adored, till the dayes of Innocent the third, about one thouſand years after Chriſt; as I have more largely ſhewed in my Antidote againſt Popery. Secondly, what was practiſed in the Church of Rome corrupted, ought not to move us no more than what was done in Jeruſalem, corrupted firſt by Solomon, then by the other wicked Kings ſucceeding him for many generations, ſith it was not ſo in Davids time, when Jeruſalem was the joy of the whole earth. For ſo Rome was famous for the true faith there imbraced, all over the world; but what is this to Rome degenerated ſo fouly as it hath long been? witneſſe one living even in the time of blindneſſe, who left this Diſtick for a Monument of her wickedneſſe to all poſterities.

3. It is a blindfolding of mens eyes, to argue from plenty or peace; for although things were then very cheap in compariſon of the prizes ſince, it was by reaſon of the ſcarcity of money then, and the plenty hereof now, by means of the Weſt Indies diſcovered, where ſuch rich Mines of Gold and Silver are found, being not known or pierced unto in former ages; but firſt in the dayes of Henry the ſeventh, King of England. But for famins, and other judgements of Peſtilence, and horrible tempeſts, Chronicles make mention of greater in the old corrupt time of Popery, than ever were ſince the breaking out of the light again. And for Wars, this is no argument againſt us more than againſt the faith taught in Chriſts and his Apoſtles time; becauſe, as he then ſaid, I came not to ſend peace, but a ſword: So it was then, Perſecution was every where ſtirred up, and abundance of Inocent bloud was ſhed throughout the world. Fourthly, for ones doing what is good in his own eyes, which is alſo the finall reſolution of Papiſts that will not turn, It ſeems good to us, ſay they, to have, and uſe Images in adoration, for a remembrance, that we may think upon him to whom we pray, and not to come before the great King of Kings, without the mediation of the Courtiers of heaven, and to have one head of the Church, St Peters Succeſſour, and to hold, that all the Oracles of God are contained in the Cloſet of his breaſt, that he being from all parts reſorted to, and obeyed in caſes of difficulty or doubt, all Chriſtian people may the better be kept together in unity; which is a thing ſo well pleaſing to God, and from contention and claſhing in poynts touching Religion, which is in any caſe carnall, ſenſuall and develiſh, but James 3. much more in matters of Faith and Piety. But this is the weakeſt ground of all others, for what are the blind to judge of colours? the Word, which is a light, is taken from them; and in this caſe they ſay, we judge this or that to be good. If they ſay our Teachers, who are learned and ſeeing, judge theſe things John 9. to be good; but theſe learned ones may be blinde alſo; for the Phariſees ſaid, they ſaw, and yet were blind; and if ſo, the blinde do but lead the blinde, when ye are lead by them; yea, hereby it appears, that they are blinde, and without light; becauſe that although they read the Word, (yet ſome of them read it but little; witneſſe that Confeſſion of one mentioned in the Epiſtle to the Commentary of Perkins in Galatians, that he had been a Student in Divinity fifteen years, but never yet read the Bible:) they have no light herefrom for the ſuperſtitions before mentioned; and many more abominations practiſed in their Church, but onely from Decretals, Legends and Traditions; and concerning Eſa. 20. 8. ſuch, it is true which the Prophet ſaith, To the Law, and to the Teſtimony, if they ſpeak not according to this Word, they have no light in them.

Verſ. 20. Here Jeremiah anſwers to their main ground, that when they burnt Incenſe to the Queen of Heaven, they had plenty and peace, ſhewing, that it was falſe; for by ſuch abominable doings they had brought Gods judgements upon them, to the making of them ſo miſerable as then they were, by Exile, deſtruction of their City and Countrey, and extream famin, ſuffered by means of their enemies.

Verſ. 26. My Name ſhall be no more named by any man of Iudah in the Land of Egypt. The Lord here ſheweth, that he will not be partner with any other God or Goddeſſe, but would deſtroy all ſuch Jewes in Egypt, as would worſhip him and falſe Gods together; for he cannot endure any halting betwixt two opinions. Yet he ſheweth, that even then in Egypt, in thoſe moſt corrupt times there were a remnant not tainted with the common corruption, that ſhould eſcape and go Note. into the Land of Judea again, as in the dayes of Elijah there were ſeven thouſand in Iſrael left alive, after ſo many deſtroyed by the ſword, that never bowed their knees to Baal. Happy are they that in a time of corruption over-ſprea- Ezek. 9. ding a Nation are of theſe few; for in the midſt of deſtruction they ſhall be preſerved. Finally, he giveth them a ſigne, to confirm this his Prophecie touching their deſtruction, viz. Pharoah Ophra his being given into the hands of his ene- Verſ. 30. mies, as Zedekiah had been given. For Pharoah Hophrah, Hebrew פרע־חפרע; In which words, there is a Paranomaſy, as if he had ſaid, Pharoah, ſignifying, Diſcovered; to be diſcovered, or made naked of forces, and ſo coming into his enemies hands. This was the King that now reigned, being otherwiſe called Herod. Vaphres, who according to this threatning was deſtroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, in the 24th year of his reigne, as Zedekiah had been ſubdued in the eighteenth year; ſo that, as was ſaid before out of Joſephus, Herodotus conſenteth, that in five years after this Prophecie, this judgement befell him, and Amaſis was made King in his ſtead.

CHAP. XLV.

HEre Ieremiah reproveth and comforteth Baruch, who, it ſeemeth, was grieved for the hard task impoſed upon him, to read his Prophecies before ſpoken of, Chapter 36. For this is noted to have been at the ſame time, viz. in the fourth year of Iehojakim: For he feared hereupon, (as it happened) becauſe he wes a Meſſenger of ſuch unpleaſing news, that he ſhould run upon the danger of his life; and this made him penſive and ſorrowfull. But the Lord had ſo much care of his perplexed ſervant, that he would have Ieremiah to ſpeak a a word of comfort to him from his mouth, by telling him, that his life ſhould be preſerved, even when they that ſought it ſhould be deſtroyed. So that this Prophecie is ſet down long after the time of uttering it how it, and was fulfilled, Jeremiah and Baruch being perſecuted ſtill eighteen years after, appeareth Chap. 43.6. Whereas Ieremiah in reproving Baruch ſaith, That which I have built I break down, &c. Verſ.4. And ſeekeſt thou great things for thy ſelf? Some think, Verſ. 5. that Baruch was grieved, becauſe that having lived ſo long with Ieremiah, he was Vatabl. not yet made a Prophet, as Eliſha that ſerved Elijah; but this is a groundleſſe conjecture, and agreeth not with the Text. Wherefore others better ſay, that Theodor. the great thing that he ſought, was nothing elſe, but comfort and joy in his Miniſtry, Raban. and to be exempt from the ſorrow and trouble, which now he had for God, and for publiſhing his Word. For this was truely a great thing, when ſo many thouſands were upon the point of deſtruction, and utter ruine, to be grieved for want of outward comforts of their life, and for one alone not to be freed from miſeries which be common to his whole Countrey. The word rendred, great things, Hebrew is, מגלח, a famine; whereupon ſome think, as was ſaid before, that Propheticall endowments are meant: but this hath been already confuted, it hath reference to things, or preferences in joy and comfort, as was before ſaid.

Whereas Baruch ſaith, Thou haſt added grief to my ſorrow. It is to be under- Verſ.2. ſtood, that he had ſorrow and trouble upon the like occaſion before; and that made him now to complain at this time, having ſo hard a task again impoſed upon him. Therefore he quailed not at the firſt, but being as it were, in the mid- Note. way of his troubleſome imployment, yet now to quail was worthy of reproof; for it is ſaid; Be not weary of well-doing, ye ſhall reap in due time, if ye faint not. Gal. 6.9. And there is no reaſon, why even the moſt obedient ſhould look to be exempt from ſorrow, when ſufferings be generall; it is enough for the beſt at ſuch times that their lives be precious in Gods eyes, as theirs Ezek. 9. and if it be Gods will that the beſt of all ſhall ſuffer even to death, it is his part joyfully to ſubmit herein, as Paul, Acts 21.

CHAP. XLVI.

THe Prophet having briefly threatned other Nations, beſides Iudea, Chap. 25.19,20. And now he cometh to renew the ſame threatnings, dwelling longer upon them, and firſt againſt Egypt, the moſt Idolatrous Nation of all others; and by means whereof the Jews were moſt animated to rebell againſt God, as being ready to help them. And he beginneth with the Egyptian Army that came forth in Ioſiah his time againſt the King of Aſſyria; againſt which Ioſiah raſhly going was ſlain, 2 Chron. 35.20. Now becauſe that through this good ſucceſſe, the Egyptians were doubtleſſe much puffed up, and hoped to prevail againſt the Aſſyrian alſo, the Prophet is bidden to propheſie of their repreſſion by Nebuchadnezzar, which accordingly came to paſſe in the fourth year of Jehojakim the King of Judah, as appeareth 2 Kings 24.7. So that this Prophe- Calvin. cie, though here placed, was in the very beginning of Iehojakims reigne; becauſe in his fourth year it was in part fulfilled, ſo Calvin; and if it had not been before the thing done, it were not a Prophecie, but an Hiſtory. But touching the words of verſe 1. Againſt the Gentiles; It is not agreed amongſt Expoſitors who are meant by them, ſome ſtanding for all Nations, whom the Lord would have his Prophet ſpeak againſt, after that he had done propheſying againſt Judah, and ſome for Egypt onely, and the Nations helping that King; becauſe the Prophecies againſt other Nations were at other times, as againſt the Philiſtims, Chap. 47.1. Againſt Moab and Ammon, 49.34 Againſt Babylon, 51 59. But take the words, as a generall title to all the following Prophecies, and this Controverſie is at an end. This Prophecie againſt the Egyptian Army is by way of deriſion, verſe 3. Prepare the Shield and Buckler, go on to the War, &c. For Verſ.3. verſe 5. He ſheweth, that he foreſaw their overthrow near the River Euphrates; Verſ.5,6. which was the place where Pharoah Necho was fighting againſt Carkemiſh, 2 Chron. 35.20. And Herodotus ſaith, that here Pharoah Necho was Herod. lib. 2.

overrcome by Nebuchadnezzar, and made to retire into his Countrey, many Verſ. 7,8. of the Egyptians being ſlain. Therefore verſe 7, 8, 9. he proceedeth further to deride them, comparing them to a floud, againſt which they thought Verſ. 10.11. that the City Carkemiſh could not ſtand, but be ſoon born down: but, verſe 10, 11, 12. he fore-tells, that the day wherein they ſhould fight in this place, ſhould be the time of Gods vengeance taking upon them, when they ſhould get ſuch a wound, as that all the Balm of Gilead could not heal again.

Verſ.12. The mighty man ſhall ſtumble at the mighty, and they ſhall both fall together.
Lyra. That is, in haſtning to flee away, one bearing down another, ſo Lyra; yet Theodoret, Theodor. The valiant man of Egypt, and the valiant man of Caldea ſhall conflict together, and both fall, although the Caldees ſhall get the victory, it being a bloudy day to them alſo: But the firſt is beſt, for it is all againſt the Egyptians.

Verſ. 13. Here followeth another Prophecie againſt Egypt of that which was to come after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the Jewes fleeing into Egypt, according to the ſigne given of the death of Pharoah Hophrah; of which ſee Chapt. 44.
30. For then Nebuchadnezzar in the five and twentieth year of his reigne, as hath been already ſhewed, came and ſubdued all Egypt, and ſlaying him, ſet up another King there, and then was a Monarch of the world. And in ſpeaking of their deſtruction at that time, he ſaith, One fell upon another; and they ſaid, Ariſe, Verſ.16. and let us goe again to our own people; bringing thoſe in as ſpeaking, that came from Lybia, and other places to help the Egyptians, when they ſaw that no more good was to be done there, Nebuchadnezzar had ſo waſted the Countrey.
From the oppreſſing ſword, Hebrew, יונה, Of the Dove, the King of Babylon ſo called, for a Dove carryed before him in his Standard, as hath been ſhewed before, Chap. 25. 38.

Verſ. 17. Pharoah King of Egypt, they ſay alſo, is but a noiſe, he hath paſſed the time appoynted.
Vulg. Call the name of the King of Egypt, Time hath brought a tumult.
Hebr. They have there called Pharoah King of Egypt a noiſe, making the appointed time to paſſe away. For it is not Shem, a name; but Sham, there; and it is Karau, they called, not Kirau, call ye; therefore it is by miſtaking otherwiſe rendred in the Vulgar Latin. The meaning is, that Pharoah ſhall be thus upbraided by his very Auxiliaries; we ſee nothing in him but an empty ſound by brags and boaſtings, making a great ſhew; but the enemy coming, he durſt not go out to fight with him, but let the time ſlip, without giving him Battell, in a moſt cowardly manner. Or there, that is, for his raſh going out againſt Carkemiſh, provoking the Caldees againſt him, they ſhall call him a tumult; becauſe he by this means brought trouble to his own Countrey; he paſſed away that appointed time ſo ill, being beaten in ſtead of overcoming. This would agree well, but that the King here ſpoken is not the ſame, but another; not Pharoah Necho, but Pharoah Hophra; and therefore I reſt in the firſt.

Verſ. 18. As Tabor in the Mountains, and Carmel in the Sea, he, or it ſhall come.
That is, This word, whereby Egypt and the King thereof are threatned, ſhall ſtand as ſure as great and ſtrong Mountains, that cannot be removed; thus alſo Calvin. Calvin: Some refer it to Nebuchadnezzar, as if it were meant, that he ſhould be of ſo great eminency, that he ſhould be for his greatneſſe and power, as Mount Tabor, and Carmel, being ſo highly elevated by the fall of other Kings.
R. David. Rabbi David, As Tabor is reſorted to for hunting, and Carmel for timber to build with, which is thence tranſported by Sea, ſo ſhall Egypt be, they ſhall come and hunt there; as Hoſ. 5. 1. and carry them away Captive from thence by Sea afar off. Whereas Carmel is ſaid to be in the Sea, it is to be underſtood, that it was onely a Promontory hanging over the Sea, and therefore conſpicuous afar off to thoſe that travell by Sea.

Verſ. 22. Her voice ſhall goe, or, walk like a Serpent. That is, as a Serpent wounded, Egypt ſhall cry lamentably, when the Babylonians ſhall come againſt her, as Theod. Hewers of wood to cut her down, as in the next words, and then the noiſe walks Raban. thorow them; ſo moſt rightly Theodoret, Raban, Vatablus; although others, as Lyra. Dyonyſ. Lyra, and Hugo, by her underſtand Babylon: The Vulgar Latin hath it,

it, Like Braſſe; but נחש, ſignifieth not Braſſe, but a Serpent, unleſſe ת be added; and if it be rendred by Braſſe, the ſenſe will not be ſo good, unleſſe it be taken for the lamentable ſound of a Trumpet at a Funerall; for that is made of Braſſe.

They ſhall cut down her Forreſt. That is, the people of her populous Cities, dwelling ſo thick one by another as trees ſtand in a Forreſt: Although they be innumerable as Graſſe-hoppers. Becauſe that an innumerable company of Caldees ſhould come againſt them, to whom it ſhould be eaſie, as for abundance of workmen to cut down all the trees of the greateſt Wood or Forreſt.

Verſ. 23. I will puniſh the multitude of No. Vulgar Latin and Calvin, Alexandria; becauſe the ſame City was afterwards re-built, and called by Alexander the Great after his own name. It was a moſt populous City like unto Nineveh, which made them to contemn all dangers; but now the Prophet ſheweth, that one would take them to do, whom they ſhould not be able to reſiſt, even the Lord. And he nameth this City in ſpeciall, becauſe the greateſt in all Egypt. The word rendred multitude, is אמת, by ſome taken for the proper name of the King there, which is the more probable, becauſe he ſaith by and by, Pharoah, and Egypt, and all her Kings; whereby Calvin conjectureth, that Pharoah had lately made many of his Princes Kings, for his greater magnificence; but now an end ſhall be put to this their worldly glory. In amplifying which puniſhment, the Prophet is the larger, that the Jewes dwelling in Egypt, that would not believe that ſo mighty a Countrey ſhould ever be overthrown, might be the more moved, and not go on ſtill in ſuch a blinde confidence as they had hitherto done.

Verſ. 26. And afterwards it ſhall be inhabited, as in the dayes of old. Ezek. 29. 13, 14. It is likewiſe promiſed, and the time when, ſet, viz. after forty years; but it is ſaid, it ſhould be a baſe Kingdome: For Amaſis was by Nebuchadnezzar made King for Pharoah Hophrah, and he was afterward overcome by Cambyſes, the ſon of Cyrus, and then Egypt was brought under the Perſians 150 years, being thus made a tributary Kingdome.

Euſeb. in Chron.

Whereas Jeremiah ſaith, As in the dayes of old; he meaneth not, that it ſhall be in the ſame glory and greatneſſe; but the tempeſt of war being over, which was ſent for a puniſhment, they ſhould quietly dwell there again, and not be like unto Judea, a deſolation ſeventy years.

Verſ. 27. But fear not thou (O my ſervant Jacob.) Having ſpoken comfort to Egypt, it was neceſſary to ſpeak the like to Iſrael, leſt they ſhould in their ſufferings be overwhelmed with deſpair. Wherfore although the ſame be often done before, he would not omit to do it again now after ſome comfort ſpoken to Egypt; becauſe that although he were ſet over all nations, yet the main end of his Propheſying, was to comfort and confirm the true Iſraelite. Wherefore he doth not onely promiſe the like to him, that he doth to the Egyptian, but verſe 28. far greater favour, ſaying, I will make a full end of all Nations whither I have driven thee, but I will not make a full end of thee. Wherein may ſeem to be a contradiction to verſe 26. But they may be reconciled thus, The Nations being ſmitten ſhall never recover again, but onely have ſome outward tollerable being in this world; but to thee I will be favourable in reſpect of the beſt things, reſtoring to thee the free exerciſe of the true Religion, and finally beſtowing upon thee everlaſting life: So that thy being in miſery is but as a tree in Winter, ſeeming to be dead, but having ſap in the root, their being reſtored but as a tree full of green leaves, and flouriſhing, but dying at the root; which is the compariſon of Calvin: But of this ſee before Chap. 30. 10, 11.

CHAP. XLVII.

IN this Chapter the Prophet threatneth the Philiſtims, who were infeſt enemies of the Jewes, that even in the time of their miſery they might know that God did bear a favour unto them, in that although he puniſhed them, and brought them down, ſo that they could do nothing, yet he would take their enemies to doe, that they ſhould have no cauſe to inſult over them.

Verſ. 1. Before that Pharoah ſmote Gaza. This was one of the chief Cities of the Philiſtims, lying near the Sea, having not the name, as ſome ſuppoſe, from Gaza, Treaſures, but from עזז, ſignifying ſtrength; for it is in the Hebrew עזה. For Pharoah his ſmiting of it, when he came out againſt Nebuchadnezzar in Zedekiah his time; and he went from the Siege of Jeruſalem againſt him, it is

Calvin. ſaid, that not enduring Nebuchadnezzars coming, he returned homeward, and by the way entred into Gaza, and ſpoiled it, herein at the leaſt to gratifie the Jewes, although he could doe them no other good. So Calvin, neither doth

Lyra. Lyra, Dionyſ. or Iſidor diſſent herefrom, onely they ſay he did it in hatred of Dionyſ. Nebuchadnezzar, to whom they were then ſubject. But if ſo, why did he come Iſidor. ſoon after this againſt them, as it is here propheſied verſe 2. that he ſhould? They might, I grant, rebell, as Jehojakim and Zedekiah had done, and ſo give cauſe; and then Gaza being under Nebuchadnezzar at this time, that might partly move Pharoah to ſmite it, and partly to gratifie the Jewes. Some think, that this was done when Pharoah came out againſt the Aſſyrians, and ſmote Joſiah, and ſome in the fourth year of Iehojakim, when being put to flight by Nebuchadnezzar, againſt whom he came in the help of the Jewes, he had much of his Dominions taken from him, as is ſhewed 2 Kings 24. 7. But for ſo much as yet Gaza was under the Egyptian, this is improbable; wherefore it muſt be after that it was taken away by the Caldees, at other parts betwixt Euphrates and the river of Egypt were. Now we may gather then, that this Prophecie was about the ninth year of Zedekiah, before that coming out of the King of Egypt againſt Nebuchadnezzar, to make him raiſe his ſiege. But this of Gaza is onely ſpoken of by the way, as a circumſtance ſhewing the time, when the Babylonians coming againſt Paleſtine, and deſtroying it utterly was propheſied of. For upon this runs the Prophecie,

Verſ. 2. verſe 2. Waters riſe out of the North, and ſhall overflow the Land and City. That is, innumerable forces come out of Caldea Northward, overflowing, as a floud, the Countrey of Paleſtine, and the Cities thereof, Gaza, Askelon, Gath, Ekron and Azotus; for theſe were the five chief Cities thereof, and the ſingular Citie is put for the plurall: When this was done ſee before out of Joſephus upon Chap. 43. viz. at the ſame time that Egypt, Joſeph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 11. Ammon and Moab were deſtroyed, for then alſo Syria, wherein Paleſtine was, drank of the ſame cup, yea ſomewhat before Egypt.

Verſ. 4. To cut off from Tyrus and Zidon every help that remaineth; for the Lord will ſpoil the Philiſtims, the remnant of the Countrey of Caphtor. Tyre was a ſtrong City near to Gaza, being ſituated in the Sea, and ſo was Sidon, one being in time of danger helpfull to another; but now none of them ſhould have any power. By the Countrey of Caphtor, he meaneth alſo Paleſtine, which was otherwiſe ſo called, becauſe the Philiſtims came from other places afar off, and took up their abode there, for which they were alſo called Caphtorim, properly ſignifying Cappadocians, haply for the moſt part they came from thence, as is noted Deut. 2. 23. For they dwelt in Gaza.

Verſ. 5. Askalon is cut off, with the remnant of her valley. This was another of the great Cities of the Philiſtims ſituated low, and therefore ſo, as that they might think to eſcape unſeen.

Verſ. 6, 7. How long wilt thou (O ſword of the Lord) not be quiet, &c. Here by an Apoſtrophe the Prophet turneth, and putting upon him the perſon of the Philiſtims ſetteth otherwiſe by a flouriſh of Rhetorick the ſame things, viz. their deſtruction, continuing to their utter ruine, and therefore their continuall ſorrow and crying out moſt lamentably for it. And withall he ſheweth, that it came not by accident but of the Lord, who decreed that it ſhould be thus; and therefore it could not poſſibly be ſtayed, either by force or entreaty. Gods judgements are long in coming for ſinne, but when they come it will be bootleſs to complain, or cry for their ceſſation, ſometime it is thus in this world by an immutable decree, but however the wicked eſcape here, or get out of miſery, the Lord being moved to ſome compaſſion upon their crying to him, yet in the world to come each one muſt hold him to his doom; neither ſhall any crying or tears prevail for the reverſing thereof for ever and ever. Wherefore let us agree with our adverſary whilſt we are in the way, make peace with God by turning while time ſerves, and not harden our hearts one day more. Of the deſtruction of Paleſtine ſee alſo before in brief, Iſa.14.29,30,31.

CHAP. XLVIII.

AFter Egypt and Paleſtine threatned, now Moab is threatned alſo in many more words, after the manner of Iſaiah an hundred years before Chap. 15. and 16. who was brief in ſpeaking againſt Paleſtine, but large againſt Moab, having all the remarkable paſſes that are here, notably declaring them both to be lead by one and the ſame ſpirit, and by this their conſent able to confirm the believing Jews faith, that theſe their inſulting enemies that ſo much contemned them ſhould ſhortly have revenge therefore taken upon them, and have no heart to do ſo any more. And ſpeaking againſt Moab they both are ſo large, becauſe the Moabites came of Lot, and ſo were kinſmen to Iſrael, for ſo much as Abraham, of whom Iſaac and Iſrael came, was Lots uncle, and for their alliance to Iſrael they were ſpared in their paſſage towards the Land of Canaan, the Iſraelites being prohibited to take any of their country. For which favour they alwayes requited them ill by ſeeking their deſtruction, even in the time of Moſes, hiring Balaam to curſe them, and divers times after banding with other Nations againſt them, as 2 Chron. 20. and oppreſſing them Judg.3. Of the places mentioned here, as Nebo, ſee Iſa.15.2. where alſo the high-places are ſpoken of, being the ſame with Miſgab, here rendred by Junius, Civitas ſita edito loco, in Vulgar Latine Fortis, an high and ſtrong City, and whereas here is Kiriathaim, there is Kir verſ.1. which might be the ſame, only ſpoken there more ſhortly, here at large, it was a City in the Tribe of Reuben, Joſh.13.19. but gotten afterwards by the Moabites. Junius alſo in his Annotations upon Miſgab, calleth it Baal-bamoth high-places of Baal, of which ſee alſo Joſh 13.18.

Verſ. 2. In Heſhbon they have deviſed evil. Iſa. 15.4. Touching Madmen, although Vatablus and Junius make it a proper name, yet it is rendred in Vulgar Latine as an appellative, Silens conticeſces, Thou ſhalt ſilently hold thy peace, and Junius writes not of any ſuch City in Moab, nor Calvin, nor any other that I have ſeen, although many take it for a proper name of a City. But of Madmena we read Iſa. 10.31. being the ſame with Beerſheba a boundary City of Iſrael, according to Adricom. and Jerom, to the ſignification whereof if we go, it is a dunghill, unleſſe it be derived from דמם ſilent. Touching Horonaim, verſ.3. and Lubith, verſ.5. ſee Iſa.15.5. touching Chemoſh, it was the Idol of the Moabites, Num.21.29. Jud.11.24.

Verſ. 10. Curſed be he that doth the work of the Lord deceitfully or negligently. That is, the work of deſtroying Moab; for although it was done by Nebuchadnezzar as the inſtrument, yet becauſe God appointed him to it, the work was his. But this rule holds to the doing of Juſtice in any other caſe without partiality, and to ſpiritual work of inſtruction, reproving and exhorting in the courſe of the Miniſtry, for Iſaiah muſt lift up his voice as a Trumpet, and the Angel of the Church of Laodicea is cenſured for being neither hot nor cold, but lukewarm.

Verſ.11. Calvin. Moab hath been at eaſe from his youth, he ſetled on his lees, &c. That is, ſince Moab came to be a Nation, ſhe hath lived in peace, when Iſrael was full of many troubles, ſo that Iſrael ſeeing it, eſpecially in the time of this Captivity might be much diſcouraged at it, ſeeing they were Heathen, and profeſſed not the ſervice of God but of Idols. And living in quiet, as being on the other ſide of Jordan, and ſo remote from the dint of the wars, which had often ſhaken Iſrael, they waxed rich, and for their riches proud and full of vices, which is the Prophets meaning, when he ſaith, They had been ſetled upon their lees, and not emptied from veſſel to veſſel] By a Metaphor, the more ſignificatively to ſet forth their evil caſe; Thus Calvin: And it is generally true that the Moabites for many years had eſcaped without the troubles and vexations that Iſrael had by the Syrians, Arabians, Aſſyrians and Babylonians, and by one Kingdoms warring againſt another, although this quiet were not ever. For they were ſubdued by David, and long kept under, whereunto it is alluded *Iſa.*16. in bidding them bring a Lamb to the Ruler of the people, becauſe they had the tribute of a thouſand Lambs ſometime impoſed on them.

Verſ. 13. As Iſrael Was aſhamed of Bethel. That is, the golden Calf ſet up there by Jeroboam, but when they were captived by the Aſſyrians, carried away.

Verſ. 26. Make ye Moab drunken, and he ſhall Wallow in his vomit. That is, with the cup of Gods indignation according to *Chap.*25.27.

Verſ.27. Note. Calvin. Was not Iſrael a deriſion unto thee, Was he found amongſt thieves? Here one great ſinne is laid to the Moabites charge, that they derided Iſrael when they were carried away Captive, as rejoycing exceedingly at it. Whereby we ſee how greatly God is offended for any wrong done to his ſervants, and eſpecially for making them a laughing ſtock, for even for this ſhall Moab ſuffer, and the wicked Separatiſts of England that deride our Miniſtry, calling them Baals Prieſts, and Antichriſtian. Was he found amongſt thieves? that is, was he any more a malefactour then thou (O Moab) it is true, the ſins of Iſrael were many, but the ſins of Moab as many, and to Moab, what harm had Iſrael done, ſurely none; and therefore in thus crying down Iſrael as worthy of ſo ſevere puniſhment they paſſed ſentence againſt themſelves, and it ſhould come to them accordingly. When thou ſpeakeſt of him thou skippeſt for joy. Hebr. Thou moveſt thy ſelf, or art removed, or carried away] which ſome take, as a further declaration of Moabs ſinne, being moved with joy at Iſraels miſery, or with indignation at ſpeaking of him, after the manner of malicious men: ſome as a denunciation of judgement by Moabs being carried away Captive alſo in revenge of this undeſerved malice. Which laſt I rather preferre, for it may be read, Becauſe ſince thy Words againſt him, thou art carried away, that is, in Gods unutterable decree, and this judgement is nigh, even at the doors, and as certain as if now come.

Verſ.28. Leave the Cities and dwell in the rock. That is, thou ſhalt by the enemy be made to flee into deſert places, there in caves in the rocks to hide thy ſelf for fear, as a trembling Dove, that makes her neſt where it may not be found, thus further aggravating their miſery, when ſhe ſhall be judged.

Verſ. 31. *Verſ.*29, 30. are the ſame with *Iſa.*16.6. But *Verſ.*31. I Will howl for Moab, for the men of Kirheres. Iſa.16.7. Moab ſhall howl for Moab, yet verſ. 36. My heart ſhall ſound for Moab like pipes, is the ſame with *Iſa.*16.11. and for Moabs howling for it ſelf, ſee *verſ.*39. wherefore Jeremiah ſaith herein the ſame only that Iſaiah, where it is expounded already.

*Verſ.*32, 33, 34. are little differing from *Iſa.*16.8, 9, 10.

*Verſ.*35. I Will make to ceaſe him that offers in high places, &c. Iſa.16.12. When Moab is Weary of offering in the high place, he ſhall come to his Sanctuary to pray, but ſhall not prevail. Whereby he intimateth, that their Idolatry was the main cauſe of all their miſery, wherein although they ſpent their time in vain, yet they ſhould pertinaciouſly go on, untill that neceſſity inforced them to leave it by their being beaten out of their Countrey. And this ſhall be the end of all Idolaters, whom the Commandment of God and reaſon will not move to turn from ſo great abomination, deſtroying judgements ſhall, and then ſuch ſuperſtition ſhall vaniſh.

Verſ.40. Calvin.

He ſhall flee like an Eagle, and extend his wings over Moab. That is, Nebuchadnezzar, which is ſo ſpoken for his celerity in over-running the Countrey, and to ſhew that no part thereof ſhould eſcape, but be made a prey unto him, for that he ſhould extend his wings all over. And this is ſet forth by an Eagle, becauſe Eagles are the fierceſt birds of prey, being Kings, as it were, over all other birds, and becauſe when Eagles appeared in battels amongſt the Heathen of old, that ſide on which they appeared alwayes prevailed, ſo Eze. 17.3. Thus Theodoret. And this was exemplified in the Locrians fighting againſt the Crotoniats, an Eagle was ſeen before the Locrians, which departed not till they had overcome. When Germanicus a Roman Captain went to fight againſt the Hetrurians, ſeeing the violence of the enemy, he caſt about how to fight for the moſt advantage againſt them, and by and by ſaw eight Eagles coming forth of the woods, he cried out, Go follow the Roman birds, the proper gods of the Legions, not doubting of the victory, and got it.

Verſ. 41.

Kirioth and the ſtrong holds thereof are taken. Thus alſo the Septuagint and Vulgar Latin have it as the proper name of a place: But Vatablus, Calvin, Tigur. interpret. render it, The Cities, as meant of all the Cities. For having named divers particulars verſ. 24, 25. leſt any unnamed ſhould think to eſcape, he now ſpeaks of them all in general, and the word ſignifieth Cities. Whereas *verſ.*24. Kireoth is ſpoken of as one City amongſt others, I grant, that one in particular might be ſo called, as being equivalent to many Cities, yet this makes not againſt the uſe of the word here, as an appellative, all the Cities hitherto not named being meant. That there was a City called Kireoth, the name Iſcariot given to Judas the traitor doth imply, becauſe it is compounded of Iſh a man, and Carioth, as if one ſhould ſay, A man of the City Carioth.

Verſ. 43.

Fear, and the pit, and the ſnare ſhall be upon thee. Fear to make thee flee when the enemy cometh, a pit whereinto thou ſhalt fall when thou fleeſt, and a ſnare to take thee, if thou happeneſt to get out of the pit again; it being meant that they ſhould be in danger which way ſoever they took to eſcape, againſt the fond conceits of wicked men, who have many wayes in their heads of preſerving themſelves in time of Gods judgements coming upon them, but all in vain.

Verſ.45.

They ſtood in the ſhadow of Heſhbon. Here he meeteth with another imagination of being preſerved in the ſtrong City Heſhbon: but here he ſheweth that a fire ſhall break out, making that place too hot for them, whereby he means the wrath of God breaking out in the Caldees deſtroying there alſo, the Moabites fled thither, having no power to make any reſiſtance, and the ſame fire of Gods wrath that goeth forth from thence ſhall devour in all the corners of Moab. Of a like ſpeech of fire breaking out of Heſhbon, ſee *Numb.*21.28.

Verſ.47.

Yet in the latter dayes I will bring again the Captivity of Moab. See the like promiſe made before to Egypt, Chap 46.26. and how this was fulfilled, Zeph. 2.9. and *Joſeph. Antiqu. lib.*13. *cap.*21. Cyrus ſet the Moabites at liberty when he had taken Babylon, as he had done the Jews.

CHAP.

CHAP. XLIX.

IN this Chapter the Prophet foretelleth the judgements to come upon Ammon Moabs brother both in birth and qualities, pride and contempt of Iſrael, and oppreſſing him in part of his inheritance, viz. that which was given to the Tribe of Gad. And then he proceeds to ſpeak againſt Edom, Kedar Verſ.1. and Elam. Verſ.1. Hath Iſrael no heirs? hath he no ſons? Why then doth their King inherit Gad? The Tribe of Gad had an inheritance on the other ſide of Jordan near to the Ammonites countrey, and being carried away Captive by the Aſſyrian firſt of all others, 2 *King.*15. the Ammonites took Gilead, where Theod. they had dwelt, into poſſeſſion, as Theodoret noteth, and they attempted to have done it long before in the dayes of Iephtah, Judg.11. For this the Prophet here reproveth them, as doing manifeſt wrong to Iſrael that had other heirs, the reſt of the Tribes, in the exile of Gad to enter upon his inheritance, Verſ.2. and therefore he threatneth them *verſ.*2. with deſtruction even in Rabbah, a 2 Sam.11.1. chief City of the Ammonites, and Iſrael ſhall come in as heir to inherit their Land. And thus it came to paſſe, as was ſhewed before out of Joſephus, at the ſame time that Moab was deſtroyed by the Caldees, and for Iſraels inheriting it after their return out of Captivity, ſee 1 *Machab.*5.6. and *Joſeph.lib.*13.antiq. *c.*21. So that here was Lex talionis obſerved, they that invaded the inheritance of others had their own invaded by them.

Verſ. 3. Howl (O Heſhbon) becauſe Hai is waſted. Of Heſhbon we read before Ch.
48. in Moab, but Hai of the Ammonites being near to this City, ſhe is bidden to howl at the deſtruction thereof, as a ſad preſage of her own ruine to follow ſoon after, whereby it ſeemeth, that although Moabs deſtruction be ſpoken of before Ammons, yet it followed in order of time after.

Verſ. 4. Then having ſhewed the brags of Ammon, ſaying, Nove ſhall come to me, that is, no enemy to prevail, but how vain they were verſ. 5. he concludeth with their return, as he had done before touching Moabs.

Verſ. 6. Touching Edom, he beginneth with the chief thereof, ſaying, How is wiſdom Verſ. 7. periſhed from Teman, a City having the name from Eliphaz his ſon Teman, who was the ſon of Eſau or Edom, Gen.36.11. and Eliphaz one of the wiſe men that diſputed with Job about God, is ſaid to have been Eliphaz the Temanite; whereby is implied, that it was a City wherein wiſe men were noted to have dwelled, happily being a kinde of Univerſity, but now there were none wiſe enough to ſave their City from deſtruction. By the like is Egypt upbraided, *Iſa.*19.11.

Verſ.8. Dwell deep (O inhabitant of Dedan.) Of which Dedan, from whom the name of this City came, ſee *Gen.*25.1. he was one of the ſons of Keturah, who inhabited near to Edom. In bidding them dwell deep, he meaneth that they ſhould have need to hide themſelves in holes and caves of the earth for fear of the enemy.

Verſ. 9. Will grape-gatherers leave no branch ungathered. Here by two ſimilitudes he ſheweth that the Edomites ſhall lurk no where, but they ſhall be found out, and carried away or deſtroyed, 1. Of Grape-gatherers from whom ſome bunch or other lieth hid, and ſo eſcapes gathering. 2. Of thieves coming into an houſe in the night, that ſee not all the goods therein in every corner to take all away, and therefore leave ſome: And to expreſſe this further, he Verſ. 10. ſaith, I have revealed the hidden things of Eſau, his ſeed is ſpoiled, his brethren and neighbours, and he is not. Verſ. 11. Leave thy fatherleſſe children, I will Verſ. 11. preſerve them, &c. In ſetting forth the deſtruction of Edom, he ſheweth that it ſhall be ſo univerſal, that they who ſhall periſh and die there, ſhall have no brethren or neighbours, as many have, to whom to commit the care of their fatherleſſe children and widows, which is more grievous to loving parents and husbands, then death it ſelf. Thus ſome, who therefore ſupply after theſe words, And there is none to him, that is, either brother or neighbour that ſhall ſay, Leave thy fatherleſſe and widows to me; or taking theſe laſt words to be ſpoken by God, they underſtand them, as ironicall; as if he had ſaid, Doſt Calvin. thou think that thy fatherleſſe being left to me, I will take care of them, or bid thy widows truſt in me? No, thou art deceived if thou thinkeſt ſo. Calvin hath both theſe wayes, and preferreth the laſt. Some others, becauſe it is ſaid, His ſeed is ſpoiled, ſo that none remained in all Edom, underſtand it, as if the Lord had ſaid, Leave thy Orphans to me, if thou haſt any, but thou ſhalt have none, nor widows that may make me their refuge in their miſery, for every one in Edom, great and ſmall, widows and childen ſhall be deſtroyed, which is further confirmed *verſ.*18. where the deſtruction of Edom is compared to that of Sodom, wherein not one eſcaped. And Pſa. 13.7. Edom is complained of, and curſed above others that holp to deſtroy Jeruſalem for their exceeding great cruelty, even againſt little children, for which it was juſt that their children ſhould be daſht againſt the ſtones, and ſo murthered. But it is beſt of all to read the firſt words, as cohering with *verſ.*10. thus, He hath none remaining, Leave thy fatherleſſe, that is, Thou ſhalt leave thy fatherleſſe and widows to the wide world, Shall I keep them alive? Shall thy widows truſt in me? There is no reaſon for it, When as they drink whoſe judgement was not to drink of the cup, ſhalt not thou drink? Verſ.12.

Verſ. 13. I have ſworn by my ſelf, ſaith the Lord, that Bozra ſhall be a deſolation, &c. Of Bozrah a chief City in Idumea, or of Idumea ſometime alſo called Bozra, ſee *Iſa.*34.6. and Chap. 63.1. ſo that in threatning Bozra he threatneth all Edom, the principal part being put for the whole. Of another Boſra in Moab, ſee *Jer.*48.24. The Lord ſweareth, becauſe it ſeemed incredible that Bozra ſo rich and ſtrong a place ſhould come to ruine, and to ſhew his extraordinary wrath conceived againſt the Edomites for their extraordinary cruelty towards the Jews, of which before upon *verſ.*10. And therefore to Edom is no comfort at all ſpoken, as to Ammon and Moab in after-times, but that the deſtruction thereof ſhall be perpetual.

Verſ. 22. He ſpeaketh the ſame againſt Edom that he had againſt Moab. Chap. 48.40. by the Eagle denoting from whom her deſtruction ſhall come alſo. But before that *verſ.*19. there is a paſſage moſt hard to be underſtood, Verſ.19. He ſhall come up like a Lion from the ſwelling of Jordan againſt the habitation of the ſtrong, but I will ſuddenly make him run away from her. The ſame Nebuchadnezzar which is compared to an Eagle *verſ.*22. is here compared to a Lion coming up from the ſwellings of Jordan, that is, Jordan that overfloweth the banks oftentimes; and then the Lions living thereabouts remove up into the higher grounds, but not without terrour to ſuch as amongſt whom they come; and this is thus ſpoken, becauſe Edom ſtood high, and Nebuchadnezzar came firſt againſt Judah, and after a certain time againſt Edom by that way, from whence to come to Edom a man muſt paſſe over Jordan. And for the ſtrength of the Countrey the ſituation on high upon rocks ſhewed it; and David ſpeaking therefore of it, ſaith, Who ſhall bring me into the ſtrong City, who ſhall bring me into Edom? For the next words, in them lieth the greateſt difficulty. For theſe words, I will ſuddenly make him run away from her, Calvin hath it, After I ſhall make to reſt, I will make him to run from her. The Hebrew, Becauſe I will make her reſt, I will make him to run from her; or becauſe the word מעליה may as well be rendred for as from, as *Pſal.*12.6. at or for the great complaint of the poor I will ariſe; we may read it here, I will make him run at her, that is, to overthrow and deſtroy her, that is, the ſtrong habitation before ſpoken of, being a feminine. Calvin. Vatabl. And then the meaning is according to Calvin, Edom ſhall indeed have reſt for a time, but I will make Nebuchadnezzar to come haſtily and deſtroy it. The word רגע hath indeed two other ſignifications, 1. To divide, 2. Suddenly, and therefore this makes a difference in tranſlations, but although others following ſome one, and ſome another of theſe readings, give a ſenſe ſomewhat divers, I reſt in this as moſt genuine; As if he had ſaid, Edom ſhall be permitted to dwell quietly for a time after Judah deſtroyed, yet then I will

I will make the Lion here ſpoken of to run upon her, and then Edom ſhall come to ſuch ruine as is here threatned. If it be rendred by dividing, or ſuddenly, and from her, I ſee not how the ſenſe can be made good, Who is a choſen man that I may appoint over her? The Edomites hearing of this Lions coming might think, Who is he that ſhall be able to do ſo great matters againſt us? and therefore the Lord moveth the ſame Queſtion, that by anſwering it, and ſhewing them their adverſary, they might not contemn this threatning; therefore in the next words he ſheweth himſelf to be their adverſary, ſaying, Who is like me? I am he that will ſet one over you and your Country, to root it out and deſtroy your Nation, and for this I will take the time that I pleaſe, for none can appoint me, or becauſe it is not yet, ſay, It ſhall not be, and What ſhepherd is he that ſhall ſtand before me? That is, what King ſhall be able to defend his people, as his flock, when I think good to ſend him whom I have choſen againſt it? For he ſhall come in my power which is unreſiſtible by the mightieſt Nations that are.

Verſ.20. And to make this good, he ſaith, *Ver.*20. The leaſt of the flock ſhall draw them out. As if he had ſaid, Let not the King of Edom think that he ſhall be able to ſtand and defend his people, when the Lion before-ſpoken of ſhall come; for not only he, but they that are leaſt able of all his forces ſhall draw the Edomites out of their ſtrong Cities, till all the Land be made deſolate. And therefore he calleth all men to hear this determination of the Lord againſt Edom, againſt Teman, the ſame Countrey being ſometime called by one of theſe names, and ſometime by the other. And it is to be noted that Hebr. it is not a plain affirmative, as in N.Tr. Surely the leaſt of the flock ſhall, &c. but a kinde of oath, If the leaſt of the flock ſhall not draw them out; I am a lier, but becauſe that all know I abhor from this, I would have all men know what I intend to do, and aſſuredly expect it.

Verſ. 21. And when Edoms ruine cometh *verſ.*21. he ſaith, That it ſhall be heard to the red Sea, that is, afar off, not only by Land but by Sea, it ſhall be ſo great. Where the red Sea was in reference to Edom, we may gather out of Jerom. who upon Obadiah ſaith, That Idumea lay from Eleutheropolis to Petra and Ailat, and ſpeaking of Ailat, lib. de locis Hebr. that it joineth to the South wilderneſs on the uttermoſt parts of Paleſtine and the red Sea.

Hieron. de locis Hebr.

Verſ. 23. Concerning Damaſcus, Hamath is confounded, and Arphad. Of Damaſcus the head City of Syria, ſee before upon *Iſa.*17.1. Hemath another City of Syria was afterwards re-built by Antiochus Epiphanes and called Epiphania. Of Hamath ſee *Numb.*13.21. Of Arpad 2 *King.*18.34. The Kingdom of Syria, where theſe Cities ſtood, was deſtroyed by Salmanaſar about the ſame time that he deſtroyed the Kingdom of Iſrael. But it ſeemeth theſe Cities were either not deſtroyed, or re-built and inhabited again ſince, but now ſhould be deſtroyed by Nebuchadnezzar. For of the bringing under of Syria and Hamath, and Arphad there, ſee *Iſa.*36.19. and of Iſrael 2 *King.*17. as they were confederate together, ſo they fell together; and Damaſcus, and theſe other places are here threatned by Jeremiah after their firſt deſtruction, becauſe that the Syrians had been almoſt alwayes great enemies to Judah, whilſt Iſrael ſtood taking his part againſt the Jews; and by Benhadad here named, who is thought to be ſon of Aſahel that made Damaſcus ſo fair a City, that Jeremiah calleth it his joy, they had ſuffered grievous things. Therefore to comfort them, and to deter all enemies of Gods people, he bringeth in Damaſcus alſo, together with other Nations moſt infenſe to the Jews, ſhewing further deſtruction yet to come upon the inhabitants thereof. See the like threatning againſt Damaſcus Amos 1.14.

Verſ. 27. Whereas a fire kindling in the Palace of Benhadad is ſpoken of verſ. 27. as Amos 1.4. it is thus ſaid, becauſe the like ſhould be done in Damaſcus the ſecond time.

Verſ.28. Touching Kedar next threatned, *Gen.*25.13. Kedar was one of the ſons of Iſhmael, who gave the name to the place wherein they lived; this place was alſo called Arabia deſerta. The people dwelt in Tents, and removed from place to place, it being a moſt barren countrey, to finde paſture for their Camels wherewith they abounded, and for their Sheep. Whereby it appears that they were Iſhmaelites, who at this day call themſelves Saracens, although they came of Hagar the bondmaid, and therefore were Hagarens, but to credit themſelves the more they will now be called Saracens. Theſe are the Turks that have ſo greatly inlarged their dominions all over Aſia, and a great part of Europe, being in former times a wilde kinde of people, and intent only to the feeding of Cattel, and in following this courſe they endured much hardſhip. It is here alſo further added, And the Kingdoms of Hazor, about which, though ſome make a Queſtion, what Hazor is meant, whether that mentioned Joſhua 11.1. or any of thoſe Hazors Joſh. 15.23,25. where three Hazors lying within the lot of Judah, are ſpoken of together. But becauſe the inhabitants of Hazor are ſaid to be Children of the Eaſt; and the laſt of theſe three Hazors was Eaſtward in the wilderneſs of Paran, and Iſhmael is ſaid to have dwelt in this wilderneſs, it is moſt generally held to be the Hazor here ſpoken of, ſome City of the Iſhmaelites, and that the Kingdoms thereof were their ſeveral diviſions, ſome living Eaſt, ſome Weſt, ſome North, and ſome South therefrom, being alwayes moving from one place to another, as was ſaid before. Now to them Nebuchadnezzars coming is alſo threatned, to whom a man would not think that he ſhould have come, being a people that lived within themſelves in quiet, attending their Cattel, and not medling with other Nations. Yet becauſe they were wicked and ungodly, as we gather by the complaint of David, when he was forced to live in the wilderneſs, ſaying, Woe is me that I have my habitation in the Tents of Kedar, as if he were like Lot amongſt the Sodomites, Note. the Lord would not ſuffer them to go unpuniſhed, to ſhew that wickedneſs in whomſoever, although without all civill education, ſhall be ſeverely judged, and alſo that no judgements came upon any people by accident, but by Gods appointment, who is the great Ruler and Judge of all the world.

The Word of the Lord againſt Elam: Moſt by Elam underſtand Perſia: for Elam was the ſon of Shem, Gen. 10.22. and of him came the Elamites, and as Joſephus ſaith, the Perſians. But Pliny diſtinguiſheth the Perſian or Elemaitan Countrey into two Provinces, Suſianes and Elemais being divided by the river Euleus ariſing in Media. And it is moſt probable, ſaith Calvin, that Elemais is here meant, lying between Judea and Perſia, and he conjectures the ſame to be Parthia, but ſoon retracts this, becauſe Act. 2.9. Parthians and Elamites are ſpoken of as divers people, yet he ſpeaks of them again as Parthians, becauſe they are ſpoken of as good Archers, for which the Parthians were famous, but the Elamites of Elemais living near unto them might be ſuch expert Archers alſo. But what made the Lord to be ſo offended with them? Moſt probably they holp the King of Babylon in his wars againſt the Jews, and afterwards upon ſome breach, he, of confederates made them Subjects through a deſire of domineering over all Countries far and wide.

Verſ. 36. I Will bring the four Winds againſt the Elamites, and diſperſe them. This Calvin takes to have been fulfilled after Alexanders death, when his Captains ſtrove moſt fiercely for the Kingdoms of the earth: for then the times were moſt tempeſtuous, as if windes had been raiſed by a divine ſpirit to blow in a moſt terrible manner from all parts. But it is moſt commonly underſtood of Verſ. 37. the Caldees, and the concluſion of the turning of their Captivity at the deſtruction of Babylon, being the ſame with that of Moab, Chap. 48.47. makes it more then probable.

CHAP. L.

HAving propheſied againſt all other Nations,mentioned *Ch.*25. that ſhould drink of the cup of Gods wrath, now he cometh to Babylon,the laſt there ſpoken of under the name of Sheſhak.

Verſ.2. Theodor. Calvin. 2 King.20. Bel is confounded,Merodach is broken down. He beginneth much like unto Iſa. 46.1. where the like is ſaid againſt Bel and Nebo. But here for Nebo is Merodach, thought by ſome to be another Idol of the Babylonians; by others upon better ground the King of Babylon, that firſt founded that Monarchy,ſubduing Aſſyria unto him; and whereas he was dead long before the deſtruction of Babylon, and Belſhazzar reigned then, for he lived in the daies of Hezekiah, being called Merodach Baladan; Calvin anſwers well, That he being moſt famous for his firſt founding of that Monarchy,was doubtleſſe much ſpoken of even after his death, and as the Aſſyrians made Belus, from whom the name Bel cometh, the firſt founder of that Monarchy a god, ſo probably did the Babylonians honour Merodach ſtill, truſting that the Empire ſet up by him him ſhould never have an end. And indeed it might ſeem to humane reaſon impoſſible, becauſe Babylon was ſo mighty a City,and all Nations ſubject unto it. And this made the Prophet to enter upon this Prophecy with ſuch a Preface, Tell it amongſt the Gentiles, hear this, lift up a ſign.

Verſ.3. Verſ.4. Having briefly ſhewed from whence the ruine of Babylon ſhall come, even from the North, that is, the Medes and Perſians, as hath been before declared *Iſa.*13. and is further declared after in this Chapter, he propheſieth of the Iſraelites return then to their own Countrey; of which much is ſpoken before *Chap.*30,31,32,33. and ſpecially *Chap.*31.9. where are the ſame words, They ſhall come together weeping and going, &c.

Verſ.8. Flee out of Babylon, and be as the goats before the flock. So *Iſa.*48.20. and he uſeth the ſimilitude of he-goats, becauſe ſheep are fearfull, and therefore go behinde, but goats not, and therefore go before. See the ſame phraſe uſed of ſpiritual Babylon, the ſeat of Antichriſt, *Rev.*18.4.

Verſ.12. The hindermoſt of the Nations ſhall be a wilderneſſe. Hebr. Behold the hindermoſt of the Nations, a wilderneſſe; That is, Babylon that was the Lady, ſhall be the baſeſt, their mother, that is, their monarchical greatneſs ſhall be aſhamed to ſee what it is come to.

Verſ.15. Calvin. Compaſſe her about,her hand is given. That is, after the manner of them that be overcome and yield, the Babylonians lifted up their hands for mercy, or her hand is ſaid to be given, becauſe two Princes of Babylon upon diſpleaſure taken, ſent for Cyrus to come againſt their City, and this may be ſaid a reaching out or giving the hand; So Calvin.

Verſ.20. The iniquity of Iſrael ſhall be ſought for, and there ſhall be none, for I will pardon, &c. This may ſeem to make for the fooliſh Antinomians of theſe times, who ſay, That a juſtified man is without ſin, neither is any thing that he doth ſin, contrary to *Rom.*7. But it is to be noted, how Iſrael is ſaid to be without ſinne, viz, not becauſe nothing that Iſrael ſhould henceforth do, was ſinfull, but becauſe to the juſtified no ſin is imputed. And this was the end of their affliction, and becauſe this promiſe of forgiving ſin both here and *Chap.*31.33. imply perfect healing after ſmiting; this is that which we muſt aim at in our ſufferings,and not ſo much that our pain and ſorrow may ceaſe.

Verſ.21. Go againſt the Land of Merethaim,and the inhabitants of Pechod. Calvin, The Land of exaſperators,and the inhabitants of viſitation,as the words ſignify,whereby he meaneth Babylon that ſhould be viſited for her wickedneſſes, whereby ſhe had provoked the Lord to anger. And in ſaying thus, he calleth upon the Medes and Perſians, by whom the Lord would puniſh her in his due time. They were ſo farre remote indeed that they heard not what the Prophet ſaid, but he that ſpake by the Prophet, to ſhew that his words were not a vain ſound in the air, made them penetrate to thoſe remote Nations by his Spirit, to the ſtirring of them up to do this execution.

I have laid alſo a ſnare for thee, and thou wert not aware. Hereby the Prophet foretels the very manner of Babylons deſtruction, viz. by Cyrus his draining of the water away by many ditches with great labour firſt made, and then upon the ſudden in the night, letting it all out by them, ſo that the river Euphrates, which ran thorow the City, and filled the broad ditches about it, making it inacceſſible, ſuddenly ran other waies, and ſo the ſouldiers ranne in unawares and ſurprized it, when the defendants were all ſleeping ſecurely, and for the ſtrength of the place feared nothing, as hath been more at large ſhewed before upon *Iſa.*13.14. and Ezra 1. 2 *King.*25. Verſ.24.

Slay all her bullocks. Where by bullocks he underſtandeth the chief and mightieſt amongſt them, wherein their ſtrength chiefly lay. Verſ. 27.

A ſword ſhall be upon the liers. Calvin reads it Diviners, that is, Aſtrologers, who took upon them by the ſtars to foretell all things touching humane affairs, but more often falſly then truly, for which they are called Liers, *Iſa.*44.25. they are the ſame whom he called before their wiſe men, *verſ.*35. Verſ.36.

*Verſ.*39,40. Touching the overthrow of Babylon, as of Sodom, and wilde beaſts dwelling there, ſee before upon *Iſa.*13.19,21.

*Verſ.*44,45. He ſhall come up like a Lion, &c. Theſe words are the ſame for two verſes together that were uſed againſt Edom *Chap.*49.19,20. therefore ſee the Expoſition of them there.

CHAP. LI.

IN this Chapter the Prophet goeth on to ſet forth the ſame deſtruction of Babylon in many more words, and ſometimes repeating the ſame that he had ſpoken before: for further confirmation, becauſe it was a thing ſo incredible that ſuch a mighty City now ruling over all Kingdoms, ſhould be deſtroyed. And Verſ. 5. here again their emnity againſt the Church of God in Judah is ſhewed to be cauſe, although the Caldees inhabiting there were uſed as inſtruments againſt her for her chaſtiſement for her ſins.

Babylon a golden cup in the hand of the Lord, making the whole earth drunken. Verſ.7. This is added here after ſuch terrible threatnings againſt Babylon in way of anſwer to an objection that might be made thus, Shall Babylon be ſo cruelly deſtroyed, that is now ſo precious, even like a golden cup carried by none other hand but the Lords. What hath ſhe done to be thus ſeverely and extreamly proceeded againſt, ſeeing nothing hath been done by her, neither hath ſhe attained to ſuch riches and glory, but at the will and appointment of the Lord? Sol. He that made her as a golden cup, did not make her ſo to continue alwayes in this ſtate, but when the work was done, for which he thus advanced her, to bring her down again to the loweſt ebbe of miſery, as he had advanced her to the greateſt height of worldly felicity. As he might juſtly do, becauſe in ſtead of loving and honouring God the more, as ſhe ought to have done for this high honour done to her, ſhe lifted up her ſelf againſt him in pride and contempt of his poor people, and ſetting up other gods againſt him, as Nebuchadnezzar his golden Image, *Dan.*3. In ſpeaking thus therefore, he ſheweth, Note. 1. That the greatneſs of thoſe that are moſt highly advanced in this world, cometh from the Lord. 2. He doth thus advance often times the moſt wicked, as all the four Monarchs of the world: So that to be in moſt high and eminent place here is no argument of Gods favour ſhewed for any ſpecial love that he bears to them that are thus advanced, but only when any ſuch is alſo moſt eminent for grace. 3. The advancement of the wicked is only that he may be a cup of indignation, that he may be an inſtrument to execute Gods wrath upon others that provoke him by their ſins, and therefore he giveth ſometimes a King in his wrath, which when it is ſo, the Subjects are patiently to bear it, as David did Saul, and cry to the Lord, and to turn from their ſins. 4 The wicked being in greateſt pomp and glory, ſhall not long continue; If he be now a golden cup he ſhall ſoon be as a broken earthen pot; to which effect it folfrom wickedneſs, this ſhall certainly be the end of all the wicked, how high ſoever elevated in this world, and turn they will not, according to the next Verſ. 9. words, Take balm for her pain, if ſhe may be healed: We would have healed Babylon, &c. They are ſo faſcinated with their own greatneſs, power and glory, whilſt they are in proſperity. For it was never known, that any one ſuch in his height of honour was humbled, although Nebuchadnezzar being dejected was, and Manaſſeh King of Judah, one by being driven from amongſt men to the beaſts, the other by being taken by his enemies and captived, and brought to miſery. We would have healed Babylon, this is ſpoken in the perſon of forreign Nations coming to help her being diſtreſſed by Cyrus, as the next words imply, Let us go to our own countrey, there is no help for her but ſhe muſt periſh.

For Babylons making other Nations drunken and mad, the meaning is nothing elſe, but her coming upon them in ſuch a dreadful deſtroying way, as God had given the King thereof power to do, that they were by his ſudden and powerfull coming upon them like unto drunken men, unable to ſtand, or to take any wiſe counſell to ſave themſelves, for this is the very caſe of men very drunken, they ſpue and fall and want reaſon and power for the time to ſave themſelves from any approaching danger.

Touching the laſt words, Therefore the Nations are mad. That is, being thus made drunken they rage, and do they know not what, nothing to be ſure to benefit themſelves, but to hurt them more and more, and he that is mad through drunkenneſs runneth upon the ſwords point, according to the ſaying, In prælia Horatius. trudit inermem, What doth not drunkenneſs? it thruſts him that is unarmed into the battel. As Moab is ſaid before to have run to Idols-Temples to ſeek help, which was but to run more and more into danger.

Verſ. 10. The Lord hath made our righteouſneſſe to come forth, and let us declare in Zion,
The Work of the Lord. A Queſtion is here made, What is meant by their righ-teouſneſs, in favour of whom this great work of deſtroying Babylon was wrought, that they, that is, the Jews might be delivered out of the captivity, wherein they were held there, for what righteouſneſs was in them? Yea con-trariwiſe what ſins were there that did not abound amongſt them. Some anfor it is a word plural, their juſt cauſe is meant, that is, their religion, which was the religion of God that they profeſſed, but by the Babylonians made a Verſ.11. Becauſe it is the vengeance of the Lord, the vengeance of his Temple. That is, the deſtruction of Babylon by the Medes, is the vengeance taken by God upon her for deſtroying his Temple at Jeruſalem, and formerly robbing it, and carrying away the hallowed precious veſſels thereof, and ſo overthrowing his worſhip and ſervice there; Hebr. it is, This is the vengeance of the Lord, and ſo it is rendred by Calvin, that is, this ruining of Babylon by the Medes, then come indeed as men deſirous to magnifie themſelves by ſubduing this glorious Monarchy, but they are herein but Gods inſtruments to take revenge for ſo great indignities done to the Lord. Note. As he will never ſuffer in any that which is proudly and cruelly done againſt his houſe, his Church, to go finally unrevenged.

Verſ.13. O thou that dwelleſt upon many Waters. In ſaying thus he alludeth to the ſituation of Babylon upon the banks of the river Euphrates, and great waters without the wals on every ſide, making much for the defence thereof, therefore he mentioneth this, that none might make a queſtion, whether it could be deſtroyed being with ſuch deep and broad waters compaſſed about and made unacceſſible. For when God comes againſt a place, no waters, or wals, or other fortifications will ſtand it in ſtead againſt his almighty power; And Riches, of which he ſpeaks next ſhall be but as droſſe; and this deſtruction, he ſaith, ſhall be the meaſure of their covetouſneſſe, that is, all power and ſtrength to rake more wealth together from other parts being taken away, for what can men do this way any more, when their very life and being faileth? Note. And this is the caſe of all the worldly covetous, there will be an end then put to their coveting, when to their lives, but never before, for how much ſoever they have, as the Babylonians could not but abound in wealth, they ſtill cry with horſleeches daughters, Give, give, till their mouths be thus ſtopt.

Verſ. 15. He hath made the earth by his power, &c. In this and verſ. 16. the Prophet ſheweth the infinite greatneſſe of the Lord, becauſe he was ſpeaking of the fall of the great Monarchy of the world, to make it the more credible: for what ſhall ſeem hard to him to do, that made and eſtabliſheth the whole world by his power and wiſdom?

Verſ. 17. Every one is brutiſh in knowledge, and every founder confounded by the graven image. Having ſhewed the Lords power *verſ.*15,16. now becauſe he had to do with Idolaters, who might think, if the God of Iſrael had power, Babylon had gods alſo to defend her againſt him; he ſheweth the vanity of all other gods, and their impotency, and the blockiſh ſtupidity of all ſuch men as made them, and put their truſt in them; for whenas in getting and making them many ſuch gods they thought that they did very wiſely, they ſhewed themſelves ſtark fools, as the Apoſtle ſaith, *Rom.*1.19.

Verſ.19. The portion of Jacob is not like them, he is the former of all things, and Iſrael is the rod of his inheritance, The Lord of hoſts is his name. Having ſhewed the impotency of falſe gods made by fooliſh men, now he proceedeth further to ſhew the power of the true God, firſt deſcribing him by this, that he is the portion of Jacob, borrowing the words of David, Pſal. 16. The Lord is my portion; and he calleth Iſrael the rod of his inheritance, becauſe the Land where Iſrael dwelt by Gods miraculous placing of him there, was ſet out unto him by meaſure, which was by a rod or metpole, wherefore the rod of his inheritance is no more but his inheritance, which is meant both of that place and Gods people of Iſrael ſet by him to inhabit there, being ſingularly for his chooſing of them above all other peoples in the world thus called: becauſe otherwiſe the whole world, if we look upon it as under the Lords dominion, is his hereditary Kingdom, and ſo his inheritance alſo.

Now he ſheweth Gods power, *verſ.*20,21,22,23.

Verſ. 20. Thou art my battel-ax, or hammer, for by thee I will break in pieces the Nations. This is ſpoken by the Lord in ſhewing his power to Nebuchadnezzar, that was ſuch an hammer breaking the ſtrength of all Countreys whereſoever he came, as *Iſa.*10. he calleth him his rod and ſtaff, and *verſ.*7. A golden cup for the comfort of his Servants; it being hereby intimated, that he could do nothing but by Gods power and direction.

Verſ. 25. I am againſt thee (O deſtroying Mountain.) Babylon ſtood upon a plain, and yet is called a Mountain here, for the high and huge Walls and Towers compaſſing it about, ſo that it ſeemed afar oft as a Mountain; and it is ſo called for the ſtrength, being commonly held to ſtand ſo ſtrongly as a Mountain, that cannot be removed; But all this was nothing, for ſo much as God was againſt it. For deſtroying Mountain.] Calvin hath it, Mens perditions; and the Hebrew משחית will bear it, and then it may as well be called thus, becauſe to be deſtroyed, as deſtroying.

Verſ. 27. Call the Kingdomes of Ararat, Minni, and Aſhkenaz againſt her. Touching Ararat, all agree that it is Armenia; and Hiſtory ſheweth, that Darius King of the Medes, brought Armenians with him in his Army, when he came againſt Babylon. But what Minni was is not certainly known, becauſe no where elſe mentioned in Scripture; onely Damaſcen lib. 69. ſaith, There is upon the Countrey of the Minnians, a Mountain in Armenia named Baris, to which many fled in time of Noah his floud to ſave themſelves: and Strabo writeth of the Minnians, who came to build Triphilda. He alſo writeth of them in Arabia, and Ptolomee likewiſe: but becauſe the Medes were far diſtant from Arabia, and they had Armenians amongſt them; theſe Minni moſt probably were of the Countrey ſo called there. Touching Aſchenaz, he was the firſt-born of Japhet, Gen. 10. 3. from whom moſt probably the Countrey here ſpoken of had the name. Theodoret ſaith, it was a Countrey near unto Armenia, and the Minæans. Some will have the Arabians meant, who were called Scenites, but here is a ſyllable more. Junius ſaith, that both Armeniaas, and Aſia minor alſo are ſynechdochically comprehendded under this name Aſchenaz, and came onely written of as taken by Cyrus before his going againſt Babylon. And for the Minni, he ſaith, that it was a part of Armenia; both the upper and the nether lying of old within Syria, otherwiſe called Aram, from whence the name Armenia came, quaſi Aram-minnia. The Captain to be ſet over them was Cyrus, who being Son in law to Darius went with him to this War, as the chief whilſt he lived; but he being dead, which was within one year after the taking of Babylon, Cyrus was Monarch of all.

Verſ. 30. The mighty men of Babylon ceaſed to fight. Here the deſtruction of Babylon is ſet forth, as it fell out indeed when Cyrus took it. For by coming into the City in the nigt unexpectedly through the draining away of the waters, he took it without fighting. All were ſo amazed, that they were without heart or courage to make oppoſition, although there were very great forces within, and truſting to their ſtrength, they had but little before derided their enemies, as vainly attempting ſo great a work, as to ſubdue Babylon; and the very day before they had a great Feaſt to ſhew their ſecurity. So that not onely the thing to be done, but the manner how, was revealed by the Prophet, and they even anſwering the Prophecie, ſhewed plainly a divine ſpirit in him, from whom nothing to come, though long after, is hidden; that we may ſtedfaſtly believe, and nothing doubt of any good thing by this ſpirit revealed in Gods holy Word. verſe 31.

Note.

Verſ. 31. One Poſt ſhall run ofter another to tell the King that the City is taken at one end. This is alſo added, to ſhew yet more particularly the manner of proceeding in the taking of Babylon: For when it was taken at one end, it was ſo large, that it was not known at the other, till that by Poſts running and declaring it, the King heard it, and then he was ſlain.

Verſ. 33. Babylon is like a threſhing-floor. See the like Iſaiah 21. 10. And to a threſhing-floor is Babylon aptly compared, becauſe that after harveſt, when the corn was gathered, they ſoon fell to threſhing in thoſe parts: ſo the Babylonians having been long in gathering abundance of wealth, came at length to be as the harveſt full-ripe, and gathered in, then the Medes and Perſians came and threſhed them, by laying on load with their Swords, Bils and Halberds, and making a prey of all their Treaſures, kept before in ſafe places, as Corn in the ears, beating ting them open, how ſtrongly ſoever locked up therein. Whereas he addeth, Yet a little while, and the time of her harveſt ſhall come. This is ſpoken according to other places of Scripture, as where the Lord ſaith, for the comfort of his people; For a Moment I have forſaken thee, but with everlaſting mercies I will imbrace thee. Wherefore although this judgement came not upon Babylon, till ſeventy years after, yet with the Lord all that time was but a little while.

Verſ. 34. Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon hath devoured me. This is the complaint of Gods people, the Jewes, inſerted here to ſhew that the proceedings of the Lord againſt Babylon were juſt, as being but a taking of revenge upon her, as ſhe deſerved by her harſh and cruell dealing with his holy City Jeruſalem.

Verſ. 36. I will dry up her Sea, and make her Springs dry. Which was done, as hath been before ſaid, when the great River Euphrates compaſſing her about as a Sea an Iſland, was drayned by Cyrus, the waters being made to run another way by trenches digged purpoſely.

Verſ. 39. In their heat I will make their Feaſts, and will make them drunken. Here again by another circumſtance moſt notable at the deſtruction of Babylon, as the event declared, he deſcribeth it ſo as that no Hiſtorian living when it was done, could more punctually ſet down the manner. For as Xenophon agreeth, the King of Babylon and people kept a Feaſt to the honour of Bel the day before; at what time they uſed to ſpend the night in drinking, dancing and ſinging; which Cyrus hearing, took the opportunity of letting ſuddenly the water out, and ſo invading the City. For the Babylonians feared him not, to intermit for the ſiege any whit the more their accuſtomed merry times keeping: for they commonly ſaid, that they had need to make them proviſion for twenty years, if they meant to continue the ſiege till Babylon were taken. Therefore it is rightly ſaid, that their Feaſts ſhould be made in their heat, and then they ſhould be drunken and ſleep, and never wake more; becauſe that being heat with Wine and good chear, and dancing, they ſlept, and by their enemies coming then upon them, were deſtroyed, their ſleep thus proving everlaſting. Of this drinking, ſee alſo Iſaiah 21. 5. and the Prophets deriding of them for it long before.

Xenoph. Cyripæd. lib. 7.

Verſ. 41. How is Sheſhak taken? Of Sheſhak, Chap. 25. 26.

Verſ. 42. The Sea is come up upon Babylon. The waters about Babylon were dryed, ver. 36. How then doth he ſay, that the Sea comes upon her; and yet again verſe 43. he calleth her a dry land. But by the Sea here, he meaneth the Forces of the Medes, that ſhould for multitude be rather like unto a Sea, than a company of men, the waves whereof no wals of any City can withſtand; and he ſets them forth by the Sea, leſt being lookt upon onely as an army of men, they might be thought unable ever to effect ſo great a work. And thus we ſee, how Babylon might be covered with waves of water, and yet be made a dry land like a Wilderneſſe.

Verſ. 44. I will puniſh Bel in Babylon, and take that out of his mouth which he hath devoured. Bel was the chief God of the Babylonians, and was worſhipped likewiſe all over Aſſyria; and therefore he had many Offerings of precious things brought unto him from all Countreys about, that were ſubject to Babylon by ſuch as would come into favour with the Citizens there. And by this means his Temple came to be greatly inriched, and all theſe Offerings are ſpoken of as by Bel devoured. But the Lord threatens now to bring what he had devoured out of his mouth, meaning to ſpoil him of all his goods, which ſuperſtitious men had offered unto him, which was done when the Perſians took all away, and Cyrus carried that Idol away, as a rich prize, being all of maſſie gold, thus Calvin. Some others expound it according to the Hiſtory of Bel, Dan 14. where he is feigned to have devoured dayly forty ſhip, &c. the gifts that were offered to him not being excluded: But devouring properly cannot be here underſtood, ſeeing that which is ſo devoured is conſumed. Hugo underſtands by that which Bel devoured, the poor Jews, and this agreeth well with the complaint of the Jews before going, verſe 34. And therefore is chiefly to be approved, and accordingly Babylon being ſubdued, they were delivered. Now Nebuchadnezzar indeed is is ſaid there to have devoured them, not Bel: But Nebuchadnezzar aſcribed it to the power of his God, that he prevailed againſt them and took them, and the people of other nations; and therefore it may well be ſaid of Bel, I will bring that which he hath devoured out of his mouth. And for other Treaſures, whether of their Babylonians, or of their god, enough hath been ſaid before under the Metaphor of the harveſt and threſhing of Babylon, verſe 33. Wherefore moſt probably, the Jewes, and their precious veſſels taken out of the houſe of God at Jeruſalem, and placed in the Temple of Bel, are meant; For all theſe were brought forth again, and re-carried to Jeruſalem. And this is thus ſpoken for the comfort and confirmation of Gods faithfull people, who might be ready to ſtagger in their faith, when they ſaw the Babylonians ſerving Bel to prevail againſt them that ſerved the true God; and to doubt whether Bel were not more mighty than he. But when they ſhould ſee Bel thus puniſhed, and his people, they could not but cry out, Bel is vanity, and the Lord he is God. Of the originall of this Superſtition, and the magnificence of Bel in his Temple, Herodotus writeth thus; Semiramis built in the midſt of the City the Temple of Bel thus. It was fourſquare two Furlongs on every ſide, having brazen gates. In the midſt of the Temple there was a Tower in compaſſe and height a Furlong; and upon this ſtood another Tower, and upon that another to the eighth, wherein was a Chappell, and in it a bed richly made, and a Table of Gold; and then another inferiour Chappell, wherein there was a great Image of Jupiter all of Gold, and behind it a golden Table, and a pillar and a ſeat all of Gold, eſtimated at eight hundred Talents; without the Temple was an huge Altar of Gold, and another greater for Sacrifices, becauſe that no bloud might come upon the golden Altar, but onely of ſucking things. In the Temple was an Image of twelve Cubits high of maſſie Gold; and here were many other peculiar gifts, but at the deſtruction of Babylon all theſe things were brought forth and the Temple deſtroyed. Myſtically by Bel underſtand the Devill, by Cyrus Chriſt, of whom he was an eminent Type, who brings out of the Devils mouth that roaring Lion, ſuch as he had in a manner devoured, by making them his Bondſlaves, when by dying he ſubdued him, and by his ſpirit works true faith in their hearts.

Verſ. 46. Leſt your hearts faint, and ye fear for the rumour that ſhall be heard in the Land. Hereby the Prophet further intimates, that when Babylon ſhould be at the point of deſtruction by the Medes, the whole land and all therein ſhould be in great ſtraights by means of the Siege; yea, and the Jewes alſo amongſt others, both through the preſent want of neceſſaries for this life, being Captives, and ſo likely to ſuffer moſt at ſuch a time; and alſo the fear of the event of this war, if the enemy ſhould prevail, at whoſe mercy they ſhould then be, whether to live or dye. But they are bidden not to faint or fear, although rumours of deſtruction come to their eares year after year; that is, Firſt, before the coming of the enemy; for before the Medes came they heard of it; and when preparation being made one year, they came the next, and in the ſame year took Babylon; then a rumour did flee hereof about the City by Poſts, as was ſaid before verſe 31. and then great violence was exerciſed by one Ruler againſt another; by Cyrus againſt Belſhazzar; but he ſheweth that there ſhould then be no cauſe of fearing to the Jewes, it being the time, and this being the means of their deliverance; whereas, if this had not been, they muſt have been perpetuall Captives; but now they ſhould have an opportunity to return home, and goe away from Babylon, not partaking with her in her puniſhment, as is implyed in ſaying, Go out of the midſt of her my people, verſe 45. According to this our Lord frameth his ſpeech, Matth. 24. and Luke 21. when he ſaith, Ye ſhall hear of Wars and rumours of Wars, but be not troubled, &c. And it ſerves for us in theſe dayes, now that the time approacheth of the deſtruction of ſpirituall Babylon, the Papacy; for there are new things that may terrifie us, viz. the perſecutions raiſed by the Papiſts, ſince the diſcovery of their corruptions, and proteſting againſt them, from time to time; but we are forbidden to fear for this, when all things are moſt turbulent, the deliverance of the Church is neareſt. Verſ. 59.

This Prophecie is concluded with a command given to Seraiah the Son of Neriah, that went into Babylon with Zedekiah, that when he ſhould come into Babylon, he ſhould take the Book written hereof by Jeremiah, and binding it to a great ſtone to caſt it into the River, for a further demonſtration that it ſhould be done as he had propheſied. Here a queſtion ariſeth, Whether it be meant, as the New Tranſlation, and Vulgar have it, that Seraiah went with Zedekiah, or from Zedekiah; becauſe we read not before of Zedekiah his going into Babylon, till that he was carried thither Captive. But of his ſending Embaſſadors thither, we read Jerem. 39. 3. So ſome think, that in the fourth year of his reign here ſpoken of, Seraiah went from him, (the King himſelf not going) with ſome preſent to Nebuchadnezzar, that he might keep his favour. And therefore they render it from Zedekiah, affirming that את, which is the word here uſed, ſignifieth either with, or from: but the Vulgar, Vatabl. Tigurin. render it with, and Pagnin acknowledgeth none other uſe of the word את, but either to be a ſigne of the Accuſative Caſe, or to ſignifie cum, with, and in Sedar olam, as Calvin acknowledgeth, it is ſaid, that Zedekiah went the ſaid fourth year into Babylon; and therefore, although it be not before ſpoken of, it is moſt probable that he did, it being left to be ſpoken of here. And at this time it may be conceived, that Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him King inſtead of Jehojakim, bound him by oath to be true to him, which he afterwards brake, and was puniſhed accordingly, 2 Chron. 36. 13. 2. For his Epithete, A peaceable Prince, or, A Prince of quiet, Whether in the word rendred quiet, be not rather meant his Office, or imployment, a Prince of Menucah; becauſe in the Hebrew it is, מנוחה, which word indeed ſignifieth quiet or reſt, but is by the Vulgar rendred Prince of Prophecie; by Lyra, Sept. Cald. Princeps muneris, of the gift or preſent ſent to Nebuchadnezzar. But then the word muſt have been מנחה, Mihcah; and for rendring it Prophecie, I ſee no colour of reaſon, onely ſome favourers of the Vulgar Tranſlation ſay, that he might be an Inditer and ſinger of ſuch Songs as tended to the quieting of the minde, and from hence be thus called, and ſinging of Pſalmes is ſometimes expreſſed by propheſying. But the diſpoſition of this Prince is here doubtleſſe pointed at; he was one that quietly ſubmitted to that which he heard from Jeremiah, and to doe his commands from the Lord, as appears by his ſubmitting to carry this Book to Babylon with him, as he was bidden; when being a Prince, and Ieremiah one ſo far inferiour, he would otherwiſe have replyed, Command thy Servants, doſt thou command me? Moreover, it was dangerous for Seraiah to doe this in Babylon; and therefore herein his quiet and meek diſpoſition appeared, that he yielded notwithſtanding to doe as he was bidden. Some think, that he is called a quiet Prince, becauſe he quieted the Kings minde by ſome pleaſant Speeches or Songs in his angry fits, or becauſe he was over buſineſſes concerning peace. Whereas this Book is ſaid to have been written in the fourth year of Zedekiah, but Ieremiah propheſied after this, it is to be underſtood, that it was the Prophecie of theſe two Chapters onely, which Ieremiah now wrote, and delivered to Seraiah, and not all his Prophecies, many of which concerned not Babylon, but other Countreys.

TOuching Chapter 52. it is the ſame verbatim with 2 Kings 24. and therefore I refer the Reader for the Expoſition thither; and whether it were written here by Jeremiah or no, it may be queſtioned; becauſe ſome things herein related hapned after Jeremiah his death; which when it was, ſee at the beginning of this Propheſie. Therefore it is moſt probable, as ſome conjecture, that Baruch tranſcribed it from 2 Kings 24. hither, that the Lamentations, after this lamentable relation of Jeruſalems deſtruction, might the more aptly follow.

Lamentations of Jeremiah.

Hieron.

THeſe Lamentations are thought by ſome to have been made at the untimely death of Ioſiah : but for this I ſee no reaſon, although his death may be thought to be pointed at, Chap. 4. 20. The breath of our Noſtrils, the anointed of the Lord was taken in their pits. Speaking of the Egyptians, that were his death, but now in vain expected to come and help Judah againſt Nebuchadnezzar, when Jeruſalem was beſieged. They were then made after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the Temple, and all the magnificent buildings; wherein he bewaileth not onely their preſent condition, but that alſo wherein they were in the time of the ſieges, as the Contents do manifeſt; the fall of that good King Joſiah long before not being forgotten. For the order whereby he proceedeth, it is generally by complaining of miſeries, confeſſing ſins, and prayers. More particularly Chap. 1. he lamenteth the caſe of Jeruſalem, being now utterly ruined, in reſpect of the grievouſneſs of the ſpectacle, being formerly ſo glorious, Chap. 2. the ruine of the houſe of God and Religion there, which were ſo precious above all worldly things, Chap. 3. the ignominy, contempt and deriſion wherein the people of God were, by reaſon of this amongſt the Heathen, Chap. 4. the miſeries ſuffered by famine in the time of the ſiege, Chap. 5. He prayeth moſt earneſtly, and to move the Lord the more, briefly ſums up their ſufferings again, craving a converſion.

Rupert. l. 2. de Trin.

Rupertus diſtinguiſheth the four former Chapters thus. Firſt, Jeremiah lamenteth the miſeries of men in generall. Secondly, the miſeries of the Jewes in particular at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Babylonians. Thirdly, his own miſeries and troubles. Fourthly, the miſeries of the Jewes by the ſecond deſtruction of their City by the Romans, which he alſo by the Spirit foreſaw.

Euſeb. Cæſar.

Euſeb. Cæſar. will have the firſt Chapter to be a Lamentation for Jehojakim carried away, when Judah was firſt made Tributary; the ſecond for the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Caldees, &c. But the moſt certain is the deſtribution by me before made. For the manner of writing, it is Poeticall, for the four former Chapters, as the Hebrewes Poeſie was, by proceeding according to the two and twenty Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, Chapt. 1, 2. and 4. and Chapt. 3. every Letter being doubled, as א, verſe 1, 2. ב, verſe 3, 4, &c.

Verſ. 1.

For the manner of proceeding, Chap. 1. He Lamenteth the miſery of Jeruſalem, comparing the miſery to which ſhe was now brought with her priſtin felicity, verſe 1, 2, &c, to verſe 8. Secondly, he confeſſeth her ſins, the cauſe hereof, verſe 8, 9. Thirdly, he falleth again to Lamenting, verſe 10, 11, 12, 13. Fourthly, he confeſſeth again; adding to his Confeſſion a Relation of that which ſhe ſuffered by her enemies, verſe 14, 15. Fiftly, he more Emphatically Lamenteth it by ſhedding tears, verſe 16, 17. Sixtly, he confeſſeth again to God, and complains to man, and prayeth, verſe 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. Verſ.3. They took her in her ſtraights. That is, being brought firſt to great miſery by famine.

Verſ.7. In the day of her affliction ſhe remembred all her pleaſant things. That is, although in time of proſperity ſhe eſteemed not ſo of the good things that ſhe enjoyed, a Magnificent Temple, ſumptuous Palaces, abundance of wealth and dominion over other Countreys about; yet in adverſity all theſe things came Note. into her minde, to the increaſe of her ſorrow. And this is common, whilſt we enjoy benefits, we eſteem not of them as we ought, to be thankfull; but being deprived of them, we recount them to our greater vexation, and aggravation of our miſery; and then we think, if we did now enjoy the like bleſſings, we would ſo prize them, and be thankfull for them, that we would never provoke God to take them away. The ſaying is true. Magis carendo quam fruendo beneficia æſtimamus.

Verſ. 8. For the 2. verſe 8. The ſins of Jeruſalem were the cauſe of all this, they made her naked for all to behold it; and he ſaid, That ſhe ſighed, and turned backward. That is, turned her face back, as being aſhamed to be ſeen in this contemptible and derided condition; as a woman that hath played the Harlot, and being brought forth to do Pennance therefore, being aſhamed to look upon her ſpectators, turns her head another way. Calvin. Calvin ſaith, without all hope of reſtitution, Tho. Aquinas. ſhe declineth and looketh backward. Thomas Aquinas and Lyra, Lyra. She goeth from Liberty into Captivity. Some, going into Captivity, ſhe lookt back towards Jeruſalem, to take her leave to her greater grief of her beloved City, and the Contents thereof. Let the Reader follow any of theſe; but that of Origen Origen. and Olympiodorus, that ſhe turned from an evill to a good life, is moſt im*Olymp.*probable.

Verſ.12. Is it nothing to you, all yee that paſſe by? &c. This is added as an aggravation of the Jewes grief, that none pitied them, although their miſeries were incomparable.

Verſ. 13. He hath ſent a fire from above into my bones, and ſpread a net for my feet. This is ſpoken in way of acknowledgement, that all Jeruſalems ſufferings came from the Lord, and were moſt grievous, and unavoidable; grievous as a fire ſent from God, which burneth more ardently than any ordinary fire kindled by man, becauſe it pierceth to the very bones within; and unavoidable, becauſe as a net laid by him that hath ſuch skill to ſet it, that none for whom it is ſet can eſcape it, or being intangled, get out again, till that he delivers them. He hath turned me back. That is, being in a proſperous eſtate before, now by his judgements I am gone backward into extream adverſity. All the day long: That is, for a long time day after day.

Verſ.14. The yoke of my tranſgreſſions is bound by his hand. That is, the heavy yoke of Note. puniſhment by bondage to enemies, which is the juſt reward of ſin. For ſin is an heavy yoke, and importable, eſpecially for the bondage into which ſinners are brought hereby, both temporall often times, and ſpirituall alwayes, from which 2 Tim. 2. 26. they can never get free, till that by repentance they come out of the ſnare of the Devill, being otherwiſe in continuall danger of being bound hand and foot, and caſt into utter darkneſſe.

Verſ.17. Ieruſalem is as a menſtruous woman amongſt them. That is, as filthineſs which is caſt out, and had in abomination by all men.

Verſ. 21. Thou wilt bring the day that thou haſt called, and they ſhall be like unto me, Hebrew, Thou haſt made the day thou calledſt for: and ſo Calvin renders it. Vulg. Thou haſt brought the day of Conſolation. It is an acknowledgement, that this time of ſuffering ſo grievouſly was long agoe threatned, but they would never believe it to amend their lives; but now to their ſmart it was come, and it was the enemies delight; but he ſaith, They ſhall be like unto me. That is, after ſeventy years their turn ſhall come to be deſtroyed as I am at this day.

CHAP. II.

Verſ.1. H*Ow hath the Lord covered the Daughter of Zion with a Cloud?* What is meant by covering her with a Cloud, is eaſie to underſtand, viz to make her obſcure and baſe that was the moſt noble of other Cities; and to the ſame effect is it ſaid further; And caſt down her beauty to the ground: and then he cals her beauty, his foot-ſtool, which was the Temple, Pſal. 5. 132. 7.

Verſ.2. He hath polluted the Kingdom, and the Princes thereof. That is, by making them to be of no more eſtem than filthy and vile things, which are deſpiſed by all men as naught worth.

Verſ. 6. The Lord hath violently taken away his Tabernacle, as a garden. That is, the Temple built ſo ſtrongly and glorioully as a Cottage in a Garden, which is little and ſleighty for a ſhort time onely ſet up for him that tendeth a Garden or Vineyard to goe into and reſt himſelf, and thence to ſee it; that neither beaſts nor theeves come to annoy it, till the time of the fruit-gathering be paſt; See Iſa. 1. 9. He hath deſtroyed his places of the Aſſembly, he hath cauſed the ſolemn Feaſts and Sabbaths to be forgotten. In the Hebrew the ſame word מוער Mogned is uſed for Aſſemblie and Feaſts, and it ſignifieth both, and a ſet time Calvin. alſo. Calvin renders it in the firſt place Teſtimony; he hath deſtroyed his Teſtimony. That is, the ſigne of it, the Ark, but becauſe the Tabernacle, wherein the Ark was alſo contained, was ſpoken of before; the Aſſemblies made before it at Feſtivall times muſt needs be meant. And ſo it is beſt read, He hath deſtroyed the Aſſembling of his people to his worſhip and ſervice, that there can be no more meeting now about this in Zion. And for want of ſuch Aſſemblings continued, he hath made the Feaſt and Sabbaths to be forgotten, they being not now kept, as times forgotten ever to have been ordained.

Verſ.9. Her Law is no more, her Prophets finde no viſion any more. This of allother things made their miſery moſt extream, it being meant that in their ſufferings they had no Prophets to teach and comfort them from God, as they had in former times, Pſal. 74. 9. for the Law is often put for the Word and wholſome Doctrine taught out of it, and Prophets and Prieſts were the teachers thereof, which now failed; Prieſts, as was touched before, verſe 6. and Prophets here.

Verſ.14. Thy Prophets have ſeen vain and fooliſh things for thee. Here again he returns to the cauſe of their miſery, the falſe Prophets that roſe up amongſt them, and promiſed them that which the Lord never ſpake, whereby they were incouraged in their ſins, as Hananiah, Jeremiah 28. and others. For this, although they were for a time pleaſed with it, was to their deſtruction, a warning to all men, to take Note. heed, that they be not carryed away by ſuch; and who be ſuch we may gather by the contrary, verſe 9. where true Prophets are ſet forth, as ſtanding and failing with the Law, or Word of God, implying, that they are ſuch as teach nothing but the very Word of God; ſo that they which teach otherwiſe, Propheſie vain and fooliſh things, the very bane of true piety; and overthrow of that people that giveth heed unto them. And therefore ſuch as in theſe miſerable times teach divers things, for Government, Doctrine, publick Worſhip, or neglect the ſupreme Ordinance of men in any caſe, are ſuch kind of Prophets, and to be taken heed of.

Verſ. 17. He hath fulfilled his Word that he commanded in the dayes of old. That is, to be publiſhed even in Moſes his time in reſpect of the particulars before going, as Deut. 28.

Verſ. 18. Their heart cryed to the Lord. This expreſſion is made to ſhew, that their miſeries went to their very hearts to make them to ſigh and groan, which is the crying of the heart. This is ſometime a prevalent crying indeed, when as Moſes or Hannah we cry to the Lord; but no ſuch crying in faith and out of ſorrow for ſin is here meant; but the crying of the heart for anguiſh, and that to the Lord; as nature puts on every one in ſuch caſes to doe; although the wicked Job 21. 14. at other times they ſay, What profit ſhall we have if we call upon him? Wherefore he turns to the Walls of Jeruſalem which were broken down, bidding them to weep and cry alſo without ceaſing; hereby intimating both the ſad condition of the City, and that the hardeſt hearts, though like a ſtone Wall, could not but weep now abundantly for it; for the very walls themſelves mourned in their kinde, repreſenting continually to all beholders a moſt ſad ſpectacle, as he that hath his cheeks all beſlubbered with tears.

Verſ.20. Shall Women eat their fruit, and children of a ſpan long? Here the Prophet layeth open the miſeries of Jeruſalem to the Lord; as he that would move one to pity makes the moſt lamentable complaint that he can, and ſheweth all things that be of force to move in this kinde. And in ſaying thus, he ſheweth an extremity of famine, whereby they ſuffered; as in the next words, their ſufferings by the ſword.

CHAP. III.

Verſ.1. I Am the man that have ſeen affliction. In this Chapter Jeremiah changeth the perſon hitherto ſet forth lamenting, viz. Of the City Jeruſalem, Zion and Iſrael, and ſpeaks in his own perſon, as bearing a great part in the ſufferings of his brethren the Jewes, becauſe he lived at the time of Jeruſalems deſtruction, and both before and after ſuffered much; what he ſuffered before hath been already ſhewed in the Book of his Propheſie, and likewiſe after by being carried into Egypt, and contemned by the proud men that ruled over them that remained in the land, after the captivity of the reſt. But although he ſpeaks in his own perſon, he did not herein reſpect himſelf onely, but every one of the Jews, ſeeking to draw each of them in like manner to humble himſelf before the Lord, and confeſs their ſins, and to pray, and ſo to be confident of grace and favour again to be reſtored in Gods due time.

The parts of this Chapter are four; Firſt, a complaint of the greatneſſe of his ſufferings in common together with Jeruſalem, verſe 1, 2, &c. to verſe 22. Secondly, a conſolation in reſpect of Gods great mercy; ſo that although he judgeth them grievouſly, yet he will not ſuffer them utterly to periſh, verſe 22, 23, &c. to verſe 37. Thirdly, an Inſtruction, ſhewing that the enemy could not have done thus to them without the Lord; and therefore he exhorteth them to ſeek to him by humbling their ſouls in Confeſſion, teaching them what to ſay, verſe 37, 38. &c. to verſe 55. Fourthly, a Prayer, wherein he ſeeketh to ſtir up the Lord againſt the enemy from this, that their hatred and cruelty againſt his people was not unknown to him, verſe 55, 56, &c. to the end of the Chapter.

For the firſt, he doth by many Allegories aggravate his own and the miſery of Gods people.

1. By a Rod, wherewith he was beaten; for as Aſhur, Iſaiah 10. 5. ſo Babylon was the Rod of his wrath.

2. By darkneſſe, whereby miſerie is commonly ſet forth.

3. By the breaking of his bones; that is, his ſtrength, and the withering of his skin and fleſh, as by a ſharp and tedious ſickneſs, which makes one to look old before that he hath lived many years.

Verſ.5. 4. By building Fortifications againſt him, as an enemie, and thoſe bitter and grievous, ſtraightning him ſo, that he could not come forth for neceſſaries, but was inforced to labour extreamly through want; amplifying the ſecond and fourth wayes crooked; For this increaſeth greatly a mans labour, when he travelleth, it being eaſie to goe in a ſtraight way without windings and turnings: And being ing in this caſe, whereby one is made to cry out to God for help when he doth ſo, and yet is not heard, his miſery is yet far more aggravated. And this is threatned Verſ. 8.

but not be heard, Prov. 1. 24. 28.

5. By the ſimilitude of a Bear and Lion, which are moſt terrible to men in their travell. Verſ. 10.

6. Of a Mark, at which men ſhoot their piercing Arrows; to which effect Iob ſpeaking of his ſufferings, ſaith, He was as a But. Verſ. 12, 13.

7. Of one derided, and upon whom diſgracing Songs are ſung from day to day. Verſ. 14.

8. Of abundance of bitter Wormwood, which he was made to drink to drunkenneſs. Verſ. 15.

9. Of Gravell, which he was made to eate to the breaking of his teeth; and of Aſhes, wherewith he was covered after the manner of mourners. Verſ. 16.

Laſtly, becauſe of all theſe grievous ſufferings, he ſaith, That he had hope; Verſ. 21. that is, in reſpect of Gods mercies, which will not ſuffer him to puniſh his people in this world without end; but when he hath by his judgements humbled them, his mercy will again move him to ſhew them ſome favour, Wherefore verſe 22, he comforteth himſelf and others by his mercies and compaſſions; which is the ſecond part wherein the mercie of God is extolled. Part 2.

1. In reſpect of preſervation from utter deſtruction by ſin deſerved. Verſ. 22.

2. In reſpect of the renewing of them from morning to morning, there being no day which doth not produce a new mercie, becauſe he is provoked every day, and yet preſerves our lives. Verſ. 23.

3. In reſpect of his promiſe made to them that hope in him; in keeping which, he will be moſt faithfull, ſo that beleevers may look upon him for their portion, yet waiting for his favour through hope and patience. Verſ. 24.

4. In reſpect of the good coming through his mercy by ſufferings, which are but his yoke for the taming of youth, that is otherwiſe wilde and unruly, to his Verſ. 27.

and the good of bleſſing and ſhewing favour again. 2. Sheweth, what made might be, and in mans reaſon never likely to recover again.

ſpeaks all the way throughout this Chapter ſo in his own perſon, that withall he repreſents the perſon of Iſrael. And the like is to be held touching that

CHAP. IV.

IN this Chapter the grievous change that was in Jeruſalem is firſt complained of from *verſ.*1. to *verſ.*13. 2. The cauſe, the ſins of the Prieſts and Prophets *verſ.*13. and of the people, 14,15,16. 3. He complaineth of their vain-confidence to have help in theſe their ſins, and contrariwiſe of the readineſs of their enemies to purſue them with violence, *verſ.*17,18,19. 4. Of their old grievous loſſe when Joſiah was ſlain *verſ.*20. 5. He threatens Edom, the moſt malicious of the Jews enemie with the cup of drunkenneſs, v. 21.

Verſ.1. For the firſt, How is the gold become dim! Whereby he meaneth the people of God, being before precious as gold, when they lived under his bleſſing, as is plain from *verſ.*2. And how were they thus changed from ſhining gold? In Verſ.3,4,10. that they were cruel even to their own children, as the very Sea-monſters were not, although they were through the neceſſity of famine inforced hereunto.
Verſ.5. 2. They that were moſt richly cloathed lay upon the dunghill, being made baſe Verſ.6. and vile. For which continued judgement he aggravateth their miſery by that Verſ.7. of Sodom. 3. The Nazarites were changed from white to black, of their order ſee *Numb.*6. They were a kinde of men that voluntarily devoted themſelves to God in a ſingular way of abſtinence beyond all other men, yet becauſe the Lord would not have any ſort of men live under a pretext of piety without rules of his own ſetting down, he preſcribed unto them how they ſhould in this ſingular way order themſelves that they might be ſingularly accepted of before God.
And living ſo they are here ſaid for their excellency to be Whiter then ſnow, or milk, and more ruddy then ſaphyrs, by this whiteneſs ſhining being ſet forth, and by the red, preciousneſs, becauſe the ſaphyr was a precious ſtone of great value.
And to ſhew how Nazarites were prized, the Lord ſaith by Amos 2.11. that he raiſed them up Prophets and Nazarites. But now they were black, and the skin withered through famine, this holy kinde of men not being ſpared from Calvin. this common calamity, to ſhew the univerſality of the judgement. Calvin conceives that their whiteneſs was by abſtinence from wine, becauſe ſuch look pale, but wine-drinkers red: but I marvel that he conſidered not, they are ſaid to be red as well as white, and therefore the colour of their faces could not be meant,but their excellency as hath been ſaid, yet they were not now priviledged beyond others, but were rather in this time of judgement in a worſe caſe in Note. reſpect of the outward man then others: Yea as is added verſ.9. in worſe then Verſ.9.

they that were ſlain by the ſword,for they being once ſtricken were ſoon dead, but long and tedious is the pain of thoſe that die by famine: Of blackneſſe through famine, ſee *Chap.*5.10. Wherefore let no man make this his mark at which he aimeth in being extraordinarily devoted to piety, to be exempt from ſufferings, when ſufferings be univerſal, but frame himſelf patiently to bear them,as coming from God their loving father,that will turn all things to good to them. Hitherto the third. 4. The judgements of God were ſo great that Verſ. 11,12. they exceeded all credit amongſt neighbour nations.

For the ſecond, By the ſins of the Prophets and Prieſts that ſpake peace unto Part 2.
them, and reproved them not ſharply for their ſins, as they ſhould have done, Verſ. 13,14. they were polluted with bloud,that is,with foul ſins,as *Iſa.*1.14. and wandered in darkneſs. But how is it that they are ſaid to have ſlain the juſt? Jerom ſaith, Hieron.
By drawing them into errour, which is to the deſtruction of the ſoul. But, as Calvin well noteth, this cannot ſtand, becauſe juſt men are not ſo deſtroyed, Calvin. but the wicked only that take heed to their falſe teaching. Therefore the true Prophets of God are meant by the juſt, for whom they had priſons,dungeons and ſtocks to put them into, as hath been before noted, and ſometimes ſtoning or otherwiſe tumults which they ſtirred up amongſt the people, whereby their bloud was ſhed. But what is meant by this, They cried unto them, Depart, depart, Verſ.15. it is unclean, &c? Hereby their uncleanneſs by ſin touched upon *verſ.*14. is further ſet forth. For it was ordained *Levit.*13. that the unclean by the Leproſie ſhould go about, crying, I am unclean, unclean, whereupon it is moſt probable, that when any going out met with a leprous perſon, they cried thus.
Wherefore to ſhew how full of unclean perſons Jeruſalem was, ſo that a man could not go out of doors but he ſhould meet many ſuch, they are brought in here ſo ſoon as they were gone out, crying, Depart, unclean, unclean, touch not.
And becauſe unclean perſons muſt be put out of the City, it is added, They fled away, and the Heathen amongſt whom they went, ſaid, They ſhall ſojourn no more there] ſo that their going into Captivity, and tarrying long there, was but a juſt puniſhment for them, who by reaſon of their uncleanneſs were fit no longer to dwell in Jeruſalem.

He will no more regard them. This is ſtill the ſpeech of the Heathen, who Verſ. 16. thought that the Jews ſhould never be brought back again.For the next words, They reſpected not the Prieſts nor Elders. Some think them to be ſpoken of the Theod.
Jews by the ſame Heathen, or by Jeremiah; as if it had been ſaid, They are Vatabl. now requited with the like to that which they have done, their old men and Raban.
Prieſts, and all of them are ſo uſed, as they have done amongſt themſelves: Lyra.
Some,of the Caldees,by whom the judgement of the Jews was the more aggravated Origen. by this, that they baſely uſed even their moſt honourable men. But the T.Aquinas. firſt is to be preferred, becauſe the Prieſts and Elders that were good, were not Calvin.
regarded, but had their bloud cruelly ſhed, as was ſaid before *verſ.*13. under Cal.Paraphraſt. the word juſt. They were ſo madly ſet upon ſin, that whoſoever croſſed them herein,Prieſt or Elder,he was not regarded, but vily intreated.

For the third part, the Nation which they looked for to help them, was Egypt, Part 3. but their eyes failed in looking before they came,and on the contrary ſide V.17,18,19.
their enemies were as ſwift as Eagles to make a prey of them.

CHAP. V.

HEre the Prophet in the name of the people, and to teach them how to plead with the Lord for mercy, further laieth open their miſeries in many things like unto a Lazar full of ſores and ſickneſs to paſſengers upon the way, or at the rich mans gate, praying the Lord to remember them, and to take pity upon them. 2. He ſheweth how they were all affected with extream grief, therefore praying for converſion and ſanation, *v.17,18.&c.*

Verſ.1. For the firſt in laying open their miſeries, he beginneth with that of ſtrangers, having their fruitful Land in poſſeſſion, they being turned out.

Verſ.3. 2. He ſheweth that their men were ſlain and conſumed, whereby children became fatherleſs and wives widows.

Verſ.4. 3. They had not the things of this life, which heaven and earth yield without labour, free and without price, but were conſtrained to give money for them, yea even for Water and Wood, touching the former of which it is commonly ſaid, that none is ſo poor but he may have water, if he liveth in a countrey habitable, and not in a dry deſert: touching wood, the like is to be held, if he liveth in a place where there be commons, from which it is free for every one to cut down and fetch what wood he pleaſeth, the tree it ſelf being preſerved to grow again. But otherwiſe not, unleſs growing upon the ground, wherein he hath a propriety, and that was the caſe of the Jews before that they were diſpoſſeſſed, each one had houſe and ground of his own, and if by poverty Levit.25. he were inforced to ſell, it returned to him again in the year of Jubilee. To Note. take wood out of another mans propriety is theft, as well as to take corn or fruit, and therefore the cuſtom of ſuch poor people as do ſo, is wicked and 1 Cor.5.11. ſinful, and (as any other theft) will prove a far greater loſſe, even of the Kingdom of heaven. And therefore in this want, as in want of other neceſſaries, ſuch as are not able to buy muſt beg and not ſteal it, or take only that which they have commonly leave to do, which the owner leaveth.

Verſ.5. 4. They were perſecuted without ceaſing.

Verſ. 6. 5. They gave the hand to the Egyptians and Aſſyrians for bread] That is, ſaith Calvin. Calvin, were brought to ſuch penury that they begged it in Egypt and Aſſyria, where they were ſcattered, and were in want of all things. But becauſe the giving of the hand doth not ſo aptly ſet forth begging, but covenanting, and it is not probable that their enemies would give unto them begging; but rather make them work for it or ſtarve; I rather conceive that it is thus ſaid, further to explain what was ſaid before verſ.4. of buying in caſe of wanting money ſo to do, they gave their hand to pay them for bread, which they needed for Cald. their ſuſtenance with their labour, the Cald. they gave the hand in token of yielding to be their ſervants for neceſſaries. But Vatablus, Rabanus, Th. Aquinas, Lyra are for the firſt with Calvin.

Verſ. 7. 6. They bare the iniquities of their fathers, now that they were dead and gone, who had ſinned and provoked God to ſend this great judgement. But how could the Prophet ſay thus without blaſpheming, as the wicked do Ezek. 18? Sol. He doth not mean that they only ſinned and their children were innocent, for he often confeſſeth the contrary *Chap.3.39,&c.* but in ſaying thus, he aggravateth their ſins, as Iſaiah doth *Chap.*1.5. Ah ſeed of evil doers] As if he had ſaid, Thou wert long ago provoked thus to judge us, even in the time of our fathers that went on in a courſe of ſinning generation after generation, and they were puniſhed accordingly by death and deſtruction, and now we not taking warning by their ſufferings to amend our ſinfull lives, bear the puniſhment of their ſins alſo, being by this circumſtance made greater, and therefore we are moſt worthy thus to ſuffer, neither is any more done to us then thou haſt threatned in the ſecond Commandment, To viſit the ſins of the fa- Note. thers upon the children, &c. And by thoſe that did ſo moſt probably were meant ſuch of the Jews, as fleeing from the enemy, wandred about in the deſerts of Arabia, and of other Countreys.

Touching the ſecond part: For this our heart is faint and our eyes dim. Miſery is as a ſickneſs waſting the ſpirits, and dimming the ſight; and amongſt all their miſeries he ſheweth, that this wrought moſt upon them, that the mountain of Zion where the Temple ſtood was deſolate, and Foxes walked upon it; and this ought indeed to affect us moſt with grief, when Religion and Piety is put down and made to ceaſe, as touching the publick exerciſe thereof, for this is a famine of ſouls, and more dangerous then that of bread and water. And he addeth, The Foxes walked upon it, further to expreſſe this deſolation, becauſe they live as other wild beaſts in deſolate places remote from the frequency of men.

Having ſpoken of the Temples deſtruction, and Zion by this means lying waſte, now he pleadeth with the Lord from the conſideration of his eternity, and the everlaſting continuance of his Throne, which words ſeem to be borrowed from *Pſ.*102. that he would not ſuffer this his footſtool long to lie deſolate, but provide for the re-edifying of it again.

Why wilt thou for ever forget us, Wilt thou leave us for a long time? O turn us unto thee, and ſo we ſhall be turned? That is, turn our hearts to thee againſt whom we have grievouſly ſinned, and ſo brought all this miſery upon our ſelves, that we may penitently confeſſe our ſins, and by thy chaſtiſements be purged herefrom, and conſequently the puniſhment laid upon us therefore be taken of, we being reſtored to a comfortable condition, as in the dayes of David and other godly Kings. Thus moſt Expoſitors: But Hugo Cardin. and Calvin are only for a turning in outward reſpects. But why that of an inward ſhould be excluded, excluded, I ſee no reaſon, although to underſtand it of this without the other doth not ſo well agree. Nay, exclude this Expoſition of inward turning, and take away a moſt pregnant proof in all the Old Teſtament of our inability to turn of our ſelves, which is needfull to be held, becauſe of many other places whereby there may ſeem to be power of turning in man. For although man muſt cooperate with the grace of God in the act of his converſion, yet it is to be underſtood that grace firſt begins it, and then the will of man being wone, ſubſequent grace confirms it more and more. And in many places where a promiſe of external favour is made, this is mentioned as the ground thereof, I will put my law into their inward parts, &c. as *Jer.*31.33,34. And it is more proper to underſtand theſe words [Turn us unto thee] of turning by repentance, becauſe if turning them from miſery had been meant, he would rather have ſaid [Turn thou to us.] Note. And being underſtood of turning by repentance, it is an inſtruction to us to go to God, if we deſire to have this bleſſed work wrought in us, whereunto we are unable of our ſelves. Being taken of turning by an happy change of our condition; the next words [We ſhall be turned] are as if he had ſaid, We ſhall be delivered out of all theſe miſeries, and this thou art able to do inſtantly, and needeſt not to take for it ſo long a time, becauſe the Lord had ſet ſeventy years. Renew our dayes as of old, or as they were anciently, making them proſperous, and by a mighty hand bringing us out of the power of our enemies, as once out of Egypt. But becauſe turning goeth before this, that muſt be firſt in our votes to God, and then this ſhall follow in Gods good time, till which we muſt wait.

Verſ.22. But thou haſt utterly rejected us, and art very wroth with us. The Septuagint, Becauſe thou haſt; as if he had ſaid, Renew our dayes as of old, for thou haſt already proceeded as far againſt us in wrath, as thou haſt threatned to tranſgreſſors, by caſting us out of thine inheritance, and laying all ſorts of judgements upon us. And the Hebrew will bear this, it being כי־אם properly rendred, for it, according to which if we go, here muſt be an Apoſiopeſis, ſome part of that which he had to ſay, being ſuſpended, as thus, If thou utterly reject us, &c. and not turn us, what ſhall become of the ſolemn Covenant, whereby thou haſt ingaged thy ſelf to Abraham and his ſeed, and thy promiſe of turning this our Captivity at the end of ſeventy years? But becauſe I know and believe that thou wilt be true of thy promiſe, I have been bold thus to plead with thee.

EZEKIEL:

CHAP. I.

THE thirtieth yeer, the fourth moneth, the fifth day as I was V. 1. by the river Chebar, &c. Ezekiel is ſaid to be ſon of Buzi V. 3. and a Prieſt, to purchaſe him the greater authority, as being none of the vulgar ſort, but a Prieſt; Ezekiel Origen. ſignifieth the ſtrength of God; Buzi, contempt; whereupon Origen gathereth that he was a figure of Chriſt, who was the mighty power of God, but contemned by the Jews; Gregory his coming of the Jews, that were contemptible for their wickedneſſe and unbeleef. The time of his propheſying, and the place where is exactly ſet down, that we might know that he propheſyed in the land of the Caldees in ſome part of the time wherein Jeremiah propheſyed in the land of Judah; that is, five and thirty yeers after that he began; for ann. 13. of Joſiah, Jeremiah began, and in his time continued Jer. 1. 1.
18 years, for he reigned 31; then Jehoahaz 3 moneths, Jehoiakim 11 years, 2 King. 23.
Jehoiachin 3 and 5 yeers, wherein that King had lived in Babylon after; which all together make about 35; and Jeremiah after that, which was the fifth yeer of Zedekiah, went on ſtill in propheſying, to the end of Zedekiah his reign, being 6 years more: In this time then they propheſied both together, Ezekiel being by the Lord ſtirred up to confirm that which Jeremiah ſaid, the rather becauſe Jer. 28. that there were falſe Prophets then, not onely at Jeruſalem, Hananiah in the fourth year of Zedekiah, that ſought to bring Jeremiah out of credit by foretelling of the Jews return from Babylon within two years; whereas Jeremiah Jer. 29. had foretold their continuance there ſeventy years; but alſo Ahab and Zedekiah in Babylon; in regard of whom the Lord thought it neceſſary to inſpire Ezekiel alſo to ſpeak the ſame things, that Jeremiah might with the more comfort goe on, and not be borne down by the impudent lies of the falſe Prophets, bearing the people in hand by reaſon of the ſpeedy return, whereof they ſpake, that Jehoiachin and the people, that yeelded themſelves to the King of Babylon, as Jeremiah adviſed, had done fooliſhly and cowardly herein, and therefore they ſhould doe more wiſely that ſtill remained, and by no perſwaſions be drawn to yeeld to the King of Babylon at his coming again, but manfully hold out againſt him. For this cauſe Ezekiel ſpeaketh the ſame with Jeremiah, in his 24 former chapters, threatning the Jews with deſtruction, and inveighing againſt their ſins, as Jeremiah in his former 27 chapters; and then he propheſieth againſt divers other nations, from ch. 25. to ch. 35. as Jeremiah doth from 47 to 51. Laſtly, ch. 35, 36, &c. to the end he propheſyeth of the Jews return out of captivity, and of the myſticall things of Chriſts Kingdom:

Onely there is one thing wherein he ſeemeth to contradict Jeremy, in ſaying, that Zedekiah ſhould not ſee Babylon, ch. 12. 11. but Jer. 21. 7. it is ſaid, that he ſhould goe into Babylon: But this is eaſily reconciled, for his eyes were firſt put out, and then he was carryed to Babylon, 2 King. 25. But for the manner of proceeding, Ezekiel is far more myſticall then he, eſpecially ch. 1. & ch. 44. 45. as teaching by ſignes moſt hard to be underſtood; yea, ſo hard, ſay the Hebrews, that they forbid all men the reading and ſtudying hereupon, till thirty years of age, which was the age of a Prieſts beginning to miniſter at the Temple; yea, they ſay it is unlawfull for any man to undertake to write hereupon, fully to explain theſe viſions, ſaying, that hee may onely touch a little upon them, and ſo leave them: For they ſay, that the Bible containeth two ſorts of knowledge, Bereſcith; with which word Geneſis is begun, ſetting forth the knowledge common to all; and Marchabah touching God in his chariot, ſpoken of, Ezek. 1. and this belongeth onely to wiſe men. To let theſe things paſſe; Ezekiel having begun his propheſie in time of Jeremy, as I have ſhewed, went on after Zedekiah his time to the 27 year of Jehoiachins captivity; that is, 16 years, which being put to the 6 before ſpoken of, make 22.

Hitherto of the time of Ezekiel's propheſying; now for the place; by the river Chebar in the land of the Caldees; whereby (ſaith Calvin) Euphrates is commonly underſtood, but he conceives it rather to be ſome other river, to us unknown, haply branching from that great River; but the Hebrews generally hold Euphrates to be meant, onely it is here ſet forth by the word Chebar, becauſe it ſignifieth much, manifold, or copious, and it may bee thus called, for the abounding of waters therein: Here was Ezekiel amongſt others of the captivity placed, as being with them carryed away when Jehoiachin their King was carryed, at the fift year of whoſe captivity he beginneth to reckon. To this their ſituation in Babylon it is alluded, Pſ. 137. when we ſat in Babylon, the rivers being about us. But becauſe I have yet ſaid nothing upon ann. 30. wherein the Prophet ſaith, that he had theſe viſions, but not with any relation, whereby we may underſtand, what thirtyeth year he meaneth, it will bee neceſſary to cleer this, before wee proceed further in the Text.

Calvin.

Some ſay, that the 30 year of the Jubilee, is meant, ſome the 30, from finding the book of the law, when they brought it to the King Joſiah, an. 18. of his reign; whereupon he was ſo greatly ſtricken, and applyed himſelf the more zealouſly to ſeek the Lord. Some to the 30 of the Prophets age; and ſome to the 30 year ſince the beginning of the Babylonian Monarchy: And laſtly, ſome to the 30 year of the reign of Aſtyages, the grand-father of Cyrus. From the age of the Prophet, there is no reaſon to count, for no reckoning uſed ever thus to be made by the age of a private man: neither can any reaſon be given, why the reckoning ſhould goe from the time of finding the Book of the Law; but for the Jubilee reckoning there is good reaſon, becauſe the Jews reckoned commonly hereby, as being a time of great joy for mens returning again to their inheritances, and for ſervants being releaſed, and becauſe Ezekiel now lived in Caldea, hee may well be thought to have reckoned as they did there by their Kings reigns, or the years of that Monarchy. For Nebopelaſſar was the firſt Monarch, the father of Nebuchadnezzar, and he reigned 14 years, after whom Nebuchadnezzar began his reign the fourth year of Jehoiakim, ſo that his reign being ended, which was 11 years, Nebuchadnezzar had reigned 7, which being added to 19, make 26; then followed Jehoiachin, who in his firſt year went into captivity, and now had been in captivity to the fifth year, and if 4 of theſe be added to the former ſumme, we have the number of 30, the fifth year here ſpoken of, which if it be added, would make 31, being haply but now beginning, is not reckoned: Neither is it neceſſary to yeeld, that Nebopelaſſar's nineteenth year was compleat, when he dyed, but there might want as much of it, as was run out of this fifth year. And for counting from the beginning of this Monarchy it is ſaid, that by authority publick it was appointed, that the reckoning in all publick inſtruments

V. 4. A whirlewind came out of the north, a great cloud, and a fire infolding it ſelf, and a brightneſſe was about it, and out of the midſt thereof as the colour of amber out of the midſt of the fire: Hereby was figuratively ſhewed, that a terrible ſtorm ſhould come out of the north; that is, from Babylon againſt Judea; that is, the Caldees forces, which ſhould overturn and burn up and deſtroy all things: The ſame was before ſet forth by Jerem. 1. 11, 13. by a rod and an almond tree, and a ſeething pot out of the north. For whirlwinds and black clouds are fit emblems of ſorrow and deſtruction, then fire is added round about the cloud, ſetting forth this deſtruction to come by fire, as indeed it did, for the City being broken into by the Caldees, both the City and Temple were burnt down to the ground. But what is the amber colour appearing out of the fire? Hebr. as an eye of amber, which is ſaid to have been compounded of gold and ſilver, ſo as that it ſhone moſt brightly, but Pagnin ſaith, that it was more pretious then ſilver or gold, Hebr. it is חשמן, which R. David ſaith, is the name of an Angell, who was ſent to teach Ezekiel, for the holy ſervants of God of greateſt note had their Angels appearing to them, and inſtructing them in a viſible ſhape, as Abraham, Hagar, Jacob, Gedeon, Elijah, Daniel, Tobiah, and many more. And by name, ſaith Agrippa, Adam had his Angell Raziel; Shem, Japhiel; Abraham, Sadkiel; Jacob, Peliel; Joſeph, Joſhua; Daniel, Gabriel; Moſes, Metratton; Elias, Malbiel; Tobias jun. Raphael; David, Corniel; Manoeh, Phadael; Eſdras, Uriel; Solomon, Michael. But the Scripture ſpeaks onely of two, Michael and Gabriel, and Tobits hiſtory Raphael, ſo that the other names are mere inventions of men ſtudyed in Art Magick; except Caſmael here, if it be the name of an Angell, but it is rather to be thought to be a word expreſſing the brightneſſe before ſpoken of about the cloud, and ſetting forth the glory of God, at whoſe will, and by whoſe direction this terrible tempeſt was raiſed; and this is the more probable, becauſe when the Lord ſhewed his glory to the Children of Iſrael, it was in the colour of a Saphir ſtone: neither doe other Expoſitors differ much herefrom. But Lyra wondreth, that Jerome rendreth Caſmal Amber, being drawn by the Rabbin to hold, that it was an Angell. But both the Sept. Aquila, and Theodotion, moſt skilfull in the Hebrew, doe all render it Amber.

V. 5. And out of the midſt thereof came the likeneſſe of four living creatures, and they had the likeneſſe of a man. By theſe four animalls, Hebr. חוית, the Angels of God, or Cherubims are ſet forth, who were of old made by Solomon at Gods direction, like unto young men having wings, and placed in the Holy of Holies over the Mercy-ſeat, but now four appear to Ezekiel, Eſay 6. hee ſeeth Seraphims about Gods throne, but not telling how many, yet it may be conceived, that they were but two, for one cryed to another, Holy, Holy, Holy, &c. But why doe four appear now? To this Calvin ſaith well, (who holdeth the Cherubims and Seraphims to be the ſame) that the Jews being degenerated to idolatry, and ſo from the way of worſhip preſcribed in the ſanctuary, the Lord would not now ſet forth his ruling by his providence, by two Cherubims onely, as then, but by four, whereby they might know, that his providence was not cooped up within the limits of Canaan, but extended it ſelfe to all the four parts of the world, in which he had his Angells both to govern as preſidents over all countreys, as is expreſſed touching ſome Dan. 10. 20. of Perſia and Grecia, and to bring them againſt, and to arm them with power, for the deſtruction of any that rebelled againſt him, and theſe four came out of the midſt of the fire, and Amber repreſenting the Lord, who is a conſuming fire, to ſhew that no power ſhould be able to ſtand againſt him, as the fire conſumes all things.

Calvin.

V. 6. And every one had four faces, and foure wings,

V. 7. and their feet were ſtreight feet, and the ſole of their feet like a Calves foot, Hebr. a ſtreight foot, in the ſingular number; that is, each one of them ſtreight, not long, as the foot of a man, but as the next words ſhew, as the foot of a Calfe; being thus formed, as ſome ſuppoſe, that they might bee ready to turn as God would have them, this way or that way, but againſt this maketh, that it is further ſaid, that they turned not when they went, v. 12. and that they went ſtraight forward, v. 9. for which their feet are ſaid to be ſtraight feet; Aquila and the Cald. for the feet of a Calf, have round feet, as the word alſo ſignifieth; the Sept. winged or feathered feet, further to ſet forth their ſwiftneſſe; but the word רגל, as it is pointed, doth moſt properly ſignifie a Calf, and being taken ſo, the meaning may be good, viz. it being underſtood of a Calf or Bullock ſtalled, which being let out, skippeth and leapeth about for joy, for which the faithful are thus compared, Mal 4.2. Yee ſhall come forth and leap as Calves out of the ſtall, and well may we by Calves feet underſtand agility, becauſe it is ſaid, thou makeſt my feet like Hindes feet; and again, maketh the Hindes to calve, which ſheweth, that by a Calves foot an Hindes may be underſtood: This kind of foot then is aſcribed to theſe Angells for their only expedite, but chearfully and rejoicingly going out to execute Gods will. That theſe animalls were Cherubims, appeareth, ch. 10.1. compared with ch. 1.22. for here a throne appeareth, and one ſitting upon it as a Saphir ſtone, that is, moſt precious and glorious over their heads, as ch. 1.22. the firmament like cryſtall over the heads of the animalls.

V. 8. And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four ſides, with their hands men doe all things whereunto ſtrength and activity belongeth, with their hands they war and fight, according to that of David, thou teacheſt my hands to war, and my fingers to fight; therefore theſe Cherubims are ſet forth, as having hands to fight and to overcome withall, as well as wings to flee, that they may goe forth with the more expedition to doe Gods will. And their hands are under their wings, becauſe they appear not, but they ſmite inviſibly herewith. How many hands they had under their wings, it is not ſaid, but forſomuch as they had hands under them not one, two, or three of them, but under them all, they had at the leaſt as many hands, as wings, each one two pair of wings, and two pair of hands, and becauſe hands of men are joined to their bodies by arms, that they may be the further ſtretched out to act and to do, it is to be thought, that to their hands had they arms alſo, & this makes for the ſetting forth of their ſtrength, as far greater then any mans, for it is not onely greater then his, as two pair of hands have more ſtrength then one, but a thouſand times more, as appeared, when one Angell in one night deſtroyed 185000 of the Aſſyrians hoaſt, 2 King. 19.

V. 9. Their wings were joyned together; that is, two on one ſide, and two on the other, as is more particularly ſhewed, v. 23. with one pair of which ſtretched upward they flew, and with the other put down they covered their bodies, v. 11. whereas the Seraphims, Eſay 6. had each of them 6 wings, two to cover their their feet, two to cover their faces, and two to fly withall. This was done to ſhew, that the Lord in repreſenting his Angels to men, doth not ſhew them alike in all things, but diverſly, according to the things ſet forth by them, as Eſay 6. was one thing, and here another: and Revel. 4. 6. where ſuch a wonderfull appearance alſo was, another; they turned not when they went; whereas v. 14. they returned when they went, may ſeem to be contradictory to this; the meaning is, they went right on, and returned not, till they had done the things for which God ſent them out, and then they rerurned to ſtand before God again at his will to be ſent about other employments. Note. This ſheweth the ir revocabilitie of Gods decrees, when they are once gone out, before they are not known to men, but ſuch and ſuch deſtroying judgments be threatned, and by penitent turning from ſin they may be prevented, but if the Angell Jer. 18. 6. bee once upon the wing, there is no eſcaping for any wicked nation or perſon.

V. 10. They four had the face of a man, and the face of a lion on the right ſide, &c. Having ſaid beſpre, that each one had four wings, and four faces, now he commeth to ſhew, what manner of faces theſe were; one was a mans face, 2 a lions, 3 an oxes, 4 an eagles, Hieron. Gregor. about which there are divers opinions, the ancienteſt being, that the four Evangeliſts were hereby ſet forth; Matthew by a Lion,

Mark

Lyra. Mark by a Man, Luke by an Oxe, and John by an Eagle; of which ſee upon Revel. 4. 6. Some think the four Monarchs of the world to be hereby ſet forth, the Babylonian, Perſian, Grecian, and Romane. But againſt this Burgenſis ſtrongly reaſoneth, becauſe not men, but Cherubims are plainly ſhewed to be meant by theſe animalls, ch. 10. as was ſaid before; and therefore not Heathen men and Idolaters, ſuch as they were. For the four Evangeliſts, the viſion cannot be applyed to them neither, becauſe it is not ſaid, that each one of theſe beaſts had one face, and another another, but one had four, and another four, and ſo had every one. Moreover, the Monarchs began a long time one after another, theſe appeared not ſo as in Daniel and Zechary, where the Monarchs being ſet forth, divers beaſts are ſhewed one after another. This therefore pertained to the time now at hand, whereby the Lord would ſhew his power to be irreſiſtible when he ſhould come againſt the wicked Jews. Calvin. Calvin thinks, that by the four faces or heads upon every animall, as he calleth theſe faces, are meant all living things in this world, which are moderated and governed by Gods providence, as carryed on in their ways, by a ſecret inſtinct from his Angels. 1. Man, who is the chief. 2. The Lion, which is the King of all beaſts, under whoſe face therefore they bee all comprehended. 3. The Oxe, which is put for all tame beaſts, as being the chief of them, and moſt helpfull to man. 4. The Eagle, the chief of Fowles, under his face all winged things being ſet forth. To me it ſeemeth rather, that by the face of a Man, underſtanding and reaſon is ſet forth; by that of a Lyon, undaunted courage and ſpirit; by that of an Oxe, ſtrength to labour; and by that of an Eagle, a quick ſight to pierce to places far remote; and then hereby is ſet forth the qualification of Gods Angels, to the ſervice about which hee employeth them. They have every one underſtanding, readily to know all things that they are employed about, and courage to goe againſt the moſt potent enemies of God, and power to help his ſervants, as their neceſſity require, being for this vere jumenta, as Oxen are, who have their name a juvando, from helping; Laſtly, every one of them have a moſt piercing ſight, ſeeing dangers in coming to any whoſe Guardians they are afarre off to prevent them.

V. 13. For the likeneſſe of the living Creatures, it was, as of coales, of fire, and of burning lamps. The Cherubims appeared thus, for the greater terrour and admiration; as when God appeared to Moſes as a flame of fire in a buſh. If the reſemblances before ſpoken of, had been meerly as faces of a Man, Lyon, Oxe and Eagle, the ſpectatour would not have been ſo much affected herewith: but fiery coals ſeeming the matter of which the Animals were compoſed, that had the faces aforeſaid, who could but be terrified at it, and at the lamps like flaſhes of lightening, making all to ſeem to be of a fire?

V. 15. Behold one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures with his four faces. From Animalls the Prophet proceedeth to Wheels, which alſo he ſaw, and moſt probably they portended the ſame things that the Animalls did, their number, faces, and motions being the ſame, as it is not unuſuall with the Lord, by divers things ſhewed in viſion, to repreſent one thing, eſpecially Jerem. 1. by an Almond rod, and a ſeething pot towards the North.

V. 16. But what meaneth he by ſaying, One wheele, and by and by v. 16. he ſpeaketh of wheels, as of more, yea, and expreſſely of four, chap. 10. 9. of foure wheels, one wheel by one Cherubim, and another by another? Sol. It is meant as there, one wheel by one living creature, and another by another, &c. there being by the four Animalls, four Wheels, near to each of which Wheels one ſtood, as it were to guard it, with his four faces, Hebr. with the quadrature of his faces, each wheel having four faces carved upon it, of a Man, Lyon, Oxe, and Eagle, as the Animall had, ſhewing, that this viſion tended to the ſame with the other; the appearance of the wheels was like unto the colour of a beryl, Vulg. of the ſea, Hebr. תרשיש, by ſome rendred the ſea, by ſome a Chryſolite, by others a Hyacinth, or Cryſtall, but there is a pretious ſtone alſo called a Beryl, Exod. 28. of an excellent colour; the Reader may underſtand whether of theſe he pleaſeth; moſt probably it was a Blue or Azure colour, like the sky, as being moſt fit to repreſent the heavenly ſpheres, which are as wheels turning about the world; and then the wheels within theſe wheels, muſt ſet forth the turning of things about in this world, by the influence of the heavens. And becauſe the motions and turnings of all theſe wheels are ſtill conform to the Animals, or Cherubims, hereby was ſhewed the ſame over again, that was ſhewed in them, viz. deſtruction to come to Jeruſalem by the Chaldean Armies, Chariots with Wheels, being moſt fit to repreſent Armies marching forth, the chief ſtrength whereof lyeth in Chariots and Horſes, and theſe are irreſiſtible indeed, when the Angels of God goe along with them, and the heavens are the firſt movers.

V. 18. As for their rings, they were ſo high, that they were dreadfull, and their rings were full of eyes round about them four. Vulg. The wheels alſo had ſtature and height, and an horrible aſpect, and their whole body was full of eyes round about them, Heb. their heights, and the height in them, and terrour in them; the meaning is, that theſe wheels were ſo high, that it was terrible to behold, there being never wheels of that height ſeen before, and no doubt, but they had ſtrength accordingly; and moreover, which was never ſeen in any wheels, they were full of eyes, as the living creatures ſpoken of, Revel. 4. to ſet forth providence, looking Note. not only forward, but backward alſo, and round about: whereby is intimated, that things done in the world are not done by blind fortune, but by an all-ſeeing God, from whoſe ſight none can be hid.

V. 19. And when the living creatures went the wheels went by them, V. 20. v. 20. the ſpirit of the living creature was in the wheels. This further confirmeth, that the Viſion of the Animalls, and of the wheels, tended to the repreſenting of the ſame things, for both moved alike, and both were carryed by the ſame Spirit of God, acting by them and in them.

V. 22. And the likeneſſe of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature, was like the terrible cryſtall. Here, before he cometh to the throne of the moſt High, (under whom the Animals and Wheels all were, and at his command ready to go out whither he would have them to the execution of his will,) he beginneth in making way to ſpeak of him with the likeneſſe of the firmament, next above the heads of the Animalls, as it was next ſhewed unto him, and then above this a throne appeareth, v. 26. and one ſitting upon it like unto a Man, ſo that the appearance of a firmament was under his feet, as Exod. 24. 10. ſhewing him to be the ſame that is there ſpoken of; there the firmament is ſaid to be a clear firmament, here, like terrible cryſtall, to intimate the terribleneſſe of the Lord, ſo that the nearer approaches are made unto God, the more terror there is; and therefore when God hath appeared to men at any time, they have been taken with exceeding great fear, as the Children of Iſrael, when he appeared upon Mount Sinai.

V. 23. Every one had their wings ſtraight, two that covered on this ſide, and two on that their Calvin. bodies, v. 11. two were ſtretched upward, and two covered their bodies: Here is no contradiction, but a more clear declaration of that which was there ſaid, the two wings ſtretched upwards, covered their faces, as the Seraphims, Eſay 6. are ſaid, with two to cover their faces, and with two their feet; ſo theſe with two covered the upper part of their bodies, comprehending the face, and with two the neather part to their feet, not alwaies, but when they ſtood before the throne, at other times flying with them.

V. 24. And when they went, I heard the noiſe of their wings like the noiſe of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, as of a great hoſt, when they ſtood they let down their wings. The noiſe made by theſe four Animals when they went is by divers compariſons ſet forth, to ſhew, that although they were but 4, yet they were equivalent in power to a mighty hoaſt, which no force can withſtand, and that they were armed with the power of the Almighty, who is the Lord of hoaſts, making a noiſe like his voice, that is, the thunder, of which ſee Pſ. 29. and that they went like a floud of water, bearing down, and overflowing all things. And to ſhew how and when they covered their bodies with their wings, it is added for further explanation of v. 23. that when they ſtood, they let down their wings, therefore when they went they ſtretched out two of them, as v. 11. and this was not done to cover their faces, as I ſhewed before, that Calvin conjectureth.

V. 25. And there was a voice from above the firmament when they had let down their wings; that is, coming from the Lord, who ſat above in his throne, whence he ſpake, and at his word they alwaies ſtand ſtill or go forward, as the Horſes that draw a Chariot at the voice of the Waggoner that guideth it. V. 26. v. 26. There was the likeneſſe of a throne, as the appearance of a Saphire ſtone, ſo Exod. 24. 10. There was under his feet as it were a paved work of Saphire ſtone. Here, becauſe hee that ſat upon the throne is ſaid to bee in the likeneſſe of a Man, all agree that this was a repreſentation of God the Son, portending his incarnation; and likewiſe whenſoever God is ſaid to appear like unto a Man. But hereupon, as Calvin. Calvin ſheweth, Servetus gathered, that Chriſt had a body then compounded of three elements, Fire, Water, and Aire, made out of the eſſence of God, and when he took fleſh of the Virgin Mary the fourth element Earth was added. But this was moſt falſe, and hath no ground here, becauſe here was onely an appearance, not the body of Man, which Chriſt truely had; onely by this appearance it was ſhewed what the Son of God ſhould be made, viz. a Man of Gal. 4. 4. a Woman, of whom hee ſhould take fleſh indeed, when the fulneſſe of time was come. But this blaſphemous heretick affirmed him alwaies to have been a body and ſubſtance by himſelfe, diſtinct from God the Father, who was never ſeen, nor can be by fleſhly eyes, becauſe he is a pure ſpirit.

V. 27. And I ſaw, as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from his loines upward, and his loynes downward; of the colour of Amber ſee before v. 4. which ſheweth, that the viſion there ſet forth and here is all one, onely there no ſimilitude appeareth, here is a ſimilitude of a man, but of the ſame colour all over his body, moſt glorious and ſhining, ſhewing the glory of God the Son to be the ſame with that of the Father, able to dazle mens eyes much more then the ſun beams, which none can behold ſtedfaſtly. And here is further added the appearance of a rainbow, having divers glorious Gen. 9. colours, about him, which was once ſet for a ſign of the covenant, which God made with Noah, that hee would never again deſtroy the world with waters, and may be thought here the rather to be ſhewed, to intimate, that God the Son now appearing, ſhould in time to come be a means of a far better covenant betwixt God and Man of grace and peace for evermore.

V. 28. This was the appearance of the likeneſſe of the glory of the Lord: That we might not doubt, but know aſſuredly, who was before repreſented ſitting upon a throne above the firmament, viz. God the Son, as hath been ſaid; who together with the Father is Jehovah, one and the ſame eſſence, this is ſpoken. Here then is a repreſentation of God ſitting in great majeſty on high, portending his incarnation to come, and he is ſet forth with a Chariot going upon four wheels, the tops whereof reached to the firmament under him, typifying his Miniſters going out into the four parts of the world, or being in the four parts preaching and publiſhing his Goſpel, together with the Books of the Old and New Teſtament, out of which they preach, and therefore here are Wheels ſeen within Wheels, the New Teſtament within the Old, becauſe nothing elſe is herein ſet forth but what was before in the Old ſpoken of and typified; and to the wheels of a chariot they are compared, above which the Lord ſitteth, becauſe they are guided by him, and they are ſaid to have the Spirit in them & eyes, becauſe it is both by the holy Ghoſt that they are inabled to this bleſſed work, and he accompanyeth their teaching, making it effectuall, and enlighteneth them, making them clearly to diſcern all things, as it is ſaid, the ſpirituall man diſcerneth all things, and they are eyes or lights to others round 1 Cor. 2. 15. about them; or by all theſe eyes intimated to be vigilant Biſhops, ἐπίσκοποι, Mat. 5. 14. Overſeers of the Lords flocks all about. Touching the Lord appearing like Amber, both from his loins upward, and from his loins downward; the part upward may well be underſtood of his Divinity, and the part downward of his Humanity, by vertue of the union thereof with his Divinity, partaking of the ſame moſt reſplendent glory; and therefore it is further ſaid to bee a Mal. 3. 2. fire and brightneſſe round about; fire, becauſe his day is as a refiners fire, deſtructive to droſſe, and purificative to the ſons of Levi, that is, the Elect; and brightneſſe for the bright ſhining of his Goſpel, it being now day light, as Rom. 13. 12. when the ſun ſhineth, being before as the dark night; for which hee is alſo Mal. 4. 2. called the Sun of righteouſneſſe. And as the ſun by the reflexion of the beams thereof from a watery cloud, of which it was ſpoken before, v. 4. cauſeth the rainbow of divers glorious colours, ſo this ſun ſhining upon his Church by his grace, putteth extraordinary beauty upon them, being therefore ſome-Pſ. 45. time ſet forth by a Queen all glorious, as in garments of gold wrought with needlework of divers colours, and ſometime by a Temple built of precious Eſa. 54. 11, 12. ſtones, carbuncles, ſaphires and agates. Now for the living creatures, which were four, I miſlike not their expoſition, who think the four Evangeliſts to be hereby ſet forth; but whereas they expound it onely of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, I conceive rather both them and the whole New Teſtament, all Books and Epiſtles therein contained, to be by theſe four figured out alſo.

And whereas they underſtand their four faces of them, aſcribing the face of a Man to one, of a Lyon to another, of an Oxe to a third, and of an Eagle to a fourth, I rather think theſe faces to agree to all theſe writings in common, each one ſetting him forth, that was as a Man, by his taking fleſh of the Virgin Mary; as a Lyon, by his coming of the tribe of Judah, whoſe embleme was a Lyon; as an Oxe, for his being offered up in ſacrifice; and as an Eagle, for his quick-ſightedneſſe, being able to ſee into the thougths of mens hearts. For it is not ſaid, that theſe Animals had one of them the face of a Man, the other of a Lyon, &c. but each of them had theſe 4 faces, ſo that there muſt be in either of them a repreſentation of all theſe four; and ſo there is, whereſoever Jeſus, who is as all theſe, is deſcribed. And becauſe holy men, that wrote the New Teſta-ment, the formoſt of whom were the four Evangeliſts, upon that which was written, by whom all the reſt goe, they are ſaid to have bodies like unto a Man. And wings they have, and that four, for their ſpeedy flying, as it were abroad into all the parts; and their wings are let down when they ſtand ſtill, to cover their bodies, as being unworthy to ſtand in the preſence of the holy God, with their bodies polluted by ſin, in whoſe ſight, the very Angels are not clean, as Elijah covered therefore his face, when the Lord paſſed by with his glory. And theſe Animals are alſo called Cherubims, ch. 10. becauſe as Angels they bring tydings of joy and ſalvation by Chriſt, Angels being nothing elſe, according to the ſignification of the word, but Meſſengers, and Cherubims, likeneſſes, which Angels aſſume to them, when they appear at any time to men. For their ſtanding each Animall by a wheel, and moving to-ther, & their ſpirit being in the wheels; this ſerveth to ſhew, that the faithful Miniſters of Chriſt preach nothing but what is ſet forth in his written Word, being led by the ſame Spirit, cauſing a moſt ſweet harmony and conſent betwixt them, ſtanding, going, and being lifted up together. Laſtly, their bodies are ſaid to be like unto burning coals, and lamps goe up and down amongſt them, as lightning, to ſhew their fiery zeal and fervency in the execution of their preaching office; for which James and John were called Boa- nerges, ſons of thunder, becauſe they terrified the wicked, as by thunder and Revel. 3. lightning, to repentance, and becauſe the Angel of the Church of Laodicea, was neither hot nor cold, he is threatned with being ſpued out, as one that Gods ſtomach could not indure. There are alſo other things remarkable about theſe living creatures, that they had feet as a calf, hands under their wings, and went ſtraight forward, and turned not when they went, and yet finally returned as lightning. Such feet ſerving to ſet forth their ſtrength to labour, if by the feet of a calf we underſtand of Oxen, as the Golden calfe made by Aaron was doubtleſſe the image of an Oxe, which the Ægyptians worſhipped, called Apis, or by ſuch feet underſtand their chearfull going out, as calves out of the ſtall, as was before noted. Their going ſtraight forward without turning, ſhewed the Evangeliſts and holy Apoſtles, conſtant going on in publiſhing the Goſpel, and onely the truth thereof without turning aſide to any errors; and herein being of ſuch undaunted courage, as not to be ſtayed from ſo doing by any oppoſition of perſecuters. Act. 4. For the hands of a man under their wings, this ſhewed the might wherewith they were inſtructed in their ſpirituall warfare to beat down ſtrong holds of ſin. 1 Cor. 10.4. As for the whirlewind, and cloud, and fire firſt appearing, v. 4. which came out of the North, I take it to have been ſhewed, as portending the Jews deſtruction by the Caldees, as I have already ſaid; and that firſt and literally by the other apparitions the ſame is further ſet forth; and haply, as Calvin hath it, how all things in all parts of the world are moderated by the divine providence, not onely men, but beaſts, ſavage and tame, and fowles; and by theſe wheels the divers turnings about of States and Common-wealths, and of particular perſons, being ſometimes up, and ſometimes down; and that all this is not done by blind fortune, but by the providence of an all-ſeeing God: the wheels whereby things are thus turned about in this world, being within the great wheels of the heavenly ſpheres, and accordingly carryed, as in heaven it is decreed, there being an inviſible Spirit in them, that doth all this, the reins whereby the Chariot having theſe wheels is guided, being in the hands of him that ſitteth upon the throne, and is alwaies moving at his voice.

Gregor: Thus I have by the aſſiſtance of God gone through theſe dark paſſages. But Gregory will not onely have theſe things myſticall, and ſhewed to ſet forth the matters of Chriſts Kingdome, but alſo the year being the 30, and the opening of the heavens, and Ezekiel's being by the river Chebar. For hereby (he ſaith) was ſhewed, that Chriſt ſhould begin to preach at 30 years of age, and his baptiſme in the river Jordan, and the heavens opening then, and the Holy Ghoſts coming down upon him. And whereas Ezekiel beginneth with a conjunction Copulative ויהי having ſaid nothing before, he noteth, that this is done, as joyning that which he wrote to his inward revelations, becauſe he had them firſt, and then wrote as followeth. And whereas he altereth the perſon, ſaying, in the firſt perſon [I ſaw] and then in the third, the word came to Ezek. and the hand of God was upon him; he ſaith, that this is done to ſhew, that as he ſpake, ſo the Spirit of God ſpake by him. Then proceeding to the whirlewind and the cloud, and involving fire and brightneſſe round about it; he ſaith, that becauſe the North wind is very cold and piercing; hereby was ſet forth the judgments of God to come upon the Jews for their infidelity and malice againſt Chriſt, overturning their City, as a whirlewind; and becauſe a cloud is dark, hereby the darkneſſe of ignorance that they were in at Chriſts coming amongſt them, and by the fire involved their malice, making them fiery hot againſt him; and the brightneſſe round about, the bright light of the Goſpel ſhining to the nations all about, when they rejected it. And for the ſimilitude of amber in the midſt of the fire; he ſaith, this ſerved to repreſent Chriſt, becauſe amber is made of gold and ſilver, and by gold added to ſilver and mixed with it, both the colour is made more orient, and it is in value increaſed, and the gold by the mixture made more pale, which otherwiſe would dazle ones eyes to behold it: So the Deity as moſt pretious gold being all tempered with the humanity, might be by men beheld and ſeen, which otherwiſe could not. He alſo by this viſion underſtands the coming of our Lord to judgment at the laſt day, for that ſhall be a day of blackneſſe and darkneſſe, as by dark cloud, and the fire ſhall then bee involved with the cloud, and it ſhall come ſuddenly as a whirlewind, and then out of the fire the amber-like moſt glorious body of Chriſt ſhall appear. For the four faces of each living creature; that is, of the four Evangeliſts, as he takes it for granted that they are meant, and conſequently all preachers of the Goſpel; he ſaith, by the face a man is known; and therefore hereby is ſhewed, that they were known and acknowledged by God, each one had four faces, becauſe what one ſaith of Chriſts humanity, all the reſt ſay the ſame; and likewiſe of his divinity, and they had wings to ſhew that they flew on high by divine contemplation; but becauſe this is nothing without ordering their going accordingly, it is added, their feet were ſtreight, they went according to the ſtreight rule of Gods holy law, and turned not from it to the right hand or to the left; and they are ſaid to have had feet like a calves foot, to intimate, that both they and other faithfull preachers of the Goſpel are meant, who are compared to oxen, where it is ſaid, thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the oxe, that treadeth out the corn; and ſuch a foot is divided, to ſhew, that they diſcreetly divide the word of truth, expounding ſome places onely literally and commending the good examples of the godly, therein ſet forth to our imitation; and likewiſe other precepts commending vertue unto us: but other places they expound myſtically; as where things not imitable are ſaid to have been done by any of them, and where things are darkly ſet forth, one thing being ſpoken and another meant. For as it were indiſcretion to expound all things literally, ſo to make all myſticall is no leſſe then extream folly; and they ſparkled like the colour of burniſhed braſſe; braſſe is ſounding, and therefore hereby is ſet forth the ſound made by them; Pſa. 19. of which it is ſaid, their ſound went out into all the earth; and it is ſaid to be ſparkling, to ſhew their earneſt deſire, that the word may kindle in the hearts of the hearers; and that although but a little of that which they teach cometh into their hearts, yet hereby a fire is kindled, and in time breaks out into a flame. For the hands of a man under their wings; hereby was ſhewed, that as they were given to contemplation implyed in their wings, ſo they acted accordingly, which was alſo ſet forth in Mary and Martha; but Mary ſetting forth contemplation did beſt, yet that which Martha did is neceſſary alſo; theſe two Contemplation and Practiſe muſt be in every one; but firſt Contemplation, by having the mind lifted up to things above, then Practiſe, by living and doing accordingly. Theſe hands of a man alſo may be underſtood of the hands of the man Jeſus Chriſt, whereby theſe wings were lifted up, or elſe they could not have flown therewith, ſo through him onely inabling us we can doe all things, even aſcend in our hearts to things heavenly, but of our Note. ſelves not. For the ſtretching out of the two wings upward, hereby was ſet forth their aiming at the glory of God in all that they doe. For if the praiſe of men be aimed at in our divine actions, or we therefore give our ſelves to contemplation and ſtudy, that we may be learned, this is nothing acceptable, but when this is extended to God on high, it is acceptable indeed. But what meaneth their covering of their bodies with two of their wings, the other two being ſtretched out? verily, that as by two vertues, Hope and Love, we extend our ſelves towards heaven and are comforted, ſo by two, Fear and Repentance in regard of our ſins, the body hereof is covered from Gods ſight, Pſa. 32. according to that, Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſins are covered.

V. 12. They went ſtraight forward when they went, Hebr. before their faces; whereby is not onely meant, that they looked not back to the things behind them, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Phil. 3. 8. and our Lord, he that puts his hand to the plough and looketh back is not fit for the kingdome of God; that is, who hath forſaken worldly vanities but turneth to them again, as Demas to the imbracing of this preſent world: but alſo that they looked upon themſelves, as other men, diligently conſidering from day to day their own imperfections, to be humbled, and to judge themſelves therefore, as it is the part of every one of us to 1 Cor. 11. doe, and we ſhall not be ſo ready to cenſure others, to the incurring of the Mat. 7. 7. danger of Gods judgment. They went whither the Spirit went: Some there are Note. that ſeem to themſelves to be carryed by the Spirit when they are not, but by the fleſh; as namely, when men in authority are violent againſt ſinners, their enemies, as glad of the occaſion, and therefore proceed againſt them in all extremity: Again, others out of remiſneſſe, that they may have the love of all, being counted kind and gratious, connive at great faults and forbear to puniſh them, or puniſh them not according to their deſerts, as Ely did by his ſons; and either of theſe think that herein hee is moved by the Spirit, but indeed it is by the fleſh, which is carefully to be noted, that we may not deceive our ſelves.

And

V. 13. And they were like unto burning coals of fire, and like lampes: the firſt of which ſhewed, how that the godly heat by their converſing with ſuch, as amongſt whom they live, and keep company as hot burning coals; the ſecond, their inlightening and moving others to goodneſſe who are afar off, when they hear of their vertues, Humility, Patience, Godlineſſe and Miracles; and from the fire lightening going out; that is, from the Spirit, which is as fire, becauſe if coals or lamps have not fire put to them, they will neither burn nor flame: it is then by the Spirit that any be ſuch, that the praiſe may bee given to God who thus inableth. Note. A neceſſary conſideration for Chriſts Miniſters, that they may approve themſelves to be right by their burning zeal, ſeeking to heat the cold affections of others; and by ſhining as lamps in doctrine and life to enlighten more in the way of life, and to draw them to walk in it. And for all people to approve their converſing with ſuch, and their light extending to them to theſe bleſſed ends.

V. 14. And the animals ran and returned as the appearance of a flaſh of lightening; that is, after the work done of heating and enlightening the neer at hand, and the far off, they with ſpeed returned to give God praiſe, and to obtain more light and ſtrength to goe on in their race. St. Peter and John having healed the Cripple, when the people came about them, admiring them for the miracle done, he bad the people to look upon them, and remitted them to Jeſus, the worker thereof, and the Prophet acknowledgeth, ſaying to the Lord, thou haſt wrought all our works in us; Eſay 26. and they return like a flaſh of lightening in regard of the miracles wrought by them, daunting their perſecuters, Act. 3. that they dare not proceed in extremity againſt them, as it happened after the aforeſaid miracle. Act. 4.

V. 15. One wheel by the living creatures with his four faces. Here it may ſeem ſtrange, that there being four wheels, one alone ſhould firſt appear, but it is eaſily anſwered, this wheel ſets forth the Old Teſtament, which was firſt alone, and then the New Teſtament contained in the four Evangeliſts, and the other parts thereof ſhewed it ſelf alſo. Onely againſt this it may be objected, the order of the appearing agreeth not, for the Old Teſtament was before and not after the New Teſtament: If then it had been here meant ſo, this wheel have appeared firſt and then the four Animalls. But it is to bee underſtood, that although the Old Teſtament was firſt in time, yet the New Teſtament was firſt in dignity, ſo Gregory; but it was indeed firſt in time, becauſe ſpoken of to Evah and to Abraham, many hundreths of yeers before the covenant in giving the law made, as St. Paul argueth, Gal. 3. 17. Now for the four faces of the wheels they repreſented the Old and New Teſtament, the Old divided into two and the new into two, the Law and the Prophets, the Evangeliſts and Acts and writings of the Apoſtles. And they are all ſet forth by wheels, becauſe ever turning about, and going into all parts, for the Scriptures as the Sun ceaſe not turning about till they have enlightned all the world, the Goſpel being preached to all nations. And the wheel is ſaid to ſtand upon the earth, and yet v. 18. to be terribly high, as ſhewing, that ſome part of theſe wheels is ſo low, as that it may be reached by the ſimpleſt man upon the earth; but ſome again ſo high, as not to be attained to, unleſſe by men moſt learned, and ſoaring aloft by heavenly contemplation, as here he inſtanceth in the Hiſtory of Jacobs getting the bleſſing from Eſau, all particulars wherein he excellently unfoldeth, ſhewing the meaning thereof. For the wheels within the wheels, this ſhewed the New Teſtament myſtically contained in the Old. For theſe wheels going and not returning, it is to be underſtood, now that under the Goſpell all the myſteries of the Old Teſtament are opened, there ſhall be no more turning from the way of worſhip, into the which we are hereby ſet to the worlds end, as there was before, the carnall ſervice then ſet up ceaſing. V. 18. But what meaneth the height or ſtature, heights and terrible aſpect here ſpoken of? Sol. By ſtature underſtand rectitude, by altitudes heavenly bliſſe, and by the terrible aſpect hell threatned to ſinners, as heaven above is promiſed to them that repent and beleeve. Whereas before by one wheel ſtanding upon the earth the Old Teſtament was ſhewed to bee ſet forth with that part which is eaſy to any capacity; let the Reader conſider, whether the earthly promiſes therein made bee not rather ſet forth, whereby only the people were expreſly ſtirred up to obedience and againſt ſin: and their heights were full of eyes not earum, as he would have ſaid, if he had meant the wheels ſtil, but eorum, ſhewing, that now he returns again to ſpeak of the Animals; that is, holy Preachers. They are ſaid to be full of eyes, to intimate their circumſpection; that they may be no way intangled unawares with evil, either by a good intention, thinking to be born out in any unwarrantable action, or taking praiſe to themſelves for any excellency in them, or being deceived by hereticks and their ſophiſtry, for they trie the ſpirits. And they move as the Spirit moves them, wheels and living creatures all alike; for the firmament above their heads, and the throne, &c. ſo much hath been ſaid before, that I find nothing of worth more by Gregory added thereunto. Onely taking the Animalls to be repreſentatives of holy men onely; hee underſtands by the firmament like cryſtall holy angells which fell not, but were after the fall of ſome conſolidated like cryſtall never to fall, but being now as water congealed into cryſtall.

V. 28. This was the likeneſſe of the appearance of the glory of God, and when I ſaw it, I fell upon my face. He ſaith, the likeneſſe, becauſe the eſſentiall glory of God is not Exod.23.30. to be ſeen by mortall man; as it is ſaid, no man ſhall ſee God and live; when God came down to Mount Sinai to give the law, it is ſaid, Deut. 4. 15. yee ſaw no ſimilitude, therefore take heed unto your ſelves, &c. whereby is intimated, that howſoever the Lord was pleaſed here and Dan. 9. by ſome ſimilitude to ſhew his glory to man, yet his will is, that none ſhould preſume by any image to repreſent him, but without any ſimilitude to worſhip him upon pain of incurring the danger of Idolatry, as well as the ſetters up of other images to imaginary gods; for it is plainly affirmed to be a corruption in divine worſhip. For Ezekiel's falling upon his face at the ſight hereof; other holy men of God upon like occaſion, did likewiſe, their bodily ſtrength failing them, as Daniel and John, ſuch terrour doth the very glimpſe of the divine majeſty ſtrike into the hearts of men, becauſe none are altogether without ſin, and God is ſo ſevere a Judge Gen. 3. againſt ſin. For when Adam had ſinned hee feared when hee heard but the ſound of Gods coming into the garden of Eden, and likewiſe any one of his poſterity at any repreſentation of Gods majeſty approaching, is taken with great fear; yea, it is ſaid of Moſes himſelf, when the Lord appeared upon Mount Sinai, that he trembled and feared, then he heard a voice of one that ſpake; all which words are by the Vulg. Lat. ſevered from this, and prefixed before ch. 2. which now followeth.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. V. 2. AND he ſaid unto me, ſtand upon thy feet and I will ſpeak unto thee, and the Spirit entred into me and ſet mee upon my feet: This was done to ſhew, that whoſo would hear the Lord ſpeaking muſt ſtand upon his feet by being intent in his affections to that which he ſpeaketh. But this he cannot doe till the Spirit entring into him ſets him up, but the Spirit entring he doth ſtand up; which maketh againſt all thoſe that intend not the word of the Lord when he Note. ſpeaketh, but are remiſſe in their affections towards it; and let none ſay, I ſhall then be ſet upon my feet when the Spirit enters into mee, taking no further care hereabout, but ask the Spirit by earneſt praying of our heavenly Father, for hee will (ſaith the Lord) give his Spirit to them that aske him.

V. 3. Son of man I ſend thee to the children of Iſrael, but I know, that they are a rebellious houſe. Here the Prophet firſt by word of mouth hath the task of propheſying to the children of Iſrael laid upon men, but with little encouragement, to Note. ſhew that the ſervants of God muſt not forbear the execution of their office, becauſe the people amongſt whom they teach are refractary and rebellious, and harden their hearts againſt their teaching. For God hath not onely one end in ſending Prophets to a people, viz. to convert them, but if they harden their hearts he hath another, viz. that they may know that there hath been a Prophet amongſt them, and therefore when deſtruction cometh, that there was no defect on Gods part, through which it is brought, but altogether in themſelves, in that they hardened their hearts and were not moved by his threatnings and admonitions, who never ſmiteth before that he giveth warning. Calvin notes from that which went before, that God never caſts his down but he lifteth them up again, but reprobates are terrified and ſo left to the judgments to come. And again, that the Word of God goeth not alone, but his Spirit together, to make them ſtand up that are faln; ſo that it is not through any weakneſſe in the Word, that ſo many lie ſtill in their ſins: but becauſe they ungraciouſly reject the Spirit, offering to enter in at the dore of their heart. And for this they ſhall know that there hath been a Prophet amongſt them; he ſaith, this was added for conſolation to the Prophet, although his teaching be ſleighted for the preſent, yet it ſhould one day appear to their confuſion and his praiſe, and when thoſe things that hee foretold ſhould come to paſſe, it ſhould from themſelves bee extorted that God ſent him, and by the greatneſſe of the judgments coming upon them, they ſhould know by experience what it was to harden their hearts againſt his premonitions. And thus it ſhall be to all impenitent hearers of the Word, upon whom it worketh not, but they goe on in rebellion ſtill, they ſhall know one day to their coſt what it was to have a Prophet amongſt them, but either to ſleight or malign him for his labour.

V. 6. Though briars and thornes be with thee, and thou dwelleſt amongſt Scorpions, bee not afraid of their words : Vulg. for briars and thorns hath increduli & ſubverſores ſunt tecum; but the firſt word ſignifieth Rebels, and the next Subverters, or Thorns in Hebrew; and the wicked amongſt whom the Word is preached, are hereby ſhewed not onely to be Rebels, but alſo like Thorns, pricking and galling the Preacher by their ſharp words and malicious practiſes againſt him; and they are alſo like Scorpions, ſtinging, and ſo poyſoning him, that is, procuring his death, as John the Baptiſt alſo called the Phariſees generation of vipers, which are another ſort of moſt poyſonous ſerpents. But our Lord to comfort his Miniſters againſt ſuch auditors, ſaith, Yee ſhall tread upon Scorpions, and take up Serpents and they ſhall not hurt you. And this is ſpoken as Gregory noteth, to ſhew, that the Saints of God living amongſt evill company cannot be corrupted by them, as Lot amongſt the Sodomites; neither doth the moſt holy place keep others from ſinning, as Paradiſe did not Adam, but Abel living with Cain a Scorpion perſiſts in Gods favour.

V. 8. But bee not thou rebellious; that is, to conceal that which I bid thee ſpeak, open thy mouth and eat, which is thus ſpoken, to intimate, that the Preacher by opening his mouth to teach others, feeds himſelf, and is ſpiritually nouriſhed thereby as with ſweet and pleaſant meat; as is ſhewed, ch. 3.3. That which he was bidden to eat was a roul written within and without, Lamentations, Mourning, and Woe : Vulg. Lament. a verſe or ſong, Carmen and Woe; expounded by ſome of the ſorrows to be ſuffered here by the wicked, the joyes of the godly in heaven, and the torments of hell to come to the wicked for ever. But the word is הצה ſignifying either clamour or roaring; ſo that herein was nothing joyfull: It is ſaid to be the roll of a book, becauſe they wrote then in parchment, and one parchment was a book rolled together, as it was apt of it ſelfe to doe. Yet the roll here, as Gregory noteth, intimated the obſcurity of his Propheſie, requiring much ſtudy to underſtand it; and further, the writing within and without, intimates ſome things obſcure, and ſome things plain; it being full of Lament. &c. to ſhew abundance of miſeries coming, concerning which he was to propheſie; or within, was to the Jews within covenant, and without, to other nations, for he propheſieth againſt them alſo, as chap. 25, &c. to chap. 40. And Ezekiel hath this roll opened to him, and then he eateth it; to ſhew, that the Preacher muſt open and take out of the Word of God what he preacheth, and teach nothing elſe but what is herein written; and this he muſt eat by meditation, and it filleth his belly, when he groweth hereby full of light and holineſſe, and he keeps it in his memory to declare it Rev. 10. 9. to the congregation, it being nothing grievous or harſh, but ſweet and pleaſant to him ſo to doe, as ch. 3. 3. So John alſo had a book given to him to Joh. 4. eat; and our Lord ſaid it was meat to him to do the will of his Father, when he was about to preach to the Samaritans. How alike the Lord proceeded with Ezekiel and John in Revel. ſee ch. 4. & 10, &c. there, for he alſo ſaw a throne, and four Animalls full of eyes, and a rainbow about the throne.

CHAP. III.

V. 9. AS an Adamant, harder then a flint have I made thy forehead: With many words doth the Lord arm Ezekiel, that he might couragiouſly execute his Propheticall office againſt all diſcouragements by the Jews, to whom he was ſent. He had told him of the hard heartedneſſe and impudent ſhameleſneſſe of his people, now againſt this he promiſeth to work ſo in him, that they ſhall not all of them be able to make him bluſh or bee aſhamed with what deriſions or calumnies ſoever they ſhould lade him. As an Adamant is moſt hard and durable, ſo he hereby ſheweth the conſtancy wherewith hee Greg. erubeſcentia in malo eſt laudabilis; in bono, e contra. would indue Ezekiel to goe on in his Propheticall office. Hereupon Gregory ſaith well, vereċundia in malo laudabilis, in bono e contra, to be aſhamed of evill is a point of wiſdome, but to be aſhamed of good a point of folly; there is confuſion bringing glory, and there is confuſion bringing ſin. From this therefore the Lord keeps his, but giveth grace unto them for that, for which cauſe Rom. 6. the Apoſtle ſaith, what fruit had yee of thoſe things whereof yee are now aſhamed?

V. 12. And the Spirit took mee up, and I heard behind mee the voice of a great ruſhing, ſaying, Bleſſed be the glory of the Lord from his place: As the Lord had by words, and the ſign of the roll of a book given to Ezekiel to eat, confirmed and comforted him, ſo now he actually ſtrengthneth him to his office by taking him up by his Spirit above all earthly things, that he might not be troubled, or have his mind diſtracted by theſe, but he might be wholly intent to the heavenly buſineſſe, wherein the Lord was about to imploy him. So likewiſe his ſpirit takes up other Prophets & Miniſters of his, inſomuch as that they paſſe not for Note. wordly loſſes, dangers or indignities, offered to them, as rejoycing to doe the work to which they are appointed unto the end. As Paul ſaid, when he heard, Act. 20.24. that he ſhould be bound at Jeruſ. none of all theſe things move me, neither count I my life dear unto me, ſo that I may finiſh my courſe with joy. For the voice heard of a great ruſhing, bleſſing the glory of the Lord, this ſhewed that it was ſuperhumane, & heavenly, and therefore, that it ſhould certainly be, as was ſaid, Gods glory ſhould be bleſſed and magnified from his place, although the ten Tribes being carryed in captivity, and Judah ere long ſhould come into the power of their enemies alſo, all things might now ſeem deſperate. Yet hereby was declared, that God, who dwelt in the Temple at Jeruſalem, would ſhew himſelfe again to be the Lord, and moſt glorious for the mighty acts that hee would Calvin. again doe for his people: For which cauſe alſo the noiſe of the wings of the Animals and of the Wheels was heard, as demonſtrated a power to come that ſhould bee irreſiſtible, viz. of the hoaſts of the Lord in way of reſcue of Gregor. Note. his from the hands of all their enemies: To this effect almoſt Calvin, but Gregory from this, that he heard a voice behind him, ſaith, that hereby was ſhewed what followeth after propheſying in the penitent, they having lien ſtill before in the dregs of their ſins, now make a great noiſe by mourning for them. This though it be true, doth not ſo well agree to this place, becauſe for further expreſſion, and to ſhew who made this noiſe, it is ſaid, that it came from the Animals and Wheels, ſetting forth not ſinners, but Cherubims, and Evangeliſts, which were holy, and the ſpeech uttered being a bleſſing of the glory of God evinceth alſo the ſame, it being rather conſonant to that, Eſay 6. where the Seraphims cry continually, Holy, holy, holy to God, and the earth is full of his glory. I went in bitterneſſe in the heat of my ſpirit: Before it is ſaid, that he eat the roul and it was ſweet as honey; How then ſaith hee now that he was in bitterneſſe? Sol. He had not put off all humane affections, although he were ſo tranſported as hath been ſaid, and in regard of theſe he was in bitterneſſe, although in reſpect of the Spirit into him entring and finding him with the viſions of God, he had ſweetneſſe, as David ſaith, Thy word is ſweeter to mee then honey and the honey combe: yet hee was not without bitterneſſe when he went heavy and mourning all the day long, and when he drank gall and wormwood; but he ſaith, The hand of the Lord was ſtrong upon me, although through the weakneſſe of the fleſh the task impoſed upon me was ſo bitter to me, that I would have avoided it, yet the Spirit, ſet forth by the hand of the Lord put me on ſo ſtrongly, that I buckled unto it, and went as v. 15. Thus Calvin, but Gregory, The more of the Spirit we have, the more bitterneſſe of ſorrow for our own ſins and imperfections follows in us, in that we are not able to doe as the Spirit moves us, but then Chriſt, who is the hand of God, is ſtrong in us, and by him we are drawn, as it is ſaid, no man can come to me except the Father draw him; which is true, but the former agreeth beſt to this place.

Then I came to them of the captivity at Tellabib, that dwelt by the river Chebar; that is, having been hitherto withdrawn, that I might alone ſee theſe viſions; now I returned, and came again amongſt my fellow captives, and here the place is named in which they dwelt. Tellabib, תל ſignifying an heap, and אב an ear of corn, it being haply ſo called for the fertility of the place, as commonly places near rivers are very fruitfull: And there, he ſaith, he remained amongſt the other captives aſtoniſhed 7 days, that is, ſilently meditating upon the viſions, which I had, as being ſtricken hereby, and might adviſedly be done on Gods part, as preparing the people, with a more attentive mind to hearken to that, which he ſhould after ſay; whereas if hee had preſently ſpoken, it may be they would not have ſo much regarded it, but now ſeeing him ſo long thus troubled and ſaying nothing, they could not but bee ready to hearken to him, when he ſhould begin to ſpeak. The Vulg. hath it, a heap of new fruits; but it is thus ſaid, either becauſe fruits were ſoon ripe there, or the corn being now ripe it was gathered together and laid upon heaps.

V. 17.

Son of man I have made thee a Watch-man to the houſe of Iſrael: Here it further appeareth, why Ezekiel was mute all theſe 7 dayes, hee had not yet his commiſſion, hee was indeed choſen and appointed to this Propheticall office, but not till after theſe 7 dayes authorized to ſpeak to the people. And now, what manner of man is hee made? verily a Watch-man, ἐπίσκοπος, a Biſhop, as ſuch be called in the New Teſtament. But how muſt hee acquit himſelf according to this his office? by taking his words from Gods mouth, and ſo ſpeaking to the people, and not bringing forth any of his own, as Paul did, 1 Theſſ. 2. 13. Act. 20. but the Phariſees did not, nor the Papiſts at this day; and therefore although they have the title of Biſhops, they are indeed nothing leſſe by reaſon of their ignorance, which keepeth them from ſeeing, and of the traditions of men and legends, which they teach, and not the words coming from Gods mouth onely. Neither can ignorant Preachers amongſt us, or ſuch as preach themſelves, venting their ſpleen againſt particulars, or going in high ſtrains of humane eloquence, Philoſophicall diſcourſes, or Rapſodies of many quotations out of humane writings, better acquit themſelves for ſuch Watch-men, nor although they ſpeak Gods words, if they take no further care, that their teaching may bee effectuall, praying to this end, as Paul, Eph. 1. and obſerving their exorbitances to admoniſh and if it may be to reduce them that are wandring into the right way.

Note.

V. 20.

Alſo when a righteous man turneth from his righteouſneſſe, and I lay ſtumbling blocks before him, &c. Here another part of the Miniſters office is ſet forth, viz.

as to admoniſh the wicked, ſo to ſeek the turning of the righteous, in caſe 1 Joh. 3. 9. that they have faln into ſin or errour. But how is it that ſuch a caſe is put, ſeeing the righteous have the ſeed of God in them, and cannot ſin? Sol. This is either ſpoken of ſuch as never had any other, but ſeeming righteouſneſſe, of which ſort of men the Lord ſaith, I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance, or of the truly righteous, who are ſubject to fall into ſin, though not to fall away ſo as to delight in any evill way which they formerly hated, trading now in it. For all are to be admoniſhed of their ſins, being otherwiſe in the way of death, and the miniſter of God ſeeing one or another of theſe righteous perſons gone from his righteouſneſſe to ſin, he cannot diſtinguiſh betwixt them, and therefore muſt warn both; yea, by this means it pleaſeth God to turn his elect ſervants again, that they may come to the life whereunto he hath predeſtinated them. But what is Gods laying Calvin. of ſtumbling blocks in their way? Calvin ſaith, it is affliction and judgments, whereby they are judged in this world, unto which hee would have his watchman to adde his admonitions, as being then moſt likely to take Lyra. effect. But Lyra expounds Gods laying of a ſtumbling block before him, of his puniſhing ſin with ſin in him; that is, after his falling from righteouſneſſe to ſin, leaving him to his own luſts, the rein being laid looſe, as it were, that he might run on into ſin more and more, being hardened herein rather by mercies and worldly bleſſings, or coming out of miſeries notwithſtanding, as Pharaoh did, whereby his heart was hardened. And this is moſt probable, the executing of judgments upon the righteous, turning to ſin, being Hoſ. 2: 6. rather an hedging up of his way with briars, as another Prophet ſpeaketh, to his labour, but had his comfort renewed in ſeeing the viſions of God again, to which comfort there is nothing comparable to an holy mind. But being V. 24, there, the Lord ſeemed to contradict that which he had formerly ſaid, in 25, bidding him give warning to the wicked, but now, to ſhut up himſelfe, and 26. telling him that his tongue ſhould cleave to the roofe of his mouth, and that they ſhould put him in bands. But he doth not hereby ſhew any thing elſe but a ceſſation from ſpeaking, as he was before commanded for a time, in regard of their great unworthineſſe to whom he was ſent, the Lord giving him to underſtand, that he would again in his due time open his mouth, as V. 27. v. 27. Lyra by his putting in bands underſtandeth, that the meaning of the Lyra. Lord was, that hee ſhould cauſe his ſervants to bind him in his own houſe, where he ſhould be ſhut up, in token, that he ſhould not for a time goe out any more amongſt them. And hee muſt goe out into the Plaine to ſee the ſame glorious viſion again for his further confirmation, after the charge of a Watch-man given him, for which cauſe the Spirit is alſo ſaid again to enter into him, and ſet him upon his feet, when through fear he had faln down, as he had done before: And yet all this notwithſtanding, he muſt ſhut up himſelf and be ſilent, till the Lord would be pleaſed to open his mouth again; to ſhew, that through the perverſeneſſe of the people the course of Propheſying is ſometime ſtopped; and then viſion failing, what can be expected but Note. that the people ſhould periſh without remedy, that as we deſire not to be deprived of the light, we may not harden our hearts in ſin, but ſhew our ſelves tractable and obedient. Gregory by the Lords calling Ezekiel into the Plaine, ſaith, that myſtically is ſet forth the coming of his Word to the Gentiles, the Jews being left, and his being ſhut up, and tongue-tyed and bound, their being without any true Prophet, til the time cometh when the Lord will be pleaſed to open the mouth of ſome at the end of the world to ſpeak effectually to them for their converſion to the faith.

CHAP. IV.

HERE the Lord biddeth Ezekiel by ſignes to foretell the ſiege and deſtruction of Jeruſalem, he muſt upon a Tile pourtray, a City, and an Army beſieging it, &c. The Tile to be taken ſaith Lyra, muſt be one unburnt, and ſo fit to pourtray any thing upon, and this muſt be done to make that which was to come upon the Jews for their ſins the more plain, as was then the manner of Gods teaching. But all this, ſaith Calvin, might ſeem to be childiſh and ridiculous, onely being done at the Word of the Lord it was a matter of great moment, for hereby was ſhewed, that Jeruſalem ſhould moſt certainly be thus dealt withall by the Caldees. And this is that which maketh the ſacraments inſtituted by God to be reverend, becauſe they are done at his Word, although there appeareth nothing in them but contemptible, in reſpect of the ends for which they were ordained, there being nothing in the one but Water, and in the other Bread and Wine. But Gods Word coming, they are moſt excellent and heavenly means of ſanctification and ſalvation, although no ſuch thing appeareth outwardly to the eye of the beholder, he that commanded Baptiſme, hereby cleanſing the ſoul inviſibly from the filthineſſe of ſin; and in our receiving that Bread and Wine ſtrengthening and refreſhing our ſouls to eternall life. But the outward ceremonies in the Church of Rome having no word, but being meerly mens inventions are ridiculous indeed, yea vain and impious, and therefore to be caſt out.

Note.

Lye upon thy left ſide, and lay the iniquity of the houſe of Iſrael upon it, 390 days, days being to ſet forth years. v. 6. Then lie on thy right ſide 40 days, &c. That which was before done ſerving to repreſent Jeruſalems deſtruction, now he is bidden by lying upon his left, and then on his right ſide to make a demonſtration of the time unto the ſaid deſtruction. Touching which time Calvin conjectureth, that for Iſrael, that is, the Kingdome of the 10 tribes, the years ſet forth by the 390 days began with Jeroboam, and ended when in the time of Hoſea the Aſſyrians carryed Iſrael away into captivity; for thoſe years were juſt 390, and touching the 40 years of Judahs ſtanding after this, till the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; he reckoneth 22 from Joſiah, and the other 18 either in the time of Manaſſeh his reign, wherein ſin moſt abounded, or ſo many years of Joſiah his reign before the Book of the Law was found. But who ſo ſhall compute the time from Jeroboams beginning to reign, to the 9 year of Hoſea, ſhall find that he was much miſtaken, for there was not above 272 years; and it were ſtrange by the 40 years of Judah to underſtand ſome in another Kings reign, that is, Manaſſehs, one going between, or in the reign of Joſiah, taking them for the former 18, and then over-leaping the latter 13, to make them up out of the years of Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin and Zedekiah; wherefore we muſt neceſſarily ſeek ſome other interpretation; and here not to trouble the Reader with many, I find one amongſt them all, that moſt arrides me; which is, that by the 390 days, and 40 days are meant, ſo many days of the ſiege of Jeruſalem before pourtrayd upon a tile, for he is both bidden to ſet his face towards the ſiege of Jeruſalem, v. 7. And to make bare his arm in token of action, wherein the Lord would ſoon be againſt her, becauſe men in preparing to work put off their upper garment, hanging otherwiſe about their arms, and troubling them. And to eat baſe bread 390 days, and that by weight, to ſhew, that they ſhould in the time of the ſiege or many days live in great ſcarcity and want through the famin, that ſhould be; and the event was anſwerable, for Nebuchadnezzar began his ſiege againſt Jeruſalem, ann. 9. of Zedekiah, the 10 moneth, the 10 day, and ann. 11. the 4 moneth, the 9 day took it; ſo that all the days of the ſiege, counting 30 days to a moneth, were 390 dayes of famine, although the famine began not after the ſiege, till the fifth moneth after the ſiege laid; then for the forty days more of his lying on his right ſide, in which time nothing is ſaid of his diet; this time diſagreeth not much from the time of Nebuzaradans coming to burn the houſe of the Lord, and other principall houſes in Jeruſalem, which was the 5 moneth, the 7 day, that is, 28 days after, ſo that by the time of finiſhing thoſe burnings, 12 days more might well paſſe, and thus we come to the number of 40; all which both 390 and 40 dayes, Judah may well be ſaid to have born her iniquities; and becauſe many of Iſrael were mixed amongſt them, Iſrael alſo, and Ezekiel being ſet for a portentum or ſign of that which was to come unto them, is ſaid to bear their iniquities in token hereof ſo many days, and it is added [a day for a year] to ſhew, that in theſe their grievous ſuffering ſo many days, they were not too rigorouſly dealt withall; conſidering, that for ſo many years living in idolatry and other groſſe ſins, they ſuffered and were in ſtraights but ſo many days, a day for a year; and then Ezekiels bearing of their iniquities ſo long, was his bearing onely of the puniſhment thereof. For the counting of thoſe years, if we begin at Jeroboam, and reckon to the captivity of Iſrael, of his reign 20, of the reign of Aſa King of Iudah 41, Iehoſaphat 35, Iehoram 8, Ahaziah 1, Athaliah 6, Ioaſh 40, Amaziah 29, Uzziah 52, Iotham 16, Ahaz 16, Hezekiah 6, at the time that Iſrael was ſubdued by the Aſſyrians, after this he reigned 23, Manaſſeh 55, Ioſiah 31, Iehoiakim 11, Zedekiah 11: So that to the Captivity of Iſrael were 270 years, from thence to the deſtruction of Ieruſalem 131, all together 401: But according to this account, the ſinnings of Iſrael and Iudah are put together, which are here diſtinguiſhed; and together alſo they are not onely 401, but 430 years.

Lyra.
1 Sam. 7.

Lyra therefore counteth the years of Iſrael in two parts, 1. from Abimelech the ſon of Gedeon, in whoſe days Iſrael went a whoring after his Ephod, and ſinned by idolatry, till Samuels time, who made them put away their idols, which time was about 120 years; ſecondly, from Ieroboam to Hoſea, as was ſaid before, 270, together 390. Then for Iudahs 40 years he aſſigneth the 16 firſt years of Manaſſeh his reign, of Amons 2, and of Iehoiakim, and Zedekiah 22; and this is the beſt that I have met withall, or can excogitate; if the years were more from Abimelech to Samuel, it is to be underſtood, that it is not ſaid, that they went a whoring, even the whole houſe of Iſrael after the Ephod made by Gedeon, but that they did ſo; but haply, although they in Ophrah where it was, did ſo at the firſt, after he was dead, yet there was no generall defection, till many years after. And for Iudahs ſinning, there was no reaſon to reckon any more time hereof, then was notorious, ſith Hezekiah kept the people in better order all his days, and Ioſiah in his and Manaſſeh, after his deliverance from impriſonment and reſtitution to his Kingdome again. For the Prophets lying thus long on his left ſide, and then on his right, it is not to be conceived, that he lay continually all this time indeed, but in imagination, or at certain times, till ſo many days were expired.

Hieron.

Ierome reckoneth the 390 years of Iſraels ſufferings from the captivity of the ten tribes, an. 9. of Hoſea, to the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, or rather from Phacee the ſon of Remaliah, in whoſe time the Captivity of two tribes and an halfe began, 164 years, from whence to Cyrus were 70, from thence to Ahaſhueroſh, who delivered the Jews from Hamans Conſpiracy 155, all together 389. and the 40 years of Iudah from the deſtruction of the temple to Cyrus; whereas thoſe years, as he had ſaid before, were 70; and therefore this falleth, and both this and the other, becauſe the days of their ſufferings, and not the years are here ſet forth, but the years of their ſinning, as hath been ſaid, which brought their ſufferings. Some Hebrews putting all theſe years together, ſo making up 430. ſay, that hereby was ſhewed the deliverance of the Jews, after that they had ſuffered ſo long a time from the deſtruction of their City by the Romans, and ſome of them by 390 the deliverance of the ten tribes this time being ended, and of Iudah in 40 years, but all theſe are vain ſpeculations. For the Prophets lying on his right ſide for Iudah, on his left for Iſrael, the worthineſſe of Iudah above, Iſrael is ſet forth in that Iudah perſiſted longer by far in the ſervice of the true God then Iſrael.

After his lying ſo many dayes, now his diet for the 390 days is preſcribed, viz. bread of wheat and barly, beans, &c. whereof men doe not uſe to make bread, but being driven to it through neceſſity by famine; therfore hereby a famin to come to Ieruſalem ſo long a time is foreſhewed, of which enough hath been ſaid before, and to make it more plain it is applyed ſo, v. 13, 16, 17. V. 13. both to Iſrael and Judah. Of Iſrael, it being ſaid, that they ſhall eat their bread defiled amongſt the Gentiles; and of Judah, I will break the ſtaffe of bread in Jeruſalem: And to ſhew their eating of defiled bread, he was bidden to bake his bread in mans dung; and then upon complaint, in the dung of beaſts; but either way it was made unclean by Legall uncleanneſſe, and ſtinking, even Levit. 7. 21. ſuch as the Jews were never uſed to, who were required to eat onely things clean and ſweet, but for the dung of man or beaſt not to touch it. And therefore Ezekiel, who walked according to Gods laws, abhorred from eating Act. 10. any thing defiled or unclean, as Peter alſo ſaid of himſelf; Note. ſo cautelous are the ſervants of God of not offending his laws in any thing, and therefore much more by any ſpirituall uncleanneſſe.

He muſt cauſe his hair to be ſhaven, and dividing it into 3 parts burn one, ſmite with a knife about the other, and caſt the third forth to be blown about by the wind, the ſignification whereof is ſhewed V. 12. v. 12. viz. that a third part of them ſhould die by the famin before ſpoken of, a third part by the ſword, and a third by being ſcattered into all parts, or quarters of the world, as it came to paſſe in the Babyl. Captivity.

V. 3. And thou ſhalt take a few of them, and bind them in thy skirt and then caſt them Lyra. into the fire: This, ſaith Lyra, is ſpoken of Zedekiah and Ahab, two adulte- Jer. 29. rous falſe Prophets, whom Nebuchadnezzar is ſaid therefore to have burnt Calvin. in the fire. But Calvin better, hereby is ſhewed, that when this great deſtruction ſhould come to the Jews, ſome few of them ſhould yet be pre- V. 14. ſerved, as ſome hairs kept cloſe in the skirt of a mans garment, when all elſe are put into the fire; ſo it is ſaid often, that of the Jews a remnant ſhould be ſaved, yet of this remnant ſome again are caſt in alſo; to ſhew that in time of common danger, wherein moſt periſh, but ſome yet eſcape, even they ſhall not all eſcape, but of theſe few, ſome ſhall ſuffer afterwards; as indeed it fell out to Gedaliah and ſome others left in the land, when Jer. 41. others were deſtroyed or carryed away by means of Iſhmael and his adherents ſlaying them, as Jeremiah ſheweth, for thereof ſhall a fire come forth to all the houſe of Iſrael; that is, ſo none of all the wicked ſhall eſcape of all the children of Iſrael, but ſhall periſh firſt or laſt; which ſhould make them that Note. have been in danger, but are yet eſcaped, to fear and repent, ſeeing they are ſtill liable to the like deſtruction, not one mothers ſon of all the wicked ſhal finally eſcape.

V. 7. Becauſe yee have multiplyed more then the nations round about you; But be- V. 5. fore this it is to be noted, that he ſaith, This is Jeruſalem, I have ſet her in the midſt of the nations: whereby he both expreſly ſheweth what people he meant by the haires before ſpoken of, and layeth a foundation of aggravating her ſin by ſpeaking of her ſite and excellency, her ſite being in the Hieron. midſt of the earth, as Ierome and others obſerve, ſo that ſhe could not bee hid, nor her evil doings, but all nations round about ſaw them, whereby their God who dwelt there had the greater diſhonour, his name being by this means blaſphemed amongſt the Gentiles, as is ſaid Rom. 2. 17. And Ieruſalem is alſo ſaid to be in the midſt of the nations, to denote the excellency thereof above them all for Gods ſpecial favours to that City above all others, ſetting it up as a light; and therefore expecting for his law and ſervice being

V. 7. about, to which effect almoſt Calvin. But loe contrariwiſe, as here v. 7. fol-loweth, they multiplyed more then other nations; that is, their ſins, the word ſignifyeth to multiply, although ſome (ſaith Calvin) expound it by tu-multuating; but the word המן hath no ſuch ſignification: The Vulgar renders it ſuperaſtis, yee have exceeded all nations round about, expounded likewiſe by Ierome of ſin. Some taking it Paſſively; will have the Jews multiplying in children, and in wealth, hereby meant, but not to the purpoſe. Next, he chargeth them that they had not walked in the judgments of the Heathen, which may ſeem, forſomuch as the Prophets are often in re-proving them for walking according to their ſtatutes. But the meaning here is, that they were not ſo conſtant to their God, although the onely true God of heaven and earth, as the Heathens to theirs; in which reſpect Iere- Jer. 2. miah plainly reproveth them ſaying, Will any nation change their Gods? but yee have changed me.

V. 9. I, even I am againſt thee; that is, not men who ſhall come of themſelves ſeeking to deſtroy thee, for ſo thou mighteſt hope notwithſtanding to eſcape, but I will come with them againſt thee, and they ſhall bee but my inſtruments to doe execution upon thee. For that hee meant not hereby, that he would immediately by his judgments from heaven deſtroy Calvin. them, appeareth, becauſe he did it by the Caldees, ſo that they are much miſtaken that expound it of his immediate judging of them, as ſome (ſaith Calvin) doe. And theſe his judgments he ſaith ſhall be ſo great, that the like hath not been formerly done, nor ſhall be done hereafter; and then V. 10. coming to ſhew more particularly the judgments, he ſaith, Fathers ſhall eat their Sons, and the Sons ſhall eat their Fathers: How this was ever fulfilled according to the letter, ſome doubt; and becauſe it appeareth not when, they expound it myſtically, as meant of that which our Lord ſaith, The Hieron. Father ſhall bee againſt the Son, and the Son againſt the Father; that is, the Maſter againſt the Scholar, &c. But touching Mothers eating their Chil-Ioſeph. l. 7. de bello Iud. c. 8. dren in the ſtraightneſſe of the ſiege by the Caldees, it is ſpoken, Lam.
4. 10. & 2. 20. And again, when Ieruſalem was beſieged by the Romans:
And before this, 2 King. 6. 28. in Samaria, when that City was beſieged, Flarim. Hemun. de antich. c. 7. and in other Hiſtories; in Sancerra in France, ann. 1572. two women in the ſtraightneſſe of the ſiege did the like. And in the days of Honorius the Empe-Procopius de bell. Goth. l. 2. rour, men did buy and ſell, and eat the fleſh of men in Rome, and it was commonly cryed, Pone pretium humanæ carni. And Deut. 28. 53, 54, 55, &c. it is threatned, that both Fathers and Mothers ſhould doe ſo; and therefore it is not to be doubted but that it was done accordingly, and ſo they ſuffered the extremity of puniſhment as is here threatned. Wherefore wee ſhall not here need to flee to Allegories, as Ierome doth, or otherwiſe ex-Vatabl. pound it with Vatablus of the Fathers taking away the meat from their Childrens mouths, and Childrens taking it from their Fathers, they being by this means famiſhed and dying: for although this were not a direct eating of one another, yet it was in effect an eating and devouring of one another; Matth. 23. in which ſenſe our Lord charged the Phariſees that they devoured Widows houſes, and for a colour made long prayers; and the Apoſtle ſome, that, they did bite and devour one another; yet if it be thus onely taken, the ſenſe will not be that which here it is, the very eating of the fleſh of one another, moſt ſtupendiouſly and unnaturally. But although Ierome erred here in pending the ſenſe to an Allegory, yet there was no ſuch cauſe for this to taxe him as proud and wicked as Calvin doth, and to be taken heed of as dangerous, but onely to try all things delivered by him, and to hold faſt that which is good; without which Caveat Calvin himſelf is not to be read, in his Determinations about the ſenſe of Scripture, as may appear in many places, wherein I have laid open his miſ-interpretations alſo, which it may be feared came alſo from the ſame fountain, for which he blameth Ierome, arrogancy of ſpirit tranſporting him by reaſon of his great acumen, and high eſteem in which he was had of all men; in ſaying which, yet let me crave thy charitable cenſure of me (O judicious Reader) that come ſo far ſhort of him in learning and judgment; but truth is truth touching men of greateſt abilities, and we are not for Modeſties ſake to forbear to utter it when need requireth. But to return to the text in hand, it being clear, that it is to be underſtood according to the Letter: It may yet be demanded, How ſo underſtood it can be true, that the like was never done before, nor ſhould bee after? I anſwer, the meaning is not without all limitation of place or time; for it is ſaid onely, I will doe in thee that which I have not done, neither will I doe the like any more; the meaning being, that in Jeruſalem the like was never before done, nor after in Jeruſalem which then ſtood, for it was burnt and broken down by the Caldees at the end of that ſiege. Therefore although the like judgment had come before upon Samaria, and afterwards in the time of the Romanes, upon Jeruſalem rebuilt, yet it makes nothing againſt this Propheſie.

Deut. 28. 46.
The Jews then living, by this ſtrange judgment amongſt them, being thus made a ſign and a wonder to the nations about, that ſhould ſee it. And this judgment was more then ever befell any other Heathen people that ever we read of before or ſince; in which regard it is alſo thus ſpoken, and a reaſon why it ſhould be ſo is premiſed, v. 7. becauſe they had multiplyed their ſins more. Which yet is not ſo to be underſtood, as if the Heathens committed not the ſame abominations that they did, for they alſo were groſſe Idolaters, and otherwiſe notoriouſly wicked: But the exceſſe of the Jews was in this, that they having an holy God revolted from him, and ſo the Heathen did not by their impure gods, and did theſe abominations in the light of the Word amongſt them, theſe in the darkneſſe of ignorance and blindneſſe.
Note.
For hereby the ſins of any people are aggravated above the ſins of others, if they have means of teaching and inſtruction in the right way, but others are without, as Sodom and Gomorrah; and likewiſe particular perſons are counted greater ſinners, that have moſt knowledge, then the ſimple and ignorant.
Matth. 11.

V. 13.
Thus ſhall mine anger be accompliſhed, and I will cauſe my fury to reſt in them. Here by reſting, ſome (ſaith Calvin) underſtand an end of Gods judgments againſt the Jews, but erroneouſly, as appeareth by the next words, And they ſhall know that I the Lord have ſpoken in my zeal, when I have accompliſhed my fury upon them; for theſe ſhew plainly, that by his furies reſting in them, the continuance of his judgments is meant, and that they ſhould not be ſharp onely for a little while, as they might hope in regard of Gods great mercy. But he ſaith, that he will continue his judgments upon them ſo long, that they ſhall know to their coſt that which they would not know nor acknowledge before, that what was ſpoken by the Prophets in threatning them came from God, whereas they would not beleeve but that they ſpake ſo of their own heads; yea, and that God ſpake ſo by them out of his zeal or anger againſt their abominable ſins, and therefore that he was not a God compoſed all of mercy, as the wicked imagine, but hot and zealous to be avenged upon them, or any elſe that doe ſuch things: Whence note, that God is zeal and fire to the wicked, as well as grace and mercy to the penitent.
Note.
2. That they ſhall be made to know this by experience, that will not otherwiſe beleeve it at the hearing of his Word. 3. That a little ſuffering will not work them to this through their hard-heartedneſſe, but judgments of long continuance. 4. They lay a foundation of ſuch grievous and long laſting judgments to themſelves, who will not beleeve the Word preached againſt their ſins, and the bitter threatnings of his Miniſters to come from God, but from themſelves, and therefore ſleight and contemn them. But what is it that he ſaith further here, I will be comforted, when hee had ſaid that he would make his anger to reſt in them? is vengeance taking upon the wicked, a comfort to God, who profeſſeth to be unwilling with their death? Sol. There is a like paſſage, Eſay 1. 24. Ah I will eaſe me of mine adverſaries, it is ſpoken according to the manner of men, to whom other men being grievous enemies, but by them ſubdued, they now rejoice and are comforted, whereas before they were ſad and paſſionate through anger. Not that it is ſo with God, to whom no paſſions are incident, but to affect us men the more, who cannot conceive otherwiſe of the Lords wrath againſt ſin, but when he thus condeſcendeth in ſpeaking of himſelf to our weakneſſe.

V. 15. And thou ſhalt be a reproach, aſtoniſhment and inſtruction to all nations round about. This is ſpoken according to Deut. 28. 37. onely the word Inſtruction is here inſerted more; whereby he meaneth, that their ſufferings ſhould ſtir up even the nations round about to fear God, who brought ſuch judgments upon them, although they themſelves were ſo ſtupid, that they would not Note. profit thereby, being ſuch yet as knew the laws of God, when the nations about were ignorant. And this uſe we ſhould all make of the judgments that befall others, to be ſtirred up thereby to repentance, that ſo their coming upon us may be prevented.

V. 16. And I will increaſe the famin upon you; Hebr. I will adde the famin: whereas before hee had ſaid, I will ſend the evill arrows of famin; whereby wee may underſtand either droughts, or ſuperabundance of rain, or mildew, &c. which commonly are the means whereby famins are brought upon a land. Now he further ſheweth, that in caſe none of theſe evills befall them, but they had plenty, yet the Lord had other ways to bring a famin, viz. by enemies ſhutting them up till all their proviſion was conſumed, and they ſtarved with hunger.

V. 17. So, I will ſend upon thee famin and evill beaſts, and they ſhall bereave thee.
Lyra. By Evill beaſts Lyra underſtandeth venemous Serpents; Theodoret, the Caldees, Theodor. like ſuch beaſts as devour and lay waſte places where they come; others Lions and Bears deſtroying the Jews, which fled from the Caldees, and lurked in deſert places: Let the Reader take it which way he pleaſeth, but I preferre that of Theodoret, becauſe cruell enemies are often ſet forth under the ſimile of beaſts.

CHAP. VI.

V. 3. THUS ſaith the Lord to the mountains and hills, to the rivers and valleys, &c.
Calvin. Calvin, becauſe Iſrael is here named, will have this Propheſie underſtood to be againſt the 10 tribes long before carryed away by the Aſſyrians: and whereas this ſeemeth not to agree; forſomuch as a Propheſie is not of things paſt, but to come, he ſaith, that it may be taken as Doctrinall, or underſtood, as being againſt thoſe of the ten tribes, that ſtill remained in the land, and went on in the ſame ſins. But all theſe are mere imaginations, for Judah is by this Prophet before commonly called Iſrael; as chap. 2. & 3. by a general name of all the tribes, becauſe many of other tribes were mingled with Judah. And it is plainly ſaid, that he was bidden to propheſie againſt the mountains of Iſrael, ſo that it muſt needs be underſtood of things to come: And laſtly, 2 King. 17. it is ſaid, that all Iſrael was carryed away captive by Salmanaſar, and not that any were left, as afterwards it is ſaid of Judah, that the poor of the land were left to till the ground. Leaving this therefore, Lyra ſaith, that Ezekiel Lyra. having ch. 4, 5. ſpoken againſt Jeruſalem, now he cometh to propheſie againſt other parts of the Kingdome of Judah, and he directeth his Propheſie, not to the men, but to the mountains, hills, valleys, and rivers, to intimate the ſtupidity and unworthineſſe of the Jews the more, who were paſſed by for this, as more dull of hearing then the earth it ſelf, that hath no ears; ſo 1 King. 13. Eſay 1. 1. he ſpeaks to the heavens and the earth, and the Prophet in Ierobeams Jer. 22. time to the Altar, and Ieremy to the earth againſt Iechoniah. And the high places alſo and valleys, where the water ran, are ſpoken to in ſpeciall, becauſe there the Jews ſet up Altars, and planted Groves, and committed the great abominations of Idolatry, upon the mountains, becauſe they thought that ſo they were neerer the gods; in valleys, which were more pleaſant for rivers and trees being neer, becauſe they thought that the gods were taken with the pleaſure of ſuch places. But here deſtruction by the ſword is threatned unto them, not for that the ſword can hurt a mountain, but becauſe by the enemy the ſuperſtitious Altars and Images ſet up there, ſhould be broken down, and the men that worſhipped there, ſlain, and their carcaſſes ſhould there lie and rot, when at the coming of the Caldees all places ſhould bee rifled, and the people there ſlain, none eſcaping the violence of that tempeſt.

V. 8. Here ſome comfort is yet ſpoken to ſome, there ſhould be a remnant eſcaping, which ſhould come home to the Lord by repentance, even in the countreys, whither they ſhould be ſcattered, as is alſo before promiſed, Eſay 1. 9, &c.

V. 12. They that are far off ſhall dye by the peſtilence. Here more particularly both the ſeverall judgments whereby they ſhould periſh, is ſet forth, and the places where, by the Peſtilence, thoſe that were gone into captivity afar off, by the ſword thoſe that were neer about Ieruſalem, as they ſhould fall into their enemies hands, and they that were beſieged in the City by the famin; whereby it is moſt manifeſt, that this is ſpoken in reference to chap. 5. and to the famin, to the Jews, and not to the ten tribes there threatned.

V. 14. Yea, more deſolate then the wilderneſſe about Diblath : Vulg. deſolate from the wilderneſſe of Diblatha; ſo likewiſe Hebr. but Calvin following the former Calvin. reading, giveth this for the ſenſe, More deſolate then the wilderneſſe Diblatha near Damaſcus in Syria, through which the Jews were lead when they were caryed away captive, for that was a fruitfull place; and he hereby ſheweth what a corroſive it would be unto them to ſee it as they paſſed through, recounting the deſolation of their own countrey. But it is nothing probable that the Prophet to ſet forth the deſolation of their land the more, would do it by comparing it with another place more fertile; and therefore I rather ſubſcribe to Ierome, who ſaith, that it is here ſet forth how far the deſolation Hieron. of their land ſhould extend, viz. from Diblath or Kiblath in the uttermoſt parts of Reuben to Ieruſalem : For of Riblath we read 2 King. 25. 6. and R. in Hebrew is ſo like to D. that one might eaſily be changed into the other, the figure of the one being ר, and of the other ד.

CHAP. VII.

AN end is come, and not the ſounding again of the mountains. In this ch. the ſame V. 7. judgments are inculcated, being ſpoken ſo often over, becauſe he had to doe with a people that would beleeve nothing, and be moved at nothing; all things are here eaſy to be underſtood. That which is more then was ſaid before is a moſt vehement aſſertion of the approach of the time of the deſtruction of Ieruſalem; and this, he ſaith, in this ver. ſhould be with a tumult of many enemies coming, and not with an empty ſound beating the air, as an eccho from the mountains. v. 10. The rod hath bloſſomed, pride hath budded. Here the Prophet V. 10. proceedeth not onely in ſhewing the earlineſſe of the judgments threatned, in the morning, after the night of their ſecurity, as thinking all their wickedneſſe to be hidden, as in the dark of the night, that deſtruction ſhall immediately come, as the morning follows the night; but alſo by whom this deſtruction ſhall come, viz. the rod of God, Nebuchadnezzar, as Salmanaſer the King of Aſſyria is called Eſay 10. 5. and this rod he ſaith was now bloſſomed, and therefore it would not be long before the bringing forth of this fruit, their fearfull ruin. And hence Calvin noteth, that the Lord proceedeth Calvin. Note. to judgment with deliberation, and not raſhly and ſuddenly, ſo ſoon as he is provoked, but as a tree ſpringeth in time, and then bloſſometh, and after in due time fructifieth; ſo doth he bring forth the fruit of his wrath, ſpace of repentance being firſt given to the moſt wicked people that are. Not much unlike unto this was the Almond rod ſeen by Ieremiah, foreſhewing the Jer. 1. 11. ſame.

ſame. But what is the budding of pride, that next followeth? Sol. This is ſpoken of the pride of the Jews cauſing this rod; for through it they deſpiſed all admonition, as making account that their power and the ſtrength of their City was ſo great, that none could prevail againſt them; but hereby they laid the foundation of this rods bloſſoming; and by their oppreſſions and proud carriage towards the poor. Whence note, that practiſing ſuch wickedneſſes Note. is as it were a planting and watering of a rod, which being grown, ſhall yeeld the fruit of grievous beating to the wicked, and this to bee meant is ſhewed, V. 11. v. 11. Violence is riſen up into a rod of wickedneſſe; that is, amongſt the Jews oppreſſing one another; wherefore he ſaith, they ſhall periſh and none ſhall lament them, the words are, None of them ſhall remain, nor of their multitude, nor any of theirs, neither ſhall there be wailing for them, Hebr. it is, not of them, ſo likewiſe the Vulg. Lat. the words ſhall remain being inſerted to make up the 2 King. 25. ſenſe; and ſo it is by Lyra expounded, but reſtrainedly, as meant of Zedekiah and his children, who had his eyes put out, and his children ſlain at Riblah by the King of Babylon, and ſo none of his ſtock remained; for then violence or oppreſſion coming from pride before ſpoken of, grew to a rod, or proved a rod of wickedneſſe; that is, to puniſh ſuch wickedneſſe to the full by the Cal- Junius. dees: Junius renders it, none of them, nor of their multitude, or of their Thraſoes ſhall remain; ſaying, that here is a diſtinction made of them all into two, the Nobility and the Common people; of them firſt it is here propheſyed, that there ſhall be ſuch a generall deſtruction, as that none of them ſhall be left, but either ſlain or captived of the common people, although ſome be left, as the Hiſtory ſheweth there were, to till the land; yet they ſhould not remain long before that they were carryed out of the land alſo, as it fell out, when by means of Iſhmael and his companions who had ſlain Gedaliah, they were all Jer. 41. carryed into Ægypt, and Johanan and Jezaniah, &c. who were as vain-glorious Thraſoes, for their pride went thither with them, in hope to live ſafely there, but they were deceived, becauſe Jeremy threatned them with deſtruction, and ſo they had no reſt even in that land, as is added according to the Vulg. There ſhall be no reſt in them; and as the word נח moſt properly ſignifieth, for which cauſe Noah had his name as Propheticall, touching reſt from the former great toil that men had in tilling the ground; which name cometh from the ſame radix, onely it is to be noted, that here is ה for ח; but Jerome reads it with ח, others with ה, and נהה ſignifyeth to lament; and Junius renders it alſo by this word; the Sept. ſpecies, vel decor, comelineſſe, as deriving it from נוה an habitation or beauty; if it be taken for Lament, the meaning is, ſo great and univerſall a deſtruction ſhall be made of them that there ſhall bee none ſurviving to keep their funerall obſequies with lamentation, as Jer. 16.4. 25.35. Now the latters ה and ח are ſo near one the other, that it is hard to diſtinguiſh them, and ſo one might wel in divers Copies be put for the other, and ſo moſt probably in the Copy followed by Jerome it was ח; and this agreeth beſt, becauſe it is not ſaid in the next word for them, but בהם in them, there ſhall be no reſt in them, or amongſt them, as they had none in Ægypt, as they thought to have had, when they went down thither: Laſtly, for theſe words of any of theirs; Heb. it is בהם הם of them them; that is, the proudeſt amongſt them ſet forth by them, doubled the great conceit which they had of themſelves.

V. 12. Let not the buyer rejoyce, nor the ſeller mourn. This is ſpoken further to expreſſe the confuſion that ſhould be in that land; ſo that buyers ſhould have no cauſe of joy, as they commonly have upon good purchaſes made; nor the ſellers of ſorrow for parting with their houſes or lands; becauſe the one ſhould not enjoy that which he had bought, nor the other be in a worſe condition then he, for both at the coming of the Caldees ſhould be alike deſtitute of habitations in their own land. There is ſomething like this ſaid, 1 Cor. 7. 29. Let him that buyeth be as if he poſſeſſed not, &c. but to another end, viz. becauſe theſe worldly things are flitting and tranſitory, and therefore our hearts muſt not be ſet upon them.

V. 13. For the ſeller ſhall not return to that which is ſold, although he were yet alive:
The Vulg. Their life yet in the living, in viventibus; expounded by Lyra, Let him Lyra. think it well that he hath eſcaped away with his life, if he may doe, and that reading is word for word according to the Hebrew. And the meaning is, there ſhould be ſo great a deſtruction of men, that few ſhould be preſerved alive; and of them that were, none muſt make account to tarry in the land to another year of Jubilee, to return to his poſſeſſion again, which he had ſold, becauſe the land ſhould be in the poſſeſſion of their enemies, and ſo that law of the Jubilee ſhould ſtand them in no ſtead, who were ſtil alive after others deſtroyed:
And a man ſhall not ſtrengthen his ſoul in his iniquity, and the viſion concerning the whole multitude ſhall not return; that is, this Propheticall threatning ſhall by no means be made void, ſo that any of ſo great a multitude may hope to eſcape, and hereof this is given for a reaſon, they were all full of ſin and iniquity, and therefore they ſhould have no power to eſcape.

They have blown the trumpet, but none maketh ready to the battel. Their deſtruction V. 14. being ſhewed in the former words, here he beginneth to ſhew that they ſhall not be able by any means to keep it away, not by arming themſelves, ſet forth by blowing the trumpet; for ſo they might doe to gather company together, but all in vain, for they ſhould not have the courage to V. 15. goe forth to battell: neither by keeping within the walls of the City, for the famine and peſtilence ſhould deſtroy there. Then in amplifying their miſery V. 16. further, hee ſaith, they that eſcape of them ſhall flee as the doves to the mountains; that is, being full of fear and trembling, to ſave their lives they ſhall flee to dry and barren places, and there mourn as doves in the want of all things neceſſary for the ſuſtentation of life, and ſo their lives ſhall be unto them more grievous then death, they pining away in deſert places, through grief, want, and poverty. At the firſt ſight here might ſeem to bee a contradiction to that which was ſaid before, that none of them ſhould remain; but now the words being thus underſtood agree very well. From hence the V. 17. 18. Prophet proceedeth in further deſcribing their ſad eſtate; Upon all loins ſhall be ſackcloth, and upon all heads baldneſſe; for this was a ſign of ſorrow amongſt the Jews for to pluck off their hair, which at other times they nouriſhed, whether men or women, although in other nations women onely; and Plutar.c. probl. 13. amongſt the Romans in times of ſorrow contrariwiſe they ſuffered their hair to grow, but in times of joy they cut it off, thus Plutarch; but Mephiboſheth a Jew, when he ſorrowed for David let his hair grow, whereby it ſhould ſeem that the Jews did herein like the Romanes, and Deut. 14. 1. they are forbidden to pluck off their hair in times of mourning, it being cenſured as an Heatheniſh thing.

V. 19. They ſhall caſt their ſilver in the ſtreets, and their gold ſhall be removed. The Vulg. Their gold ſhall goe to the dunghill: Hebr. לנדה ſhall be to commotion, or uncleanneſſe, for the word יהיה is added, ſhall be, therefore is beſt to render it Uncleanneſſe, the meaning being, it ſhould come into the Heathen Caldees hands, for which it ſhould bee accounted by the Jews unclean, whereas before there had been ſuch a curſed hunger after it in them: And for their ſilvers caſting into the ſtreet; hereby was meant, they ſhould count it then vile and baſe, as being of no worth either to redeem their lives at their enemies hands, or to ſuſtain them in the time of famin, there being nothing to be had for money to feed their famiſhing bodies, as is ſhewed in the next words, Their gold ſhall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord; for this ſheweth of how little worth their gold ſhould be to redeem their lives, and they ſhall not ſatisfie their ſouls, nor fill their bowels; which ſheweth, that hereby no food ſhould be gotten therewith in that extremity of famine; for it is the ſtumbling block of their iniquity; that is, the occaſion of ſin unto them, as the next words ſhew, v. 20. As for the beauty of his ornament, he ſet it in Majeſty, but they made the images of their abominations, and of their deteſtable things therein: Vulg. and they have turned ornamentum monilium ſuorum in ſuperbiam, and of it have made images of their abominations and idols;

idols; Hebr. they have made the ornament of its delectable things thereof into pride, and with it ſhadows or repreſentations, &c. and this no man can doubt but it was a turning of their gold into an occaſion of falling into moſt foul ſins, V.21. for which it was juſt with God to make it as an unclean thing, as was both ſaid before, and followeth: and to give it into the hands of their enemies Calvin. to be polluted, v. 21. yea, and the ſanctuary alſo, wherein the Jews V.22. ſo greatly gloryed, to be polluted by them, as v. 22. Thus alſo Calvin.
And then it is not to be underſtood according to Lyra, when hee ſaith, It was the ſtumbling block of their iniquity; their iniquities made them fall into this great miſery. Note hence, that gold and ſilver abuſed ſhall Note. prove a greater judgment then a bleſſing in the end; and the abuſing of it to pride and other wickedneſſe, giveth advantage to barbarous enemies to come and to take it away, and ſo to leave the owners thereof in want, and extream miſery. Wherefore, let every one take heed, that hee uſe his wealth well, and not in pride, or exceſſe of ryot, to whoring or vain pleaſures.

V.23. Make a chain, for the Land is full of bloudy crimes: Heb. of the judgment of blouds, there being much innocent bloud ſhed therein. For theſe words, make a chain, the Vulg. hath, make a concluſion; as if it were meant, ſhut up this propheſie of deſtruction to come, as by a decree irrevocable: But forſomuch Lyra. as the word ſignifieth a Chain, the meaning is, make a chain in token of their being led chained into captivity, as Lyra hath it, or before Gods judgment, as priſoners are brought chained to the Bar, as Calvin. Calvin.

V.26. Then they ſhall ſeek a viſion from the Prophet, but the law ſhall periſh from the Prieſt, and wiſdome from the ancient. This was verified, when King Zedekiah ſought to Jeremiah, at the coming of Nebuchadnezzar againſt him; but his ſeeking proved vain, becauſe he followed not his counſell; and likewiſe when Johanan a Captain and his fellows ſought to him afterwards, Jer.42. & 43. but followed not his directions. The law periſhed from the Prieſt, when by the ſame Nebuchadnezzar the books of the law were burnt; and wiſdome Lyra. from the ancient, when the Elders were alſo by him ſlain, becauſe they counſelled Zedekiah to break his oath made to him, ſo Lyra according to the Hebrews. Hereby alſo we may underſtand, that Prophets and Viſions ſhould after the Judgments of God coming upon them, which were before Calvin. ſpoken of, fail and be no more, and ſo their eſtate ſhould be moſt uncomfortable.
For as long as Prophets remain amongſt a people, there is ſomething, whereby their miſeries may be lightened, viz. the comfort of the Word; but theſe being gone, all comfort is gone, and then miſery is importable. But both for this, and the law periſhing from the Prieſts, and wiſdome from the ancient, ſee how well it is adaptated to them, who are brought in out of their preſumption and carnall confidence; ſaying, The law ſhall not periſh from the Prieſt, nor wiſdome from the Ancient, &c.

CHAP. VIII.

V.1. IN the ſixth year, the ſixth moneth, the fifth day of the moneth, I ſat in my houſe, and the Elders of Judah were before me: Here by the ſixth year is meant the ſixth from the carrying away of K. Jehoiachin captive, for he began his reckoning ſo before ch. 1. 1. and it is not without reaſon, ſaith Calvin, Calvin. that he reckoneth thus, becauſe he would by putting them in mind of their former ſufferings (ſince which time they were nothing amended, no nor ſince he began to propheſie unto them five years after, nor yet ſince that time, a year and about two moneths more being expired) convince them of intolerable obſtinacy in wickedneſs, ſo that now they might well look for judgment without mercy. And that which is here related, is to be underſtood not as really done,

done, but in a viſion, in which he ſeemed to be ſitting in his houſe at Jeruſalem, and the Elders before him, as witneſſes of the apparition, which hee now had, thus Calvin. But Lyra thinks, that Ezekiel was really at his own houſe, where he was bidden before, ch. 4. 5. to lye upon his left ſide, 390 days, and then upon his right 40. which make a year and two months, according to the time here ſpoken of from his firſt viſion, and not above 5 dayes leſſe, for a year conſiſteth of 365 days, two moneths of 60, which being put together make 425 days, ſo that this apparition muſt needs be according to the letter, whilſt he was yet lying in his houſe, there being at the leaſt five days ſtill to come of thoſe that he was bidden to lie on his left and right ſide; yea, moſt probably there were more, for there were onely a year and two moneths paſt, ſince his firſt viſion, and that precept came not to him till after other things done, his carrying by the Spirit into the Plain, and inſtructions given him about a Watch-mans office, and his calling to it, and his pourtraying of Jeruſalem upon a tile, ch. 2, & 3. and beginning of the 4, all which could not be done in leſſe then four or five days more. It may then be conceived, that whilſt he thus kept in, the Elders of Judah, who had been brought captive to Babylon, as well as he, hearing of this ſtrange lying of his, came to him to his houſe, to know the cauſe, to whom hee ſpake moſt probably, ch. 6, 7. and whilſt they were yet there before him this apparition was made, which followeth, v. 2. a likeneſſe of a body from the loins downward all fiery, and from the loins upward like amber, to ſhew the deſtruction of Jeruſalem to come by fire, and yet that the glory of the Lord ſhould ſtill ſhine as the bright metall compoſed of gold and ſilver, for ſuch is Amber: Calvin by this brightneſſe underſtandeth Gods glory and majeſty, able to ſtrike terrour into mens hearts, and to prepare them with reverence to attend to the things following, and the likeneſſe of fire was ſhewed, that none might think to eſcape deſtruction from his wrath, that bearing themſelves upon his favour towards them, whatſoever they did, preſumed to goe on in their ſins, as conceiving that it would not make for his glory, but be a diſhonour to him to ſuffer his peculiar people to fall into the hands of their enemies. But the contrary was hereby ſhewed, viz. that although his wrath ſhould break out as fire againſt them, yet his glory above ſhould not hereby be diminiſhed, but ſhine as much as ever before.

V. 2.

V. 3.

And hee put forth the form of an hand, and took mee by a lock of my head, and carryed mee between the heaven and the earth, and brought mee in the viſions of God to Jeruſalem, to the inner gate of the Temple. The Prophet having hitherto ſhewed what he ſaw at home at his own houſe, now proceedeth to ſhew further how he was carryed by the Spirit to Jeruſalem; not that he was really carryed thither in his body, for the time before prefixed to lie upon his left ſide and his right was not yet expired; and he ſaith, this was done in the viſions of God, implying a thing done in imagination onely, whereby he ſeemed to himſelf to flee as a bird through the air thither. And therefore he ſaith not, an hand took mee, but the form of an hand. And he was brought to the inner gate of the Temple, that looketh Northward, for the Temple had divers gates, whereby men might from all parts more commodiouſly enter, and here he ſaw ſtanding the image of jealouſy, that provoketh to jealouſy; what this image was in particular, is unknown; but from that which is ſaid 2 Chron. 36. 14. where Zedekiah his polluting of the houſe of God by his idolatry is related, it appeareth, that ſome Altar to the hoaſt of heaven was there ſet up, for it was in his time that Ezekiel was thus tranſported, and Jehoiakim had done the like before him, 2 King. 23. walking in the ways of his wicked fathers, Manaſſeh and Amon; of the firſt of which it is ſaid, that he ſet up Altars to the hoaſt of heaven in the courts of the Lords houſe, and this is called the image of jealouſie, becauſe God was hereby provoked to wrath, as an husband againſt his wife burns through jealouſie againſt her, if ſhe be carryed away with the love of another man.

2 King. 21. 5.

V. 7. And he brought mee to the dore of the Court. The Lord having ſhewed to Ezekiel one abomination ſtanding in open view, now he brings him in the Spirit to ſee many more; which were not ſo open but ſecret, as is expreſſed v. 12. in their chambers in the dark. This dore (as ſome conceive) was to the Prieſts chambers, and the 70 worſhipping idols there the 70 Elders, of whom it is ſpoken, Numb. 11. and the Rulers of the people doubtleſs are hereby meant, and ſo it is intimated, that the whole Kingdom was greatly corrupted, when they that were leaders to the reſt ſinned thus groſly; and in particular one that is named here Jaazaniah, who it ſeemeth was a man of great note for his ſuppoſed wiſdome and piety above others. And here were images of beaſts, and creeping things, and all the idols of the houſe of Iſrael pourtrayed upon the wall, and incenſe offering out of cenſers, which every man had in his hand, which made a thick cloud aſcend, ſhewing how free and profuſe they were in this abominable worſhip. This was a thing in time of perſecution alſo required of Chriſtians, to put in two or three grains of incenſe into a cenſer, to make a ſweet perfume before an idol; and whoſo would do thus was accepted of without any adoration or bowing thereunto. For the many ſorts of images here ſpoken of, of beaſts and creeping things, ſuch were not worſhipped by any other nations, but onely the Ægyptians, who had their God Apis, an Oxe, and a Cat and Dog, and Serpents; yet ſo baſe were the Jews, that they were infected with the like ſuperſtition. And it is to be noted here, that Ezekiel is brought to the Temple to ſee the abominations of the Jews amongſt the Prieſts, as the originall of all abominations in the land, for if they bee corrupt they ſhall alwaies have abundance of followers, but if ſincere, this will be a good means of ſanctification to others. Chryſoſt. Wherefore Chryſoſt. noteth, that as the Phyſitian coming to a ſick patient looketh firſt and chiefly to his ſtomach, and taketh care for the curing thereof, and then the other parts will be healed alſo, ſo the Prieſt being ſound, the people are the better kept from errour. But as the boughs of a tree, if there be any decay in the root, will ſoon ſhew it by ſearing, ſo the people wither in reſpect of goodneſſe, when the Prieſt is corrupt.

V. 14. And he brought mee to the dore of the gate towards the North, and there ſat women weeping for Tammuz. Hieron. Jerome conjectureth that Tammuz was Adonis the paramore of Venus, a very fair young man, who as the Poets feign, was torn in pieces by a wild bore, and then turned into a moſt ſweet ſmelling flower, which miſhap the women devoted to the worſhipping of Venus came together once a year to lament and mourn for him, thus Calvin relateth Jeroms opinion. Calvin. But Jerome ſaith, that Adonis, after that he was thus torn, being by Venus much lamented, revived again, whereof ſhe had as great joy as ſorrow before; and becauſe this was done in the moneth of July, which the Hebrews call Tammuz, the womens lamenting Adonis at that time of the year, is called their mourning for Tammuz. This was a ſuperſtition amongſt the heathen, whoſe libidinous women and men alſo kept this ſolemnity, ſorrowing when any of them had loſt her love, but ſoon after rejoicing again, for him reobtained. And this the Jews prone to all Heatheniſh ſuperſtition learned of them. In a word, it was a lamenting on the womans part, being prevented from going on in her whoredome, that was ſo delightfull and pleaſing to her, but ſoon rejoycing again at the finding of new mates. But to cover this obſcenity over they ſaid, that it was for the ſeed caſt into the ground and dying there, but it beginning to ſpring up again they contrariwiſe made merry and rejoyced. Macrobius. The fable touching Adonis is ſet forth by Macrobius, l. 1. Saturnal. c. 26. who alſo makes this moral of it. Adonis ſets forth the Sun, the women, as Venus mourning for the loſſe of him, the earth in winter being as it were in a mourning condition, as being dark and dead in the plants thereof, but the ſpring coming, the ſun returneth, and then ſhee reviveth, and in her kind maketh all expreſſions of joy. Jerome moralizeth thus, they mourn and rejoice again for Tammuz, that ſorrow much for the loſſe of any delightfull thing of this life, or joy for the re-obtaining hereof again, becauſe it is a corruption to be ſo greatly affected for theſe baſe and tranſitory things, for which it is ſaid, worldly ſorrow cauſeth death. Some by Tammuz with Calvin rather underſtand Oſiris, an obſcene idol of the Ægyptians, to which both women and men at the feſtivall thereof ſhewed as their glory, their pudenda, a moſt baſe and foul thing, which a man would not think the Jews ſo well taught, ſhould ever have been moved by example of Heathens to have taken up, but this, ſaith Calvin, was moſt probably meant here, becauſe the Jews lived neer to the Egyptians and ſo might the more eaſily be infected with their evil manners, ſo likewiſe Stephanus ſaith, Oſiris the god and King of the Egyptians is here meant: But if this be of any weight, that he was the Egyptians god, for the ſame reaſon we may imbrace that which is ſaid of Adonis, who as Macrobius ſaith, was their god alſo or honoured amongſt them as a god, by mourning for him, as was before ſaid, being indeed the ſon of Cynaras the King of the Cyprians, and ſo greatly beloved of Venus, and his death lamented by her: and they had, ſaith he, his image ſad in aſpect, leaning upon his left hand within his veſtment, and ſeeming to the ſpectators to weep. Rab. David and Rab. Solomon call the idol here named Tammuz, and ſay it was hollow, and having eye holes filled with lead, fire being put under, the lead melted, and ſo he ſeemed to weep. Laſtly Rabbi Moſes, Ben Maimon. otherwiſe called Maimony ſaith, that it was a prophet called Tammuz, whom a certain king ſlew, whereupon all the idols of Egypt came together to the Temple of the Sun, which hung them in the aire, but at their coming together fell, and then they all retired home againe, having firſt ſpent all the night in mourning, and this gave occaſion to women yeerly at the time of the fall thereof to mourn likewiſe. But this ſmels of the Rabbinical forge. The next abomination, which he ſaw, was 25. men with their faces towards the Eaſt, & their backs towards the Temple, worſhiping the Sun. This ſin was moſt intolerable becauſe ſo directly forbidden, and reaſon yielded againſt it, and worſhiping the whole hoaſt of heaven. 2. Becauſe it was done openly between the porch and the altar, they being aſhamed, as thoſe before ſpoken of were. 3. Becauſe with ſo great contempt of God, their backs being turned upon him and his houſe, as being nothing ſo worthy as the Sun, but worthy to be ſleighted in compariſon. 4. Becauſe the moſt holy place, where was the Arke and mercy-ſeat, towards which they were to worſhip, ſtood Weſtward, and therefore they did clean contrary to that which they were injoyned. 5. The framing of the houſe of God was ſo with the door directly to the Eaſt, that the Sun riſing went with his beams immediatly to the ſanctum ſanctorum, thus as it were offering its ſervice to the creatour thereof, teaching the Jews to do likewiſe. But they being more moved with the practiſes of the ſuperſtitious idolaters about them, that is, the Egyptians (who honoured the Sun ſo much, that they dedicated a City to it and called it Heliopolis, and counted it the chief God, it being by ſome called of old oculus Jovis, the eye of Jupiter, by the Egyptians Oſiris) neglected both Gods command, and reaſon, and the example of the Sun it ſelf, and headily ruſhed on in this ſin. For the number 25. haply they were ſo many more prime men beſides the Elders or Seventy before ſpoken of. For the uſe of Chriſtians worſhiping towards the Eaſt, of which Chryſoſtome and Theodoret, and other ancients write; and the framing of our Churches therefore with the chief part to the Eaſt, divers yeeld divers reaſons, as that it is done in regard of Chriſt, who is called the Eaſt and our Sun of righteouſneſs. 2. To cheriſh our hope and expectation of him to come out of the Eaſt, according to that ſaying, As the lightning ſhineth out of the Eaſt to the Weſt, ſo ſhall the coming of the Son of man be. 3. In remembrance that Paradiſe was ſituated Eaſtward, from whence man was expelled for his ſin, to ſhew therefore his deſire to return thither againe, to the Paradiſe, of which the Lord ſpake to the theef upon the croſs, This day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe; the Chriſtian hath uſed in divine worſhip to turn his face Eaſtward. And if it be not done in an opinion, that the worſhip is not right unleſs ſo performed I have nothing to ſpeak againſt it, but only I ſay touching this circumſtance; every one is to be left to himſelf to do, as he thinkes beſt.

V. 17. They returned to provoke me to anger, and they put their branch to the noſe. Having ſhewed his Prophet the abominations of the Jews, he complaineth further in this verſe of their violence, and oppreſſions of one another, which alone were enough to provoke him to wrath againſt them to their deſtruction. But to aggravate their ſins of idolatry the more, he reflecteth againe after this to the ſame abomination, adding one thing more unto it to make it more odious, that they put a branch to their noſe: But what is meant hereby, it is hard to determine, ſome Rabbins for branch, have fœtorem, a ſtinke put to his noſtrils, Calvin. but neither doth the word ſo ſignifie, neither is it his but their noſe. Calvin ſaith that the meaning is, they having broken one branch of the Law concerning their neighbour, whereby God was provoked, they ſtayed not here, but added the breach of the other branch concerning God and his worſhip, abominably perverting that, as hath been ſaid, but to their own indignation, ſet forth by אפם ſignifying as well wrath and indignation, as noſe; and here he alſo underſtandeth indignation paſſively, which they ſhould ſuffer at Gods hands.
Some becauſe the word זאר here uſed cometh of זמר to ſing, will have a ſong or Pſalme hereby meant, they being by this ſaying charged, that when they ſing to God, they did it ſcornfully making a noiſe with their noſe; others will have the branch of a bay here meant, which was uſed to be carried in the Junius. hand when they ſacrificed to Jupiter. Junius renders it, præmittunt plantarum ſurculos ante faciem eorum, they premiſe the branches of plants before their face; that is, loaden with all ſorts of fruits to the Sun and the reſt of the hoaſt of heaven, thus committing moſt groſs idolatry; ſee ſomething not much unlike unto this, Jer. 44. Hoſ. 2. This although I cannot approve becauſe אפם is not put for faces, but for the noſe in all places; yet I think it worthy to be conſidered, as neerer the meaning of the Lord, then any, that yet hath been brought. For the proper ſignification of the word זמור is retained, only theſe words, loaden with fruits, are added, and אפם may as well have reference to the Sun, Moon, and Stars, as to the offerers, and the word שלחים ſignifieth ſending, not putting. If therefore we underſtand it thus, the ſenſe will be good and without exception. Behold, beſides their violence and rapine, how they ply their idols with preſents of fruits gotten by oppreſſion, the boughs bearing the fruit being put for the fruit, there being no want of incenſe neither for their noſes, for that was ſaid before to aſcend from the 25. men, as a thick cloud, yet they had noſes and ſmelled not, ſo that it was a moſt ſenſleſs thing in them leaving the true and everliving God, and their own God, who had done ſo much for them, thus to dote upon dumb and dead V. 18. idols, wherefore I will deal with you, ſaith God, in fury, &c. Lyra hath one expoſition more not yet touched, they did put a branch to the idols noſe, which ſtood high, and then to their own noſes, thinking this a kinde of bleſſedneſs unto them, and this would be thought on whether it be not beſt of all.

CHAP. IX.

V. 1. C*Auſe them that have the charge over the City to draw neer every one with his deſtroying weapon in his hand.* Here the Lord cals the Caldees together to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem which he had before threatned and yielded the reaſon why. The words in Hebrew, are the viſitations of the City draw neer. Calvin reads it in the Imperative, but it is Indicative, the preterten ſe, and the words following
v. 2. make for it, becauſe that having ſaid, that the viſitations draw neer, immediately ſix men armed to deſtruction appear coming from the North, and V. 2. entring go to the Temple and ſtand by the brazen Altar. By theſe ſix men Jerom underſtaneth ſix divels, but Theodoret better, ſix angels, for one amongſt Hieron. Theod. them was cloathed with linnen, and had a charge to mark the ſervants of God in their foreheads, and thus divels never appear nor do. But one of them only is ſaid to be cloathed with linnen, who was not one of theſe ſix, but another ſingularly appointed to the office of marking, as the chief amongſt them, and one who beſt knew, who were to be marked, as mourning for ſin out of an hatred thereof, and not to ſeem pious and zealous to men. And therefore it is moſt commonly held, that this was Chriſt the Son of God, who is called an Angel, Mal. 3. and appeared like a man ſiting upon a throne chap. 1. and he appeareth in white linnen, as alſo other Angels ſometimes have done, Act. 1. 10. to ſhew his purity, linnen that is fine and white is alſo, or was then accounted the beſt ſort of cloathing and fitteſt to be uſed about the ſervice of God, for which the Prieſts had their linnen ephods and linnen breeches. Now one of the company being thus cloathed to demonſtrate his purity, it is not probable, but that the reſt who came with him, were holy Angels of God alſo and no divels; Such as he that ſlew of Sennacheribs hoaſt in one night 185000. But why came there forth ſix now, when as one was ſufficient to do the execution now as well as then? Anſ. To ſhew, that of the Caldees army there ſhould be ſix principal Captaines, who ſhould firſt enter the City, as Jeremy ſaith they did, Nergal Sharezar, Samgar Nebo, Rabſaris, Sarſekim, Rabmag, and another Nergal Sharezar, Jer. 39. 3. who came accompanied with the power of the Angels making their force irreſiſtible; for that this was not an apparition of theſe ſix men, may hence be gathered, that they knew not the mark of God to ſpare any, when they were deſtroying Jeruſalem, but theſe did, for their ſtanding by the brazen altar, when they had entred by the high or North gate of the Temple, which looked toward Caldea, it was ſo done to ſhew their readineſs at the command of the Lord to do the execution before threatned. And here it is to be noted, that this North gate was the gate, nigh unto which the image of jealouſie ſtood Ch. 8. 3. here was abominable ſin committed, and here deſtruction entreth, and the moſt provocative ſins were committed about the Temple, therefore deſtruction muſt now begin at the Temple, v. 6. Note. intimating ſins about the worſhip of God do firſt and chiefly of all others bring down his judgements, the Sanctuary defiled by ſin is ſo far from being a Sanctuary, that it is a ſlaughter-houſe.

V. 3. And the glory of the God of Iſrael, which ſtood upon the Cherub, went and ſtood upon the threſhold, That is, whereas before it appeared upon the head of the living creatures Ch. 1. 27. called Cherubims, Ch. 10. now this Amberlike glory removeth to the threſhold in the inner Court, which was the Prieſts Court, where the aforeſaid great brazen Altar ſtood, that he might be neer to theſe wariors to give them commiſſion to kil and ſlay young and old. And it is to be noted, that [Note. he was ſeen removing from off the Cherub, which ſtood over the Mercy-ſeat with wings extended to cover it, to ſhew, that now he was ſo greatly provoked that he would not do the acts of mercy any more to the Jews, which were to him moſt natural, but acts of judgement, which were ſtrange to his nature, for which it is called his work, his ſtrange work. Eſa. 28. There is then no mercy with God for incorrigible ſinners, but altogether wrath, fire and deſtruction, if he be once removed from his Mercy-ſeat. Hereby alſo we may take to be figured out before his forſaking of the Jewiſh Nation, caſting them off and their legal hypocritical ſervice, and turning to the Gentiles, who ſhould worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth.

V. 4. Set a mark upon the foreheads of all that ſigh and cry, &c. The Lord being come to the place where the warriours were, before he giveth them commiſſion to deſtroy, firſt takes order about the preſervation of his ſervants, ſhewing who they were, and cauſing them to be marked. They were mourners and cryers Note. for the abominations done there, not ſuch as any way countenanced or applauded men of power doing evil, or their neighbors or friends, or by any ſhew of liking their courſes incouraged them therein, but contrarywiſe mourned, as Lot is ſaid to have done at the wickedneſs of the Sodomites, 2 Pet. 2. 8. and not only ſo, but alſo cryed out againſt it, and not refraining for fear of their fury, as Eſa. 58. 1. he is bidden to do, and every one, Levit. 19. 17. of ſuch

God taketh ſo great care, that although they be mixed with the wicked, when deſtruction rageth moſt, they ſhal be preſerved and not fall promiſcouſly amongſt the multitude. And to the end, that we may know this his care, he cauſeth a mark to be ſet upon them, which is here called תו, the two firſt letters of תורה the commandement, to ſhew, that they had the Law of God written in their hearts, and this made them mourn to ſee it ſo commonly broaken. Or becauſe תו ſignifieth a marke, we may hereby underſtand one

And to the others he ſaid, Go yee after him and ſmite, &c. That is, to the Angels, under whoſe conduct the Caldees were to come and fight, and deſtroy, and he giveth a charge to ſmite all ſparing none either young or old, but thoſe with the mark in their forehead, and they did ſo, beginning with the ancients before the houſe, that is, the ſeventy before ſpoken of ch. 8. 10. Now this charge giving that the Caldees ſhould do thus, implyeth nothing elſe, but the Lords internally moving them by an inſtinct, they not knowing it, ſo to rage againſt the Jewes, that thus they might ſuffer, as he had threatned, and they deſerved by their many and moſt abominable ſins. For they intended nothing leſs, then the fulfilling of Gods will, as being altogether intent to get the ſpoiles and to inlarge their Empire out of covetouſneſs and ambition. But when wicked enemies work for theſe, God ſecretly worketh by them for the glory of his juſtice againſt incorrigible ſinners. And this we muſt look at in all executions done by wicked enemies, that we may learn to fear before him who only hath all power. V.8, 9.

For the reſt of the chap. the warriours having done deſtroying in the Temple and being gone and Ezekiel alone remaining, but they, he ſaw, went to deſtroy in the City, he made a great moan therefore, and moved to ſome lenity, but prevailing not, he concludeth with the mans returning, who was cloathed with linnen, and ſaying, I have done as thou commandedſt me.

CHAP. X.

THe Prophet ſeeth the throne, which he ſaw, ch. 1. 26, 27. touching which V. 1. enough there, v. 2. The man cloathed with linnen is bidden to go between the Cherubims and Wheels, and thence to take fire and ſcatter it upon V. 2.
Jeruſalem. This was done to ſhew, that after the deſtruction of the Jews, by the Caldees, they ſhould ſet the City on fire, and burn it, as indeed they did, but that this fire might appear to have befaln Jeruſalem, not at the will of the Caldees, but from the wrath of God, this ſhew was made, for God is ſaid to ſit between the Cherubims, and in the moſt holy place was the golden Altar of incenſe under them. Some by this fire taken from this holy place, will have purifying the City ſet forth, as Eſa. 6. a coale is taken from the Altar and therewith touching his lips he was purged; thus Jerom uſing many Hieron. more words to this purpoſe. But Calvin and others better hold, that this fire Calvin. was taken, as was ſaid before ;to ſhew the burning of the City. The holy fire indeed, whereby incenſe was burnt and made a ſweet perfume unto God, was for the expiation of ſin, but God, as Calvin ſaith, had another occult fire between the Wheels of his providence under the Cherubims, from which, when he would, deſtroying fire came, as to Sodom, and Corah and his company Gen. 19. immediatly by the miniſtry of his Angels, ſo mediately upon Jeruſalem Num. 16. by the Caldees. And by his Angels alſo he cauſeth thunder, lightning, raine and ſnow, froſts and heat. For theſe come ſo from the influence of the Stars, that the Angels are above them, and theſe as the Wheels of Gods Charriot move as they move, for their ſpirit is in them to move or to lift them up or to make them ſtand.

Now the Cherubims ſtood on the right ſide of the houſe, when the man went in, and a V. 3. cloud filled the houſe: That is, ſaith Calvin, withdrawing to one ſide, that room might be made for the man in linnen cloathing to go, as he was bidden for fire Calvin. and to come out with it. For the cloud filling the houſe, it was not in token of favour, as in Solomons dayes, but rather to ſhew the darkneſs, in which the houſe of God ſhould be left, he with his glory being departed, as followeth
v. 4. which is added for further explanation of this, for thus a cloud is ſpoken V. 4. of, with which the Lord cometh, Pſal. 18 11. when in wrath Lyra contrarywiſe takes the cloud here for a ſigne of Gods preſence, as 1 Kings 6. he ſaith, Lyra. he will dwel in a cloud in his Temple, but the reaſon brought by Calvin from
v. 4. is ſo plaine that I rather prefer his Expoſition. For the glory of the Lord removing to the threſhold, ſee before ch. 9. 3.

And the ſound of the wings of the Cherubs was heard to the outer Court as the voice of V. 5. the Almighty, that is, as a terrible thundering, which is called the voice of the Lord, Pſal. 29. and this ſound was made to ſhew the terrible alterations to come in that place, v. 6.

Then a Cherub ſtretched forth his hand, and gave fire to the man in linnen in the palme V. 6. of his hand; this was done to ſhew how readily all heavenly creatures ſeek to further the doing of that which God commandeth, that we may learn of them to do likewiſe, as we pray, Thy will be done in earth as in Heaven, v. 8. he repeates V. 8. againe what he had ſaid, ch. 1. touching a mans hand under the Cherubs wings, upon which enough hath been ſpoken there, it is repeated in this place becauſe it was ſaid before, that the Cherub took coals up in his hand, to ſhew that he had hands, and where thoſe hands were.

Here a repetition is alſo made concerning the Wheels of that, which was ſaid V. 9 10, 11, 12.
ch. 1. becauſe he had ſpoken of fire between the Wheels, v. 2. if the reader ſhould inquire, what thoſe Wheels were, and what was remarkable in them, of all which alſo ſee before.. This alſo repeated to make way to that which followeth of the Lords ſpeaking to the Wheels, v. 13. The Lord cryed to the wheeles, O wheels, the meaning is, at the voice of the Lord they moved and V. 13. ſtood, as before, v. 10. 11. and againe after this, v. 16. They did not ſo move as the Cherubs, as having the ſpirit of the Cherub in them, but that God directed them in all their motions, v. 14. in repeating the relation tou-V. 14. ching the Cherubims faces there is ſome difference here from *ch.*1. for one face is ſaid to be of a Cherub, another of a man, the third of a lion, the fourth of an Eagle; a Cherub being put here for an oxe there, and that in the firſt place, which is there in the third. Some for clearing this ſay, that a Cherubs face was much Lyra. like an Oxes, but herein, ſaith Lyra wel, they were foully miſtaken; yet neither do I like that, which he bringeth to cleare it, ſaying a Cherubs face was the faire face of a youth, and foraſmuch as the Kingdom of Grecia hereby ſet forth abounded with wiſe and learned men, it was in that reſpect ſet forth by the face of a Cherub, or angel, which is moſt wiſe, and becauſe wiſdom never waxeth old, for the older a man is, the wiſer, this was the face of a youth. For if by the face of a Cherub wiſdome be meant, what ſhall we ſay touching the face of a man, which is next named, and is more fit to ſet forth Calvin. wiſdom, which the face of a childe or youth doth not? Calvin ſaith, that God ſhewed at this time one face different from that before, to the end that it might be known what theſe living creatures were, viz. angels indeed, and therefore although for other things myſtically ſet forth by theſe four faces, the Oxes was put for one, and for the leſs dignity thereof, then of a man or lion it was put in the third place, yet now it pleaſing God to ſhew an Angels face, this is put firſt as moſt worthy of all the reſt. There is yet another reaſon given by ſome, which doth moſt arride me of all others, viz. that for the face of an Oxe the face of a Cherub or Angel here is put, to ſhew, that he, who is an Oxe for laboring in the work of God, that is, the laborious preacher ſhall have his face one day changed being made as the glorious face of an Angel, for the preacher is as the Oxe that treadeth out the corn, and "in the reſurrection, ſaith the Lord, yee ſhal neither mary nor give in marriage, but be as the Angels. And to ſuch a one was Thomas Aquinas that famous ſchooleman likened by his maſter Albertus Magnus, when in his youth he ſaw him derided for his taciturnity, as having nothing in him, for he ſhall, ſaith he, like an Oxe fill all the world with his lowing, and then he ſhall be honoured with the face of an Angel, and accordingly he thus attained the name of Angelicus Doctor, and Seraphicus.

V. 18. And the glory of the Lord went from the threſhold of the houſe, and ſtood upon the Cherubims, and the Cherubims lifted up their wings and aſcended from the earth in my ſight. For the 15, 16, and 17. verſes I have ſpoken upon the things therein contained, *ch.*1. Now the Prophet proceedeth againe to tell what became of the glory of God, which was ſaid before to have gone from off the Cherubims, and to have ſtood upon the threſhold. And this was done to ſhew Gods departing from his earthly houſe amongſt the Jews to his heavenly, whereby was denoted, that now they were deſtitute of his and his Angels help, and ſo lay to the fury of their heathen enemies. And this was done to take down their pride and carnal confidence in their Temple, by means whereof they thought themſelves ſafe againſt all the forces of the world. But it may be doubted here how the promiſe formerly made then was verified, This is my houſe, and here will I dwell for ever. Sol. When God made this promiſe he propounded a condition, if his people did keep his law, worſhipping him purely, as he preſcribed, but they in confidence of this left him to worſhip falſe Gods, and ſo corrupted moſt foully his worſhip, and waxed bold alſo to oppreſs and ſteal, to ſwear falſly, and to commit adultery, and to wallow in the ſwiniſh ſin of drunkenneſs, wherefore that promiſe now held no longer, as Jer. 7. and 18. 10. but notwithſtanding the ſame material houſe ſtill amongſt them, it was juſt with God to leave them deſtitute of his help, and to be gone up to his heavenly throne afar from them, and ſo to make that houſe no more then another building, wherein, though moſt ſumptuous, there was no help to be had in time of need. And it was neceſſary to ſhew this aforehand, leſt when afterwards they ſhould ſee the Temple and Sanctuary burnt together with the City, they ſhould conceive any thing indignly concerning God, as if he alſo had ſuffered in theſe flames. Yet it is to be underſtood, that the Lord did not now ſo leave his Temple, but that the place was ſtill ſacred, and ſuch as whereupon a Temple ſhould after ſeventy yeers be built againe, and be filled Hag. 2. with more glory, then this preſent houſe. And therefore Daniel ſtill prayed towards this place, and the Jews ſpared out of captivity, brought offerings hither even when this houſe lay in the ruines. And whereas God left it againe Jer. 42. afterwards to other deſtruction in the time of the Romans for their more abominable ſinnes, the ever of the ſtanding of that material Temple was then at an end, as the carnal ſacrifices and Prieſthood ſerving there, for which ſer-vice ſake it was ſet up for a time, and to preſigure Chriſt and his Church through him being made the moſt magnificent building of all others in the world. From all which note, that God is not ſo tyed to his people in any place, but that when they grow ſinful and corrupt, and leave ſerving him in Note. purity, as he commandeth, he will leave them, and then no force ſhall remaine as a bank to keep out the flood of his judgements. But whileſt he is ſerved in purity, he will be glorified there by their miraculous preſervation.

V. 19. The Prophet ſaith, that his viſion was the ſame which he ſaw by the river Chebar, Ch. 1. and now he knew, that the living creatures there appearing were Cherubims, becauſe the face of one of them was changed from the face of an Oxe, to the face of a Cherub. And therefore Gods ſhewing of him the ſame things the ſecond time was not vaine, and it was alſo repeated for further confirmation, becauſe he had to do with an incredulous people; and that the end of the viſion might be made the more apparent, viz. to ſhew Gods departure from amongſt ſo wicked a people, and after this his leaving them for a longer time in the dayes of the Goſpel, for their perſecuting and crucifying of Chriſt, the Gentiles being taken in to be his Church and people in their ſtead.

CHAP. XI.

V. 17. 1. And the ſpirit took me up and carryed me to the Eaſt gate, and I ſaw twenty five men, &c. ch. 8. 16. Such a number of men were ſeen between the porch and the Altar worſhipping towards the Eaſt, and one of the men here, named Jaazaniah ſeemes to have been ſeen before that amongſt the Elders, but now both he and another called Pelatiah the ſon of Benaiah are ſeen amongſt theſe twenty five, and they are ſaid to be Princes of the people. But this Jaazaniah was not the ſame with that: For this is ſaid to be the ſon of Azur, that the ſon of Staphan.
For the number of twenty five, the Hebrews ſay, that there were in Jeruſalem twenty four ſtreets, and over every one a Prince, and over them all, a preſi-dent, and theſe moſt probably were the men here ſpoken of at the Eaſt gate, which was the entrance and moſt glorious part of the Temple, joyning to which was the Court of the people. Hither moſt probably theſe Princes came together to conſult, for they are ſaid to be men, that deviſed miſchief, V. 2. and gave evil counſel; And according to this number of twenty four, we read of 24. Elders, Revel. 4. and in our Jeruſalem, the City of London are twenty four Wards likewiſe and their præpoſiti.

V. 3. Which ſay, it is not neer, let us build houſes, this City is the Caldron and we are the fleſh, Vulg. nonne dudum ædificatæ ſunt domus; Hebr. houſes building are not neer; as if it had been ſaid, the houſes of this City have been built long agoe, and have ſtood hitherto, therefore we doubt not, but that they ſhall ſtand ſtill, whatſoever thou (O Ezekiel) threateneſt to the contrary. In adding this City is the Caldron, we the fleſh, they moſt impiouſly and ironically allude to the Jer. 1. viſion of Jeremiah, who ſaw a ſeething pot, perverting his meaning, as if they had ſaid, thy fellow Jeremiah hath indeed told us of a ſeething pot, and we deny not this City to be ſuch, nor our ſelves to be the fleſh, but then we hope we ſhall be kept here, till we be boilded enough, and not be ſo ſoon caſt Lyra, out, as thou threatneſt. R. Solomon, whom Lyra followeth, ſaith that the meaning is, as a man liveth ſo long as there is natural heat in the body to concoct the meat, and ſo he liveth till old age, in like manner we doubt not but we ſhall live in this City. And therefore they ſpake of the building of houſes, Calvin. ſaith Calvin, as a thing now to be done, ſo little afraid were they of deſtruction being at hand. And they ſeem to be brought in ſpeaking thus in a Jer. 29. high degree of contempt of that, which Jeremiah ſaid by letters to the Captives in Babylon, that they ſhould build them houſes there, for the captivity Note. ſhould be long, even ſeventy yeers. And theſe were noted before to be the Princes, by whom therefore, although men of greateſt eminency it is not ſafe for the people to be led, as they are moſt apt to be, according to that ſaying, Regis ad exemplar totus componitur orbis. For although they be of better education and are men of greater wiſdom, yet the wayes wherein they walk oftentimes are moſt vile.

V. 5. Thus have yee ſaid, for I know the things that come into your minde, every one of them, Hebr. And the aſcenſions of your ſpirit I know it, That is, your proud and contemptuous thoughts, becauſe he had ſpoken before of their evil counſels, and hereby we are given to underſtand how vaine it is for any man to exerciſe Note. his wits in mocking at the word of God, for although they ſay the ſame words, the Lord knoweth in what ſenſe they ſpeak, and will deale with them accordingly, repaying the contemner with contempt.

V. 6. 7, 8, 9. From hence to the end of v. 11. the Prophet as wittily retorts upon them their own words ſpoken in mockage, as they had uttered them. He tels them, that they ſhould not be as fleſh, and the City as the pot to them, as they had ſaid, but ſuch as had been ſlaine by them ſhould be, or were already as the fleſh filling this pot, ſo that no room was left therein for them any more, but they as putrid fleſh ſhould be caſt out of the City, and lye ſtinking there. Now by ſuch as they had ſlaine he meaneth none other, but thoſe that were oppreſſed Mich. 3. 3. moſt grievouſly by them, for of ſuch the Prophets often ſpeak as Eſay 1. 16. ſlaine, and ſometime as flead and their bones chopt for the pot, or caldron, and oppreſſours hands are ſaid to be full of blood.

V. 13. Pelatiah the ſon of Benaiah dyed; Here it was ſhewed in viſion to the Prophet being in the Land of the Caldees, that one of the Princes had execution done upon him immediately, as he had threatned, and ſo that his threatning of deſtruction to the twenty five, of whom he was one, was not vaine, but made good by the revengeful hand of God. But he was ſo far from joying therein, that he cryed out for ſorrow, Ah Lord, wilt thou deſtroy the reſidue of Iſrael, whereby he ſhewed his ſollicitude about Gods elect people, touching whom he now feared, when the Princes began to be ſmitten, becauſe the head being cut off, how can the body and al the members thereof but come to ruine?

But againſt this fear of the Prophet the Lord ſaith to him, Thy brethren the men of thy kindred, and all the houſe of Iſrael wholly are they,
V. 15. to whom the inhabitants of Jeruſalem have ſaid, Go yee far off from the Lord, unto us is the land given in poſſeſſion: That is, thou doſt not conſider aright of the matter, when for the deſtruction of the Princes, yea and of the wicked people of Jeruſalem thou thinkeſt, that hereby the whole ſtate of Iſrael will be in danger to be quite cut off, not ſo much as a remnant being left, as I have alwayes promiſed. For both Ch. 9. my care was ſet forth of the preſervation of the mourners by marking them, that they might not be touched, and now I tell thee, that I have another remnant, even thy brethren in captivity with thee, to whom I will be a ſanctuary, touching whom the proud ones at Jeruſalem ſay, that they are ejected, and that all the land was now their poſſeſſion, as not fearing yet any ejection thence, howſoever he and Jeremiah threatned them. But againſt theſe proud and uncharitable V. 16. bragges of theirs, ſay to theſe poore exiles and diſperſed ones, I the Lord will be a little ſanctuary unto you in the Nations, &c. or ſanctuarium paucitatis, as the word Calvin. ſignifieth according to Calvin, but he rather holdeth to the firſt reading, as there is good reaſon, a little ſanctuary, being oppoſed to that faire and glorious one that was at Jeruſalem. For this contrarywiſe appeared not, the elect of the captivity being poor and deſpicable in the eyes of men, as being void of all outward ſplendor, yet in better caſe than thoſe at Jeruſalem with their magnificent Temple, becauſe God was a Sanctuary and place of ſafety to them in the midſt of all their miſeries. And thus it is many times with the dear people of God, nothing appears outwardly of the divine favour towards them, but others have more ſuch ſignes of favour, as the Jews now at Jeruſalem under the ſhelter of the magnificent Temple built by Solomon, whereas thoſe in Caldea with Ezekiel, Daniel,&c. were without a Temple, having only poor houſes to meet and to ſerve God in, and that without ſacrifices of fat beaſts alſo and other oblations of the fruits of the earth, for no ſuch offerings could be made here, but only at the temple at Jeruſalem. So in times of perſecution, or ſeparation of the true people of God from the counterfeit, theſe have none but a little Sanctuary and obſcure, not appearing to be of any beauty in outward reſpects to draw men to it, but thoſe being in great outward glory; as the Papiſts with their ſtately Churches and rich and glorious Biſhops, Pope and Cardinals, and princes of the earth and great perſons adhering to them; but the reformed Churches conſiſting at the firſt of poor men, as the pauperes de Lugduno in France, or if any were rich being cruſhed and made poor by their tyranny. And hereby many have been drawn away after them being thus deceived, but we muſt not by outward things meaſure Gods grace and favour, but count them moſt happy to whom he is a Sanctuary, although for the preſent poor and deſpiſed. But the like is not to be held touching them that now adayes amongſt our ſelves having great Sanctuaries, that is, faire Churches dedicated to Gods worſhip to reſort unto, prefer meetings in corners about Religious exerciſes out of an erroneous opinion & minde rejecting this outward favour conferred upon the Kingdom of England, of which the Prophet Eſay ſpeaketh as a great bleſſing, ſaying, Thy teachers ſhall be no more in corners. And hitherto of Gods being a little ſanctuary unto them, and indeed he was not only ſo, but a great one again after the time of the captivity added, when returning they built the Temple, and worſhipped God there againe, and were for this honoured and reſorted to by other Nations round about; which ſheweth more their ingratitude in this land, that now deſpiſe this bleſſing, and defame and diſgrace the houſes of God what they can, as if being once polluted by Popiſh ſuperſtition the uſe of them for religious duties might never be reſumed any more, whereas the Temple being defiled in the dayes of Manaſſeh was purged and uſed againe by Joſiah, and likewiſe by Judas Maccabeus after Antiochus Epiphanes his greateſt pollutions. But what exiles were theſe, to whom ſuch comfort is ſpoken? Ezekiels brethren and kindred in grace, as well as in the fleſh, and in captivity likewiſe ſubmitting themſelves patiently to bear the miſeries thereof. For ſuch will God be alwayes a Sanctuary, and herein they muſt comfort themſelves.

Note.

Eſa. 30. 20.

Note.

V. 17. 18, 19,20. Here the Lord proceedeth to the further comfort of theſe poor exiles to promiſe them a return to their own land, and that contrary to the hopes of thoſe now in Jeruſa. that they ſhould poſſeſs it. And then in way of gratitude to God and to approve themſelves to be his faithful people, that they ſhould take away all deteſtable and abominable things, which who ſo do not, but ſuffer them in the land, where they live, cannot approve themſelves to be ſuch, and ſo are unworthy of ſo great a favour. Then ſhewing the fountaine of this grace he ſaith, I will give them one heart, and taking away the ſtony, I will give them an heart of fleſh, that they may walk in my ſtatutes,&c. Whence note 1. That an upright heart meant by one heart, or a ſingle heart, which is oppoſed to a double, is the gift of God, and we have it not of our ſelves; and unanimity, which alſo is meant conſentingly to walk together in one way of righteouſneſs, of both which, ſee Pſal. 12.3. Act. 4.32. 2. That our hearts are changed from ſtony, or being like ſtones that yeild not to any beating, to be as fleſh, that is, ſoft by the power of his grace and ſpirit only. 3. Becauſe he

Phil. 2. 13. ſaith, not only a new heart, but a ſpirit, by the one denoting the wil, by the other the underſtanding and judgement of the ſoul, that whatſoever is good in us comes only from God, both to wil and to do, we having of our ſelves, ſince the fall of Adam, no liberty of will to good left unto us, but to this we attaine, as God is pleaſed to work it in us, that he may have the praiſe of all. 4. They only have this bleſſed work wrought in them, that walk in Gods ſtatutes, and it is vaine for others to talk of their good hearts, it being certain, that as a good tree cannot be without good fruit, ſo a good heart cannot be without good works.

August. lib. 18. contr. Canſt. c. 4. And according to that which hath been ſaid, St. Auguſt. ſpeakes well upon theſe words, I will take away the heart of ſtone and give them a heart of fleſh, that is, a will without ſenſe, and give them a will with ſenſe. Then to the objection of Pelagius, if God takes away the heart of ſtone, and giveth an heart of fleſh, how is it ſaid Ezek. 18. Make you a new heart? he anſwereth, becauſe he giveth that which he biddeth them make, and he helpes them to make, whom he biddeth, which plainly implyeth a cooperation in man, as alſo that precept, Phil. 2.13. Work out your ſalvation with fear, it is God that worketh in you, &c. for if God worketh and man worketh the ſame thing, what is this, but cooperation ſo much yet impugned by Calvin? Before that God beginneth to work indeed upon the heart of man, he is indeed as a dead thing, but Gods working cauſeth life and ſight and ſenſe, and then there is a concurrence of mans working in all that are ſaved.

V. 23. Then the glory of the Lord went up from the midſt of the City, and ſtood upon the mountaine on the Eaſt ſide: Here againe is repeated what went before of Gods leaving the Jews in Jeruſalem deſtitute of his help to become a prey to their enemies, ch. 10. 18. 19. But there the glory of God remained only from the threſhold to the Eaſt gate, now from thence to mount Olivet, thence as it were to behold the burning and deſtruction of the City, hereby alſo foreſhewing Chriſt his going up to heaven, from thence when the wicked Jews having crucified and ſlain him, he roſe againe, and leading his Diſciples thither aſcended out of their ſight, and after followed the deſtruction of the City againe by the Romans.

CHAP. XII.

After all things hitherto ſaid and done to awaken the Jews from ſleeping ſecurely in their ſins, as from whom ſtupendious judgments were not far off, now becauſe they were nothing moved by all this, the Lord makes his Prophet a portentum or ſigne portending their going into captivity, even the beſt of them, their Prince and King Zedekiah, who he ſheweth ſhould be glad to digge through the wall in the night, and ſo to paſs away with ſome of his pretious ſtuffe, carrying it upon his ſhoulders, which was a baſe thing for a King to do, and yet doing ſo, he ſhould not eſcape, but be taken and his eyes being put out carryed into Babylon,

V. 12. 13. 2 King. 25. which is applyed in that he ſaith, that he ſhould go into the Caldeans country, and yet not ſee that land, which the hiſtory ſheweth to have come to paſs accordingly. For he was taken & brought before the King of Babylon, as he was fleeing away, and having his eyes put out he was carryed thither to end his dayes in miſery, and thus he is ſaid to have been taken in Gods ſnare, becauſe the Caldees came and took him by the ſecret moving of them by his power ſo to do.

V. 16. Whereas he ſaith, that ſome ſhould yet be preſerved from the famine, peſtilence, and ſword, being kept ſtill alive, he addeth this ſhould be but to their greater miſery, that they might tell of their abominations done in their own land, whereby is not meant, that they ſhould by word of mouth ſpeak thereof, but that their very carrying and living there ſhould be as a telling aloud to the heathen, what abominable things they had done, becauſe otherwiſe their mighty God would never have laid ſo heavy a judgement upon them.

V. 17. After Ezekiel made a ſigne of their fearful fleeing, and getting ſome of their goods away by ſtealth, here the the Lord makes him a ſigne of their eating and drinking in continual fear of their lives, till the City after a long ſiege ſhould be taken, and he biddeth him tell the people of the land, that the inhabitants of Jeruſalem ſhould doe ſo, that thought themſelves in better caſe, then thoſe in exile in Caldea, to whom he meaneth here, that the Prophet ſhould ſpeak.

And finally he yieldeth a reaſon, why this great judgement ſhould be executed upon the City, For the violence of them that dwell therein: V. 19. That is, the harſh and unjuſt dealing of the rulers and wealthy with the poorer and meaner ſort.

V. 20. 21. From hence to the end of the chapter the Prophet both diſcovereth and confuteth that, upon which the wicked Jews did bear themſelves, and ſo contemned all threatnings of the Prophets, viz. that either the Propheſies of Jeremiah touching deſtruction to come were ſo old, that now it was no more to be feared, or if it ſhould come the time was ſo far off, before it ſhould be, that it concerned not them, who were now living, to hear of it, but after ages. So that ſome were more unbeleeving then others, the one ſort altogether ſleighting ſuch threatnings as vaine, but the other only being without fear of them, as not being likely to take effect in their dayes, as v. 27. V. 27. In oppoſing the former he ſaith, that every viſion ſhall have its effect, and there ſhall be no more vain V. 24. or flattering divinations in the land, that is, of falſe prophets, as hitherto there had been, as is ſhewed, Jer. 28. not that falſe and flattering Prophets ſhould quite ceaſe, but their propheſies being proved lies by the contrary events, they ſhould be no more believed, as they had been. In oppoſing the latter ſort he ſaith, that the things ſet forth in his viſion ſhould take effect in their dayes without any further delay, v. 25. That is, whileſt they were yet living, becauſe they might otherwiſe haply think, that 1000. yeers with the Lord were but as a day, as it is ſaid, Pſal. 90. 2 Pet. 3. 8. and therefore that the Lords coming with theſe judgements might not be till many generations after, although with him ſpeedy.

CHAP. XIII.

V. 4. T*Hy Prophets are like the Foxes in the deſert, yee have not gone up into the gaps, nor made up the hedges.* Of all beaſts the Foxe is the moſt ſubtle and dangerous for getting into and hurting the vineyard through the hedge or wall whereof he can finde any breach, wherefore falſe Prophets amongſt the Jews are compared unto Foxes, and ſuch they are to the Church of God in any place. Note. The breach is made by ſin, this the true Prophet ſeeks to make up by exhorting and ſtirring up to repentance, and by earneſt prayer to God he ſtandeth in the day of battel to keep out enemies coming to deſtroy it, as Moſes by prayer is ſaid to have ſtood in the gap. But theſe falſe prophets contrariwiſe craftily miſlead the people, whereby they were brought into danger, and gaps were made inſtead of being hedged up, for which Ezekiel inneigheth againſt them, as pernicious beaſts, and ſuch are alſo called Foxes, Cantic. 2. 15. and true Prophets for their prayers, The chariots of Iſrael and horſemen thereof, and repairers of breaches, for their good inſtructions, and watchmen. Amoſ. 9. 11. Ezek. 2. V. 9. They ſhall not be in the aſſembly of my people, neither ſhall they be written in the writing of the houſe of Iſrael, for aſſembly Hebr. is ſecret, and ſo the Caldee turneth it, the Sept. doctrine, that is, at the return of my people out of captivity they ſhall not return with them, as is by and by expreſſed, They ſhall not come into the land of Iſrael, but dye be-before, both they and all ſuch as they are, neither ſhall they have teaching Amos. 3. 7. office amongſt my people, if they ſhould ſurvive, nor as true Prophets have my ſecrets to be revealed to my people committed unto them, yea they ſhould not ſo much as be written in the catalogue of Iſraelites, but be in Gods Exod. 32. book blotted out for ever, as he ſaid to Moſes, Thoſe that ſin againſt me I will blot Note. out. And this is the moſt heavy judgement that can befal men, for they that Revel. 20. 15. are not here found written, ſhall be caſt into the lake of fire, and contrari- Mal. 3. 26. wiſe to be written in Gods book of remembrance is the greateſt felicity, and ſo ſhall all they be, that fear the Lord.

From hence to the 17. verſe the deceitful dealing of falſe prophets is ſet V. 10. 11. forth by a Metaphor taken from daubers of a wal. For even ſo they dealt by the Jews, their crying, Peace, peace, was as baubing a wal with untempered morter, becauſe that promiſing them ſafety againſt the judgements threatned by the true Prophets in the name of the Lord they made them as confident, as if they had been defended by a mighty hand and ſtrong wall round about. But this he ſaith, was but a deceitful wall, like one built with untempered morter, againſt which a ſtorm coming it is not able to ſtand but falleth, and they that 1 King. 20. 30. ſtand under it for ſhelter periſh, as did ſometime 27000. of Benhadads men in Aphek. Falſe Prophets then are builders as well as the true, but their building is with ſand only, and if there be ſome lime amongſt it, it is ſo ill tempered, that the wall thus built, will not endure boiſterous weather, but wind and raine and haile ſoone cauſe it to fall: For the well tempered morter of a wall making it ſtrong and defenſible is the teaching of peace and ſafety in truth according to the word of God, that is onely to penitent ſinners, that hear the words of God and do it, turning from their ſins, ſuch only being Matth. 7. thus made as a building upon a rock, againſt which the winde bloweth, the floods beat, and the raine cometh, and yet it falleth not. Take we heed there- Note. fore, who are prophets, that we build not as deceivers, but truly doing this our work, which is of ſo great conſequence both to our ſelves and to thoſe that hear us, either for ſafety, if we be true, or deſtruction if deceitful.

He inveigheth likewiſe againſt propheteſſes, who ſewed pillowes under arm- V. 17, 18, &c. holes, and made kercheifs upon every ſtature to hunt ſouls, which according to Calvin is thus to be underſtood, when any came to conſult with them, they leaning upon pillows, as was the manner of arreptitiæ in thoſe times, and binding Calvin. kercheiſes about their heads which covered down to their eyes (whereby they pretended themſelves to be wholly taken up with divine revelations, all worldly things being neglected) gave anſwers as if they had come from God, whereby they ſought ſtill for any ſmall reward, to give the beſt content to ſuch as ſought unto them, and therefore it is ſaid, upon the head of every ſtature, whether they were great or ſmall, good or bad, and v. 19. For handfuls of barly Lyra. and pieces of bread. To this of Calvin comes Lyra ſomwhat neer, and Vatablus Clarius. alſo and Clarius and Iſidorus. Let us hear Clarius for them all, he ſaith Vatabl. thus, ſilly women being inſtructed in the art magick, ſewed pillows and Iſidor. put them under the armholes of thoſe, that ſought unto them, and kerchiefs, that is, moſt thin linnen cloathes, they bound about their heads, making them beleeve, that thus they were prepared to receive divine Oracles, then they as they had excogitated, uttered their propheſies, touching the truth of which ſimple perſons were thus perſwaded, and ſo went away confident, that it ſhould be well with them as they had promiſed, being by this means incouraged to go on in their ſinnes to their deſtruction both in body and ſoul, for which they are ſaid to hunt mens ſouls. The Vulg. for making kerchiefs upon the head of every ſtature, hath it, faciunt cervicalia ſub capite univerſæ ætatis, ex- Hieron. pounded by Jerom thus together with the words going before, wo to thoſe women, that ſpeak flatteringly to ſinners, thus making them to ſleep ſecurely in their ſins, as if they lay upon ſoft pillowes, both with their heads, to which cervicalia are proper, and their armes, by leaning and reſting themſelves upon cuſhions, to which pulvilli are alſo proper as the firſt word is rendred, this their flattery proving in fine nothing but an hunting after their lives or ſouls. And this is moſt generally receivd, and is moſt ancient, and agreeth beſt, the others being but later inventions either of theſe falſe propheteſſes ſetting themſelves in ſuch a poſture to propheſie, as faigning by their ſo lying, that they were aſleep, and ſo ſpake as in a dream: of their doing thus to thoſe that came to inquire of them. But for the other expoſition makes the common proverb, which ſetteth forth flattery by ſewing pillows and laying cuſhions. As we may ſee in Plutarch, ſaying, Flatteries are like unto cuſhions and pillows, which whilſt they ſeem to ſtand up againſt the heads of thoſe that lye down, yet they being laid, do rather give way and yeeld unto them: ſo the flatterer takes a kind of counterfeit liberty of ſpeaking at the firſt carping and reproving ſome things, whereby he ſeemes to be lifted up and to ſwell againſt him, whom he ſpeaks unto, but by and by he ſinks as it were under his head and ſo incloſeth and taketh him, as it were in his net, for which he is ſaid here to hunt after his ſoul. So likewiſe Plautus hath conſuere, to ſew together frauds, deceits, lyes. And according to this Gregor. ſaith, He that flattereth evil doers, puts cuſhions under his elbowes, or armholes, that he who ought to be reproved for his fault might reſt ſoftly in praiſes thus ſewed together. And Theodoret ſaith, they are ſoft and flattering ſpeaches compoſed for lucre, which tickle the ears for a time, but overthrow the ſoul. But for the Hebr. words here uſed מספוחת ſignifieth velamina linteola, linnen coverings, and theſe are kercheifes, or may be taken for linnen pillow-beers put upon the pillows to lay the head down upon to ſleep, which for the reaſon before going is to be preferred, and ſo the outer part, the cover is put for the whole ſynecdochically. For the word rendred ſtature, Vulg. age, it is קומה ſtanding, for the head of every one ſtanding, higher or lower, men grown or children, who ſo came to inquire of them, and brought a preſent, they pleaſed them with their flatteries, although it were at laſt to their deſtruction. And he ſheweth what baſe minds they did bear, even more baſe then women called Gypſyes, that now go about to tell fortunes for any little peice of ſilver, but theſe hunted after pieces of bread or a little barly like common beggars, and therefore were the more worthy to be condemned, for ſo ſmall matters would preſume to perſonate Gods meſſengers and privy counſellers, as Prophets are whether men or women, for of both ſexes God had ſome both under the old Teſt. and new. In theſe falſe propheteſſes hired for ſo vile a price ſee for what little matters ſinners ſell their pretious ſouls, when as they are more worth then all the world, and in compariſon of them, all things here are but as fragments of bread, or a little barly. Herodotus writes of a fountaine, called Hippanis, that beſt repreſenteth flatterers, the waters whereof are found to be ſweet as men travel by them four or five dayes, but then they are very bitter. Laſtly in charging theſe ſilly women for their V. 19. baſeneſs he ſaith, will ye pollute me amongſt my people, &c. to ſlay the ſouls of them that ſhould live, and to ſave alive thoſe that ſhould dye, which is ſpoken to give us to underſtand, that they pretended inſpirations or revelations from God, and therefore from their falſe propheſying to animate men in their ſins pollution redounded to the Lord, he being thought through their means to be the abettor of wickedneſs. For their ſlaying of thoſe that ſhould live, it was by threatning the true Prophets and other ſervants of God with death, becauſe they ſpeak againſt them, and for their making alive of thoſe that ſhould dye, it was by promiſing for a little reward peace and ſafety to falſe prophets and to thoſe that were led by them.

For ſo the word לפרחית ſignifieth, it is an epithite given to the ſoul being ſo ſubject continually to flee out of the body, ſo fraile and tranſitory is this life, and therefore great need that we ſhould have a care of our ſouls, which if they be once departed out of our bodies, if they flee not to the place of bleſſedneſs, they are loſt for ever. And all the time, that we live here they are but as a bird in a cage, if the door be but opened, ready to be gone at any time. But here is comfort to the Elect, that the Lord ſaith he will break off thoſe pillows from their armes, that is, where they ſought to lay them,and then ſuch fleeing ſouls ſhould be dilivered.For it is not to be underſtood of all in general, but only of thoſe few that God had to life elected. And in reſpect of all men thoſe pillows were broken off,when it manifeſtly appeared at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, how vaine their flatteries were, promiſing good, but loe a world of evil : *v.*21,22,23. ſerve further to confirme the interpretation before going.

and laid a ſtumbling block before their faces, the Vulg. uncleanneſſes in their hearts, but the proper ſignification is idols, and the meaning is, that although they were not any groſs worſhippers of idols, yet bare as evil a mind, as they that were, becauſe they came not to the prophet with a minde to hear any thing to be reformed thereafter, but being fully bent ſtill to walk in their own evil wayes, which they loved more then they did God, and therefore were juſtly ſaid to have ſet up idols in their hearts. For whatſoever a man chiefly Jeremiah indeed and Ezekiel now threaten us for ſetting up idols in our hearts, as hath been ſaid, but we have other Prophets more then they, who ſpeak peace unto us, why ſhould we not then believe theſe, as well as thoſe? Anſ.

Theſe are deceived,and deceive you, when they ſpeak peace unto you,having your hearts ſet upon your ſinnes; yea, I, ſaith the Lord, have deceived them, that is, for your puniſhment, who delight more in unrighteouſneſs, then in the truth, I have put theſe deceitful flattering ſpeaches into their

If this be ſo, that God by Satans miniſtry deceiveth, he is the author of deceit and lying. Sol. Far be it from us to ſay ſo, he is the author of puniſhments for ſin, but of ſin, deceit and lying, not he but the devil is the father, who of himſelf is ready to act this way, if God doth but permit him; only the Lord takes it upon himſelf, as if he did it, becauſe at his direction and permiſſion, the devil impels to lying and to all manner of wickedneſs. That the Lord tempteth no man to evil ſee Jam. 1. 14. And both falſe prophets being thus deceived and people deceived by them are juſtly puniſhed therefore, becauſe the juſt Judge of the whole world cannot but proceed againſt ſinners, and which way ſoever he proceedeth, either by giving order to Satan to harden them in their ſins, or when this is done by executing judgements upon them, he doth all moſt juſtly.

V. 11.

That the houſe of Iſrael may no more go aſtray from me,&c. Here the fruit and effect that ſhould finally follow of their puniſhment is ſet forth, viz. they ſhould hereby be reformed. But it is to be noted, that he ſaith, that the houſe of Iſrael may no more erre, not thoſe falſe prophets, or ſuch as were ſeduced by them, for he threatned them with cutting off from the houſe of Iſrael, but a remnant of choſen ones whoſe God he promiſeth againe to be and that they ſhall be his people, that is, taken into his protection, and reſtored to their own land and City.

Note.

Calvin.

Here leſt any ſhould harden themſelves, hoping by the prayers of the true prophets to eſcape the judgements threatened, the Lord declareth, that if Noah, Job, or Daniel were amongſt them to pray for them, and but one of his ſevere judgements, the famine, noiſom beaſts, the peſtilence or the ſword were to come upon them, they ſhould by no means avert it, much leſs they being now adjudged to ſuffer by all theſe. So that hereby it appeareth, that nothing will prevaile to ſave ſinners from deſtruction, but repentance, and caſting away their tranſgreſſions, as is further taught, ch. 18. and not without thus doing any prayers of thoſe, that are with God moſt gratious. Jer. 15. there is ſomewhat like this, but Moſes and Samuel are there named; it may be inquired why theſe three are here named more then any other? Calvin ſaith, that ſome give this reaſon, theſe three were famous for righteouſneſs at three ſeverall times, Noah in the old world, Daniel in the time of captivity, being alſo now living, and Job being one of another countrey eminent above all amongſt the Nations. Others becauſe Job could not ſave his ſons or daughters by his piety, nor Daniel the Jews, amongſt whom he was carryed away captive into Babylon, neither could Noah ſave the old world from drowning. But he thinketh nothing elſe to be meant in ſpecifying theſe, but only in general, if ſome of the moſt gracious men, that ever lived were amongſt them, ſuch as theſe 3. were, whom he named rather then others, as they came firſt to his mind, they ſhould not profit ſuch incorrigible ſinners as they were. I rather conceive, becauſe it is the Lord that thus ſpeaketh, that there was ſome ſpecial reaſon of thi s his ſpecification, and that might be becauſe theſe three men more then others of great note lived in times of proving what might be done in that caſe, which is here in agitation, and yet the old world was not the more delivered for Noah his righteouſneſs, Dan. 1. 2. nor Jobs children for his, nor the Jews that went into captivity in the third yeer of Jehoiakim for Daniels. But what meaneth he by adding, he ſhall ſave his own ſoul by his righteouſneſs; ſhall any man have his ſoul ſaved for his own righteouſneſs, or by faith only? Sol. Although a man be ſaved by faith only, yet no true faithful perſon but is upright in his heart and life, which is his righteouſneſs and is by reaſon of his faith accepted of, as if he were perfect, and he therefore worthy to be ſaved, as it is ſaid of Abraham that he believed and that was counted to him for righteouſneſs, but not without Gen. 17. his being upright, to ſhew, that none are thus accepted of, although believers, Jam. 2. except they alſo walk before God and be upright, as was ſaid to Abraham, and as James reaſoneth at large. And the like is ſaid of them that in Sardis kept Rev. 3. 1, 2, 3. their garments, they ſhall walk with me in white, for they are worthy; wherefore they that from this and the like places inferre ſalvation for a mans own righteouſneſs in part do foully erre, ſee Rom. 11.6. Election is of grace, not of works, otherwiſe grace were no grace, And this may ſerve for the cleering of that which is likewiſe ſaid, Chap. 18. where living by his righteouſneſs is often ſpoken of.

V. 22. Yet behold therein ſhall be left a remnant, that ſhall be brought forth, ſons and daughters, they ſhall come forth unto you and yee ſhall ſee their way and their doings, and yee ſhall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought, v. 23. And yee ſhall know, that I have not done without cauſe all that I have done in it, That is, when by the four judgements before ſpoken of I have made this through deſtruction in Jeruſalem, a remnant yet ſhall be ſpared from death, who ſhall be brought into captivity to you in Babylon, then yee ſhall ſee their doings by the effects thereof, that is, what notorious ſinners they were by that which for their wickedneſs befell them, viz. the burning down of their City and temple, the barbarous cruelty endured by them at the hands of their enemies, and their countrey being left deſolate, their exile out of it to live in miſery worſe then death. And in ſaying that herein they ſhould be comforted, he meaneth in regard of this, that they had formerly derided them, that yeilded themſelves ſo cowardly to go into Babylon with their King Jehoiakim, whereas they with their King Zedekiah ſtood manfully out againſt the Caldees not fearing what they could do unto them. For in regard of this they ſhall then be aſhamed, and yee ſhall be comforted, they having now no more cauſe to inſult over you as they did, but rather to envy you for ſome better condition, wherein yee ſhall after a while be, and your King, his head being lifted up, as it was by Evilmerodach the ſucceſſor of Nebuchadnezzar, and therefore moſt probably the people that were brought down with him were in ſomewhat a better eſtate alſo. At Calvini this ſenſe Calvin partly aimeth, although it be not ſo fully ſet forth by him, and he mentioneth another expoſition of ſome underſtanding by this remnant the Elect before ſpoken of v. 11. and rejects it, as their juſt cauſe, for that he ſaith, yee ſhall ſee their wayes and their doings, and ſhall know that all this is come juſtly upon them, implying that theſe left were evil doers, and not the remnant of Elect ones in tender care preſerved in the time of that common de- Lyra. ſtruction. Lyra ſubſcribeth to that which went before in part, viz. that their comfort ſhould be in regard of this, that the captives brought with Zedekiah into Babylon ſhould call them bleſſed, that were there before, in reſpect of themſelves, becauſe they had ſuffered far more grievous things, then they did: but partly he ſaith, that their comfort ſhould be in this, that their ſons and daughters here ſpoken of ſhould ſome of them live to rebuild the temple at Jeruſalem again. Finally ſome others think, that the comfort lyeth in this, that they ſhould ſee ſome preſerved alive to encreaſe againe the poſterity of Abraham, which I cannot deny to have been alſo a matter of comfort to thoſe of the ſame cognation, becauſe this was a bleſſing promiſed to Abraham in this world, that his ſeed ſhould multiply ſo as that they ſhould be innumerable, wherefore in aſſigning the cauſe of their comfort we may well put both theſe together, they ſhould be comforted by the hearing them ſpeak of their greater miſeries contrary to their expectation, who tarryed longer in their own contrey, affirming them to have done better, that yeelded, and for the greater hope now of Abrahams poſterity multiplying again, as they could not have done, if they had all dyed by thoſe four judgements. Laſtly, they ſhould be comforted by this, that they ſhould know all ſufferings coming upon them to have been juſt on Gods part, becauſe for their ſins, thus if they had yet hearts to repent concerning hope of pardon and comming into grace with the Lord againe, that they might be reſtored to their own countrey. Note. Happy are they that having ſinned and being puniſhed therefore, come thus at length to be comforted.

THis Chapter tends to nothing elſe but to aggravate the miſery of Jeruſalem, which ſhould ſhortly be burnt down with fire, by a compariſon taken from a vine that being cut down is good for nothing but to be burned, therefore much leſs being cut down and burnt can any good uſe be made of it any more. And the Lord doth thus debaſe Jeruſalem and the Jews in oppoſition to their pride and confidence in this, that they were Gods peculiar people. And herein he proceeds by theſe degrees, 1. By comparing them ſtanding yet in the vineyard, as it were with other trees of the wood, that is, with Heathen Nations. For what is a vine to another tree, either oake or cedar, but only in reſpect of the fruitfulneſs? verily it is nothing, for they grow erect and are beautiful to behold, but the vine is a crooked low writhen thing, unable to bear up it ſelf from the ground, unleſs it be ſupported, and ſo ſubject to be trodden underfoot, and bitten and torn by cattel: ſo the Jewes were in compariſon of other Nations moſt contemptible, eſpecially being, as they now were, without fruit, barren of good works and ful of evil, and ſo is any Church of God being likewiſe wicked, no Nation is ſo baſe and lyeth open ſo much to the danger of being trodden under foot and deſtroyed, as it doth, as being void of comelineſs and procerity, and having no wall or hedge about it of Gods providence, when for unfruitfulneſs he takes no further pleaſure in it. Of the Church in this caſe, ſee Eſa. 5. 1, 2, 3. 2. By comparing them pluckt up from the ſoile, whereupon they ſtood. For a vine ſtubbed up is no more of any uſe, but to be burnt in the fire, a man cannot ſo much as make a pinne of it to hang a veſſel upon, but of other trees buildings may be made, and divers other things: So the Jews being now adjudged to be pluckt up by being partly ſlaine and partly carryed away into captivity, could expect none other but to be made as fuel for the fire of Gods wrath. 3. By comparing their parts with the parts of a vine not only pluckt up, but alſo burnt at both ends, for what is that good for, which remaineth now thereof? verily it is ſeared and made now ſo ſpalt as that it can no more be put to any uſe then very aſhes. Note. Great cauſe then is there, that we who are the Church of God, ſhould look to our ſelves and have a care to be fruitful and humble, and not be puft up with pride, and grow careleſs and diſſolute in our lives, or degenerate to oppreſſion or violence, for if we do, we are in a more vile and dangerous condition, then any other Nation, and like to ſuffer more at the hands both of God and men.

CHAP. XVI.

Thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite: In this Chapter the V. 3. Prophet layeth open from the beginning the baſeneſs of the Jews, that if it were poſſible he might humble them and pull down the great pride and ſelf-conceitedneſs. And therefore he beginneth with their nativity, ſaying, that it was of Canaan, their father being an Amorite, and their mother an Hittite, whereby it is meant, that for their wickedneſs they were ſo before God reputed, as elſwhere they are ſaid to have been Ethiopians unto him, and the Jews are ſaid by our Lord to have been of their father the Joh. 8. 44. devil for the like reaſon. Jerom thinks, that he alludeth to their much ſpeaking and bragging in the name Amorite, and to their madneſs Hieron. in the name Hittite as the words ſignifie. Of the ſeven Nations, which were ſo wicked, he nameth, ſaith another, the Amorite for his procerity and tallneſs, and the Hittite for the notorious incontinency of theſe women, of which ſee v. 45. and giants men of high ſtature were notorious V. 4. 5. for violence and oppreſſion, with which ſinnes the Jewes were greatly tainted, v. 4. 5. He aſcendeth yet higher inlarging himſelf from ſpeaking of Jeruſalem whoſe birth was in Canaan, of which he had hitherto ſpoken, to ſpeak of Iſrael looking upon them, as they were in Egypt long V. 4. 5. before their coming into Canaan, and growing to ſo famous a City as Jeruſalem, In the day that thou waſt born, thy navel was not cut, neither waſt thou waſhed with water to ſupple thee, thou waſt not ſalted at all, nor ſwadled at all, none eye pityed thee, &c.
So that here is a double nativity of Iſrael ſpoken of, and the laſt firſt, and the firſt laſt. For by the nativity when no eye pityed them is meant their adoption, or Gods taking them to be his people, before that ever they were taken notice of to be ſuch, which was when Moſes coming to Pharoah ſaid, Iſrael is my ſon, my firſt born, if thou wilt not let Iſrael go, I will ſlay thy ſon, thy firſt born: For then Iſrael as a childe new born having no body till then taking care of it, by ſtate of the Iſraelites in Egypt thus ſet forth, to whom nothing was done conducing to life, but all things to their deſtruction both by the caſting of their males ſo ſoon as they were born into the river, for which he ſpeaketh here of caſting out, and by driving them from the preſence of Pharaoh with diſcomfort, when they deſired to be more equally dealt withal as being too much overburthened by making their ful tale of brick, and finding themſelves ſtraw alſo.

V. 6. In this evil and dangerous caſe the Lord ſaith, that he ſaid to Iſrael, Yet live, and it is twice repeated for their deliverance from both theſe ſtraights at once in their being with ſo ſtrong an hand brought out of Egypt, or by doubling the word live, he meaneth, that he was a long time in ſaving them from death.
Firſt all thoſe yeers that the cruel edict of Pharaoh was on foot, viz. Eighty at the leaſt (for Moſes, before whoſe birth it was made, was eighty yeers old when he ſtood before Pharaoh) for if God had not ſaid in that time live, they had been by ſuch cruelty conſumed. Secondly, at the time of their deliverance by Moſes, when by the increaſe of their miſeries their lives were more bitter then death unto them.

Judg. 8. And this was their firſt birth, though laſt ſpoken of, when they multiplyed, notwithſtanding their harſh uſage, unto a Nation. Their ſecond Nativity which is named, and ſaid to be in Canaan, was by their degenerating ſo ſoon as they came into Canaan, Joſhua and the Elders that over-lived him being dead, for then they began to be to God as men deſcended from fathers Amorites, and mothers Hittites, and no more Iſraelites.

I have cauſed thee to multiply as the bud of the field, Here the Lord proceedeth V. 7. to ſhew a greater favour, then by him done unto them, when they were in ſo poor an eſtate in Egypt, he multiplyed them in two hundred and fifty yeers from ſeventy to ſix hundred thouſand, in ſo much as that they were now grown to ſome full maturity, as a female grown up from a childe to a woman, her breaſts being alſo fully grown, and ſhe fit now for marriage. And being come to this, he ſaith, that he paſſing by caſt his eye upon her, as man taketh a wife making a covenant with her, which was done V. 8. 9, 10.
Exod. 24. Then was ſhe alſo ordained with gold and ſilver, and ſilke, &c. and ſhewed to be moſt beautiful, when being brought into the land of Canaan, and put into other mens poſſeſſions they grew wealthy. Then alſo they were fed with fine wheat and honey, and grew into a kingdom in the dayes of Saul V. 11. 12, 13, 14. and of David and Solomon, in whoſe time ſpecially ſhe was ſo greatly honored by other Nations; but all the beauty for which he ſaith was by his comlineſs.

Thus the Lord having proceeded in ſhewing his beneficence towards Iſrael V. 15. 16, 18, &c.
comes in the next place to accuſe this his wife, whom he had ſpiritually marryed, of moſt groſs ingratitude, ſinning againſt the marriage covenant by following other Gods, and of unparalleld incontinency, from v. 15. to v. 26. After which he ſheweth what judgements he had brought upon her v. 27. by diminiſhing V. 27. her ordinary food by famine, as in the time of Ahab, when it rained not in three yeers and ſix moneths, then by giving her to the will of thoſe that hated her, that is, the Philiſtims, who ſlew Saul and his ſons upon the mountaines of Gilboa, which is pointed at when he ſaith, that they into whoſe hands they came were the daughters of the Philiſtims, that were aſhamed of their lewd way, becauſe that although the Cities of the Philiſtims here called daughters were idolatrous, yet they kept them to their own gods, and received not the gods of other Nations, as the Iſraelites did both thoſe of the Egyptians and Aſſyrians. The Vulg. for theſe words, I have diminiſhed thy ordinary food, hath it, I will take away thy juſtification, the word Hebr. is חקך a ſtatute or portion, and becauſe it ſignifieth ſtatute, is by ſome expounded of the ceſſation of the ordinance of ſacrificing and of other rites in the publike worſhip of God in his temple. But it agreeth better as Rab. David and Vatablus to expound it, to that which God in mercy had appointed to Iſrael both for food and ornament in moſt bountiful manner, wheat, fine flowre, honey, gold and ſilver and other pretious things making that ſtate glorious, as was before ſaid
v. 10, 11, 12, 13, &c. but theſe things being abuſed to idolatry he now threateneth to take away. See a like paſſage to this, Hoſh. 2. whereas in N. T. it is rendred in the Preterten ſe I have taken away, Hebr. it is in the Future, but theſe Tenſes are ſometimes put one for another, and ſo moſt probably it is done here, becauſe as hath been before noted, both the Philiſtims ſometime lorded it over Iſrael in Elyes time, when the Arke was taken, but after the propheſying of Ezekiel nothing is ſaid of the Philiſtims more, as getting dominion over them, but only of the Caldees; wherefore theſe words, as Calvin ſaith, Calvin. have reference to things paſt, being an upbraiding of them for their extreame hardneſs of heart in that they were not moved by Gods judgements, by which they had already ſuffered, to repent, but perſiſted ſtill in their old ſins, as it were running headlong to utter deſtruction, againſt corrections, which operate upon thoſe that have any grace to their reformation; which is to be noted by Note.
us, that we may know that being corrected, if we be not amended our ſins are now of meaſure ſinful, and ſo nothing can be expected, but utter ruine and deſolation to the whole kingdom.

How weak is thy heart, ſaith the Lord, when as thou doſt all theſe things, the work V. 30. of an imperious whoriſh woman? The Vulg. Wherewith ſhall I cleanſe thy heart, when as thou doſt all theſe works of an whoriſh woman, & procacis? The reaſon of the difference in theſe expoſitions is, becauſe the word מול ſignifieth to circumciſe, and hereof in the future may come אמלה which is the word here uſed, and to circumciſe the heart and to cleanſe it, is all one; but forſomuch as the word אמלה properly ſignifieth weak and tender, it is beſt to take it in this ſenſe. But then here ſeemeth to be an oppoſition, the ſame which is called weak, being charged with doing the works of a ſtrong and domineering whore. But there is herein no repugnancy, for the wicked are weak in heart and diſſolute in reſpect of all that is good, letting flow from them, and being herein of no ſtrength to retaine, but yet they are ſtrong to do evil, ſo Iſrael like a whoriſh woman in idolatry had a moſt weak heart to hold faſt any thing that was good, but did ſtoutly the whoriſh works of idolatry with the gods of Egypt, of Aſſyria and Caldea, and attaining to a kind of preeminnency herein, as an whoriſh woman able to proſtitute her ſelf to all comers.

V. 33. They give gifts to all whores, but thou giveſt gifts to all thy lovers: Here the Lord further aggravateth the wickedneſs of the idolatrous Jews by comparing them in their ſpiritual whoredoms with other whores. In ſaying, that they gave gifts to their lovers, he alludeth to the manner of marryed women, who not being content with their own husbands ſecretly allure others to incontinency with them and to have their luſts ſatisfied by them ſpare for no coſt. For ſo did the idolatrous Iſraelites, not being content with the true God, who had marryed them to himſelf, they beſtowed much of their goods, which he of his bounty had given them, upon idols, building them temples, giving rich gifts unto them, and maintaining prieſts to ſerve them, partly alſo conceiving that by this means, that they ſhould have the more favour with the Egyptians, Aſſyrians and Caldeans, if they concurred with them in worſhipping the ſame gods; thus they profuſely ſpent their ſubſtance upon heatheniſh ſuperſtition, for which yet they fared never a whit the better at their hands, but the worſe, being contemned and derided, and by God for their perfidy towards him left to be over-cropped and ſubdued, and utterly ſpoyled by them.

V. 37. I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou haſt taken pleaſure, &c. Here followeth their full judgement for their forementioned abominations, he threatneth to gather againſt them all their lovers, that is, Egyptians and Caldeans, whoſe amity they had ſought by conforming to their idolatries thinking thereby to be ſafe, but now the Lord ſheweth, that by his juſt judgement they ſhould together be a means of their deſtruction, as indeed they were, the Caldees by fighting againſt them, breaking into and burning their City, and the Egyptians, becauſe through their means and a confederacy with them the King of Babybylon was exaſperated againſt them and deſtroyed them. At what time alſo they that hated them, eſpecially the Edomites came together with the Caldees, as is noted, Pſalme 137. where their cruelty and clamours againſt them at their deſtruction are deſcribed.

V. 39. I will deſtroy thy eminent places, The Vulg. thy ſtews: whereby he meant their altar made to idols and temples in high places, for when enemies pravaile and deſtroy and lay waſt any countrey, they ſpare not the very religious places there, although they have the like in their own countrey.

V. 47. The Lord not thinking it enough to aggravate the wickedneſs of the Jews, as he hath formerly done, now to juſtifie his ſevere proceedings againſt them by ſhewing them not only to have come of the Amorites and Hittites, who were long agoe expelled out of the land for their abominations, but that Judea was by ſinning become the ſiſter of Sodom and of Samaria, that is, the kingdom of the ten tribes, whoſe metropolis or chief City was Samaria, full of all manner of idolatry from the time of their firſt King Jeroboam to the time of their laſt, Hoſheah. And he not only equalizeth Judea to theſe in ſin, but ſheweth her to be a farre greater ſinner.

V. 49. But how could this be, touching Sodom he ſheweth how, v. 49. by reckoning up her ſins, pride & haughtineſs cauſed by plenty, called fulneſs of bread, turned into ſin, alſo by gluttony and drunkenneſs, and idleneſs, and wicked pleaſures loving that followed hereupon. And as for their pride and haughtineſs of mind, it was an high opinion of their own excellency and ſtable felicity, from which they thought they could never be moved. But the Jews outſtripped them in wickedneſs, becauſe amongſt them was added to all theſe another abomination far greater, and that was idolatry, for of this we read not in Sodom, and if it were, yet it was a greater ſin in the Jews, becauſe they were bound from it by covenant as was ſaid before, v. 8. but ſo were not the Sodomites. And touching Samaria, Jeruſalem was more wicked then ſhe alſo, as followeth, *v.*51. becauſe the Temple was at Jeruſalem, and after the diviſion of the Kingdoms many godly Kings and Prieſts upholding the true worſhip V.51. of God there, whereas Samaria had neither Temple nor King to move them to good, but temples of idols and all idolatrous Kings to ſtir them up to evil.

Whereunto we may alſo adde, that Jeruſalem had warning by the deſtruction of Samaria to repent, but would take none, but grew daily more and more corrupt in the time of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah. Whence note, that the parentage of wicked Chriſtians is not ſuch, nor their affinity ſuch as they ſuppoſe Note. it to be, for they think that God is their father, his holy Church, in which is ſalvation, their mother, and that Chriſt and his Apoſtles are their brethren, but they are foully deceived, the Amorites and Hittites, Heathen Indians and Barbarians be their fathers and mothers, and Turks and Tartars their brethren and ſiſters. Yea 2. they are worſe then any of theſe, and therefore ſhall be more ſeverely puniſhed, becauſe more obliged to God, and injoying more means of grace, the Word and Sacraments, and have had warning by the ruins of others both long agoe Conſtantinople falling into the hands of the cruel Turkes, and lately Germany being brought to deſolation, which ſhould make us to look to our ſelves in England, and not to be hardened in our ſins, thinking yet that no ſuch judgements ſhall befal us.

But what meaneth he by ſaying, *v.*52. Thou haſt juſtified thy ſiſters? Sol. That V.52. they were more righteous and leſs ſinful, as wicked as they were, then they, as an evil colour being laid by one twice as bad juſtifieth it comparatively to be a good colour, and likewiſe if faces or fruits bad or worſe be compared together: So Chorazin and Bethſaida juſtified Sodom and Gomorrah, as Matth. 11. worthy to be judges of them and themſelves worthy of condemnation.
Yet that thoſe wicked Cities were far from being reputed V.53. righteous indeed he ſaith, *v.*53. When I bring againe the Captivity of Sodom and Samaria back, I will bring thine back alſo, that is, never; Hebr. it is, I will turn the captivity of Sodom, and the Captivity of thee, of thy daughters in the midſt of them, whereupon Hebrew expoſitors gather, that Sodom and all ſhall one day be reſtored againe.

But this is abſurd and contrary to other plaine paſſages of Scripture, the meaning therefore is, I will turn both theſe captivities alike, that of Sodom then being never, no more ſhall this of Jeruſalem. But how is it that the Lord then in ſo many places promiſeth the contrary, and did it alſo in the time Calvin. of Cyrus? Sol. Calvin anſwereth, that the prophets ſometimes ſpeak to the multitude or whole body of Jews, which was wicked and ſinful, and ſometimes to an Elect remnant amongſt them, as Eſa. 8. 15. to theſe all promiſes are made of mercy and favour, but againſt the other all threatnings are directed, and conſequently this of never having their captivity turned. To this we may Note.
adde becauſe of thoſe that returned in the reigne of Cyrus many were wicked and ſuch as lived in the maniſeſt breach of Gods law againſt marrying with heathens, that this propheſy is to be extended to the Jews captivity in the time of the Romans after which they could no more expect a returning to build the City and Temple againe, onely a remnant of them ſhall one day have their captivity wherein they are yet held in ſin and unbelief, turned when the vaile 2 Cor. 3. ſhall be taken from before their eyes, and they ſhall become Chriſtians and be Rom. 11. ſaved. Some by Sodom underſtand Ammonites and Moabites, becauſe they were Lyra. begotten by Lot in Sodoms confines and ſo take take theſe words, as ſeriouſly Vatabl. ſpoken for ſome comfort, as if it were meant that the Samaritans, and Sodom ſhould all finde mercy in the end, that is, the Ammonites and Moabites, by being reſtored to their own countrey, but this is a plaine offering of violence to the text, wherein no comfort is ſpoken, but deſtruction threatened for ever.

V. 55. Thus alſo v. 55. ſpeaking to the ſame effect againe is to be underſtood, and v. 54. Thus thou ſhalt bear thine infamy or reproach, and be a comfort unto them, that is, their ſins being leſſer and ſo their puniſhment ſomewhat leſſer then thine, becauſe there are degrees of torments amongſt the damned, as of glory amongſt them that are ſaved, according to that, It ſhall be eaſier for Sodom at V. 56. the day of judgement then for thee, v. 56. Thy ſiſter Sodom was not mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy pride, that is, thou thoughteſt baſely of Sodom as worthily puniſhed for their abominable ſins, as being thy ſelf in thine own conceit far more excellent.

V. 57. Before thy wickedneſs was diſcovered, as at the time of thy reproach of the daughters of Syria, and of the daughters of the Philiſtims, that deſpiſed thee. Of the daughters of the Philiſtims, ſee before v. 27. The meaning of this place is, that ſo great was the Jews pride & ſelf-conceitedneſs, before that any execution for their ſins was done upon them by the Syrians or Philiſtims; for then their vileneſs began to be diſcovered by their puniſhments, and they could not be ſo impudent as to deny it, and if they were, it was by the judgements then upon them apparent to the Nations round about, eſpecially to thoſe by whom they were judged. v. 58. 59. are concluſion of this tract further confirming the expoſition beforegoing touching their utter deſtruction, as that of Sodom and Samaria, Thou haſt born thy lewdneſs and thine abominations, and I have done to thee as thou haſt done in breaking the covenant, that is, when thou ſhalt be puniſhed, as hath been ſaid, and remaine under my judgements without any deliverance.

Neverthelesſ I will remember my covenant with thee : Here after exprobrations V. 60. and threatnings againſt the community of the wicked Jews, after the manner of other Prophets Ezekiel returneth to matter of conſolation to the remnant elect amongſt them, wherein he pointeth at the grace and favour, which ſhould be extended towards them under the Goſpel to their converſion to the faith and everlaſting ſalvation.

And he ſpeaketh of theſe alſo, as having had their hands in the ſame abominations, but in the time of the Goſpel converted. For he ſaith, Thou ſhalt remember thy wayes, and be aſhamed, when thou ſhalt receive thy ſiſters, and ſhalt have V. 61. them of my gift for daughters, but not by thy covenant: Hereby intimating, that a man then cometh into covenant with God, when he is aſhamed of his ſins paſt, and therefore turneth from them to ſerve God in newneſs of life, holding Note. it now a ſhameful thing to live in ſin, but a grace & an honor to live righteouſly Rom. 6. and holily, according to which the Apoſtle ſaith, What fruit had yee of thoſe things of which yee are now aſhamed? Then in ſaying, thou ſhalt receive thy ſiſters, &c. he propheſieth alſo of the converſion of the Gentiles, by means of the Jews, that is, the Apoſtls going out to preach the Goſpel unto them, in which regard, that he ſaith, that he would give them unto them for daughters, as being by them 1 Cor. 4. 15. begotten unto God, as Paul ſaith to the Corin. Though ye have many inſtructors, yet yee have but one father, for I have begotten you. But not by thy covenant : this is added as a further declaration of his meaning. v. 60. I will remember my covenant made with thee in thy youth, not thine, for thou waſt perfidious and brakeſt it, ſo that if I had regarded this, I ſhould never more have owned thee to do thee ſo great a grace as to make thee the mother of other Nations in reſpect of the faith, firſt converting thee hereunto, and beginning this bleſſed work ſoly amongſt the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, as he did when he ſent his Diſciples forth, Matth. 10. ſaying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, but to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, Matth. 15. and againe, I was not ſent, but to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, and then by them, as a mother begetting unto himſelf other daughters, the Nations, ſome only Sodom and Samaria being named and the reſt underſtood. The Lord therefore calleth it his, not their covenant, for they having broken it he was no more bound thereby on their part, but only becauſe he would not be like like unto them, but ſet his goodneſs ſtill againſt their naughtineſs continued conſtant in that which he had promiſed, although they did not, but brake moſt foully with him. But why is it called the covenant made with her in her youth, v. 60. ſeeing it is a new covenant, that is made under the Goſpel, Jer. 31. 31? Sol. It is not called new for the ſubſtance thereof, for that was all one, but for the manner of giving it, the firſt being confirmed with the blood of beaſts, this by the blood of Chriſt, that having nothing expreſſed but doing ſo to live, this beleeving and living, and that given with great terrour, and accompanied with the heavy burthens of many ceremonies, this in all mildneſs, and no ſuch burthen impoſed. Yet it is for ſubſtance the covenant made with her in her youth, viz. for faith, which was the maine thing, that firſt made their father Abraham ſo gracious with God, and ſo brought him and his poſterity into this covenant, whereby God bound himſelf to be his God and the God of his ſeed for ever, v. 62.63. are nothing elſe, but a repeating of the ſame that was ſaid before for further confirmation of the eſtabliſhment of this covenant for ever, and of her being confounded at recounting her ſins paſt, and never open her mouth more to juſtifie her ſelf or to inſult over others, as ſhe had formerly done over Sodom.

Gen. 15.
Rom. 4.
Heb. 11.

CHAP. XVII.

IN this Chapter by a parable or ſimilitude taken from two Eagles, and a branch of an high Cedar and ſeed put into a fruitful ſoile and well watered the ſame is further declared, that was threatned before, viz. the deſtruction of Jeruſalem and the King thereof, the original and cauſe hereof being ſo laid open, and the manner of proceeding, as that it being applyed any one might eaſily conceive, that it could not be expected, that it ſhould fall out otherwiſe, but this deſtruction muſt needs come, as was before threatned for ſin, in reſpect of their evil dealings with Nebuchadnezzar after oath made unto him, and ſo great a favour received to ſet up one of their own of the royal blood to reign there permitting them to continue a Kingdom ſtill in their own fruitful land, only being put to the paying of tribute.

To come to the words of the ſimilitude, or riddle, he ſaith, A great Eagle long winged, full of feathers of divers colours came to Lebanon and took the higheſt branch of the Cedar. By this Eagle Nebuchad. the King of Babylon was meant, he is ſaid to be an Eagle, becauſe as an Eagle is the King of all flying fowles, ſo was he of all countreys and nations; and to be ful of feathers, and long winged, becauſe his dominion extended far, and his ſtrength was great; and theſe feathers were of divers colours, to ſet forth the divers ſorts of people of divers faſhions and manners in ſubjection to him.

Lebanon to which he came, was Jeruſalem, ſo called alſo in this riddle for the multitude of the high and ſtately buildings, of which it conſiſted, as Lebanon abounded with tall Cedars; or for the many high and great men thereof; and I ſee no reaſon why Calvin ſhould reject this expoſition as he doth, underſtanding by Lebanon, as the moſt eminent part of the land of Judea, the whole kingdom, becauſe in was Jeruſalem, and againſt it that Nebuchad. came, when he took Jehoiakin and carryed him away captive into Babylon. The higheſt branch of the Cedar or Cedars here, for the ſingular number is put for the plural, was King Jehoiakin, whom he carryed away, as is before ſaid. For although there were many great men high branches of this Cedar-like City, yet he was the higheſt. v. 4. He cropt off the top of his young twigges, and carryed and ſet it in the land of Merchants or City, that is, he took not only the higheſt branch, the King, but many of the nobility, who were as the tops of the boughs next unto it, and this branch with them he carryed into Babylon, which is called a land of traffick and City of Merchants, becauſe the City of Baby-

Babylon was the metropolis of the whole empire, whereunto they repaired from all parts, as Merchants to a place of greateſt traffick, and here this branch was ſet, that is, kept in ſome good faſhion, the more favour being ſhewed to V. 5. him, becauſe he voluntarily yeilded himſelf. v. 5. He took alſo of the ſeed of the land and planted it in a fruitful field, &c. that is, having carryed away Jehoiakin, he made Zedekiah, his uncle, and ſo one of the royal ſeed king in his ſtead, for which he is called the ſeed of the land planted therein, and becauſe that land was moſt fruitful, he ſaith, that he planted it in a fruitful field by great waters, as a willow, for that land was watered with the early, and the latter raine, and ſo the ſeed here committed to the ground might well grow and proſper greatly, and ſo might Zedekiah being thus advanced by the favour of that King, if he had had the grace to make uſe of it, have lived in great worldly pompe over that he could have done before being but a private man.

V. 6. And it grew and became a ſpreading vine of low ſtature, and the branches turned towards him and the roots thereof were under him. That is, Zedekiah being thus ſet up flouriſhed at the firſt, yet as a tributary King, and ſo low in compariſon of one that is abſolute, being under the Eagle before ſaid, that is, Nebuchadnezzar both branches and rootes, that is, from his favour receiving all his glory, and not to continue longer then he held in this his ſubordinacy to him, but whilſt he did, he brought forth branches, that is, he had children, as royal branches who might have ſucceeded him.

V. 7. Behold there was another great Eagle with great wings and many feathers, and this vine did bend her roots toward him that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation.
This was the King of Egypt, to whom Zedekiah truſting rebelled againſt King Nebuchad. that had planted him, and the furrows of its plantation are V. 8. now ſpoken of, and v. 8. A fruitful ſoile and great waters, becauſe Egypt to which he now truſted, had a great vine, and was fruitful, ſuppoſing, that by a new confederacy with the King thereof he ſhould flouriſh more then he had yet done, living no more, as a tributary King, but as an abſolute Monarch.

V. 9. But what ſaith the Lord v. 9. Shall it proſper? ſhall he not pull up the roots thereof, &c. even without great power or many people to pluck it up, that is, whatſoever Zedekiah thinketh by this his revolting againſt his faith given to Nebuchad. he ſhall not proſper, but having begun to remove himſelf from the place, where he was planted by turning his roots now another way, his leaves ſhall ſoon wither he being pluckt quite up by the roots, as he was when he was taken, and his children being ſlaine his eyes were put out, and he carryed into Bablyon and dyed there. But what is that he ſaith, This was without great power? Sol. He meaneth not, that the King of Babylon ſhould come with no great forces, but if he had come but with a few, they would have ſufficed to pluck up this vine Zedekiah ſtanding ſo looſe in the ground by his own doings, his roots being Jer. 37. 10. pluckt from the place, where they firſt ſtood, and were fixed and turned another way. And this is according to that of Jeremy, If the Caldeans were but a V. 10. few, and they all wounded men, they ſhould yet riſe up and burn this City, v. 10. Shall it proſper where it was planted? it ſhall wither in the furrows where it grew, That it, having turned the roots to Egypt, as was before ſaid, and ſo having, as it might be thought a new and better plantation, even in furrows, which are moiſt, and wherein plants grow commonly faſteſt, yet he ſaith it ſhould wither and decay, and in ſpeaking of furrows he alludeth to the land of Egypt where it rains not, but was all watred by furrows drawing from the river Nilus to run into all their fields.

V. 11. 12. 13. And all this expoſition is confirmed by the interpretation made, v. 11. 12, &c. to v. 22. wherein the ſin of Zedekiah his breaking his oath is greatly aggravated and above all threatened, and hereby is ſhewed what an abomination

V. 22. broken. v. 22. And thenceforth to the end of the Chapter, according to the prophetical manner, matter of comfort is added after the threatnings before going, eſpecially in reſpect of Chriſt the moſt high branch to come and to be planted upon an high and elevated mountaine, and he is aptly ſet forth here, as the head of his branches, or the principal of the ſtock of David, of which line he came. I will take from the top of the high Cedar, and ſet of the head of his branches a tender one, and I will plant it upon an high mountaine and eminent. Here in ſpeaking of Chriſt he calleth him the top of the high Cedar and yet a tender one, and Eſa. 11. he is ſet forth, as a branch comming out of the ſtubble of that tree, that is, Jeſſe the father of David, which is the loweſt branch, and not a branch pluckt of the top. But hereby is meant firſt his divinity, in regard of which he was the top and head of all that linage, the crown and greateſt glory thereof. 2. His humanity, in regard of which he was but a tender one and weak and low, as he is alſo called, v. 24. He was planted upon an high mountaine, when upon mount Zion, where the Temple ſtood, he ſat preaching the Goſpel, as is further expreſſed in the next words, v. 23. In the mountaine of the height of Iſrael I will plant it, for although mount Zion were not the higheſt mountaine, yet for the excellency in regard of the Temples ſtanding there and Chriſts preaching there it was the higheſt in eſteem of all other mountaines of the earth, and ſo it is likewiſe ſet forth, Eſa. 2. And this branch here planted, brancheth and fructifieth, and here all fowles of every wing dwell and are ſhadowed, as in the branches of a goodly Cedar, That is, people of all countreys and nations, to whom the fruit of Chriſts preaching extendeth hence, ſhall dwell in him by faith, when his Apoſtles ſent out by him going into all countryes ſhall preach him, and repentance, and faith, and ſalvation in his name.

V. 24. And all the trees in the field ſhall know, that I the Lord have brought down the high tree and exalted the low, have dryed up the green tree, and made the dry to flouriſh, That is, all men (for ſo they are often ſet forth by trees) ſhall know, what my power and juſtice is, when they ſhall ſee Zedekiah an high King, as he ſeemeth to himſelf, and green, becauſe growing in wealth and ſtrength by his confederacy with Egypt, brought down by Nebuchadnezzar, and withering away to a moſt poor and decayed eſtate, and againe after this the low ſtubble of Davids houſe in the branch Chriſt ſpringing up, and waxing ſo green and flouriſhing by the acceſſion of ſo many Kingdoms unto him, which was before dry, and ſo in humane reaſon ſuch as from which no ſuch riſe could have been expected.

CHAP. XVIII.

HEre, becauſe the prophet had formerly aggravated the ſins of the Jews then living by the ſins of their fathers, and they hereupon complained, as if they were unjuſtly dealt withal, for that when their fathers committing the ſame ſins, that they did, yet eſcaping they were now threatned with deſtruction. To convince them therefore of their unjuſt complaining in this regard and ſo juſtifie the Lord in theſe his proceedings againſt them, he largly declareth in this Chapter, that neither they nor any other were at any time judged unjuſtly by the Lord, but in all juſtice and righteouſneſs.

V. 2. And he beginneth firſt with the manner of their complaint, they ſaid by way of Proverb, The fathers have eaten ſoure graps, and the childrens teeth are ſet on edge, That is, they had committed the ſins, and their children ſmarted for them, which was a thing, that nature abhorreth from, ſeeing his teeth only are ſet on edge, that eateth ſoure or green fruit, and not his childes.

V. 4. Againſt this firſt he oppoſeth a certaine ground, whereby this proverb is overthrown, v. 4. As I live, all ſouls are mine, ſaith the Lord, as the ſoul of the ſon, ſo of the father, the ſoul that ſinneth ſhall dye, That is, I have a like intereſt in all ſouls, and they are alike dear unto me, as I made them all, therefore I will undoubtedly proceed alike againſt every man, not reſpecting any relations of one to another, but where I finde any wicked they ſhall dye for their wickedneſs, and they only, not others for them. And this is further amplified, V. 5. v. 5. 6,&c. by putting divers caſes.

1. Of a mans being righteous in all points of righteouſneſs, in this caſe whether he be father or ſon he ſhall not dye but live.

V. 10. 11. 2. Of the ſon of a righteous father degenerating to wickedneſs, he ſhall not live for his fathers righteouſneſs, but dye.

V. 14. 15. 3. Of a righteous ſon of a wicked father, v. 14. 15, &c. he ſhall not dy although his father were wicked, but live aſſuredly.

V. 21. 4. Of the ſame ſoul, that hath done wickedly, but repenteth and turneth, and fulfilleth all righteouſneſs now by keeping all Gods comandements v. 21. 22. he ſhall live notwithſtanding his former unrighteouſneſs, and not be puniſhed with death therefore.

V. 24. 5. Of a righteous man turning from his righteouſneſs to ſin, v. 24. He ſhall not live, but die, his former righteouſneſs ſtanding him in no ſtead.

Calvin. And theſe two laſt caſes are repeated againe for further confirmation of Ob. the ſame, v. 26, 27, 28. Againſt that which hath been ſaid, that the ſon ſhall Rom. 5. 12. not die for the fathers ſin, it may be objected that by one man ſin cometh upon all and death by ſin, yea upon thoſe that have not ſinned actually, as Adam
Sol. did, that is, infants. Sol. To this Calvin ſaith both, that God ſeeth ſin in them, although man cannot, for he ſeeth ſin in the ſeeds thereof, and that infants came not within the compaſs of that which is here ſpoken, for it is to them that objected againſt Gods juſtice, and therefore were of ripe yeers. And in this laſt I reſt. But for the ſin of our firſt parents being ours and death due therefore, before any actual ſinning, the place alledged is plaine, and infants being daily taken away by death do confirme it more and more. For it is a corporeal death firſt and chiefly, of which the Lord here ſpeaketh, becauſe he hath reference to the judgements before threatened of killing them with the ſword, famine and peſtilence, although death eternall is to be underſtood alſo, yea rather then the corporeal, becauſe that in time of common judgements for the ſins of a people, the righteous may be cut off amongſt the wicked, as this our prophet alſo afterwards ſpeaketh, ſaying, I will deſtroy the righteous together with the wicked, but no one righteous perſon ſhall together with them dye eternally. If it be ſaid, this then is not univerſally true, The ſon ſhall not dye for the fathers ſins, becauſe for the firſt mans and none of their own many dye daily both corporally and eternally. I anſwer, the firſt man was made after Gods image and had power not to have ſinned by vertue of his creation, and ſo to have ſtood in the ſtate of innocency and immortality for ever together with all his poſterity, and therefore it agreeth well with juſtice, as if he had ſtood, in whoſe loines was all mankind, to ſave all alive, ſo he turning ſinner for that ſin of his to deſtroy all.

But for other men and the children coming of them it is not ſo, they are dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, and have no power of themſelves to do or to will the good, and as the father is, ſo is the ſon, not looked upon in him to dye together for one anothers ſins, or to live for one anothers righteouſneſs, but each one after Adam ſtands and fals to himſelf only, in regard of any thing actually done by the one or the other whether good or evil. Now in the enu-
V. 5. meration of particular ſins here putting al the caſes together, they are by Jerom Hieron. noted to be 17. as the parts of righteouſneſs are. 1. To execute judgement. 2. To joyn to judgement righteouſneſs or juſtice. 3. Not to eat upon the mountaines. 4. Not to lift up the eyes to idols. 5. Not to go in to another mans wife. 6. Not to go in to a menſtruous woman, his own wife. 7. Not to make ſad any man. 8. To reſtore the pledge. 9. To take nothing by violence. 10. To give bread to the hungry. 11. To cloath the naked. 12. Not to put money to uſury. 13. To take nothing again of that which thou haſt given. 14. To turn his hand from iniquity. 15. To judge truly betwixt man and man. 16. To walk in the precepts of the Lord. 17. To keep his judgements and juſtifications. Thus he, but who ſo ſhall count them, as they are reckoned up in the text ſhall finde but 14. and if any other particular can be named it comes under one of theſe heads. And it is to be Note. noted, becauſe in ſpeaking of the righteous he mentioneth not ſome, but all points of righteouſneſs, as being in him, then promiſing, that he ſhall live, not otherwiſe, hereby ſhewing, that it is not enough for a man to live free from ſome, but from all ſins, and to do ſome good things required, but all and every of them, and therefore he who cometh ſhort of this is not reputed righteous before God, but wicked, and ſhall dye for it. 2. Becauſe thus a foundation of deſpaire were laid if ſome other way were Note. not opened to eſcape, he propoundeth life to be attained and deliverance from the danger of death in the caſe of turning by repentance. For in this caſe all ſins paſt are forgiven, and none of them cometh any more in remembrance. 3. Yet this turning by repentance is not only by ſorrowing Note. and confeſſing and praying, but breaking off from all ſin and doing all good duties from thenceforth to the end of our lives. Laſtly, becauſe when he that turneth doth the beſt that he can, he is ſtill ſubject to ſome ſinning through the fleſh, or, unregenerate part remaining in him as long as he liveth. Unto this comfort here given, another here paſſed over in ſilence is added by the Rom. 8. 3.

Goſpel, That which we cannot do by reaſon of the fleſh, God ſending his ſon, condemned ſin in the fleſh, that the righteouſneſs of the law might be fulfilled in us through him. To come now to the words, as they lye in order, where the parts of V. 5. righteouſneſs are ſet forth. 1. If a man be juſt and doth that which is lawful and right, Heb. and in other tranſlations it is, doth judgement and juſtice, betwixt Calvin. which, Calvin, when they go together, putteth this difference, juſtice is to deal righteouſly with all men in all things, judgement to be helpful to thoſe Eſa. 11.16. as much as in us lyeth, that ſuffer wrong, which is a thing called for at every ones hands, although at the hands of Judges and Juſtices eſpecially. 2. He hath not eaten upon the mountaines, That is, feaſted with idolaters going to their ſacrifices, as the Midianitiſh women allured the Iſraelites ſometime to do, for Numb. 25. which the Plague of God was ſent amongſt them. And this feaſting is ſaid to be upon mountaines, becauſe they had their temples and altars upon high places for the moſt part, where idolatry was committed. 3. Nor lift up his eyes to the idols of Iſrael, That is, not prayed unto or worſhipped them, becauſe in prayer we do or ought to lift up our eyes towards heaven, but this phraſe is uſed, to meet with ſuch, as would haply juſtifie themſelves by ſaying, that they pray not to images, but uſe them only for a remembrance by lifting their eyes up unto them, being put in minde of God and his Saints. But the righteous man that ſhall live, doth not ſo much as lift up his eyes to idols to be ſtirred up by ſo doing to any pretended good, and therefore not one papiſt is righteous, but wicked for this ſin alone. And he ſaith, The idols of the houſe of Iſrael, lest any ſhould think, it is true indeed, to lift up our eyes to idols of the heathen were an abomination, but images allowed by the church to be uſed for the ends before ſaid, are not of that ſort, and therefore it is not evil to look at them. In ſaying that the prophet at once cuts off all ſuch pretexts, and leaveth them, that do but ſo without excuſe. The 4. of abhorring from adultery, and 5. of not going to his own wife in her flowres and 6. of fleeing oppreſſion, 7. of reſtoring the pledge, and 8. of doing no violence to any man, are all plaine without expoſition, being alſo obvious in many other places, and the 9. of giving our bread to the hungry, and 10. of cloathing the naked.
But the 11. putting money to uſury, v. 8. hath wrought diverſly amongſt V. 8. worldly minded men, ſome ſtanding upon the word נשך biting, and denying any encreaſe taking, that is not biting, to be uſury: but againſt them this text plainly maketh, becauſe it is added nor taken any increaſe, ſome varying the word and calling that, which they take for lending intereſt, as Calvin ſaith, was a deviſe amongſt the French, upon theſe grounds is trade in uſury without out fear of being counted wicked for ſo doing. But he contrariwiſe ſaith, that any lending for increaſe is uſury. Yet all uſury is not unlawful, as namely that, which is not a taking of increaſe of the poore, touching whom it is expreſly ſaid, If thou lendeſt to any of my people that is poor, thou ſhalt not be an uſurer Exod. 22, 25. unto him. 2. When a man maketh not uſury a trade, but only ſometime having money to live upon, which he cannot yet convert into ſomething elſe, which may bring gaine in, he lendeth to ſuch as have wealth, but occaſion for the preſent to borrow for their advantage another way.

In this caſe to take for the uſe of his money, is not unlawful, but it is juſt and equal for the benefit redounding to another by his money to take recompence of money therefore, thus he. But although I deny not his reaſon to be good, yet I cannot ſubſcribe unto him, that any uſury is lawful, ſeeing whatſoever may rightly be called by this name is by the very word ſetting it forth cenſured as a biting or oppreſſing, againſt which it is in many places exclaimed both by the Law and Prophets. We muſt therefore rather come to the definition of uſury, which I take it, is beſt made by them that ſay, it is a lending of money upon condition to receive increaſe therefore to the damage of the borrower. For although he be rich, he muſt not by me be damnified, and if he be not, that which is contracted for and taken, is no uſury, but a lawful contract, as in bargaining to have a penny, for a penny worth.
For it is not againſt the law of lending, which forbiddeth only lending for biting increaſe, or for any increaſe to the poor, and no otherwiſe, neither is Matth. 7. 12. it againſt the general tenour of the law, which is love, that requireth a man Quod tibi non to do to another as he would have others do to him, and contrariwiſe, do not vis fieri, alteri to another what thou wouldſt not have done to thee. For a man ought not ne feceris. to deſire to be benefited by another without making him recompence who hath no need of his charity. For the quantum, that may be taken, as a juſt recompence, the law hath ſet one limit, and becauſe that is yet too much, conſcience ought to ſet another, viz. not much, but ſomewhat above the proportion commonly to be made out of the ſame money by purchaſing; that is, ſix or ſeven pound pro centum, by the Imperial law it is allowed to take no more as I have read then five pound pro centum. But becauſe in lending money time is often loſt and an hazzard is run more then in purchaſing land, in equity ſomewhat more may be taken then the rent of ſo much land. But for ſuch as lend to the poor upon uſury, or exact upon any without conſcience, they take not the way of life, but of death in their ſo doing. Hitherto the 11. now followeth the 12. point of righteouſneſs, That hath withdrawn his hand from iniquity, that is, taken no bribes to prevent juſtice; which being not taken care of, juſtice is perverted, and of Princes and Judges men are made companions of theefes. 13. Hath executed true judgement between man and man, Eſa. 11. 23. that is, being a judge or arbitrator not carryed by love or hatred, but altogether going by the right rule of juſtice towards ſuch as come before him.
V. 9. 14. Hath walked in my ſtatutes and kept my judgements to deale truly. Here by ſtatutes ſome underſtand the ordinances of the ceremonial law, concerning Luc. 1. 6. which it is ſaid, that Zachary and Elizabeth walked in all the commandements, and ordinances of the Lord without blame; but this is too reſtrained, it is rather to be held becauſe the prophet would not proceed in enumerating more particulars, he thus endeth his capitulation in this general, that he might make a perfect deſcription of a righteous man, and ſo it is, as if he had ſaid, if there be any other point of righteouſneſs yet unnamed, I will ſhut it all up in a word, he is righteous that hath walked in all my commandements both moral, ceremonial and judicial, dealing in all things truly, and ſincerely, being without John 1. 43. fraud or guile, as it is ſaid of Nathaneel, Behold an Iſraelite indeed, in whom there is no guile.

V. 10. If he beget a ſon that is a robber, a ſhedder of blood, that doth the like to any of theſe things. Hebr. doing one of theſe, and in Vulg. Lat. alſo. Here is the ſecond caſe put of a ſon degenerating from the righteouſneſs of his father in any one of the things here mentioned. 1. By robbing or bloudſhed contrary to the doin

doing of no violence before commended, and to oppreſſion fleeing, and to reſtoring the pledge for the word פרץ is to break, or to make a breach, ſo that it is a general word ſetting forth both robbing, bloodſhed and all kind of oppreſſion, and violence, and breaking the bonds of continency alſo by adultery and other unclean copulations, or any way elſe breaking out againſt the law of God.

V. 11.

V. 12.

Then having uſed a word implying all vices in general, v. 11. he enumerateth particulars moſt of them in the words before uſed, only v. 12. whereas the father is ſaid not to have oppreſſed, but to have broken his bread to the hungry, and cloathed the naked, for all theſe it is ſaid, hath oppreſſed the poor and needy, intimating, that not only to do them wrong, but not to exerciſe charity towards them is an oppreſſion, and ſo it is not to execute judgement and juſtice, touching which nothing is particularly ſaid here, but this is left alſo to be underſtood under this head of oppreſſion, becauſe he that ſeeth the poor oppreſſed and helpeth him not according to his power, is guilty of this ſin of oppreſſion alſo. 2. For going in to a menſtruous woman he ſaith, hath committed abomination. And here it is to be noted, that not all or many of the ſins here reckoned up, but one is enough to bring a man to deſtruction, becauſe he ſaith, doth one of theſe, that we may ſo flee ſin, as not Herod like when we do many things required, live in ſome one ſin ſtill, for fear of being guilty of all by means of this one.

Note:
Jam. 2. 10.

V. 14, 15, 16, 17.

Here followeth the third caſe of a good ſon of an evil father, there being herein no difference from that which was ſaid in the firſt caſe, v. 5. 6, &c. till he came at v. 17. he hath taken off his hand from the poor, Hebr. hath turned his hand from the poor, this is oppoſed to oppreſſing the poor and needy ſpoken of v. 12: it being meant, that he keeps his hand from all ſuch oppreſſion, neither taking a pledge with his hand, nor holding it, if it be a thing, without which the poor man cannot live, or his health be preſerved, nor a bribe to judge againſt him, but not from helping him being oppreſſed, or faln, or ready to periſh for want of relief.

V. 23.

Have I any pleaſure at all, that the wicked ſhould dye, but that he ſhould turn from his wayes and live? The caſe of a wicked man turning and living, notwithſtanding his former wickedneſs being laid open in the premiſes, now he inferreth upon this ground that the Lord willeth not, neither delighteth in any mans death, but in his converſion and ſalvation, that none, how far ſoever they have gone in ſin, might deſpaire, but by hope in his mercy be drawn to turn unto him, that is ſo gratious.

Rom. 9.
Phil. 2. 13.

But againſt this it is objected both that he hath fore-appointed ſome to damnation, and that it is not in man to wil, but he worketh to will and to do of his own good pleaſure: if then he take no pleaſure in the death of the wicked, why doth he not turn him?

Rom. 2. 4.
Revel. 3. 20.

Sol. He offers him grace and pardon for all that is paſt to turn him, yea he counſels him to turn, and intreats him, by his benefits ſeeks to lead him to repentance, and which is more then all this, he knockes at the door of his heart by his Spirit, and who can ſay then, but that it is true, which is here ſaid, he delighteth not in his dying?

Obj. But all this is nothing, if either he hath fore-appointed him to death, or worketh not effectually with the meanes, whereby he may be converted.

Sol. He fore-ordaineth none to damnation, but ſuch as he foreſeeth will be impenitent, when he hath uſed all the means of reclaiming them, that may be, and therefore Chriſt ſpeaking of the curſed going into hell fire, ſaith, not prepared for you, but for the divel and his angels, whereas contrariwiſe to the bleſſed he ſaith, come into the kingdom prepared for you from the beginning, ſo that impenitent ſinners come into condemnation by their preferring of the pleaſures of ſin before the joy of ſalvation; for his effectual working upon his will, he worketh ſo by his word and ſpirit, that he may, if there be not an averſion in his will, turn himſelf being thus holpen, as it is ſaid here *v.*32. Turn your ſelves and live, for if God, who biddeth us thus to do, ſtood not ready to help and inable us, this were but a deluſion. But doing all that can be expected to be done on his part, yea that he could do, as he ſaith, *Eſa.*5. the impenitent ſinner is unreaſonable in charging him, as the cauſe of his non-converſion, when as indeed he is ſoly the cauſe thereof to himſelf and conſequently of damnation, as a man in the water held up by the chin, that thruſts away his hand that holds him up that he might ſwim out, if he ſinketh and be drowned, is the ſole cauſe of his own death. And the rather is the ſinner the cauſe of his own damnation, becauſe he is not only held up as it were, but exhorted over and over to turn and live, v. 30,31,32. ſo that unleſs God would ſave him againſt his will, or take and carry him to heaven as a block or dead thing, he never putting on to do any thing tending to ſalvation, and ſo do more for him, then for any that are ſaved, he can never attaine life, but muſt dye and periſh everlaſtingly. God indeed as Auguſt. hath it, made thee without thee, but thou muſt not expect, that he ſhould ſave thee without thee.

Auguſt. Qui fecit te ſine te, non ſervabit te ſine te.

CHAP. XIX.

V.1,2. T*Ake thou up a lamentation for the princes of Iſrael, and ſay, What is thy mother a lionneſs.* In this Chapter under the ſimilitude of a lionneſs and her whelpes ſuch kings as of late were in Judea are ſet forth, the one being Jehoaz the firſt ſon of Joſiah, whom Pharaoh Necho took and carryed into Egypt, another Jehoiakim, whom he made king in his ſtead, that was taken and carryed into Babylon.

So that the ſtate is ſet forth by the lionneſs, which conſiſted of men addicted to make preys the rich of the poor, as a lionneſs makes a prey of other beaſts. For the two whelps taken and brought up till they became lions, the firſt Jehoaz was made King by the people, after that Joſiah his father was ſlaine by Pharaoh Necho, but when he had reigned three moneths, in which time he 2 King. 23.24. is ſaid to have done evil, that is, as is here expreſſed, by oppreſſing the people, 2 Chron.36. Pharaoh being diſpleaſed at their boldneſs to ſet him up for King without his conſent came and took him away into Egypt, where he dyed. Then Eliakim, whom he called Jehoiakim being by him made king did evil likewiſe, yea more is ſaid touching his oppreſſions to pay the money impoſed to the King of 2 Kin. 23. 35. Egypt. Then the king of Babylon coming againſt him he became his ſervant 2 Kin. 24.1,2. three yeers, but thenceforth rebelled and ſuffered much by bands of the Caldees, and Syrians and other Nations coming againſt him, ſo that he was 2 Chron. 36.6. taken and bound in chains to be carryed into Babylon. The cauſe of all which and manner is here thus expreſſed, v.6. He went up and down amongſt the lions V. 6. and became a lion, and learned to catch the prey and devoured men. v. 7. and he knew their
V. 7. deſolate places, and laid waſt their Cities,&c. v. 8. Then the Nations ſet againſt him on
V. 8. every ſide from their provinces, and ſpread their net over him, he was taken, v. 9. and
V. 9. they put him in ward in chaines, and they brought him to the king of Babylon,&c. Where by his going up and down amongſt the lions is meant, as the Kings of Egypt and Babylon, who were like lions, whom he made a covenant for tribute and ſo as they exacted upon men taking their goods from them, for which he is ſaid to have devoured them. But for the next words, v. 7. he knew their deſolate places, Hebr. it is אלמנותיו his widows, Vulg. he learned to make widows, and to bring his Cities to deſolation. Calvin following Cald. render it, he knew her palaces, turning ל into ר but why any ſhould render it by deſolate places, I ſee no reaſon, unleſs by widows deſolate places be ſet forth metaphorically. For any change of a letter from the Hebr. copy I cannot by any means aſſent; beſides that rendering it by palaces perverts the ſenſe, which is that this king having devoured the men by oppreſſions and tyrannically cutting off them, that withſtood his proceedings, whereby many widows were made, ceaſed not here, but found means to pill and poll them alſo, that had any wealth left, whereby their Cities were made deſolate and without any ſubſtantial inhabitants. Then it followeth, the land was deſolate and the fulneſs thereof by the noiſe of his roaring: wherein he ſtill goes on in the allegory of a lion, for he roareth after his prey, and this being heard the inhabitants being few, and moſt women, lye open to his fury, and ſo being deſtroyed the place is made deſolate.

2 Chron.36.6.

But as when it is thus, the men of the Cities or towns about gather together to take this roaring and devouring lion, ſo by Gods juſt judgement bands of the Caldees, Syrians, Ammonites and Moabites came and took Jehoiakim, or weakened him ſo, that the king of Babylon coming he had no power to ſtand againſt him, but ſoon fell into his hands, and was bound, as is aforeſaid. But neither there nor here is he ſaid to have been carryed into Babylon but only to be bound, he then haply agreeing thenceforth to live in obedence to him, whereupon he was permitted ſtill to reign under him, and then his roaring voice was heard no more upon the mountains of Iſrael, which although it was not verified immediately, for he reigned after his binding ſtill eight yeers, or ſeven, that is, to the 11. yeer from his beginning to reigne, and it was in his fourth yeer, that he was taken and bound. But he was moſt probably ſo curbed, as that he had not the liberty of roaring as before, and after his death, his ſon coming to the crown, that is, Jehoiakin, he was carryed away into Babylon within three moneths, and his wife and children and all the principal men of Judah to the number of ten thouſand, and the treaſures of the Lords houſe, whereby both he and his Princes were diſabled for ever to roare again as a lion in Iſrael.

Hieron.

All this of the ſecond whelpe is by Jerom applyed to Jehoiakin, becauſe not Jehoiakim, but he was carryed away by the king of Babylon, and could roare no more. So that according to his expoſition Jehoaz was the firſt, and Jehoiakin the ſecond, and this is favoured by the courſe of the hiſtory, which ſaith, that both theſe were made kings by the people, as here by the lionneſs, but Jehoiakim was made by the king of Egypt, and therefore I leave it to the judicious reader to be conſidered. Some he ſaith, by the one underſtand Johanan the ſon of Careah, and by the other Zedekiah, but the one of theſe went and was not carryed into Egypt, and Zedekiah was carryed into Babylon after this, and the ſaid Johanan went into Egypt after him, whereas the things here ſpoken of are hiſtorical relations of that which was done before and not prophetical predictions of that which ſhould be done after. He alſo ſpeaketh of ſome that expound theſe things myſtically of Satan like a roaring lion, but leaveth this, as of which no good ſenſe without much ſtraining can be made of that which is here ſaid.

The ſhort time of Tyrants.

Some upon theſe relations enter into a common place of the ſhortneſs of the lives of Tyrants, becauſe Jehoaz one of theſe was cut off ſoon after that he had reigned three moneths, and the other at the like time went from reigning into exile and bonds. And although Jehoiakim and Zedekiah lived longer yet, yet both together exceeded not twenty two yeers.

Hieron.

Jerom in Epitaphio Nepotiani tels of Conſtantius a favourer of the Arrian hereſie whilſt he was preparing to fight againſt the enemy dyed ſuddenly in a village called Mopſis, leaving to his great grief the Empire to the enemy; Julian the Apoſtata fighting againſt his enemy in Media periſhed by the hand of Chriſt, whom he had denyed in France; Valens alſo overcome in the Gothick war periſhed; Valentinianus being almoſt a childe ſtill after the Empire recovered by much blood loſt his life in a place before defiled by his brothers blood, and had his dead body to his great infamy hanged up; Procopius, Maximus, Eugenius, who whilſt they ſtood were a terror to all men, became in this the more miſerable, that they were firſt brought into ſervitude and then deſtroyed. But what ſhould I reckon up more examples, of which all hiſtories are full, ſeeing to many written of in ſacred hiſtory the like miſerable end befell, Saul was ſlaine and had his head cut off, and all ignominy done to his dead body by the Philiſtims; How ſhamefully did Jezabel, periſh by being troaden under the feet of horſes, and eaten up of dogs, and Ahab falling at Ramoth Gilead by the Aramites hands, Athaliah ſlaine by Jehoiadah; Joram, and Ahaziah by Jehu, and Joaſh by his enemies, after extremity of torments, and Amaziah by his own Note. ſubjects with many others, which were too long to capitulate: which ſhould be a warning to Kings how they turn lions to their people, for ſo they are not likely to have any long joy of their high dignity. And to get a kingdom let no man aſpire by violence and bloodſhed, for he that ſheds the blood of man, by man ſhall his blood be ſhed, as is notably exemplified, 2 Kings 16. and in King John ſometime King of England, and in Richard the third murtherer Note. of his two Nephewes left to him in truſt by their dying father Edward 4.

Againe note, that a man that is cruel and oppreſſeth others, is not a man, but a lion, a beaſt, as Jude ſpeaketh, made to be taken and deſtroyed, he getteth enmity at all mens hands round about, making them to riſe up againſt him as the countrey riſeth againſt a lion, yea againſt a wolfe or a foxe, that kill but ſheep or lambs, but much more devouring men, as it is here ſaid, whereas contrariwiſe a great man doing good and being courteous to inferior perſons is, as Veſpaſian was ſometime called, deliciæ humani generis.

V. 10. Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood planted by the waters; Having ſet forth the ſtate of Judea by a ſimilitude taken from a lionneſs, now he ſets it forth by another from a vine, which at the firſt grew and branched and brought forth fruit and flouriſhed, exceedingly growing to a mighty kingdom, in ſetting which forth he uſeth many words, that her preſent miſery might be the more V. 11. aggravated to humble the Jews the more, and to make them lament their woful condition, according both to the beginning and ending of the chapter, which are of taking up a lamentation. But what meaneth this, A vine planted in thy blood? This is ſaid in reference to the ſimilitude of a childe new born, and being yet in the blood, before uſed, Ch. 16. the meaning being, that the original of the Jewiſh Nation was foul and filthy, neither was there any thing in it, for which the Lord ſhould be affected to it, but rather have loathed it, yet out of his meer mercy he took her and made her amiable by his grace.

Thus it was with Iſrael conſidered as a woman, but now ſhee is ſet forth in another conſideration, viz. of a vine, that of being in her blood ſtill retained to intimate her filthineſs and unworthineſs, that Gods mercy might be the more magnified in planting her as a noble vine in a fruitful place, and ſo Septuag. his judgements next ſpoken of v. 12. the more juſtified. Some for theſe words in thy blood have, as the floure of a pomgranate ὡς ἄνθος ῥοᾶς as the Sept. but thus for Lyra. דמך it moſt be רמון ſignifying a pomegranat. Lyra by the vine here ſpoken of underſtands Zedekiah, who is ſaid to be planted in blood, becauſe that he was the cauſe of ſo much bloodſhed. But I reſt in the firſt, for he never flouriſhed ſo, as is here ſaid, neither is the King a mother, but the ſon of a mother, and laſtly his planting together with the ſtate in his time is ſpoken of v. 13. where this vine being pluckt up and burnt is ſaid to have been planted in a barren place. But this queſtion being thus reſolved another ariſeth, how this vine being ſaid to be pluckt up and burnt can yet be ſaid to be replanted in another place, and what place this barren place was? Sol. It was pluckt up and burnt as it were, when Jehoiakin and thoſe ten thouſand with him were carryed into captivity together with the rich veſſels of the temple, but ſuch as remained were replanted againe and ſet in a poor condition, as in a barren wilderneſs; although in the ſame land, becauſe they were now in a ſervile eſtate, and the profit of the land rather redounded to the benefit of the Caldees, then of them the inhabitants thereof, by reaſon of the tribute to which they were bound.
Moreover it may be called dry and barren, becauſe as a vine planted upon ſuch ground, although it groweth a little for a time, yet there being no moiſture in the ground it ſoon fadeth again, as this ſtate is alſo further ſaid to have done, V. 14. v. 14. even by a fire coming out of its own branches, which was verified, when Zedekiah revolting from the obedience of the king of Babylon, to whom he had ſworn, brought the Caldean army with fire and ſword upon his City to the utter ruining and conſuming thereof. Hence note the free grace of God in Chriſt, whereby he ſetteth his love upon his Elect, and not for any worthineſs Note. in them, yea againſt their unworthineſs and filthineſs, for he planted Iſrael being a vine in her blood, that is defiled and filthy. 2. No people thus preferred by God ſtandeth ſo ſure, but there is danger of being pluckt up for ſin. 3. They that after ſufferings, are againe replanted as it were, by being ſpared from utter ruine like Sodom ſhall not yet ſtand, but come into danger again, a fire to deſtroy them coming out of themſelves, when they break out again into foule and groſs ſinning.

CHAP. XX.

THis Chapter is begun like chap. 14. with the coming of the elders of Iſrael V. 1. to the Prophet to inquire, that is, to hear from him the word of God, pretending, as is moſt probable, to receive inſtructions from him, although they had no hearts to follow them, becauſe there were falſe prophets, who ſpake contrary to the teaching of him and Jeremiah. Now he by revelation V. 3. from God, knowing their hearts, firſt tels them, that the Lord would not be inquired of by them, yet he put to his diſcretion knowing, how averſe they were in their hearts from all goodneſs, whether he would judge them or no, that is, enter into any diſceptation with them or no by laying open once againe V. 4. their wickedneſs and Gods gracious dealing with them; hereupon, if they would not be wrought upon to repent, adjudging them to deſtruction, yet in fine he ſheweth, that the Lord bad him argue the caſe, and expoſtulate with and judge them, as followeth, v. 5. 6, &c. to the end of the chapter.
Then he beginneth with laying open Gods gracious dealing with their fathers, V. 5. 6. and their ſinning againſt him, even whilſt they were yet in Egypt. For he by Moſes ſent unto them to bring them out of Egypt into the land of Canaan, that is, from hard ſervitude to deſireable liberty, and from poverty to riches, and poſſeſſions, where they might live in the midſt of all plenty, V. 7. only they were required to caſt away their idols, the idols of Egypt, of which abomination of theirs we read nothing in Exodus, but here it is plaine, that in Egypt when Moſes came firſt unto them they were idolaters, and obſtinate idolaters, as the next words ſhew v. 8. They would not caſt them away. And for V. 8. this the Lord was at the point of deſtroying them there for their ingratitude, V. 9. all which in Exodus is in ſilence paſſed over. Yet it may be gathered by their churliſh carriage of themſelves towards Moſes, who came with ſigns and wonders to deliver them, becauſe Pharaoh now uſed them more hardly, that they were very diſobedient unto him, in ſo much that they ſaid, he had made their ſavour to ſtink before Pharaoh, and prayed God to judge between him V. 9. and them. Yet the Lord for his names ſake delivered them, & proſecuting them with his favour in the wilderneſs at mount Sinai he gave them his ſtatutes of V. 10. 11.
the ten commandements and judicial laws and other ordinances about his ſervice, by living according to which they might continue acceptable always unto him, and live and be proſperous.

If it be demanded here, whether men by keeping Gods command, may attaine everlaſting life, becauſe it is ſaid, I gave them ſtatutes by which he that doth them ſhall live?

Some anſwer, that living and proſpering in this world only is meant, becauſe it is our duty to obey Gods precepts, and therefore having done ſo we merit nothing but are unprofitable ſervants. But according to this rule we ſhould not in obeying have our lives prolonged here, becauſe that even this is more then we are worthy of. It is not then for that we ſhall be worthy, if we obey, that life is promiſed, but out of Gods benignity, who might without out this condition require all due obedience at our hands, wherefore out of his grace he makes this covenant with us, Do this and live, meaning both here by being ſaved from judgements, which if we ſin will come upon our land and haſten death, and in the world to come, from which we ſhall ſurely be rejected, if we happen to live long here, as a ſinner may do according to that ſaying, If a ſinner liveth a hundred yeers and God prolongeth his dayes,&c. Now becauſe no man can perfectly keep the commandements and ſo attaine to life, unto the law of doing is added the law of beleeving, our imperfections, who repent us of our ſins, and to the uttermoſt of our power turn from Rom. 8. 3. them, being paſſed over, if we believe in Chriſt, and ſo perfect juſtification and ſalvation is attained. And ſo it is not in vaine that God bids us do this and live, which he knoweth we cannot exactly do, for we repenting us of our failings, and doing what we can, the Son of God puts to his helping hand, and both obeyeth perfectly for us, and payeth his blood for a ranſom of our failings, whereby we come undoubtedly to live indeed.

V. 12. Alſo I gave them my ſabbaths, that they might be a ſigne between me and them, and that I am the Lord, who ſanctifie them. Having ſpoken of the commandements in general, now he mentioneth that of the Sabbath in particular, whereby they were diſtinguiſhed from other nations by being made followers of God, who having made heaven and earth, and all things in ſix dayes reſted the ſeventh and hallowed, or ſanctified it, and in keeping it by reſting, as he did, they were ſanctified, or ſeparated from other peoples to be a peculiar people to the Lord, wherefore the Sabbath Day was not appointed for any pleaſure that the Lord takes in mens bodily reſting, as in a point of holineſs, as in the worſhiping of him aright and reverencing his name required by the three former commandements, but that reſting they might keep it holy to him, and by Eſa. 58. bodily reſting learn to ceaſe and reſt from ſin in deed, word and thought, as Iſaiah teacheth, & learn, that there was another reſt to come in heaven, which the Rom. 5. Meſſiah at his coming would procure unto us for ever and ever, and inward reſt of conſcience through peace with God by faith, that they might readily Heb. 4.34, &c. imbrace him at his coming, and not harden their hearts through unbeliefe. Now becauſe God teacheth not by ſignes and figures any more, it being come, that was pointed at in that Sabbath, Chriſts reſurrection and ſo perfecting the work of our redemption put an end to the reſting upon that day. Only becauſe the Sabbath was to be kept holy by ceaſing from work and attending upon Gods worſhip, there is a day in ſtead thereof thus kept amongſt Chriſtians from week to week, which began at the very time of the reſurrection of Chriſt, which we have as much need to keep by ſanctifying it and ſanctifying our ſelves by ceaſing from ſin, both upon the firſt day of the week, and all the dayes following, as the Jews had to keep theirs, to the worlds end.

And this may now well be taken for a ſigne when it is ſo kept betwixt God and the Chriſtian, as that then was, he being no good Chriſtian, that Joh. 9. keepeth not this day holy, as was ſaid of ſuch, as kept not that in the time thereof, though miſapplyed, This man is not of God, becauſe he keepeth not the Sabbath day, although not by ſo ſtrict bodily reſting, as ſpiritually then and alwayes. Lyra noteth here, that Sabbaths are named in the plural numb. becauſe there were more then one, viz. of the three great feaſts, and of the humiliation day.

V. 13. And I ſaid, I will poure out my wrath in the wilderneſs to conſume them: Hitherto the ſtatutes given them, now he ſheweth how they tranſgreſſed againſt them, many of them worſhipping the golden calf, thus committing moſt groſs idolatry, and ſometimes murmuring and detracting from God, as in the want of bread, Exod. 14. in the want of water, and of fleſh, and before that when the Egyptians purExod. 32. ſued them into the wilderneſs, in ſo much as that he was at the point of deſtroying them, but that Moſes oppoſed himſelf and ſtood in the gap.

V. 15. Yet I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderneſs that I would not bring them into the land flowing with milk and honey, the glory of all lands; Wherein he goeth on according ding to the Hiſtory which ſheweth, that they murmured at the return of the ſearchers, being at the point of making them a captaine to return to Egypt againe, whereupon the Lord threatned that all of them from twenty yeers old and upward ſhould dye in the wilderneſs, and ſo they did. And by lifting up his hand is meant his ſwearing, as Pſal. 95. it is ſaid, he ſware in his wrath that they ſhould not enter into his reſt. For his calling the land of Canaan the glory of all lands, this was ſpoken for the fruitfulneſs thereof, although now it be very barren and inferior to many other countryes ſince the deſolation thereof for their moſt horrible ſin in crucifying Chriſt, as Sodon that was before as the garden of God, but being deſtroyed, a perpetual ſpectacle of barrenneſs, and this is added in praiſing that land ſo highly, to ſhew their ingratitude the more, that murmured againſt him that was about to do them ſo great a favour. Numb. 14.

V. 21. He goeth on in the hiſtory telling, how the Lord alſo charged their children after they were dead, as is ſhewed Numb. 26. that they ſhould not do like their fathers, v. 15. but they not regarding any charge given them tranſgreſſed as well as their fathers, which moſt probably is ſpoken of the foule ſins by them committed with the daughters of Midian and their idols, in which many thouſands of them periſhed, for it was in the laſt yeer of their travelling in the wilderneſs, whilſt they lived idly in the plaines of Moab, and therefore it is moſt likely, their few fathers, who were alive ſtill to that time, if there were any, ſinned not then in that kind, but their children, of whom it is here ſpoken, for after this immediately followeth their numbring, and it is ſaid, none of them remained alive ſave Caleb and Joſhua. Therefore God was alſo then ſo provoked by them, that he was at the point of deſtroying them againe. Numb. 25.

V. 25. Therefore I gave them ſtatutes, that were not good, That is, by delivering them over to be led after falſe gods, and to their rites, in obſerving which when they thought to procure great grace and favour to themſelves, and to proſper the better and live the longer, they were utterly deceived, their lives being the ſooner cut off, as they were for their ſinning with Baal-peor, and afterwards being planted in Canaan, after the death of Joſhua, they ſmarted much more for following the like rites. Judg. 7. Some, ſaith Calvin, expound this place of the ſtatutes of the decalogue, but notoriouſly amiſs, for both thoſe ſtatutes are ſaid to be ſuch, that a man by doing them ſhall live, and elſwhere it is ſaid, that the commandements are good and righteous and holy. Calvin. But that by ſtatutes here are meant idolatrous ſtatutes, may be gathered from another prophet, who chargeth them to have followed the ſtatutes of Omri, and of the houſe of Ahab. Rom. 7. And for Gods giving them theſe ſtatutes, it was only by delivering them up to a reprobate ſenſe, thus to be blindly led on in a toylſome way of ſuperſtition to the prejudice of their lives both here and hereafter in ſtead of living by ſo doing. Mich. 6. 16. Rom. 1. Whereby we may ſee under what a judgement ſuperſtitious perſons lye, and what will be the end of all their toyle and coſt this way, namely death and deſtruction for evermore. Note.

V. 26. And I polluted them in their gifts, in that they cauſed to paſs through the fire all that openeth the womb, Hebr. in cauſing to paſs through the fire, and this beſt agreeth with that which went before v. 25. the Lord takes it upon himſelf, as being the author of this grievous ſpiritual judgement, whereby they were made to run headlong into ſuch groſs abominations, and becauſe he did it for ſin, it was juſt with him, although abominable in them. Note. But yet it is to be underſtood that he did not this effective, but only permiſſive, leaving them to blindneſs of minde and hardneſs of heart to do thus. In ſaying that he thus polluted their gifts, he intimateth, that they offered alſo gifts to the Lord, as well as their firſt born children to Molock, but becauſe they halted between two opinions, they ſerved God and idols alſo, Note. their offerings to God were made abominable as well as thoſe to falſe gods, for the Lord will not part ſtakes with them, but he ſerved alone and only by rites of his own inſtituting, or elſe he accepts no more of the ſervice offered, then of a moſt unclean thing.

V.27.28,&c The prophet proceeds in reproving them for their groves and high places, wherein they would, notwithſtanding his ſerious prohibitions worſhip him and not at Jeruſalem only, as he appointed, Intimating hereby, that as for the matter, ſo for their circumſtances about his worſhip he cannot indure any but ſuch he hath preſcribed, and not man invented, although it may ſeem to carnally wiſe men to be too great a nakedneſs in divine worſhip to keep now under the N. T. to the ſimple way, by him appointed without veſtments, geniculations or crouchings to the high altar, or croſſings, or adorations, elevations or circumgeſtations of the hoaſt, going in pilgrimage to Jeruſ. to pray there, or to Saints ſhrives, or to ſay prayes by numbers, and often to repeate the ſame, adding alſo prayers to Saints departed and for the dead, with many more deviſed and uſed amongſt the Papiſts, divers from Gods ordaining, and many of them moſt contrary.

V.29. What is the high place, to which yee goe, and the name of it is called Bamah to this day, that is, the high place: hereby he intimateth their ſtiffe perſeverance in that ſin not only of their fathers, but of them alſo, concluding that here was cauſe enough, why he would not by them be inquired of, as he ſpake at the firſt.

V.32. That which cometh into your mind ſhall not be at all, whereas yee ſay we will be as the Heathen, &c. Now the prophet cometh to diſcover their hypocriſie, when in coming to him to inquire they pretended piety towards God, but had ſuch wicked thoughts in their minds, that if they could not have a good anſwer of preſent comfort, they would make an utter defection to the heathen doing as they did, ſerving wood and ſtone, ſuppoſing that hereby they ſhould get the more favour amongſt them, whereas they were now maligned by all nations round about for their ſerving one God differing from all others and in a divers way, but by revolting to them they ſhould be incorporated amongſt them, as one people. Note. And thus ſome carnal profeſſors of the true Religion at this day, when they ſee the worldly felicity of others, and the poor and afflicted eſtate, in which they themſelves are, they begin to think of falling to them.

V.33. But what ſaith the Lord to ſuch, v. 33. As I live, ſaith the Lord, with a mighty hand and a ſtretched out arme and fury powred out, I will rule over you, That is, yee ſhall not, neither will I ſuffer you to do as yee thinke, but as a man doth by his fugitive ſervant, I will bring you back from putting in execution the thing projected by you, but it ſhall be to your ſmart. Note Whereby we may ſee, how hateful a thing it is to God for any of his people for any fear or favour to fall away and to turn heatheniſhly ſuperſtitious, they ſhall be ſure if they have but ſuch a thought in their minds to be ſeverely dealt withal therefore, and ſo they ſhall neither have their will in that reſpect, nor yet ſhall they have any comfort of being the people of the Lord. Wherefore let us take heed of any thoughts of apoſtaſie and reſolve to perſevere in the truth imbraced with what miſeries ſo ever we are at any time beſet.

V.34. And I will bring you out from this people, and gather you from the countryes where ye are ſcattered with a mighty hand and fury powred out. The gathering of them here ſpoken of is to be underſtood of the wicked reprobates of the Jewes, to whom he ſpeaks nothing but terror. Yet they, he ſaith, ſhould be gathered from the Nations, but in ſaying, in fury, he ſheweth plainly, that their bringing back out of captivity ſhould not be in mercy, ſo that they might have joy of it, but that notwithſtanding this ſeeming temporal favour done then, they ſhould after it miſerably periſh in the wilderneſs, as v. 35. wherein he alludeth to thoſe wicked children of Iſrael who were brought out of Egypt indeed, but they all periſhed in the wilderneſs, v. 36.

V.37. And I will make you to paſs under the rod, and I will bring you into the band of the covenant, Vulg. I will ſubject you to my ſcepter, for the word שבט ſignifieth either rod or ſcepter, but becauſe it is ſaid, I will make you to paſs, it is better rendered under the rod, it being hereby ſhewed, that his bringing them into the wilderneſs before ſpoken of ſhould be but in the way of caſtigation, whereby they being

being corrected, but not deſtroyed ſhould from thenceforth come into the band of the covenant made with them of old, not to ſerve any more other Gods, which they had deſperatly reſolved before to do. And this was indeed fulfilled, when returning out of captivity they ſinned not by idolatry any more, except ſome few in the dayes of Antiochus Epiphanes, yet then alſo more for fear, then grod will to ſuch abominations. And although in their return from Babylon to Judea they paſſed through the wilderneſs, as their fathers had done before out of Egypt, v. 35, 36. yet by wilderneſs here that was not meant, but the very land of Judea, which when they came into it lay deſolate as a wilderneſs, wherein they did a long time after ſuffer much, as we may gather both Hag. 1.. where they are ſtirred up to fall to building the temple, which yet lay ruinous, and are told of the great ſcarcity of all things, as in a wilderneſs through the ſpoiling of their corn and vineyards by mildew, catterpillers, canker-worms, and graſhoppers, and alſo long after this Nehem. 1. where one coming from Jeruſ. telleth him of the lying waſte of the place of the ſepulchers of their fathers, which made him very ſad and heavy. Calvin, who illuſtrates that of the rod here ſpoken of by a ſhepheards crook, who hereby numbers his ſheep, not ſuffering any of his number to ſtray away and be loſt, and of a kings muſtering his ſouldiers, that none of them may be ſuffered to go away, although they would, uſing ſevere diſcipline to reduce them, that are running away to the enemy, he I ſay, coming to ſpeak of the band of the covenant ſaith, that it is not meant, that they ſhould hereby be held yet in mercy, but by a divine power ſecretly working and keeping them from the apoſtaſie before ſpoken of, nothing being ſaid of mercy till v. 40.

Calvin.

V. 38.

But from the verſe next following it is plaine, that he diſtinguiſheth betwixt theſe brought into the band of the covenant and wicked reprobates, againſt whom he threatneth to be in ſo great fury. For he ſaith of theſe, I will purge from amongſt you the rebels and them that tranſgreſs, and I will bring them out of the countrey where they ſojourne, and they ſhall not enter into the land of Iſrael. Whereby muſt needs be meant, that although they returned with the reſt into the place, yet it was not againe come to be as the old land of Iſrael flowing with milk and honey, but as a wilderneſs ſtill and a deſolation till they were worn away, becauſe we read nothing in the hiſtory of their return from Babylon, of the death of any by the way. Note hence, that afflictions work not alike upon all to make them cleave faſter to God, but many there are that ſuffer, and beginning to be delivered never attaine full deliverance, but when all danger ſeemeth to be paſt, their greateſt judgement of quite cutting off cometh, and ſuch are all hypocrites and prophane contemners of godlineſs; others who are wrought upon by afflictions to fear God being by them brought into the bands of the covenant, from which they gat looſe before.

Note.

V. 39.

As for you (O houſe of Iſrael) go yee and ſerve every one his idols, &c. According to the diſtinction before ſpoken of here the prophet divideth his ſpeach in this verſe ſpeaking to the wicked, v. 40. to the Elect. To the wicked, go ſerve yee every one his idols, where a queſtion ariſeth, becauſe v. 32. he ſaid, that they ſhould not be permitted to ſerve wood and ſtone, for if ſo, how are they here bidden to do it?

Sol. They are not hereby permitted, but in ſaying thus the Lord declared, that whilſt they did thus, their offerings could not be acceptable to him, as the next words ſhew, pollute you my holy name no more with your gifts and with your idols, for when gifts are offered to God and idols ſerved together, thoſe offerings are polluted, and God is more provoked, then pacified. In bidding them therefore ſerve their idols he ſpeaketh but to the ſame effect that Elijah did, if Baal be God follow after him, and halt not betwixt two opinions, and Revel. 3. Foraſmuch as yee are neither hot nor cold, I would yee were neither hot or cold, to be cold or to follow Baal being preferred before lukewarmneſs, or mingling the ſervice of God and ſuperſtition together. A thing to be noted againſt them, that reforme forme the ſervice of God according to his word in part, but in part are tainted ſtill with ſuperſtitious inventions of men, a papiſt is more tolerable then ſuch a one.

V.40,41,&c Having given the wicked their portion in the former words, now he cometh to the Elect, ſhewing what they ſhould now do, and how acceptable their offerings ſhould be to the Lord, they now loathing much their former evil wayes, whereby we may ſee, that even the Elect are ſometimes in an evil Note. way, but by afflictions they come to be better taught and then they loath that which before they loved and are aſhamed of that, wherein they gloryed. And till a man be brought to this his ſervice and offerings made to God are not ac- Rom. 6. cepted, whereas it is ſaid, That all the houſe of Iſrael, and in the height of Iſrael, ſhall ſerve me, it is to be underſtood, that they only are called Iſrael, that be the Elect, a few yet called all, for all are not Iſrael that be of Iſrael, and the Rom. 6. 9. place is ſaid to be the mountaine of the height of Iſrael, as Eſai. 2. in ſpeaking of the Goſpel times, whereby it appeareth that this alſo is a propheſie chiefly of the Church, which ſhould be in thoſe dayes.

Set thy face towards the South, and drop thy word towards the South, and propheſie againſt the forreſt of the South field. By the South here the Kingdom of Judah and V. 46. ſpecially Jeruſ. is to be underſtood, which ſtood towards the South in the land of Canaan, and by the forreſt the Temple there, ſo called, becauſe built of Cedars taken out of the forreſt of Lebanon, and the thing propheſied is of a V. 47. 48. fire, that ſhould burn it down, as it did, when Nebuzcaradan after the taking of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar came and burnt it, For this the prophet ſheweth how much he was affected with ſorrow, but the wicked Jews made a mock of that which he ſaid, ſaying, he ſpeaketh parables, that is, like a mad man, things which he underſtandeth not himſelf, neither can V. 49. any other man, and therefore he is ridiculous, and his ſayings are not to be regarded.

CHAP. XXI.

V. 1. 2. Having propheſied ch. 20. 46, 47. againſt Jeruſ. by a Metaphorical ſpeach of a forreſt in the South, now he cometh v. 1, 2. plainly to declare what he meant thereby, viz. Jeruſalem, adding alſo Iſrael.

V. 3 And v. 3. to the fire before ſpoken of he addeth that the ſword ſhould ſlay both the righteous and the wicked. Now becauſe this cannot juſtly be done the Sept. hath it the unrighteous and the wicked, the Cald. I will make the righteous flee and deſtroy the wicked. But the words are plaine for ſlaying both alike, which may ſeem ſtrange becauſe ch. 18. the contrary is averred, and ch. 9. the righteous mourning for ſin are marked and ſaved. Sol. That of Ezek. 18. is ſpoaken of particular perſons, he that is righteous ſhall live and not periſh by Gods judgements, as particular wicked perſons ſhall, or rather he ſhall not dye eternally. That of ch. 9. is ſpoken only of thoſe that mourn for ſin, not Note. of all righteous perſons, becauſe there are ſome, that think themſelves ſo Luc. 18. righteous, that they have no need to mourn for their ſins; and ſome, if they mourn for their own, yet they are not affected with grief for other mens, whereby they make themſelves guilty, and ſo in time of common deſtruction are cut off as well as the actors of wickedneſs. For by this means Iſrael was Joſh. 7. ſmitten by the men of Ai, when Achan only had ſinned in the accurſed thing. But for righteous men that acknowledge and are grieved for unrighteouſneſs both in themſelves and others, the word of God is ſure, they ſhall neither Pſ. 91. Pſal. 37. fall by the ſword, peſtilence or famin, together with the wicked, but only by perſecution to ſeal the truth with their blood the moſt righteous are often cut off, but it is to be tranſlated from this to a better life, and if any ſuch be ſeiſed upon by any judgement in common with others, it is either becauſe they want a particular faith, whereby a man gets under the feathers of the almighty, or that being judged here he may not periſh with the world, 1 Cor. 11. 33. becauſe even the beſt have ſome corruption ſtill remaining, which if God thus purgeth, he cannot but be juſtified in ſo doing: Or by the righteous and wicked here we may underſtand Judah and Iſrael, the one ſet forth by the name of the holy places, v. 2. for both are ſpoken of, and v. 4. he threateneth, that the ſword ſhall go through the land not only in the South, as Chap. 20. 47. but from the South to the North, from Judah to Iſrael, the one being a righteous kingdom in compariſon of the other for the ſervice of God there maintained and many holy prieſts living there, and godly princes, whereas in Iſrael there was no one king godly during the whole time, that that kingdom ſtood, as we may ſee in their ſtory.

V. 10. It contemneth the rod of my ſon as every tree, Vulg. thou moveſt the ſcepter of my ſon, thou haſt cut down every tree, Heb. how is the ſcepter of my ſon made glad cutting down every tree? And the meaning is, the ſword here threatened cutting down all the trees of the forreſt, as it ſhall, and bringing the land to deſolation, how is it, that the ſcepter or kingdom of Judah, or the tribe of Judah (for the word שבט ſhebet ſignifieth either) is mercy or rejoyceth, as thinking to eſcape the deſtruction generally coming upon all men meant by trees, through the ſword of the Caldees, and Judah is ſet forth by this name, my ſon, becauſe peculiarly choſen and adopted by God, as it is ſaid of Iſrael, Iſrael is my ſon, my firſt born. And taking it in this ſenſe we have the ſtupidity of the Jewes here complained of, who beeing nothing moved at all Gods threatnings of this ſharpe and bright ſword that was ready to come, made merry, as in former times, eating and drinking and feaſting without fear thereof: a like complaint to which is made by Eſay, The Lord called to faſting, and behold killing of ſheep and oxen, &c. Eſa. 22. 12. and their ſtupidity is aggravated the more by calling Judah his ſon, that is, well educated of God and inſtructed, as Eſa. 1. 2. and by ſaying rod, as N. Tr. hath it, and the word alſo ſignifieth, and then ſpeaking of other nations as trees, which they ſaw by experience by this ſword to be already cut down, and therefore it was madneſs in this petty kingdome that was but a rod or ſtick of a tree in compariſon of a tree, yea many trees, all trees in the Caldees way, to think to ſtand ſtill againſt his puiſſance with which God went along making it irreſiſtible. And to this the Cald. paraphraſt agreeth, Cald. paraph. ſaying, that the tribes of Judah and Benjamin are here taxed for rejoycing at the carrying Iſrael captive, who ſerved idols, although they did the like, being without fear of the ſame judgement to come upon them.

V. 12. It ſhall be upon all the princes of Iſrael, terror by treaſon of the ſword ſhall be upon my people, Vulg. Thus in all the dukes of Iſrael, which fled, they were delivered to the ſword together with my people, expounded by Lyra, Lyra. this ſword of the Caldees ſhall cut off the princes and people, who before eſcaped the ſword of the Aſſyrians, that is, Sennacheribs, when he coming againſt Jeruſalem had his army deſtroyed by an angel, and was made to flee away with ſhame, but the word מגורי ſignifieth not fleeing, but feares or peregrinations, and therefore the words may be rendred, peregrinations were by the ſword to my people, and then the meaning is, they being ſubdued ſhall be carryed away captive, and ſo made to dwel as ſtrangers in a forrein countrey.

V. 13. Becauſe it is a trial, and what if the ſword contemne the rod, it ſhall be no more, ſaith the Lord God, Vulg. Becauſe it is approved, and when it hath overthrown the ſcepter, and it ſhall not be ſaith the Lord; Likewiſe by Lyra expounded, the ſword of the Caldees is allowed by God to be ſharpe enough to do the execution before threatened, and having done this, whereby the kingdom of Judah ſhall be overthrown, that kingdom ſhall have a king no more, for by the ſcepter a kingdom or king is aptly underſtood, Hebr. becauſe trying, and what if even deſpiſing the ſcepter, theſe words being a reaſon of the captivity before threatened, cauſed by the Caldees ſword, as if it had been ſaid, it ſhall be ſo, for it is a ſword of probation to try Judah, both king, princes and people, as often afflictions and judgements are ſpoken of as a refiners fire to purge out droſs, and therefore it ought not to ſeem ſtrange, if the ſcepter or kingdom of Judah be hereby overthrown ſo, as that there ſhall be no more king thereof. The word rendred deſpiſing, ſignifying alſo reprobating or rejecting, that is, the wicked King Zedekiah then reigning, as droſs.

V.15. Let the ſword be doubled the third time againſt the ſlaine. By theſe words it is intimated, that the ſmiting here propheſied of was the third time of their ſmiting by the Caldees. 1. In the dayes of Jehoiakim, 2. of Jehoiakin, 3. of Zedekiah, and now it was doubled being made more ſtrong then ever before to the utter deſtruction of the kingdom of Judah, whereas before it was only weakened and made lower and baſer. And he addeth, it is the ſword of the great men, that are ſlaine, it entereth into their privy chambers, to ſhew, that none were ſo great, but that they ſhould hereby be cut off, ſo hidden in private chambers or other lurking places, but they ſhould hereby be found out and periſh likewiſe.

V. 16. Go thee one way or other, on the right hand or the left, that is ſaith Junius, thou ſword, unto which an apoſtrophe by the Lord is here made, it being meant that which way ſoever it went, it ſhould do execution, for the better expreſſion whereof the Vulg. hath it, Be ſharpened, go to the right hand or left. But Lyra applyeth it to Nebuchadnezzar, who is ſpoken by the name of the ſword of the Lord, as ſometime the king of Aſhur is called his rod or ſtaffe, I will alſo ſmite mine hands together, and cauſe my fury to reſt, that is, when this is doing, I will as it were ſet on Nebuchadnezzar and his men, as men by clapping their hands ſet on dogs to pull down and tear the Bear, with whom they fight, whereby is meant the invincible courage, that he would give unto them to do this work till that al the Lords fury being powred out it ſhould reſt for want of any more ſuch work to do. Some expound it of the Lords expreſſing his grief by ſaying, that he would clap his hands, but Jerom better as hath been already ſaid, he exults as an exhorter of the raging ſword, the Cald. I will bring revenge upon revenge, the prophet was bidden, v. 14. to clap his hands, and v. 12. to ſmite upon his thigh, to ſhew how the Jews ſhould be ſmitten with grief and aſtoniſhment : but now on the contrary ſide the Lord ſaith, that he will clap with his hands in way of exulting for the ſucceſs of his juſtice, as to ſet on Nebuchadnezzar, for ſo the phraſe is often uſed for rejoycing, as Pſal. 47. 1. Lament. 2. 15. 2 King. 11. 12. and in ſome other places.

V.21. The King of Babylon ſtood at the head of the way, at the parting of two wayes to uſe divination, he made his arrows bright, he conſulted with images, he looked into the liver, Vulg. he mingled arrowes, whereupon Jerom ſaith, he took two arrows writing upon the one Jeruſalem, and upon the other Rabbath, then putting them into a quiver together he took one out being blindfolded, upon which ſeeing Jeruſalem written he divined, that he ſhould go with ſucceſs againſt Jeruſalem. And this the prophet ſpeaks, not as if he had already done ſo, but that he would ſhortly do ſo, and then his hand being guided by the Lord, although to him unknown, it ſhould fall out thus, and then he ſhould come indeed and prevaile. But hereby he meant not to ſet up the credit of ſuch divinations uſed by heathens, but only that the divination thus to be made concurring with his propheſie, it ſhould more fully appear that ſo it ſhould be, and they being ſuperſtitious in the ſame kind, as well as the heathen, it was not amiſs hereby to terrifie them the more. And it was no new or ſtrange thing, that God ſhould thus declare things to come to the deſtruction of the wicked by wicked means, ſeeing he revealed ſo great myſteries by Balaam, and by a counterfeit Samuel raiſed up by the witch of Endor to the terrour of Saul, foretelling his terrible ruine. For the Jewes uſing ſuch like divinations, ſee Jerom alſo upon Hoſ. 4. and Cyril and Theophylact, where I have ſpoken more of this and the kind of divination called ῥαβδομαντεία, conſulting with a ſtaffe, Vatab. following the reading in our N. Tr. he made his arrows bright, ſaith that the heads of them being made very bright, the wizzards ſaw as in a glaſs the events to come of ſetting forth to war. But the word קלקל how ever it ſignifieth he poliſhed or made bright, yet it alſo ſignifieth, he made light, whereupon the Cald. and Polychron. ſay, that his ſtanding at the head of two wayes to caſt up two arrows taken together in one hand is meant, obſerving on which hand they fell, whether in the way to Jeruſalem or Rabbath, that he might direct his journey accordingly, and becauſe the word ſignifieth to make light, this moſt probably was meant, he made them light, that they might flee the higher.

Cald. par.
Polychron.

V. 22. At his right hand was the divination for Jeruſ. to open his mouth in the ſlaughter, Lots being caſt and all means of divination uſed, as was before ſaid, it was found that Jeruſalem was the place, againſt which he muſt go and prevaile, then he opened his mouth crying out to his army to bring the battering rams, that is, engines of war like rams, whereby to beat againſt the wals to break them down that they might enter, and to caſt up mounts and to make fortreſſes about it, from which they might fight and ſhoote at them within. Thus the ſiege and making breaches in the walls were deſcribed, as if all this were now in acting; V. 23. v. 23. And it ſhall be to them as a falſe divination in their ſight for them that have ſworne oathes. Here the ſottiſhnes of the Jewes in the midſt of all theſe threatenings is ſet forth to be ſuch, that the ſlighted them, although they were guilty of the foule ſin of perjury in breaking the oath made to the King of Babylon, with which they were alſo before charged, but now it is ſaid oaths, implying, as Junius hath it, their oaths to God alſo in entering into covenant with him, the Vulg. imitating the reſt of the Sabbath, for theſe words, that have ſworne oathes, that is, ſaith Jerom, Nebuchadnezzar by all his preparations working no more againſt Jeruſalem then one reſting on the Sabbath day, Heb. it שבעי שבעות להם which words ſignifie either ſeven ſevens, whereupon ſome think, that Nebuchadnezzars caſting of lots or ſeeking divinations to come againſt them was iterated 49. times over, and ſo was ridiculous, others becauſe שבע ſignifieth a week and the week went by the Sabbath, Sabbaths of Sabbaths, as hath been ſaid. Laſtly ſome becauſe בשבע ſignifieth an oath, render it, ſwearing oathes, as if it were meant the Caldees have ſworn to them, as they had done to the Caldees, whereby they were in covenant together and ſo were ſecure in reſpect of any invaſion. And this ſeemeth to be confirmed by the next words to be the meaning, but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, that they may be taken, that is, the perfidy on their part. But the word שבעי is never put for ſwearing, only the feminine שבעות it by ſome in ſome places rendred oathes, and if we take it for ſeven times ſeven, it may have a good ſenſe thus, it ſhall be a falſe divination in their opinion, to them, as the time at the end of ſeven times ſeven weeks, when the yeer of Jubilee was, if by weeks we underſtand weeks or yeers, or weeks of dayes, becauſe at the end of ſo many weeks came the feaſt of Pentecoſt, being a time of rejoycing for the fruits of the earth plentifully brought forth and reaped. The meaning being, that notwithſtanding all divinations concurring with propheſies againſt them, they feared nothing, being perſwaded, that the preparations of the King of Babylon ſpoken of ſhould come to nothing, and they ſhould ſtill dwell in their own land keeping Pentecoſts and Jubilees ſtill, as alſo they were brought in ſpeaking, Eſa. 22. To morrow ſhall be as this day and much more abundant. And to theſe words thus underſtood do the next well agree, but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, and v. 24. which ſaith the ſame, as if he had ſaid, they think thus, and ſo reſt ſecure, but God remembers that which they forget, or will not acknowledge to be ſin, their idolatry, oppreſſions and other wickedneſſes, and ſo they ſhall be taken.

V. 25. 26. And thou prophane wicked prince of Iſrael, whoſe day is come, when iniquity ſhall have end, remove the diadem, take off the crown, this ſhall not be the man; exalt him that is low, and abaſe him that is high. The Vulg. dome by this means ceaſed in him, Joſidek the high prieſt that ware the golden mitre was carryed away alſo. And Zedekiah is called the prophane Prince for his impiety towards God, and wicked for his injuſtice towards men. Junius and others underſtand by both diadem and crown the enſignes of the Kingdom, for the head of the King uſed to be bound about with a diadem, that is, a fine linen cloth, and then the crown was ſet on. For διαδεῖν ſignifieth to bind about, from which diadema cometh, and the heads of emperours of old were painted with a white broad fillet bound and tyed about. And the ſpeach is directed only to the King, and therefore againſt him only is this ſpoken to ſhew his depoſing and ſo the ceſſation of the Kingdome in him. And prophaneneſs is laid to his charge, becauſe he brake his oath to Nebuchadnezzar, and it is here ſhewed, that there ſhould be no more King after him till Chriſt ſhould come. For although after the captivity there was a prince, and the principality coming to the prieſt, Alexander made himſelf King and ſome others after him, yet thoſe Kings were not worthy the ſpeaking of, the ſtate being then in ſuch a confuſion, and in the time of the Princes, they ruling but as inferiour perſons at the will of other Kings. The low one to be exalted was Chriſt, who was poor and humble, the high one to be brought down wicked Zedekiah, to whom no reſpective termes are given, becauſe the ſpeach cometh, as it were from God, with whom is no reſpect of perſons.

Junius.

For the next words, v. 27. Overturn, overturn, the Vulg. hath it iniquity, iniquity, iniquity, I will make it and this is not done, till he cometh whoſe the judgement is, and I will deliver it to him, expounded by Lyra of the iniquity of Zedekiah, which was threefold, 1. towards God by idolatry, 2. towards the people by oppreſſions, 3. towards Nebuchad. by breaking his oath made unto him. For him who is ſaid to come whoſe the judgement is, he underſtandeth by him Nebuchadnezzar, who judged Zedekiah, killing his children before his face, then putting out his eyes and carrying him unto Babylon, and ſo the crown was delivered by God, as it were unto him. And by the low one ſaid to be exalted, v. 26. he will have David meant, who was humble, and low in condition, when he was taken from being a ſhepheard to be a glorious King; and by the high, Zedekiah: although the Rabbins, he ſaith, by the low underſtand Gedaliah, who was not of the blood royal, yet by Nebuchad. advanced to be governor of the people left in the land. Jerom by thoſe words, this exalts him that is low, and abaſeth him that is high, for ſo he renders the words, v. 26. Hæc exaltat humilem, underſtands it of the crown, which whilſt it was upon the head of Zedekiah, did this, lifting up by his royal power to high places the unworthy that were his flatterers, but putting down to make way for them, ſuch as were high. And coming to ſpeak of him, to whom judgement is given, this he ſaith was to Chriſt to whom all judgement is committed by the Father, before whoſe coming again none hath the crown, but to him it was delivered, as properly pertaining to him; Before that if any took the crown upon him, it was iniquity iniquity, that is, manifold iniquity, as in Hircanus the prieſt, that would be King, when it belonged not unto him, but he was miſtaken in the name, for Alexander was the firſt that took this honor upon him. Heb. it is עוה alſo ſignifying to do wickedly, or perverſly, to pervert, but ſtill in the ſame ſenſe, and therefore the Vulg. here is beſt, and I ſee no reaſon why we may not follow the expoſition of Jerom: Junius for perverte, hath perverſam reddam illam, and in expounding it, evertam, which way I confeſs the ſenſe commonly received would be good if the word would bear it, the crown ſhall no more be ſet upon the head of any man till Chriſt cometh; And he ſaith, the ſame word is often repeated to ſhew, that the crown of Judea was often overthrown by Nebuchadnezzar, in Jehoiakim, Jehoiakin and Zedekiah, even thrice according to the times here ſpoken of. Some that for overturn have, make crooked or to ſtand awry, apply the three times, one to Nebuchadnezzar 2. to the Kings of Syria and Egypt, 3. to the Romans, but this is far fetcht and the time of the Romans overthrowing Jeruſalem which was after Chriſts coming agreeth not, and therefore I reſt in that before going, when the crown ſhould be taken from Zedekiah they ſhould do perverſly, that ſhould preſume to put it on till Chriſt ſhould come, both Alexander, Ariſtobulus, and Hircanus, being three high prieſts one after another that did ſo, but with very ill ſucceſs, as may be ſeen in my continuation of the hiſtory at the end of Heſter. Yet it is not meant, that the government of Judah ſhould quite ceaſe before Herod, in whoſe dayes Chriſt was to come, which time it was Note. before propheſied, that it ſhould continue, Gen. 49. 10. And ſo it did continue firſt in princes of Judah, untill the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, who cut them off, then in high prieſts of Levi indeed by the fathers ſide, and of Judah by the mothers, till the ſaid Herod coming put an end to their principality alſo. Therefore it is to be noted, that he ſaith evert, evert, evert I will make it, but pervert, that is, turn it another way making it ſtand awry and not aright, as formerly it did, by ſetting up princes for Kings, and ſo making the Kingdome low and baſe in compariſon of that, which it hath been.

Having hitherto ſpoken againſt Judah, as whereupon the lot fell firſt, now V. 28.
he cometh to the Ammonites, of whoſe City Rabbath before v. 20. the one on the right hand, the other on the left, having therefore done with Judah on the right, now he cometh to Ammon on the left, whoſe inhabitants are alſo threatened with deſtruction, and that by a bright and ſharpe ſword, as Judah. And here alſo it is added, Whileſt they ſee vanity and divine a lye to thee, to bring thee upon the neckes of them that are ſlaine, of the wicked, whoſe day is come when their iniquity is at an end, the ſame words being uſed that were at the end of v. 25. the word עון ſignifying either iniquity or ſorrow ſuffered for it, and if we render it word for word in either place, it is in the time of the end of iniquity, whereby is meant, that they ſhould have their turn to ſuffer by the ſword of Nebuchadnezzar next after the Jews. Here by thoſe that ſaw vanity and lyes for them, he meaneth their idolatrous prieſts amongſt the Ammonites, who when they heard, that Nebuchad. came by divinations a-gainſt them, ſaid, that they had anſwer from their gods, that he ſhould not come, but herein they were ſeers of vanity, &c. for he ſhould certainly come and deſtroy them alſo. But truſting to theſe idolatrous prieſts, when they were confident, that they ſhould be ſafe, he ſaith they ſhould fall upon the necks of the ſlaine, that is, ſoon after thoſe wicked ones of Judah. And herein they are threatened more then Judah; becauſe he ſaith not only, that they ſhall be ſlaine in their own countrey by bruitiſh men and skilfull to deſtroy, v. 29, 30, 31. but alſo that they ſhould be no more remembred v. 32. V. 29.
whereas touching Judah he ſpeaketh but of a perverting till one cometh, that V. 32.
ſhal have the crown again. The Ammonites being herein made a figure of ſuch as are deſtroyed for ever in hell, who are as theſe fewel for the fire, and Note.
no more thought upon to have mercy extended to them for ever.

iron, in the midſt of the ardent fire of Gods wrath burning, and kept here till they were as ſilver and theſe baſer metals melted together by the famine,

Then *v.*30. he ſaith, that he looked for one to make up the hedge, to ſtand in the gap, but abounding in Jeruſ. if he could have found ſome righteous perſons there that had by fervent prayer ſought to make up the hedge, and as Moſes ſtood in the gap, that ſin had made there, by earneſt oppoſing themſelves againſt evil, ſeeking the reformation of the City, he would not have proceeded to bring breach in the hedge of Gods providence about a ſtate. 2. When it is thus, Note.

God looks that his faithful ſervants ſhould make it up againe by prayer and oppoſing ſinful courſes, and ſo being himſelf righteous, he is a maker up of the breach. 3. There muſt yet, for the ſaving of a ſtate from utter ruine, be a competent number of ſuch men therein, and then Gods mercy is ſuch, that for their ſakes, the whole ſhall be ſaved in the moſt dangerous times, yet none wicked ſhall for anothers ſake be ſaved eternally, but only temporally, there being for all ſuch another time of reckoning, when they ſhall not eſcape everlaſting deſtruction both of ſoul and body, which may make us ſtill to live in hope, that England ſhall ſtand, wherein I doubt not, but that there be ſome in every place, and many in populous places throughout the land, that fear God, and pray and labour earneſtly againſt ſin daily, the number of whom God increaſe.

Therefore have I powred upon them the fire of mine indignation,&c. Becauſe it was not V. 31. ſo in Jeruſalem, but righteous men faded altogether, the Lord here threatneth them with a flood of judgements according to the overflowing of their ſins, and he ſpeaks of this, as a thing paſt, although to come for the certainty of the judgement.

CHAP. XXIII.

IN this chap. the prophet ſets forth at Gods direction the ſame, that he did cha.
16. but with this difference, there he plainly without any parable laid open their ſins, here by a parable of Aholah and Aholibah, to the firſt of which he compareth Samaria, the head City of the kingdom of Iſrael, and to the other the kingdom of Judah, which theſe names ſerved moſt aptly to ſet forth, for Aholah V. 4. ſignifieth a tent, and Aholibah, a tent or tabernacle in her, or the one her tabernacle; the other my tabernacle in her, Samaria being ſo called, becauſe her tabernacle, to which ſhe reſorted to worſhip her golden calf was at Bethel, and likewiſe at Dan, and in Jeruſ. was the tent of God where Judah worſhipped. Both theſe are ſaid to have fornicated in Egypt, becauſe their idolatry had the original from thence, where both they had of old been idolaters, as hath been ſhewed upon Ch. 20. 7. and they learned to worſhip an oxe or calfe. But this was not all their ſin, but firſt Aholah went further in committing idolatry 2 Kings 17. with the Gods of the Aſſyrians, for which and for other foule ſins ſhe was deſtroyed by the ſame Aſſyrians. Then Aholibah was ſo far from being amended by her puniſhment, that ſhe did worſe, in that ſhe ſerved idols and burnt her ſons and daughters to them in ſacrifice, and from this abominable ſin came to the houſe of God to worſhip him, who abhorreth more thoſe, that do ſo

I would thou wert either hot or cold.

And in ſpeaking of Aholibah and her whoredoms with the Babylonians, and with how great love ſhe was carryed towards them, he ſaith yet v. 17. that her V. 17. affection was alienated from them, and likewiſe v. 22. whereby he meaneth her leaving the Caldean and confederating with the Egyptian, as Zedekiah, the laſt 2 Kings 25. King of Judah did even contrary to his oath after that he had ſerved the King of Babylon three yeers. For all her ſins therefore and for this as a capital one Judah or Aholibah is threatened with deſtruction. And in amplifying this deſtruction, he ſaith, v. 25. They ſhall take away thy noſe and thine eares, becauſe they V. 25. uſed to do thus to adultereſſes, to cut off their noſes, and to perjured perſons to cut off their ears ſetting them upon the pillory to their greateſt diſgrace.
Therefore hereby is ſhewed, that the Jewes ſhould not only ſuffer moſt extreamly by fire and ſword, but alſo by being otherwiſe debaſed and moſt ignominiouſly uſed.

V. 23. I will bring them againſt thee on every ſide, the Babylonians, Caldeans; Pekod, Shoah, and Koa, and the Aſſyrians, v. 24. And they ſhall come againſt thee with chariots, waggons and wheels, &c. The Vulg. for Pekod hath noble men, tyrants and princes, and for the firſt of theſe Jerom ſaith, that the Latine ſimplicity hath ternos ſtatores Hieron. expounding it of thoſe that were the third from the King, but the Sept. he ſaith, hath it triſtatas, as they were called, that were ſecond to the King, 1 Chron. 11.
it is ſaid of ſome of Davids worthies, that they attained not to the firſt three, they were princes of horſe and foot, magiſtrates of either Militia. But the Junius. Cald. retaines the proper names of Pekod, Shoa and Goa. And Junius ſaith, that they were countreys lying in Aſſyria, of which ſee before, Jer. 50. 21. That of cutting off the noſe and the eares is by Pet. Damianus applyed to John an antipope, who like a thief came to the pontifical ſeate putting down Gregory, for which he was taken and had his noſe and eares cut off and then ſet upon an horſe with his face to his taile, being made to hold his taile inſtead of a bridle to his great ignominy and diſgrace.

The reſt of the ch. is ſpent in further dilating upon their puniſhments and the V. 41. cauſe therof, their ſins, eſpecially idolatry, in ſpeaking of which v. 41. he ſaith, Thou haſt upon a table prepared ſet mine incenſe and mine oyle, which is ſo ſpoken becauſe that to ſerve their idols they robbed God, to whom ſuch oblations properly belonged, and they had both theſe and all other things of his donation, which aggravated their ſin againſt him, in that they ſo foully diſhonored him with his own, which ſhould have gone to the honouring of him, according to that, Honour the Lord with thy ſubſtance and with the firſt fruites of all Pro. 3. 9. thine increaſe.

V. 42. The voice of a multitude being at eaſe was in her, Vulg. of a multitude exulting, whereby is ſhewed with what joy and mirth with ſinging to the honour of their idols they were in that abominable ſervice, the word Hebr. שלובח, which if it be derived from שלח ſignifieth, they were at eaſe, or in peace: but there is a radix שלו ſignifieth a quaile, and this word haply is here put to expreſs their rejoycing before their idols, as quailes males and females coming together through ſalacity exult greatly, ſo they committing whoredom with idols. And with the men of the common ſort were brought Sabeans from the wilderneſs, Vulg they that of the multitude of men were brought and came out of the wilderneſs. The word סובאים rendred in N. Tr. Sabeans ſignifieth drunkards, and therefore it is ſo rendred by the Sept. the Vulg. ſeemeth to miſtake ס here uſed for ש, and ſo read it, as if it were שבאים, which come, as if it came of באים but it is beſt to keep to the Hebr. verity, which hath it, drunkards, for nothing was more common then at idolatrous feaſts to drink drunken, yea idolaters are ſet forth as drunkards, Eſa. 29. 9. and before in this chap. v. 33. it is ſaid, thou ſhalt be filled with drunkenneſs, when their puniſhment is ſpoken of for idolatry, the idolater being compared to one that drinketh his head is intoxicated with errour, whereby he madly goeth after idols, and at laſt he is made to drink of the cup of Gods wrath, whereby he is ſo gone, as with the ſtrongeſt drink that he ſtumbleth and falleth and riſeth up no more, but periſheth for ever.

If any yet will underſtand Sabeans, or Ethiopians, or Tartars inhabiting the wilderneſſe, becauſe it is ſaid, that he came from the wilderneſſe, it may have a good ſenſe ſo, the Jewes were ſo ſtupendiouſly addicted to this ſpiritual adultery of idolatry, that in this way they refuſed not the ſociety, or conjunction with the baſeſt of all others, the blacke Ethiopians, and the theeviſh Tartars, who ranged continually about the wilderneſs to rob paſſengers; or this of coming from the wilderneſs may well be applyed to drunkards, who are as rude and rugged condition'd as thoſe that are brought up in the wilderneſs and void of all civility.

V. 45. The righteous men ſhall judge them after the manner of adultereſſes, , that is, the Caldees, into whoſe hands they ſhould come. But how they be called righteous? Anſ. for their executing of the ſentence of the righteous judge upon them without any partiality, and not for any righteouſneſs, that was in in themſelves, for they were wicked idolaters, as the Jewes were, and lived in all other ſins, as they did, only it is probable, that they kept covenants, to which they were ſworn, better then the Jews, and were more morally righteous, the great ones towards the inferiour ſort under their dominion, not being ſo oppreſſive: whereunto we may alſo adde, that they were altogether addicted to the Religion of which they were, and were not a compound of linſie-woolſie, halting betwixt two opinions, as the Jews did, neither did they injoy ſuch means, living in darkeneſs and without the light of the word, which the Jews injoyed. And therefore in compariſon of them they Note. were righteous. Whence note, that they who live under means, and yet are wicked, are ſo wicked, that the very barbarous heathen are more righteous Matth. 11. then they; Sodom and Gomorrah, then Chorazin and Bethſaida; Tyrus and Matth. 12.

truth and liveth under the teaching thereof, but is wicked, may juſtly fear to be given over into the hands of heathens, Turkes and Infidels and Papiſts, to V. 47. be by them judged, as they deſerve, that is, with ſtoning, as v. 47. as adulterers and adultereſſes ought by the law of God to be ſerved, and having their houſes burnt, and others of them ſlaine with the ſword together with their children.

CHAP. XXIV.

IN this chap. the Lord biddeth Ezekiel ſet down the yeer, moneth and day in which Nebuchadnezzar began his ſiege of Jeruſalem, viz. three yeers after he Ch.1.1. had begun to propheſie unto them, which was the ſixth yeer of Jehoiakins captivity, this the tenth yeer, the tenth moneth, the tenth day of the moneth.
And now his propheſie of their deſtruction began to work, and this the Lord 2 King. 25. would moſt probably have him note, after which it is alſo noted in the hiſtory upon what day and moneth after the City was taken, that it might be certainly known at what time the ſeventy yeers of their continuing in captivity ſpoken of by Jeremiah began, and conſequently their end; that they might be comforted the more in looking for deliverance at that time, and the more confidently praying for it, as Daniel did.

For the contents of this chapter: The miſerable caſe of the Jews is herein ſet forth under the ſimilitude of a pot, wherein fleſh and bones chopt in pieces being ſet over an hot burning fire are boiled till they be conſumed and waſted all. Of the like ſimilitude ſee Jer. 1.13. The pot here ſpoken of V. 3.4. was Jeruſ. the parts or peices of fleſh to be ſodden away in it were the Jews; flocking thither from all parts for the defence of the City; the bones were the ſtouteſt and moſt expert warriours, and the boiling of them all, that they might be conſumed, intimated a long continued ſiege, by reaſon whereof they ſhould be waſted, ſome after, others by famine and peſtilence, the fire V. 10. made under with much wood ſerved to ſet forth the Caldees army which was to them as this fire, and finally with fire burnt down the City. But V. 5. what meaneth he by ſaying, burn the bones under it? not as ſome expound it, Lyra. ſaith Lyra, beccuſe bones make a more ardent fire then wood, for the contrary is true, but as R. Salòmon hath it, the putting of the bones under was the putting of them under the pieces of fleſh, the fleſh being laid upon them and born up by them lying at the bottom of the pot: and hereby was ſet forth, how the ſtrong and valiant ſhould bear the greateſt brunt of this war, but yet their ſtrength ~~and valour~~ ſhould not ſave them; the ſtronger they were the more fiery heat ſhould come neerer to them to conſume them.

V. 6. Woe to the bloody City, to the pot, whoſe ſcum is in it, bring it out piece by piece, let no lot fall upon it. Here it is made plaine, that the City was the pot having abundance of corruption therein, ſet forth by ſcum, and the pieces to be brought forth, upon which no lot ſhould fall, were the people, whereof none ſhould be preſerved, but be burnt and conſumed by the fire of Gods wrath, as the contrary to which is uſed to be done, when the enemy ſpares ſome, by lots caſting, diſtinguiſhing thus betwixt thoſe that ſhould dye or not, it is meant that it ſhould not now be ſo with them, but all ſhould ſuffer alike, that is, all but ſome poor of the land left to till the ground, the reſt that eſcaped the ſword, famine and peſtilence, being carryed away to Babylon to endure greater miſery, and ſuch as remained not tarrying long after, but being carryed into Egypt to periſh there, as the hiſtory, Jer. 43. ſheweth, which yet is to be reſtrained to the body of reprobates, the elect often ſet forth by the name of a remnant being every where ſpared.

V. 7. Her blood is in the midſt of her, ſhe ſet it upon the top of a rock, and covered it not:
Here their impudency in ſinning is ſet forth, oppreſſions and murthers were committed openly, they not caring who ſaw them in practiſing ſo great abominations, and he alludeth to the law of God, which was, that blood being let out of a beaſt ſhould be covered in the ground. But they in ſtead of doing ſo, ſhed mens blood, and not in ſecret, but openly, and a rock is ſpoken of, as oppoſite to the earth, which hath duſts or moulds to cover the blood ſhed withal, whereas rocky and ſtony ground hath none, and therefore by the Vulg. it is rendred, lympidiſſima rupes. Thus they ſhed the blood of the prophets, and of their children, whom they offered openly to Molok, and Abimeleck according to the letter is ſaid to have ſlaine his brethren being Judg. 9. 5. ſeventy upon a ſtone, and Eſ 3. 9. They are open in their ſins with Sodom, they hide them not. And this is the height of ſinning, when blood is ſhed by power, or other horrible wickedneſs is committed, and juſtified, as if the proceedings were righteous, becauſe they that do this have power, and they to whom, Note. have no power to reſiſt. But the judge who is the righteous judge of all the world threateneth revenge by doing the like to all ſuch v. 8. I have ſet her blook V. 8. upon the top of a rock, that it ſhould not be covered, as they have murdered openly combining together ſo to do, as the foreſaid Abimeleck, and the Jews more lately, ſo they ſhall ſuffer by the ſhedding of their blood in like manner in the ſight of all men, as both Abimelek did by a piece of a milſtone caſt down upon his head, and beating out his braines, and the Jews moſt cruelly murthered by the Caldeans, and the chief of them being brought forth and judged and ſlaine by the king of Babylon at Riblah, the King Zedekiah himſelf not directly, but with much more paine, his eyes being put out, and then he being carryed into Babylon and dying there.

Heap on wood, kindle the fire, conſume the fleſh, ſpice it well and let the bones be V. 10. burnt. The Vulg. for ſpice it well, hath coquatur tota compoſitio, let the whole compoſition be boiled, The word רקח here uſed ſignifieth to make a compoſition of ſpices and to boile them, and therefore it is beſt rendred by the Vulg. Lat. boile the compoſition of ſpices, uſe them as the Apothecary doth his Aromatical ſtuffe of divers ſorts keeping them upon the fire a long time till all the vertue be boiled out. To ſhew the long continuance of the judgement upon them, he addeth this metaphor to the former of boiling fleſh and bones.

Then ſet it empty upon the coales, that the braſs thereof may be hot and burn. He goeth V. 11. in his allegory, ſhewing that the inhabitants of the City being conſumed and ſuch as remained taken out to be carryed into captivity, and ſo the whole 2 Kings 25.
City emptyed, fire ſhould be put to to burn the buildings, as it was by Nebuzaradan ſhortly after who was ſteward of the King of Babylon.

Becauſe I purged thee, and thou waſt not purged, thou ſhalt not be purged any more, V. 13.
&c. that is, thy judgements ſent upon thee formerly and prophets to threaten and exhort thee, whereby thou mightſt have been brought to repentance and newneſs of life; this being called a purging, becauſe a moſt effectual means thus to purge a nation. And for this way of purging, what grievous ſufferings they had, may be ſeen in the days of Manaſſeh, againſt whom the Caldeans came and took and carryed him away into Babylon, then in the dayes of Jehoaaz by the King of Egypt, of Jehoiakim by the Babylonians again taking and binding him, then of Jehoiakin when they ſuffered moſt, and laſtly of Zedekiah, againſt whom bands of divers enemies came before this fatal overthrow of the whole Kingdom now threatened; and for prophets, they had Iſaiah, and Hoſheah long before, and now Jeremiah and Ezekiel. So that they were purged, that is, had all means of purgation adminiſtred unto them although they wrought not, therefore no more ſuch purging muſt be expected but utter deſtruction, Gods fury ſeazing upon a people ſo deſperately wicked: v. 16. I will take away the deſire of thine eyes with a ſtroake, &c. Here the V. 16.
Lord further ſheweth in the example of Ezekiel, that the deſtruction of the people ſhould be ſo great, and the danger ſtill ſo continuing to the ſurvivors, that they ſhould be ſo overwhelmed with grief therefore, that they ſhould not make any mourning, as they had in times paſt uſed to do for the death of their deareſt friends.

For this end his wife was ſmitten by death and he was forbidden to mourn for her, and being asked the reaſon he telleth them, that ſo it ſhould be with them, v. 20, 21, 22. As his wife was the deſire of his eyes, whom V. 20. 21. &c. he dearly loved, ſo was the ſanctuary to them, as taking their chief glory to lye therein, and if any of them were not ſo much affected to it, yet ſurely they were to their ſons and daughters, but their ſanctuary ſhould be burnt

and their children dye, yet they ſhould be as men ſo overgone with ſorrow, that they ſhould have no more tears to ſhed for this, all the mourning, that they could now make, being little enough for their mutual miſeries, who were ſtill living in compariſon of whom they ſhould think the dead happy. A like thing unto this was injoyned Jeremiah before, ch. 16. 6, 7, 8. the expoſition whereof may ſerve for this alſo.

V. 22.23. But what meaneth he by ſaying, Yee ſhall not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of men, your tires ſhall be upon your head and your ſhoes upon your feet. The Vulg. for covering lips, hath covering ora, faces, or mouths, and for not eating the bread of men, the bread of mourners, and for tyre upon their heads, Corona, a crown, expounded by Lyra of black which cloſe mourners weare about their heads covering alſo their faces therewith, and of an auſtere diet, to which mourners for the time tyed themſelves, refuſing the daintyer, and more liberal for ſorrow. The crown of tyre ſets forth nothing elſe, but that which they did commonly wear upon their heads for the greater decency, and of ſhoes keeping on upon their feet he ſpeaketh, becauſe in time of ſorrow they went bare footed, as we may ſee in David full of ſorrow for the conſpiracy of Abſalom againſt him, He went with his head covered and barefoot, that is, his crown, or other tire, which he commonly uſed, being laid off, that he might put on a mourning habit covering head and face. The Hebr. word שפם here uſed ſignifieth the haire upon the lip, as שפה doth the lip or ora, as the Vulg. hath it, and if it be rendred the lip, by a Synecdoche, the whole being named for the part, the upper lip for the haire growing upon it, it is all one, becauſe the face being all covered, that is covered alſo. But for the word rendred by the Vulg. mourners, Hebr. is אנשים, men, but it muſt neceſſarily be underſtood of men, that mourn, it being meant of feaſts made at burials, as I have further ſhewed upon Jer. 16 8. for now the Jews ſhould be in ſo great perplexity, that they ſhould make no ſolemn funerals, as at other times they had done, wherein they uſed to eat and drink to the father, or husband, or ſon of the deceaſed in a cup of a conſolation, as Jeremy calleth it, to chear him up, after ſome time by him before ſpent in abſtinence through his great ſorrow. v. 25. when I take away their ſtrength, the joy of their glory, the deſire of their eyes, and that whereupon they ſet their minds. Here the prophet to conclude the Chapter ſummeth up their loſſes, when their City ſhould be deſtroyed and their temple eſpecially, called before, the *excellency of your ſtrength, and the deſire of your eyes, v.*21. when this ſhould be taken away by being burnt with fire, their ſtrength ſhould faile becauſe the place of meeting to plant Religion which is the temple, being prophaned, as is there ſaid, or cruelly demoliſhed, which is done, when the houſe of God is made no more account of then a barn or a ſtable, or any room in a mans own houſe, we are in danger of loſing Gods protection, and conſequently our joy, glory, deſire of our eyes, &c. that is, all comfort, and contrariwiſe to lye expoſed to all miſery and ſorrow. For then is a Nation in an happy caſe, when they make the houſe of God amongſt them their chief ſtrength, the maintaining of that, and the reverent worſhipping of God their joy and glory, no object is ſo pleaſing to them, as to ſee the beauty of the ſanctuary, neither are they ſo well ſatisfied in their ſouls with any thing, as when they have been there to worſhip, and to hear Chriſt teaching in the Miniſtry of his word for the divine conſolation that they have hereby. The words rendred wherein their ſoul reſteth, are משא נפש, the elevation or burthen of your ſouls, that is, the thing about which your mindes are moſt charged with care and fear, being ſollicitous for it, as Eli was for the Arke of God, when it was carryed out againſt the Philiſtims, leſt the place or worſhip there exhibited ſhould be any way perverted or corrupted. And the rendring by burthen in this ſenſe is rather to be preferred, then elevation, becauſe this as their joy and glory was ſpoken of before. A paſſage worthy our conſideration, amongſt whom the houſes of God are ſo much vilified aud undervalued, other meeting houſes being rather preferred before them, and they turned into priſons, ſtables, lodging roomes, and what not? ſome to ruinous heaps.

V. 26.27. and glory being thus taken away, the Lord telleth him, that ſome who eſcaped with their lives ſhould come and tell him thereof in the Caldees countrey, and then he ſhould be no more dumb, but open his mouth and ſpeak, and they ſhould know, that he was the Lord, and that Ezekiel had not been a portentum or ſigne unto them in vaine, all things being come to paſs, which he by parables before propheſied of, but he was then notwithſtanding no otherwiſe thought upon, but as a dumb man, but now he ſheweth, that he ſhould ſpeak, and the Jews ſchooled by ſufferings ſhould thenceforth hearken willingly to his inſtructions, being hereby brought to know and fear God, which they would not formerly do. And of the fulfilling of this, ſee ch. 33. 21, 22. whence note, that they who are unteachable, whilſt they are in a proſperous

Eſa. 28. 11. the Prophet Eſay threateneth the indocible with teaching by men of another tongue to their coſt, and with a liſping lip, intimating their deriding them.

CHAP. XXV.

The Prophet having hitherto declared the judgements to come upon Iſrael, and touched a little upon the Ammonites, chap. 21. 28. now propheſieth again, both againſt the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites and Philiſtims, becauſe they rejoyced at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem and the temple, as bearing Note. alwayes a deadly hatred againſt the Jews for the Religions ſake. Whence note how great a ſin it is for the wicked and ſeduced by errour in Religion to hate the profeſſours of the truth. For this the wrath of God ſhall burn againſt them untill they be deſtroyed, and likewiſe it ſhall be to all wicked men that rejoyce at the fall of Gods people, although for their ſins worthy to be ſo ſeverely corrected, becauſe this is to rejoyce at the diſhonor of the true God, and at the pulling down of the Religion, which he hath ſet up to the incouraging of men in a falſe Religion, as being nothing inferiour to the true, V. 4. yea rather ſuperiour, which the living God will never endure. Whereas v. 4. the Lord threateneth to deliver the Ammonites into the hands of the men of the Eaſt; ſome hereby underſtand the Medes and the Perſians, ſome the Arabians, who dwelt Eaſtward from Ammon, and abounded with cattel, and ſpecially with Camels, for which it is further ſaid v. 5. I will give Rabbah to be Hieron. ſtables for Camels, that is, the Ammonites chief City. But Jerom by the men of the Eaſt underſtandeth the Caldees, whoſe King Nebuchadnezzar ſought divinations to go either againſt Jeruſalem firſt or againſt Rabbah of the Ammonites Jer. 49. Ioſeph. Antiq. l. 10. c. 11. ch. 21. 21. and having deſtroyed Jeruſalem, he within five yeers after went againſt and deſtroyed Ammon, as Joſeph. ſaith, but of the Arabians doing it V. 9. we no where read. v. 9. I will open the ſide of Moab from his Cities, which are on his frontiers, the Vulg. for ſide hath ſhoulder, as wherein a mans chief ſtrength lyeth, the meaning is, that as the ſide being opened an entrance is given into the body through the ribs for the deſtruction thereof, becauſe the ſtrongeſt defence is taken away, ſo the frontier Cities of Moab, which were ſtrongeſt ſhould not hinder the Caldeans from entring the countrey, and therefore it ſhould not be able to ſtand againſt their forces, but be ſubdued and overthrown. Thus the two peoples that came of Lot, for their hatred and inhumanity againſt the Iſraelites their kindred, were adjudged to deſtruction.

And

V.12. And next unto them the poſterity of Eſau or Edom, which ſtood in neerer relation to them, for Eſau was Iſraels brother, and here it is laid to their charge, that they took revenge upon Judah, that is, helping the Caldees in deſtroying Jeruſalem, as is ſaid, Obadiah v. 14. and Pſal. 137. Therefore the V.14. Lord threatneth revenge againſt them by the hand of Iſrael, which how it is to be underſtood, ſee Jerem. 49. 2.

V.15. The Philiſtims are alſo threatened, as old enemies, as alſo Obad. v. 19. and Jer. 47. where enough hath been ſpoken of Gods judgements upon them, and their ſubduing afterwards to Iſrael. The word rendred South is Teman ſignifying the South, and was the chief City of the Edomites.

V. 16. The Cherethim v. 16. which he ſaith, he would cut off; ſpeaking by a Paranomaſie, for כרית ſignifieth to cut off, were a people of the Philiſtims, who came with David from thence, and were together with the Pelethites his guard, of whom ſee 2 Sam. 15. Note.

CHAP. XXVI.

THis whole Chap. is a propheſie againſt Tyrus a ſtrong and proud City upon the ſea, of which it hath been often ſpoken, eſpecially Eſa. 23. and the cauſe of the deſtruction thereof was the ſame that brought Ammon and Moab, &c. to ruine, her rejoycing at the fall of Jeruſalem.

V. 4. I will alſo ſcrape her duſt from her and make her like the top of a rock. This is ſpoken to ſhew the utter ruine of Tyre, being ſo overturned, as that not ſo much as any earth ſhould be left there, but as the City was built upon a rock, and the earth that was about it was brought from other places to make gardens, ſo that being now thrown down into the ſea, it ſhould be left, V. 6. as a bare rock, as it was at the firſt. v. 6. her daughters ſhall be ſlaine in the feild, that is, Zidon and other Cities in ſubjection to Tyrus, as the mother City.

V. 14. Whereas it is threatened, that Tyrus ſhould be built no more, yet Eſa. 23. 15. it is ſaid, that it ſhould be built after ſeventy yeers, the meaning is, not to be the head of a Kingdom, for although it were built againe in the time of the Perſians, yet neither was it built by Tyrians, the poſterity of the old inhabitants, but by others, neither was it a Kingdome, or free City any more but tributary.

V. 19. He ſpeakes of great waters brought upon her, meaning great forces, but called waters in alluding to the ſituation of Tyre, which was upon the ſea. For although the foundation of the City were an high rock, yet it is ſaid to be overflown with waters, and to go into the pit, becauſe places drowned are never any more ſeen, but ly perpetually in the bottom of the ſea, as in a pit.

V. 20. The going down of Tyre into the pit, is further illuſtrated by comparing her going down with that of the old world long agoe, intimating hereby, at Jerom hath it, the Tyrians deſtruction both temporally and eternally in the pit of hell, When I ſhall ſet glory in the land of the living, that is, I ſhall glorifie my ſervants and bleſs them with eternal life in my heavenly Kingdom.

CHAP. XXVII.

IN this Chap. that the ruine of Tyrus might appear to be the greater, the prophet ſetteth forth at large the wealth and magnificence of that City, and the great command thereof over other places, ſo that it might ſeem to be of incomparable ſtrength and invincible. Here is nothing that needeth expoſition, till we come to v. 11. The Gammadims were upon thy towers, whereby becauſe the word ſignifieth a cubit, ſome ſaith Junius, underſtand men but one cubit high, viz. the pygmies, but how probable this is, let the reader judge, forſomuch as they are ſpoken of as part of the forces, which ſtood to defend Tyre. He therefore conjectureth, that the word is not proper, but appellative, by Gammadim cubit men, ſtrong armed men being underſtood to draw the bow and ſhoote moſt mightily. Yet there were a people of this name, who as Pliny ſaith inhabited a region in Phenicia lying upon the ſea in the form of a cubit, being from thence called Gammadim, which region was devoured long agoe by the ſea.

Junius.

Plin. nat. hiſt. l. 2. c. 91.

V. 17. Touching wheat of Minnith, v. 17. this was a City of the Ammonites ſmitten by Iphtah and brought under long agoe, ſee Judg. 11. 35. and the wheat here growing moſt probably was of the, fineſt ſort, and of panag, that is Phenicia, as Junius hath it, Panag alſo ſignifieth balſome, whereby the Vulg. therefore rendereth it, or it is the proper name of a place, or ſignifieth a kind of potheard, and for wheat of Minnith, the Vulg. hath triticum primum, the principal wheat, reſpecting rather the ſenſe, then the word or name.

V. 18. The wine of Helbon is by the Vulg. called fat wine, the Scholiaſt thinketh the City Malmaſia to be meant, which afforded a moſt delicate wine called Malmſey, but then it muſt be of Damaſcus in Syria, of which he is ſpeaking, not of Crete.

V. 19. For Moſel the Sept. hath vagabundus, as if ſome ſort of merchants were meant that for traffick went up and down to all parts, the word מאוזל ſignifieth tranſlated, N. Tr. agreeably to this, going to and fro.

CHAP. XXVII.

HAving ſpoken againſt the whole City of Tyre in the two former Chapters, here he cometh in particular to charge the prince with intolerable pride and ſelf-conceitedneſs in reſpect of his great riches and imaginary wiſdom, whereby he gat them, he holding himſelf for this to be a God. Jerom, Auguſt. Ambroſ. Iſidor and Tertull. becauſe no man is ſo mad, or ever was, to ſay thus of himſelf, underſtand it as ſpoken of the devil under the name of the prince of Tyre. But as Eſa. 14. he ſpeaketh ſo of Belſhazzar, as that his ſpeech is mixt, ſomething being ſaid of the devil properly, and ſome things of the King of Babylon in alluſion to him; ſo it is here. His heart was ſo proud that he thought there was no God above him, or more excellent then he, ſo did he dote upon his own wit and wealth, and he was confident, that God would not deturb, or bring him down from his high honour; yea if we ſhall ſay, that that man ſpake ſo of himſelf, it is no more then Caius Caligula a Roman Emperour did, and Heliogabalus, and Julius Ceſar ſuffered divine honours to be done unto him, and Nebuchad. ſet up his image to be all worſhipped. And Optat. Milevit. applyeth this of the prince of Tyre to Donatus, a biſhop, who thought himſelf in holineſs to excel all other men, and therefore he would not ſuffer any to come unto him but with moſt low reverence, and

V. 2.

Optatus l. 3.

he would have them called by his name Donatiſts, and he was Biſhop of Tyre Note. a colony of Carthage, and ſo a ſpiritual prince. But none ever more notoriouſly lifted up himſelf as a God, then the Popes of Rome, eſpecially ſome of them have done, as he that ſuffered the Sicilian Embaſſadors to uſe theſe words unto him, Domine deus papa miſerere noſtrum, and they generally take upon them to forgive ſins, not miniſterially, but poteſtative, to make laws about divine things, and to diſpenſe with expreſs laws of God, and to ſet up and depoſe Kings, which none but God can do; but Calvin, Zuinglius, and the like to them were no ſuch, as the Jeſuite chargeth them to have been.

Thou art wiſer then Daniel; Here he ſeeks to make him aſhamed of that his V. 3. moſt inſulſe boaſting by deriding him, and ironically telling him, Ah thou art wiſer then Daniel? as if he had ſaid, art thou not aſhamed to compare with God, I will name unto thee a man, who by the conſent of Nebuchadnezzar was the wiſeſt of men, if thou thinkeſt thy ſelf a God, thou muſt needs then much more think thy ſelf wiſer then he was, which is moſt ridiculous, For he as wiſe as he was, attributed nothing to him, but all his underſtanding V.12. to God alone. v. 12. Thou ſealeſt up the ſum full of wiſdome and perfect in beauty, Vulg. Thou art the ſeal of the ſimilitude, ful of wiſdom and perfect in comlineſs, Heb. thou ſealing the ſum or number; ſome alſo render it ſimilitude, but it cometh from תכן ſignifying to weigh or to number, the meaning is, thou (O King of Tyre) are a very patterne of perfection, and full of wiſdom and glory in thy own conceit. He proſecutes the ſame argument againſt the pride of that inſolent King, who ſaid that he was a God, for what is ſuch a one, but a patterne of perfection, and moſt wiſe and glorious? For a ſeale hath in it the perfect form of him, that is hereby repreſented; and then is a letter written perfected, when the laſt act of ſetting to a ſeale is done to it, wherein he goeth on further ironically to taxe his fooliſh pride.

V. 13. Thou haſt been in Eden, the garden of God, every pretious ſtone was thy covering, &c.
Here another point of felicity, like that of Adam in the ſtate of innocency, is mentioned, for he through his pride thought himſelf for being prince of ſo rich and magnifical a City moſt happy, and therefore adorned himſelf with all manner of pretious ſtones, and it in to be noted, that the ſtones here named are the ſame, that were in the place of the high prieſt, but in number they came ſhort, there being in it twelve, in his crown but nine, which Greg. in orat. Gregory noteth to have been to ſet forth Lucifer, the moſt glorious ſometime of the Angels, of whom there were nine orders, for he as others applyeth all this to the devil, but it is better, as I ſaid before, to underſtand it, as was ſpoken, in way of alluſion to the devil, but properly of the king of Tyre, who was ſo like unto him in pride, vaunting himſelf as a God, as he did, and a patterne of perfection to other Kings and Princes, and equal to Adam in Paradiſe, and to the high prieſt in the pretious ſtones of his diadem, no more yet being reckoned up then nine, and the reſt left to be underſtood.
V.14. *v.*14. Thou art the annointed Cherub that covereth, &c. thou walkeſt up and down in the midſt of ſtones of fire. Here the prophet goeth on ſtill in ſetting forth the exceeding great worldly glory of this King, that being ſet up ſo high, but for his pride and other ſins brought down, his miſery in falling might be the more aggravated, and ſo appear to be juſt matter of doleful lamentation to all his friends and ſuch as ſtood in relation to him, as followeth v. 19. He is ſaid to be a Cherub anointed in alluſion to the Cherubims of Gold in the moſt holy place ſpreading their wings from one ſide to the other, which ſanctuary or moſt holy place ſtood upon the holy mountaine of Zion, intimating the extent of his dominion to all parts about, and that, as God in his providence had appointed, as the Cherubims were by him appointed to be made, and ſo placed: For his walking amidſt the ſtones of fire that was having the diadem Lyra. upon his head ſet with pretious ſtones, as was before ſaid, that ſparkled like fire, and ſhined brightly, thus alſo Lyra.

V.15. Thou wert perfect in thy wayes from the day that thou wert created, till iniquity was found in

in thee. This is not meant of any righteouſneſs before God, or in his wayes, but of his poſterity in worldly things, and therefore it is ſaid, in thy wayes, he had perfect proſperity, when God ſet him up to be ſo glorious a king, which is intimated by ſaying, in the day that he was created. But being in this height of worldly honour, for his iniquity now he ſheweth, that he ſhould be brought down.

Then v. 16, 17, 18. he declareth his iniquities violence and pride, to which he fell by reaſon of his greatneſs together with many other ſins not V. 16. expreſſed. And he ſhould with his City, he ſheweth, be burnt to aſhes to the V. 19. aſtoniſhment of all beholders, that had before known Tyrus ſo magnifical.

Next unto Tyrus was the City of Zidon in wealth and proſperity, belonging V.22.23. to Tyrus, as may be gathered, ch. 27. 8. And both theſe Cities he intimateth to have been alſo vexing enemies to Iſrael as were the Ammonites and Philiſtims, v. 24. Becauſe he ſaith, that there ſhould be no more a pricking V. 24. briar or throne to Iſrael round about. And if it ſhould be doubted, how this could be ſpoken, forſomuch as Iſrael was now far enough off from theſe Nations, viz. in Babylon, he ſaith, that the children of Iſrael ſhould return, &c. thus propheſying of their coming out of captivity againe, as Jeremiah V. 25.26. his colleague had done before, in ſpeaking of the Nations round about as briars and thornes unto them; He alludeth to that of Moſes touching the Canaanites, Note. that ſhould prove, if they remained, as thornes in their eyes and goades in their ſides. And ſuch muſt the people of God alwayes expect, that ſuperſtitious people ſuffered amongſt them ſhould be unto them, and therefore they are not to be tolerated, but to be rooted out.

CHAP. XXIX.

HEre is a propheſie againſt Egypt, and the King thereof, becauſe he promiſed helpe to Zedekiah, whereupon he bearing himſelf rebelled againſt the King of Babylon to his own deſtruction, and therefore he is accuſed to be as a broken reed as alſo Eſa. 36.6. For time, it was the tenth yeer, the tenth month the tenth day, that is, of Jehoiakins captivity, and ſo the tenth yeer of Zedekiah V. 1. his reigne, but the propheſie againſt Tyrus was in the 11. yeer, ch. 26. which was after this, but the order of time moſt probably was thus, becauſe that although Tyre was laſt propheſied againſt, yet it was firſt deſtroyed by Nebuchad. as appeareth v. 17. where Egypt is ſaid to be given unto him, as a reward for his executing judgement upon Tyre. This propheſie alſo if we compare it with chap. 24. 1. was a yeer after the ſiege of Jeruſalem began, and therefore proofe was by this time made of the King of Egypts failing to help the King of Judah in his ſtraights.

The King of Egypt is propheſied againſt as a great dragon in the midſt of V. 3. rivers, and he is thus compared, becauſe Egypt ſtood a certaine time of the yeer every yeer in a river, as being all drowned by the river Nilus. And in V. 4. ſpeaking of the fiſhes ſticking to his ſcales he meaneth, whom he threateneth to draw out together with him, he meaneth by them the Egyptians his ſubjects, who ſhould together be carryed into captivity by the Caldeans; for the whole land of Egypt is ſet-forth by the name of a river, and the inhabitants of fiſhes Now this was not done, till the twenty ſeventh yeer, the firſt moneth as v. 17. which was 17. yeers after this, 16. after Judah deſtroyed, v. 5. he ſaith that this great dragon and all his fiſh ſhall be thrown into the wilderneſs, and V. 5. there be meat to the beaſts of the field and to the fowles of the aire, that is, ſome deſert places in Caldea, where both the King and his dying through famine were ſuffered to lye unburyed, and ſo became a prey to the beaſts and fowles. The cauſe why the Egyptians were thus ſeverely puniſhed is laid down

V. 6. down part v. 3. their pride, Thou ſaidſt the river is mine, and v. 6. their proving an help to tear and deſtroy Judah in ſtead of helping her, as a reed breaking, that a man leaneth upon, runneth into and teareth his ſhoulder.

V. 10. Junius. He threatned to lay all Egypt waſt from the tower of Syene to the border of Ethiopia, that is, from the South to the North.

V. 11. No foot of man or beaſt ſhall paſs through it, neither ſhall it be inhabited fourty yeers.
Of the fulfilling of this no hiſtory maketh mention, but at the expiration of this time after the deſtruction of Juruſ. the ſtate of the king of Babylon beginning to decline, it is moſt probable, that the Egyptians began to gather together againe into their own land, which all this time lay in deſolation, that now it began to be peopled againe, that is, about ſixty yeers of the captivity of Judah, for if we adde to ſeventeen yeers after Jeruſalem deſtroyed fourty, we ſhall come neer ſixty, and within ten yeers after Cyrus V. 14. ſubdued Babylon, at what time they had a king againe called Amaſis, but it is ſaid then to be but a baſe kingdom, becauſe under the Perſians as long as that Monarchy ſtood, and that of the Grecians under Alexander, till the time of the Ptolemies, which was about two hundred yeers, whereas then it is ſaid, V. 15. 16. that it ſhould riſe no more, it is meant only whilſt that Monarchy ſtood, whereby it was brought down, or the Monarchies ſucceeding it, that is the Grecian and the Roman, for although it grew potent again under the Ptolemees, yet by Romans it was againe ſubdued and ſo continued a baſe kingdom, and when the Roman ſtate declined, it came under the power of the Turke, and ſo continueth to this day.

V. 17. Here the Lord ſheweth by what means Egypt ſhould be thus brought down, firſt it ſhould be given to Nebuchadnezzar for a reward of his labour in overthrowing the kingdom of Tyre, in the ſiege whereof becauſe he ſpent 13 yeers it is ſaid, that every head was made bald and every ſhoulder peiled, that is, off Nebuchad.
ſouldiers by wearing their head-pieces, which did wear of their haire, V. 18. and carrying burthens to land up the ſea to the City upon their ſhoulders ſo long a time, thus Lyra, but Jerom, they made bald their heads alſo by carrying burthens upon them. And he is ſaid to have had there no recompence, becauſe the men of Tyre, when they ſaw that they ſhould be overcome, carryed away their goods by ſea to Carthage and other parts, and went away themſelves to inhabit elſwhere, by which means Nebuchad. found nothing at his Hieron. entrance into Tyre, but a bare rock, ſo Jerom who ſaith, that he read it in an old Aſſyrian book. And he ſaith, that Nebuchad. had herein done his work, becauſe that by a ſecret inſtinct from God for the puniſhment of the Tyrians, he went ſo unwearyably on in the conqueſt of that City.

V. 21. In that day I will cauſe the horn of the houſe of Iſrael to bud forth, &c. As he concluded, ch. 28. with comfort to the Iſraelites, ſo he doth this by the horn budding forth, underſtanding ſomething to come long after, bringing farre greater even ſpiritual and everlaſting comfort by Chriſt, wherefore Chriſt and not Zerubbabel, as ſome ſay, is this horne, for ſo he is called, Luc. 1.69. the horne of ſalvation raiſed up for Iſrael. Whereas the time ſeemes not to agree, for it is ſaid, in that day, but Chriſt came not till five hundred yeers after; I anſwer he came in that day, wherein Egypt was a baſe kingdome yet, as was before threatened, that it ſhould be, for it was then under the Romans more then ever it was, Anthony and Cleopatra being overcome by Auguſtus Ceſar. And if not ſo, yet if by a day we underſtand a day with the Lord, which is as a thouſand yeers, this horne budded in that day. If it ſhall ſeem to make againſt this that he ſaith, I will give thee the opening of the mouth, as was ſaid before, ch. 24. 27. The Lord by telling Ezekiel thus meaneth nothing elſe, but that his propheſie againſt Tyre and Egypt being fulfilled, it ſhould then really appeare, that he had not opened his mouth in propheſying as he did in vaine, but all men ſhould acknowledge him a true prophet and worthy to be regarded in all his propheſyings, fearing therefore by the like ſins to pull upon themſelves the like heavy judgements at any time hereafter.

CHAP. XXX.

IN this Chap. is another propheſie againſt Egypt for ſurther confirmation of that before going; and whereas there it was ſaid, From the tower of Syene to V.4. the border of Ethiopia, here Ethiopia is threatened alſo, which adjoyned to Egypt, and was ſometime under the ſame king, and commonly in league with him. V.5.
Lybia alſo and Lydia and Chub, and all other his confederates are threatened like-wiſe. Junius for Lybia hath Putei, and quoteth Gen. 10. 6. and for Lydia he Junius. refers us to Gen. 10.13. where Phut is ſaid to be one that came of Ham, and Lud another, and for Lybia Hebr. is Phut. Touching Chub, Junius alſo hath Cubei, ſaying they were a people of the inferiour part of Lybia by the river Nigris, for there Ptol. geograph. lib. 4. writeth of a City called Chuphe. It is Note.
ſince to be noted, that the confederates of any wicked Nation are in the ſame caſe that they are in, when judgements come, if they be not only confederates as Abraham and Abimelech, Jacob and Laban, not to hurt one another, but alſo to account the cauſe of one another common to help and to take part with the Nation confederate for offence and defence, for ſuch commonly are all birds of a feather, and therefore worthy to be ruined together.

Meſſengers ſhall go forth from me in ſhips to make the careleſs Ethiopians afraid, that V.9. is, the Caldeans ſayling thither from Egypt after the ſubduing thereof to ſub-due Ethiopia alſo, and the Lord calleth them his meſſengers, becauſe ſent by him to do that work there.

I will powre out my fury upon Sin, the ſtrength of Egypt, Vulg. and Jun. Peluſium V.15. in his Annotations, although in the text he hath it Sin, as it is in Heb. but now there is no part of Egypt ſo called, but Peluſium a ſtrong port town in Egypt over againſt Arabia Petræa, but called Sin according to the name of the wilderneſs of that name where mount Sinai ſtood.

At Taphanes the day ſhall be darkneſs; this was alſo another chief City of Egypt, V.18. and ſo was No and Noph and all the reſt here named: by going into darkneſs he meaneth into miſery, and likewiſe by being under a cloud of which he next ſpeaketh alluding to the darkneſs in Egypt of old in the dayes of that hard hearted Tyrant Pharaoh, and to the cloud going betwixt the Iſraelites and Egyptians in Pihahiroth neer the Red ſea, which was ſo fatal to them.

Having hitherto threatened Egypt the tenth yeer the tenth moneth, now V.20. the forces of Pharaoh, which were coming to help Zedekiah being broken in the 11. yeer, wherein Jeruſalem was deſtroyed, he threateneth the ſame over again with other words, ſaying, that the ſword ſhould be taken out of Pharaohs hand and put into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar to be by him uſed to deſtroy Egypt, by ſword power being meant, as Rom. 13.

CHAP. XXXI.

THe 11. yeer, the third moneth. The ſame argument of threatning Pharaoh and V. 1. his land with deſtruction is here further proſecuted at another time the ſame yeer, but three moneths after, and that altogether by the example of the king of Aſſyria his greatneſs and fall ſet forth, yet for his pride he was as a moſt high Cedar cut down, and ſo he ſheweth Pharaoh ſhould be and not be ſpared. That if he would not be moved by any thing yet ſpoken by way of commination, he might by this example of this his compeer, yet ſuperiour to him in dominion by far, be moved, and humble himſelf and repent.

CHAP. XXXII.

V. 1. HEre the prophet alſo proceedeth in the ſame argument, firſt ſtirring up to lamentation for the horrible deſtruction of Egypt in the twelfth yeer, the twelfth moneth, the firſt day. V. 17. Then he diverſly ſetteth forth the deſtruction thereof by mentioning other Nations likewiſe deſtroyed the fifteenth day of the ſame moneth, as Aſhur and Elam, Meſhech and Tubal, the princes of the North and Zidon, whoſe not only fall, but lying in the pit he ſpeaketh of, intimating their continuing in deſolation and as Nations buryed after their deſtruction, which as men dead buryed are never ſeen any more, and mentioneth often uncircumciſion to denote their baſeneſs, and to ſhew, that although the Egyptians had learned of the Hebrews living amongſt them to be circumciſed, yet they ſhould fall and lye for ever, as the uncircumciſed in the pit of miſery. Note. Whence note, that no external rite profiteth, when they to whom it is uſed are uncircumciſed in heart, as is ſhewed more at large Rom. 2. that is, uncomformable to that which the Lords peculiar people ought to be in humility, holineſs and righteouſneſs and pure and incorrupt worſhiping of God.

CHAP. XXXIII.

V. 1. IN this Chapter from the 1. verſe to the 21. the Prophet is againe told, that he was ſet for a watchman to the houſe of Iſrael as ch. 3. and bidden to ſpeake, as he had done before, ch. 18.

V. 21. The v. 21. it is ſhewed, how that ſpoken of ch. 24. 27. was in him fulfilled at the coming of one from Jeruſalem anno 12. the tenth moneth the fifth day, at telling him of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem his mouth was now opened againe, which had been dumb for ſpeaking to the Jews a long time, that is almoſt three yeers, as may be gathered from comparing the time here ſpoken of with ch. 24. 1.

V. 25. 26, 27, 28. And what ſaith he now, that his mouth is againe opened to ſpeak to Iſrael? Verily that for their ſins, wherein they ſtill went on, who dwelt yet in the waſte of Judah, they ſhould alſo be carryed away thence, and the whole land ſhould lye deſolate, although they thought, that they being many in compariſon of Abraham, who was but one, ſhould ſtill be permitted to inhabit there.

V. 30. 31, 32, 33. Finally he concludeth the Chapter by laying open their groſs hypocriſie, amongſt whom he lived, who ſpake and agreed together to come and hear the word of God at his mouth and did ſo, but becauſe their hearts ſtill went after covetouſneſs, he cenſureth this, as a conſpiring againſt the prophet and no honour doing to him. Note. And ſuch are all they in theſe dayes that pretending zeal to the word do greatly frequent it, but notwithſtanding this they are meer worldlings.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXXIV.

HEre the prophet inveigheth againſt the falſe prophets of Iſrael by the name of ſhepheards, but evil ones, as Jer. 23. Only that which Jeremiah ſpake briefly, is more largely ſet forth.

And he layeth open their wickedneſs, in the 6. former verſes, 1. they eat the fat, and clothed themſelves with the wool, that is, took largely for their V. 3. maintenance, although they did not the work for which, but contrariwiſe killed them, and ſtarved them, which is done when they miniſter not the ſincere milke of the word unto them, but in ſtead thereof the poiſon of falſe and erroneous doctrine. 2. They healed not the diſeaſed and ſick, nor bound up the broken, that is, endeavoured not the converſion of ſinners, who were as 1 Pet. 2. 2. perſons ſicke and diſeaſed, for which the Lord ſaith, The whole need not the phy- ſitian, but the ſick, neither did they comfort conſciences diſtreſſed for their ſins V. 4.
3. They ſought not that which was loſt, that is, to bring into the fold ſuch as were out, either being carryed away by the deceit of hereticks ſeducing them, and making them to ſeparate from the Church, or prophaneneſs making them to neglect to come thither. 5. They ruled with force and cruelty, that is, not ſeeking by exhortations, and loving perſwaſions to reduce them, but hardening their hearts by their ſpiteful proceedings.

By theſe means he ſheweth, that they were ſcattered, becauſe they had no ſhepheard, that is, although they had many, yet none to do to them, as was before ſaid, by means of which negligence and the ſhepheards ſeeking V. 5. themſelves and not the good of the flock, they became ſo full of ſin, that their enemies were for this brought upon them, who carryed them away captive into other lands to their unſpeakable miſery. V. 7. 8. Having laid down the wickedneſs of the ſhepheards and their unrighteous dealing, now he proceed- V. 7. 8. 9. eth to threaten them, firſt briefly repeating againe the harme done to the ſheep by their means, my flock became a prey and meat to every beaſt of the field, that is, to the Caldeans their enemies, who devoured them, as the woolfe doth ſheep, and generally in caſe the ſhepheards be ſuch, they, that is the people under their hand, are made a prey for the devil, who now ſeiſeth upon their ſouls, and is fed hereby, as it were with joy; for as the good ſpirit is grieved, when Note.
men go on in ſin, and are not reformed, ſo the evil rejoyceth. And he ſaith, there was no ſhepheard; but if ſo, who were they againſt whom he inveigheth? Sol. They were ſhepheards and no ſhepheards, ſhepheards, becauſe they had the office committed unto them, but no ſhepheards, becauſe they did nothing leſs, then according to this their office, being altogether intent to the feeding of themſelves, but ſuffering the flock for want of feeding to ſtarve, they gathering worldly goods, whereupon their covetous mindes fed, but in the mean ſeaſon through want of good inſtructions and exhortations famiſhed in their ſoules, the proviſion, which the Lord made for the maintenance of his miniſtry out of the goods of the people, being quite perverted. Becauſe it is done thus in the Church of Rome amongſt the Bi- Corn. à Lapide.
ſhops and fat beneficed Parſons, who take the benefit, reſerving penſions to Beneficium da- themſelves, but put off the care of doing the dutie to others; hear how one tur propter offi- of their own complaineth. It was the old ſanction of the Church, that a cium. benefice is given for a duty to be done, how then do they catch at the profits and gain of a benefice, who do not the duty, but transfer that to another; was this the minde of the founders of Churches to nouriſh idle men, and ſuch as do nothing therein? would they not, if they ſhould return to us, proteſt, that their legacies and teſtaments were overturned? yea being now in heaven do they not proteſt that they gave their goods for a legacy to the Church, that paſtours might be therewith maintained, who might feed and govern aright in their own perſons the faithful people of Chriſt, and not to ſuch as turn them over to others, caring for nothing themſelves, but how they may grow fat and rich, would they not then implore the faith both of God and men, that they might be reſtored to ſuch as to whom they bequeathed them? Neither is there cauſe thus to complaine in the Church of Rome, but very lately there was alſo in our reformed Church of England in reſpect both of Lord Biſhops, rich Deans, Arch-deacons, and Prebends and other double beneficed men. Note. And now that Epiſcopacy and the appendices thereof are rooted out together with pluralities, have we not as much cauſe to complaine, that goods and lands thus by pious men anciently given for the more plentiful feeding and governing of the flock of Chriſt by the moſt learned and able of the Miniſtry are indeed taken away for the reaſon before going? but alas there is a foul failing in the latter clauſe, they are not taken to be given to whom they ſhould, but to be ſold for a ſmall price to ſuch worldlings, as being greedy of gaine out of any thing hauked after ſo rich a booty, although that which is thus gotten is like to prove but as the Seian horſe, and the gold of Tolouſe to the poſſeſſors thereof, whoſe eſtates after this, inſenſibly waſted and came to nothing.

V. 11. 12. v. 11. 12, &c. The Lord promiſeth to the comfort of the faithful, that he will take the paſtoral office upon him and do all theſe things, which were needful for their good and neglected to be done by their former ſhepheards. Whereas by their means they were ſcattered, he promiſeth to gather them from all parts to their own land again; and whereas they healed not the ſick, he promiſeth to ſtrengthen them, to bind up the broken, to ſeek up the driven away and to feed them all. Of ſo doing thus, as it is the duty of every faithful paſtour to do, heare Auguſt. ſpeaking excellently of his owne practiſe. I deſire to provide not only ornaments, but medicaments for your ſouls, I ſtudy to ſew together things unſewed, to mend that which is rent, to cure the wounded, to waſh the filthy, to reſtore the loſt, and to adorne the whole with pretious Margarites. And Gregory, ſhewing how all theſe offices are done, ſaith the ſcattered are reduced or gathered together, when one faln into ſin is by the vigour of the paſtoral ſollicitude brought back to the ſtate of righteouſneſs, the broken is bound up when diſcipline keeps down ſin, that it may not diffluere ad interitum, ſpread and increaſe to deſtruction, yet it muſt be ſo moderated and tempered with love, that there may be in the paſtour both the piety of a mother and diſcipline of a father, not rigid ſtrictneſs, or remiſſe piety. Clement ſaith that the broken is bound up when the broken hearted for ſin are comforted, the weak are ſtrengthened, when he that is ſhaken by temptation hath that laid before him, whereby he may be ſettled againſt it by faith, and by the ſick and weak he underſtands the weak in faith, who are healed by his ſetting forth and preaching the faith unto them. Lyra by the weak will have thoſe meant, who by the evil example of wicked paſtours fell into ſin, but now better taught they ſhall do ſo more.

V. 16. For the laſt words of v. 16. I will deſtroy the fat and ſtrong, and feed them with judgement, The Vulg. hath it, I will keep, and will feed them in judgement, but clean contrary to the Heb. אשמיד, which hath none other ſignification, but to deſtroy and againſt that which is implyed in the words following

V. 17. 18. v. 17, 18, where he ſaith, that he would diſtinguiſh between cattel and cattel; and as he comforteth the weak and ſick, ſo he reproveth the fat and ſtrong by the name of rams and he goats, and

V. 20. v. 20. expreſly oppoſeth the fat to the lean. So that by the fat and ſtrong he meaneth the rich and mighty, whether ſpiritual or temporal ſhepheards and rulers, that oppreſſed the poor, gathering wealth to themſelves out of their ruines. Note. And ſuch of late we have had amongſt us, who have puſhed with the horne and ſhooved with the ſhoulder by reaſon of their great ſtrength, the poore ſheepe of the Lord, exacting greater taxations upon them then needed, and by their treaſurers, collectors and other truſtees bringing others to extreame poverty, that they might from poverty by extortions, oppreſſions and imbezeling of our goods be made rich. But beſides that which hath been ſpoken of the deſtruction of ſuch by Gods juſt judgements ſeiſing upon them in this world, although for a time they may be deferred, yet all comfort through Chriſt is promiſed to the poor ſheep of his flock, whom they have thus wronged, no word of comfort in regard of the ſoul, is ſpoken to them, but they are in all this tract paſſed over as reprobates and rejectaries for ever, v. 23. 24, &c. to the end of the Ch. where it is ſaid, V. 23. I will ſet one ſhepherd over them David, that is, the promiſed ſucceſſour of David in his kingdom, in whom it ſhould be made everlaſting, for he is called David after the name of him, that firſt began that line, and was a King of Iſrael of greateſt might and eminency of all others, as the Roman Emperors after Julius Ceſar had the name of Ceſars, the Kings of Egypt of Ptolemees after that Ptolemee, who firſt raiſed the kingdome of Egypt from baſeneſs to magnificence. And it is ſaid that he ſhall be their ſhepheard and feed them, ſo Joh. 10. the Lord ſpeaketh at large of himſelf, as feeding and ſaving his ſheep and fraying away the evil beaſts from them, as here it is further promiſed, v. 25. This propheſie indeed firſt relates to the time of the Jewes return out of Babylon, when Zorobabel, and Nehemiah and other godly princes ſucceeding them ruled over the Jews, and although they had much trouble by reaſon of their enemies many yeers, yet evil beaſts after that ceaſed in the land, there being none that tyrannically oppreſſed as before, and thoſe enemies who oppoſed their building of the temple and City being by the kings favour towards them at length confounded. But moſt fully it was accompliſhed in the time of Chriſt, by whom his ſheep were ſo fed with heavenly doctrine and protected by his power at the firſt although apprehended and impriſoned, as that they came ſafe out againe, and were filled with joy for their very ſufferings, and Act. 4. above all in their ſaving from ſin and the power of Satan, the moſt 1 Pet. 5. 8. terrible wilde beaſt, that roaring lion, that ſought to devoure them. And finally in the dayes of Conſtantine the great they might without fear of perſecuting enemies reſt in quietneſs, as ſheep in the fields, where there be no wolves or foxes, beares or lions to devour them, or their lambs.

V. 29. And I will raiſe up for them a plant of renoune. Here the ſame Chriſt before called David is ſet forth by another name, as Eſa. 11. 1. and in dvers other places, where it hath been ſhewed why he was ſo called, viz. for ſimilitude of his ſpringing up out of the houſe of Jeſſe then decayed as the ſtub of a tree ſtanding long without any ſhootes, but in the end beyond expectation branching forth and the branch coming thereof growing above the height and greatneſs of any other tree, for ſuch a branch is a renouned branch indeed, and ſo was our Lord Jeſus coming forth out of that houſe, which was now ſo poor, but no family thenceforth flouriſhed ſo much as that did in him, who became a vine covering the whole earth.

CHAP. XXXV.

IN this chap. the propheſie againſt Edom, which was very briefly uttered, chap. 25. 12. is againe reſumed and proſecuted more largly, as the Edomites for their inveterate hatred againſt the children of Iſrael, and their helping the Caldeans in deſtroying them were well worthy. And they firſt charged for matter of fact, that they ſlew them with the ſword in the day of their calamity when their iniquity had an end, V. 5. the Vulg. in the time of extreame iniquity, Hebr. בעת עת קץ in the time of iniquities end, or ſorrows end, the meaning being, when they ſuffered by the Caldees extreamly they being ſlaine by the ſword & by famine and peſtilence by means of the ſiege, and by carrying away into captivity, ſo that they had even made an end of puniſhing them, the Edomites moſt probably ſtirred up Nebuzaradan the king of Babylons ſteward, who came after this to burn the City and Temple with fire, which was a Note. moſt horrible ſin, to ſuch as are extreamly miſerable to adde more miſery, and therefore the vengeance here threatened muſt needs come upon them to the full, and ſo all they muſt expect, that it ſhould be done to them, that ſin in like manner hardening their hearts to oppreſs their oppreſſed brethren.

V. 6. I will prepare thee for blood, &c. ſith thou hateſt not blood, Vulg. and when thou hateſt blood, blood ſhall purſue thee, expounded by Lyra, of thoſe that were of the Lyra. ſame blood, that is, the Iſraelites, of their hatred againſt whom it was ſpoken before, Heb. if thou hateſt not blood, and it is plainly meant, the ſhedding of the blood of their diſtreſſed brethren, the Iſraelites, whoſe deſtruction they were ſo far from hating that they loved and rejoyced at it, wherefore he threateneth, that their blood ſhould likewiſe be ſhed in abundance, and Lyra conſidering, that the Hebrew will not bear the other tranſlation, at V. 9. laſt concludeth with this v. 9. I will make thee perpetual deſolations, that is, when the Iſraelites ſhall return unto their own land, and ſhall be peopled againe, and all the parts thereof repleniſhed with inhabitants, as it was in the time of the Perſians, Edom ſhall yet lye deſolate, as is further expreſſed, v. 14.
V. 14. When all the earth rejoyceth, thou ſhalt be deſolate, that is, all the land of Iſrael.
2. The Edomites are charged with covetouſneſs and ambition, which carryed them on to poſſeſs the whole land of Iſrael now that it was void of inhabitants, V. 10. as is ſhewed, v. 10. where it is ſaid, Thou haſt ſaid theſe two Nations, theſe two countryes ſhall be mine, that is, the land of the two kingdoms, Judah V. 11. and Iſrael. v. 11. I will make my ſelf known amongſt them, when I have judged thee, that is, by working mightily for their reſtitution, whereby it ſhould be well known what his favour was towards the Iſraelites and his fury againſt the Edomites, they ſtill lying under his judgements. v. 12. Thou ſhalt know, that I have heard all thy blaſphemies, which thou haſt ſpoken againſt the mountaines of V. 12. Iſrael, ſaying, they are laid deſolate, they are given us to conſume. Hence note, that it is blaſphemy to derogate from the tenth of Gods word in any thing, for he had promiſed reſtitution within ſeventy yeers to his people, and threatened deſolation to their land only ſo long a time, but the Edomites to diſcredit the word of God, ſaid contrariwiſe, that their land ſhould alwayes lye deſolate in reſpect of them, and that they the Edomites ſhould conſume henceforward the increaſe thereof as the owners; or that they had holpen to conſume it by fire and ſword to this end, that it ſhould never come into their poſſeſſion any more for this was an intolerable affront given unto God, who had ſo often promiſed the contrary.

CHAP. XXXVI.

IN this chap. the prophet returnes againe to the children of Iſrael comforting them by renewing the promiſe of their reſtitution in many more words, then he had done before.

And he beginneth with ſpeaking to the mountaines and valleys, &c. as the V. 1. prophets have uſed to do at ſundry other times, intimating hereby, that the Lord can give eares to hear to ſenſleſs things, and to do, as he willeth them, either for the good or hurt of men, concerning whom he ſpeaks unto them.

V. 11. But whereas, v. 11. he promiſeth to do better for his people of Iſrael, then in former times, this is not to be underſtood of that which ſhould be done temporally for them upon their return out of the Babyloniſh captivity, but ſpiritually in the time of the Goſpel by Chriſt, for that good, which is done for the faithful now, is far greater then any worldly benefit before beſtowed upon them.

The prophet indeed ſpends moſt words from the beginning of the chap. hitherto and from hence to v. 25. in ſpeaking of their deliverance from Babylon, but in this verſe he inlargeth himſelf in brief to the Evangelical times, and v. 25. ſpeaks more fully of that exceeding great good, which ſhould come by Chriſt for the cleanſing away of ſin and the grace of regeneration by V.25.26.27. his ſpirit. By ſprinkling with clean water he meaneth the blood of Chriſt 1 Joh.1.6. cleanſing from all ſin, herein alluding to the ſprinkling of old appointed with water made of the aſhes of a red heifer, and running water, the ſprinkling Numb. 19. wherewith cleanſed from legal uncleanneſs. Of taking away the heart of ſtone from them, and giving them a new heart, ſee Jer. 32. 30. From v. 30. to V. 26. the end of the Chap. he both amplifieth the benefit of their deliverance from captivity and planting them in their own countrey againe, and both for that and deliverance by Chriſt, he teacheth that neither of them were for their own ſakes, but for his meer grace and mercy, that none might boaſt themſelves, but acknowledge all the good which they injoy, both temporal and Note.

ſpiritual to come herefrom to give him all the praiſe and glory for 1 Cor.4.7.
ever.

CHAP. XXXVII.

IN this Chap. the Lord biddeth the Prophet to teach by ſimilitudes the gracious acts promiſed to be done in the former Chap. 1. of dry bones to which he is bidden to propheſie, and ſay Live yee, which he doing they lived and became men and women, whereby a demonſtration was made of the living of the children of Iſrael againe in their own land, whereas now they lay dead, as it were, in Babylon, and ſo ſhould do many yeers, till that according to man there was no more hope of this, then of their riſing againe, who have lyen ſo long dead, that the fleſh is all rotted off their bones.
2. By the ſimilitude of two ſticks, upon one of which he muſt write the V. 16. 17, name of Judah, upon the other the name of Ephraim, which being done, he 18,&c. muſt joyn them together, and then propheſie of the joyning together of the two kingdoms of Judah and Iſrael divided to Rehoboam and Jeroboam under David againe, that is Chriſt, by this name alſo ſet forth, ch. 34. 24. and after this he ſaith, that they ſhall be divided no more for ever, but continue as one people in a proſperous and happy eſtate, having the Lords Sanctuary in the midſt of them. Here the name of Ephraim is put for the kingdom of Iſrael, becauſe Jeroboam was of Ephraim. That this propheſie was not touching their eſtate under Zorobabel, or the Princes ſucceeding him after their return appears, becauſe he was no King like David, neither were they of the ten tribes united to Judah under him, or any other ſucceeding him any more, but they ſtill remaine in an exiled eſtate in expectation of the time, when the Lord by converting them to Chriſt will make them thus bleſſed and happy, according to Rom. 11. 25. and as hath been formerly ſaid upon other like places in the prophets. The two Kingdoms, ſaith Jerom, are not preciſely to be underſtood Hieron. of the children of Iſrael according to the fleſh, but according to the ſpirit, and ſo it is meant, whereas the diviſion was before into Jews and Gentiles, now here ſhould no more be any ſuch diviſion, but all ſhould be one in Gal. 3. 2.
Chriſt, the old partition wall being broaken down. Whereas he ſpeaketh of their dwelling in their own land againe after this, it is to be underſtood only by way of alluſion to that which was done in the dayes of David : for as then their happineſs lay in part in this, that they dwelt not in a ſtrange land, but their own, which God in mercy had given them, ſo now the happineſs of Chriſtians ſhould likewiſe lye in this, that in what land ſo ever they dwelt, it ſhould be unto them no more as prophane but holy, and ſanctified by their faith, whereby they ſhould become as Gods Sanctuary in the midſt of it, as the Land of Canaan of old was, in which peculiarly the Lord had then his Sanctuary and Temple.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

V. 1. 2. S*Et thy face againſt Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meſhech and Tubal.*
By Gog Lyra underſtands Antichriſt, who ſhould ariſe and perſecute the Lyra. Church of Chriſt towards the end of the world, for which it is ſaid, v. 8.
After many dayes in the latter yeers thou ſhalt come into the land, that is brought back from the ſword, &c. And he ſaith, that he is called Gog, ſignifying tectus covered, becauſe he ſhould be the devil in the ſhape of a man, and in the land of Magog, ſignifying de tecto, of the covered, as if he had ſaid of his retinue or family, that is, ſuch as took part with him. To approve which, he citeth Revel. 20. where Gog and Magog ſetting forth Antichriſt are again ſpoken of after the thouſand yeers, in which time Satan was ſhut up, expired, and 2 Theſ. 2. 8. But Junius. Junius taking that which is here propheſied of to be concerning the enemies, by whom the Jews ſhould ſuffer after their return out of captivity, and living againe in proſperity for a time in their own land, by Gog underſtands a people in Aſia the leſſer, and particularly their king Halyartes, who at this time poſſeſſed that kingdom, who came of Gyges, that ſlew Candaulus the king of the Lydians, being therefore called Gog the name being a little changed.
From hence Crœſus ſucceeding him, that king of the Lydians ſo much ſpoken of for his riches, inlarged that kingdom to the parts neer the land of Iſrael up to mount Lebanon, where there was a City ſpoken of by Geographers by the name Gygarta called in the Syrian tongue Gogkarta, the City of Gog, and this kingdom when Alexanders Empire was divided amongſt his captaines, was called the kingdom of Syria, wherein Antiochus Epiphanes, Seleucus, Demetrius and Nicanor ſucceſſively reigning, did much miſchief to the Jews, as in the books of Maccabees appeareth, perſecuting and coming with great Armies againſt them, as is here foretold. Magog was the City called Heliopolis notorious Plin. l. 5. c. 25. for all kind of idolatry, which was built by the Scythians or Sarmatians, after that making incurſions into thoſe parts they had ſubdued Syria Cœlem, for ſo the Syrians called that City, as Pliny ſaith. That of Lyra is moſt generally received, but Junius ſpeaketh much more probably, that by Gog may be underſtood the king of Syria, who ſhould afterward reigne, the Empire of the Medes and Perſians being at an end, and the Grecian Monarch, ending after that at the death of Alexander. For this was after many dayes and Dan. 10. 30. in the latter yeers, viz. about three hundred after the Jews returning againe to inhabite Judea. And of their great ſufferings then Daniel alſo propheſieth.
Gen. 10. 2. Whereas this Gog is ſaid to be in the land of Magog and prince of Mechek and Tubal, theſe three are ſaid to have come of Japhet, Magog the father of the Scythians or Sarmatians, who, as Joſephus ſaith, were anciently called Magogites, Tubal of the Iberians and Albanians, Meſhech of the Cappadocians, three great nations, but now under one King or head, Gog as he is here called for the reaſon before going. And whereas Revel. 20. 8. Gog and Magog are againe ſpoken of it, it is only in alluſion to that, which is here ſaid, the enemies of the Church under the Goſpel both Hereticks and Pagans being meant.

The thing threatened againſt Gog is like that before againſt the king of Egypt, V. 5. to put an hook in his jawes, and to bring him back together with his forces, which are thus reckoned up, Perſia, Ethiopia, Lybia, Gomer and the houſe of V. 6. Togarmah. Perſia, Heb. Elam, of which Jer. 49. 34. was in part under Antiochus, as is ſhewed 1 Mac. 3; 32. of the Ethiopians and Lybians, ſee Mac. 10. 11. and how Ptolemee Euergetes reſtored Demetrius to his kingdom again by their help, when he had bin by Alexander caſt out. Of Gomer & Togarmah, ſee Gen. 10. 2, 3. they alſo came of Japhet, and then were under the dominion of Antiochus and Seleucus, of all which Gog compoſed his Army. And for what end this great V. 8. Army was gathered together is ſhewed, v. 8. 9. 10. viz. to ſubdue & to ſpoile the Jews,

Jews, who had been ſo mightily brought from the ſword of the Caldees, and planted in their own land, and had there gotten cattel and other ſubſtance, whereas the land lay waſt before, but now this Gog, he ſheweth, ſhould come and make a prey of them, but for this he threateneth, that he ſhould be viſited, V. 13. as is more largely expreſſed afterwards. v. 13. Sheba and Dedan and the Merchants of Tarſhiſh or of the ſea, that is, the Arabians, who lived by robberies and the Tyrians and Zidonians, who lived and gathered wealth by trafficking by ſea, rejoyced at the ſpoiles taken from the Jews, being ready to help in this work, which is meant, when they are brought in ſaying, Art thou come to take a prey? if thou beeſt, we are here ready to help and to traffick with thee for it; an expreſſion of joy in them for the benefit, which they hoped thus to attaine.

V. 14. From hence forward the Lord giveth order to his prophet, to let this Gog know that in all his proceedings he did nothing, but what he foreknew V. 17. and ſpake of by his Prophets, that is, this Ezekiel, Daniel, and Zachariah, Dan. 11. intimating hereby, that he knew alſo how to ſuppreſs him againe, Zech. 14. when he pleaſed. And that the kings of Syria, whoſe kingdoms extended ſo far Northward, were here meant appeareth, becauſe this Gog is ſpoken of as coming out of the North, v. 15. and therefore was the ſame, of whom Daniel ſpeaketh ch. 10. where he often for the King of Egypt ſaith, the king of the South, and for the king of Syria the king of the North.

V. 18. 19. At the ſame time, &c. my fury ſhall come up in my face. v. 19. Then there ſhall be a great ſhaking in the land of Iſrael. After the expeditions and perſecutions raiſed by Antiochus againſt the Jews, here followeth a propheſie of his ruine, and the ruine of his kingdome, which God in great wrath and fury would bring upon him for his wickedneſs, partly in the land of Iſrael, where he was encountred by Judas Maccabeus, and was often foiled in his forces, for which it V. 20. is ſaid there ſhall be a great ſhaking in the land of Iſrael: and then to ſet forth this ſhaking of this proud and cruel enemy the more, it is added, of the beaſts, fowls, creeping things, &c. by an hyperbole, as Hoſh. 4. it is threatened, that the beaſts and fowles, and fiſhes ſhould mourn, and partly by domeſtical diviſions, that ſhould ariſe, as indeed there did betwixt Alexander and Demetrius competitors for the kingdom, whereby great deſtructions were brought upon it.

V. 21. And this is ſet forth v. 21. I will call for a ſword againſt him throughout all my mountaines, every mans ſword ſhall be againſt his brother. In ſaying, throughout all my mountaines, he meaneth, that even in the land of Judea, which was mountainous this falling out and fighting ſhould be betwixt Alexander and Demetrius and Seleucus the ſon of Gryphus and others, of which ſee my continuation of the hiſtory after Eſther. Antiochus being dead through the juſt judgement of God, Antiochus Eupator his ſon ſucceeded him, but Demetrius, to whom the kingdom properly belonged, coming againſt him, he was ſoon cut off, and then he having reigned a while Alexander the pretended ſon of Antiochus being backed by Ptolemee king of Egypt fought againſt him for the kingdom, by means of which domeſtical and inteſtine wars, coming by the juſt judgement of God, upon that kingdom, as is here threatened, it is not to be doubted, but that other judgements of peſtilence, &c. followed as an overflowing flood, whereby thoſe enemies of Gods people were conſumed, as if by haile and fire from V. 22. heaven, as is ſaid v. 22. But they, who by Gog underſtand the Antichriſt to come toward the end of the world, ſay, that theſe judgements, of peſtilence, overflowing raine, haile and fire, and brimſtone ſhall be executed according to the letter, as is ſaid in effect 2 Theſſ. 2. Whom Chriſt ſhall conſume by the breath of his mouth, and aboliſh by the brightneſs of his coming. But that opinion of Antichriſt being one man yet to come, that ſhould raiſe the greateſt perſecution againſt the Church of God that ever was for three years and an half, hath been often ſhewed to be a maniſeſt errour, and is alſo ſhewed in my expoſition upon the Revelation, ſo that it can have no place here, or paſſe for current, as the meaning of the things here revealed, but only as hath been already ſaid.

CHAP. XXXIX.

V. 1. IN this Chap. the deſtruction of the Jews enemies, the kings of Syria, who perſecuted them ſo cruelly, is further amplified. For having begun, as he V. 2. did chap. 38. to threaten this king by the name of Gog, he varyeth only in this, that he ſaith, I will leave but the ſixth part of thee, and I will cauſe thee to Iunius. come up from the North parts. Jun. I will bring thee back, drawing thee with a ſexary hook, that is, with an hook, which is ſix fold, being called an harpagus, an iron inſtrument, wherewith a bucket is drawn out of a well, or a ſhip is laid hold upon and pulled according to Livy l. 8. de Punico bello, the word here uſed being nothing elſe but a further expreſſion of the hook before ſpoken of Ch. 38. 4. Heb. it is שישאתיח, Sextabo te, as the Latins uſe ſometimes the word decimare, to deſtroy enemies or rebels taken every tenth man, ſo here he ſeemeth to mean a great deſtruction to be brought upon the forces of Gog, as our tranſlators thought, not going by the ſixth man in ſlaying, but ſlaying all but the ſixth, yet that of Junius ſtands beſt with reaſon, becauſe it is not likely, that the Lord meant, that in deſtroying Gog and his armies he would ſpare any, but make a full end of them, as againſt other enemies of his people he had formerly threatened to deſtroy them utterly as Sodom, not leaving a man of them.

And this propheſie of great troubles to come to the Jews, and then of deliverance herefrom by judging their enemies, was very uſeful for them, that when they ſhould afterwards be thus tryed, they might not deſpaire, or be diſcomforted, as thinking, that all promiſes of happineſs after their deliverance out of captivity would now come to nought, knowing by that which is here ſaid, that although their ſufferings ſhould be great, yet they ſhould not be but by divine diſpenſation, and that they ſhould in a ſhort time be delivered from them againe.

V. 4. Thou ſhalt fall upon the mountaines of Iſrael, thou and all thy bands, that is, when thou ſhalt with thy forces be attempting the deſtruction of Judea, which is full of mountaines, thou ſhalt be cut off, and thoſe forces of thine, which thou ſhalt ſend thither ſhall be overthrown and ſlaine, and lye unburyed as meat for the beaſts of the field and fowles of the aire, as was fulfilled in the time of Judas Maccabeus, and the king Antiochus himſelf was ſmitten with a grievous diſeaſe, of which he dyed in extream torment, as is ſhewed in the hiſtory of the Maccabees, the Tyrant being brought hereby to confeſs, that this judgement came upon him for that which he did againſt Gods people the Jews.

And I will ſend a fire on Magog, and them that dwel careleſly in the Iſles: this, ſaith V. 6. Junius, was fulfilled, when the Romans came againſt Syria being let in by Junius. Attalus a king in Aſia minor, who being offended with Demetrius the king of Syria made the Romans heirs of his kingdom, then they being in league with the Jews came in their aid and waſted the kingdom of Syria with fire and ſword, and this was the fire upon Magog here threatened, and the Iſles are mentioned, becauſe that by Japhets poſterity, whereof Magog was one, the Iſlands were inhabited, and ſo Syria ſuffering by this fire, it is not to be doubted, but that the Iſles belonging thereunto ſuffered alſo.

V. 9. For handſtaves which it is ſaid here that they ſhould burn, as alſo other weapons Junius. of war belonging to Gogs forces, Junius hath darts, which are caſt with the hand, and he ſaith, that they ſhould burn theſe 7. yeers, that is, a long time, and to ſhew what abundance of them there were, he addeth v. 10. that they ſhould not cut down any wood to burn in this time, there ſhould be ſuch a ſpoken otherwiſe then hyperbolically.

V. 11. I will give to Gog graves in the land of Iſrael, from hence to v. 16. it is ſhewed, that of the forces of Gog, which ſhould fight againſt the Jews, ſome ſhould be buryed, after that they were ſlaine by Judas Maccabæus and his brethren, and v. 16.&c. ſome ſhould lye unburyed, becoming a prey to the beaſts and fowls.

For the firſt the place is aſſigned, viz. The valley of paſſengers on the eaſt of the ſea, that is, on the other ſide of Jordan in the land of Gilead, whereby Merchants paſſed to and fro for traffick, that came from other parts, and this place was by the divine providence appointed, that ſtrangers coming that way might continually ſee an example or monument of Gods judgements againſt the Jews enemies, and hereby be warned not once to open their mouths more to ſpeak againſt and to vilifie them, as they commonly did, becauſe they hated them for their Religion ſo much differing from others in other countryes of the world. And to expreſs this he ſaith, they ſhould ſtop, not their noſes, as N. Tr. hath it, but their mouths, as the Hebr. verily hath it. And the very name of the place ſhould be a perpetual remembrance of this, it being for the burials of the Gogites here called Hamon Gog, Gogs multitude. Junius alſo ſaith, that there was alſo another place called the valley of paſſengers beyond Jordan lying by the lake of Geneſareth, which was alſo by paſſengers much frequented.

V. 12. And the houſe of Iſrael ſhall bury them there ſeven moneths. In theſe words and thoſe following the burying of the ſlaine Gogites is farther ſet forth to ſhew the exceeding great multitude of them, that they ſhould be in burying ſeven moneths, a very long time for ſuch a buſineſs; and to purge the land from all theſe dead ſtinking corpſes he ſaith, that buryers ſhould be appointed to look where others going before had ſet up a mark at a dead bone, that they might follow thither and leave none unburyed. Whereby is alſo intimated, that even ſuch as were buryed lay firſt above ground ſo long, that the beaſts of the field and fowles of the aire had come and eate up their fleſh, their bones only being left to be buryed.

V.17.18,&c. From v. 17. to the 23. he threateneth ſuch a deſtruction to the ſame forces, that there ſhall be fleſh, and fat, and blood, enough to fill, and feaſt all the beaſts and fowles round about, in an oratorical manner therefore inviting them to ſo plentiful a prey.

V.23,24,&c. From henceforth to the end of the chap. it is ſhewed how manifeſt it ſhould be made by judgements thus executed upon the enemies of Gods people, that they were not formerly given into the hands of the Caldeans, as if God had then quite rejected them, but for their chaſtiſement, and reformation, which being made and continued in he promiſeth perpetually to favor and protect them, but they falling againe into ſin, as they did before their deſtruction by the Romans, and that more notoriouſly then ever before, the Lord did not bind himſelf by this promiſe ſo, but that he might juſtly root them out againe with more ſeverity then ever, according to the rule of his doings laid down Jer. 18. 10. and as it came to paſſe at that their fatal overthrow.

it unto us. Jerom alſo uſing a long preface here of the obſcurity of this place, ſaith no more of the reed, and the length thereof ſix cubits and a hand breadth; and the breadth and heighth of the houſe being one reed, but that a palm breadth is the ſixt part of a cubit, called by the Greeks palæſtes, and the reed in the ſix cubits thereof ſerved to ſet forth, how all actions done by us in this world which was made in ſix dayes, are meaſured by God, and taken exact notice of: and that by the breadth and height of the ſame meaſure, practice and contemplation are ſet forth. For the words, a reed ſix cubits long and an hand breadth, Hebr. is ſix cubits in an hand breadth, as Lyra well noteth, whereby is meant, that the cubits here ſpoken of were not ordinary, but each one a common cubit and an hand breadth more, for ſo much was the cubit of the ſanctuary longer then an ordinary cubit. And by the breadth of the houſe one reed, as the height was; he will not have the thickneſſe of the wall about it underſtood, but the ſpace betwixt the two ſide wals of a little houſe, becauſe if the thickneſſe and height of the wall were all one, there would be no good proportion in ſuch a building. But forſomuch as it is ſaid, the breadth of the building, not of the houſe, and I ſee not, to what end the figure of an houſe ſo little ſhould be ſhewed; I hold rather with others, that it was the thickneſſe of the wall, neither was there any diſproportion in a wall ſo thick, and no higher about a Temple; for this was above ten feet high, and ſo the magnificent frame of the Temple within it might better be ſeen; and for the thickneſſe, it was hereby the ſtronger and more defenſible to keep off from the aſſaulting of it.

Then came he to the gate, which looketh to the Eaſt and went up the ſtairs, or degrees, and meaſured the threſhold of the gate which was one reed broad, and the other threſhold which was one reed broad alſo. He that came to the gate, and the gate here ſaith Gregory was all one, viz. Chriſt Jeſus, who ſaith I am the door, he that enters by me, &c. If any man ſhall doubt, how this can be, he anſwereth, even as well as the door and the ſhepheard entring in by the door, as he further ſaith ſpeaking of himſelf in the ſame place. He alſo ſaith, the preacher is the door, becauſe by his preaching men enter into the Kingdome of Heaven, having the way thither opened unto them, and the holy Scripture is the door for the ſame reaſon, and laſtly faith, becauſe hereby as by a door we enter. But I reſt in the firſt, Chriſt is the gate, and he himſelf entred into Heaven, as by a gate, when by the merit of his low debaſing himſelf he aſcended above the Heavens, and had a name above all names, &c. The threſhold of the gate was double as muſt needs be yeelded, becauſe he ſpeaks of a threſhold and a threſhold, each of which was meaſured in breadth one reed, that is, the outward threſhold and the inner, the one ſerved to ſet forth the moſt famous of the faithfull progenitors of Chriſt, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, &c. of whom he came according to the fleſh, and the other the holy Apoſtles, who were of equall vertue with them for their propagating of his Goſpell into all nations, whereby Chriſt was formed, as it were, again through their travell in the hearts of their hearers by faith in his name. For as the holy Patriarchs were like unto a threſhold without, by whom it was then aſcended unto Chriſt, when others ſeeing their faith and other ſhining vertues were drawn likewiſe to beleeve, and love vertue, ſo the Apoſtles were like a threſhold within, whereby beleevers of all countries and nations came up to him ſince the time of his incarnation, when hearing them preach and ſeeing their holy converſation and miracles, which they wrought, they were converted unto him, comming thus up to the gate, which is ſaid to ſtand eaſtward the more aptly, becauſe our Lord is called the Eaſt, and ſometimes the Sun, which riſeth in the Eaſt. But what is meant by the degrees, by which this man aſcended to this gate? Sol. Chriſt aſcends by degrees, when grace begun by his word and ſpirit is increaſed daily more and more, for grace is not at the higheſt pitch in any man at the firſt, but this is come to by degrees, as in Peter himſelf, who had grace at the firſt, but in much weakneſſe, yet afterwards he attained to ſo high a degree thereof, that he fearednot the higher powers, or any thing that they could do unto him, no Act. 4. more did the reſt of the Apoſtles, whereas before they all fled from Chriſt, and Peters puſillanimity was ſuch, that he durſt not ſtand to the confeſſion of him before a ſilly maid. But when the faithful are grown to this height of grace and Chriſtian reſolution, Chriſt is aſcended up the ſtairs in them being thus the more glorified. Wherefore the ſame Peter exhorteth us to deſire 1 Pet. 2. 2. the ſincere milk of the word to grow thereby, and to grow in grace and the knowledge of 2 Pet. 3. 10. Jeſus Chriſt.

V. 7. And every little chamber was one reed long and one reed broad, and between the little chambers were five cubits. By theſe chambers underſtand particular faithful ſouls, wherein Chriſt is joyned thereunto in the greateſt love, as a Bridegroom to his ſpouſe or Bride, or the ſecret communion betwixt Chriſt and the Chriſtian ſoul, for the ſtrictneſſe found in which love the ſoul is ſo dilated towards him, as that now it panteth after nothing ſo much, as to be with him in heaven, as taking no content or comfort in the things of this world, Phil. 1. 17. in compariſon of being with Chriſt, as we may ſee in Paul deſiring to be diſſolved and to be with Chriſt, and for this the latitude of the chambers, or their breadth is here ſpoken of. Yet for the love that ſuch have to the Church, and deſire to be inſtruments of the ſalvation of others, they are held here longer in their deſires of promoting ſo great a good of many ſouls, for which the length of theſe chambers ſhewed was equall to the breadth, the breadth one reed, and the length one. For the communion betwixt Chriſt and the Chriſtian ſet forth by a chamber, ſee Mark 2. 17. Can the children of the bridechamber faſt as long as the bridegroom is with them? and of the bridegroom and bride, Joh. 3. 29. and of the bed, wherein the love of Chriſt is communicated to the Chriſtian, Cantic. 3. 7. But what mean the five cubits between the chambers? Sol. The five ſenſes, by means of which the Chriſtian is too much addicted to the things of this world, not that it may be ſo, for love not the world, nor the 1 Joh. 2. 15. things of the world, ſaith S. John, for he that loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him, but through the infirmity of the fleſh, it is often thus even in the faithfull. Yet they are not pleaſed, when it is thus with them, but they ſtrive againſt it, and ſhall in time waxe ſtronger againſt being thus led by ſenſe, and to live by faith, having even in the mean ſeaſon hearts ſincerely affected towards God and their poor neighbour for his ſake, and actually doing works of charity, although they do not altogether leave the world, as ſome do, to intend heavenly things only. Yet they are between the chambers, and ſo parts of this building. And in account before God, as converſing daily with the more perfect, by means of whom they alſo are by degrees brought on towards more perfection and heaven lines of minde. And the threſhold of the gate by the porch within was one reed: this is nothing elſe, but a repetition of the ſame, that was ſaid before v. 6. of the other threſhold being as the one ſpoken of before it, a reed broad, becauſe he had not there ſaid where the one or the other threſhold lay, but now by ſaying, that this was within, he makes it plain, that that threſhold was without, as hath been before ſaid.

V. 8. He meaſured alſo the porch of the gate within one reed. This verſe in vulg. Lat. is wholly wanting, the words going before in the end of v. 7. being diſtinguiſht from it, as v. 8. but it is in the originall, but then a queſtion ariſeth, how the porch is ſaid here to be but one reed, and yet v. 9. the porch is ſaid V. 9. to be eight cubits, that is, two more then the reed, ſeeing it was but ſix cubits, as was before ſhewed? Sol. It was one reed broad according to the breadth of the threſhold both without and within, but eight cubits long, the meaſure of one reed being ſix cubits ſetting forth the Church militant upon earth, and that of eight cubits the Church triumphant in heaven. For here we live in a world made in ſix dayes, wherein we muſt labour and are but as it were in the porch, or way, that leadeth to that bleſſedneſſe, yet we have ſome reſt of a ſeventh day or ſabbath, as it were by faith in Chriſt, to whom Matth. 11. 28. whoſoever commeth ſhall finde reſt to his ſoul. But in the world to come we attain, as it were, to an eighth day, when our joy ſhall be more inlarged, there being no ſix dayes of labour, or one in ſeven of reſt, but all our time Note. an eighth day, and that to eternity. We not being wearyed or laden any more, nor hungring nor thirſting, nor weeping, but all tears wiped from our eyes for ever, to ſet forth which, Chriſt roſe upon the eighth day, by whom we ſhall have a joyfull reſurrection to the ſame happineſſe in the time by him appointed. And that this happy eſtate in heaven, is hereby ſet forth, becauſe it is ſaid, the porch within was eight cubits, is intimated by that word, within: and the poſts of the gate were two cubits, this is further added to ſhew, that none are in this gate ready to enter this porch, but ſuch as have in them the love of God and the love of their neighbour, theſe two are the two cubits, and one alone 1 Job. 3. ſufficeth not, we cannot love God, as S. John teacheth, unleſſe we love our neighbour, and if we love our neighbour, but [illegible] God, to be carryed with all eagerneſſe to that, whereby he may be glorified, we rob God of his due to give it to a mortall creature; yea we honour man above God, as Eli is 1 Sam. 2. 30. challenged, thou haſt honoured thy ſons above me.

V. 10. And the little chambers of the gate Eaſtward, were three on this ſide, and three on that ſide. Of the little chambers, what was ſet forth by them ſee before, they were faithfull ſouls, or little Churches; which all make one Catholick Church and ſpouſe, or bride of Chriſt, in whom he is as in the ſame chamber, or bed, to communicate his love unto them. Now of theſe, ſome are on this ſide, and ſome on that: to intimate the faithfull under the old Teſtament, and the faithfull under the new; and they are ſaid to be three, either becauſe they all beleeved the holy Trinity, or on either ſide they were of three times, they under the old Teſtament, firſt before the giving of the Law; Secondly, in the time of Moſes the Law-giver; Thirdly, in the time of the Prophets: they under the New Teſtament, firſt the faithfull of the Jewes, who firſt imbraced the Goſpell; Secondly, of the Gentiles, who came next in; Thirdly, of the remnant of the Jewes, which ſhall be towards the end of the World converted. Or elſe by theſe three, are ſet forth three orders of men in either of theſe times, the firſt of preachers; the ſecond, of continent perſons; the third, of the marryed, who yet are good and godly; who under the Old Teſtament were exemplified in Noah, Job, and Daniel, of whom it is ſpoken, Ezek. 14. Noah a preacher of righteouſneſſe, Daniel, who led a ſingle life, and Job, who lived holily in the marryed eſtate. And under the New Teſtament, in many, who were ſome of them both Preachers and marryed men, as Peter, and others of 2 Cor. 9. the Apoſtles; ſome Preachers, and ſingle men, as Paul, and John: but it is to noted, againſt the preſent practiſe of the Church of Rome, that there were more marryed, then unmarryed: and as of a thing commonly uſed, to receive the marryed into the miniſtery, it is preſcribeed, Let a Biſhop be the 1. Tim. 3. husband of one wife. And they three had one meaſure on this ſide, and on that, and the poſts had one meaſure: that is, they were alike accepted of before God and glorified, in what ſort of Men ſoever, the two things before ſpoken of, were found, the love of God, and the love of their neighbour, and the acknowledgement of the Trinity in unity: and thoſe three of which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Love, Hope, and Charity. But this may ſeem ſtrange, ſaith Gregory, ſeeing of theſe Gregor. three ſorts, one is much more excellent then another: the preacher that continually laboureth in the work of the Lord, then he, that for the kingdome of heaven makes himſelf chaſt, being therefore called a labourer together with God, an angell, a light, a builder, a leader, and embaſſadour, and one ſet over nations to whom others muſt be ſubject. The perſon living in perpetuall 1 Cor. 17. virginity, then the marryed, becauſe he careth not for the things of the world, as the other doth, but only for the things of the Lord, and how to pleaſe him. He anſwereth, yet they ſhall all be glorified with the ſame glory, as we may ſee in the labourers, who came into the vineyard at divers hours, yet they were all paid alike a penny. Thus he, but although the glory of one Saint, ſhalbe the ſame with that of another, yet there ſhall be degrees of glory to divers orders of men, viz. to preachers and to righteous Chriſtians, they

But any degree of preference, that virgins ſhall have above other godly perſons that are marryed, we read not, yea it is ſaid, that half of them are wiſe, and the other half fooliſh, who ſhall never come in heaven, and of the wiſe only, that they were let in with the bridegroom, which may well ſtartle thoſe votaries of Rome, who attribute much unto this, that they have vowed virginity forever, hoping therefore all of them to follow the Lamb, and to be in greateſt favour with him of all others.

And he meaſured the breadth of the entring of the gate ten cubits, and the length of the gate thirteen cubits. By the breadth of the gate here of ten cubits underſtand the faithfull under the Old Teſtament; and by the length of the gate thoſe under the New, the one being ſet forth by ten, becauſe both the Law then commanded the paying of the tenth; and all, that the common ſort knew of the will of God, was the decalogue or ten Commandements only; but under the Goſpell, the faithfull ſervants of Chriſt inſtead of having any thing promiſed them in this world for their ſervice, are prepared to loſe and forſake all for riches in heaven, and all commonly now know the Trinity three in one, infinite and everlaſting eſſence, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, therefore the gate in length, exceedeth the entrance in breadth three cubits. The holy Fathers indeed and Prophets, had then the knowledge of the Trinity alſo, but they imparted it not unto others of the common ſort plainly enough to be by them underſtood. But to me it ſeemeth rather, that by three added to ten it was ſhewed, that the Commandements, which were ten, ſhould be by Chriſt ſo ſet forth, as that they ſhould now be ſo far from being diſſolved, that they ſhould be inlarged at the leaſt in expreſſion of three things more forbidden, unadviſed anger, looking upon a woman to luſt after her, and ſwearing in our common talk, as they are Matth. 5. 22, 28, 33. But what means the diverſity of meaſures here, the threſhold one reed, the inner porch eight cubits, the entrance of the gate ten cubits, and the length of the gate thirteen? Sol. Hereby was ſhewed, that the knowledge of God, which the holy Fathers had at the firſt, ſhould be more in the moſt eminent of the faithfull in divers ages to come. For God revealed himſelf not ſo fully to Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, as to Moſes, as appeareth, where he ſaid, that by the name Jehovah he was not known unto them, but by this name he made himſelf known to Moſes: again he communicated more knowledge to the Prophets, that lived afterwards, then to Moſes, or Abraham, witneſſe that ſaying of the Prophet David, I have more underſtanding then my teachers, then the ancient: laſtly the Apoſtles ſaw yet more, then all they, for many great Kings and Prophets, ſaith our Lord unto them, deſired to ſee, that which ye ſee, and ſaw it not, for they ſaw and knew Chriſt came in the fleſh, which none before them did. For this John the Baptiſt is ſaid to be a Prophet, yea, and greater then a Prophet, and that there was not any man born of a woman greater then he. And Daniel was according to this, that many ſhould run to and fro, and that knowledge ſhould increaſe, whereupon Gregory quanto magis mundus ad extremitatem ducitur, tanto nobis æternæ ſcientiæ aditus largius aperitur. And the ſpace before the little chambers was one cubit on this ſide, and one cubit on that ſide, and the little chambers were ſix cubits on this ſide, and ſix on that: vulg. And the border before the chambers of one cubit, and one cubit the end on both ſides. Hebr. And the border before the chamber one cubit, and one cubit the border on this ſide and on that. The meaning being beſt expreſſed in our tranſlation. By this ſpace or border of one cubit underſtand Faith in Chriſt, which is placed before the Chambers ſetting forth the ſouls love to Chriſt, and his mutually to her, becauſe faith goeth before love: and we cannot have that love to him, nor he to us, till faith commeth into our hearts, and this is ſaid to be of one cubit, becauſe of the unity thereof in all the faithfull, they hold not divers, but one and the ſame faith, for the upholding of which the Apoſtles Creed was firſt compiled; and when divers faiths began to be held by the Arrians, the Nicene Creed; and finally the Athanaſian; ſtill to keep up the unity of the ſame faith in all things, and this is ſaid to be the border before theſe chambers on this ſide and on that; to ſhew, that although the times were divers, wherein beleevers lived under the Old Teſtament, and under the New, yet the faith was one and the ſame at all times, for which it is ſaid Jeſus Chriſt, yeſterday, and to day, and the ſame for ever: Heb. 13. 8. only they beleeved in him, that was to come, we in him already come: as is at large declared Hebr. 11. And the ſame was prefigured in the Arke, which was finiſhed in the top in a cubit, although downward many cubits in all the dimenſions thereof; all parts yet in the finiſhing met in one, and ſo doth the Church in one, Chriſt being joyned and coupled together, till it groweth to a perfect Temple in the Lord, as the members of the body are joyned Eph. 2. 20. all together to one head: hitherto the border before the chambers. But what meaneth this that the chambers are now ſaid to be of ſix cubits, whereas before they were ſaid to be a reed, which was ſix cubits and an hand breadth? To this Gregory anſwereth, that the hand breadth is here left out, which ſetteth forth contemplation, and ſix cubits only named ſhewing practice, be- Gregor.

cauſe moſt of thoſe of whom congregations do conſiſt, attain not to the knowledge of divine myſteries, as being too high for their underſtanding to reach unto, that is, the more ſublime and difficult paſſages of the Word, of which, or ſome of which the Apoſtle diſcourſeth, Heb. 7. but tels the beleeving Hebrews, that they were not capable of theſe no more then little children, whoſe food is milk, of ſtrong meat. part, obeying and doing good, and being inflamed with the love of God out of that knowledge which they have. And if the little chambers, the meaſure whereof is here ſet down ſix cubits, be thus underſtood, then they are two wayes offered to our conſideration, before as having their name from the more heavenly and lightſome part, here from the greater part of them, that were not of ſo deep underſtanding, yet godly and accordingly practicall.

He meaſured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber, to the roof of another; the breadth was twenty five cubits, door againſt door. By the gate as was before ſhew- V. 13.
ed, Chriſt is to be underſtood, or the holy Scripture, becauſe hereby it is opened into the kingdome of heaven, by the little chambers the mutuall love betwixt Chriſt and the faithfull ſoul; the roof of the gate then, if hereby we underſtand knowledge attained by the holy Scriptures, is a covering put hereupon, by the obſcure ſetting forth of things therein contained, by means whereof many never come to the knowledge hereof in this world, although all they, that ſhall be ſaved, are ſuch as read, hear, and ſtudy the Scriptures; and by theſe means from places, that be eaſie to be underſtood, Joh. 17. 3. come to ſome competent knowledge of God, and of his Son Jeſus Chriſt, which is life everlaſting. And from the moſt intelligent, many things are hidden touching the kingdome of heaven, till they come thither, for which the Apoſtle saith, here we know but in part, even as a man, that is told much of 1 Cor. 13.
a noble city, whileſt he is in the way unto it, underſtandeth not all yet, which he ſhall know, when he cometh thither; ſo we in our pilgrimage being told many things touching heaven, to which we are travelling, underſtand ſomewhat indeed touching this moſt happy eſtate; but when we come there, we ſhall ſee and know much more, even the greateſt things, that are yet hidden from us, as under a roof or covering, for ſo the word גג here uſed, ſignifieth either roof or covering. Whereas the little chambers have alſo their roof, from which to this it is now meaſured: the like is to be held touching the intire love of Chriſt hereby ſet forth. Whether ours to him, or his to us, that beleeve in him: his is covered and not ſo revealed, till we ſhall come where he is to abide alwaies with him, as then it ſhall be, and the Chriſtians love to him, is covered from they eyes of men, becauſe there are many, who ſhew much love, but it is only fained, ſo that it is hidden from us, and we cannot now certainly know, who love him in ſincerity. But the moſt difficult thing to be underſtood in this place is, what the twenty five cubits mean Hierom. from the roof of the gate to the roof of the chambers in breadth? Jerom having wearyed himſelf in opening this by the five ſenſes multiplyed by five in five, ſaith, that this may ſeem childiſh, neither was he himſelf ſatisfied in it, and Gregor. therefore leaveth it unreſolved, confeſſing his ignorance herein. But Gregory, who wrote after him taketh much more pains in going the ſame way, by multiplying the five ſenſes, by the five works of mercy, ſpoken of Matth. 25.

Feeding the hungry, giving drink to the thirſty, clothing the naked, viſiting the ſick, and the impriſoned. For whoſo for the love of Chriſt doth thus, may well be ſaid in breadth or latitude to be going the large ſpace of twenty five cubits from the knowledge of God and Chriſt, whereat he began, to the chambers of divine love; there to have his fill of joy and comfort in Chriſt, as being now ready and prepared to be taken into thoſe chambers or manſions in heaven by Chriſt prepared for his beloved. For there is a ſtraightneſſe, in which he is, that will not give to the poor, becauſe he feareth that thus he himſelf may want before he dyeth, but a breadth or ſpacious place to him that truſting in God giveth liberally, which, he having gone through to the twenty fift cuſhall come to the foreſaid chambers of joy and comfort. But in coming to determin, why twenty five cubits are put here rather then any other number, I can neither ſubſcribe to Jerom or Gregory after his great pains taken hereabout, and reſolving that either they have reference to the five ſenſes, multiplyed by the five works of mercy before ſpoken of, or to the number of ſix, being the number of perfection multiplyed by the four Evangeliſts thus making twenty four, and then adding one, as God is one, to whom all good doing muſt be referred. For I ſee no ſenſe in all this. Wherefore do thou (O Lord and Father of lights) inlighten me to underſtand aright, what is meant by this number, that I may ſhew it to others for further inſtruction and comfort.
The latitude or breadth wherein the Chriſtian walketh after knowledge attained, till he commeth to enter under the roof of the chambers before ſpoken of, is ſaid to be of twenty five cubits, becauſe he doth not only five, but twenty five acts of love to his neighbour, five of which are thoſe before ſpoken of,

V. 14. He made alſo poſts of 60. cubits, even unto the poſt of the court round about the gate.

Vulg. He made fronts by 60. cubits, and at the front, the court of the gate every where round about. The word איל ſignifieth either poſts or frontiſpices, for, to 60. cubits, it is אל to or at. The meaning is, whereas he ſpake before of a wall about the houſe, now this wall incloſed a court, into which there were gates leading; and the frontiſpices hereof were 60. cubits. And it ſeemeth to me, that theſe were two poſts or frontiſpices before the gate of the houſe for ornament, as there were of old, two pillars at the gate of Solomons Temple, the one called Jachin, the other Boaz, of braſſe, with chapiters upon them curiouſly wrought, the pillars being 18. cubits high and the chapiters 5. cubits, but the frontiſpices or poſts here 60. in height, to ſhew, that the houſe of God under the New Teſtament, ſhould be far more eminent, then that under the Old, becauſe conſiſting of the faithfull of all nations. For the number of cubits being 60. Gregory ſaith, that 6. is the number of perfection, becauſe in 6. dayes God perfected all his works, and the 10. Commandements are the rule of perfection, ſo that all our works being done according to thoſe there ariſeth a frame, as it were, of 60. by the multiplying of 6 by 10. And to the fronts thus erected the court is appoſed round about, to ſhew that there is a dilatation by love in thoſe that ſtand up as glorious fronts in this building. For they that do good, or patiently ſuffer evill unworthily, that abhorre from injuſtice and wrong, and are remarkable for piety and righteouſneſſe, are goodly frontiſpices of the Spirit: building, if they have a ſpacious court before them of love, out of which they are ſtirred up thus to live and do, but if in vainglory ſuch do good ſeeking their own praiſe, and flee evill and wrong doing for fear, they are but fronts without a court, making indeed a glorious ſhew, but no true parts of this ſpirituall building, and therefore have only a temporary reward, credit, and eſtimation amongſt men; which ſoon vaniſheth, as a comet or blazing ſtarre, and ſhall hereafter have no reward.

Gregor.

Note.

Obj. But how doth this that is ſaid of a large place before thoſe frontiſpices, agree with that which is ſaid of the way, that leadeth to life, which is ſtraight and narrow?

Matth. 7. 4.

Sol. As this way is ſaid to be narrow, ſo it is alſo ſaid, that Gods Commandements are not grievous, and thy Commandements are exceeding large, and again, my yoke is eaſie and my burthen light. The way is ſtraight indeed at the firſt entrance, but whoſo is once entred, ſhall finde it through the delight that he takes therein exceeding large and pleaſant. Thus we ſee how a court, that is, latitude is before the front of Gods erecting, into which, yet the entrance is narrow. And this is ſaid to be round about, not only in doing good, but alſo in ſetting forth that by preaching, which conduceth to the good of the ſoul, and bearing patiently wrongs offered. For, as was ſaid before of doing good, and abhorring from evill, if it be for praiſe amongſt men, or for fear, here is a front without a court, ſo it is for preaching, if it be not in love, and patiently bearing with him that wrongs thee, if thou doſt not inwardly hate him. For to tolerate the wrong doer, but to hate him, is not the vertue of meekneſſe, but the covering of madneſſe. And it is to be noted, that he calleth the court, the court of the gate, for hereby it is ſhewed, that he who hath his heart inlarged by love, as hath been ſaid, hath it extended to the very gate of heaven, although he cannot yet come thither, yet in deſire he is there already, and looking at the recompence of reward there to be received, he is thus inlarged and not in any worldly reſpect, as Paul in fighting the good fight, and running the good race, and holding the faith looked at the crown of righteouſneſſe to be beſtowed upon him. And our Lord ſeeks hereby to ſtir up to almes-deeds in ſecret, Matth. 6.

V. 15.

And from the face of the gate of the entrance, to the face of the porch of the inner gate, were 50. cubits. Hereby it appeareth that the court hitherto ſpoken of was the inner court, the outward being left to be ſpoken of, v. 17. Now from the gate with the fronts before ſpoken of, he returneth again to ſhew the ſpace of this court to the entrance of the houſe, and ſaith it was 50. cubits, whereby is denoted the eternall reſt, that they come unto, who paſſe through this court of love, being herein inlarged, as was before ſaid. For that fifty ſetteth forth reſt and joy to come may be gathered, becauſe every fiftieth yeer (Levit. 25.) was to the ancient people of God a Jubilee, ſo that hereby it is ſhewed, that he, who paſſeth through the gate of faith, and hath his heart inlarged to love as hath been ſaid, is now come to the entrance of Gods heavenly kingdom there to enjoy everlaſting reſt and comfort.

V. 16. And there were narrow windows in the little chambers, and to their poſts within the gate round about, and to the arches, and windows were round about inward, and upon each poſt were palm trees. Vulg. for windows in the arches, hath windows in the threſholds round about, but the word אלמות ſignifieth properly faſciculi, bunches or things bound together, and becauſe a wall is bound together with morter, a wall, windows narrow without are ſaid to be in the little chambers, to ſhew ſome light of knowledge and comfort in reſpect of the happineſs to come, that they have, to whom Chriſt communicateth his love in ſecret, whilſt they live yet in this world, it is but little in compariſon of that which it ſhall be in the world to come, and therefore windows narrow without appeared. And there is light and comfort alſo to the poſts or fronts, that is, to ſuch as are conſpicuous for the unblamableneſs of their lives, and good deeds, that have the court before them, although not ſo wholly given to divine contemplations, as ſome are. Laſtly to the wals round about, that is, ſome of the common ſort of whom no ſuch notice is taken, yet this light is imparted alſo, and upon the poſt were palmes ingraven, to ſhew, that ſuch have gotten the victory over the world, who by Gods grace have brought themſelves to this that they can have patience and love in caſe of being wronged, and hearts, without fear of wanting afterwards, to give alms of that, which they have with a liberal hand. For of the faithful ſouls in long white robes waſhed in the blood of the lamb we read, that had palmes in their hands, when they were now come out of and had overcome great tribulations, Revel. 7.

V. 17. Part. 2. Then he brought me to the outward court, and loe there were chambers, and a pavement round about, and upon the pavement thirty Chambers. Hitherto the Lord hath been ſhewing Ezekiel the inner court, and the chambers, gates, porches, and fronts there; now he ſheweth the outward court with the appurtenances thereof to v. 28. For chambers here the Vulg. hath gazophylacia, treaſuries, and the word שלכות ſignifieth either. (Gregor.) And what can we better underſtand, ſaith Gregory, by treaſuries, then the Miniſters of Chriſt, who are treaſurers of divine learning and knowledge? wherein he ſpeaks well, for every Scribe, ſaith our Lord, inſtructed to the kingdom of heaven is like unto an houſholder, that out of his treaſury bringeth forth things both new and old. But why are treaſuries placed in the outer court, when as the common manner is to place them more inwardly, where they may be ſafeſt from theeves, and if the treaſure of a Miniſter be knowledge, it is chiefly within? Sol. This is not done to ſhew their inward knowledge, which is in their breaſts, but that, which they bring forth by preaching outwardly to the enriching of their auditors with knowledge and underſtanding (Note.) alſo. O that men would thus make account of knowledge, then would they (Prov. 3.) digg and ſearch for it, as for gold, as is commanded, and ſuch earthen veſſels, as bring this treaſure, ſhould be highly accepted of amongſt them for their preaching and writing, eſpecially, that bend their ſtudies to the inriching of their ſouls moſt in that knowledge, which of themſelves by reading the holy Scriptures or hearing, preaching upon places plaine and eaſie they cannot attain unto, their feet ſurely ſhould be beautiful upon the mountaines, whereby they go not only into particular congregations, as when they preach thus, but into all parts of the kingdom to make a more univerſal diſtribution of his treaſure, as when they write. But for want of this conſideration. Oh how lightly are the labors of ſuch teachers eſteemed of by moſt men, and therefore their books lye ſtil neglected as ſuperfluous things.

(1 Cor. 1.) To prove further that divine knowledge is riches, the Apoſtle ſaith, Yee were enriched in word and in knowledge, and touching this of underſtanding things most myſtical in the word as a degree beyond the knowledge of that which every man can attaine by reading, he ſaith, to one is given the ſpirit of wiſdom, and to another of knowledge, wiſdom being the treaſure, of which we are ſpeaking, viz. of underſtanding of theſe myſteries attained to by ſtudy and the illumination of Gods ſpirit, knowledge the underſtanding of theſe things by reading or hearing others, that open them.

1 Cor. 12.

To come now to the pavement round about, and the treaſuries upon the pavement round about. By the pavement faithful hearers are ſet forth, who are firme as a pavement by faith and low by humility under their teachers, as being ready to be ruled by them, for ſo it is ſaid, Obey them, that have the rule over you, and ſubmit your ſelves, and of the faith it is ſaid, To whom yee come as living ſtones and pretious, and of the pavement of the temple with Saphirs, ſee Eſa. 54. And it is to be noted, that he ſaith pavements round about and treaſuries round about, for it implyeth a treaſury and a pavement, a treaſury and a pavement between in the whole circuit, which is ſo ordered to ſhew, that the teacher ſhould look at the lives of his auditors to direct his inſtructions and reprooſes accordingly, being gentle and comfortable to his auditors wherein he ſeeth cauſe, but ſharpe and terrible to the contrary. Againe it is thus ordered, that the preacher ſeeing, to what pretiouſneſs through faith, humility, patience, and brotherly love he hath brought his hearers, or ſome of them by his teaching, if pride beginneth to ariſe in him for his gifts, he may ſpeedily ſuppreſs, if he be ſtirred to wrath he may keep it down by patience, if any other vice, be ready to break out in his life he may preſently ſtop the courſe thereof, as being much aſhamed to ſee thoſe good things in others by means of his inſtructions, but the contrary in any kind in himſelf. For as it is a ſhame for an hearer after much good inſtruction not to be brought from the darkneſs of ſin to be a childe of the light, ſo and much more the hearer being reformed, for the teacher to be deformed, the hearer by reproof amended, but the teacher depraved, for which it is commonly ſaid, It is a filthy thing in a teacher, when the fault, which he reproveth in another, reproveth himſelf. For the number of the treaſuryes 30. Gregory underſtands alſo hereby the ten commandements multiplyed by the Trinity, in the knowledge whereof all treaſuries of wiſdom and knowledge do conſiſt.

Note.

Turpe eſt doctori cum culpa redarguit ipſum.

V.18.

And the pavement by the ſide of the gates over againſt the length of the gates was the lower pavement, Or as the words will better bear, the pavement underneath, by which pavements underſtand, as before, godly hearers, by the gates preachers Eaſtward, Northward, Southward and Eaſtward, being compared to whom the hearers lye low in reſpect of their eminency, eſpecially by preachers the Apoſtles ſo admirable in vertue being underſtood, as the twelve gates, Rev. 21. having upon them the names of the twelve Apoſtles to ſhew this. And they may aptly be repreſented by gates, becauſe by them teaching in all Nations the Gentiles entred into the kingdom of heaven, and do daily enter, even all that by their teaching are converted.

Then the meaſured the breadth from the fore front of the lowergate to the front of the inner court without 100 cubits eaſtward and northward. The breadth here ſpoken of being 100 cubits ſetteth forth perfection, ſo much as can be attained to in this life. For an hundreth is the number of perfection, as we may ſee where it is ſaid, He that forſakes father and mother, wife and children,&c. ſhall receive a hundred fold in this life, For he cannot mean hereby, as the words ſound, a hundred wives for one, but the gift of perfection in his mind, whereby he deſpiſeth the world, and having nothing wanteth nothing, but is as if he had all things through inward joy and contentation, looking at the happineſs, in the way whereunto he now is, when his love towards Chriſt ſo greatly exceedeth his love of any earthly thing. The front of the lower gate, from whence this breadth extendeth to the inner courts front without, ſetteth forth faith, which is the beginning of perfection, and the other front without contemplation, both declaring themſelves by outward ſignes, ſo that they are known to men, amongſt whom ſuch converſe, faith by good works done without looking for the praiſe of men, and likewiſe contemplation, by ſighs and groans, and ſignes of ſpiritual joy, outwardly expreſſed: for as good fruit ſhew a good tree, ſo theſe and other like external ſignes a perfect heart. And therefore both fronts are ſpoken of, becauſe men can ſee no further, then to outward expreſſions, and when ſuch are made and nothing but humility in thoſe that make them, ſo far as man can ſee, here is the breadth of perfection. For the next words, towards the Eaſt and North, the Eaſt ſetteth forth the faithful ones of the Jews who are thus perfect, becauſe Judea ſtood Eaſtward, the North thoſe of the Gentiles, becauſe they lived before, as it were in a frigid zone being farre from the Sunſhine of grace and without all ſpirituall heate.

V. 20. And the gate of the outward Court towards the North he meaſured the length thereof
V. 21. and the breadth, &c. the length fifty cubits, and the breadth twenty five. For the Chambers, three on this ſide, and three on that, he referreth us to the meaſures of thoſe by the firſt gate, of which v. 6. whereby is intimated, that the ſame things were ſet forth by theſe, that were by thoſe. But coming to ſpeak of this gate he proceedeth not, as he did in ſpeaking of the Eaſt gate there, for of that he only ſaw him meaſure the breadth of the threſhold on either ſide, but here is the breadth of the gate and length thereof, the length, that is the heighth fifty cubits, and the breadth twenty five, very large dimenſions for a gate to enter by, but the South gate hath alſo the like, v. 25. whereby as well as by the North, yea by all the parts of the heaven the Gentiles, that were to enter, are ſet forth, Luc. 13. 29. and although Gregory, according to whom I ſpake before, will have the Jews ſet forth by the Eaſt gate, yet more probably all theſe gates of the outward court ſet forth the Gentiles coming to the faith from all parts.

For the length and breadth ſpoken of here it is the ſame, that was before between the roof of chamber and chamber, and gate and gate, v. 13. 15. where the reader may ſee what is to be conjectured of the meaning; only apply that, which is here ſhewed to the Church of the Gentiles in every thing comformable to that of the Jews, who were the faithful ſervants of God under the Old Teſtament, and at the beginning of the New. For although I think it not ſo good to underſtand by the Eaſt gate here any other then by the North, yet there, where the inmoſt court is ſpoken of, by the Eaſt gate the coming in of the Jews to Chriſt may beſt be underſtood. In general the length and breadth of theſe gates being ſo great, ſhewed the abundance that ſhould come in to Chriſt at the preaching of the Goſpel.

V. 22. And they went up unto it by ſeaven ſteps. Of the ſtairs and degrees by which it was aſcended to the Eaſt gate of the inmoſt court, it was ſpoken before, v. 6. but the number is not ſet down, as here it is, and v. 34. ſpeaking of the inner that is the middle court, the number of the ſtaires are eight. By the ſeven ſteps or ſtairs, whereby we muſt aſcend to come into the kingdom of heaven, the ſevenfold grace of the ſpirit of God is ſet forth, which are ſaid to be in

V. 41. as one goeth up to the entry of the north gate were 2. tables, and on the other side at the porch of the gate 2. tables. 41. Four tables on this side, and 4. on that, &c. What is meant by the gate, hath been before ſhewed; when it is ſpoken of the divers gates about the courts, as here it is of the north gate in particular, viz. The holy Apoſtles by whom beleevers entred in to Chriſt, and the porch diſtinguiſhed into two, the inner and the outer, is the word of God diſtinguiſhed into two, the Old and New Teſtament, or the faithfull in the time of either, the two tables on this ſide ſet forth faith and a life led accordingly, two on 1 Cor. 13. that ſide, patience and benignity, as it is ſaid, Love is long ſuffering and benigne.
The tables in the porch without on this ſide, doctrine and propheſie, thoſe on that ſide circumciſion and ſacrifice, for ſuch are the tables, that are fit to ſlay ſacrifices upon, under the Old Teſtament, ſuch as imbraced the doctrines and propheſies therein propounded into their hearts, and outwardly conformed thereunto by circumciſing and ſacrificing; and under the New Teſtament, Jam. 2. they that beleeve by a faith, wherein is life, and not by a dead faith, Rom. 12. and are not only patient of wrongs, but alſo benigne, doing good to thoſe that wrong them. The ſacrifices ſlain upon theſe tables are burnt-offerings, thoſe for ſins and for treſpaſſes, that is, thoſe of the porch within for burnt-offerings, which were Holocauſts, and theſe were whole bullocks burnt by fire, no part being reſerved, the ſacrifices for ſins were for commiſſions of evill, and for treſpaſſe, for omiſſions of good, called in Latine delicta quaſi derelicta, left undone. Theſe laſt were ſlain upon the tables in the outer porch, the other upon thoſe in the inner, to ſhew, that more is required of the faithfull under the New Teſtament then of the faithfull under the Old, they were commanded only to give tithes and offerings, all the reſt of their goods being reſerved to themſelves, and to give and ſend ſomewhat to the poor; but under the New Teſtament, He that will be my diſciple muſt forſake all, ſaith Chriſt, and take up his croſſe, & then an whole burnt-offering is ſlain, there being at the leaſt a readineſs and reſolution ſo to do in the Chriſtian, when he is thereunto called. Laſtly, the tables are ſummed up together to be 8. for ſacrifices of all ſorts, 4. on one ſide in both porches, and 4. on the other. And this putting in five of all together, ſheweth that even under the Old Teſtament as well as under the New the faithfull offered whole burnt-offerings, as well as other ſacrifices; alſo by having in them the 4. and 4. that is, the eight things before ſpoken of, doctrine, propheſie, circumciſion, and ſacrifice, faith and a good life, patience and benignity, for all theſe muſt be, that there may be Note. tables enough to ſlay ſacrifices upon of all ſorts. And an holocauſt is not only in leaving all, but being mortified to the world ſo, as that a man is dead to all ſin, and offereth the tears of contrition to God for his ſins both of omiſſion and commiſſion, of deed and thought, which alſo be ſet forth by ſinnes and treſpaſſes, as not only the faithfull under the New Teſtament, but alſo under the Old were bound to do. As one goeth up to the entry of the north gate; hereby the law being meant which cauſeth cold fear, as the north is cold.

V. 42. And these four tables were of hewen ſtone for the burnt-offerings of a cubit and half long, and as much broad, and a cubit high, whereupon they alſo laid the inſtruments, with which they ſlew the burnt-offerings. Having ſpoken of 8. tables by four and four, v. 41. 4. in the inner porch, and 4. in the outer, here to ſhew, that thoſe within were for burnt-offerings, as the principall ſacrifices, and moſt acceptable of all others; now for the dignity of theſe he reſumes his diſcourſe about them again, telling of what they were made, viz. of ſquare ſtones, for ſo the Vulg. Lat. renders it, although the word גזית ſignifieth, hewed, but the word hewed and ſquared, are ſo promiſcuouſly uſed, that we may underſtand it of ſtones hewed on four ſides, ſo that which way ſoever they be turned they ſtand and cannot fall, whereby is ſhewed the ſetled continuing of the faithfull in the way of righteouſneſſe, whether they be in proſperity or adverſity, terrified by threatenings or allured by promiſes, for they have the four vertues before ſpoken of to ſtand upon, faith, a good life, patience and benignity. Of which Gregory bringeth Paul for an example, which ſhewed, 1. His faith, when he ſaid, to me Chriſt in life and death is gain. 2. His patience, when he ſaid, we hunger and thirſt, and being curſed we bleſſe. 3. His life, in ſaying, I am crucified to the world, and the world unto me. 4. His benignity, in ſaying, I ſhall moſt willingly beſtow my ſelf, and be beſtowed in the ſervice of your faith: for ſuch a man ſtands firm, being neither puft up by proſperity, nor broaken by adverſity, nor by perſwaſion drawn to evill, nor by threatning to forbear the doing of any good. For the length and breadth of ſuch a table, it is ſaid to be one cubit and half, the heighth one cubit, becauſe the length ſetting forth long ſuffering, and the breadth, love, ſhew vertues, which are in a greater meaſure in the ſaints in this life, then the knowledge of heavenly things, ſet forth by the heighth which was of one cubit, as it was in Paul; for he ſpeaking of himſelf and others abounding in love and patience, ſaith, ſo many of us, as be perfect, let us be thus minded: but for knowledge, not as if I had attained it, or were perfect, &c. Loe one in length and breadth a perfect ſquare, as long as broad, but not ſo high, the attaining to perfection in this being left, till another life. For the laying of the inſtruments, to ſlay the ſacrifices, upon theſe tables, hereby can be nothing elſe ſo aptly ſet forth, as the Words of God, for the Word is ſaid to be the ſword of the Spirit, and ſharper then any two edged ſword, and collations being made out of this, as ſlaying inſtruments lye upon theſe tables, when the faithfull have this word ready at all times to cut off temptations, as they be ſuggeſted, as Chriſt had when he was tempted by the devill, and ſo prevailed againſt him.

V. 43. And within were hooks an hand broad faſtened round about, and upon the tables the fleſh of the offering. Vulg. Their lips were an hand broad, bent back inwardly round about. The Hebr. agreeth beſt with the New Tranſlation, as not ſignifying a lip, but an hook of iron to hang fleſh upon, for it is שפת with a prick in the right horn, not שפת with a prick in the left, which ſignifieth a lip. But for what reaſon the vulg. renders it ſo I know not, but for the rendring of it hooks turning inwardly round about the porch, where the tables were, there is good reaſon. For the fleſh being cut out upon the tables, was moſt probably hanged off, as ſoon as it was cut out, till the laſt cut, the fleſh whereof, lay ſtill upon the tables, till it was taken from thence to be laid upon the Altar, and the parts hanged up upon the hooks moſt probably were the Prieſts parts, and if any others, that were for the ſacrifice were to make room upon the table, hanged up alſo, they were taken down again and laid upon the table. By the hooks turned inward one palm, or ſpan, as Gregory underſtands it, which is the breadth of the hand extended from the end of the thumb to the end of the little finger; we may, ſaith he, underſtand the doctrine of the preacher ſtirring up to good works, which are done with the hand reflected to himſelf, which is, when he applyeth it ſo home to himſelf, that in doing good, he becometh as an hook to draw on others, and not by doctrine only, and that by doing all good things from the greateſt to the leaſt, from judgement, righteouſneſſe and mercy to the tithing of very mint and cummin, as our Lord teacheth. For the fleſh of the offering, being upon the tables, this ſhewed, how that the fleſh appeared to be mortified by the inſtruments to ſlay with before ſpoken of, that is, the word of God, they into whoſe hearts this word pierceth, being hereby made as ſquare tables of ſtone ſtanding firm in the ſtate of godlineſſe upon all occurrences.

V. 44. And without the inner gate were the chambers of the ſingers in the inner court, which was at the ſide of the north gate, and their proſpect was towards the ſouth, one at the ſide of the eaſt gate, the proſpect toward the north. By ſingers here we may underſtand the faithfull rejoycing in the grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt, which makes them ſing of mercy, according to that of David, I will ſing of mercy and judgement, to thee (O Lord) will I ſing. But what is it that he ſaith the chambers of theſe ſingers were without, and yet in the inner court? were they without and yet within, how could this be? Sol. The faithfull, that have joy for the happineſſe to come, which is their muſick, are in the outer court, that is, the Pſal. 101.

Church militant in perſon, but in deſire and faith in the inner, that is, the Church triumphant in heaven, and therefore they are ſaid both to be without 2 Tim. 4. 41. and within. See this verified in Paul, ſaying, I have fought a good fight, I have run a good race : now remaineth nothing for me but the crown of righteouſneſſe. He was without fighting aud running, but within knowing by faith, that he had a crown there, of which he had now ſo great joy. For the ſituation of theſe chambers, or treaſuries, as the vulg. renders it, they are ſaid to be by the ſide of the north gate, their faces, or doors, whereby men entred into them being towards the ſouth, yet one was by the eaſt gate, the face thereof being towards Lyra. the north. For the better underſtanding whereof, ſaith Lyra, it is to be known, that theſe treaſuries were four; two for the ſingers, and two for the prieſts, of which it is ſpoken, v. 45. 46. Where yet it is ſpoken of V. 45. thus, one towards the ſouth for the Prieſts, who kept the charge of the houſe, and of V. 46. one towards the north for the Prieſts, the keepers of the charge of the Altar. Whereby it appears, that although it be ſaid *v.*44. One looking towards the north, it is not meant that this one chamber was of the ſingers alſo, for their chambers were by the north gate only looking to the ſouth; this by the eaſt looking to the north, of which it is again ſpoken, *v.*46. and one chamber more is intimated to have ſtood by the north gate towards the ſouth, v. 45. for ſome Prieſts, beſides the chambers of the ſingers there here were then 2. chambers, and a chamber by the north gate, the face to the ſouth, and one onely looking north. It is not by any means to be yeelded, as Lyra yeeldeth, that there is any corruption in the Text, the word one, by the incurie or ignorance of the ſcribe, being put for two, ſeeing that in every copy it is one, and in every tranſlation Greek and Latine, and for the Hebrew, Gods providence hath alwayes been ſuch, that there was never any corruption herein, in the leaſt word, ſuch care hath been alwaies uſed in the writing of it out amongſt the Jewes, who were the keepers of theſe holy Oracles, that if one letter were written wrong, the whole book was laid aſide, as uſeleſſe, unleſſe for the teaching of children to read thereby. For the chambers then here ſpoken of with their faces towards the ſouth for the ſingers, they were two, and they were placed right over againſt the ſouth, as the ſouth is oppoſite to the north, to ſhew further the comfortable eſtate of the faithfull in this life, for their looking towards God, and the happineſſe to come, ſet forth by the ſouth, from whence the warm gleams of the ſun come comfortably upon thoſe, that are in the north of this life, wherein there is ſharp and nipping cold by many adverſities and miſeries. The other two are by the eaſt gate, and look out towards the ſouth, and the other towards the north, and were the one for the Prieſts of the houſe, the other for thoſe of the Altar by the eaſt gate, the one was to ſignifie the miniſters nearneſſe to Chriſt under the Goſpell, even ſo near, that he makes account of them as of himſelf, witneſſe that ſaying of his,
He that heareth you, heareth me, and he that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me, and again, whatſoever ye binde upon earth ſhall be bound in heaven : as he had power to forgive ſinne, ſo communicating it unto them; and of his being ſet forth, as the eaſt, enough hath been ſaid before. But why doth this chamber or treaſury look, or the faces ſtand towards the north? Sol. Becauſe, as hath been before ſhewed, the north ſetteth forth the Gentiles in whom there was nothing Eph. 2. 2. but a chilly coldneſſe, as of the dead, but they were ſent forth from Chriſt, as the eaſt where the Sun ariſeth bringing heat and warmth. When he ſaid, Goe ye, teach all nations, &c. for then they that were before dead in ſinnes and treſpaſſes, were by the grace of faith revived. And theſe Prieſts or Miniſters be of two ſorts, ſome keepers of the Houſe, and ſome of the Altar, wherein it is alluded to the diſtinction of the Prieſts of old, ſome of whom were ſuch as kept the watch of the Lords houſe in their courſe, and ſome offered the ſacrifices, and theſe that offered, are ſaid to be the ſons of Zadok of Levi, becauſe that Abiathar being by Solomon put from the Prieſts office, Zadok was ſet up in his ſtead to be High-prieſt, and therefore his ſons as the ſuperiour prieſts ſerved at the Altar, the other prieſts kept the houſe, that no unclean perſons perſons might enter. But hereby it was ſhewed, that under the Goſpell the miniſters of Chriſt ſhould have a double work to do, one to preach and pray, which was as an offering of ſacrifice unto God, according to that, Offer to Pſal. 50.

God the ſacrifice of praiſe, and to that of the Apoſtle, We are every where a ſweet 2 Cor. 2. 15. ſmelling ſavour unto God: and well may this be compared to that which was done upon the Altar, viz. burning and conſuming fleſh by fire, becauſe by the Spirit going along with their preaching that which is carnall and fleſhly in their auditours is conſumed: the other of ruling by cenſuring groſſe offenders; and abſolving the penitent, and ſuppreſſing and ſtopping the mouthes of Hereticks, for thus the Church of God, which is his houſe, is kept, as it were with watch and ward. It may ſeem indeed, and ſo ſome conjecture, that two ſorts of miniſters are here repreſented, one of majores or greater, the other of minores or leſſer miniſters, the former being over the houſe or Church to rule herein, for the keeping out of hereticks, and groſſe ſinners, the latter for preaching.
But this is improbable, both becauſe preaching is the greater and more honourable work, as appears 1 Tim. 5. 17. and the firſt miniſters of the Goſpell had authority given them alike both to preach and rule, and Paul who was one of them, that had ſuch authority, ſaith the diſpenſation is committed unto me, and woe is to me, if I preach not the Goſpell; wherefore no miniſter is ſo to 1 Cor. 9. apply himſelf to ruling, as not to preach alſo, neither are any ſet up to preach, that may be denyed to bear a part in the government, ſeeing he who hath power in the thing, that is greater, doubtleſſe hath power in the leſſer pertaining to the ſame calling. And here it is to be noted, that they are all Prieſts both that govern and preach, that keep the Houſe and ſerve at the Altar; to which alſo preaching is compared, 1. Cor. 9. They then that are Note. of another calling who take upon them to ſhare in this government under the name of lay Elders, are intruders, and have no calling from God to this Office, whatſoever they have by men, which I would to God our civill rulers, or higher powers would ſeriouſly conſider, and ſo I doubt not, but that they would be ſo far from being the authors hereof, as that they would rather put to their hands to pull down this mungrell government whereſoever it is ſet up, that the rulers of the Church might be wholly Church-men.
Whereas it is added, theſe are the ſons of Zadok of Levi, which come near the Lord to miniſter unto him; hereby is ſhewed, that all the miniſters of Chriſt, who preach the Word, ſhould be as Zadok, patternes of righteouſneſſe, as the word ſignifieth, for צדק of which it commeth, is righteouſneſſe; and to ſhew, that righteous miniſters by preaching come to ſtand by the Eaſt gate, that is, Chriſt, and ſo to be neareſt to him, and not ſo much by ruling, although this being well done is commendable alſo, as appeareth by his ſaying, that thoſe of the ſons of Levi came near to miniſter to the Lord, whereas the other prieſts had their chamber by the north gate near the ſingers looking to the ſouth.

So he meaſured the court 100. cubits long and 100. broad, fourſquare, and the Altar V. 47. was before the houſe. This was the inner court, otherwiſe called the prieſts court, wherein under the open heaven, they offered ſacrifices upon the great brazen Altar, which it is here ſaid, ſtood before the houſe, as there was another within the houſe of gold to burn incenſe upon. This court, as the houſe it ſelf repreſented the Church under the Goſpell, 100. cubits long, and 100. broad, intimating the long ſuffering and perfect patience of the faithfull in the length, and their perfect love and charity in the breadth, as being extended not only to friends, who are nearer, but alſo to ſtrangers and enemies, as further off, for when our Lord commended unto us the love of our enemies after the example of God, he concluded, Be therefore perfect, as your Father Math. 5. which is in heaven is perfect; and as hath been before ſhewed, 100. is the number of perfection. Whereas it is added, fourſquare, this is not ſuperfluouſly done, as it may ſeem, becauſe that which is as long as broad is fourſquare, as all men know, but to intimate beſides the two graces already ſpoken of, patience and love, two more, faith and practice, and that then we are truly of this court, when we have all theſe proportionable one to another, accor-Note. ding to the perfecteſt meaſure, a perfect faith firſt, and annexed hereunto as much love, and to love as much patience, and to patience as much beneficence. For no man hath more true faith then he hath love, and no more love then patience in ſuffering wrongs and patiently ſuffering perſecution, and no more patience then practice, fleeing the ſins forbidden and doing the good commanded and acts of mercy towards the diſtreſſed and poor. For the Altar before the houſe, that is, the Brazen Altar, where-on beaſts were offered in ſacrifice, hereby was ſhewed the conſuming of the fleſh & carnality in us by the fire of the Spirit, that we may enter into the kingdome of heaven, into which none ſhall enter, that are ſtill fleſh and bloud, although by the profeſſing and preaching of the faith, they come to be of the inner court, for ma-Matth. 7. 21 ny, ſaith Chriſt, ſhall ſay, we have propheſied in thy name, and caſt out devils; but Cor: 15. I will ſay unto them, Depart ye workers of iniquity, and it is expreſly ſaid, fleſh and bloud ſhall not inherit the kingdome of heaven.

V. 48. And he brought me to the porch, and meaſured each poſt, 5. cubits on this ſide, and
5. on that; and the breadth of the gate was 3. cubits on this ſide, and 3. on that. Vulg.
He meaſured the porch, ſo likewiſe Hebr. not poſt, and it is meant ſo much of the porch, as was on one ſide of the gate thereof, and ſo much as was on the other, the gate between the ſides having two leaves, one 3. cubits and the other 3. By porta yet, ſaith Lyra, we are to underſtand poſtes portarum the poſts on each ſide of the gate, but hereof he yeeldeth no reaſon, although I grant it may be conceived, that it was ſo, becauſe otherwiſe we have not the full length of the porch, which was 20. cubits, there being in the meaſures here V. 49. ſpoken of only fifteen cubits, for that the length of the porch was 20. is ſhewed v. 49. as the breadth of the Temple was, and there were poſts, although not here expreſſed, is ſhewed there alſo, and ſteps whereby to go up to the porch, as ſtanding upon the top of mount Zion. For the meaſures of this ſide and that 5. cubits each of them, they together making ten, hereby the 10.
Commandements may not unaptly be underſtood, and by the 3. and 3. cubits of the gates, the one the faith of the bleſſed Trinity, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, the other the three applications of the commandement againſt Matth. 5 murther, againſt adultery, and againſt ſwearing. For whoſo will enter into life muſt keep the Commandements both of the Old Teſtament and of the New, and he that beleeveth ſhall be ſaved, and true beleeving is in the Father, in the Son, and in the Holy Ghoſt, as in the form of baptizing, Mar. 16.
Hieron. For the length of the porch 20. cubits, and the breadth 11. Jerom will have corruption hereby ſet forth in the beſt of Gods Saints in this life, yea even in thoſe that carry a treaſure in earthen veſſels, the miniſters of Chriſt, becauſe 20. is two tens, and the number of two is never put to expreſſe good, but of one or three, and the number of 11. comes one ſhort of 12. a perfect number, and therefore the Apoſtle Paul accordingly ſpeaketh of himſelf, as Rom. 7. is common to the leaſt; In me, that is, in my fleſh dwelleth no good: and, miſera- ble man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death? But foraſmuch as 10. is a number of perfection and in the number of twenty 20. ten is doubled and 11. includes 10. in it, and one more, and in him that had two talents we finde, that the number of two ſetteth forth good, in thoſe alſo, that were called the 11. hour of the day, the number of 11. is commended unto us, I cannot ſubſcribe to him, but rather conceive, that double perfection is hereby ſet forth to be in thoſe, that are in the porch for a double righteouſneſſe. 1. Of imputation through faith in Chriſt. 2. Of ſanctifi-cation, which is righteouſneſſe inherent by vertue of our regeneration, becauſe of ſuch as be regenerate, it is ſaid, He that is born of God ſinneth not, nei- 1 Joh. 3. 9 ther can he. And by the number of 11. perfect righteouſneſſe with the author thereof one God, unity in Trinity, of whom we have it, and not of 2 Cor. 3. 5. our ſelves, Who cannot of our ſelves think a good thought. And there were ſteps, whereby he brought me up to it. The vulg. becauſe 8. ſteps or ſtairs were ſpoken of before, renders it alſo 8. in this place, but Heb. no number is ſet down. Hereby

by then is only intimated, that no man being converted commeth to the higheſt pitch of perfection at the firſt, but aſcendeth towards this by degrees; firſt beleeving, but having ſome unbelief, for help againſt which he hath need to cry, as did the man in the Goſpell, and being ſanctified ſo, as that he hath need ſtill with Paul, to beat down his body and to bring it into ſubjection, and to acknowledge, how ſhort he yet comes of perfection, but conſtantly intendeth one thing, forgetting that which is behind and preſſing on to that, which is before, as the ſame Paul did. And there were pillars by the poſts or fronts on this ſide and on that. According to this we read, that James, and John, and Peter were pillars, and the Church of Philadelphia was a pillar in the houſe of God, to ſtand without being removed any more. As the Temple built by Salomon had two pillars, Jachin and Boaz, ſo the Church or Congregation under the Goſpell hath, Peter and Paul, James and John, yea all the Apoſtles in regard of whom the Church is called the ground and pillar of truth, ſtanding faſt and unmovable in the truth for ever, for ſo did they, and ſo doe all, that are built upon them, whether particular Churches or perſons imbracing the truth for them ſet forth, which ſhould teach us, how to make ſure to ſtand in the truth, and not to be carryed away to errour, viz. By taking heed of thoſe, that under pretence of S. Peters ſucceſſours, and the Catholick Church draw away millions to damnable hereſies, and trying them by the writings of the Apoſtles, as the Church of Philadelphia did theſe, that ſaid they were Jewes, and found them lyers. For whoſo doth thus, ſhall not be deceived, but eaſily finde them to be moſt dangerous deceivers, and bleſſe himſelf from comming in to have any part with them, as Jacob did from Simeon and Levi, becauſe they are moſt apparently degenerated from that which the Apoſtles and firſt Paſtours of the Church were, who are commended to us by the name of the pillar of truth.

CHAP. XLI.

V. 1.

AFterwards he brought me into the Temple and meaſured the poſts, ſix cubits broad on the one ſide and ſix on the other, which was the breadth of the tabernacle. For poſts, as before, the vulg. more agreeably to the Hebr. hath fronts or frontiſpices. Here is a deſcription of the temple, or Sanctum, after that of the porch before going, by the dimenſions thereof, and other parts adjoyning thereunto, that alſo of the Sanctum Sanctorum being firſt deſcribed likewiſe *v.*3. For the frontiſpices here Lyra noteth that they were not without but within, becauſe he ſaith, that he was firſt brought into the Temple, and then the man, whom he ſaw, began to meaſure, and by the breadth is meant the thickneſſe of theſe fronts, and for the addition, which was the breadth of the tabernacle, this, he ſaith, was the Temple ſo called in regard of the Tabernacle, which was firſt the place of divine worſhip, and in ſtead thereof was the Temple built by Solomon; then comes he to meaſure the gate 10. cubits, and the ſides on one ſide five cubits, and five on the other. Here Lyra ſaith, this may ſeem not to agree, the fronts 6. cubits a piece, and the gate 10. together making 22. whereas the breadth of the houſe was but 20. but he anſwereth, there is a cubit in thickneſſe counted on each ſide of the door, and ſo the breadth of the door was but 8. cubits, which added to 12. make juſt 20. But this objection and anſwer ſeem to me ſuperfluous, for the ſides of the gate being either of them 5. cubits and the gate 10. make the breadth of the houſe, viz. 20. and it is not ſaid, Hebr. which was the breadth of the Tabernacle, but only after the fronts and their breadth ſpoken of, it is barely ſaid, the breadth of the tabernacle; before which we may with better ſenſe prefixe, next for the breadth of the tabernacle, the breadth of the gate 10. &c. Moreover in ſaying, that by breadth of the fronts was meant their thickneſſe, he confoundeth himſelf, ſo ſoon making it again the breadth like that of the gate to come to this number of 22. The frontiſpices therefore were more probably not pieces ſtanding equally with the gate, but placed above, of that breadth fairly wrought, as the name doth imply. For Iſidor. the myſticall ſenſe Iſidor ſaith, that the fronts 6. cubits broad ſet forth the whole creation, which was perfected in 6. daies; and as by the ſight of theſe fronts the beauty of the Temple was ſeen, ſo the power and wiſdome of Pſal. 19. God is ſeen in the creation, as both David and Paul ſhew. For the gate Rom. 1. 10. cubits and the ſides five apiece, Jerom ſaith, that by the 10. perfection of Hieron. obedience to the 10. Commandements whereby men enter into life is ſet forth, although not in act, yet in heart, and by the fives, the ſenſes inter-nall and externall imployed hereabout. For when a man is in all his ſenſes taken up with the Commandements, he entreth, as it were by the gate into V. 2. the houſe of life. For the length of the Temple 40. cubits, it hath been often ſaid before, that by length, long ſuffering and patience is ſet forth, which they muſt be indued withall, that would enter into the Kingdome being left to be underſtood on this ſide and on that, the cubits being two ſet forth two principall graces, faith and love; the cubits of the door or ope-ning

V. 5. He meaſured the wall of the houſe 6. cubits, and the breadth of every ſide chamber 4. cubits round about the houſe. Here after the deſcription of the parts of the tem-ple, viz. the Sanctum, and the Sanctum Sanctorum, he proceeds to the wals of the whole building and the chambers built thereunto, which were 3. walled ſide chambers, and 30. in order, v.6. For the 6. cubits of the wall, this muſt needs be underſtood of the thickneſſe, and not of the breadth, becauſe that was much more, and thus thick had the wall of this high building need to be, that it might ſtand the more ſtrongly. For the chambers ſaid to be 4. cubits broad, ſome for chambers render it Latera, ſides, expounding it of butteresſes ſet to the wals an equall diſtance from one another the more to ſtrengthen it, and ſome exedras, ſeats, but both the word צלעות ſignifieth a chamber, and 1 King. 6. it is expreſly ſaid, that chambers one above another were built, the loweſt rank of chambers being 5. cubits, the next 6. cubits, the higheſt 7. cubits broad, but now it ſeemeth, that the loweſt was but 4. the next 5. and the higheſt 6. whereas then it is ſaid, the ſide chambers were 3. one over another 30. in order, the meaning is 3. ranks, in each of which if there were 10. we come to the number of 30. in all, 3. one above another in 10. ranks. And they entred into the wall which was of the houſe for the ſide chambers round about, that they might have hold, but they had not hold of the wall of the houſe. For the meaning of this ſee 1 King. 6. 6. he made narrowed reſts round about, that the beames ſhould not be faſtened in the wall of the houſe, the vulg. for entred into the wall, hath, there were eminencies, which entred into the wall, Hebr. and goings out in the wall, which was of the houſe, &c. For the words are ובאת בקיר אשרלבית the firſt words ſignifying, and goings, or goings out, or prominencies in the wall ſerving to ſupport and ſtay up that part of the chambers, which ſtood toward the wall of the houſe, that there might be no need to make breaches therein by making mortice holes for the uſe before ſaid, as the next words plainly ſhew, they had not hold of the wall of the houſe. Wherefore there is certainly a fault in the New Tranſlation, which ſaith, that they entred into the wall. But how theſe chambers ſtood, and for what uſe they ſerved, ſee my notes 1 King. 6. 5. where alſo the heighth and length of the houſe omitted here are ſet forth. For the ſpirit: meaning of the number of ſix, which was the thickneſſe of the wall, enough hath been ſaid before; for the number of four cubits the breadth of the chamber, Iſidor ſaith, that theſe ſet forth the 4. humours of the body, which being ſanctified, the cholerick to become zeal, the melancholick to ſadneſſe and ſorrow for ſin, the ſanguine to pleaſure in heavenly things, and the flegmatick to ſlowneſſe to anger, make men fit chambers for the Holy Ghoſt to dwell in; thus Iſidor, with a little ſupplement: and for the number of 3. and then of 30. chambers, he following the vulg. Latera ad latus, bis 33, i.e. 66. ſaith, that herein it is alluded to the law of purification after puerpery, where it is appointed, that a woman after bringing forth a maid childe, ſeven dayes being paſt, ſhe ſhould continue purifying 33. dayes, and after a maid, 2. weeks being paſt, 66. dayes. For which is it ſaid twice 33. and not without this duplicating of a number, 66. chambers, but to ſhew a double birth, as there, one a naturall, the other a ſpirituall, through both which when we have gone, we ſhall come to be as ſide chambers to the temple, that is holy and ſhining in glory, as that temple, that is, heaven doth, which is the ſeat of Gods reſidency for ever, as the materiall temple of the Jewes was for a time. Touching this reading of the vulg. it is favoured by the Hebr. only whereas it is Latera ad latus, ſides to ſide, Hebr. it is, chamber to chamber שלוש ושלשים פעמים. 33. two times: and then the ranks muſt be 11. three in a rank on the one ſide and three on the other, the New Tranſlation then needs correction here alſo. For the eminencies or goings out, whereupon one part of the chambers was ſtayed next the wall of the temple, ſo that they had no hold of the wall thereof, this, ſaith the Ord. gloſſe, ſignified the ſaints of God in their life and doctrine being as a foundation to the faithfull here living, who come not yet to the temple of heaven to enter thither, but by faith ſee it to come and are herein comforted, as it is ſaid, Heb. 11. They received not the promiſes, but ſaw them afar off and rejoyced.

V. 7. And there was an inlarging and winding upward to the ſide of the chambers, for the winding about the houſe went ſtill upward round about the houſe, therefore the breadth was ſtill upward, and ſo increaſed from the loweſt chamber to the higheſt by the midſt, Hebr. the lower aſcended to the higheſt to eſtabliſhment, or in preparedneſſe, as God had prepared or appointed it to do, and the circular roundneſſe with the inlargement was at the corners of the houſe, which was ſquare, ſo that the building of the chambers there muſt needs be larger, as fetching a compaſſe, that thoſe on the one ſide might meet with thoſe on the other. And hereby is intimated that which was before ſaid of the lower chambers being of leſſe breadth then the upper till they came to the uppermoſt of all, upon the top of which was the roof here called תכונת, of כון to prepare, or eſtabliſh, or infirmare, ſo that it may be rendred firmament, the root being ſo called, becauſe over the top of all the chambers, as the firmament is over the higheſt buildings or mountains: Iſidor. By the round going about of theſe chambers, the Note. roundneſſe of the world is ſet forth, from which the higher we aſcend in our contemplation of Divine things, the more is our underſtanding inlarged, as Peter being on the top of the houſe fell into a trance, and ſaw, and knew, that which he know not before, of the will of God touching the Jewes and Gentiles, being now all alike before him. And Chriſt took all the Apoſtles up to an upper room, and ſhewed them the great myſtery of eating his Fleſh, and drinking of his Bloud, to the attainment of everlaſting life.

V.8. I ſaw alſo the height of the houſe round about, the foundation of the ſide-chambers was a full reed of 6 great cubits. By the houſe here underſtand the wall of the houſe againſt which the chambers were placed; and for the foundation of theſe Lyra. chambers, as the vulg. hath it, I ſaw in the houſe round about, the height, the ſides founded, &c. expounded by Lyra, the height of the Chambers, which were loweſt: from the ground to their roof a reed, & conſequently from the loweſt to the roof of the ſecond a reed, and ſo likewiſe from thence, to the roof of the higheſt. But for ſo much as a reed is 6 cubits, and an hand breadth, how is it that he addeth after the reed ſpoken of, 6 great cubits? Sol. it is Hebr. 6 cubits, a ſpace; that is, ſomething more being above the 6 cubits, as it were given in to make up a full reed, that is, the foreſaid hand breadth. The height then of the chambers one above another in all, was 18 cubits, and 3 hand breadths, and this is called the height of the houſe, becauſe theſe adjuncts were part of the houſe, per Synecdochen.

V.9. The thickneſs of the wall for the ſide-chambers was 5 cubits without, and that which was left was the place of the ſide-chambers within; and betwixt the chambers was the wideneſs of 20 cubits round about the houſe on evry ſide within: Vulg. and the breadth by the wall of the ſide without 5 cubits. But by breadth is here meant thickneſſe, and for wall of the ſide, Hebr. it is the wall of the chamber, the ſingular being put for the plurall, chamber for chambers. By the wall without, that being meant, which was on the outſide of theſe chambers from the wall of the Temple, for that was within, upon the prominencies whereof they were ſupported on that ſide, as upon this wall 5 cubits thick on the other, whereby we may gather, that theſe chambers were ſtrongly built, and ſo were a further ſtrengthening to the Temple. For theſe words, That which was left, &c. the vulg. hath, Lyra. The inner houſe was in the ſides of the; that is, ſaith Lyra, the Temple was within theſe buildings adjoyned round about, Hebr. אשר מנח בית by Junius expounded, Spacium quod conceſſum fuit, or a pure floor, the place of ſubſtructions which were to the houſe, meaning the ſpace afterwards ſpoken of. But to render it word for word, it goeth thus, And the houſe that reſted, walls or chambers which were in the houſe, which is to be ſupplyed with the words before going, I ſaw, and the meaning muſt be, that he ſaw the whole houſe within, which was free from buildings, and not as without, but left as a fair ſpacious place, glorious to behold, both the Sanctum, and the Sanctum ſanctorum, and the chambers hitherto ſpoken of alſo, which were in the houſe, or to the houſe adjoyned, as appurtenances thereof, and ſo theſe words are as an Epilogue, or concluſion in brief, ſhewing what he had hitherto ſeen touching the houſe, and hitherto declared more at large. For take it any other way, and either the words are quite gone from, or the rendring is without ſenſe. Now for the ſpirituall meaning, the height of each chamber 6 cubits, and thoſe with a ſpace more added, ſet forth the great labours of the faithfull in this world repreſented by 6, as was ſaid before, that they have place in the Houſe or Tabernable of the moſt High, and the 5 cubits breadth, the 5 cubits of mercy, which have alſo been often before ſpoken of.

V.10. And between the Chambers was the wideneſſe of 20 Cubits round about the houſe on every ſide, vulg. between the treaſuries; and indeed the word is here varyed, and not the ſame, which before was rendred Chambers: but thus it is intimated, that the Chambers before ſpoken of were treaſuries, or roomes, to lay in things pertaining to the Temple, as 2 Chron. 5. treaſures are ſpoken of, See alſo chap. 42. 13. which were brought into the houſe, which muſt be underſtood of this part of it conſiſting of Chambers: Lyra, Lyra. by Chambers round about, or Treaſuries, will have onely the North and South ſide meant, but not the Weſt, where the Sanctum ſanctorum ſtood; nor the Eaſt, where the Porch and Gate to enter into the Temple was: and for this ſpace of 20 Cubits, he ſaith it was between the Temple and theſe Treaſuries. But it is expreſly ſaid that they were round about; and 1 King. 6. 5. againſt the Sanctum ſanctorum, as well as parts of the Temple, north and ſouth; and indeed they could not otherwiſe have gone round circularly, as it is before ſaid; and for the ſpace, it is expreſly ſaid between the Treaſuries, and therefore muſt be taken of a ſpace betwixt one rank and another, and ſo all the wall of the Temple had not buildings againſt it; but theſe ſpaces were left for lights to come into it: and that this ſpace cannot be meant of a ſpace betwixt the wall of the Temple, and theſe Treaſuries, appears becauſe that againſt the wall of the Temple there were ſtayes to ſupport the Chambers, but none other wall but that of the Temple on the inſide. If it ſhall ſeeme to make againſt this, that ſo much ground then muſt needs be taken up to theſe ſpaces, that there would not be room enough for ſo many Chambers to ſtand upon. Sol. It is not neceſſary to hold, that there were ſuch wide ſpaces betwixt every one rank, and another, for it is onely ſaid, that it was betwixt the Chambers round about the houſe on every ſide; from whence can be gathered no more, but that there was ſuch a ſpace betwixt Chambers and Chambers on the north ſide, and on the eaſt and ſouth, and weſt: on the eaſt, this ſpace being left for the entrance to the Temple; on the weſt, to give light to the moſt holy place; and likewiſe on the ſouth & north, to give light to the Temple, and then the whole building being of that longitude and latitude which is ſpoken of ver. 13, 14, 15. there might well be room enough both for theſe ſpaces, and all the Chambers. Theſe ſpaces betwixt the Chambers moſt probably ſerved to ſet forth as thoſe betwixt the Chambers ſpoken of, Chap. 40. 7. ſome within the limits of Gods Houſe, that are not yet built, but are void of the treaſure of Gods Grace, and much more roome is ſupplyed by ſuch, than by Note. theſe, that are treaſuries, for four cubits of theſe there being 20 of thoſe. For ſuch is the eſtate of the Church, even under the Goſpell, as appeareth, Mat. 13. and where it is ſaid, Many are called but few choſen, Mat. 22. which ſhould make all ſuch, as be like empty caskes, that hold no heaven-liquor diſtilling as the rain from above to ſanctifie thereby, and all waſt places unbuilt, to fear, as knowing that although they have a room in the Church, yet they are no parts of Gods Temple, coming to him as lively ſtones, 1 Pet. 1. 11. but dead ſtill in ſin, and ſo in the way of dying everlaſtingly.

V. 11. And the doors of the ſide-chambers were towards the place that was left, one towards the ſouth, and another towards the north, and the breadth of the place left was 5 cubits round about: vulg. and the door of the ſide for prayer, &c. and the breadth of the place for prayer 5 cubits. Here the ſame word מנח which went before, ver. 9. by vulg. rendred, inner, is again uſed. But as I ſaid there, ſo here, the proper ſignification of it is reſt, and thus is the inner part of the Temple allegorically called reſt, becauſe a type of reſt for ever in Heaven. Now on both ſides of the Temple it ſeemeth where the ſpace before ſpoken of, of 20 cubits was, there were doors both on the north ſide, and the ſouth of the temple, and againſt theſe doors round places diſtinguiſhed from the reſt of that ſpace, into which they came as Lyra conjectureth, Lyra. that were unclean, to pray; and this was five cubits round about, they that came thither being under the open Heaven, for no building is here ſpoken of; and for ſide-chamber, Hebr, it is either Chamber, or ſide, but rather to be taken for the ſide of the Temple here, in which was not onely an opening eaſtward, or door, but alſo northward and ſouthward, as is intimated, Chap. 42. 14. where it is ordered, that the Prieſts ſhould come from the north and ſouth out of the Chambers, in which the holy Veſtiments lay into the Temple to Miniſter, and not come in the Court. Now for theſe places, into which ſingular perſons came towards the place of reſt, being either of them 5 cubits round about, and the doors from thence into the ſide of the Temple northward, and ſouthward: hereby, Hieron. ſaith Jerom, was ſet forth the praying of the Faithfull, being pinched with adverſity, as by the north cold, or warmed by proſperity, as by the ſun ſhi- Note. ning out of the ſouth, or over heat from hence by perſecution: as the heat Matth. 13. of perſecution is alſo compared to the heat of the ſun upon the ſtony ground, and againſt temptations coming by either; and their praiſing of God for good coming by either, and deliverances from evill: and all this muſt be done with ſanctified ſenſes, which be five, as hath been before ſhewed, for which it is added 5 Cubits round about.

V. 12. Now the building that was before the ſeparate place, at the end towards the weſt was 70 cubits broad, and the wall of the builbing was 5 cubits thick round about, and the length thereof 90 cubits. The Prophet having hitherto deſcribed the Temple with the adjuncts, now ſummeth up the breadth and length of all theſe buildings together calling them the building before the ſeparate place: that is, the Sanctum ſanctorum, for that ſtood weſt-ward, and was ſeparated from the Temple; for the breadth 70 cubits, they may be thus reckoned, the breadth of that place 20 cubits, the walls on either ſide being 6 apiece 12, the chambers adjoined 4 a piece 8, the prominencies to ſtay up the chambers on one ſide 5 cubits, on both 10. the walls of the chambers without, on both ſides, five a piece, 10. the wall compaſſing all about in thickneſſe, five on each ſide, 10. which being put together, 20, 12, 8 and three times 10, make 70. For the length of the whole being 90: thus the Porch 10, the Temple 40, the Sanctum ſanctorum 20: the ſpace for the chambers at either end 4, and 4, that is, 8: the walls of the Temple at either end 6 apiece, being put to 8, make 20, and theſe ſummes put together, 10, 40, 20, 20, make 90.

V. 13. But what are the ſummes then of the breadth and length following, ver. 13. So he meaſured the length of the houſe a 100 cubits long, and the ſeparate place, and the building, with the walls thereof 100 cubits. Having already ſpoken of the length 90 cubits, but omitted the thickneſſe of the outmoſt wall round about all the buildings, whereby they were incloſed, which thickneſſe was five cubits at one end, and five at the other; now he ſummeth up the ſumme again, making it 100, by adding the cubits of the walls at each end, eaſt and weſt, being together 10, and this put to 90, it is 100. For the breadth alſo V. 14. ſaid to be 100, ver. 14. by breadth here before the face of the houſe underſtand, as the vulg. renders it, Platea, according to the Greek, in which tongue πλατὺς is broad, and platea, a ſpacious or broad place; this before the temple at the eaſt, and all the other building was not onely extended to 70, as they were, but to 100 cubits, as the inner court, upon which it butted, was according to the deſcription thereof going before, chap. 40. 27.

V. 15. And he meaſured the length of the building over againſt the ſeparate place, which was behind it, and the galleries thereof on the one ſide, and the other 100 cubits, with the inner temple, and the porches of the court. After the length of the temple, and all the buildings about it meaſured, and the breadth of the ſpacious, or broad place before them, now the meaſure of the length of other buildings not yet ſpoken of followeth, viz. of galleries behind the temple, and all the buildings before mentioned at the weſt end, being added for further ornament, and to beautifie this rare ſtructure the more. Some ſay it was on the eaſt, but this is manifeſtly erroneous, because the ſpace lying before the temple eaſtward was ſaid, ver. 14. to be in the face thereof, this as oppoſite hereunto, behind, or as the vulg. hath it, at the back. There was then, as before the temple eaſtward a ſpacious place 100 cubits long, ſo behind it weſtward of the like length, wherein galleries ſtood for walkers fairly built. The word rendred Galleries, cometh from גזרה to pluck away, by which name theſe buildings are called, becauſe diſtinct from the temple, and chambers, or treaſuries before ſpoken of, and ſtanding by themſelves, a ſpace being betwixt them and the temple called the ſeparate place, for the reaſon before ſaid, and theſe ſtood all along beyond the weſt end of the temple in length anſwerable to the breadth thereof and the buildings about it, all which together have been often called the houſe and the ſeparate place, by the houſe there thoſe buildings adjoyned, being meant, and the temple by the ſeparate place. For the words following, with the inner temple and porches of the court &c. v. 16. 17. they are nothing elſe but a ſummary capitulation of ſome things ſpoken of more largely before, or a brief declaration of other things meaſured without ſetting down the meaſures. For the ſpirituall meaning of the 70. cubits broad and 90. long, and then of 100. in length and breadth, the Ord. Gloſſ. ſaith, that by 70. being 10. ſevens perfect reſt in the life to come is ſet forth becauſe 7. is the number of reſt, or the ſabbath, and ſo of perfection: by 90. and the 100. following, the age of Sarah, and Abraham, ſhe being 90. when ſhe bare Iſaac, and Abraham 100. years old: it being hereby ſhewed, that the true Chriſtian is one, that is, a daughter of Sarah, if a woman, as Peter calleth women arayed with modeſty and humble meekneſſe, and both man and woman a childe of Abraham as Iſaac was according to the ſpirit, if they walk in the ſteps of the obedience of his faith, and children not of Hagar, but of Sarah, and ſo heirs of that inheritance, heaven for ever.

The narrow windowes &c. And the windowes were covered. Here Jerom cryeth out (O the depth of the wiſdome and knowledge of God) here be windowes, but narrow, or, oblique, as he hath it, and covered, which what can they be conjectured to ſhew, that we ſee not, neither can we ſee into the things of the life to come as we ſhall ſee hereafter, when we come in heaven, the knowledge hereof in the perfection being yet hidden from us, for which it is ſaid, the eye hath not ſeen, nor the ear heard, &c. And yet there be narrow windowes, whereby we may ſee a little, as it is ſaid, now we know but in part and ſee darkly as through a glaſſe. Beda will have the windowes to ſet forth teachers giving light unto others, for as thoſe windowes were narrow without, but broad within, ſo the teacher hath more light of knowledge in him, then that which he ſheweth to the people. Now it is to be underſtood, that theſe windowes were only in the temple northward and Southward, not in the Sanctum Sanctorum, into which none muſt look, to ſhew, that the hidden or ſecret things of the Lord belong to the Lord, and are not for us to pry into, but what is revealed only, ſet forth by the temple, and windowes on the ſides thereof. On the eaſt was the door of the temple ſo large, that ſtanding open the ſun inlightned the whole houſe that way ſufficiently, as in the glorified eſtate to come there ſhall be no need of the light of teachers any more, but God and the Lamb ſhall fully inlighten all that attain unto it, as a more glorious ſun for ever and ever.

And it was made with cherubs and palm trees, and a palm tree was between cherub and cherub, and the cherub had each one 2. faces. Having ſaid enough of the diviſions of the houſe of God, now he commeth to the carved works thereof, the cherubs ſetting forth angels, that are alwaies preſent in the congregations of the faithfull according to that of the Apoſtle, a woman ought to have power on her head becauſe of the Angels, as at Bethel, Jacob ſaw the Angels aſcending and deſcending by a ladder. And palm trees ſet forth the victory obtained by the faithfull, in token of which they, which appeared Revel. 7.9. carryed branches of palm trees in their hands, as the Iſraelites being in quiet poſſeſſion of Canaan carryed ſuch branches and boughs out at the feaſt of tabernacles to make them boothes for expreſſion of joy for victories over the Canaanites. And the cherubs had each one two faces of a man on the one ſide, and of a lion on the other. The cherubims in the moſt holy place of old had either of them only one face, viz. of a young man, but theſe here two, unto the face of a young man, the face of a young lion being added, that of the young man repreſenting beauty and good favour in the Angels attending upon the higheſt Majeſty, above that of any other creature, as man is the moſt beautifull of all upon earth in face, as being made after Gods image, and likeneſſe, not only ſpiritually for righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, but for beauty and glory, for when God the Son hath been pleaſed at any time to ſhew himſelf either before or ſince his incarnation in his beauty, he hath appeared in the likeneſſe of a man. But in this temple repreſenting the Church under the Goſpell, he is ſet forth by two faces of a Man and Lion al-Revel. 5. ſo, to ſhew the tribe of which he came, as Jacob had propheſied, Gen. 49. 9. Note. and he is called accordingly, a Lion of the tribe of Judah, for he is one with every faithfull man, full of humanity, he cannot ſee him in diſtreſſe, but as the good Samaritan holp the man that had faln amongſt theeves, ſo he helps him, and is a comfort to him: but on the other ſide to the wicked he is as a Psal. 50. Lion ready to tear him in pieces. Wherefore as we would have his humane Psal. 2. face turned to us and not his leonine, let us kiſſe the Son by humbly ſubmitting to be ruled by him, and not by the cryes of our notorious ſinnes coming up to his ears awake this ſleeping lion to our own deſtruction for ever, as all they ſhall finde, that they do, who harden themſelves in their evill waies. Of the face of a man and a lion, and of an oxe and eagle alſo in one cherub, ſee before chap. 1. and what was repreſented thereby.

V. 22. The Altar of wood was 3. cubits high, and the length 2. cubits, and the corners, length and wals thereof were of wood, and he ſaid, this is the Table which is before the Lord. Cornelius a lapide of his own head addeth here, that this table was overlaid with gold, and that incenſe was offered thereupon, but the Jeſuite ſaith more then can be gathered to countenance the ſuperſtitious offering of incenſe in his Church upon the high altar. This place ſeemeth to me to repreſent the turning of a golden altar that was under the Old Teſtament (when all outward glory was in the temple, by ſuch glory to draw men in the nonage of the Church unto it, as children are drawn by goodly things) into an wooden table for the Communion, that then ſhould be celebrated at it, being metaphorically only called an altar; now for the precious body and bloud of Chriſt ſet thereupon in remembrance of his ſacrificing of himſelf once for our ſinnes, and it was three cubits high to ſhew the great myſterie of the elements there propounded, bread and wine, hiddenly exhibiting to the faithfull Chriſts body and bloud to be truly received, which is a threefold myſterie to the bodily eye ſeeing nothing but bread and wine, to the feeling there being nothing elſe felt, and to the taſte of the palat, there being nothing elſe taſted, the length 2. cubits denoting two things only herein given us, which be all that are neceſſary for our ſuſtentation, meat and drink, not any object to be lookt at and adored, or to this end to be elevated or carryed in proceſſion as a remedy againſt any bodily evill, it being altogether a ſpirit: good, and to be uſed accordingly, yet with all due reverence, as Chriſt hath ordained.

V. 23. And the temple and ſanctuary had 2. doors. V. 24. And the doors had two leaves apiece, &c. That is, either of them one, beſides doors in the wall north and ſouth before ſpoken of, therefore by theſe are meant doors ſtanding eaſtward, whereby the greateſt entrance was into the temple; and from the Temple into V. 25. the Sanctum Sanctorum or Sanctuary, and theſe doors were two-leaved, and they were made of thick planks with carved work upon them of palms and cherubs, as the wals of the temple were wrought, of which I have ſpoken before. V. 26. V. 26. And there were narrow windowes and palm trees on either ſide the porch; of both which enough before.

CHAP.

CHAP. XLII.

V. 1. THen he brought me forth into the outter court the way towards the north, and he brought me to the chamber right over againſt the ſeparate place, and before the building towards the north. Having ſpoken of the Temple, and the buildings about it, and things pertaining thereunto, now he proceedeth to ſpeak of the courts by the ſides of the temple Northward and Southward: for it muſt be conceived, that as there were ſpacious places at both the ends of the temple, ſo there were on either ſide: the whole building by this means being compaſſed about with ground as our Churches be with Churchyards. For although no expreſſe mention be made of ground and chamber on the ſouth ſide, as there is on the north, yet it is intimated v. 12. 13. that the ſouth was herein, as the north; ſo that one being deſcribed the other is left to be underſtood as proportionable thereunto. The ſeparate place, as hath been often ſaid, was the whole temple together with the chambers or treaſuries adjoyned, and therefore the chamber now ſpoken of or treaſury was a large building more outward over againſt the other treaſuries. And that we might V. 2. know the length of this court, and the breadth thereof; he ſaith, the length was 100. cubits, before which was the north door or gate, for the word commonly rendred door is פתח opening, and therefore may indifferently be rendred by either, and this door was northward, from the temple in the foreſaid treaſury to enter into it, on the ſide next unto this ſpacious court, being in length as all the buildings before were ſaid to be, and the breadth at the eaſt and weſt ends the juſt ſquare being thus ſtill continued.

V. 3. Over againſt the 20. cubits of the inner court, and the pavements of the outer court was gallery againſt gallery in 3 ſtories. It ſeemeth hereby, that the 50. cubits breadth of the outer court incloſed within it, as parted by a wall an inner, not ſpoken of till now of 20 cubits ſquare, ſo that the outer court in breadth of 50. cubits lay partly againſt the pavement of the ſame outer court, which pavement being not before ſpoken of neither muſt be conceived to be a part of the ſame outer court extended at both ends of the inner eaſt and weſt 30. cubits, that is, at the one end 15. and 15. at the other: for ſo Lyra reaſoneth, but ſurely Lyra. he miſtook the breadth for the length of 100. cubits, out of which if 20. be deducted for the inner court, there will remain 80. and ſo 40. at either end covered with a pavement, beſides the whole length of the ſame outer court being 30 cubits more in breadth, all which was likewiſe covered home to the galleries 3. ſtories high here ſpoken of. And this court, ſaith Jerom, Hieron. was thus paved to ſhew how cleanly from duſt both in ſummer and winter, and from durt fouling their feet the prieſts went when they paſſed from theſe galleries to do their ſervice within the temple, intimating the cleanneſſe of the feet of the afflictions in the Miniſters of the Goſpell, according to that, Rom. 10. How beautifull are the feet of thoſe that bring glad tidings of peace &c. and in all, that would enter into heaven. For the galleries, the word uſed here, is the ſame that we had before ch. 41. rendred galleries, but it ſignifieth pluckt away, or a chamber, yet the word gallery is beſt to expreſſe the meaning, this being on the north and ſouth ſide anſwerable to thoſe on the weſt before ſpoken of, but that here were three one above another, and in ſaying, gallery againſt gallery, it is meant, as on the north ſide, ſo it was on the ſouth.

V. 4. And before the chambers was a walk of 10. cubits broad inward, a way of one cubit and their doors towards the north. Here he returns again to ſpeak of ſomething more concerning the chambers adjoyned to the temple, as is aforeſaid, hitherto omitted. Here was a walk of 10. cubits broad inward, that is, in the inner court called before the twenty cubits, here was alſo a way of one cubit, ſhewing the perfection, that ſhould be in the walking of the miniſters of the Goſpell ſpell, and the unity of their faith, all holding and teaching one and the ſame, and thus it was in the primitive Church, when they were all together with one accord in one place, when they began firſt to go out to preach amongſt the Gentiles ſet forth by the north, towards which theſe doors were opened, when the Lord ſaid unto them, goe teach all nations baptizing them, &c.

V. 5. Now the upper chambers were ſhorter, for the galleries were higher then theſe, then the lower and middlemoſt of the building. Having not ſaid any thing hitherto of the height of the gallery, of which there were three ſtories, now he ſetteth that forth, ſaying, that each of thoſe ſtories were higher, then the ſtories of the chambers, both uppermoſt, loweſt, and middlemoſt: therefore in ſaying, the upper chambers were ſhorter, he meaneth lower, but not then the middlemoſt and loweſt next the ground, as ſome would have it; for the compariſon is not made betwixt the chambers joyning to the temple, the heighth of one and another of them, but betwixt thoſe chambers and the galleries. And thoſe galleries in height exceeding the chambers do not unaptly repreſent ſecular men, who are higher in worldly dignity and wealth and power, then ſpirituall men, that ſerve God in the Miniſtery, although they be nearer to the temple, and they are 3 ſtories ſeting forth theſe 3. things, worldly wealth, honour and power, as the 3. ſtories of the chambers do the ſpirituall riches and the power that the miniſters have with God, and their future honour in heaven.

Note.

V. 6. For they were three, and had not pillars as the pillars of the courts, therefore the building was ſtraightned more then the loweſt and middlemoſt from the ground. Here a reaſon is yeelded why the ſtories of the chambers were lower then thoſe of the galleries in the outer court, viz. Becauſe they ſtood upon pillars, and theſe not, for ſo are the pillars of the court to be underſtood, as ſupporters.

V. 7. And the wall that was without over againſt the chambers towards the outer court on the forepart of the chambers, the length thereof was 50. cubits. The vulg. for wall, hath peribolus and Hebr. it is גדר ſignifying any fence, that compaſſeth about, as peribolus doth, and this fence is to be underſtood of one at the eaſt end of the north ſide of chambers, becauſe from the eaſt it is by and by ſaid that there was an entry to theſe chambers, v. 9. and this breadth is juſt the breadth of the outer court, where the galleries ſtood northward, and therefore it was both againſt them and the chambers eaſtward, but not near unto them, but a good diſtance of, for theſe buildings, it is expreſſely ſaid extended in length but 50. cubits, and the court 100. therefore at each end there were 25. to this fence from chambers and galleries alſo, for of theſe one was ſaid before to V. 8. ſtand againſt another. Of the foreſaid length ſee v. 8. And both that this fence ſtood eaſtward; and that there was a ſpace of that court, before one come V. 9. from thence to the chambers, the next words ſhew v. 9.

V. 10. The chambers were in the thickneſſe of the wall of the court towards the eaſt over againſt the ſeparate place and the building. The vulg. there was under theſe treaſuries an entrance from the eaſt of thoſe that entred into them out of the outer court in the breadth of the compaſſing fence of the court, which is far more ſenſible and better agreeing to the Hebr. which hath it, and under theſe chambers or treaſuries an entrance of ones going, or in ones going to them, and the word rendred thickneſſe, ſignifieth breadth alſo, and becauſe it was uſed before in ſpeaking of this outer court for breadth, it may beſt be alſo ſo taken in this place. And then the meaning will plainly be, as a man cometh out of the outer court, which in length extended much more then theſe buildings, he came by the breadth of the fence thereof beforeſaid to be 50. cubits, thence going on till he came at the nethermoſt room eaſtward, where he entred under the two ſtories that were higher, and thus it appears, that the entrance through this fence from the eaſt, was over againſt the ſeparate place, and the building, that is, the building of treaſuries, which were part of the temple together called commonly the ſeparate place, becauſe betwixt them and other building belonging to the temple there was a great ſpace of ground, they being called before for this, pluckt away, as hath been often ſhewed. Spiritually by the way to the treaſuries from the eaſt is ſhewed, that whoſo would come to be inriched with the Gloſſ. ord. treaſures of God, muſt attain hereunto by Chriſt, that is the Eaſt; and becauſe it is ſaid, that the way before them was like the chambers or treaſuries towards V. 11. the north, as long and as broad as they, &c. That all true Chriſtians are Note. like unto the godly miniſters, who are neareſt to God, in the length of patience and the breadth of love, and in all other their goings out and coming in and in their doors of utterance, as their callings will permit, opening them to ſpeak ſo, as that grace by their ſpeeches may be miniſtred to the hearers: for ſo Paul ſaith, Follow me as I follow Chriſt, and, Mark thoſe that rule over 1 Cor. 11. you, that preach the word of God unto you, whoſe examples follow. And it is to be noted, Heb. 13. 7. that he ſaith not only the treaſuries, but the treaſuries towards the north, and

v. 12. Towards thoſe in the ſouth there was ſuch another door, to ſhew, that both in V. 12. adverſity and proſperity it muſt be thus, but becauſe the ſtate of Chriſtians is ſuch in this world, that they live more in adverſity, then in proſperity, eſpecially at the firſt going out of the Goſpell, the north is firſt ſpoken of being cold and nipping, and then the ſouth, in which part yet there is more danger by being corrupted, ſo that men have need to be put in mind of a door here towards theſe treaſuries, that their hearts may not be ſtoln away by the riches of this world, or choaked as with briers.

The north and ſouth chambers which are before the ſeparate place are holy, where V. 13. the prieſts that approach to the Lord ſhall eat the moſt holy things. Having ſpoken ſo much of the treaſuries or chambers before, now he proceedeth to tell, for what uſe they ſerved, viz. for the prieſts attending in their courſes to eat thoſe parts of the offerings in, which were theirs by Gods ordinance.

To put off and lay up their garments, wherein they miniſtred to the Lord, V. 14. putting on other garments when they went out to the people to miniſter to them. Eating holy things in the holy place repreſented the eating at the Lords ſupper, not in any place indifferently, but in the place dedicated to his worſhip, for ſo it was done even in the Apoſtles dayes, who ſaith, when ye 1 Cor. 11. come together into one place, this is not to eat the Lords body, intimating hereby, that it was there a cuſtome then to congregate to one known publique place, which was called the houſe of God, as appeareth in the words following, Have ye not houſes to eat and drink in, or deſpiſe ye the Church of God? Putting off the garments wherein they miniſtred, ſhewed that the miniſters of the Goſpell are not Note. to ſpeak ſo to the people as unto the Lord, or when amongſt them they are putting up prayers, for in ſecret praying in the ſpirit either with groans only, or words, that the people underſtand not, is acceptable praying, and to be in ſilent meditation, no words being uttered, and ſoaring aloft in theſe meditations beyond vulgar capacities is acceptable ſervice: but to the people, and amongſt them all praying muſt be vocall and plain and eaſie to be underſtood, and preaching in a known tongue and of ſuch neceſſary points of inſtruction, as whereof they are capable, and whereby they may be moſt edified, as S. Paul ſaith to the Hebrewes, that he gave them milk and not Heb. 5. 12. ſtrong meat, becauſe they were not able to bear it.

To the end of the chapter nothing elſe is ſet forth, but the length and V. 15, 16, &c. breadth of the uttermoſt court compaſſing about all hitherto ſpoken of, and it is ſaid to be 500. reeds eaſt and north, weſt and ſouth, which was a juſt ſquare almoſt a mile every way, and this was ſo large a compaſſe, as that it cannot agree to any temple built after the Jewes return out of Babylon, but onely to one ſpiritually underſtood, becauſe even that, which was built by Herod of the largeſt dimenſions, which had the largeſt outmoſt court of any other, had it but 720. cubits, into which the people of other nations, that reſorted to Jeruſalem for devotions ſake might come: as I have ſhewed in my Preface to the holy Goſpels. Therefore hereby the amplitude of the Church under the Goſpell was ſet forth, when the fulneſſe of the Gentiles ſhould come in. For the number of 500. in particular, I like that conjecture beſt, whereby it is conceived, that it is herein alluded to the Jubilee, which was the fiftieth year, becauſe 500. doth conſiſt of 10. fifties, 10. being the number of perfection, Levit 25. and 50. of that joyfull time, when they ſounded with trumpets, thus declaring the good news of every ones returning to his poſſeſſion, and comming out of ſervitude into liberty, which moſt aptly agreeth to the Goſpel being ἐυαγγέλιον good newes, and a time of perfect liberty, according Joh. 8. to the ſaying of our Lord, If the Son, ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed, and again, Luk. 4. he hath anointed me to give ſight unto the blinde, to heal the bruiſed and to preach the acceptable year of the Lord.

CHAP. XLIII.

V. 1, 2, 3. HEre for 12. verſes the Prophet before he proceedeth any further to deſcribe other things about this temple, ſheweth that he ſaw the glory of God again, as he had done when he went out to deſtroy, of which ſee chap. 9. and again chap. 10. and as by the river Chebar. But as then his glory went V. 4, 5. out of the houſe, ſo now it went in and filled the houſe, and it went in by the gate looking eaſtward, to ſhew that in the time of the Goſpell the Church ſhould through Chriſt ſet forth by the Eaſt be made more glorious then ever Solomons temple was, in alluding to which Haggai ſaith, The Hag. 2. 7. Lord ſhall come and fill this houſe with more glory then the former.

V. 7. The place of my throne, and the place of the ſoles of my feet, where I will dwell for ever, in the midſt of the children of Iſrael. The Prophet having ſeen the houſe of God or Church, that ſhould be under the Goſpell before repreſented, and the glory of God filling it, now heareth the man, that hitherto had lead him about, and meaſured all parts thereof, telling him to the comfort of all faithfull Chriſtians, that here he would rule as king, and dwell here among the faithfull called the children of Iſrael for ever, as Daniel had before ſpoken in the ſpirit, ſaying, This is my habitation, and here will I dwell, &c. and hereby he ſheweth a difference between the materiall, and this ſpirituall temple, becauſe he ſo dwelt in that, that he left it again for their groſſe abominations amongſt whom it was placed: but in this he promiſed to dwell, and never to depart herefrom any more. And whereas it might be objected, But what if they ſin, that be the children of this Church or temple? he prevents this objection by ſaying further, My holy name they ſhall defile no more, neither they nor their kings, by their whoredomes nor the carkaſſes of their kings in their high places: for they that 1 Joh. 3. 9. are born of God ſin not, neither can they, for they are born of God, and his ſeed abideth in Mat. 16. 16. them. And, upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of hell ſhall not prevail againſt it. But what meaneth he by their whoredoms, and the carkaſſes of their kings in their high places? For the one it is plainly meant of their idolatries, commonly ſet forth by the name of whoredoms, and by theſe carkaſſes, ſaith Junius. Junius, underſtand the dead bodies of thoſe that were ſacrificed to their idols called their kings, for ſo Melkom ſignified, which was an idoll of the Ammonites, comming of מלך a king, ſee Amos. 5. 26. But others better underſtand the words properly of the carkaſſes of the kings, that dwelt near the temple, of whom, ſome having a garden near the temple laid their dead bodies therein, which was a defilement, ſeeing by the Law, to come into a room where a dead body was, was to be defiled and made unclean thereby: and his expoſition is favoured by the next words, V. 8. in the ſetting of their threſhold by my threſhold, and their poſts by my poſts, and the wall between me and them. For hereby it is plainly ſhewed, that their ſin added to their idolatry was making them ſepulchres ſo near the Temple, there being only a wall and a groundſell whereupon it ſtood, betwixt the one and the other, wherein he taxeth Amon and Manaſſeh 2 King. 21. 18 in ſpeciall, who are ſaid thus to have done. And for the laſt words of his

this 7. verſe, In their high places, Hebr. it is not in, but only, by their whoredoms, and the carkaſſes of their kings, their high places, the word and being underſtood, ſo that the laying of their kings bones in their high places is not meant, as by the New Tranſlation it may ſeem, but having ſpoken more obſcurely in ſaying, by their whoredomes, theſe words, their high places, are added for further explication, that we might know, what their whoredomes here complained of were even their idolatries in theſe places committed. And in ſaying, this is the place of the ſoles of my feet, he alludeth to that of David, Heaven is thy throne, and the earth is thy footſtool.

V. 9. Now let them put away their whoredomes, and the carkaſſes of their kings, &c. That is, ſeeing it ſhall be thus in my houſe, which I have here ſhewed unto thee, which ſhall for ever be bleſſed with my preſence, do ye (O Children of Iſrael) lay this to heart, and now reform from idolatry, and from legall polluting of my holy place, and I will dwell amongſt you conſtantly and continually: two moſt notorious abuſes being named, and the reſt hereby underſtood. But as the words of v. 7, 8. have reference to the Evangelicall Church, how ſhall Chriſtians not any more defile the Church by carkaſſes? Rabanus ſaith, that Raban.
this is done, when perſons devoted to live in continency, and the ſerving God, are like dead carkaſſes, continuing ſtill dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, placing all their piety in outward ſhewes, as many do: for whoſo joyning himſelf Note. to the Church of Chriſt is dead ſtill in ſin, is no better then a dead carkaſſe, and by him the houſe of God is defiled; and if we look upon ſuch an houſe or building, as men in their naturall eſtate are compared to, where it is ſaid, when a ſtrong man armed keeps the houſe, all is in quiet; Here is their threſhold Luk. 11. 21. ſet by Gods threſhold, and they come ſo near unto him, as, that there is but a wall betwixt him and them, ſo that he is annoyed by their ſtink, and takes his houſe thus to be greatly defiled, for which he will be revenged upon them.

V. 10. Shew the houſe to the houſe of Iſrael, that they may be aſhamed, &c. The Lord having ſhewed all things touching his houſe or Church under the Goſpell to Ezekiel, whereby it might be gathered, how glorious and excellent it ſhould be for the graces ſhining therein, and comly proportionableneſſe in all things, now he biddeth him ſhew it to the Jewes, that they might be aſhamed in ſeeing, how unlike they were to this beautifull fabrick, being contrariwiſe a very Chaos, a rude and unformed heap, by reaſon of their groſſe ſins, making them as foul as this houſe was fair, and as diſproportionable, as this was proportionable. And as he that is aſhamed of his former vile doings, repenteth, and turneth therefrom, ſo he meaneth he ſhould by ſhewing this pattern unto them ſeek to move them to do, for of repentance beginning in being aſhamed the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, when he ſaith, What fruit Rom. 6. 21. had ye of thoſe things, whereof ye are now aſhamed? Wherefore theſe words of ſhewing them the pattern, that they might be aſhamed, and for ſhame put away their ſins, are ſpoken, as ſetting him into a way of bringing the houſe of Iſrael to do, as they were required before v. 9. before going.

V. 11. And if they be aſhamed, ſhew them, &c. That is, if for ſhame thou ſeeſt them turn to put away their wickedneſſes, as hath been ſaid, then proceed to declare all things more particularly unto them, that they may in all things do and be, as is in this pattern, and the ordinances of my houſe paſt or following intimated. For although ſome underſtand their doing ſo of their building the materiall temple again ſo, after their return from Maldonat.
captivity under Zerubbabel, yet becauſe this was not then made a patterne, it is manifeſt, that their doing ſo is to be underſtood ſpiritually, they becomming in all things conformable in grace and vertue hereunto, and not only the Jewes, but all, that would be taken by God for Rom. 2. 29.
Jewes indeed, whoſe praiſe is not of men, but of God. Then he concludeth Revel. 3. ſaying, this is the Law of the houſe upon the top of the mountain, wherein he ſpeaketh V. 12. like unto Eſay, In the laſt dayes the mountain of the Lords houſe ſhall be higher Eſa. 2. 2. then the hils, and be eſtabliſhed on the top of the mountains: which is undoubtedly ſpoken of the Church under the Goſpell, and therefore this likewiſe.

V. 13. And theſe be the meaſures of the altar after the cubits, the cubit is a cubit & hand breadth, the bottome ſhall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit, and the border round about a ſpan, and this ſhall be the higher place of the altar. Having not hitherto ſpoken of the brazen altar for burnt-offerings in all his former deſcriptions, but only of an altar, or table, ch. 41.22. now he commeth to deſcribe this by cubits, telling firſt, that the cubit was an hand breadth more then an ordinary cubit, for ſuch was the ſacred cubit. For the bottome ſaid to be a cubit, it is to be underſtood of the height thereof, and the breadth a cubit, for the length both of bottome and top, is ſaid afterwards to be 12. cubits. It ſtood then up from the ground one cubit, and ſo was hollow underneath for the bloud to be poured into a ditch or vault, from thence to be waſhed away by the water afterwards ſpoken of ch. 47. The border, a ſpan broad round about, was for ornament and to hide the hollow place underneath. For theſe words, this ſhall be the higher place of the altar, the vulg. the ditch of the altar, for the word גב ſignifieth as well low, as high, and being rendred, the higher place of the altar, it cannot but be doubted how this can be, ſeeing it was the loweſt part, neither can it well be put for the ditch under, becauſe it is ſaid, this, as referring to that before ſpoken of, as a cubit high and broad. I reſolve therefore, that neither the New Tranſlation nor vulg. are right here, but we muſt look to another ſignification of the word, and that is, a back: which may well agree, becauſe that which beareth, is not amiſſe called a back, the under part of this firſt building, being as it were the belly in reference to that which lay upward to bear all the reſt.

V. 14. And from the bottome upon the ground to the lower ſettle ſhall be two cubits, vulg. from the boſome of the earth to the firſt crepido. Hebr. From the boſome. And to the lower auxiliary. For עזר, is to aide, or help, and it may well be underſtood of another loſt, as it were, of this altar, betwixt which and the firſt before ſpoken of there, were two cubits, or rather betwixt the boſome of ground upon which this ſtood, becauſe it is expreſly ſaid ſo, and then the loweſt being one foot elevated from the ground, this could be but one above that. Then from the lower called alſo the leſſer, to that above it called the greater, were 4. cubits, and from thence to the Altar 4. vulg. Lyra. Ariel, as it is Hebr. the upper part of the altar being ſo called, as Lyra hath it, becauſe אריאל ſignifieth a ſtrong Lion, and the fleſh of beaſts being laid there, were by fire burning there devoured, as a beaſt by a ſtrong lion, which reaſon, and appellation of this part of the altar is not to be miſliked, but the rendring it thus rather to be followed, becauſe the word doth not ſignifie altar, but as hath been ſaid, and ſo it is elſewhere rendred (O Ariel, Ariel) Iſai. 29. 1. although the upper face of the altar be meant.

V. 16. The altar or Ariel 12. cubits long and 12. broad, the upper ſettle. Next unto it, 14. and 14. about which a queſtion ariſeth, how this could be, ſeeing it was ſaid before of both the ſettles or crepidoes, that they were one cubit broad apiece? Junius for ſettle hath Diazoma, but ſo he had alſo before, but the word is the ſame, that was rendred ſettle. To this nothing can be ſaid, but that unto the body of this ſettle, which was more ſolid, a cubit broad, ſome more ſlighty work was added on either ſide, whereupon the aſhes falling from the Ariel might light to be after the ſacrifice ended, gathered off again and taken away, as falling through the Ariel, being made with holes like net-work, as we may gather from Exod. 27. 3, &c. Theſe pans then moſt probably made up the breadth, which was before one cubit, 14. cubits, and ſo the whole altar in the parts was above a ſquare of 12. cubits, in breadth and length, in the part next under this 14. and then we muſt needs conceive, that for uniformities ſake, the lower ſettle was a ſquare of 16. cubits, ſo ſome ſay.

V. 17. Laſtly, for the border further ſpoken of, by vulg. called a crown, of half a cubit round about, it was ſome curious work about Ariel of this breadth added for ornament above, as the like was ſaid before touching the border beneath; touching the bottome or boſome, enough hath been ſaid before, and it is only the ſame repeated again.

Note.

And hitherto of the literall meaning, now for the ſpirituall; this Altar ſetteth forth Chriſt, of whom, by the name of an Altar it is ſpoken, Heb. 13. 10. And as of this Altar, there is firſt one part but a cubit high, and a cubit broad; ſo Chriſt at the firſt was but a poor deſpicable infant born of a poor Virgin, yet ſet forth by a border to grace him; that is, Shepherds coming out of the field, who were Jewes, by the inſtigation of Angels, to publiſh what they had ſeen and heard on the one ſide, and Magi coming out of the eaſt country, that were Gentiles, on the other ſide, to proclaim him King by the conduct of a Star miraculouſly appearing unto them. Then there is a ſecond part two cubits high, and but one ſtill broad; ſo Chriſt ariſing ſomewhat more in height in his youth, when he was but 12 years old, by the taſt, that he gave of his underſtanding amongſt the Doctours in the Temple, yet kept at the ſame breadth, none were hereby wonne unto him. 3. There was here another part four cubits higher, but yet one cubit only broad; ſo Chriſt being Baptized, and beginning to Preach, and to work Miracles, could yet winne few, or none unto him, but was as a poor deſpicable man ſtill in the account of the great ones of this world. 4. Here was an Ariel twelve cubits ſquare; ſo Chriſt having not onely wrought Miracles in his Life, but at his Death ſpread himſelf by his twelve Apoſtles into all the four parts of the World, ſo that they came from the Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South, as our Lord ſpeaketh, To ſit down with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdome of Heaven. 5. As here were four horns, ſo the invincible ſtrength of Chriſt was ſuch, that no oppoſition, when he went out by his Apoſtles conquering, could withſtand him; but he brake in pieces the four Monarchies of the world, as the Stone, of which Daniel ſpeaks, falling out of the Mountain, and filling all the Earth, brake all the parts of the Image in pieces. 6. As the ſettle next to Ariel was yet larger fourteen cubits ſquare; ſo after a long time of perſecution by Heathen Emperours, there roſe up a Chriſtian, Conſtantine the Great, by whoſe means, and the Chriſtian Emperours ſucceeding him, Chriſt was enlarged more, all Heathens being put down, and Idolaters not ſuffered any more. Rabanus indeed in ſhewing the ſpirituall meaning here agreeth in the main, about Chriſt ſet forth; but when he cometh to this ſquare of 14. he ſaith, that the 14 generations from Abraham to David, and 14 from David to Jehoiakin, and 14 from him to Chriſt are ſet forth, endevouring to make it hold thus according to the ſquare here ſpoken of. Let who ſo will follow him, I reſt in the ſenſe before going. And finally for the border laſt ſpoken of, hereby the Grace, in which our Lord Jeſus now is all over the Chriſtian world ſet forth, he being by all men adored, as a King, whoſe Head and Crown thereupon hath a border about it of all manner of rich, and pretious Stones.

From hence, to the end of the Chap. the Lord inſtructeth the Prophet about that which ſhould be done for the conſecrating of this Altar, after they ſhould have made it, continuing ſtill in his Allegory, as if the Jewes building of an Altar, when they ſhould be come out of Babylon, were meant. But as hitherto, ſo all to the end is ſpiritually to be underſtood of things to be done under the Goſpell. When we have ſet up Chriſt for an Altar unto us, as is done by believing in him, then we muſt ſanctifie him to this end to our ſelves, that we may by him offer acceptable ſacrifices unto God. And the beaſts to be killed, and offered, and their blood to be put upon the horns, and corners of the Altar, are Bullocks, Goats, and Rams, ſetting forth ſenſuality, fleſhly luſts & oppreſſions; the firſt by the Bullock, or Bull, for ſenſuall men are ſpoken of, as the fat bulls of Baſhan, who regard nothing but the feeding of the belly, & worldly things pertaining hereunto; the Goat is an emblem of Luſt, and therefore the luſtfull are ſaid to be capricious; & the Ram puſheth with his

Rammes; and the fat Ox is but for the day of ſlaughter, and goeth to the ſhambles; and the Goats are ſet on the left hand. Theſe are killed and offered, when we that beleeve in Chriſt mortifie ſenſuality, fleſhly luſt, and wrath, and their bloud is put upon the Altar, when being thus mortified,

CHAP. XLIV.

V. 1. THen he brought me back, the way of the gate of the outward Sanctuary, which looketh eaſt, and it was ſhut. Here the Lord proceedeth in other directions about this Spirituall temple, bringing his Prophet for this end; firſt to the eaſt gate of the temple, called the outward Sanctuary, to diſtinguiſh it from the inner, which was the Sanctum ſanctorum; or, as is more commonly held, by the outer Sanctuary, is here meant the outer Court; then to the north gate, V. 3. where he giveth inſtructions at large. For this, firſt, the Lord entred by the eaſt gate, chap. 43. 1, 2. therefore it was thenceforth ſhut, and none but the Prince might enter there, yet he both entred, and ſate, and eat bread: there Junius. Junius ſaith, that this chapter containeth ordinances touching the Prieſts, who are diſtinguiſhed into three; firſt, the High Prieſt, or Prince of them all.
Secondly, the ſonnes of Ithamar, who for their ſinnes are reſtrained from coming to the Altar to offer, ver. 10, 11, &c. Thirdly, the ſonnes of Zadok, who came of Eleazar, ver. 15. concerning whom he giveth inſtructions at large, ver. 17, 18, &c. to the end of the chapter. For the firſt, the High Prieſt, ſaith he, is the Prince here ſpoken of that ſhould come into this gate, and ſit and eat here, alledging for this, Exod. 29. 32. where it is ſaid, that Aaron ſhould eat his part of the ſacrifice offered at the time of his Conſecration at the door of the Tabernacle. But forſomuch as the word נשיא is here uſed to ſet forth the Prince ſpoken of, and not כוהן a Prince, or a Prieſt; I aſſent rather to them, that underſtand by this Prince, the ruler of the people, whom the Lord would have herein thus priviledged above all other men, when it ſhould be lawfull for none elſe to enter by the eaſt gate, but it ſhould be continually ſhut againſt them, as being now too ſacred for any man to come in at it, where the moſt glorious God of Heaven had entred, the Prince yet might enter, and ſit, and eat, and drink there the part of his peace-offering, which by Gods Ordinance went to the offerer, whenas of old there was not made any ſuch diſtinction betwixt Prince and People, in regard of the holy things of the Lord; the Prince no more then the people being permitted to come into any gate of the Temple, but the prieſts onely to burn incenſe; or into the inner Court, which was the prieſts Court, the outer being onely for the prince and people. But now the prince was herein priviledged above them: or underſtanding it of the eaſt gate next the outer court, becauſe, chap. 46. 1, 3. it is ſaid, This gate ſhall be ſhut ſix dayes, but upon the ſeventh it ſhall be opened, and the Prince ſhall enter in by the way of the gate without. His priviledge was to have this gate opened to him, when he came upon the Sabbath of the ſeventh day, or new moon; or to make a voluntary offering at any other time, but to none elſe was it at any time opened, onely on the Sabbaths and new moons it ſtanding open; after the opening thereof, till the evening, the people might alſo come thither, after the King was gone, and worſhip at the poſts of the gate, as he had done, chap. 46. 3. And hereby it clearly appeareth further, that the Prince of the people and not the Chief prieſt was meant by the Prince here ſpoken of, becauſe that to the place, unto which the High prieſt came, no man of the people might come, either whilſt he was there, or when he was gone. In the ſhutting of this Gate, by reaſon of the Lords entring in at it, ſo that none but the Prince thenceforth might enter, hath been commonly by antiquity conceived, that the myſtery of Chriſts Incarnation was repreſented, viz. his entring, by his Divinity, into the Virgin Maries womb, being with child by the holy Ghoſt; and being born of her, after which her womb was ever ſhut up, ſo that no man elſe ever knew her, but ſhe remained alwayes a pure Virgin: Jeſus the King onely entring in here, and thus putting a bar to all others for coming in, ſhe never bearing any child more; ſo that it was a groſſe errour of ſome to hold, that they who are called the Brethren of our Lord, were by Joſeph begotten after this, of the Virgin Mary, for they were his kinſmen onely, as I have ſhewed in my expoſition upon the Goſpells, and called his brethren according to the manner of the Hebrews. Auguſtine of this gate, being ſhut, ſaith, What is it, but that the Virgin Mary ever remained a Virgin? and what that no man ſhall paſſe through it, but that Joſeph ſhould never go in unto her? he hath filled my belly with the Deity, but he hath not evacuated it of Chaſtity, I was not found in my conception without ſhame, but I was found in my child-bearing without pain, might ſhe well ſay: The Greek Scholiaſt, Chriſt ſupernaturally opened this gate never before opened, and being ſhut, kept it ſo naturally: ſo likewiſe Jerom, Ambroſe and Chryſoſt. The ſhut gate was her virginity, and a cloſed garden, and ſealed fountain; and the eaſt gate might well ſet this forth for the reaſon beforeſaid, becauſe Jeſus was the Eaſt, the ſun ariſing there; thus alſo Zuinglius. And this for the thing, by ſo many learned men agreed upon, I beleeve to be true, that the womb of the Virgin Mary was alwayes ſhut, and that Joſeph never knew her. But forſomuch as, chap. 46. 1, 2, 3. the Prince is ſaid to have this gate opened to him upon the Sabbaths, and new moones; and then it was not only open to him, but during that day, to the people alſo, I cannot ſee, how it can ſo well be made a type of Mary her virginity perpetuall. I rather therefore take it to be a type of the Chriſtian Faith, which is, as it were the eaſt gate of the Evangelicall Church, by which the ſun of righteouſneſſe entreth in, and filleth it with his glorious beams. For of this, and all the truly faithfull, it is ſaid, Be ye open (O ye gates) and ſtand open ye everlaſting doores, and the King of Glory ſhall come in. And when it is ſaid, It ſhall be ſhut, no man ſhall enter by it, but the Prince, he ſhall ſit in it, and eat bread before the Lord. The meaning is not, it ſhall be ſhut alwayes, and never opened; but, as it is further expreſſed, chap. 46. upon the ſix working dayes it ſhall be ſhut, but opened upon the ſeventh, and as the Prince, ſo the people enter then alſo all that day long, till the evening, when it is ſhut again, whereby is ſhewed, that all the wayes which men ſpend in working for the things of this life, not ceaſing any time therefrom, that they may attend to Gods worſhip, the eaſt-gate is ſhut, and all thoſe dayes no man enters, no not Meſſiah the Prince: but in the day, that they ceaſe from worldly work to attend upon his worſhip and ſervice; then the gate by which this prince entreth; is opened, and he comes in, and

Revel. 3.20: his Spirit ſaith, I ſtand at the door, and knock, and if any man will open to me, I will Epheſ. 3. 17. come in and ſup with him, and be with me: For as Chriſt entring, feeds the Soul with comfort, ſo the mans entertaining of him into his heart by Faith is, as John 4. it were, meat and drink unto him; becauſe when his Fathers will is done, this he ſaith is his meat und drink. And when Chriſt thus entreth into a man, or a people, they enter in alſo by the eaſt gate; that is, by Chriſt, to ſtand acceptably before God, in all the ſervice that we doe unto him; in which John 10. regard, he that enters in at the gate, is ſaid to be the door or gate, By which, if any man enters, he ſhall finde paſture: And whereas it is further added, chap. 46. when the prince upon any day brings a freewill-offering, the gate ſhall be opened to him alſo, the meaning is, when at any other time there ſhall be a ceſſation from worldly labour to attend upon Gods Worſhip, as if it were open the ſeventh, which is the Sabbath, the ſame gate ſhall be opened for him to enter likewiſe. A great incouragement to a Chriſtian, daily to knock off a little from work, to be free to Divine duties of reading or hearing, ſtudying upon the Word of God, or Prayer: although I would not open this ground, preſs any being poor, and having nothing but their labour to live upon, to leave their work ſo long, as to travell far off to all Sermons that be preached round about; but either in the ſame Congregation, or having occaſion to goe where a Sermon is; to goe ſo as to be made partaker thereof, and to plot in travelling forth to ſuch places to doe it, that they may both worſhip there, and doe theit buſineſſe alſo; becauſe the gate is not ſhut all the working dayes, if prayers be offered up from a good heart unto God at home, and the Word be here made ſome part of thy exerciſe, although thou intermitteſt but a little time for this from thy worldly works; at the leaſt, to converſe with God in thy cloſet, and for the inſtruction of thy Family, if thou beeſt a maſter of one. But very ill is it with them, that either ceaſe not wholly from worldly works one day of ſeven to attend upon Gods Service, or goe all the ſix dayes, or any of them without any pious performance; for thus thou ſhutteſt the door againſt Chriſt, to whom, who words, Becauſe of all your abominations hath it, beſides all your abominations, which of ſtrangers into the Sanctuary, whereby it was polluted, as by their Idolatries, and other groſſe ſinnes elſewhere committed; in concluding about the laſt of which he ſaith, Beſides all your abominations done in other places; the word here uſed, being אל El, which may be rendred beſt, beſides. By ſtrangers here ſaid to be brought in, he alſo underſtandeth baſe conditioned men, either which Jeroboam ſet up of the meaner, or common ſort of people; or which Ahaz, to pleaſe him in his Idolatrous wayes, cauſed to miniſter as Heathen Prieſts of Damaſcus did, ſetting up ſuch an Altar as he had ſeen

And this is moſt probably the meaning, becauſe that comming to dilate V. 9. further hereupon verſ. 4. he ſaith that no ſtranger uncircumciſed ſhall enter into his ſanctuary of the ſtrangers that are amongſt the children of Iſrael, and went aſtray after their idols. Verſ. 13. They ſhall not come near to do the office of a prieſt unto mee. For here by the former are meant the prieſts made by Jeroboam, and by the Levites, ſuch as Vriah and his time-ſerving aſſociates were. If it be doubted, how theſe being all circumciſed in fleſh, can be ſaid to be uncircumciſed both in heart and fleſh? It is eaſily anſwered, the circumciſion of the wicked is by their tranſgreſſing the Law made uncircumciſion, and therefore the circumciſion of ſuch becomming a fruſtrate act, although this hath been outwardly done unto them, they are ſtill uncircumciſed, and ſo unclean, and if they ſerve in Gods houſe, they pollute and make that unclean alſo. And becauſe this is ſpoken of as concerning the time of the Goſpell, they are hereby judged to be uncircumciſed both in fleſh and heart, and ſo defilers of Gods houſe that riſe up in theſe ordinary times from amongſt the common people to ſerve at Gods Altar, not being firſt proved by his Miniſters and ordained. 2. Such Levites or Miniſters, as have foully gone aſtray after idols either heatheniſh, or popiſh, or the two common idols of the world, Covetouſneſſe, or Voluptuouſneſſe, in getting worldly gain being without conſcience of right or wrong, or living in ſenſuality, as thoſe that ſay, Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we ſhall dye. Touching theſe it is not ſaid, that, they ſhall be quite put from the miniſtry, but that they ſhall bear their iniquity, that is, the puniſhment thereof by being debarred for ever hereafter from comming near the Lord to offer ſacrifices unto him, only they may retain the name of Miniſters and do inferiour offices, keeping the charge of the doors at the ſuperiour Miniſters appointment, and killing, and fleaing, and preparing the beaſts for ſacrifices, having ſome ſmall allowance therefore, as it is ſaid of the ſons of Eli, that they ſhould come to the high prieſt, that ſhould be ſet up in his ſtead, becauſe of their great wickedneſſe, and crouch unto him for a piece of ſilver and a morſell of bread, and ſay unto him, Appoint me, I pray thee to one of the prieſts offices, that I may eat bread. As for the offices, that ſuch unworthy Miniſters now a dayes are to be reſtrained from, they be preaching and praying, and adminiſtring the holy Sacraments, the offices, to which they may be held, be thoſe of Clerks of Churches, and Sextons, and preparers of bread and wine for Communions, taking care of preparing the houſe of God, and teaching and catechizing of youth, but even for theſe offices it is neceſſary, that they ſhould firſt be reformed. Yet in thus putting from the principall miniſteriall offices great cauteloūſneſſe is to be uſed, as Jehu did, when he had gathered the ſervants of Baal together to be deſtroyed, he gave a charge, Take heed, that none of the ſervants of the Lord be amongſt you, but the ſervants of Baal only: ſo great heed ought to be taken, that not for private diſlike upon other occaſions, but for ſuch abominations only, this diſcrimination be made of miniſters, and not for ſometimes having gone aſtray neither, but farre of, that is, being notoriouſly ſinfull, becauſe no miniſters but ſuch are thus ſeverely judged.

But the ſons of Zadok, which kept the charge of my houſe, when Iſrael went aſtray, &c. The Levites or Prieſts hitherto ſpoken of, were the ſons of Ithamar one of the ſons of Aaron, who had been ſo notorious for going aſtray. Now he commeth to the ſons of Zadok, who came of Eleazar, the other ſon of Aaron, being by Solomon ſet up to be high Prieſt, Abiathar, who came of Ithamar and Eli being put down. But as was ſhewed chap. 43. 18. the ſignification of the word Zadok, that is, righteous, is here to be lookt at, it being meant, that the Lord would under the Goſpell ſet up a righteous miniſtry, as it is required, that Biſhops ſhould be, 1 Tim. 3. and Timothy indeed was, and Paul, and all the reſt of Chriſts Apoſtles, after Judas for his treachery diſcarded and Matthias choſen in his ſtead. And ſuch miniſters ought the Church of Chriſt alwaies to have, and none other to offer up the petitions of his congregations, and to approach near unto him, to receive from his mouth inſtructions to deliver to the people. Becauſe as he that is imployed to preferre the petition of many to the king, is ſpecially choſen one, that the king is not in wrath with, but one whom he favoureth, ſo for offering the congregations petitions ſpoken of by the Apoſtle is amongſt the people come together to be inſtructed by him in the things which he hath learned from God according to their capacity, and therefore now he muſt be uncovered. But by this, that the miniſter is appointed to have on his bonnet, when he is more inwardly

So that they, who either hereupon teach ſuperſtitious keeping of holy daies to the honour of Saints departed, which honour may no more be done to them, then praying to them, and contrariwiſe, they that teach the aboliſhing of theſe feſtivals for abuſes at ſuch times committed, do both erre from the inſtructions here given to Chriſts Miniſters, the ſons of Zadok, who are injoyned, not to diſanull them for abuſes, but to teach and preſſe to the keeping of them aright, as of old feſtivals and ſabbaths were appointed to be kept in all godlineſs and holy rejoycing in the Lord, thoſe things being now done ſpiritually, which were then carnally and externally done. Note.

V. 27. Here he proceeding in the ordinances about the prieſts, that had mourned for the dead, ſheweth how they ſhould be cleanſed, viz. counting 7. daies, and then going to the ſanctuary with his ſin-offering; as one by this his mourning made unclean. Note. By the prieſts prohibiting to mourn for the dead, but allowing him to mourn for his father or mother, &c. was ſhewed that miniſters of the Goſpell by reaſon of their being diſtinguiſhed from the common ſort to a ſpirituall office and calling, muſt not be ſwayed by naturall affection towards friends and neighbours departed as they commonly are, but acknowledging, that there is ſome defilement in this ſorrow, refrain themſelves, only giving way to their naturall affections ſo far, as to ſorrow for father or mother, brother or ſiſter, to whom they are ſo nearly joyned in conſanguinity, leſt by doing otherwiſe they ſhould turn Stoicks without naturall affection, which is cenſured as an effect of a reprobate ſenſe. Rom. 12. 31. So the Apoſtle moveth all Chriſtians to beware of ſorrowing for the dead, that dye in the Lord, as the heathen, that are without hope, do, intimating, that in ſorrowing for the dead there is ſome defilement of ſin; and this may further be proved from hence, both becauſe ſorrowing for the dead is called the defiling of a mans ſelf, and the prieſt for his cleanſing herefrom muſt bring his ſin-offering. 1 Theſ. 4. 13. For when any dye in the Lord, it is certain, as the Apoſtle further teacheth, that they are but departed for a time, and that the Lord Jeſus will bring them again at his comming, and both we and they ſhall thenceforth ever remain with the Lord, ſo that it is rather matter of joy then of mourning, if our faith were ſtrong enough to make us out of this confidence to rejoyce, and therefore there is ſome defect in our faith, and nature is of more force then faith, when we ſorrow greatly, as we are all apt to do for our deareſt and neareſt friends departure, and herein there cannot but be ſome ſin. Wherefore the Lord in reſtraining his Miniſters, and yet permitting them in ſome caſe to mourn for the dead, ſetteth them for examples to others, not to be without naturall affection, and yet to be moderate in their mourning in any caſe. But forſomuch as now under the Goſpell, we are as near to one another even all that be faithfull, and ſo Math. 12. depart in the true faith, as fathers and mothers, ſons and daughters, and brethren and ſiſters, for all that hear the word of God, and do it, are mothers, brethren and ſiſters to Chriſt, and ſo to one another, the relation in the fleſh is not ſo much to be looked at in this ordinance, as that in the ſpirit, for the Apoſtle ſaith, If we have known any man according to the fleſh, now we know him no more. And therefore this prohibition of mourning for any but 2 Cor. 5.16. thoſe, that are neareſt, ſhould be a reſtraint unto us from doing that honour to the wicked departing out of the Lord, as to make mournings for them, but only for thoſe, that are ſo dear unto us for our mutuall relation in the Lord, and that not in reſpect of their departing to a worſe eſtate, for they goe to a far better but, for the want, that we have of them to do more good in this world, whereas we may count the world well ridded of the incorrigibly wicked, as of infectious perſons, good for nothing, whileſt they lived, but to keep up the contagion of ſin to the indangering of more ſouls, and now that they are dead, not to be holpen out of the miſerable eſtate to which they are gone, but therein they muſt abide for ever and ever. Againſt mourning for ſuch, ſee Jer. 22. 18. what is ſaid of wicked Jehoiakim, the king of Judah, They ſhall not mourn for him, ſaying, Ah my brother, or, Ah my Lord, but with the buriall of an aſſe he ſhall be buryed. Wherefore nature prevailed more with David, then the ſpirit, when he lamented ſo bitterly for his ungracious ſon Abſalom: For although there were cauſe enough of ſorrow for his being cut off in his ſins, yet it had been his duty rather with Aaron, when his two ungracious ſons periſhed by fire comming from the Lord for their preſuming to offer with ſtrange fire, to have held his peace. For the injunction concerning the prieſts marrying, hereby is ſhewed, that the miniſter of the Goſpell ſhould not look after wealth in his marrying, but to have a help meet for him, nor debaſe his vocation, which God hath made honourable by joyning unto him, as one fleſh, the relict of a ſecular man, before incorporated into the laity, but ſhew himſelf not to be moved through covetouſneſſe in marrying to ſeek wealth by taking a widow, becauſe they that marry ſo commonly, ſeek riches and not the right end of marriage, but worldly things; but to uphold the dignity of his calling, if he takes a widow, taking one, that is the widow of a man of his own calling, Levit. 21. This injunction of not marrying a widow, was only laid upon the high prieſt, but not upon other prieſts: here it is laid upon them all, becauſe there the type of the high prieſt was reſpected, who repreſented Chriſt, here another thing is aimed at, as hath been ſaid, to ſhew, how it ſhould and ought to be under the Goſpell, as the more glorious miniſtry then ſhould require, as it is called, 2 Cor. 3. It is then to be cenſured hence, as a forgetfulneſſe in miniſters, that marry contrary to this injunction, and much more, that forbid the marriage of prieſts now, touching which the Scripture here is ſo plain, and is again ſeconded, 1 Tim. 3. ſaying, Let a Biſhop be the husband of one wife.

V.28. It ſhall be to him for an inheritance, I am his inheritance. After inſtructions touching Chriſts miniſters, now he alotteth maintenance to them for their work, and in ſaying it ſhall be an inheritance, &c. He meaneth not only the ſacrifice or ſin-offering by himſelf brought before ſpoken of, but all offerings brought by the children of Iſrael from time to time, and all dedicated things, as is further ſhewed, verſ. 29, 30. Wherefore Junius takes it, as ſpoken ſynecdochically, and it may well be underſtood thus, this, that followeth, ſhall be his inheritance, becauſe he hath none other inheritance aſſigned unto him, as he is my miniſter, to maintain him in doing my work, I am his inheritance, that is, with my offerings, all but the parts burned in fire, things voluntarily dedicated and firſt fruits of all ſorts, and the firſt of their dough, when they went to baking of bread, touching which proviſion was made under the Law for thoſe prieſts Numb. 18. Deut. 18. &c. whereby is meant, that the faithfull under the Goſpell ſhould count it a point of piety in all places, ſo many as had lands, to dedicate part thereof unto God, they that had cattell and no lands, but cattell and other fruits of the earth, to offer ſome of the beſt hereof from time to time, that out of theſe things a ſufficient maintenance might be raiſed for his miniſters, and from hence Gods bleſſing might redound to them and their families, as verſ. 30. For if we hold us to the ground firſt laid, as we muſt do if we would rightly underſtand theſe things touching Gods houſe and his miniſters, that which hath been ſaid of their maintenance cannot be denyed, and to prove it further, behold the practice of them that firſt imbraced the faith, how chearfully they began in doing ſomething like unto this, and when Emperours turned Chriſtians, oh the bounty, that both they and their nobles, and all men of worth ſhewed in indowing Churches with lands and revenues, as freely as the children of Iſrael at the firſt poſſeſſing of Canaan gave cities and lands appertaining thereunto in every tribe to the prieſts; and godly kings and people afterwards made voluntary bountifull oblations, whereby the prieſts maintenance was daily inlarged: wherefore they erre greatly that now contrariwiſe take away the maintenance anciently given by pious men, and would turn over Chriſts miniſtery to a new benevolence from this iron and cold frozen age, whereby there is danger both of loſing Gods bleſſing, and bringing down his curſe upon the whole nation, and when the oyle faileth, the lamp goeth out, of quenching the light of this our Iſrael. For the prieſts eating of that which is torn, or dyeth alone, ſee my Expoſitions, Levit. 22. 8. V. 31.

Act. 2.
Chap. 4.

CHAP. XLV.

From henceforth to the end of this propheſie is a deſcription of the holy Land, and the dimenſions thereof, and the diviſions of it amongſt the 12. tribes of Iſrael. And he beginneth with a part firſt to be divided from the whole for the Prieſts and Levites, in the midſt whereof the temple and courts before deſcribed ſhould be, verſ. 1, 2, 3, &c. to verſ. 6. Ye ſhall offer an oblation to the Lord, an holy portion of the land. Whereby is meant, that dividing it ſhould firſt be begun with ſetting out a part for Gods miniſters, according to that, which was ſaid before chap. 44. that the Lord was the inheritance of his prieſts, and they ſhould have all dedicated things. Now becauſe if no further order had been taken, what quantity of ground they ſhould have to live upon, but ſo generally as there, the niggardlineſſe of men would have afforded them too little, it is here preſcribed, that there ſhould be 25000. reeds in length, and the breadth of 10000. a very large proportion, Hebr. it is only 25000. and 10000. it not being ſaid whether reeds or cubits, but becauſe the meaſures laſt before ſpoken of chap. 42. 17, 18, 19. were by reeds, Jerom rightly conjectureth, that reeds are alſo meant here, and if 500. reeds there ſpoken of made a mile or neer upon it, as was there ſaid, theſe 25000. made almoſt 50. miles, and the 10000. almoſt 20. miles, and all this was the inheritance of the miniſters of the Lord, only out of this, as about which they and theirs dwelt a ſquare of 500. reeds for the houſe of the Lord and the courts thereof was taken, as verſ. 2. and about this ſquare a void place whereupon ſtood no buildings of 50. cubits round about. In ſpeaking of the dividing of all his parts, he ſaith, ye ſhall offer an oblation to the Lord, an holy portion of the land, ſpeaking by a word ſignifying the offering of V. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. V. 2.

V. 3. 4. an heave-offering, by a metaphor, implying it to be moſt Holy, ver. 3, 4. he doth repeat the ſame again, touching this holy portion, ſhewing how this length and breadth of ground was to be imployed to the uſe of the Prieſts, viz. houſes being built for them to dwell in. And becauſe the Levites were a great, yea, the greater part of Gods Miniſters: it is further ſhewed ver. 5. that they, together with the Prieſts, ſhould have all this for a poſſeſſion alſo; and of the chambers, or treaſuries, which were 30. Ezek. 40. 17. the Levites are allowed 20. wherein to keep in the times of their miniſtring to the Prieſts, by courſe, according to the orders, into which they were diſtinguiſhed.

V. 6. Note.] For the City, which is ſaid to be for the whole houſe of Iſrael, next unto this holy portion, it muſt likewiſe be 25000 long, but 5000 broad, and ſo leſſe by half than it; by all which was ſhewed, 1. that where Chriſt ſetteth up his Miniſtry in any Country, it is firſt, and chiefly, to be taken care of, by his faithfull people, and to be provided for in reſpect of maintenance, as here is injoyned, that proviſion ſhould be made out of the whole land of Canaan, for the Temple and Prieſts firſt, dividing a proportion of ground for this uſe, and then for the City Jeruſalem, and the King, and all the other Tribes of Iſrael, as hereafter followeth; and as the firſt fruits of old were firſt taken, and brought to the houſe of the Lord, like unto which this proportion of ground is ſhewed to be by ſaying, Ye ſhall offer an heave-offering to the Lord, ſuch a length and breadth, becauſe the firſt fruits are often called an heave-offering. 2. That the maintenance of Chriſts Miniſters ought to be very large; as here is ſo much more ground allotted to the Prieſts, and Levites, as to the whole City of Jeruſalem, which was ſo populous, and the rendezvous of all the Tribes at ſundry times to reſort unto, and to continue many dayes together, there in the worſhip and ſervice of God; for which cauſe it had need to have large precincts. 3. That of Chriſts Miniſters, as well as of the old Temple, there ſhould be two ſorts, Presbyters or Biſhops, and Deacons. 4. That as the Temple, ſo the Church, in the time of the Goſpell, is but one true Catholick, and Apoſtolicall, although the Countries where it is planted be many, and the particular Congregations in each Country many, and therefore the Lord ſhewed Ezekiel no more but one. 5. That a proportion of lands and houſes near to the ſanctuaries or places dedicated to meet in about the Worſhip of God, ſhould be laid out for the Miniſters, that they may be near the place where they ought to officiate. 6. Becauſe another order is here followed in dividing this land, then in the time of Moſes and Joſhua: for then the Tribes had their portions firſt, and then the Levites and Prieſts. 2. A place, for the Houſe of God was not provided, till long after the placing of all others in their poſſeſſions, namely, in Davids time. 3. The Prieſts and Levites dwelt diſperſedly amongſt the other Tribes. 4. The City Jeruſalem came not in whole into the hands of the children of Iſrael, till Davids time, but now all is done otherwiſe, to ſhew, as Junius hath it, that old things are paſt, and all things now under the Goſpell, are become new, that we may not be offended at the ceſſation of carnall ſacrifices, and circumciſion, and diverſe waſhings and locall worſhip, and ſingular veſtiments in Divine Worſhip; or becauſe things were done with many like in former times, be deceived by them, that in an apiſh imitation thereof ſet up the like in theſe times of the Goſpell, as giving a greater decorum to Divine Worſhip, whereas indeed herein they doe nothing but deviate out of a blind zeal, and goe from the new way by God appointed to us to walk in, that our ſervice may be acceptable unto him. Junius.

V. 7, 8. Here next unto the City, and oblation of an holy portion before ſpoken of, a proportion of ground is alſo appointed to be ſet out, part on one ſide of that holy portion, and part on the other next the City; the one Weſt, and the other Eaſt, for the Prince; but of what length and breadth this ſhould be it is not ſaid: yet R. Salomon conjectureth it to have been equivalent to a portion of one of the 12 Tribes, of whoſe parts he cometh to ſpeak afterwards, and how they lay, chap. 47. & 48. Hereby was ſhewed

Note.

1. That the Common-wealth, ſet forth by the City, in generall is to be preferred before the King, although he be the Head, and ſupreme over it; for 1. A portion is ſet out after the portion of ground, which was holy, for the City, then for the King reigning over that City, whence the ſaying ariſeth, Suprema lex ſalus populi; the ſafety of the whole ſtate is chiefly to be regarded; and for the better being of the common-wealth, doth God ſet up a King to puniſh evill doers, and fight as a couragious captain for the people againſt their Enemies.

Rom. 13.

But if it ſhould ſo fall out, that the King, inſtead of fighting againſt Enemies, turneth an Enemy; or inſtead of puniſhing evill doers, takes part with them, then we muſt know, that the King, although Gods Vice-gerent, is not ſo near unto God, as the Common-wealth; and therefore, as we fear, and love God, we muſt ſtand rather for the Common-wealth, than for the King. Yet let all men take heed, how upon this ground they oppoſe the Lords Anoynted, much more how they doe any violence unto him upon a pretence of his being ſuch an Enemy; or if it doth plainly appear, extending it any further, than to the juſt defending of the Kingdome from being ruined, by his means, without touching his perſon; againſt which, it belongs particularly to God alone to animadvert, as Davids reſolution was touching Saul, and hath alwayes been, and is the reſolution of all Proteſtant Doctours, only the pretended Catholicks, by holding the contrary, have foulely blemiſhed themſelves; God keep us that be Teachers of the Church of England from ever changing this our Tenet, whatſoever others doe, that are we know not of what Spirit, as Chriſt ſaid to his two Diſciples that would have called for Fire from Heaven, as Elias did. 2. The laying out of the Prieſts and Levites portion of ground before either Common-wealths, or Princes, as moſt holy, ſheweth of what great dignity before God the Miniſters of the Goſpell are, although deſpiſed by the wicked world; for God hath ſet them up above all others, of what eſtate, or degree ſoever, both to teach, and rule over all, in things properly pertaining to Piety, there being none that are exempt from their juſt cenſures and reproofs, and threatnings; even as Jeremy was ſet over Kingdomes and Nations, ſo they, when commiſſion was given them to goe and teach all Nations; and the power of forgiving, and retaining ſinnes, and ſo to open, and let in, or to ſhut out of the Church ſuch as they ſee juſt cauſe, thus to proceed againſt, or with.

Jer. 1. 10.

And poſſeſſion of this their portion is given to none but to them alone, to be ſo near to him, as to be of his Privy Councell, and to be Princes of all Lands, as was prophetically foretold, Pſal. 45. ſaying, Inſtead of fathers, thou ſhalt have children, that thou mayſt make Princes in all Lands. But this is not thus ſet forth to abet any Miniſter of Chriſt, that hereupon ſwelleth with pride againſt ſecular Princes, as if he had power to put down, and to ſet up Kings by this Authority, as doth the Pope. For whoſoever preſumeth thus to doe, manifeſtly moveth out of his own ſphear, and uſurpeth that which was never given him, and therefore is in danger, by his being thus puffed up, to fall into the condemnation of the Devill. The Miniſters of the Goſpell are above all, in reſpect of the things of his Houſe, but in reſpect of the things of this World, of the community of thoſe men, to whom it is commanded, Let every ſoul be ſubject to the higher powers.

Rom. 13.1.

3. To ſhew, that the Prince, or King, ought to be a protectour both to Church and Common-wealth; for which he hath his poſſeſſion aſſigned, part next the one, and part next the other, and firſt next the Holy portion. 4. That the Princes revenues ought to be very great, as his Dignity, and the Majeſty, and charges of his place require; of which charges, partly about Sacrifices; that is, in maintaining the publick ſervice of God, it followeth here, ver. 17. and partly to inable him to protect all, above whom he is placed, keeping a power to this end alwayes about him. 5. That amongſt Chriſtian people, there muſt therefore be a Prince, that is, one Supream, to be obeyed by all in, and for God; and a Government by many, is not to be preferred, or upheld any longer at any time then neceſſity requireth; otherwiſe how ſhould we keep correſpondency with this pattern? or what ſhall the Princes portion in the land doe, which is for none but him? Or how ſhall we approve our ſelves to be the Iſrael of God, ſeeing Iſrael alwayes had a Judge as Deut. 32. a King, as Moſes is called King in Jeſhurun; or a King; or a Prince, as after their return out of Babylon; and when they had not, wofull was their caſe, as Judg. 20. and in all the interims between Judge and Judge, being made a prey to their enemies, as the book of Judges declares at large. For the duty of the Prince, the Lord ſaith, He ſhall no more oppreſſe my people: intimating, 1 Sam. 9. that Kings formerly had oppreſſed them, by taking of their Vineyards, and goods, and children, partly not thinking, that they had ſufficient of their own, but now ſo much ground is ſet out for the Prince, that he ſhould no more have need to oppreſſe any man by taxes and impoſitions, but in caſes of extraordinary neceſſity.

V. 9, 10. It being ſhewed before, that Princes ſhould not be oppreſſours; now it is Levit. 19. 35. ſhewed, by way of charge, how they ſhould not oppreſſe, Yee ſhall have juſt ballances, a juſt ephah, and a juſt bath; that is, ye ſhall take care that it be ſo in all your dominion, and that there be no exactions, whereby the people may be oppreſſed. Of the Ephah, ſee Exod. 16. 36. of the bath, 2 King. 7. 26.

tenth part of an Homer.* Here by Homer, a meaſure of liquid things is meant, that which conteined 67 gallons and a pottle: a Bath then was 6 gallons, a our buſhell; whereas the ſame Authour, out of whom I had this, ſaith, that an Ephah was a buſhell of our meaſure wanting a pottle; but it may be, the Ephah heaped is there meant, here ſtricken, and ſo the difference may be reconciled. There is an Omer contrariwiſe ſpoken of Exod. 16. 36. which held onely the tenth part of an Ephah. The vulg. for Homer, hath Core, but ders it, Minam, a pound; ſo likewiſe the Vulg. and my forecited Authour giving this reaſon, why firſt he ſaith 20 ſhekels, then 25. laſtly, 15 ſhall make 3^{l}. 2^{s}. 6^{d}. Hitherto of meaſures, and weights to be uſed in civill dealings betwixt man and man, whereby it appeareth, that a good Prince is not on-care to govern the Common-wealth ſo, as that no wrong may be done in meaſures or weights by any other man, wherein care hath been commonly well taken from time to time in this our Common-wealth.

V. 13. He proceedeth to meaſures, in things pertaining to the Church, or Houſe of God: The oblations that he ſhall offer, ſhall be the ſixth part of an Ephah, of an homer of wheat. The Ephah was ſaid before to be the tenth of an homer; therefore the ſixth part appointed here by the King to be offered, was the 60 part of an is added.

offerings in the Feaſts, and new Moons and Sabbaths, and all ſolemnities of the houſe of Iſrael: that is, he ſhall provide, that neceſſaries be brought by the people, for the uſe of ſacrificing at all feſtivall times, which were three yeerly, the ſtian Princes in their ſeverall Kingdomes ought to take care of Religion, firſt, that oblations, here called תרומות be brought in, ver. 13. whereupon of land there ſpoken of, injoying other means of livelyhood, and that not by mens voluntary contributions onely by dedicating ſomething of their own good will, but becauſe the Lord foreſaw, how cold and backward Chriſtian people would be in their contributions; he ſetteth the proportion of firſt fruits, that the Prince ſhould cauſe all his ſubjects to offer, for theſe are ſet forth by the word תרומות heave-offerings; although the word be alſo ſometime put for tenths, and the tenths of tenths, which the Levites were to offer to the Prieſts. Now that the Lord hereby ſhewed, that a certainty ſhould be offered, or given now under the Goſpell appeareth, becauſe that having before commanded the offering of firſt fruits under the Law, he ſet no certain proportion, but left it as arbitrary, how much each one ſhould offer; now he ſetteth the juſt proportion, viz. the 6 part of his Wheat, and of his Barley, &c. The Hebrew Doctors, becauſe the proportion was not ſet determined, that the 60 part was the leaſt that ſhould be given for firſt fruits; and if any man would, the 40th, but not any leſſe than 60, but all betwixt 40 and 60. This was then yet undetermined by God, and determined only by men, now God determines it, to ſhew that which hath been already ſaid, againſt thoſe, that will have none compelled to pay to the Miniſters maintenance. It is true indeed, amongſt ſuch as are without a Prince to ſee, that it be done, but where it is ſo, God owneth not that people as the children of Iſrael. 2. As the Prince ought to provide, that Chriſts Miniſters have a certain maintenance which may be ſufficient, in Lands and Oblations; ſo likewiſe it is his duty to care, that the Service of God be duly, by them, performed at all times appointed, which is better expreſſed by Vulg. and Hebr. ſaying, Upon the Prince ſhall be the burnt-offering, &c. that is, as hath been ſaid, to charge, and to take care, that the Prieſts offer them, as is here generally expreſſed, upon Feaſt dayes, Sabbaths, &c. and more particularly, ver. 18, 19, 20, to the 16 verſe of chap. 46. Upon the the firſt, 7. and 14. day of the firſt month when the Paſſover was, and upon the Sabbaths, &c. For Miniſters may neglect to doe their duties, as well as the Prieſts, the Shepherds then did to the indangering of the ſheep: and therefore he, whom God hath ſet both over them, and the people, as ruler of all, muſt provide here againſt by his princely care, when he hath made good Lawes for the puniſhing of remiſſe Miniſters, to ſee them executed. 3. For the times of ſacrificing, here particularly ſpoken of, and the beaſts then to be offered, and Wine and Oyle, herein we are to underſtand, that the Lord accommodates himſelf to the manner of thoſe times, when he would be ſo ſerved; but ſpiritually thereby was meant, that Prayers and Praiſes ſhould publickly be offered by his Miniſters; and the Word preached, as under the Law there were three kinds of Offerings, Burnt, and Drink-offerings, ſetting forth Prayers, with confeſſion of Sinnes, and Thankeſgivings, and Peace-offerings preaching frequently the glad tidings of peace, and of good things. And by his nominating Sabbaths, new Moones and Solemnities, when theſe things were to be done; but before all theſe, the firſt and ſeventh day of the firſt month, he ſheweth, that not onely one day every week ſuch ſacrifices ſhould be offered, but that other Feſtivalls ſhould alſo be kept, as at the new Moons light appearing anew, when as before the nights were dark, as wanting the light of the Moon; ſo upon ſuch dayes, as that light came, which is the true Light, even Chriſt Jeſus, and a John 1. 2.

new ſtar demonſtrating him, and the ſpirit of light and comfort in the ſigne of fire light tongues comming and ſitting upon the Apoſtles. And times of publick deliverances giving us extraordinary occaſion to remember Gods goodneſſe, as was partly touched before, chap. 44. 24. And whereas an oblation is appointed the firſt day of the firſt moneth for the cleanſing of the ſanctuary, hereby was ſhewed, that when any place was built for the aſſembly to meet in any where about the worſhip of God, it ſhould be ſanctified to this uſe by prayer, as Solomon dedicated the temple of old in this manner. Let him, that holdeth the contrary, and that any houſe may ſerve as well for this holy uſe, as an houſe thus ſanctified, tell, what the Lord meant, by appointing this ſacrifice for cleanſing of the ſanctuary under the New Teſtament, and if he cannot, lay his hand upon his mouth, and be aſhamed to ſpeak ſo any more. For although the old locall worſhip at the Temple be diſannulled, and men are bidden in every place to lift up pure hands and hearts unto God, Yet therein is nothing contrary to this, the meaning being only, that we ſhall not rather prevail with God by praying in one place, then in another for any fixed holineſſe in the place by means of Gods dwelling there, and that all places are ſo holy by reaſon of Gods preſence to the faithfull calling upon him any where, that they ſhall be accepted praying to him whereſoever, and not that therefore no one place or houſe for the congregation to meet in, ought to be ſanctified and ſet apart by prayer purpoſely for this end, before it be taken for and uſed as the houſe of God, but after this, it not being lawfull to put it to any other uſe upon danger of having this counted a prophaning of that which is holy, ſome hint whereof is given, 1 Cor. 11. 22.

V. 20. Again for the oblation upon the ſeventh day of the firſt for every one, that is ſimple and that erreth, hereby, I take it, is meant, that before the paſſeover, which followeth verſ. 21. we muſt be ſanctified, that is, before the taking of the holy communion, for Chriſt is our paſſeover, whoſe fleſh and bloud is there eaten and drunk, and this ſanctifying is likewiſe by prayer for any to be admitted into the Chriſtian congregation, which is Gods houſe, that hath formerly gone aſtray, as he was blindly led in the way of ſuperſtition or other groſſe ſins, but is now converted: or that is ſimple and ignorant, as little children are, for ſanctifying whom by prayer and bleſſing them, our Lord gave us example, when being brought unto him he took them in his armes and bleſſed them, and that this may be done to little ones at a week old, is ſhewed by ſaying, it ſhall be done for the ſimple the 7. day, and ſo he ſaith, ye ſhall reconcile the houſe, or make good propoſitions to the houſe, uſing the word houſe in another ſenſe, viz. For thoſe that were contained in the houſe of God, who are his ſpirit: houſe, as the ſanctuary before ſpoken of his materiall. Something then muſt be done by Gods miniſter, as to ſanctifie a building, ſo a ſoul, which till it be done, God is not reconciled. For by nature we are children of wrath, and ſo need reconciliation with him ſo ſoon as we are born, and how is this to be made, but by his miniſters prayers, the Infant being brought unto him, as they were to his Maſter, by his prayers to be bleſſed, and to be unto God reconciled. Now the Church of God under the New Teſtament, never brought Infants to his prieſts to be thus bleſſed, but when to be baptized, knowing well, that if there be no regeneration, there can be no reconciliation, from that ſaying of his, Vnleſſe one be born again of water and the Holy Ghoſt he cannot enter into the kingdome of heaven. It is then of no force which is urged, the Apoſtles were not commanded to baptize Infants, therefore they ought not to be baptized. It is enough that they muſt be ſanctified and reconciled by ſacrifice, which none can be, but by being regenerate, therefore they muſt come to the water and bleſſing of the miniſter both, ſith regeneration for Infants is inſeparable from water, and baptizing therewith it in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. They that are able actually to beleeve, are, when they beleeve through the preaching of the word hereby regenerate, Jam. 1. 17. 1 Pet. 1. 23. but Infants are not thus capable of regeneration, and ſo of reconciliation, but only by baptiſme accompanyed with faithfull prayers. It is well noted by Lyra, that theſe two ordinances for the cleanſing of the ſanctuary, and the erroneous and ſimple on the 1, and 7. day are new, and here firſt made, neither of them being in the canon of the ordinances made by Moſes, and therefore every one muſt needs be hereby convinced, that they properly concern the time of the New Teſtament, and if ſo, then we muſt inquire who are meant by the ſimple, that muſt be reconciled: and who by thoſe that have erred, for that they are not both one is plain, becauſe he that hath erred, but is now turned from his errour, is not ſimple, but wiſe to ſalvation, little ones then muſt needs be meant by the ſimple, and therefore it is moſt true, which hath been already ſaid touching them. For ſuch as have erred, and the offering for them upon the 7. day, this is ſpoken in alluding to the legall way of cleanſing, when any were defiled by the dead, the time of whoſe cleanſing expired not, till the ſeventh day, and hereby nothing elſe is ſet forth, but that upon his perfect penitency, he that hath ſinned moſt foully, is again reconciled to God, and it is not a little ſhew making of repentance, that will do it. But ſuch muſt with the woman, that was a ſinner, who came to Chriſt, waſh his feet with tears, that is, weep abundantly for his ſins, as Peter for denying Chriſt wept bitterly, and David for his adultery and murther watered his couch with his tears, and mingled his drink with weeping.

Note.

V. 21. The paſſeover here next followeth upon the 14. day, againſt which it is prepared as hath been ſaid the 1. and 7. day, to ſhew, that a reconciliation with God muſt firſt be made before we keep our paſſeover, the communion of the body and bloud of his dear Son, otherwiſe we eat and drink unworthily, becauſe in uncleanneſſe and unſanctified. And hitherto of things ſhewed here concerning Chriſtian Kings and Princes, upon whom the charge hereof lyeth in their ſeverall principalities. Now it is further to be underſtood, that Meſſiah the prince is alſo here pointed at, as the head of all, and that in his kingdome he eſtabliſheth alwaies theſe two things, juſtice in mens dealings and true piety towards God, ſo that they who neglect either of theſe are none of his. Men that uſe falſe meaſures or weights, or any other fraud in their dealings, or that are impious inſtead of pious, towards his miniſters, defrauding them of their dues, or ſacrilegiouſly devouring their inheritance, as too many do, or towards God in reſpect of his ſabbaths, and ſolemnities, or of his ſacrifices of all ſorts. All theſe things lye upon him to ſee them done, and therefore he will ſee to the doing hereof, neither ſhall any of his ſubjects eſcape his ſevere cenſure, that do them not, either for that he ſeeth them not, for all things are manifeſt in his ſight with whom we have to do, yea the hidden things of the heart, for he knoweth all mens thoughts: or for that he hath no power to puniſh them, for all power, ſaid he, is given me in heaven and in earth. Again becauſe it is ſaid, upon him ſhall be the burnt offerings, &c. and the people ſhall give this oblation to the Prince. Note that he is the only prieſt to ſee to the making of a propitiation for our ſins, and that we muſt all bring our offerings to him, which is done when we relye wholly upon his merits, and not in any part upon our own, and make him our only mediatour and advocate.

CHAP.

CHAP. XLVI.

V. 1. V. 2. Thus ſaith the Lord, the gate of the inner court, that looketh towards the Eaſt ſhall be ſhut the 6. working dayes, &c. Verſ. 2. And the prince ſhall enter in the by way of the porch of the gate without, &c. Here the Lord, before he proceedeth any further in ſhewing what ſacrifices ſhould be offered upon other feſtivals beſides that of the paſſeover, chap. 45, 21. and the feaſt of tabernacles the 7. moneth, and 15. day, verſ. 25. reſumeth again the argument in hand, chap. 44. 1, 2, 3. about the keeping of the eaſt gate ſhut for the prince, as I ſhewed there, that it might not be conceived that it ſhould alwaies be ſhut, but during the ſix daies, as is here ſaid, the expoſitions whereupon ſee there. Now becauſe he had before ſet forth the princes duty about ſacrificing, but not the place, to which he ſhould come and it ſhould therein be proceeded, he ſupplyeth this, ſaying, that he ſhould come to the eaſt gate being opened for him upon the ſabbaths and new moons, and ſtand by the poſt or threſhold, as the vulg. hath it, upon the threſhold to ſee, whileſt his ſacrifice is in offering by the prieſts, and then to worſhip towards the moſt holy place, after which he was to go out again, and then the people might come thither to worſhip and ſee likewiſe the offering of ſacrifices the reſt of the day, till night, when that gate was ſhut again. Whereby is meant, as was partly touched before chap. 44. that both prince and people, that are beleevers, have acceſſe to Gods houſe, and come to ſee his chearfull countenance by the eaſt gate which is Chriſt, but no nearer can they come, but to the threſhold, whileſt they live in this world, ſeeing the moſt holy place, heaven afar off, and the glory thereof. And although the prieſts came ſomewhat nearer into the inner court, yet neither did they ſee, as afterwards both they and all the faithfull ſhall, and 1 Cor. 13. in ſeeing be bleſſed, as the Apoſtle confeſſeth, we ſee here but in part darkly, then we ſhall ſee as we are ſeen. As for our Lord Jeſus ſet forth by the name of the prince, chap. 44, and under the ſame name the Chriſtian prince, becauſe repreſented by ſuch a prince, he is not yet here by him ſet forth in his ſtanding upon the threſhold at the door, the prieſts being within to offer his ſacrifice; and then departing, and all the people comming after this as far as he. For he was ſaid before to ſit in this gate and here to eat and drink. Therefore this ſheweth only, in what condition even the moſt eminent amongſt Chriſtians ſhall be and are in this world, although they be captains and leaders to others, who are in ſubjection unto them, yet they approach not ſo near to God, as his miniſters, neither can they be accepted of without their mediation. Note. They cannot themſelves ſacrifice, that is, do the duties pertaining to the miniſtry, unleſſe with Saul and Vzziah they will incurre Gods wrath. Their meaneſt ſubjects, that are faithfull have as near acceſſe to God as they, and are in reſpect of divine things, as much bleſſed as they, that they may learn therefore not to contemn them, or in pride to lift up themſelves above them. But if a prince may not come any further, then to the gate of the inner court, where the prieſts attend, what impudency is it in any of the common people to preſſe further, and even uſurp the prieſts office? a thing too common in theſe miſerable times, but not without evident demonſtration of Gods wrath therefore in the confuſion and ſtupendious judgements, that are amongſt us both ſpiritually and corporally.

V. 4. After the way appointed for the prince to come to the houſe of God to worſhip, and the place of his ſtanding, now the number of lambs appointed upon the ſabbath to be offered and the rams, viz. of lambs 6. one ram, and of fine flour an ephah to the ram, and to the lambs what he is able, and of oyle V. 6, 7. an hin, that is, 18. pints, for the ephah, ſee chap. 45. upon the new moons likewiſe, only then a bullock and its meat-offering more then upon a weekly ſabbath. And it is to be noted, that at all feſtivals elſe, both of the paſſeover ver and tabernacles, &c. the offerings were much greater, then upon the ſabbaths, becauſe they came often, theſe more ſeldome, eſpecially the paſſeover, Pentecoſt and feaſt of tabernacles, which exceeded in their offerings the new moons. And hereby we are taught to offer the ſacrifices of doing good every ſabbath day, but more abundantly at other feſtivals ordained for the commemoration of the ineſteemable benefit redounding to us by Chriſt, and for a remembrance of other mighty deliverances, wherein the power of God hath appeared more evidently then ordinary. And therefore the cuſtome of exerciſing greateſt liberality at the feaſts of Chriſts nativity in this land is moſt conſonant to the will and word of God, and for this cauſe never to be laid down. They then, that would obliterate the memory hereof ſhall have little thank at Gods hands, whatſoever indiſcreet zeal prompts unto them of doing herein a worthy act. It is true, that time hath been much abuſed under a pretence of profuſe liberality and giving too much liberty to his high diſhonour, in pretence of honouring whom it hath been kept, as if Bacchanalia, and not Chriſti natalitia were then celebrated. For as God ſtraightly forbad his people of old to inquire after what manner the heathens ſerved their Gods and kept feſtivals unto them, that they might do likewiſe, ſo it is abominable to him when Chriſtians keep the remembrance of his ſons incarnation with gaming and ſurfetting, and drunkenneſſe, and all manner of carnall vanities beſides. But ſhall we for this give over more liberall ſacrificings, with which God is ſo well pleaſed at this time? By no means, but let us take away the abuſe, and for this end by ſeverity of Law repreſſe inordinacy, and ſo continue this practice of piety ſtill, as the Church of God hath alwaies heretofore accounted it from age to age, and that not without ground from this place, as hath been already ſhewed. Thoſe that think otherwiſe, I would deſire to give me a reaſon, why feſtivals under the New Teſtament are ſpoken of beſides the Sabbaths, becauſe they ſay, they cannot find that any other dayes ought to be kept now, and what the meaning is of the diverſity of ſacrifices upon the Sabbaths, and upon ſuch dayes, the one ſo much exceeding the other, if not that, which I have before rendred? And if they cannot, retract and ingenuouſly ſubſcribe hereunto. For that the ordinances about ſacrificing, and concerning other things about this houſe are not the ſame with thoſe given before by Moſes, is apparent to him, that ſhall compare them, and therefore muſt neceſſarily pertain to another time, and are not to be underſtood according to the letter. And forſomuch as there be no more times then that under the Law and this under the Goſpell, theſe muſt neceſſarily pertain unto, and be taken as ordinances for this time, and not to be let lye as riddles unreſolved and altogether uſeleſſe unto us. For the juſt number of lambs now to be offered, Rabanus thinketh, that they are 6. as the dayes going before the ſabbath are 6. and one ram added hereunto makes up the 7. whereby is intimated, that it is neceſſary for us to keep the ſabbaths, that an expiation may then be made for all our ſins, into which we are apt to fal every day of the week, and for the ſins of that day alſo wherein although we diſpoſe our ſelves to the worſhip of God being ſequeſtred from our worldly works, yet we are prone to offend herein divers waies, for which there is need of a ſacrifice alſo. Touching the ſacrifices of the new moons, in that a bullock more is offered, it is to ſhew a new & greater benefit requiring more liberal ſacrificing, as hath bin already ſaid. Thus for the ſabbaths and new moons, the returning of the prince after this ſervice ended, being ſaid to be by the way whereby he came. But upon other feſtivals both the people & he muſt come in at the north gate, & go out at the ſouth, or if any come in at the ſouth, go out at the north, for of either it is ſaid. And the prince amongſt them in going in and comming out. The meaning is firſt touching the prince, that Chriſt Jeſus, as he voluntarily took on humane life to him, ſo he again voluntarily laid it down, as Joh. 10.18. But other men do not, but are born into the world diverſly, and go out a contrary way, ſome by the north, as it were of much ſharp adverſity, or violence, who have a warm and comfortable paſſage at the firſt, and they go this way unwillingly, by which they are made at laſt to go, and it is againſt their wils that moſt men dye, becauſe they look upon death, as a grim and formidable giant, yea the beſt ſometimes come unwillingly to it, as Chriſt ſaid to Peter, Joh. 21. when thou wert young, thou girdedſt thy ſelf and wenteſt whither thou wouldſt, but when thou art old, another ſhall gird thee and lead thee whither thou wouldſt not: others again come in as it were by the north, but goe out by the ſouth, that is, endure much hardſhip at the firſt, yea, and long after, being alſo full of inward terrours, yet at length they depart full of comfort, as many martyrs and other holy men have often done. But becauſe it is ſaid thus of thoſe that Hieron. come to the houſe of God to keep the feſtivals, Jerom expounds it of the Gentiles, who enter by the north gate, as it were, and go out by the ſouth, becauſe they come out of the cold and frozen Zone, where no true piety grew, when they are converted into the ſouth, which is warme by the ſunſhine of grace, and ſo they depart after this full of comfort, and of the Jewes, who enter by the ſouth gate, when they forſake the grace and bleſſing of God, under which they formerly lived, when God by his word and works dwelt amongſt them, and goe out at the north gate by a terrible judgement of being hardened in heart againſt the faith to their deſtruction. And if we take it thus, hereby the vocation of the Gentiles, and rejection of the Jewes is ſhewed. But how then is Meſſiah their prince ſaid to be with them, entring or going out by one gate, or the other? For thoſe that enter in by the north, and go out at the ſouth, it is eaſie to anſwer, their prince is with them, through whom they are inabled to do thus, but without him altogether unable, as he ſaith, Without me ye can do nothing: but for the other, I ſee not, what can be ſaid, but that he is with them alſo, but by his judgement for their malice and wickedneſſe to harden them ſo, that they could not beleeve. But becauſe this were an hard conſtruction to be made of his being with any, I rather Luk. 13. hold, that they who come in at the north, and they that come in at the ſouth gate are all Gentiles from divers quarters, as it is ſaid, They ſhall come from the north and ſouth, and ſit down with Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, &c. and whereas he Note. ſaith, they ſhall go directly on to the other gate, he teacheth, that the true Chriſtian having put his hand to the plough turneth back no more, but goeth conſtantly on in the way of faith and obedience, till he goeth out of this world by death, whether it muſt be the north way of perſecution and ſufferings, or the ſouth of a more peaceable and quiet end, for Lots wife for looking back had her judgement for ever. Now their prince is ſaid to be with either of theſe coming in and going out for the reaſon already ſpoken of, that when we perſevere and turn not back again, we may not attribute any thing to our ſelves, but all to his grace inabling us, and of this alſo I confeſſe, I had Note. ſome hint from the foreſaid Jerom, who alſo upon the Ephah of the meat-offering put to the ram, but to the lambs, what his hand ſhall find, ſaith, that of ſome, to whom God hath given more ſtrength and perfection he requireth a certain proportionableneſſe of duty, but for the weak, like lambs, he is ſatisfied with what they are able to do, ſo that there be a willing minde, for he 2 Cor. 8. accepteth of what we have and not what we have not, where there is ſuch a minde. But an hin of oyle, muſt be to all, and this is not made arbitrary to any, Matth. 25. to ſhew that every wiſe virgin hath oyle in her lamp, and ſuch as have not, are repulſed from entring. The Jewes underſtanding the comming in and going out at the contrary gate according to the letter, hold it as a point of reverence to God to go thus right on and not to turn the back to his holy place, but I marvell, that they conſidered not, that verſ. 8. it is ſaid, the prince, who was the leader of the people, ſhall return the ſame way, that he came in. For the underſtanding of it, as hath been ſaid, of going right on and not turning back, it is the ſame with that, which is noted of the living creatures, chap. 1. 12. who are ſaid to go thus ſtraight on and not to turn, as they went by the ſpirit, which was in them, carrying both them and all others, in whom he is, on in this conſtancy to the end.

V. 12. Now when the Prince ſhall prepare voluntary burnt-offerings, or peace-offerings, one ſhall ſhall open the eaſt gate unto him, &c. Here, as hath been partly touched before, chap. 44. is ſhewed, that beſides the Sabbaths and Feſtivalls ſet and appointed under the Goſpell; Chriſtian Princes, and likewiſe their people ſhould take ſome other times alſo of their own good wills; as they being moved by the Spirit of Piety, ſhall agree, for religious exerciſes, and to ſhew how acceptable this ſhould be to God, it is at ſuch times appointed to be done, as upon the Sabbaths the eaſt gate ſhould be opened; but with this difference, that it ſhould be ſhut again, ſo ſoon as the duty was performed, there being liberty then again for men to doe the works of their callings, and not, as upon the Sabbaths, to ceaſe here from all the day after, as was intimated they ſhould then doe, by requiring the gate to be kept open all that day, till the evening; whereby we may ſee, that it is a point of Piety to keep ſome dayes of the working dayes, as dayes of aſſembling together in the publick place to the Worſhip and Service of God, ſo that the difference before ſo ſpoken of, be kept, which doth both countenance Lecture dayes, which be frequent in many parts of this Kingdome; and if ſuch dayes, much more dayes obſerved, and kept by the whole Church in every place to Gods honour, but not to the honour of men, how dear, or near ſoever unto him; provided yet, that even upon theſe dayes the door of the Sanctuary be ſhut alſo, after the duty done, and there be no reſtraint of men thence forward from working, for this were to paſſe the bounds here ſet. And therefore they are in an errour, that either impugne the keeping of Feſtivalls, beſides the Sabbaths, in theſe times upon this ground, that it is will-worſhip forbidden, Col. 2. 18. whence to gather that to keep times, beſides thoſe by God ap-doing. And they alſo are in an errour, who at ſuch times will have the door

Two lambs are appointed to be offered exery day, one in the morning, the other in the evening, but here one only in the morning, whereby it further appeareth, that the continuall ſacrifice under the law is not here meant, but an offering dayly to be made under the Goſpell. The Vulg. for, Thou ſhalt prepare, hath it, he ſhalt make; but Hebr. it is the ſecond perſon, and therefore better that reading, referreth it to the Prince, ſaying, that ver. 12. having ſpoken of voluntary ſacrifice to be made by the Prince, but not determined what it held, that another thing is here preſcribed to the Chriſtian, viz. to provide that the Service of God be not by him neglected any day of the week, but that he be dayly worſhipped by every one for ever, as it is ſaid, Prayers ſhall Pſal. 72, 15. be made to him continually and dayly ſhall he be praiſed. That it cannot be underſtood, as a part of the direction before given to fulfill that which was wanting, ver. 12. is plain, becauſe there an offering altogether voluntary is ſpoken of, it being left to the will of the offerer, what to ſacrifice; but here the ſacrifice to be made, is expreſly ſet down, it not being left to the liberty of a mans own will, whether he will offer this ſacrifice or no. Whoſoever then doth not worſhip God every morning, breaketh an expreſſe precept and ſhall anſwer for it. I will not ſay, whoſoever doth it not by Prayers, offering Mat. 6. together with his Family, is thus guilty, (for there is a cloſſet, wherein he is bidden to do it) but becauſe ſervants and children are negligent hereof, and they for want of doing it, may become guilty of tranſgreſſion; it is the part of a carefull houſholder to call them dayly together, and to cauſe them to joyn with him in the doing hereof, nothing doubting, but if this be made his firſt mornings work, both he, and they, ſhall be the better bleſſed of God in all things that they put their hands unto all that day. For the Lamb without John 1. blemiſh to be now offered, hereby Chriſt is ſet forth, who is the Lamb of God, that taketh away the ſin of the World, for he is Holy, and without Blemiſh, becauſe without ſinne, and every faithfull perſon offereth him, when he 1 Tim. 2. 8. prayeth, and praiſeth God in his name, lifting up pure hands and heart unto him, as is commanded. For then he offereth the Lamb without blemiſh, altogether according to meaning, ſacrificing himſelf unto God by the mortification of his ſinnes; for ſo we are exhorted to offer up our ſelves in our Rom. 12. 1. bodies a living ſacrifice holy and acceptable to God; for becauſe Chriſt, the Lamb, is in ſuch, when this is done; this Lamb without blemiſh, is offered every day, and ſo this precept fulfilled. To pray in his name, and to live ſtill in ſinne, is to offer abomination, as Eſay 1. 12. But what is the meaning of this, that whereas under the Law two Lambs were offered dayly, now onely one Lamb Lyra. is appointed in the morning, none in the evening? Lyra anſwereth, becauſe the Maſſe is not to be celebrated, unleſſe in the morning, except there be neceſſary occaſion; which is very rarely; and whereas it may be objected, a Lamb of that year is appointed, how then can Chriſt, offered in the Maſſe, be Heb. 13. 8. hereby meant? He anſwereth, that Chriſt is the ſame yeſterday, and to day, and for ever; and that Hebr. it is a Lamb of this year. And upon this ground the Papiſts generally hold, that the Maſſe is a ſacrifice wherein Chriſt is offered as often as it is celebrated; and that he may be there to this end, that by the words of Conſecration the ſubſtance of the Bread is turned into his Body, conſiſting of Fleſh and Bloud, and to fulfill this propheſie, their Prieſts are tyed to ſay Maſſe dayly, and by reaſon of this, they hold the 1 Cor. 10. Lords Table to be an Altar. But the Scripture calleth it a Table, and not Heb. 10. 28. an Altar, and that ſaying, that Chriſt was once offered, never to be offered any more, as the ſacrifices offered by the Prieſts were often repeated, doth plainly evince, that he neither is, nor can be any more ſacrificed. Wherefore all that which they ſay is a meer invention of man to make men beleeve, that their Maſſe is of great avail, both for the living and the dead, to make a propitiation for them, ſo that to be made partakers of ſo great a benefit, they are willing to be at any coſt, for the benefit of theſe ſacrificing Prieſts, even as under the Law the prieſts, by teaching them to ſay, Corbana, got no ſmall gain: Therefore our Lord in preſcribing the doing of this in remembrance of him, biddeth onely, Take, and eat; not offer it as a ſacrifice to make new propitiations for particular perſons, or for all in generall. If it be ſaid then, why is this dayly ſacrifice now reſtrained to the morning, if nothing be hereby meant, but morning prayers made in Chriſts name, ought we not as well to pray in the evening, as in the morning? or is there ſome relaxation here made of the ancient devotion? Anſw. God forbid, for we are now 2 Theſ. 5. 17. bidden, To pray continually, and in all things to give thanks, and to watch and pray; but morning prayer to be made by every one, is dayly injoyned, not to exclude the evening, but it is hereby meant, that we ſhould dayly begin our devotion betimes in the morning, and thenceforth hold on by continuall ejaculations, as occaſion is offered all the day, when we begin our work, Command. 6. and 7. and 3. and for many other things is more ſtrict, therefore Prayers muſt needs be now made much more abundantly, it being the time of pouring out the ſpirit of prayer and ſupplication; and wherein we receive the ſpirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba father. Zacha.12.9. Rom. 8.16. Yet we are not with the Euchetæ ſequeſtring our ſelves from all other imployment, to give our ſelves dayly wholly to Prayer, but with prayer begin betimes in the morning every day; thus making every day a Sabbath, according to Pſal. 92. as Chriſt, whom we ſo offer, roſe betimes in the morning, and thenceforth holding on, as hath been ſaid to the evening, and then ſpecially again praying, that we may not come ſhort of the devotion of old preſcribed in any thing, remembring, from that, which hath been ſaid before, how acceptable he is to God, that at any time offereth willingly over and above that which is preſcribed: yet I hold not, that praying onely every morning is here ſo pointed at, but that the Celebrating of the Lords Supper is alſo intimated, which ſhould be every day at the firſt, and was, Acts 2.46. and afterwards every firſt day of the week in the morning, as Acts 20. and ſtill alwayes ſhould be often.

V. 16. Having hitherto ſhewed what ſhould be done about religious matters, here he proceedeth to ſhew ſomething about civill again. He had before appointed a portion of land for the Prince, chap. 45. which moſt probably was large and ample, now he taketh order to have it preſerved to him, and his poſterity, and not alienated to others for ever. If he giveth part thereof to his ſonnes, they muſt enjoy it to them and theirs for ever, but if to any ſervant, the houſe and land ſo given, muſt return to the Prince again in the year of Jubilee, as the law provided, Levit. 25.

V. 18. And here is further added, a reaſon why the Prince had the poſſeſſion of ſo much land, viz. that he might never take and give away other mens inheritances, or any part of them, as 1 Sam. 9. it is ſaid, that a King would doe, and as Ahab did. But by this caveat here given, it is plain, that a Prince under the N. T. ſhould never have power, or dare ſo doe, for fear of God, who hath prohibited it as an oppreſſion, the puniſhment whereof will be moſt grievous, as in Ahab, even the cutting off of him, and his poſterity by Gods juſt judgment; ſomething like unto which we now ſee done, although not for lands, yet for goods taken away, of which there is a like reaſon. God grant that others who have the Soveraign power, may take warning hereby never to doe the like, and therefore much leſſe make the burthen of the people greater. Note. By the Princes giving to his ſonnes or ſervants out of his own eſtate is ſhewed, that the Soveraign power ought not to exerciſe liberality to any out of the peoples purſes, or out of them to inrich their own children: and by the reverting of the Princes lands to him again in the year of Jubilee, that ſuch lands may be by him granted out by leaſe, but cannot be alienated for ever, that the royall dignity by the diminution of his eſtate may not be impaired, or he forced for want of means of his own ordinarily, to take of his ſubjects to the impairing of their eſtates.

V. 19, 20. Here he returneth again to things ſacred, viz. to ſhew where the Prieſts ſhould boyle the offerings, or bake ſuch as were to be baked, even in the holy Chambers before ſpoken of, which ſtood northward, or at the two ſides of them weſt-ward.

V. 21. And ver. 21, 22. he is brought into the outer Court, where at the four corners, there were four little courts and buildings in every of them for the ſame purpoſe round about. And theſe courts were each of them 40 cubits long, and 30 broad. For the meaning of this, I know not any ſo good, as that in Gods Houſe; that is, his Church, there ſhall alwayes be proviſion both for his Miniſters and People, ſuch as wherewith they ſhould be content, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Having food and raiment, let us therewith be content: 1 Tim. 6. this being a bleſſing redounding from Piety towards God, according to Hag. 1. and Mal. 3. For the four little courts in the four corners of the outer court, Hieron. wherein there were roomes alſo to prepare meat in; I think with Jerom, that they ſerved to ſet forth the four parts of the world; out of all which, the Church is gathered by Miniſters of a perfect age, ſet forth by thirty, their breadth; and thoſe that are gathered by 40, the length denoting much Faſting and Prayer uſed amongſt all Chriſtian people, as is intimated, 1 Cor. 7. where it is ſaid, Defraud not one another, but by conſent for a ſeaſon, that ye may give your ſelves to faſting and praying; becauſe thirty is the number of a perfect age, when the Prieſts of old, and Chriſt began to miniſter, and 40 is a number notable for faſting, by reaſon of Elijah his faſting ſo long, and Moſes before that, and Chriſt after.

Hieron. Touching theſe waters, it is ſaid according to the letter, that from the Temple of old, did iſſue waters in abundance to waſh away the Bloud of the Sacrifices, and all the duſt and aſhes, and filth of the Temple in a wonderfull manner continually, which otherwiſe, by reaſon of the abundance of beaſts brought thither from time to time, could not have been kept ſweet. But by theſe waters the Lord ſhewed the waters of baptiſme, and the doctrine of the Goſpell iſſuing out of the Temple, at Jeruſalem where Chriſt taught in great abundance to the watring of all Nations: touching which waters alſo it is ſpoken, Zech. 14.8. running towards the Eaſt and the Weſt, to ſhew the eaſtern and weſtern Churches, where by this Doctrine the Countries and Nations are watred. And of the Goſpell, by the name of waters it is ſpo-unpaſſable, unleſſe by ſwimming; whereby was ſhewed, how by degrees evangelicall graces abounded time after time, more and more, till that Chriſtian people came to be as a great and deep rivers of waters. And in par-waters come up to the ankle, when a man attaineth to the knowledge of the Hiſtory of the Scriptures; to the knees, when of moralls, for further inſtruction and comfort; and to the loynes, when to the myſticall the loines, that attaineth to this perfection; but yet the waters riſing higher, and not to be paſſed over, ſhew greater perfection and happineſſe in the King-

V. 7. By this River were may trees on the one ſide, and on the other ; hereby the flouriſhing eſtate of men and women imbracing the true Faith, is ſet forth, who are now like unto trees planted by the rivers ſide, growing, and bringing Psal. 1. forth fruit in due ſeaſon, the Word of God, and the knowledge thereof communicated unto them, being as waters moiſtning the roots of trees, and making them thus to doe.

V. 8. Then he ſaid unto me, theſe waters iſſue out toward the eaſt country, and goe through the deſert into the ſea, and being come into the ſea, they heal the waters thereof. Where by the waters of the ſea, underſtand the ſalt, and brackiſh manners of the Gentiles, before the coming of theſe waters from the Sanctuary ; that is, the knowledge and grace of Chriſt brought by the Apoſtles unto them. And they are ſaid to run through the Deſart which was eaſtward, in alluding to the river of Jordan, which runneth through the dead ſea of Sodom, which continueth ſtill, as it was, pitchy black, and thick, having no living thing in it ; yet the waters of this River coming out again towards the ſea in another River, are ſweet. But the meaning is, that the Apoſtles ran, as it were, through Judea, a dead people, and barren, as the deſart, in reſpect of any fruit bringing forth of their preaching amongſt the Gentiles, preaching with ſuch ſucceſſe, that they were in great numbers converted and healed, as was before ſaid. For to compare peoples to great waters, or the ſea, is not unuſuall in holy Scripture, as Revel. 17. 1. &c.

V. 9. He ſheweth, that not onely the waters of the ſea ſhall be healed by the coming in of this River, but alſo the fiſhes, which are of a great number, ſhall be healed and live ; people, amongſt whom the Goſpell cometh, being ſometime propounded unto us under the notion of trees ; ſometime of waters, and ſometime of fiſhes ; according to which our Lord ſaid to his Apoſtles, Follow me, and I will make you fiſhers of men. And every thing where this river cometh, ſhall live ; that is, the Spirit brought, as living water, in the preaching of the Goſpell, ſhall be vivificative to every man and woman, and in the water of Baptiſme to infants, that have the life of nature before, but want reaſon, whereby to live by the Spirit coming in the preaching of the Word. And therefore having ſaid, that the fiſhes ſhould be healed, ſetting forth men and women Note. capable of reaſon, which is the mouth, as it were, that openeth and ſwalloweth the hook of the angler, and ſo the fiſh is taken for God, the Authour of healing, and all good, he addeth, Every thing where this river comes, ſhall live ; intimating others in the Church, or within the pale of preaching the Goſpell, as infants, the children of Beleevers before ſpoken of, little fiſhes new ſpawned ; who, though they cannot ſwallow the hook, yet together with greater, are taken in a net, well and cloſe wrought alſo ; otherwiſe, after ſpeaking of the fiſhes being healed, and living by theſe waters, he would not certainly have added this clauſe further touching every living thing. He that reſteth not in this, let him give another reaſon of this addition, if he can : and if he cannot, no more impugne the baptizing of Infants. For the Spirit ſet forth by a River, ſee Joh. 7. 37, 38. Note. And from this whole paſſage note, that people without the true Faith, and Spirit of Chriſt, are as ſalt water of the ſea, diſtaſtfull to God, and unpleaſing. 2. As ſick fiſhes, yea dead, or dying, becauſe it is ſaid, they now live. 3. Becauſe things living move, and lie not ſtill, as before, when they were dead, hereby may a man know, whether by the Spirit he may be inlived, or not ; if he lyeth ſtill in the mire of ſinne, as the ſwine, Esai. 1. 16. and cometh not out, waſhing himſelf, and making him clean, by putting away evill, and doing good, he is dead ſtill, although where this river runneth, and can have no true comfort, in reſpect of a better life, but ſhall dye eternally notwithſtanding.

V. 10. And the fiſhers ſhall ſtand upon, or above it ; that is, the river before ſpoken of upon the banks, and there ſpread and dry their nets after the taking of fiſhes, whereof he ſaith, there ſhall be great abundance, and that from Engedi to Engallim, the laſt of which, ſaith Jerom, was a town at the river Jordans entring into the dead ſea, and the firſt at the going out from thence, Engedi ſignifying the fountain of a Goate, Engallim, the fountain of Calves.

Now by fiſhers here the Apoſtles fiſhing to take men, are meant, not being called hunters, becauſe without violence, or tearing, or killing, they take theſe fiſhes alive, gently driving them into their net, and they did this from Engedi to Engallim, when of fiſhes they made them being taken, as kids or calves, which were clean beaſts and ſo fit for ſacrifices to be offered unto God.

V. 11. But the miry places and mariſhes thereof, ſhall not be healed, they ſhall be given to ſalt. Having ſpoken of all things in the waters, where this river cometh, ſaying they ſhall live, and then of the ground on the ſides of this river, that trees ſhall grow there and bear fruit, now he excepteth of all the grounds about the mariſhes and miry places, where this river commeth not, they ſhall not be healed, but remain, as they were before, full of filth & muddy water, whereby is meant, that ſuch places as will not receive the Goſpell, or to which the Goſpell ſounded not, when the ſound thereof went generally into all lands, ſhall ever remain in the ſordes of their ſins, like moory rejectany ground, never to be made better. Note. And this we ſee verified at this day in the Indians of America or the new found world, never diſcovered, till the time of Henry 7. but ſince peopled in part with ſuch as have endevoured their converſion to the faith, but with little ſucceſſe. Here the reaſon may be ſeen, they are by God adjudged not to be healed, and the like we may conceive ſhall be to the Turks and Tartars, and all that are bewitched with the Mahumetan ſuperſtition, this river.not running in their coaſts, but kept out, they cannot be healed.

V. 12. Here becauſe he had ſpoken briefly of trees growing by the ſides of this river, he reflecteth again upon the ſame, ſetting them forth more fully by their fruit and leaves, ſaying, They ſhall be all trees for meat, whoſe leaves fade not, neither ſhall their fruit be conſumed, it ſhall bring forth new fruit according to his months, becauſe their waters iſſued out from the ſanctuary, and the fruit ſhall be for meat and the leaf for medicine. Ambroſ. Theſe trees, ſaith Ambroſe, are paſtours and teachers on both ſides of the great river, the holy Scriptures diſtinguiſhed into two, the Old and New Teſtament, from both which, as waters running from the Sanctuary, becauſe of the inſpiration of the Spirit of God they both bear fruit of godly living and good works, and leaves of good inſtuctions and exhortations, by the one feeding mens ſouls, when they are hereby drawn to an imitation of them, and by the other, as by an wholeſome medicine healing their infirmities, when their inſtructions entring into their hearts, they be converted from ſin to righteouſneſſe thereby. And this fruit and leaves are brought forth according to their moneths, when from time to time, as the moon reneweth, they renew their teaching, not only according to the time here mentioned once a moneth, but in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon, as is commanded and ſtraightly charged, 2 Tim. 4. 1. ſee the like Revel. 21. And theſe waters and trees are never conſumed, but remain alwaies to produce theſe bleſſed effects, they being not as a torrent or brook, that in a dry ſummer is waſted, but as a great river Zech. 14. 8. alwaies running as the ſpring, from whence they come, is a fountain ever overflowing, for which Zachary ſaith they run ſummer and winter.

V. 13. The prophet having hitherto from chap. 45. 8. interpoſed many moſt memorable things and needfull to be known, now returneth again to the dividing of the land begun chap. 45. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. ſaying, This ſhall be the border, whereby ye ſhall inherit the land according to the 12. tribes of Iſrael, and Joſeph ſhall have two portions, that is, this following, verſ. 15, 16, &c. to verſ. 22. where the north border and the ſouth, the eaſt and the weſt are deſcribed according to the borders of the land of Canaan twice before deſcribed, Numb. 34. and Joſh. 15. ſo that I ſhall not need to repeat it here again, but the reader may have recourſe to that, which I have written there. But that preciſely the land of Canaan is not here meant, but the inheritance of the Church under the Go-

ſpell

V. 22. ſpell, appears, becauſe verſ. 22. Ye ſhall divide it by lot amongſt you, and the ſtrangers that ſojourn amongſt you, &c. For under the Old Teſtament, although ſtrangers lived amongſt the children of the Iſrael, yet they had none inheritance with them, nor at the time of their return out of the Babyloniſh captivity. For ſtrangers endeavouring to come in amongſt other Levites, who Ezra. 2.62. could not ſhew their genealogies, were by Ezra rejected, and it is ſaid of thoſe that were before ſtrangers from the Common-wealth of Iſrael, that now un- Eph. 2. 19. der the Goſpell they were not ſo any more, but fellow citizens with the ſaints, and now there is neither Jew nor Gentile, but all are one in Chriſt. In ſpeaking there- Gal. 3. 28. fore of the inheritance of the Evangelicall Church and their borders therefore by the land of Canaan he is altogether allegoricall, not meaning that this land ſhould any more be ſo divided according to the letter to the 12. tribes, but that they ſhould ſuch of them as beleeved, have aliquid inſtar, ſomething like done unto them, viz. an inheritance given them together with the faithfull of the nations, there being nothing diminiſhed of all that was anciently promiſed as is mentioned verſ. 14. yea and that Joſeph, as by reaſon of the two tribes comming of him he had a double portion, ſo he ſhould now again have verſ. 13. not much unlike unto which is the ſealing of 12000. of every tribe, Revel. 7. and then of an innumerable multitude of all nations. But in all this the heavenly inheritance is more reſpected, then the earthly which the faithfull of the Iſraelites ſhall afterwards enter into, and the Gentiles amongſt them, as their leaders and teachers, by whom they were firſt brought unto the faith, becauſe, as the Apoſtle ſaith, all beleevers are Children of the free wo- Gal. 4. man and not of the bond woman, who with her ſon ſhall be caſt out, as not permitted to inherit with the ſon of the free woman.

CHAP. XLVIII.

V.1,2. HAving ſet forth the boundaries of the land in generall, here followeth the diſtribution thereof in particular amongſt the 12. tribes, and firſt of 7. of them on the one ſide of the holy portion northward, then of the other five ſouthward, verſ. 23. all which yet are ſaid in latitude to lye eaſt and weſt. Then it is repeated again, which was ſaid before of the moſt holy portion, of the city and the princes portion. Verſ. 8, 9, 10, &c. to verſ. 23. The 25000. reeds in length being exactly caſt up, came to 45. miles, which is ſuch a length, as never any city in this world was of, and therefore cannot be meant of any city to be built by the Jewes again after their return from Babylon, but of the Chuch under the Goſpell, as hath been ſaid before. And by this great Note. length between the city and ſanctuary it is well noted by ſome, what a long way he muſt goe, that would attain to the kingdome of heaven, ſo that as he, that hath a long journey to go, muſt get up betimes in the morning, ſo he that would go thither had need to begin to go in the ſtraight way betimes, in Note. his youth, and not deferre it till ſickneſſe or old age. Again becauſe this city is placed afarre off from the ſanctuary, for that was in the midſt of the holy portion of this great length, ſo that there were above twenty miles between the city and the houſe of God, note that ſuch as would attain everlaſting life, ſhall be neareſt unto it, if they remove before out of the city, that is, worldly diſtractions and troubles, betaking themſelves to a more ſolitary kinde of life wherein they may more freely attend upon Gods worſhip and ſervice. Under the Old Teſtament indeed the Temple ſtood in the city, becauſe men might intend worldly things, and yet be near unto God, whoſe ſervice ſtood then ſo much in outward things: but now the Lord ſaith, He that will be my diſciple muſt deny himſelf, and take up his croſſe and follow me. And he ſpeaks of forſaking father and mother, and houſe and land for his Names ſake, for thus it was at the firſt neceſſary, ſeeing otherwiſe there could not have been preachers without any clog or hinderance to hinder them in their courſe of going out to convert ſouls. But now it ſufficeth in minde to be lifted up towards Gods tabernacle, and when we uſe the world to be as if we uſed it not, remote from the city of thoſe, that like moules are alwaies delving in the earth through the worldlineſſe of their mindes.

V. 14. Whereas it is ſaid verſ. 14. of the Levites portion, they ſhall not ſell, nor alienate, nor exchange it, becauſe it is holy to the Lord. It is hereby ſhewed, that lands given to the miniſters of Chriſt under the New Teſtament, may never be Note. again taken away, or put to any other uſe, but to their maintenance for ever.
Of the danger of taking any thing away, that hath been dedicated to God, Act. 5. ſee in the example of Ananias and Saphira, and before of Achan, about the gold

Cap. 6. 19. of Jericho, which was to come into the ſanctuary; and if by the conſent of Gods miniſters themſelves there may never be any ſuch alienation, how ſhall they anſwer it, who againſt their conſent, and to the immediate depriving of ſome of their livelihood dare lay violent hands hereupon?

V. 15. For the breadth of 5000. left over againſt the 25000. of the holy portion, it ſhall be a prophane place. That is, of the 25000. reeds aſſigned to the city in length, but 5000. in breadth, for the building of the city and the ſuburbs, a ſquare of 5000. ſhall be taken, upon which it ſhall ſtand, within the wals 4500. every way, and without 250. round about it. And thus 5000. being taken out of the length, there will remain 10000. eaſtward, and 10000. weſtward, which ſhall be for fields, for vines, olive-trees, and corn for the uſe of the city. Where the city is called the prophane place in none other ſenſe, but as it was for common perſons, and not miniſters to dwell in, for the word rendred pro-
Note. phane, ſignifieth indifferently prophane or common. But by the number of 5000. ſaid to be prophane was ſhewed, that all things pertaining to the 5. ſenſes are prophane or common, & therefore ſuch as ſpiritual perſons ought not to be taken with, to be hereby drawn in their affections from heavenly.

And they that ſerve the city, ſhall be out of all the tribes of Iſrael. That is, indifferently permitted to dwell there from all parts, ſo Lyra, or they ſhall bring from all parts proviſion to be ſpent there, as they did of old at their 3 feſtivals yearly.

V. 20. All the holy oblation ſhall be fourſquare with the poſſeſſion of the city, 2500. and 25000. How the city and holy portion together made a ſquare 25000. every way, may be made to appear thus, the prieſts portion in length 25000. the Levites lying along by that 25000. either 10000. broad, and the cities portion 25000. long, and 5000. broad, which breadths being all put together make

And a ſquare God would have it, to ſhew 1. the durability thereof, as any thing made ſquare ſtandeth ſtrongeſt, and 2. how firmly we ſhould ſtand, that be the city, that is the Church of God, whatſoever contrary conditions we be caſt into, as a dye that is ſquare ſtandeth, howſoever it be caſt. 3. That all our dealings ſhould be ſquare, our deeds, words, thoughts, and outward ſhewes all anſwering to one another, when it is thus with us, we are the holy portion, otherwiſe not, but unholy and unclean.

V. 21, 22. Here (after the Levites and cities portion, being a ſquare altogether intimating in the quadrature before ſpoken of, that miniſters and common people are all alike) a repetition is made alſo of the princes part, to ſhew next unto what tribes it ſhould lye on the one ſide of the portion before ſpoken of and the other, viz. by Judah on this ſide, and Benjamin on that, therefore as it was ended with Judahs portion in ſpeaking of the 7. former tribes, ſo it is begun with Benjamins, verſ. 23. in ſpeaking of the five.

DANIEL.

DANIEL:

The Preface:

THE propheſie of Daniel, hath beene much impugned of old, and ſtiffly denyed by many to be Canonicall Scripture. 1. By Porphyrie the Diſciple of Plotinus, who ſaid, that this Book was not written by the Prophet Daniel, but by ſome other man in his name, & that not till the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, that perſecuting tyrant, who reigned over Syria, & compelled many by puniſhments to forſake the Law of God. Then ſaith he, was this Book written, not by any Propheticall ſpirit, but under a pretence of propheſying relating things done, in the time of the aforeſaid Antiochus. And he ſaith further, that the Hiſtories here written in the former 6 chapters were true, but from thence forth that which is written by way of propheſying came from a falſe and lying ſpirit. Thus that railer againſt the Chriſtian religion, who wrote 15 Bookes againſt Chriſtianity, and in the 12 Book thus againſt this Prophecy of Daniel. But that not Daniel, but hee was a notorious lyar, appeareth from the time, when hee ſaith, that this book was written, viz. in the dayes of Antiochus Epiphanes. For Joſephus ſaith, that the Prophecy of Daniel was ſhewed to Alexander the Great, and therein that viſion of the Goat, chap. 8. 5. repreſenting him in his ſwift and ſpeedy ſubduing of all Kingdomes and Nations, and betwixt Alexander and Antiochus Epiphanes were 140 years. Againſt this Porphyrius wrote Theodoret and Jerome relating theſe things touching him. 2. Celſus alſo impugned this book, as not being Canonicall Scripture, againſt whom Origen wrote 8 Bookes. 3. Many Rabbins of the Jews have rejected it likewiſe as not Canonicall, as Polanus ſaith, that he living ſometime in Moravia, where he uſed the help of ſome Rabbins for the underſtanding of the Hebrew tongue, heard them ſay, that they acknowledged not Daniel to be authenticall, and therefore ſeldome read it, eſpecially becauſe that chap. 9. the death and paſſion of the Meſſiah, and the time when, is ſo evidently forth. Therefore they read it not amongſt the people, leſt hereby they ſhould be turned to Chriſt, finding out how they had been by them deceived. But the antienter Rabbins generally have acknowledged Daniel to be Canonicall Scripture, as appeareth in their placing it in their Banobathca in Pereh Primo amongſt their כתובים or ἁγιόγραφα as Polanus ſaith. And therefore ſome of them have written Commentaries hereupon, as Rabbi Solomon, Rabbi Levi, Ben. David, Rabbi Abraham, &c. and ſome have alleadged Daniel as authenticall to confirm points of Faith, as Rab. Moſes Hadarſian Ben. Jieskaki in ſuo Peruſ. ſuper Gen. R. Abba fil. Cahena.

Math.24.25. And Chriſt whoſe authority is above all others, ſpeaketh of Daniel as a true Prophet of God, ſaying, When yee ſee the abomination of deſolation ſpoken of by Daniel the Prophet,&c. and experience hath aboundantly proved the ſame in the fulfilling of the things herein foretold touching the Perſian, Grecian and Roman Monarchies. And hitherto of the authority of this Prophecy, now for the adjections to Daniel, if it be demanded whether they be Canonicall Scripture alſo or no? Jerome reſolveth us, ſaying, that they were by Origen and Apollinaris, who wrote againſt the blaſphemer Porphyrius; counted but fables, and ſo he alſo calleth them, ſaying, that they were written by a certain Prieſt called Daniel, a familiar friend of Nebuchadnezzars, and are not in Hebrew, but in Greek onely, whereas all Canonicall Scriptures were ſet forth in Hebrew, as the Holy tongue before the coming of Chriſt, and therefore although they and Euſebius adjoin them to Daniel, yet they doe it not without markes in many places put to, to ſhew the uncertainty of the credit of many things therein, ſo likewiſe Euſebius; And whereas Daniel the authour of them, was a Prieſt, our Daniel was of the Kings ſeed; and touching all Apocryphals he ſpeakes of them but as dirt in compariſon of Canonicall Scripture, in that ſaying of his, grandis prudentiæ eſt aurum in luto quærere. Polanns. But to returne to Canonicall Daniel, he began to propheſie ſaith Polanus, Clemens.Alex-and. ϛρωμ. one year after that Ezekiel began his Propheſies, which Clem. Chron. The year following *An.*3360.Daniel when he had learned the Caldean tongue, began to miniſter to King Nebuchadnezzar, and continued in the Propheticall Office 70 years. For the tongue wherein hee writeth it is part Hebrew, and part Caldee. Hebr. chap. 1. and 2. to v. 4. thence forth Caldee to the end of chapter the ſeventh, from whence again to the end of the Propheſie he wrote in the Hebrew tongue.

CHAP. I.

V. 1,2. HEre the Prophet beginneth firſt with the Hiſtory of Jehoiakims being carryed away captive by Nebuchadnezzar in the third year of his reign, of which ſee 2 King.24.as the Prophets Iſaiah and Jeremiah relate ſome hiſtories in their Propheſies alſo.But betwixt the time here ſpoken of and there, is the difference of 8 years,for whereas here 3 years are ſpoken of,there it is 11.Sol. This 2 King.23.36. difference hath been by me already obſerved, 2 King.24.and reconciled.Jehoia- 2 Chron.36. kim having reigned 3 yeares under Nebuchadnezzar, and then rebelling was taken by his Forces and bound to be carryed into Babylon, and of this carrying away, when alſo the veſſels of the Lords Houſe were carryed away,it is here ſpoken; as for the whole time of his reign being 8 years more, the Sacred Hiſtory ſaith nothing, how after this hee came to reign again, but becauſe it is ſaid, he certainly did, and that, as may be conceived by the favour of the King upon his faith given unto him, being releaſed from his bands and ſent home again, but after this, Nebuchadnezzar being again provoked ſent and deſtroyed him, as may be gathered, 2 King. 24. 2. For of none other being bound to be carryed into Babylon doe we read touching him, but only that third yeare, but when his reign ended the 11 year together with his life, it was by forces of Caldees and others coming againſt him, by whoſe hands he was ſlain and caſt out of the gates of the city, as an Aſſe, according to Jer. 22. But hereby it appeareth that Daniels beginning to propheſie the next year after Ezekiel, as was noted in the Preface out of Polanus, was a miſtaking, for ſo much as Ezekiel propheſied not till the fifth year of Jehoiakims captivity,which was 13 years after Jehoiakims carrying into Babylon,with whom Daniel and his fellows were carryed away alſo,and therefore if he miniſtred to the King of Babylon one year after that, and then were the beginning of his propheſying, he began 12 years before Ezekiel. But to leave this as uncertain,it may ſuffice, that he propheſied at the ſame time with Ezekiel, and ſo either of them had the more comfort of one anothers aſſiſtance, and if he propheſied ſo long, as it ſeemeth that he did, becauſe till the dayes of Cyrus, when the 70 yeares of captivity were ended, he is placed rightly next after Ezekiel, becauſe he propheſied after him, eſpecially in thoſe things, wherein the greateſt burthen of his Propheſie lyeth, chap. 7.8. &c. to the end. And for his beginning to miniſter to the King, it was not, as the ſame Authour hath it, one yeare after his coming into Babylon, but 3 as appeareth, verſ. 5. Now for the occaſion of Daniels coming firſt to be known to Nebuchadnezzar it was this. The King commanded Aſhpenaz, the maſter of his Eunuchs to take ſome of the children of Iſrael, of the Kings ſeed, and the Princes, and to teach them the Caldean tongue, nouriſhing them up in the beſt manner at the Kings charge, till 3 years were expired, that then they might ſtand and miniſter before the King. Whereby it appears, that Daniel and his three fellows were either of the bloudroyall, or deſcended from Princes of Judah. That which was regarded in the choice of them, was the comelineſſe of their perſons, and their underſtandings. For the language, which the King would have them taught, the Caldean. For the people thus called, Polanus ſaith, that they were the off-ſpring of Arphaxad, of whom alſo the Hebrews came, for Arphaxad begat Shelach, and Shelach Heber, of whom came the Hebrews. And Abraham was born in Caldea, ſo that it hereby appeareth to have been the countrey wherein Hebers poſterity dwelt, and that the Iſraelites and Caldeans had one common Anceſtour of whom they came, Arphaxad, and ſo their languages were near one to the other, the Caldean coming from the Hebrew as the fountain, and having the like characters, but not ſo pure as the Hebrew, yet ſome Caldee is more pure then other, as that uſed by Daniel and Ezra, from chap. 4. to the 7. then that which Jonathan and Onkelus wrote in their Caldee Paraphraſes. The Caldee and Syriack, ſaith Mercer, are all one; but Tremelius, that there were ſome difference between; the Caldeans when Daniel wrote, were the Inhabitants of Babylon; and ſome Caldeans there were ſpecially ſo called for their skill in Aſtrology and great learning, as being the Philoſophers of the Aſſyrians, as Strabo ſaith, ſome having skill in calculating Nativities, and foretelling things to come by the ſtarres, and ſome in Necromancy. Some, ſaith Jerome, hold that the Hebrew and Caldean tongues were both one; but this is confuted from hence, becauſe if ſo, they ſhould not have needed to be taught the Caldean, and ſome alſo ſay, that by their being put under the hand of the Maſter of the Eunuchs, it is implyed that they were made Eunuchs, and ſo the Propheſie of Eſay to Hezekiah touching thoſe that ſhould come of him, was fulfilled, that they ſhould be carryed a way and be Eunuchs to the King of Babylon. Verſ. 5. And the King appointed them a portion of his meat dayly, and of the wine that hee dranke; which he did not for any favour, that hee bare to them, ſaith Polanus, more then to other Jews, who fared full hardly, but that being delicioully brought up they might bee by the pleaſures of the Court faſcinated ſo, as to prefer a Caldean life, and be willing, forgetting their own countrey and religion, to turn to their ſuperſtition. And there hee would have them thus fed and inſtructed a ſufficient time, viz. three yeares, that they might afterwards ſtand before and miniſter to him, as other Caldeans and Aſtrologers did, and be ſet over the affaires of the kingdome, as the moſt able and expert of them were. Therefore moſt probably when hee took order, that they ſhould be taught the Caldean tongue, he meant not onely the tongue, but the learning and skill of the Caldeans alſo. And to this end their names were changed from Daniel, Ananias, Azarias and Miſaell, to Belſhazzar, Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego, that is, from names implying them to be the ſervants of God, to names derived from idols, they being thus, ſo far as in them lay, that made this change, dedicated to the ſervice of the ſaid idols and falſe gods of the Babylonians. For Daniel ſignifieth a judge of God; Ananias, the grace of God; Azarias, the help of God, and Miſael, one that was of God, in every of theſe names there being the name of God, אל or יה. But now contrariwiſe they had names from idols. Daniel from Bel, the great god of the Babylo- nians, Belſhazzar ſignifying Bels treaſurer. Ananias from Rath ſignifying King; that is the Sun, which they worſhipped as the King of the World. Shadrach being as much as the inſpiration of the King. Mijael from Shachab, a goddeſſe of pleaſure. Meſhach being as much as who is Shacabs. Mijael from Nego, the fire which was alſo worſhipped as a god; and therefore Abednego was as much as the ſervant of the fire. Thus idolaters endeavour by all means to draw the people of God from his ſervice to the ſervice of idols, by carefully inſtructing them in their wayes, providing for their dainty and delicate keeping, and giving them names accordingly, and ſomething like unto this did the Phariſees of old compaſſing Sea and Land to make one Proſelyte. And therefore the careleſſeneſſe of Chriſtian people is hereby reproved, who have no care what names they give to children, but as their carnall phantaſies lead them, and as for their education

CHAP. II.

In this chapter wherein the dream of Nebuchadnezzar is ſet forth, Daniel firſt beginneth with the time, viz. in his ſecond year, about which divers conjecture diverſly, becauſe he brought Daniel away captive from Judea, and three years were now expired ſince that time, in which Daniel and his three fellows were brought up in the learning of the Caldeans. Now if this were after theſe three years, how could it be in Nnbuchadnezzars ſecond year? Some ſay, that another Nebuchadnezzar the ſon of Nebuchadnezzar the Great is here meant. But that this cannot ſtand appeareth, becauſe there neither was any more Nebuchadnezzars, but one, neither could there be if the Propheſie of Jeremy be true, as none will deny. For he ſaith that the Lord had given the Nations to ſerve Nebuchadnezzar, and his ſon and his ſons ſon, *Jer.*2.7. but if there had been another ſon of his beſides Evilmerodach, that had reigned after him, then the time of the Nations being kept under by that family had not been only in his, his ſons and his Grandchilde Belſhazzars time, but alſo of another ſon of whom it is no where written. Lyra: Whereas ſome Hiſtorians mention two others Rebuſar and Laborſhardach, it is anſwered, that Evilmerodach was otherwiſe called by one of theſe names, and Belſhazzar by the other, ſo Lyra; wherefore he contrariwiſe reſolveth, that this was the ſecond yeare of Nebuchadnezzar the Great, that is, of his Monarchy after Egypt ſubdued, and not from his firſt beginning to reign, which was certaine yeares before that. Joseph.antiq. l. 10. And this hath ground in Joſephus, who ſaith, that after his ſubduing of Egypt, one whole year being expired, he had this dream, and the time being thus underſtood agreeth beſt with the dream, wherein Nebuchadnezzar is ſaid to be King of Kings, and that all were made to ſerve him, thus alſo the Rabbins of the Jews. Polanus. Others ſay, that by the ſecond year of Nebuchadnezzar here ſpoken of, the ſecond after Daniels ſtanding before him is meant, but what reaſon can be yeelded of this, I ſee not, wherefore I reſt in that of Lyra. It is true, this could not be the ſecond year of his reign reckoning from the firſt beginning thereof, not only for the reaſon already rendered, but alſo becauſe if we omit the time, which paſſed before this his dreaming he had reigned now 37 yeares, 18 when Jeruſalem was deſtroyed, 23. when he invaded and overcame Celoſyria, the Ammonites and Moabites; the ſame yeare began the ſiege of Tyre, which continued 13 years, which being done he ſubdued Egypt, Anno 35 of his reign, being then the Monarch of the World, ſo Joſephus: Joseph. after this the ſecond year he had this dream, that is An. 37. of his reign. Touching the dream that he had, it came from God, and God took away again from him all the remembrance of it, that he might hereby notifie himſelfe to be the only true God, and Daniel to be his dear ſervant, who had ſo great a care to obſerve his Laws, howſoever he were tampered withall, that he might have been in his religion perverted and brought to be all one with the idolatrous Caldeans, who Note. for this end were made his inſtructours, that we who read and know this, might be likewiſe excited to ſtand faſt againſt all temptations in ſincere obedience to God, not doubting, but that ſo we ſhall be ingratiated with him, who is the moſt High, and hath all mens hearts in his hands to turn them to us at his pleaſure, although by Nation and Religion aliens from us.

V. 2. Hieron.

V. 2. Then the King commanded to call the Magitians, Aſtrologers, Sorcerers and Caldeans. Touching theſe four ſorts, Ierome ſaith, that Magitians were ſuch as otherwiſe were called Philoſophers, who by great ſtudy attained to much knowledge in the ſecrets of Nature. But the word רטמב rather ſignifieth ſuch as uſed incantations, or charms, and the Aſtrologers were ſuch as by ſtudy pryed into the influences of the ſtarres, thereby to judge of things to come; the Sorcerers were ſuch, as caſting miſts before mens eyes deceived their ſight; the Caldeans differed not from Aſtrologers, but only in name. In all theſe as in Prophets heathen Kings had a great confidence, and upon every extraordinary occaſion called them together to know ſuch things, as they deſired, and could not know by any other, but them only for their rare skil, as Pharaoh did formerly when Moſes ſhewed ſignes, as God had commanded him. But for ſo much as Daniel and his three fellowes were found by the King to be far more excellent then any of them, it chaper 1. 21. it may ſeeme ſtrange, that they were not called amongſt others, who one would think rather ſhould have been preferred before them. It is anſwered, the King haply by this time had forgotten them, it being about 35 years betwixt the time of that ſpeciall notice, that he took of them, and the time wherein the Caldees were thus called together; or it may be conceived, that they being ſtrangers, but the other Natives, hee had not ſo much confidence in them, or laſtly they being Jews, although very wiſe and learned, yet he thought that they did not, neither would practiſe thoſe arts, becauſe they were condemned by the Law of their God. Thus it may be conceived according to humane reaſon, but certainly it was Gods providence that ſecretly ruled in this matter, ordering it thus, that Daniel ſhould not be firſt ſent for, becauſe then the vanity of the Aſtrologians and Magitians would not have ſo much appeared, that men thenceforth might not eſteeme of them any more, as worthy to be ſought to. And as the Divine Providence ordered it, ſo that he ſhould not be firſt ſent for, ſo that he ſhould not be ſent for amongſt them, leſt the revealing of theſe great ſecrets ſhould be thought to have come from the Caldeans skill, as it would have beene, if Daniel appearing amongſt them had diſcloſed them.

V. 4. Then they ſpake to him in Syriack. Here, as was ſaid before, beginneth the Syriack or Caldee language uſed in this Book, being continued to the end of chap. 7. this being the occaſion here, that Daniel leaving the Hebrew ſpeaks in Syriack, and hereby it appeares that theſe tongues were one, ſometime called Syrick, ſometime Caldean, because the Caldeans ſpake it, as well as the Syrians, and of both theſe places Abraham, of whom the Hebrews came, is ſaid to have been of Ur of the Caldees, Gen. 12. and touching Syria it is ſaid, that he ſent his ſervant to take a wife thence for his ſon Iſaac of his Fathers houſe, Gen. 24. and ſo the Hebrew, the Syriack, and Caldee tongues differed not much from one another.

V. 13. And the decree went forth, that the wiſe men ſhould be ſlain, vulg. and the wiſe men were ſlain, whereupon ſome think, that ſome of them were cut off, and this is favoured by the originall, and is not improbable, becauſe they were worthy by the Law of God to dye, and in this whole matter the providence of God moderated for the taking away of ſuch a wicked generation, although in Nebuchadnezzar, that did command this, it was extream tyranny, and unreaſonable. And they ſought Daniel and his fellows to put them to death alſo. Having begun to execute the Kings Decree upon ſome, becauſe Daniel, Ananias, Azarias, and Miſaell were counted of that number, they were ſought alſo to be ſlain. Yet Lyra and ſome others think, that none of them were ſlain, but that in ſaying, Lyra. the Kings Decree went out and they were ſlain, it is meant onely that they were hereby adjudged to be ſlain, becauſe it is ſaid, verſ. 24. Slay not the wiſe men, implying that it was not yet done, but it cannot hence be inferred, that none of them had ſuffered death already, but that ſome were not yet executed, whereof he and his fellowes were counted a part For it cannot be conceived, that Daniel would have pleaded ſo to avert that danger from the Magitians, but chiefly herein reſpecting his own and his ſellows preſervation, which could not have been, unleſſe there had been a totall ſtay of the Decree, till hee had been before the King. If it ſhall ſeeme ſtrange that Daniel and his fellows, who were at their firſt ſtanding before the King ſo highly eſteemed of, ſhould now be adjudged pell-mell together with the Magi to deſtruction? it is to be thought that the King had by this time forgotten them, ſo many years being paſt, as was ſaid before, ſince his ſo greatly magnifying of them for their ſuper-excellent knowledge and underſtanding.

V. 30. This ſecret hath not been revealed to me for any wiſdome that I have more then any living, but for their ſakes, that ſhall make knowne the interpretation to the King. the vulgar, that the interpretation might bee made maniſeſt to the King. But this cometh ſhort of the words here uſed, and obſcureth the ſenſe, for it is על-דברת for the ſake, theſe words of them being underſtood, and the word נהודעין ſignifieth they ſhall make known, implying, that by the prayers of the faithfull of the Jewes hee attained to the revelation of theſe things and God had revealed them to him, that the king might be moved to exerciſe more clemency towards them being miſerable captives in his land, by whoſe meanes he attained to the knowledge of that which hee ſo greatly deſired. Thus holy Daniel ſhewed; that by this great gift of knowledge, that God had given him, he ſought not his owne, but the glory of God, by inſinuating hereby the knowledge of his omniſcience into the heart of the King, that he might eſteem of and honour him, as the only true Perſians, as two armes, and as inferiour to the firſt, as ſilver is to gold, not becauſe the amplitude of the Perſian Monarchy was not as great as that of the Babylonians, for it was greater by the acceſſion of the Medes and Perſians unto it.

But the majeſty of it was not ſo great, becauſe it was never free from warres.
For the third of Alexander, it is likened to braſſe, which is baſer then ſilver, becauſe that although Alexander inlarged his Kingdome more then any Monarch before him, yet he was leſſe durable, and ſo not comparable to gold or ſilver. For the fourth it is not agreed, that hereby the Grecian kingdome divided betwixt Ptolemy and Seleucus was ſet forth, but ſome hold, that the Roman Kingdome was by the iron legges repreſented, which ſtood as it were upon two legges, the Eaſt and the Weſt, and before that upon two Conſuls, and ſometime upon two Tribunes of the people. And this Kingdome is ſet forth by iron breaking all things in pieces, becauſe the ſtrength of the Romans was incomparable, neither was any Nation ever able to ſtand against them, whileſt they were riſing to their height. But the feet conſiſted of clay as well as of iron, and ſo it was partly ſtrong and partly weak by reaſon of the divers Kingdomes, which were in ſubjection to the Romans, and chief Maſters of that Empire, Cæſar, Pompey, Anthony, and Lepidus, of whom one was ſtronger, and another was weaker. And theſe by mingling the ſeed of men ſometimes thought to ſtrengthen themſelves, as Pompey by marrying Iulia the daughter of Iulius Cæſar, and Anthony Octavia the ſiſter of Octavius Cæſar, but no ſtrengthening of the kingdome followed hereupon, but warres were fiercely made by theſe ambitious men, one fighting againſt another and Hieron. deſtroying him. Thus Jerome and Lyra, and many others, but Polanus will Lyra. have the divided Grecian kingdome under Seleucus and Ptolemy meant, and to Polanus. prove this hee bringeth many arguments, which he thinketh unanſwerable, but chiefly from chap. 7.8. following in this Propheſie, wherewith if that which is here ſaid, be compared, it cannot but be granted, that all things do ſo agree, as if ſpoken of one and the ſame thing; Anſw. That of chap. 7. rather may be underſtood of the Roman Monarchy: and therefore it cannot be from thence concluded againſt it. For chap. 8. indeed, which plainly ſpeaketh of the Monarchy of Alexander divided into foure, there a new thing is revealed, which it is not neceſſary to grant, that it was done before, although in part ſomewhat like unto it be propheſied of ch. 7. For his other arguments they

they are all coincident in one, viz. the King was deſirous to know things touching his owne Kingdome, how it ſhould afterwards be diſpoſed of, and not of any other Kingdome ſo farre remote as that of the Romans, which was 12000 miles off, and Daniel ſaith, that God had accordingly made that known unto him: therefore it muſt needs follow, that what is here revealed concerned onely that Kingdome being repreſented as one body conſiſting of head, breaſt, belly and legs, and not any other, which ſtood in no relation hereunto. Anſw. This argument indeed hath ſome probability in it, but when I looke at the words following, in the days of theſe Kingdoms God will ſet up a Kingdom, &c. I cannot ſee, how it can poſſibly be ever maintained, that the Grecian Kingdome divided can be the fourth kingdom here meant. For it ſufficeth not to ſay, it is meant, in the end of theſe Kingdoms, when as the words are plain, in the dayes of thoſe Kings, whereas Chriſt, whoſe Kingdome is next ſpoken of, came not into the world, til after the Egyptian and Aſſyrian ſubdued to the Roman, and that the Roman Monarchy was come to the ful ſtrength. Moreover for the fourth Kingdome here ſpoken of it ſtood not upon two legges, but upon four, as is expreſly ſaid, chap. 8. and it was no more one Kingdome ſtanding upon two legs, when it was by the Selecucedans and Ptolemies brought to two, but two diſtinct Kingdomes. As from the argument brought from the Kings ſolicitude about his owne Kingdome onely, touching which ſatisfaction is here given, it is of no force, both becauſe much of the propheſie tendeth to his reſolution herein, and the fourth being underſtood of the Roman kingdome, another thing altogether, divers therefrom is not hereby ſet forth, for his kingdome came under this fourth kingdome alſo as well as other parts. And if when it is ſaid, the Lord hath ſhewed thee things to come hereafter, it be taken ſo reſtrainedly, that none, but the kingdomes ſucceeding his in the parts, where he reigned, were meant, it will follow, that by the everlaſting kingdom here laſtly ſpoken of none other muſt be meant, but ſome fifth kingdome there ſet up alſo, to ſay nothing of the Perſian, and Grecian kingdome; and how either of them was divers from his, and not raiſed meerly out of the Babyloniſh. To leave this therefore, as of which enough hath been already ſpoken; I will reflect again a little upon the Monarchy repreſented by the belly of braſſe, as of which I have not yet ſaid enough. It was by braſſe ſet forth, becauſe braſſe is a ſounding metall; ſo the fame of Alexander for his ſpeedy ſubduing of Countryes and Nations ſounded all over the world, in ſo much as that at the very hearing of him they were terrified: and their armes then were brazen, not onely Trumpets, but Helmets, and Targets and Darts; as Homer ſheweth, for there was yet little or no iron in uſe, and it is ſaid, that Combe a Virgin in Eubœa firſt invented braſſe veſſels and armes, but this I can hardly ſubſcribe to, becauſe that near the time of the creation, Tubal Cain inſtructed Artificers in braſſe and iron, and how to make inſtruments thereof. Gen.4.22. But it is probable as was ſaid before, that brazen armes were moſt uſed in ancient times, and not iron, till the time of the Romans becauſe of Goliah it is ſaid, that his armes were of braſſe. And beſides the reaſon yeelded before of the Perſian kingdome repreſented by ſilver, another may be given alſo, viz. that Cyrus abounded with ſilver, according to the propheſie of Eſay, ſaying, I have given thee the hid treaſures of the earth, Eſa.45. and Pliny ſaith of him, that having overcome Aſia, he carryed from thence 50000 talents of ſilver, Plin.lib.33.3. and how greatly Ahaſhuerosh a Perſian king abounded in ſilver, may be ſeen by the ſtory of his ſumptous feaſt, *Eſther.*1. And Atheneus ſaith of Xerxes, that he had lying *Atheneus,l.*12. at the foot of his bed 18 millions of ſilver, and at his head 30 millions of gold; and Strabo ſaith when Alexander overcame Darius he found in his treaſury 150 millions. As for the Babylonian kingdome repreſented by a golden head, it was not becauſe Nebuchadnezzar had more gold then the Perſian, but becauſe he was notorious for carrying away the veſſels of gold from the Temple at Jeruſalem, and for images of gold, which the Babylonians ſet up, eſpecially, that great golden image, which he would have all men to worſhip; for which he is ſaid to have had a cup of gold in his hand, wherewith he made all Nations Jer.51.7.

drunken, as ſpirituall Babylon, Reveal. 14. And Belſhazzar dranke at his feaſt in veſſels of gold. Some yeeld another reaſon, becauſe although the world was wicked in Nebuchadnezzars time, yet it was worſe in the Perſians, who were more infamous for delicious living, and the Grecians worſe then they for cruelty, and ſo were the Romans for their great tyranny. Hence therefore came that ſaying: omnis ætas avis pejor, every age worſe then that, which went before it, and the four ages commonly ſung of by the Poets, the golden, the ſilver, the brazen, and the iron.

And in the dayes of theſe Kings ſhall the God of heaven ſet up a kingdome, that ſhall never be deſtroyed, and it ſhall not be left to another people, but it ſhall breake in peices, and deſtroy all theſe kingdomes, and it ſhall ſtand for ever. verſ 45. For ſo much as thou ſawnſt, that the ſtone was cut out of the Mountaine without hands, &c. Here after the fourth before ſpoken of, a fifth kingdome is propheſied of which is the kingdome of Chriſt, as all both Jews and Chriſtians agree, onely the Jews from hence gather that Chriſt is not yet come, becauſe that when hee cometh, all earthly Monarchyes ſhall be overthrowne, whereas the Roman ſtill ſtandeth, although much ſhaken by the Goaths and Vandals long ago, and impaired both by the Turkes in the Eaſt and other kingdomes falling from it in the Weſt, but at the time, when we ſay, he came, viz. Auguſtus Cæſar being Emperour, the Roman Monarchy ſtood moſt ſtrongly, and long after till the time of Conſtantine the Great, which was 300 yeares after, and from thence forth, till the Turkes winning of Conſtantinople. But this is eaſily anſwered, it is not meant, that Chriſt at his comming ſhould put downe all imperiall power, and Dominion himſelf reigning over all Nations after the manner of other worldly Emperours, but ſpiritually all ſhould be ſubdued unto him, hee being by them acknowledged their King and Meſſiah, and therefore doing homage unto him by bowing the knee, which was done, when Conſtantine after a long time of perſecution in his Predeceſſours dayes, ſubmitted himſelfe and his crown unto him, idolatry being abandoned, for thus truly the ſtone brake all in pieces, the golden kingdome, that was, and the ſilver and brazen, and the iron then in being reduced to the likeneſſe of duſt and blowne away by the winde, ſo that no place thereof was more to be found, as was ſaid before. Becauſe there was no part of any of theſe Empires, that continued ſtill idolatrous, but all were Chriſtian, ſo that he, who ſhould have looked for an idolatrous Monarchy now, could no where have found it. Only Mahomet, ſince the converſion of all Nations to the Faith, by the helpe of Sergius an apoſtate Monk about an. 600. ſince Chriſts Nativity, began to poyſon a great part of the World with his Mahumetan ſuperſtition, and growing great by many of his deceived followers he attained to a kingdome, and ſince inlarged it ſo greatly, that it is a Monarchy comparable to one of the old Monarchies before ſpoken of. And it is aptly ſaid of theſe Monarchies when Chriſt came with his power by his Word and Spirit, that they were made like the chaffe blown away by the winde, becauſe the chaffe of ſuperſtition, of which the Prophet Eſay ſaith, what is the chaffe to the wheat, was now blown away, the kingdoms of the earth, as floores being purged, as John Baptiſt ſaid, hee will throughly purge his floore and the chaffe hee will burn with unquenchable fire. For the time when this ſhould be, it is ſaid, in the dayes of theſe Kings, which was fulfilled accordingly, in that he came into the world, as was before ſaid, when Auguſtus Cæſar the mightyeſt of them and the moſt flouriſhing reigned. For his being compared to a ſtone, that is often done elſewhere by other Prophets alſo, David, Pſal. 118. and Iſaiah 28. 16. where ſee the reaſon for his being cut out of the mountaines without hands, this foreſhewed his coming of the Virgin Mary, not being begotten by any man, but by the over-ſhadowing of the Holy Ghoſt. And he is ſaid to be a ſtone, but groweth to a Mountaine filling the whole earth, to foreſhew his ſmall beginnings, from which he increaſed ſo greatly. For Chriſt was ſo little at the firſt, that he was to moſt men contemptible, and hee became a King not by force of arms, for which it is alſo ſaid, that he was hewed out without hands, whereas the kings before ſpoken of had their Monarchies hewed out for them by ſtrong hands, and dint of the ſword therein, yet hee increaſed more then any one of them reigning all over the earth, not only over the bodyes but the ſouls of men; And herein his kingdome excelleth all others, that it is everlaſting, as greatneſſe, ſetteth forth Chriſt or his Church, for ſome he ſaith, reſtrain it to him, and ſome underſtand it of his Church, which is his kingdome, but hee ſaith, that it is to be underſtood of both, as being inſeparable, he the head, his faithfull people the body, hee the Corner ſtone of the foundation, they Epheſ.2.20.

likewiſe ſome foundation ſtones, ſome other living ſtones built hereupon, 1 Pet. 2. and this is the beſt, he is the ſtone firſt cut out of the mountaines without hands, when he was born and lived privately 30 yeares, in all which time, although he were a king yet he had no kingdom, of which it is here ſpoken, in the days of thoſe Kings God ſhall ſet up a kingdom. But beginning to declare himſelf, then his kingdom began by the acceſſion of followers to him, and after his reſurrection increaſed ſo much, as that it filled al places, when in all places there were beleevers, & they increaſed ſo greatly in number, as is ſhewed *Act.*2. *Act.*3. and 4. and in 60 years all over the earth, as is in Eccleſiaſticall hiſtory declared.
Thus all kingdoms were broken in pieces at Chriſts firſt coming, but at his ſecond coming they ſhall all quite vaniſh, and there be no more kings, nor kingdomes upon earth any more, the whole earth it ſelfe with the workes thereof being burnt up, and the whole fabrick of this viſible world diſſolved for ever, the kingdome of Chriſt onely ſtanding, and being moſt glorious for ever and ever. From all which, note 1. that kingdomes of heathens are diſpoſed of by the Divine providence, and it is not according to the will of man, that one Note. gets the Monarchy of the World at one time, and another at another. 2. Every age is worſe then other, as long as men are ſwayed by the corruption of nature, and ſo is every age of each man, the youth worſe than the childhood, the virile eſtate worſe then the youth, and old age worſt of all, but contrariwiſe in thoſe that are by grace ſanctified. 3. Great is the glory of worldly men, but it endureth onely for a ſhort time, and then they are torn in pieces, and horribly deſtroyed, when as proceeding by degrees in wickedneſſe their ſinnes Gen. 15. become to the full, as the Amorites. 4. The kingdome of Chriſt little at the firſt, increaſeth wonderfully, as the grain of Muſtard ſeed, and ſhall finally bring under and annihilate all other kingdomes, that we may by faith expecting cleave faſt to the truth, and ſo in Gods due time we ſhall ſee all ſuch, as oppoſe it, whether Popiſh or Mahumetan confounded, as the gold, ſilver, braſſe, iron and clay. But this kingdome in one the onely glorious kingdome all over the world, ſo to continue for ever, to the beautifying of all the true members thereof.

Then King Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face and worſhipped Daniel, &c. Of Daniel V. 46. denying to have this honour done unto him nothing is ſaid, but it is implyed, whom this rare knowledge came, ſetting him forth unto him, as the onely true God knowing and foreknowing, and ruling over all things, becauſe it is ſaid, the King anſwered Daniel and ſaid, Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and Lord of lords, being as much in effect, as if it had been ſaid, Daniel refuſing that honour, and inſtructing the King better touching God, whoſe wiſdome it was and not his to reveal ſecrets, the king anſwered, as is here ſaid. For Peter did ſo towards Cornelius worſhipping him, and Paul and Barnabas towards the Barbarians worſhipping them, therefore it is not to be doubted, but that Daniel being lead by the ſame holy ſpirit did likewiſe. And his former ſpeeches, that hee had no more wiſdome, then any other man to reveale ſuch ſecrets, but that there was a God in heaven, that had revealed it, imply no leſs. Laſtly, if hee ſhould not have refuſed it, he ſhould have ſinned foully, as Herod, yea Act. 15. much more, and ſo have provoked God againſt him for accepting Divine honours offered unto him, and how farre he was from ſinning in the leaſt matters

Note. example of gratitude ſet to all Kings and great perſons towards ſuch, as they finde to be in greateſt grace with God, preferring them to places of moſt truſt and concernment about them, and any wicked or vitious perſons. And hereby we are taught to improve the favour, that we have at any time with ſecular Princes, to the helping up of holy men likewiſe for the weal publique, becauſe

CHAP. III.

IN this chap. Nebuchadnezzar ſetteth up an image of gold 60 cubits high, and Lyra. ſix cubits broad, commanding all men to worſhip it, which image ſaith Lyra was his own, he being by pride ſo far lifted up; that he would be worſhipped as a God, ſetting up this his image to this end and purpoſe, as Caius Caligula a Roman Emperour did afterwards. Here is a ſtrange alteration of a man, that upon ſo good ground a little before acknowledged one only true God, now to fall Note. to this foul ſinne of exalting himſelfe as a God, but ſuch is the fickleneſſe and inconſtancy of carnall men, one while being moſt godly, and ſoone after returning with the dogge to their own vomit, that their godlineſſe is nothing worth, but like the morning dew, and as Herods reverencing of John, and ſoon after beheading him: that we may reſolve upon conſtancy in that which is good, thus being fenced againſt all temptations to fall away herefrom to evill, and conſequently into condemnation. This Nebuchadnezzar did out of his exceeding great pride for the amplitude of his Dominion, but it is probable that he had ſetters on, viz. his Princes and Lords, who envyed the Jews for the great favour and authority in which they were, but by this meanes they thought to work their deſtruction, as the following part of this hiſtory giveth us juſt occaſion to conceive, and the great penalty threatned to thoſe, that would not fall downe and worſhip this image. For there were none of the Nations under the Kings Dominion to be ſuſpected for their ſtanding out againſt this Decree, but the Jews onely, and their accuſing of Shadrach, Meſhach, V. 9. and Abednego, and ſeeking to have them deſtroyed by the fiery furnace as V. 27. was propounded evinceth the ſame, whereunto we may alſo adde, that the V. 29. King called his Princes and Nobles together to ſee the miracle wrought for thoſe three, and his Decree making after this, that none ſhould ſpeak evill of their God. For what elſe did this imply, but that they had before ſpoken ſpitefully both againſt their God and them, to ſtay them from doing which hereafter he would have them ſee this miracle.

If it be demanded, how it came to paſs, that Daniel was not now brought in queſtion as well alſo as his three fellows? It is anſwered, either becauſe he ſate in the Kings gate, and ſo as being above all his Princes and Nobles, and as the Kings right hand, the Proclamation touched not him any more then the King himſelfe, he moſt probably ſitting with the King, as a ſpectatour of that which was done; or by reaſon of his imployments not to be ſpared to goe from the Kings gate and judging matters that came before him. And this I take take to be the moſt probable, becauſe if hee had been there with the king, he would not

not certainly have held his peace, but have ſpoken againſt this groſſe idolatry, and for his fellows in danger for not conforming thereunto. For the time when theſe things were done, ſome think it was long after his dream interpreted, but moſt probably it was the ſame yeare, the envy of other Princes of Babylon being ſo great at the preferment of Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego, that they would not reſt, but immediately ſeek to pull them downe by ſome device or other from the high places in which they were ſet, but with Daniel they medled not, as thinking him for the great grace, in which hee was with the King, to be above their reach. And if the dream were An. 37. of his reigne, as was before ſaid, it muſt needes be granted, that this idolatry was ſet up the ſame year, becauſe that An. 38. his puniſhment for this his intolerable pride followed in driving him from amongſt men to live in the fields with the beaſts in the open air, and under no roofe where men inhabited, as he was well worthy to be dealt withall, who being a man of moſt eminent place, ruling over men and beaſts, could not be herewith content, but he would be a god, therefore he was thus made more baſe then any other man. And that this muſt needs be done an. 37. and ſo that puniſhment inflicted, an. 38. of his reign appeareth, becauſe he was held in that brutiſh condition 7 yeares, and then reſtored again, and theſe being added to 38. amount to 45. ſoon after which he dyed. That this image was his own and not of any of the falſe gods, which he worſhipped, is plain, becauſe he did not worſhip it himſelfe. 2. Becauſe v. 12. it is diſtinguiſhed from his gods in the accuſation brought againſt Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego. 3. Becauſe it was long ago propheſied of, that he ſhould take thus upon him as a God. And it may be, that he took an hint from his dream of an image, whereof he heard that he was the golden head, thus to repreſent himſelfe to the people to be adored. So the wicked turn the Word of God made known unto them into an occaſion of ſinne, eſpecially Magiſtrates hearing themſelves called Gods they ſwell in pride, as if they were Gods indeed, and elevated above the condition of mortall men, expecting to be honoured accordingly, which proveth oft-times to be their overthrow, as is intimated, where they are called gods, it being added immediately, yee ſhall dye like men, for which the Lord gave a ſpeciall charge to him, that ſhould be ſet up for King, not to be lifted up in his heart above his brethren.

Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego, the valianteſt champions of God being caſt into the fiery furnace, that was ſo extream hot, were by and by ſeen walking in the ſaid furnace, a fourth man being amongſt them like the ſonne of God. Whence Lyra noteth this to have been the ſecond Viſion Propheticall touching Chriſt, of which he maketh five in all the Hiſtories from ch. 2. to chap. 6. 1. The viſion of the ſtone cut out of the mountaine without hands, of which chap. 2. 2. Of one like the Son of God in the fiery furnace, in this place ſetting forth the ſufferings and burnings of his faithfull ſervants that ſhould be in the time of perſecution, their invincible courage in ſuffering, and his preſence with them, changing the nature of the fire, that it ſeemed no tormenting fire to them, but comforting and refreſhing. 3. chap. 4. One bidding cut down the tree repreſented to Nebuchadnezzar in another dream, who is called a watchman: for hereby Chriſts cutting downe of the divels kingdome was ſet forth. 4. chap. 5. The handwriting ſeen by Belſhazzar upon the wall, and then he being by and by cut off, repreſenting the hand-writing againſt us, which Chriſt tooke and nailed to his Croſſe; thus ſpoiling Principalities and powers. 5. ch. 6. Daniels admirable deliverance out of the Lions den, figuring out Chriſts riſing up out of the grave to life again. For this in preſent it was certainly a præludium of his future incarnation, and after that of his preſence always with his to the worlds end, eſpecially in their ſufferings, as he ſhewed himſelf to Stephen, now ready to be ſtoned. Thus it is underſtood by Tertullian, who ſaith, Chriſt appeared to the king of Babylon in the fiery furnace the fourth with his Martyrs as the ſon of God. And Epiph. bringeth this place for proof of the Son of God by the old Teſtament. Auguſt. likewiſe rhetorically ſpeaking to Nebuchadnezzar who ſaid, that he ſaw one like the Son of God, whence came this to thee (O thou Alienigena) who told thee, that this was the Son of God, what Law, what Prophet? he is not yet born into the world, and the ſimilitude of him, that was to be born, is known to thee. Whence came this? who told thee this, but the divine fire inlightening thee within, that whileſt thou holdeſt theſe 3 as thine enemies in the fire, thou mighteſt give teſtimony to the Son of God?

Polanus. But Polanus following the vulg. tran. which hath it, v. 23. after theſe words, they fell down bound in the fiery furnace, and they walked looſe in the midſt of the fire without any hurt, for the Angell of the Lord deſcended together with them in the ſame moment, who ſhook the flames of the fire forth out of the Furnace, and preſerved the ſervants of God ſafe without any trouble, being cooled as it were with a dew coming upon them in a pleaſing manner. But the vulgar Latine followed by Jerome hath beſides theſe words, a large prayer made by Azarias in the name of them all in the furnace, and after this deliverance a thankſgiving made by them all together, neither of which are in the Caldee, and ſo Jerome confeſſeth, but he had them out of the Greek tranſlation of Theodotion. From hence Polanus gathereth that the fourth man appearing was an Angell, and not a repreſentation of Chriſt, who ſhould afterwards be made man of a woman. And he argueth from the ſpeaker, who was an heathen, and therefore knew not any diſtinction of perſons in the God head, but ſpake here of an Angel, as the Son of God, for he ſaith, that even the heathen knew, that there were Angels, and the King ſaith not neither that he ſaw one, who was the Son of God, but like him, whereupon he concludeth; that it was not hee that appeared, but an Angell in an aſſumed body, as alſo Nebuchadnezzar himſelf calleth him, verſ. 28. wherefore he concludeth againſt thoſe Fathers that from hence bring a teſtimony, that Chriſt is the true naturall Son of God. But for ſo much as all agree, that the Son of God hath ſometime appeared in a humane ſhape, as divers times he did to Ezekiel, and to Abraham; Ezek. 1. ſitting upon the throne on the top of the living creatures and wheeles, and Ezek. 40. in a linen garment with a meaſuring line in his hand, and Ezek. 9. and to Abraham, Gen. 13. 44. & 15.
and here a glorious man is ſeen working this great miracle upon the fire, that it could not burn, I ſee no reaſon, why we ſhould not ſubſcribe to the ancient tenet, that it was God the Son in an humane ſhape, who now appeared.
For the reaſons alleadged to prove the contrary: firſt, he is by the ſame king Mal. 4. called an Angell, in like manner in other places the Son of God is called the Angell of the Covenant, for the King being an heathen whoſe words are not therefore to be regarded, moſt probably, as Auguſtine hath it, the ſpirit of God prompted him to ſay thus, and therefore he and not king Nebuchadnezzar is to be looked at herein, for ſo Balaam an heathen wizzard ſpake of Chriſt by the Numb. 24. 17. name of a Star, that ſhould riſe out of Iacob. Laſtly, for his ſaying, One like the Son of God; this argueth not, that in this viſion there was not a repreſentation of the Son of God to come afterwards in the fleſh, but rather that this great myſtery was here ſhewed before for the greater comfort of the faithfull, that they might couragiouſly bear all their ſufferings having the Prince and head both of Angels and men preſent with them herein to mitigate their pangs and carry them through them with joy, this being more, then to have the protection of a meer Angell, concerning whoſe power alſo, whether he can change the nature of fire, that it ſhall not burn, it may well be doubted, ſeeing this argueth omnipotency, which is in God alone, and not communicable to any creature. Wherefore no weak argument, and worthy to be derided may bee raiſed herefrom that Jeſus is the Son of God, but one ſtrong and ſolid thus. He whom Nebuchadnezzar ſaw in the fiery furnace was the Son of God in an humane ſhape: but he was typically Jeſus, Ergo, &c. The major is proved, becauſe he did that, which none but God could doe, viz. qualified the moſt ardent fire, which burnt up ſome coming but near it, and had no fiery heat at the ſame inſtant to ſinge ſo much as the hair of the head of other ſome. For the minor it is alſo proved, becauſe God appearing in a glorious humane ſhape at any time was not God the Father or Holy Ghoſt, but God the Son, ſith no man hath ſeen God at any time, but the Son hath revealed him both when

when in him appearing in an humane ſhape under the Law, and when under the Goſpell ſhewing himſelf in the man Jeſus born of the Virgin Mary, and hypoſtatically united unto him.

For the communication had betwixt the King and his Lords about this miracle, God ordered it ſo by his providence, that they might be made witneſſes hereof for the greater confirmation of the truth hereof, and that they might hereby be converted to God, or left the more without excuſe. As for V. 30. Nebuchadnezzar himſelf, he was again ſo taken with it, that he bleſſeth God, and decreeth againſt all men that ſhall vilipend him, although his fickleneſſe and inconſtancy in good was the ſame, that it was before chap. 2. and the beginning of this third manifeſteth. For had there been any true cordiall reſolution tending to ſuch piety, as he made ſhew of herein, he ſhould not for his pride have been ſo puniſhed after this, as he was, chap. 4. Note hence the certainty of the miracles which God wrought of old, there being ſo many made Note. witneſſes thereof, that we may not be unbeleeving, but beleeving, as if we had ſeen them our ſelves, and beleeving our Lord Jeſus the Son of God to be preſent, although inviſibly, with all his faithfull ſervants in their ſufferings, to mitigate them ſo, that they ſhall be able with comfort to bear them, whatſoever they be, as he was now in the furnace viſibly, as the words, Like the Son of God, imply, becauſe we commonly ſay of a man extraordinary for parts and glory, if he be the King, but never by us ſeen before, that he is like the King. 2. Miracles work upon the moſt wicked for the preſent, making them to ſpeak as godlily as the ſincereſt Chriſtian can doe, but in ſuch as are not rooted in grace, it is but as a flaſh, ſoon vaniſhing again, that no man may bear himſelfe upon this, that he is for the preſent well affected, but get grace into his heart, and to this end crave it with all earneſtneſſe and perſeverance.

CHAP. IV.

IN this chapter is ſet forth another Viſion or Dream of Nebuchadnezzar, and the interpretation thereof made by Daniel, whereupon he maketh another V. 1, 2, 3. declaration full of piety towards God, as if he had now been converted indeed, verſ. 1, 2, 3. Here all things are ſo plain in the dreame, the interpretation of Daniel being added, that I ſhall not need to expound any thing herein, onely verſ. 13. it is ſaid, Behold! a Watcher and Holy one came down from heaven, hee V. 13, 14. cryed aloud and ſaid, Hew down the tree and cut off his branches, &c. This watcher was an Angel of God, ſo called, becauſe the Angels are alwayes vigilant and ready at every command to goe about the execution of Gods will, as we alſo ought to be, and ſpecially the Miniſters of God, as it is ſaid to Ezekiel chap. 3. And he ſaith, Cut down the tree, to ſhew that Nebuchadnezzar ſet forth hereby, ſhould be put down from his kingly dignity, and live like a beaſt a long time, and this was the plucking off of his branches, which are ornaments to a tree, and therefore fitly repreſenting a kings royall accommodations making him to ſhew glorious. Now when the Angell cometh to expound this verſe 16. hee ſaith, Let the heart of a man be taken from him, and a beaſts heart be given unto him, in V. 16. which words he maketh the viſion ſo far forth plain, as that it might from hence be known, that a man was meant by this tree, and a man not to be metamorphozed into an oxe, as Joſephus ſaith, Nebuchadnezzar was, but retaining ſtill the ſhape of a man, and changed onely in his underſtanding, by which means he was ſo tranſported from himſelf, that he was no more as a man for any reaſon, but as a brute beaſt in all his doings, in ſo much as that his courtyers not able to indure a beaſt any longer, drove him out of the houſe into the fields amongſt other beaſts, with whom he fed, and amongſt whom he lay V. 25. in the open air ſeven years, and the food, upon which he fed, is ſaid to be graſſe which he ate like an oxe. Touching this ſtrange change in this king, Dorotheus and Epiphanius ſay, that internally he was not changed in his reaſonable ſoul, but was herewith indued ſtill, and that his change was in his body, his former part being like an oxes, his poſteriour like a lion, having the head and horns of an oxe, but the main and tail of a lion; contrariwiſe the text ſaith, that his heart was changed, but for any change in his body, it ſpeaketh nothing, whereby is not meant, that his reaſonable ſoul was taken from him, for that is the form of a man, and therefore being taken away, a man ceaſeth altogether from being a man, and the ſoul of a beaſt being put into him hee is really a beaſt In ſaying therefore, that the heart of a man was taken from him, and the heart of a beaſt put into him, nothing elſe is meant, but that this phantaſie and appetite were changed ſo, that upon a ſtrong imagination that he was a beaſt, he had affections carrying him in all things to doe accordingly. A like ſtory to this hath Aben. Ezra of a melancholick man in Sardinia, who forſaking the company of men, went amongſt Deer, and lived, and eat graſſe with them a long time. And for this expoſition is Thomas Aquinas, who ſaith that there were no ſhape in his bodily ſhape, but onely he ſeemed to himſelfe to be a beaſt. And Franciſcus Valeſius ſaith, that it was a melancholick diſeaſe, which God laid upon the King: and Hieron Mercurialis, that by means of this diſeaſe ſome have become madde, doing as if they were the very creatures, which they imagined themſelves to be, ſome who thought themſelves dogges, barking, ſome cocks crowing, ſome wolves, going out amongſt the graves to feed upon dead bodyes. One, ſaith Lemnius, imagining himſelfe to be dead would eat no meat ſeven dayes together, ſo that he was almoſt dead, to whom being in this deſperate condition, the Phyſitian preſcribed this remedy, that a few men clad all in white ſhould come into the chamber where he lay, and eat meat in his ſight, which he ſeeing them asked what they were, they anſwered, dead men, but ſaid he, doe dead men eat? they ſaying, yes, that they did when they could get it, he hearing this ſtarted up from his bed, and fell to eating with them, and ſo was recovered. Michael Medina conjectureth, that as by witchcraft ſome are transformed in ſhew, a miſt being caſt before the ſpectatours eyes, ſo that they ſeem to be what they are not, ſo it was done by the Almighty power of God to Nebuchadnezzar; but this is onely a conjecture & improbable, becauſe no ſuch thing is here ſaid, but onely touching his heart, wherein all the change in appearance was, and it is not good to aſcribe ſuch deceitfull doings to God, as jugglers uſe by the help of the devill to beguile mens eyes. Of this ſtrange judgement laid upon Nebuchadnezzar, none of the ancient writers of the heathens ſpeak, but Alpheus briefly ſaith, that Nebuchadnezzar being rapt with madneſſe preſently vaniſhed out of the company of men, when he had firſt foretold the overthrow of the Caldee Monarchy, as he is cited by Euſebius.

V. 15. For the leaving of the ſtump of his roots in the earth, verſ. 15. hereby was meant, that he ſhould not be driven from his kingdome, but that hee ſhould return to it again, as the ſtubble of a tree, after it is cut down, having life ſtill in it ſhooteth out again, even with a band of iron and braſſe in the tender graſſe of the field, that is, leave it as it were, thus bound by Gods irrevocable decree, till the time here ſpoken of be fulfilled, the allegory of a tree cut down being herein followed, which ſpringeth not again, but by the dew falling upon it, and although ordinarily a tree cut down ſhooteth out again the next ſpring, yet if bands be upon it, through which it cannot pierce, it ſhooteth not out, till they be taken off, ſo could not this King, but then he did.

Junius.

V. 17. This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones. vulgar, the ſentence is the decree of the watchmen, and this is the ſpeech of the Saints and the petition. The firſt agreeth beſt with the originall, it being meant, that it was the decree appointed by God to be publiſhed by his watchmen the Angels, whereupon they demand, why it is ſo, and have anſwer in the next words, that the living might know, that the moſt High ruleth in the Kingdomes of men, and giveth them to whom he pleaſeth. Iunius to theſe words, the word by the demand of the holy ones, addeth uſque dum adducatur ut agnoſcant, till he be brought to that, that they acknowledge, that is, Nebuchadnezzar to that low ebbe, that all men living hearing of it, and after this, of his reſtitution again to his kingdom, acknowledge ledge the kingdomes of the world to be at the Lords diſpoſing, and that hee giveth this great Monarchy, to whom he will, and ſetteth the moſt abject of men therein, that is, this moſt proud man after his ſo great abaſement, to be King and Ruler thereof again, thus alſo Lyra according to the letter. But he ſaith further, that ſome will not have this to be literally underſtood, but myſtically of the devill, who for his pride was the moſt abaſed of all others, yet ſhall hereafter be reſtored to his priſtin glory of an angell of light again. And they argue againſt the literall underſtanding of this of Nebuchadnezzar. 1. Becauſe he retaining his humane nature ſtill, could not goe and live upon graſſe as a beaſt ſo long a time. 2. Becauſe being taken with ſuch a diſeaſe, as was a kind of madneſſe, they would doubtleſſe rather have ſhut him up, then driven him out into the fields, as is uſed to be done to mad men. 3. Becauſe the wild and ſavage beaſts would, when he had come amongſt them, have devoured him. 4. So large an Empire would not have been ſo long without a King, and if another King had been once ſet up, it is not probable, that he would have given way to him to return to his Throne again. But to beleeve, that the devill ſhall be reſtored again to his firſt glorious condition of an angell of light, is moſt contrary to the holy Scriptures, wherein it is ſaid, that hell fire is prepared for the devill and his angels, and that it is everlaſting, and the angels, who kept not their firſt ſtanding he hath reſerved in everlaſting chains of darkneſſe. For the objection made. 1. No reaſon can be drawn from the common condition of a man, to this man, having this judgement laid upon him by the Almighty, who can ſuſtain the life of man without means as long as he pleaſeth, as he did Moſes 40 dayes, and Elijah, and the children of Iſrael 40 yeares in the barren wilderneſſe, and experience hath taught in ſome, whoſe bodyes have been diſtempered, that they have uſed coals and other things, wherein there is no nouriſhment, for moſt delectable food, and there is an hiſtory of a woman, that ate & lived upon ſpiders, and ſome upon locuſts; therefore if God would have Nebuchadnezzar fed with graſſe, what is he that dares ſay it was not poſſible, and likewiſe upon his hands and feet to goe about as the beaſts? 2. It is not to be doubted, but that when this judgement befell him, Daniel certified the Nobles hereof, perſwading them rather to help put in execution what God had decreed, then to hinder it. 3. The ſame God that appointed his reſtitution after this faſtened the ſtump of this tree in the mean ſeaſon, ſo as that it was not in the power of any creature to pull it up, for which it is ſaid to be bound with bands of braſſe and iron, and it is obſerved in the ordinary courſe of nature, that a madde dogge will not bite a foole or a mad man, to ſay nothing of the acquaintance, which hee gat with the beaſts by converſing amongſt them, ſo that they took him going upon all four, and feeding as they did, to be a beaſt as they were, although in ſhape differing from them, as a monſter amongſt them. 4. It is ſaid, that Evilmerodach the ſonne of Nebuchadnezzar reigned a while in his ſtead in this time of his exile, but playing the tyrant was by his ſubjects ſhut up in priſon, where Jehoiakin the captive King of Judah was, with whom he by this means gat ſo good acquaintance, that immediately after Nebuchadnezzars death, he comming to the Throne lifted up his head, and dealt ſo favourably with him, as is ſaid, 2 King. 25. & ſo the kingdom was at Nebuchadnezzar returning to his underſtanding again void and fit for him to reſume; and if it were not ſo, Daniel with the aſſiſtance of the Lords governed it for the time in certain expectation of his returne at the time by God prefixed.

Break off thy ſins by righteouſneſſe and thine iniquities by ſhewing mercy to the poor, if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity, vulg. it may be God will forgive thy delights; that is, if thou doſt thus, happily thy ſins wherein thou haſt taken ſuch pleaſure may be pardoned, and this judgement eſcaped: but herein the ſenſe is more reſpected then the ſignification of the words, and if it be lengthening tranquillity, the ſenſe will be good thus, being ſpared from this expulſion and diſturbance thou maiſt haply live ſtill quietly in thy kingdom. The vulg. for break off thy ſins by righteouſneſſe, hath alſo, redeem thy ſinnes by almes-deeds, and ſo hath the Septuagint tranſlation but erroneouſly, for neither doth פרק ſignifie redeem, nor צדקה almes, but break off and righteouſneſſe, yet upon this erroneous tranſlation, ſome infer the merit of almes-deeds, as if for them men were worthy of pardon, ſo Cornelius a Lapide ſaith, ſins are by almes redeemed, becauſe the fault being therefore forgiven, temporall puniſhments are ex condigno, remitted alſo. Again, they merit, if not the remiſſion of everlaſting, yet of temporall, and laſtly becauſe they diſpoſe a ſinner to grace, and to the pardon of ſin, as prayer deſerving and obtaining of it. Wherefore he ſtiffly maintaineth the vulgar tranſlation, ſaying, that although פרק ſignifieth not to redeem, but to break off, yet to ſhew that this breaking off is by redeeming, a Redeemer is in Caldee called פרוק and for the word righteouſneſſe, to give almes is a great part of righteouſneſſe, and therefore it may well be rendered by almes. But againſt him and all that make ſuch Papiſticall conſtructions I Polanus. oppoſe Polanus, who excellently ſheweth that פרק hath only two ſignifications, 1. to break off; 2. to pluck a mans ſelfe out of danger, but not to redeem, which indeed cannot be ſaid to be done in reſpect of ſins, but of perſons, ſeeing ſins are not capable of puniſhments, but perſons ſinning, Methurgeman Eliæ writing upon this word, ſaith, it ſignifieth to break off, and for proof hereof alleadgeth Exod. 32. 2. Break off your golden rings, but for redeeming he can bring no place, where in Hebr. or Caldee it is ſo uſed. And againſt redeeming, as by a Prince given, which might ſatisfie in reſpect of any 1 Pet. 1. 18. puniſhments due for ſin, maketh the redemption by Chriſts bloud, and not by gold and ſilver, if we had millions thereof to give amongſt the poor. The Note. meaning therefore is nothing elſe, but whereas thou haſt been an oppreſſor, do henceforth righteouſly & make reſtitution to thoſe whom thou haſt wronged, and over and above this, be charitable and give aboundantly of thy goods to the poor. From whence, although no redemption from ſin by almes-deeds can be proved, yet it may wel be proved that no man is a true Convert, or ſhal find favour at Gods hands, who turneth not from unjuſt and deceitfull dealing to righteous in all things, and from hard heartedneſſe to charitableneſſe. For in Luke 19. Act. 10. both theſe Zaccheus was a moſt exact pattern, & Cornelius to add the more force to his prayers, was much in almeſgiving, and the Apoſtle having ſpoken of Heb. 13. 15, 16. the ſacrifice of praiſing God, addeth to diſtribute and to give forget not, for with ſuch ſacrifice God is well pleaſed, whereby is intimated that prayer and praiſe is then a well pleaſing ſacrifice to God, when accompanyed with almeſ-deeds. For the laſt words here, if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity, becauſe Daniel ſpeakes doubtfully, the Papiſts following the Vulgar, gather from hence, that no man can be certain of his ſinnes being pardoned, or conſequently of his ſalvation. But as hath been before ſaid, the words are not rightly rendred, it may be God will forgive, but, if haply there may be a prolonging of thy peace or reſt, the temporall judgement threatned againſt thee being prevented. And ac-Hieron. cording to this Ierome noteth, that an whole year paſſed, before that it was executed, and Nebuchadnezzar ſinned again by his proud vaunting of himſelf of his great Babylon. Whence ſaith he it is probable, that he did for a time, as Daniel had counſelled him, and ſo was ſpared, and had his quiet reſting in his palace lengthened out twelve moneths after this. But if the vulgar tranſlation were true, yet it followeth not from this his conditionall ſpeaking, that he doing ſo as was preſcribed could have none aſſurance, becauſe ſuch words are often uſed by way of perſwading to beleeve the thing ſpoken of, as 2 Tim. 2. 26. Inſtructing with meekneſſe the contrary minded, if God at any time will give them repentance, which is as much as if he had ſaid, thou doing thus may upon good ground beleeve that a good event will follow. And for any man or Nation turning from ſinne, when judgements are threatened there is Note. a certain ground of confidence, Ier. 18. 6. Ezek. 26. From Daniels example, not onely expounding to Nebuchadnezzar his Dream, but alſo exhorting him to repentance, note that every Miniſter of God ought to doe likewiſe, and Exek. 14. not to ſooth up men in their ſins, ſo daubing with untempered mortar, or having expounded the word to leave it without application.

V. 34.

At the end of theſe dayes my underſtanding returned unto me, and I lifted up mine eyes to heaven, thus I have tranſlated it, not as the words lye, for his lifting up of his eyes is placed firſt, and then the returning of his underſtanding to him: but ſo it is hyſteron proteron, the laſt put firſt, for his underſtanding muſt firſt needs return unto him, and then, and not before he lifted up his eyes and bleſſed God, ſith the heart of a beaſt cannot doe this, and hereby it is plain, that the judgement laid upon him was in his minde, and not in the tranſmutation of his body any otherwiſe, then as this beaſtiall minde made him to go and do like a brute beaſt. From this relation of Nebuchadnezzar, we learn, that man, who is as a tree flouriſhing by proſperity, is ſo faſcinated hereby, that forgetting God he equalizeth himſelfe in his imagination unto him, then as pride goeth before a fall, God who is very vigilant to look to the ſwelling heart of ſuch a man cutteth him down by ſickneſſe, or taking his worldly eſtate away from him, thus making him baſe and vile, and thus haply he liveth and goeth on either like a ſtupid beaſt a long time, not conſidering, wherefore Gods hand is ſo heavy upon him, or murmuring againſt God, but in fine, if hee belongeth to God, he conſidereth his former high thoughts and wickedneſſes, and repenteth, and is either lifted up again, as Nebuchadnezzar, and Iob in this world, or in the world to come, although after this he be kept alwayes low here. And then what doth he? bleſſe and praiſe God to the uttermoſt of his power, ſeeking alſo to make others by his ſpeaking of his praiſes and wonderful geſts done for him, to acknowledge him to be the only true God, and therefore to fall to the magnifying of him alſo, and to living in all holy obedience to his will, to his glory.

Note.

And thus as Lyra ſaith, it is not to be doubted but Nebuchadnezzar after this proceeded to do to his dying day & ſo was ſaved. Whereas that which is ſpoken of him, Eſa. 14.12. may ſeeme to make againſt it. He anſwereth, no more is there ſaid, but what came to paſſe here touching his cutting downe to the ground, and the debaſing of him in this world for his pride, he being ſo left, as a wretched man, ſuffering ſtill in his body after death. This Iſaiah ſaw ſhould come unto him for his intolerable pride, but his finall converſion was hidden from him and not revealed, til now in Daniels time. But forſomuch as after this teſtimony given of his ſerious penitency, nothing is more ſpoken of him, but this his hiſtory is concluded, it is to be held, that whatſoever his life had formerly been, was forgiven, and in the end he was received to mercy, that no penitent ſinner, who now turneth to do the works of God, may deſpair of mercy, how foul ſoever his life hath formerly been. But touching any grace or mercy to ſinners delaying their repentance neither doth this or any other hiſtory ſpeak one word of comfort, and therefore they build their hopes upon ſhadowes, that being ſuch hope to come to the like comfortable end, eſpecially ſuch as have glorified God and been well affected, but are faln away: for although he did again and again, yet there is now a bar put againſt Apoſtates, ſo that there is no hope for them to doe the like, becauſe it is impoſſible for the inlightened that fall away, to be renewed by repentance; although an heathen being affected with miracles, and hereupon confeſſing the true God once, yea twice, falling after this away again, were renewed, for it is no more given to ſuch to repent, although it were given to this man.

CHAP. V.

Hitherto the Divine ſpirit, that was in Daniel, being ſhewed by his interpreting of two dreams of King Nebuchadnezzar: now a third inſtance is given of the ſame in his reading and expounding the ſtrange hand-writing upon the wall to Belſhazzar, in every of which there is ſomewhat typifying things done under the Goſpell. 1. In the ſtone cut out of the mountaine without hands. 2. In the watcher decreeing the cutting down of the proud King, repreſented by an huge high and broad tree, for by this was ſet

In this hand-writing ſetting forth Belſhazzars deſtruction, and loſſe of his kingdome, becauſe he weighed too light, for by books wherein Rom.14.10. mens doings are written, all ſhall at the laſt by Chriſt be judged, and then they Revel.20.12. that are light like chaffe, and not heavy and ſubſtantiall like wheat, very husks without grain, ſhall be deſtroyed, and the kingdome of Heaven given to the ſolid faithfull, who are within, as they ſhew to be outwardly. Touching this Belſhazzar the King, ſome think him to have been the ſon of Nebuchadnezzar, becauſe he is in this chapter ſo called, and next after Nebuchadnezzar written 2 King.25. of, and whereas it may ſeem to make againſt it, that Evilmerodach ſucceeded Nebuchadnezzar, it is held by them that Evilmerodach and Belſhazzar were all one, which is alſo intimated, Jer. 50. 2. where it is ſaid, in ſpeaking of the deſtruction of Babylon, Bel is faln, Merodach is broken in pieces, which may be taken for Evilmerodach; and whereas Jer. 27. it is ſaid, all Nations ſhall ſerve Nebuchadnezzar, and his ſon, and his ſons ſon, which was not fulfilled, if Belſhazzar were his ſon, in whoſe time Babylon was deſtroyed; they anſwer, that there were two Nebuchadnezzars, touching the former of which Jeremy ſaith, that all Nations ſhould ſerve him and his ſon, and ſons ſon, and ſo they did, if Belſhazzar were ſon of the ſecond of theſe Nebuchadnezzars. Others ſay, that Belſhazzar was not the ſon, but the grand-child of Nebuchadnezzar, and called his ſon only as the grandchild of any man is commonly, and the grandfather the father. According to this Evilmerodach was Nebuchadnezzar's ſon, and Bel- Joſeph.l.11. ſhazzar his ſon. Laſtly, others place next unto Nebuchadnezzar Evilmerodach, then antiq.c.11. Nigliſſar, after him Laboſardach, then Belſhazzar, ſo Joſephus whom Jerom followeth, but unto them he reckoneth ſo many years, that it agreeth not with the years of the Jews captivity, to Evilmerodach 18 years, to Negliſſar 40, to Laboſardach 9 moneths, to Belſhazzar 17. which together make 75 beſides the yeares of Nebuchadnezzar after Jeruſalem deſtroyed 36. It is therefore rather to be held, that Belſhazzar was the ſon of Evilmerodach, and that he is omitted by Daniel, as in whoſe time nothing remarkable fell out, but what was before related, 2 King. 25. and Daniel propounded to himſelf onely to ſet forth things of Jer.27. greateſt note. And thus the propheſie of Jeremiah was fulfilled of all Nations ſerving Nebuchadnezzar, and his ſon, and ſons ſon, and we ſhall not be forced to flee to an uncertain conjecture of another Nebuchadnezzar coming between, of whom neither the Hebrews, nor Beroſus the Caldee Hiſtoriographer maketh any mention. And the time of the Jewes captivity agreeth to this being 70 years, if we reckon to Nebuchadnezzar 36 years, to Evilmerodach 18, to Belſhazzar 17 as Joſephus, being together 71, in which year being the 17 of Belſhaz- Lyra. zar the Medes and Perſians tooke Babylon, and as Lyra ſaith out of the Hebrew traditions, Belſhazzar ſeeing the 70 yeares ſpoken of by Jeremy come, and Babylon ſtanding ſtill, although beſieged, and the Jews by the coming on of another Monarch not delivered, hereupon took occaſion to ſleight that propheſy, and as if all danger were paſt, to make that great feaſt to his Princes, that he did, and ſo when he was moſt ſecure, he was cut off. But of the manner of Cyrus his proceeding and taking Babylon, and the deſcription of that great city, ſee what I have written upon Ezra, pag.5.6.

When Belſhazzar was in his cups with his Lords, his Wives, and his Concubines (who were a wonderfull great company, for there were 1000 Lords or Princes, it being by ſome conceived, that all his Princes were come unto him to Babylon to help to defend the City, an hand was ſeen writing upon the wall ſuch a writing, as none of the wiſe men of his could read or interpret, which made his heart and limbs to tremble. Upon this the Queen hearing of it came in, about whom it may be queſtioned, what Queen ſhee was, ſeeing his wives and concubines were already with him: but it is anſwered, moſt probably ſhee was the wife of Nebuchadnezzar who lived ſtill, or of Evil-merodach his father, who knew what Daniel had formerly done in the like difficult caſes, whereſore ſhe certifieth him of Daniel, and Daniel being ſent for came, and read and interpreted the writing, which was Mene, Mene, Tekel, Vpharſin, V. 26. which becauſe when he cometh to interpret, he ſaith, Mene, God hath numbred thy kingdome and finiſhed it; Tekel, thou art weighed in the ballance, and found wanting; Peres, thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Perſians: the vulgar hath only theſe three words, Mene, Tekel, Perez; but the firſt word is doubled, and for Peres is Vpharſin, which cometh of ו and, and Peres, whence is פרסן diviſions, and Mene properly ſignifyeth numbred, Tekel weighed. Thus by prodigious ſignes God hath ſome other times alſo foreſhewed the deſtruction of other wicked kings. Zonaras. Zonaras ſaith, that a Judge in Antioch ſaw in heaven a number of ſtarres ſo placed together, that of them theſe words were made, Greeorius l. 7. hodie Iulianus in Perſide occiditur, this day is Iulian ſlain in Perſia, and it fell out accordingly. CHAP. VI.

HEre, after Gods twice magnifying of Daniel for his incomparable skill and inſight into greateſt ſecrets in the time of Nebuchadnezzar, and once in the dayes of Belſhazzar, a further magnifying of him, as his dearly beloved ſervant, followeth in the dayes of Darius the King of the Medes by a rare miraculous deliverance from the Lions, into whoſe den he was caſt, but their mouths were ſhut up ſo, as that they could not hurt him. All things are here eaſily to be underſtood, and therefore I ſhall ſpeake but little hereupon. V. 10. And firſt of his praying three times a day with his window open towards Ieruſalem, as he had uſed to doe. If the reaſon be demanded, it is anſwered, God had promiſed to his people in captivity, that if they ſhould pray toward Solomons Temple, 1 King. 8. he would hear and be mercifull, and therefore hee ſet his window open that way, and not to be ſeen of men, contrary to which it is preſcribed, Matth. 6. Enter into thy cloſet, and pray in ſecret. For his praying three times beſides the morning and evening, intimated Exod. 29. 39. where it is preſcribed at noon day, this was commonly before eating, as Peter Act. 10. 9. went up at this time of the day to the top of the houſe to pray, and David ſpeaks of praying morning and evening and at noon-tide. And it is not to be doubted, but that Daniel did now the rather frequent God with his prayers in private, that hee might not be counted one that tempted God by doing his devotion, where he might be ſeen, and ſo incurre the penalty by the Kings Decree propounded, thus Lyra. Lyra. But how was he in private, ſay others, when as the Princes by ſeeing his window open knew of it? and hereupon Polanus entreth into a diſpute, whether Daniel did well in that hee did not for a time powre out his devotions more ſecretly, where he might not have been ſeen. And he ſaith, ſome object againſt his thus doing, becauſe he might ſecretly for that time in his minde have worſhipped God without uſing any externall geſture, and in ſo doing have kept a good conſcience. 2. It not ſo, at the leaſt by going in ſecret, where no mortall eyes might ſee him. 3. Becauſe the Kings Decree is to be obeyed in things not contrary to our duty to God. Polanus. But all this is eaſily anſwered, he could not at this time refraine from proceeding externally in his devotion as he uſed to doe, without being reputed a deſerter of his piety towards his God, his forbearing to pray, as he had uſed to doe being taken for a relinquiſhing of him for fear of the Kings Decree, wherein he knew that he only amongſt all the Princes wasa imed at, and of what ill conſequence this might have been to enemies, who for this would have counted him timerous, and without all courage, and to friends, to whom his example might have been a ſtumbling block to make then.

them to intermit their devotions alſo. And therefore it was neceſſary for Act. 4. him to doe as he did, that his faith and courage, and conſtancy to his firſt principles might appear to all men, and that in the way of piety hee feared not man, as his three fellows had done before in Nebuchadnezzars dayes. As for obedience to mens ordinances, it is no further to be yeelded, but as it ſtands with piety towards God, and doing ſo as that a good conſcience may bee V. 14. kept in all things. When the King heard that Daniel was taken in the trap, which they had ſet for him, he was ſore diſpleaſed with himſelf; and laboured to deliver him to the going down of the Sun. The King, as it appeareth hereby, was meerly circumvented, who when he made his Decree ſaw not into the drift thereof, but now he ſaw too late and ſorrowed fruitleſly. But although hee could not ſee into their drift, yet if hee had not been void of all piety, hee would never have agreed to make ſuch a Decree, howſoever he had beene importuned thereunto, becauſe even heathens are devout in their kind, and know by the light of nature that the worſhip of the God whom they ſerve, is not to be intermitted ſo long at any time. His grief for Daniel therefore was not, becauſe he was ſo godly, that for godlineſs ſake he would thus hazzard his life, but becauſe he was ſo wiſe a man, and ſo he thought, that he ſhould have more miſſe of him, then of all his Princes beſides. But as great as his grief for Daniel was, and howſoever hee laboured by ſpeaking for him, ſeeking ſome Lyra. evaſion in interpreting his Decree made, as Lyra conjectureth, or pleading the great uſefulneſſe of him for his rare parts to the whole State, he at length cauſed Daniel to be caſt into the Lions den, as Herod afterwards did by Iohn the Baptiſt, who had hypocritically pretended ſorrow, when for his oath he thought himſelfe obliged to doe it, or was affected with ſorrow in ſome other reſpect, haply of the hatred of the people, which hee ſhould thus incurre, becauſe they counted Iohn a Prophet. Thus Kings ſometimes for want of conſideration in time intangle themſelves in unevitable evils, for

V. 16. Thy God, whom thou ſerveſt continually will deliver thee. This the King ſpeaks to comfort Daniel, and he might beleeve, that it ſhould be ſo, becauſe he had doubtleſſe heard of the deliverance of his three fellows out of the fiery furnace.
V. 17. Then a ſtone being rouled to the doore of the lions den, it was ſealed Hieron. with the Kings ſeal, ſaith Jerome, leaſt the Princes, if they ſhould find, that the Lions ſpared Daniel, ſhould otherwiſe ſeek his deſtruction, pretending it to be done by the Lions, and it was alſo ſealed with the Princes ſeals, leſt the king before him in the manner of a ſupplicant. But Daniel was not ſafe by any ſuch means, but God ſending his Angels to ſhut the Lions mouths, or as ſome think, taking hunger away from them in reſpect of Daniel, and cauſing in them a ſatiety, or cauſing ſuch a phantaſie in them, that they looked upon Daniel, not as a prey, but a friend unto.

to be. Ver. 20. The King then commanded, and Daniels accuſers, and their wives and children were caſt into the Lions den, &c. a juſt puniſhment and kindly for their ſin, and Joſephus ſaith further, to illuſtrate the hiſtory, that theſe Princes pleaded before the King, ſaying that the Lions were full, and therefore would not touch Daniel, which he hearing ſaid, that the Lions ſhould now be fed, and then they caſt into ſee, whether they could likewiſe eſcape, but this being done they were ſuddenly deſtroyed. For their wives and children caſt in alſo, it is moſt probable, that they were acceſſary to that wicked conſpiracy againſt Daniel, putting their husbands and fathers on in the foreſaid deſigne, as being moved with pride and diſdain at the high advancement of Daniel above them who was a captive. Then Darius wrote to all Nations of the earth, magnifying the God of Daniel, and acknowledging that his kingdome ſhould never have an end, ſpeaking herein the ſame words with Daniel. 2. Touching Chriſt and his Kingdome, which hee had doubtleſſe learned of Daniel. To conclude, the repreſentation of Chriſt in this viſion, as was ſaid before in part, is in Daniels comming alive again out of the Lions den into which he was put, as into a ſepulcher, after which his accuſers being put in were cruelly deſtroyed, and then the Lords kingdom extolled and all men prohibited to ſpeak ill of God the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. So Chriſt being laid into the ſepulcher, and there a watch of Lion-like ſouldiers ſet to keep it, and if he ſhould riſe again, to kill him, notwithſtanding had his angels ready at hand to terrifie the ſouldiers away, and then he aroſe againe, and came forth, being ſafe from all harm, and had all power given him, in heaven and in earth for evermore: and thus it appears, in every thing done here, that Daniel prefigured Chriſt, as in his name the judge of God, for ſo it was before ſhewed, that Daniel ſignifieth, and Chriſt, we beleeve ſhall come to judge the quick and the dead; and 2. as Daniel came out of the Lions den, ſo he out of the ſepulcher. 3. As Daniel came from amongſt the Lions ſafe and ſound, ſo he from amongſt the ſouldiers. 4. As Daniel being come forth from amongſt the Lions, his accuſers were caſt in and deſtroyed, ſo Chriſt being come out of the ſepulcher, death being not able to hurt him, the Jews his accuſers were caſt in, as it were, when by the Romans taken and ſlain. 5. As upon this great miracle God was acknowledged, and publiſhed to all parts of the earth, ſo upon the miraculous riſing again of Chriſt, falſe gods went downe upon the publiſhing hereof in all places, and the true God and his Son Jeſus Chriſt were acknowledged all over the earth, neither was any contrary power able to ſtop the courſe of the Goſpell, but the ſound thereof ſetting this forth went into all the ends thereof.

Matth.28.15.

CHAP. VII.

Lyra.

In this chapter and hence forward, as Lyra obſerveth, are five viſions more. 1. Of four monſtrous beaſts, and of the coming of the Judg, and of the whole proceeding of the laſt tribulation. 2. Setting forth the fight of the Perſians and Grecians by a Ram and a Goat, and herein the principall conflict of the ſame tribulation. chap. 8. 3. Of an Angell foretelling the 70 weeks to the death of the Meſſiah, in whom ſhould be an end of the tribulation, chap. 9. 4. Of a man declaring the end of tribulation, and the dayes of the laſting thereof, chap. 10. 5. Of the fight of Chriſt, and his finall victory and triumph under the type of the king of the South and of the North, chap. 11. thus Lyra. But Polanus ſaith, that in theſe viſions the ſufferings of the people of God, under the four Monarchies of the world are ſet forth, and ſpecially in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, when the worſhip and ſervice of God was quite overturned, the end whereof yet for the comfort of the faithfull is ſet forth by certain dayes, by a mighty deliverance, and after that by the coming of the Meſſiah, who yet by the greateſt part of the Jews ſhould be rejected and ſlain, and for this their city ſhould be deſtroyed, their Temple overthrowne, and the Levi-

Leviticall Service there aboliſhed, and never be reſtored again, yet in that time of common deſtruction the Elect ſhould be by the power of the Meſſiah preſerved, and finally that at Chriſts ſecond comming all the dead ſhall riſe ſome to everlaſting life, ſome to everlaſting condemnation. But to leave theſe generals and to come to the viſions in order.

V. 2. * Lyra. First Daniel ſaith, that he ſaw in his viſion by night, and four winds ſtrove upon the ſea, and four great beaſts came up from the Sea, by theſe four winds, ſaith Lyra, underſtand four Angels ſet over the four Monarchies of the World, who are ſaid to ſtrive, when each one ſtandeth for the Monarchy, over which hee is ſet, yet ready, when Gods makes his will known to either of them, to acquieſce and reſt therein. As for their ſtriving, 1. it is not to bee underſtood, that they did thus all together at one time, but ſucceſſively, the Angell of the Babylonian Monarchy againſt him of the Perſian, ſtriving to uphold it againſt Darius and Cyrus, but giving way to the deſtruction thereof, when God had made known his will in this regard, and likewiſe he over the Perſian againſt the Grecian, and he that was over the Grecian againſt the Roman. V. 3,4. For theſe beaſts the firſt was like a Lion having Eagles wings, and his wings were pluckt, and he was lifted up from the earth, and made to ſtand upon his feet like a man, and a mans heart was given unto him. Lyra. This was the king of Babylon, becauſe as a Lion amongſt all the beaſts of the Forreſt is as King, ſo was he of all other men far and wide; and therefore under this name of Lion he is alſo ſet forth, Eſa. 5. 29. Jer. 4. 13. and under the name of an Eagle, Jer. 48. Ezek. 17. And he had two wings of an Eagle, the one of riches, for which he was alſo ſet forth before by a golden head, and the other of military proweſſe, for herein both for might and skill he excelled all other, in ſomuch, as that ſome ſay, he was ſtronger then Hercules. And wings of an Eagle are aſcribed unto him for his pride, in regard of theſe two, by which he was lifted up above all other men, as the Eagle above all fowls of the air by the ſtrength of his wings, as was touched before, chap. 3. But his wings were pluckt when after his ſtrouting of himſelfe in his pride, hee was in minde made like a Beaſt, for then he was for a long time not onely as an Eagle with his feathers pluckt, not able to ſoar above others any more, and by this means kept lower and beneath them all, even the meaneſt man, but alſo whereas the Eagle his feathers being pluckt, hath ſtill the minde of an Eagle, he contrariwiſe was herein inferiour to other men alſo, he had not the underſtanding of the ſimpleſt man in him. And he was lifted up and made to ſtand upon his feet as a man, which is not to be underſtood, as being done by means of his wings, for they are ſaid before this, to have been pluckt, but by the mercy of God ſhewed again towards him in reſtoring him ſo debaſed. For then he was lifted up and ſtood erect as a man, and went not upon all four, making feet of his hands, as he did before, but his face that ſo long had been towards the ground as the face of a beaſt, was now lifted up again to look towards heaven, & as God there, by whoſe favour the caſe was thus altered with him, as man herein is differenced from a beaſt, according to the ſaying, when other animals look downward to the earth, he hath given a ſublime face to man, and bidden him look upward. And a mans heart was given unto him: which is juſt according to the ſaying before upon the viſion of the great and admirable tree in viſion repreſented to Nebuchadnezzar, chap. 4. 32. where after his driving from amongſt men, and the heart of a man taken from him, he ſaith, his underſtanding returned to him, and he looked up towards heaven. Lyra hath alſo another interpretation of his being pluckt his feathers, when all his power and riches were taken away by the Perſians, at what time hee ſtood, as a man, that is, as a poore ordinary man of the meaneſt ſort, and had the heart of a man given him, that is, whereas before he thought himſelfe as good as God, now he knew by experience, that he was no God but a miſerable man. But it is improper to ſay of one ſlain, that he was lifted up and ſtood upon his feet as a man, or that he had the heart of a man given him, when his hearts bloud was ſhed & he periſhed, yea this were abſurd, and therefore I reſt in the former. But Polanus who is for this, ſeeketh to make it probable, by ſaying, that hee was was made to ſtand upon his feet, as a man when his pride was abated by the Perſian, he being before as a Lion, and that hee had the heart of a man given him becauſe he was then as another ordinary man, & the people of that kingdome made tributary. For theſe beaſts coming out of the Sea, here by the Sea is ſet forth the world for the fluctuating condition hereof, now flowing, now ebbing, now boiſterous through windes, now calm; their riſing then out of the Sea is up in the world ſucceſſively one after another, as God in his providence, who foreſhewed this, appointed. For the 4 winds ſtriving upon the great Sea Polanus noteth, that for ſo much as the angels are ſet forth hereby, who under God govern in all the four parts of the world. 1. That Angels are as windes for their celerity, in executing the will of God, Pſal. 18.11. 114.4. 2. That whatſoever is done in any part of the world is not done by chance or fortune, but by Gods providence uſing the Miniſtery of Angels therein. 3. That the Church of God is not to expect peace and quiet in this world, but great troubles as in tempeſtuous weather by the many alterations and changes herein. 4. That the Church of God being delivered from one trouble, or ſtorm, is not to expect thenceforth to be free from more, but to be tumbled and toſſed with many adverſaries, till ſhee cometh at the haven of everlaſting peace, for after the ſtriving of the windes, four beaſts ariſe time after time, to renew troubles after troubles to the worlds end. Now for the foure kingdomes] here repreſented by beaſts, this is done to ſhew the ſavageneſſe and cruelty of theſe Heathen Kings, eſpecially toward the Church, for the acquainting of whom eſpecially their ariſing was under theſe formes ſet forth, that when they ſhould ſuffer by meanes of them they might be armed with patience, as knowing that no cruelty could be exerciſed againſt them, but by his providence.

And behold another beaſt like unto a bear, and it raiſed it ſelf on one ſide, and it had three ribs in the mouth, and they ſaid unto it. Ariſe, devoure much fleſh. Here the Kingdome of Perſia is repreſented by a Beare, becauſe a Bear is baſer then a Lion, by ſubtilty getteth his prey and is more cruell. 1. He is baſer, as not having ſo ſpecious a form as a Lion, ſo the Perſian was poore and inhabited a barren countrey, and therefore lived more baſely, and upon courſer food then the Babylonian, whoſe countrey was more fruitfull, for ſo Xenophon ſaith, the Perſians through their want fed baſely, and lived laboriouſly for the aſperity of their country. 2. As the Bear, ſo the Perſian by ſubtilty wrought the overthrow of Babylon, for Zopyrus knowing by an old Propheſie, that Babylon ſhould then fall, was content to cut and mangle his body and face, that ſo he might fain himſelf to be full of wrath againſt the Pyrſians for thus miſuſing him, then he fled to the Caldees complaining of their cruelty, and by his ſubtlety prevailed ſo far, that he was made a chief Captain in the City to defend it againſt the Perſians, by which means the Perſians gat ſuch advantage by his letting them in, that they ſuddenly ſubdued all And the propheſie that he went upon, was, that when a mule ſhould foale, Babylon ſhould be taken, for he had a mule, that foaled when he lay at the ſiege, and upon this he took courage to him to doe ſo as hath been ſaid. For the cruelty and greedineſſe of the Bear to devoure much, which is alſo intimated in the laſt words here, devour much fleſh, herein the Perſian was alſo like unto the Beare, for of their cruelty, and the Medes in devouring men by deſtroying them, it is ſpoken, Eſa. 13. 17,18. They deſpiſe ſilver and gold, with their bowes they ſhall pierce even children, and not pity the fruit of the Womb, their eye ſhall not ſpare little children. The Vulgar Latine, for theſe words raiſed up it ſelfe, hath theſe, it ſtood in part, which Lyra expoundeth of the Medes and Perſians ſtanding for the Jews to deliver them out of captivity. Polanus renders it, he erected a domination, and this moſt agreeable to the Heb. לשטרו חד the firſt of which words ſignifieth Dominion, the next, if it be taken for a contract of אחד onely, as if hee had ſaid erected, or raiſed up a Dominion of many countryes into one. For ſo Cyrus did, of the Medes, Aſſyrians, Caldeans, and other Nations of the leſſer Aſia, for ſo Xenophon ſaith, Cyrus taking with him a ſmall company of men united the Medes voluntarily unto him, and ſubdued the Syrians, Aſſyrians, Arabians, Cappadocians, the Phrygians, Lydians, Carians, Phœnicians and Babylonians. He alſo injoyed the Bactrians and the Indies of the Silicians, the Sacrians and Paphlagonians, and the Mariandines, and very many Nations more, the names whereof are not eaſily to be counted; in a a word, he ſtruck ſuch a terrour into all Nations by his name, that to gratifie him, they deſired to bee ruled according to his pleaſure; thus Xenophon Kimtri following another copy in which ש hath a prick in the left horn, firſt rendred it ſide, and ſo N. Tr. On one ſide, but enough hath been ſaid upon this to ſhew the right rendring and ſenſe: that of the vulgar Latine having no veriſimilitude, becauſe the ſcope of the Viſion is, not to ſhew to whom the Perſian ſtood in any part, but the greatneſſe of his Dominion, and how many Kingdomes he united into one. But Lyra who followeth the vulgar, contrary to that which hath been ſaid, will have the Perſian repreſented by a Bear; becauſe hee was not ſo fierce, but milder towards the Jews then Nebuchadnezzar; forſomuch as by him they were delivered. But becauſe there is nothing more wood then a Bear, which ſpareth none, as a Lion ſometime doth, it is to be held, whatſoever favour Cyrus thus repreſented ſhewed to the Iews, it was not the ſcope of this Viſion in any part to ſet it forth, but only his riſing greatneſſe, and manifold devouring, as it were of men and countries by bringing them under. For the next words; whereas Lyra according to the vulgar Latine hath it; three orders were in his mouth; in the next words Theodot. three ſides, Theodor. three wings, Vatablus tres boli, of ſo uncertain ſignification is the word עלעין, comming of עלע to lick, follow we the N. Tr. and then by three ribs in his mouth, either three kingdomes are ſet forth, the Perſian, Median, and Babylonian; now all in the power of Cyrus, or three parts of the world, Eaſt, Weſt, and South, as ſome ſay, or rather Eaſt, South and North; as others, the Eaſt ſubdued by Cyrus, the South by Cambyſes, wherein ſtood Egypt and Lybia, the North by Darius Hyſtaſpis, where the Scythians were. This Bear is bidden eat much fleſh, to ſhew that the deſtructions made by him in the world were by Gods appointment, and not at his own will, and for this end it is alſo ſaid of the next, that Dominion was given to it.

V. 6. Another like a Leopard, which had upon his back four wings of a Fowl, and four heads and dominion was given unto it. Hereby the third Monarchy of Alexander and the Grecians was repreſented. Touching the Leopard ſome thinke that it is all one with the Panther, as Ariſtotle, Pliny, Dioſcor. Gaza, but Solinus, that the Panther and Leopard are two kinds. It is rather to be held, that it is one kind onely differing in the ſex, Pardus the Leopard being the he, and the Panthera the ſhee. This beaſt was moſt aptly ſhewed to ſet forth Alexander, becauſe it is of divers colours intermingled all over the body, ſo Alexander had in him a mixture of vertues and vices. 2. It is moſt ſwift of foot and greedy of bloud, ſo was Alexander, in ſo ſhort a time ſubduing all the world, (i.e.) in 12. yeares. 3. It is delighted in wine very much; in ſomuch as that by wine, ſet as a bait to take it, he cometh and maketh himſelf drunken therewith, and ſo taken; and to drinking of wine was never any man more addicted then Alexander, and he finally periſhed thereby. 4. It is proud and deſpiſeth other beaſts, as not comparable to it ſelf, whereupon Plutarch telleth of a contention betwixt the Panther and the Fox, to which the Panther ſpake diſdainfully for the baſe colour, of which the Fox was: but the Fox replyed, that beauty which thou haſt in thy body I have in my minde, and that it is better to have wit and ſubtlety then a fair skin; ſo Alexander was very proud vaunting himſelfe as the ſon not of a man, but of God, of Iupiter. And this Leopard hath four four wings and four heads; by the wings his celerity in running or flying over the world to ſubdue, being further noted, and by the four wings and heads the diviſion of his Empire amongſt four when hee was dead, Seleucus, Ptolemy, Philip and Antigonus: the firſt being King of Syria, the ſecond of Egypt, the third of Macedonia, the fourth of Aſia minor.

Ariſtotle.
Pliny, &c.

Plutarch. in Moral.

V. 7. A fourth beaſt terrible and ſtrong and it had great iron teeth, &c. it was diverſe from all the beaſts that were before it, and it had ten horns, I conſidered the hornes and there came up among them another little horn, and three of the firſt horns were pluckt up by the roots before it. By this beaſt differing from all the reſt, the Ancients generally underſtand the Roman Empire, which was ſo diverſly ruled, ſometime by Tribunes of the people, ſometime by Conſuls, by Dictatours, by the Triumviri, and by Emperours, and therefore it was unlike to any of the kingdomes before going, and is ſet forth as more terrible for the great iron teeth and horns, and the feet ſtamping all under foot, by ſubjecting them to tribute in all countries and Nations. For which cauſe this Monarchy could not by any beaſt be repreſented, but onely be deſcribed, as a monſter amongſt beaſts. So that the Rabbins, who hold it to have been a wilde boar, of which the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, ſaying, the wild boar out of the wood hath devoured it, were more bold to vent their own phantaſies then any thing near the truth. But theſe that are for the Monarchy of Romans amongſt the Ancients meant by this beaſt are all for the little hornes ſetting forth Antichriſt, and that not already come, but to come hereafter towards the end of the world, when the Roman Monarchy ſhall be in the hands of ten Kings. For then, ſay they, ſhall one baſe man of obſcure beginning ariſe; as a little horn, but grow to that ſtrength, that three Kings ſhall be ſoon overcome by him, the King of Egypt, of Lybia and Ethiopia, which the other ſeven ſeeing ſhall ſoon ſubmit themſelves unto him, and he ſhall perſecute unto the death all ſuch as refuſe to obey him. Thus Ierome who is commonly followed by others, but he alſo ſaith, that Porphyrius a great enemy to the Chriſtian religion, and to this Book in particular, as hath been before ſaid, holdeth that the Seleucidan kingdome is by this fourth beaſt ſet forth, which in cruelty towards the Jewes exceeded all the kingdomes before mentioned, and that his ten hornes were ten kings reigning therein, and the little horn Antiochus Epiphanes, who raged moſt, for a time, and times, and half a time, that is three yeares and an half, as after followeth. But this opinion, beſides the infamy of the Authour that broached it, is manifeſtly againſt all circumſtances of the Viſion. 1. Of the diſtinction made between this and the three former beaſts, which as all agree, ſet forth the three Monarchies before ſpoken of, in ſetting forth the laſt, of which four wings and four faces are ſpoken of, to foreſhew the diviſion of that Monarchy after Alexanders death into four, of which the Seleucidan kingdome was one, . and therefore in reaſon cannot be repreſented again in this beaſt, it being already done withall, ſo much as the Lord was pleaſed to make known in this place. Therefore the kingdome repreſented here muſt be another ariſing up after the third. Again, the judgement next following after this, whereby the Dominion of this horn is not onely taken away, but alſo given to the Saints for ever, verſ. 26.27. ſheweth, that the kingdome here ſpoken of being deſtroyed, the Saints ſhould reign in all parts under the whole heaven for ever, which cannot be applyed to the time of Judas Machab. and the Jews who flouriſhed indeed for a time, but neither had Dominion all over the world, but a little part thereof, when their Dominion was greateſt, neither was it ſo long laſting. And therefore this muſt needs be underſtood of the Dominion of Chriſt by his Word and Spirit, ſubduing all Countries and Nations in the time of the Goſpell, which was long after Antiochus Epiphanes, and by conſequence this fourth kingdome muſt be the Roman, in the time whereof the Son of man ſpoken of, v.31,14. cometh to his Dominion, as was partly touched upon before chap. 2. as being repreſented by the ſtone cut out of the mountaine without hands, and becomming a kingdome filling the whole earth, where alſo I have proved by the circumſtance of time, in the dayes of theſe Kings, &c. that the fourth kingdome cannot be any other but the Roman. Yet both Junius and Polanus, and ſome others of ours follow Porphyrius herein. I yet for my part ſhall take leave to preferre Ierome before Porphyrius, holding that not the Seleucidan but the Roman Monarchy is by this fourth beaſt prefigured. For ſo likewiſe both Revel. 13. and chap. 17. it is ſhewed as a beaſt having ten hornes, and as here, verſ. 24. ſo there the hornes are ſaid to be kings for their great ſtrength to goar and to bear down others, and as here, verſ. 25. his time is ſaid to be a time and times and halfe a time, ſo there, or 42 months, or 1260 dayes, which are all one. And as here a little horn ſpringeth up after the tenth; ſo there, after the beaſt with ten horns, another beaſt comes up, Revel. 13. 11. But although I herein agree with antiquity, both that the Roman Empire is ſet forth by this beaſt with ten horns of which I have alſo ſaid enough upon Revel. 17. ſhewing what ten kings theſe horns were, and that the little horn was Antichriſt, who was to ariſe during the time of this Empire, yet whereas they ſay, that Antichriſt is yet to come towards the end of the world, and that he ſhall when he cometh, reign but three yeares and an half: in this I cannot ſubſcribe, but contrariwiſe hold, that Antichriſt is come, and is not one man but a ſucceſſion of V. 8. men in the Roman State, ruling not by force at the firſt, but by flattery and falſe perſwaſions, for which it is ſaid, that he had eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth ſpeaking great things: for hee ſeeth according to the carnall reaſon of a man, whereby hee conceiveth himſelf (becauſe he is Saint Peters ſucceſſor, who had the government of Chriſts Church committed unto him) to be as high Prieſt, and Lord over all Churches and Churchmen ſpeaking to this purpoſe moſt magnifically of himſelfe, as Chriſts vicar being over all powers not onely ſpirituall, but temporall, it being in him to diſpoſe of the kingdomes of the world as hee pleaſeth, putting down one and ſetting up another. And therefore this horn little at the firſt muſt needs be the Pope of Rome, to whom theſe things doe moſt aptly agree. Whereof to ſpeak more at large here I forbear, becauſe I have proved this already upon Revel. 13. and 17. And verſ. 25. here following makes it yet plainer, ſaying, Hee ſhall change times and Laws, and they ſhall be given into his hand for a time, and times, and halfe a time: becauſe hee hath changed times by ſetting up dayes of ceſſation from work to the honour of his imagined Saints, and diſpenſeth with Gods Laws, and makes Decretals as Laws. And hee is ſaid to wear out the Saints, for ſo the Pope hath done both by perſecution ſtirred up againſt ſuch as oppoſe his proceedings, and by corrupting the world with falſe doctrine, ſo that the Churches every where under him are worn out from being a Communion of Saints to become Conventicles of blind ſuperſtitious perſons. Laſtly, he is ſaid to be divers from the ten Kings mentioned before, therefore no ſecular king, but another kind of man; as the Pope is yet of no leſſe but greater Dominion, and he ſubdueth three Kings, verſ. 24. which I know not how better to underſtand then of three put downe at ſeverall times by the Popes, viz. Chilperick, the French king, and Pipin and his ſon Charles ſet up. Frederick the Emperour, his ſon Rodulphus being ſet up, and king Iohn of England, whom of a free king he made to him a tributary. For his ſpeaking of great words againſt the moſt high, the ſpeeches of the Pope before commemorated were ſuch in intituling himſelfe vice-deus, and doing, as if he had ſaid By me Kings reign, for this is againſt the moſt high as being derogatory to Gods ſole ſupremacy over all. And for three kingdomes comming under him, it may be conſidered, whether they be not three of the mightyeſt in Europe, Spain, Germany and France; or whether this prefigured not his Triple Crown. For the time, and times, and half a time; that is, as Ierome reſolveth it, a yeare, two yeares and halfe a year; for the ſecond word is a duall number, in dayes 1260. which counting a day for a year, as hath beene done upon Revel. make ſo many yeares, this ſheweth, that it cannot be underſtood of any one, but a ſucceſſion of men, as was before ſaid.

V. 9. I beheld till the Thrones were caſt downe and the ancient of dayes did ſit. Whoſe garment was white as ſnow and his haire as wooll, and his throne was like a fiery flame, and his wheeles as burning fire. The thrones here ſpoken of were the Thrones of the ten kings before going, whoſe authority and power hereby was ſhewed to be ended, all kingdomes now comming to be the Lords, who alone ſitteth and reigneth after this for ever: and that Chriſt is hereby meant, is ſhewed, verſ. 13. ſaying, One like the Son of man came with the clouds, and came V. 13.

to the ancient of dayes, and to him was given Dominion and glory, and a kingdome, never V. 14. to have end. The vulgar, till the thrones were ſet, for theſe words, till the thrones were caſt downe; whereupon Lyra, there ſhall not onely be one, but more thrones Lyra. at the day of judgement, becauſe it is ſaid, yee ſhall ſit upon twelve thrones and judge the twelve tribes of Iſrael; but neither is the day of judgement here ſet forth, nor will the word רמה ſignifying projicere, to caſt downe, beare that tranſlation. Hereby then is meant the overthrowing of earthly kingdoms, as was ſaid before. For the pure white garments and hair here ſpoken of, they ſerved, as Polanus hath it, to ſet forth his purity and holyneſſe, and un- Polanus.
ſpotted juſtice: whereunto adde alſo his glory, becauſe when Chriſt ſhewed Matth. 27. himſelfe in his glory, his garments are ſaid to be white as ſnow, and in Revel. 3. promiſing heavenly glory to ſome in Sardis the ſpirit ſaith, they ſhall walke with mee in white.

Here by the ancient of dayes Lyra underſtandeth Chriſt in his Divinity, Lyra. and by the ſonne of man brought unto him, verſ, 13. Chriſt in his humanity, but Polanus by the firſt God the Father, and God the Son incarnate by the ſecond. I rather prefer Lyra, becauſe God the Father hath never taken unto him any ſimilitude, but the Son as a præludium of his incarnation, and Ezek. 1. where one ſitting upon a Throne above the Cherubims appeared like the Son of man, it was undoubtedly God the Son; and here is a repreſentation of a Judge, which Office is, by the Father deputed to the Son.
There is ſomewhat ſaid like unto this, Revel. 20. 12. where the proceedings at the day of judgement are ſet forth, and as there, ſo here the opening of the Bookes are ſpoken of, but hereby is nothing elſe meant, but that it ſhould be juſtly proceeded againſt the kings before ſpoken of, as when a Judge now goeth according to plain evidence in condemning malefactours. His Throne like a fiery flame, and his wheeles. All things about this Judge appeared fiery, becauſe fire is moſt terrible, and the force thereof irreſiſtible, and the torments of thoſe that ſuffer by fire extream; for which alſo it is ſaid, Our God is a con- Heb. 12. 29. ſuming fire, and verſ. 10. a fiery ſtream iſſued from before him: which ſhould make all the wicked to tremble and turn from their wickedneſſe, and to ſeek Note. for mercy and reconciliation with God, that from fiery hee may turn to them a refrigeration and cooling, as to Ananias, Azarias and Miſael in the fiery furnace. By wheeles alſo is this Judge ſet forth in his judgements, as Ezek. 1. for his celerity in executing them, ſo that when he cometh in judgement a-gainſt any people, he in a ſhort time overrunneth all places therewith. Hee is indeed long before hee cometh to judge the wicked, becauſe he would have them turn to him by repentance, but when he ſetteth forth, hee cometh for the greater deſtruction of the obſtinate moſt ſwiftly, that none may ſet upon repenting afterwards for this ſtill hardening their hearts, but take time to turne now for fear of ſudden deſtruction to come without any time of repentance granted. But it may here be demanded, if the laſt jndgement bee not ſet forth in this place, why doth the Judge appeare ſitting more now then any other time? Sol. Becauſe the caſting down of the Thrones here ſpoken of being ſo great and extenſive, even over all the world which had beene ſuffered to ſtand ſo long to the extreame afflicting and doing all manner of violence and wrong to Gods people, was as it were a ſolemn keeping of Aſſizes all over the world, the Judges now comming on to his Throne, where hee might not ſeem before to have beene, becauſe not ſo remarkably. For whileſt Note. the wicked and bloud thirſty goe on age after age, and if one beaſt bee put downe, another ariſeth no leſſe obnoxious to the Church and people of God, how doth the Lord ſhew himſelfe to ſit upon the Throne that judgeth righte-ouſly? But when he cometh with his judgments upon Thrones, and thoſe the greateſt in the world, over turning them, and not ceaſing to proceed thus till hee hath put down all Dominion and power adverſe to him; yea ſpirituall powers ruling by idolatry and ſuperſtition, as hee did in the time of the Goſpell, then he ſheweth himſelfe indeed to ſit, as is here ſaid. If it bee thought that this repreſentation of God in a likeneſſe is a ground for us to make an image of him in like manner, it is a diabolicall deceit to intangle men unawares in the foul ſinne of idolatry. For thus the devill hath bewitched heathen people, drawing them to make images of falſe gods, that in them the devill might be worſhipped; as the Apoſtle teacheth, ſaying, an idoll is nothing, but what the heathen offer, they offer to devils. And therefore ſuch of the people of God, as repreſent God by an image, have not learned ſo to do from this or any other place of Scripture, but from the deceiver the devill. For againſt making of the image of God expreſſe charge is given, *Deut.*4.15. from the circumſtance of time, when the Law was given for the regulating of all our actions: for then ſaith he, ye ſaw no likeneſs, therefore take heed, that ye corrupt not your ſelves by making any image. And the ſcope of this place is not to teach any thing contrary, but that the juſt proceeding of the Almighty, and his terribleneſſe againſt the wicked being ſhewed, although he may long ſuffer them; all men might learn to fear before him, & therefore not preſume to repreſent him by an Image, which is ſo greatly derogatory to his infinite glory, wherewith he filleth the world, and therefore is not to be thought repreſentable by any ſimilitude as Eſay reaſoneth. For the infinite multitude of Angels here ſaid to ſtand before him, and to miniſter unto him; hereby both his glory and power is more ſet forth, as of the greateſt Potentate in the world, whoſe glory is a guard of thouſands about him, dayly attending upon him, & ready to be ſent out at his wil. But whereas ſuch an one hath men, the Lord hath Angels, and a far greater company, then all the Potentates of the earth; and their Office is double, 1. Of ſome to miniſter unto him by praiſing him continually, as Eſay 6. 2. Of others ſtanding to receive inſtructions to goe forth to execute his will in miniſtring to ſuch as ſhall inherit eternall life, and ſtriking the wicked in fighting Gods battels with his ſervants, as in Joſhua his time, and in killing his enemies; as the hoaſt of Sennacherib, and the firſt born of Egypt. Oh the ſafety then of the righteous, how ſhould any harm come unto them, who have ſuch to attend upon them, and to pitch their tents about them, and to bear them in their hands, and contrariwiſe the dangerous caſe of the wicked, againſt whom ſuch warriours are ſent out; which way ſhall they eſcape, or how ſhall they be able to ſtand againſt their force?

Note no image of God to be made.

V. 11. V. 12. I beheld till the beaſts were ſlaine, &c. for the reſt of the beaſts their Dominion was taken away, but their lives were prolonged for a ſeaſon and time. By the Beaſt here underſtand the Antichriſt before ſpoken of, whoſe end ſhall be to be ſlain and caſt into the fire of hell, as is ſhewed in *Revel.*17. For the reſt of the beaſts and the prolonging of their lives for a time and time, or time and ſeaſon, it is ſpoken, ſaith Lyra, of perſecuters both under the Old and New Teſtament, who ſhould bee truculent and ſavage alwayes as beaſts towards the people of God, doing them what hurt they can, even when they have no power, if not openly, yet ſecretly. And this we in England have found to be true by experience, even ſince the beaſt of Rome had his Dominion here taken from him: for his members have at ſundry times ſtill beene found undermining this State by their plots and conſpiracies, ſeeking the overthrow hereof. Thus thoſe beaſts before ſpoken of falling from their Dominion yet live in their ſeed, Antichriſtian and Heatheniſh men, of which laſt ſort the Mahumetans and other Pagans and barbarous people are under the New Teſtament: and the Nations near about the Jews were under the Old, whoſe ſtrength was often broken, but ſtill they lived and bare in their mindes the ſame hatred, putting them on to doe the faithfull what miſchiefe they could. But the comfort is, that this ſhould be but for a time, becauſe that before the end of the world, there ſhall be none living who ſhall be either Antichriſtian or Heatheniſh any more, but as farre as pertaines to outward profeſſion, ſpeaking all one language, whether they be Aſſyrians or Egyptians, or Barbarians of any other Nations, the wickedneſſe that ſhall abound at Chriſts ſecond coming, being in the evil manners of men, and not in the diverſity of their Gods as formerly, and that wickedneſſe in this ſort ſhall be the wickedneſſe againſt which the Lord ſhall come in flaming fire is apparent from that prediction of his, As in the dayes of Noah they ate, they drank, &c. and the floud came, ſo ſhall it bee when the Son of man cometh. Luk. 17. 27.

Polanus. Polanus who adhereth to that interpretation of the Seleucidan kingdome meant by the fourth beaſt, ſaith that nothing elſe is here to be underſtood, but that although the Dominion were taken away from the three former beaſts, yet they lived as it were, till that by the Romans all of them together with the fourth were quite overthrowne, and this time of their abiding ſtill after their overthrow is expreſſed by theſe words, a ſet time and a time, as the originall text ſignifieth. But how they can in this ſenſe be ſaid to live ſtill, let the judicious Reader judge, ſith there was none other ſubduing of the three kingdomes by the Romans, then of one by another, ſo that if for the remaining of ſuch peoples ſtill they be ſaid to live, they lived no leſſe after the Romans conqueſt, then before, and if it ſhould be ſo taken, as he would have it, which be the two times of their living here ſpoken of?

V. 18. Calvin. Junius. But the Saints of the moſt High ſhall take the kingdome and poſſeſſe it for ever, even for ever and ever. Calvin, Junius, and Polanus, They ſhall take the kingdome of the Saints, underſtanding this as an abridgement of that which every one of theſe four beaſts did againſt the people of God the Jews, each one in his time ſubdued and brought under the kingdome of Judea. And whereas the laſt words make againſt this, for ever, yea for ever and ever: Polanus. Polanus ſaith, that hereby is meant for many ages, all the time that the Babylonians held it, viz. 70. yeares, all the time of the Perſians 207. all the time of Alexander and his ſucceſſours being 155 yeares. But both Septuagint and vulgar and Vatablus agree with the New Tranſlation, and the originall will well bear it, and reaſon telleth us, that it muſt needs be ſo rendred, becauſe whatſoever is ſaid of the laſt words to make them agree to that expoſition, they can be taken no otherwiſe then as ſetting forth Eternity, as verſ. 14. in ſpeaking of Chriſts kingdome hee ſaith, that it ſhall be everlaſting, uſing the ſame word that is uſed here עולם, which is here trebled for our greater aſſurance, that it is meant world without end; and it is no way probable, that the Angell of God would be ſo contradictory to himſelfe, as to ſay for ever and ever, but meaning certaine ages, when as in the viſions before it was ſhewed, and plainly declared that the Dominion of all thoſe ſhould ceaſe, the word עולם being never uſed ſpeaking of ſuch a continuance as the end thereof is foretold, but onely in caſe that no ſuch thing is ſpoken, but when עולם is doubled, it is alwayes ſo ſpoken to ſet forth everlaſting, and without all end, and it is rather to be held that the Saints poſſeſſion of a kingdome for ever is here ſet forth, becauſe ſo theſe words are conſonant with thoſe verſe 14. where the head of all the Saints is ſaid to have received an everlaſting Dominion: Now the Saints are alſo ſaid to take it together with him, who are his members and cannot alwayes be ſeparated from their head, but muſt come alſo to the kingdom by him prepared for them, as he foretold, Joh. 4. being then made one with him, not only by faith, as here, but in glory and Dominion. Laſtly, it were very unadviſed to put out ſo manifeſt a light of the Saints future moſt glorious eſtate in Heaven, ſet up in the Old Teſtament, the like unto which is ſcarce therein to be found againe any where, for of this kingdome, I doubt not, but that this paſſage is to be underſtood. And in regard of this, it is that Chriſt biddeth his little flock not to feare, for it is your Fathers will, ſaith he, to give you a Kingdome, and hereby we learn alſo who they be that ſhall poſſeſſe it, viz. none but Saints Note. of the moſt High, not Saints canonized by the Pope; or the wicked Chriſtian, or he that vaunteth himſelfe as a Saint for his pretending great Holineſſe, but hee that is holy as God is holy in all holineſſe of converſation. 1 Pet. 3. For all ſuch, and ſuch alone, here is comfort enough againſt all wordly debaſement and ſufferings, as to the heire of a kingdome, who although he goeth through much hardſhip is ſure after a ſhort time to come to his Fathers kingdom, yea more, becauſe every kingdom of this world is temporall, this is eternall.

V. 21. I beheld and the ſame horn made warre with the Saints and prevailed againſt them, untill the ancient of dayes came and judgement given to the Saints, and the time came that the Saints poſſeſſed the Kingdomes. See the like unto this Revel. 13. 7. which proveth the ſame to be ſet forth here, that is there, viz. that the Saints here ſpoken of are Chriſtians, and the little horn the ſame Antichriſt, and as was before ſaid, before that the kingdome of the Saints ſpoken of before was not taken by the former Beaſts or Kings, but that the Saints took the kingdom, which endureth for ever, againſt thoſe that would have all this underſtood Polanus. of thingsdone of old, and not in the time of the Goſpell. Yet Polanus being overcome by the evidence of truth, ſeeing the words can be tranſlated no otherwiſe, but of ſetting forth the Saints taking of the kingdome, acknowledgeth this to be meant of the kingdome, which they injoy in common with Chriſt, howſoever he applyeth the words before going to Antiochus and the Jews, againſt whom hee made warre and prevailed untill the appointed time: And by this word of the appointed time he ſeeketh to evade that which is brought againſt his interpretation, by ſaying, that the foure beaſts held the kingdome of the Saints, till this appointed time, but then it was above ordered, that the Saints ſhould come to the kingdome. How ſolid this is I referre to the judgement of others, to me it ſeemeth plaine, that the Saints taking of the kingdome here ſpoken of followeth not ſo long a time after Antiochus Epiphanes, as the day of judgement, when the Saints come to that everlaſting kingdome, but ſoone after the warre, wherein the Beaſt overcame them, but now in fine the Beaſt being deſtroyed, they come to enter, as it were upon that kingdome, becauſe into a more joyfull and peaceable condition in this world, being ſhortly after to be poſſeſſed of it actually for ever. And the ſetting of this forth here immediately after that ſuffering implyeth, that no ſuch long time of perſecution, as followed under the Roman Monarchy, could come between, but that it was therein ſtirred up by another beaſt or the little horn here ſpoken of ſpringing up, which was the Papacy.

V. 23. The fourth beaſt &c. ſhall devoure the whole earth; this againe confirmeth, that not the Seleucidan kingdome, but the Roman Monarchy is hereby meant, because that never extended ſo farre, but to a ſmall part of the earth, the Romans V. 24. did. For the ten horns ſaid to be ten kings, I have ſhewed who moſt probably they were, Revel. 17. qu. 3. and of the three falling before the little horn, ſee before, verſ. 8. and of his power to be a time and times and halfe a V. 27. time. Ver.27. And the dominion and kingdome under the whole heaven ſhall be given to the Saints of the moſt High, and all kingdomes ſhall obey him. Hereby is ſhewed how that the Pope being deſtroyed, all kingdomes ſhall be united under one head Chriſt Jeſus, as was touched before, and that no terreſtriall Potentate ſhould ariſe any more to perſecute Chriſtians; but the Church ſhall continue in peace, till the Saints at the laſt day be taken up and poſſeſſe the kingdome of heaven in everlaſting peace and joy. But it cannot hence bee inferred that Countries and Nations ſhall after this be no more governed by Note. kings, no king in any place reigning any more, but one onely, that is,
Of Monarchical government Chriſt Jeſus, all Nations being now governed as free States to the end of the world. For all kingdomes be the Lords, though under a Monarchicall government, when they are governed according to his will, as appeareth 1 Sam.12.12. by that ſaying of Samuel, Yee ſaid a King ſhall reign over us, when the Lord was your king, they were under a Monarchicall government, and yet he ſaith, that then the Lord was their King, and ſo hee was in Davids time, who ſaith, the Lord is King, and the Lord reigneth, and calleth him his King and his God, whereby it appeareth that he is King not only by his coercive power ſecretly ruling and ſwaying all things to his owne ends, making the greateſt Kings to ſerve his providence, but alſo by his ſpirit ruling as Supream amongſt thoſe, that willingly ſubmit to his ordinances. Therefore Monarchy is conſiſtent with Chriſts Univerſal Monarchy, when al Monarchies do homage to him, and reign under him and for him, as in a large Empire many Kings in divers places

and parts thereof are not prejudiciall to the ſoveraingty of that Emperour, but his glory is hereby the more magnified.

V. 28. Hitherto the end of the matter, this is added for a concluſion of this matter to prevent all curious inquiring after ſuch things, as God hath not beene pleaſed to reveal: for wee muſt be wiſe only according to that which is written, and not pry into other ſecrets of the Lord. As for me Daniel, my thoughts were troubled in mee, my countenance was changed, and I kept the matter in my heart, that is, knowing hereby; that moſt ſad things ſhould befall the Church of God under theſe Monarchies, I was accordingly affected with griefe, and Note. this appeared in the paleneſſe of my face, Daniel being herein propounded as a pattern to us, that we may not be unaffected with the ſufferings of Gods people, againſt which it is declaimed, Amos 6. 6. and as he, ſo wee muſt keepe in our hearts the words of God, as wee deſire, that our hearing of them Pſal.147.43. may not be vaine, ſo likewiſe Mary did, and who ſo is wiſe will ponder theſe things.

CHAP. VIII.

HEre Daniel ſetteth forth another viſion, which hee had two yeares after the former of the four Monarchies of the world, in the third yeere of Belſhazzar the King of Babylon, and therefore before that the Medes and Perſians had attained unto it. He had all four very briefly repreſented unto it. He had all four very briefly repreſented unto it. He had all four very briefly repreſented unto him in the former chapter, but now the Lord declareth more at large the proceeding of two of them in particular, viz. of the kingdome of the Medes and Perſians and of the Grecians, that his people might fully underſtand, what ſhould be done both under the one and the other, and ſo it might appeare how all things paſt, preſent and to come are preſent unto God, and that the warres betwixt kingdome and kingdome, and prevailings at all times are ordered by his providence, and that one cannot ſubdue another, or ſtirre up any perſecution againſt the people of God, but according to his will ſecretly working in all the tranſactions of men. In this chapter the Prophet ſpeaks no more in the Caldee tongue, as in the ſeventh, Polanus. but in the Hebrew, becauſe as Polanus conjectureth, the Lord had in ſetting forth theſe things reſpect unto his Church in Judea, as for whoſe comfort they were written, and not of Pagans and Infidels, yet becauſe it ſeemed good unto him by his predictions to ſhew to the Caldeans ſomething, whereby they might be convinced, that hee onely was the true God, from whom nothing to come lay hid, and that theirs who could not doe this, were falſe gods and vain idols, hee would have the firſt Viſion chap. 7. written in the Caldee tongue, whereby they might have a taſt of his Omniſcience, and that all things to come to the end of the world were open and manifeſt unto him, becauſe in that the principall occurrences of all times and ages to the day of judgement are revealed, which is alſo another ſtrong argument to prove, that the fourth kingdome there ſpoken of was the Roman, howſoever touching the little horn ſomething like unto Antichriſts perſecution is hereby ſhewed to have beene done by a King ariſing out of the Grecian Kingdome in this chapter, againſt the old Church of God, which becauſe it was as materiall for the Jews then to know, as for us Chriſtians the proceedings of Antichriſt; God vouchſafed to ſhew unto Daniel another Viſion here repreſenting the tragicall acts that by Antiochus Epiphanes ſhould then be done. For betwixt the Kingdome there ſpoken of, out of which ſprung the little horn, and this here ſpoken of there is this plain difference made, that was a fourth beaſt, not one ſpringing out of the third, and had ten horns, this ſpringeth out of the Goat, and conſiſteth but of four horns, and out of one of theſe ſpringeth the little horn, that afterwards grew ſo great, whereas the little horn there is ſaid to have come up amongſt the ten horns. For the place where Daniel had this Viſion, at Shuſhan the palace by V. 2.

the river Vlai. This Shuſan, from whence the Palace here ſpoken of had the name, was one of the chief Cities of Perſia, whereof it was ſpoken before Eſther 1.5. But how could Daniel, who was a captive in Babylon at this time, it be-Polanus. ing in the reign of Belſhazzar, be in Shuſhan? Polanus ſaith, that hee was there onely in ſpirit, about the proving of which he uſeth divers arguments, but forſomuch as Daniel ſpeaketh of no ſuch manner of being there, but ſaith plainly, I was in the palace of Shuſhan, it is rather to be held, that hee was there indeed, being carryed miraculouſly thither by the Spirit of God, as Ezekiel had been by the lock of his head to the Temple at Jeruſalem from the land of the Caldees, and as the ſpirit took up Elijah ſometime and carryed him to remote places, ſo that Ahab, who ſought to deſtroy him could no where finde him. For all arguments brought to prove, that Daniel that was not really now in Perſia, (becauſe ſo hee ſhould have made himſelfe obnoxi-ous to the King of Babylon at his return, and he ſhould have done againſt his duty, it being the known will of God, that the Jews ſhould dwell where they were, till the 70 yeares expired, and be ſubject to the King of Babylon, and pray for the peace of that Kingdome) fall to the ground, ſith if by the Spirit hee were carryed thither to ſee theſe viſions, and back again, he did nothing againſt his fidelity to the Babylonian King, or which had been by the Lord for-bidden the Jews in generall, no more then Ezekiel, who before had been likewiſe carryed to Jeruſalem, or Jeremiah, who being the ſubject of the King of Iudah, when according to the will of God he went to Babylon to hide a girdle by the river Euphrates, for from generall rules exception of particulars is ever to be underſtood, all are to do ſo, unleſſe God ſpecially ordereth it touching ſome particular perſons otherwiſe. And an argument to prove him not to have been in Caldea now, may be drawne from his change of the language wherein hee writeth, not in the Caldean tongue as hee had done before from chap. 2.4. to the end of the ſeventh. But not to contend about a matter of ſo ſmall moment, becauſe divers other Expoſitours ſay the ſame with Hieron. Polanus herein, I will yet relate what Jerome ſaith hereupon. Suſis is the Metropolis of the region of the Elamites, and here as Joſephus ſaith, Daniel built an high Tower foureſquare of marble great and fair which continueth to this day, into which the Kings of the Medes and Perſians had their bones laid, and it looketh ſtill as if it were new built, and is kept by a Jew, a Prieſt.
By the gate Vlai, Symmach. by the mariſh Vlay, but Vatabl. and Pagnin. by the river Vlai, and this may ſuffice for the place where Daniel had this Viſion.
V. 3. Whereas verſ. 3. a Ram is ſeen by the river having two hornes, one higher then the other, and the higheſt came up laſt, the vulgar that rendred the word Porta or gate before here renders it mariſh, ſtood upon the mariſh; for the two hornes they are afterwards expounded by the Medes and Perſians, whoſe Kingdome is by this Ram ſet forth, as it was before by a Bear for its puſh-ing the Nations in all parts, Weſtward, Northward and Southward; the higher horn coming up laſt was Cyrus the Perſian, who after Darius his death came to be King alone, and was farre greater then Darius had ever beene.
V. 5. Verſ. 5. After the Ram a Goat appeared with one horn, who is afterwards plainly ſaid to be the firſt King of Grecia, and for his ſwift marching with his Forces into all parts and ſubduing them, hee is ſaid not to have touched the ground. But this great horn is broken off, when Alexander within 12 yeares dyed, and four come up in the roome of it, when Alexanders king-V. 8. dome was divided amongſt the foure Kings before ſpoken of, chap. 8. and V. 9. out of one of theſe came a little horn, which waxed exceeding great towards the South and the Eaſt, and the pleaſant land; the vulgar for the laſt words here hath Lyra. contra fortitudinem, expounded by Lyra of Judea and Ieruſalem, the fortitude whereof was in God Almighty. And he ſaith, that Antiochus Epiphanes ſet forth by this little horn, was little at the firſt becauſe hee was a pledge at Rome, and therefore in ſuch a condition, that no man would ever have thought of his riſing to ſuch greatneſſe, but hee being of the race of Seleucus one of the four Kings, viz. of the King of Syria, although divers generations after him,

him, for which it is ſaid, verſ.23. at the latter end of theſe kingdomes, eſcaped from Rome, and gat the kingdome of Syria from the Son of Seleucus Philometor who was his elder brother, and waxed great againſt the South, that is Egypt which he ſubdued, and the Eaſt, that is, ſome parts of Perſia, by him ſubdued alſo, and laſtly, Jeruſalem, of his prevailing againſt which, and cruelty exerciſed there, and inſolencies againſt God and his Laws, ſee 1 *Maccab.*1.&c. for the Heb. word rendred fortitude, it is צבר ſignifying decor or gloria, or capreolus; and therefore may beſt be rendred againſt the glory, yet hereby Jeruſalem is Ezek.20.6,15. underſtood, which was the glory of the whole earth. Of theſe things done by that Antiochus Aben Ezra writeth in Peruſh, and that he ſubdued Perſia as farre as Ptolemais, verſ. 10. And it waxed great to the hoaſt of Heaven, that is, as V. 20.
Polanus hath it, the Church militant upon earth, which is for warfare here Polanus. compared to an hoaſt, and is called the Hoaſt of Heaven, as the Church the Kingdom of Heaven commonly in the New Teſtament. He is alſo ſaid to throw downe the ſtars, because he ſubdued men of greateſt eminency, who in vertue ſhone as ſtars in Jeruſalem, and trampled them under his feet. For ſo the holy Miniſters of Chriſts Churches are compared to ſtars, *Revel.*1. he is ſaid alſo, verſ. 11. to have magnified himſelfe againſt the Prince of the Hoaſt, that V. 11. is, the Lord whoſe the heavenly hoaſts are, and that by oppoſing againſt him in four things. 1. In taking away the dayly Sacrifice, and making that to ceaſe which God commanded alwayes to be made. 2. In overthrowing his Tabernacle, that is, his Temple, which he turned into a Temple of Idols, cauſing ſwines fleſh to be ſacrificed there. 3. An hoaſt was given him againſt the V. 12. dayly Sacrifice becauſe of tranſgreſſion; Polanus, through defection, that is, by means of ſuch as for feare of his tyranny fell away and did after the manner of the heathen, eating and offering ſwines fleſh, and not circumciſing as God had commanded, of which ſort of perfidious perſons there were many amongſt the Jews, and the word here uſed is בפשע ſignifying ſo firſt and chiefly, for פשע is deficere to fail, or to fall away, and they who thus fell away, were a new hoaſt, as it were, raiſed up for the ſubduing of ſuch as ſtood in oppoſition to theſe abominations. 4. He caſt the truth to the ground, which he did by burning the Bookes of the Lawes of God wherein the true and right way of worſhiping him was ſet forth, and therefore this Holy Book being taken away, the truth was caſt downe, and notwithſtanding all this, Antiochus proſpered, and did a long time according to his wicded deſire, no contrary power hindering him, and this continued 2300 dayes, V. 14. and then the Sanctuary, it is ſaid, ſhall be cleanſed: This time, ſaith Lyra, is ſix Lyra. yeares, but it is to be underſtood, that this was from Antiochus his firſt taking of Ieruſalem, and entring into the Temple, but hee ſet not up an idoll in the Temple till three yeares after this. But let us look into the words. I heard one Saint ſpeaking, and another Saint ſaid to that certain ſaint who ſpake, How V. 13. long ſhall the viſion be concerning the dayly ſacrifice, and the tranſgreſſion of deſolation, &c. the word here rendred that certain Saint, Heb. is לפלמוני to the Palmoni in the margin of the New Tranſlation rendred the numberer of ſecrets, or the wonderfull numberer, but why it ſhould be rendred numberer of ſecrets, I ſee not, Polanus indeed compoundeth it of פלא wonderfull, and עלם occultare to hide or keep ſecret: but it cometh of פלא and מנה ſignifying to number, and therefore to render it rightly, it muſt be the wonderfull numberer, and this was Chriſt the Son of God, and the matter in hand implyeth, that it ſhould thus be reudered, becauſe the queſtion asked of him was about the number of the dayes of the deſolation of the Sanctuary, and the anſwer, verſ. 14. is V. 14. made accordingly 2300 dayes. Chriſt then was hee, of whom this queſtion was demanded, and hee is called Palmoni or the Wonderfull numberer, becauſe of his wonderfull wiſdome, whereby hee knew all things even to come, and ſo was able to ſet the very day, when that deſolation ſhould have an end, which no creature, no not any Saint, nor Angell in heaven, here meant by Saint, could doe. And well might he be ſet forth by numberer, becauſe he numbereth all things, the dayes of the tribulation of his Church in Revel.2.10. any particular place at any time, as appeareth, where it is ſaid, yee ſhall have tribulation ten dayes, hee alſo numbereth the Stars and calleth them by their names, and the hairs of our head are by him numbered. And by the name Wonderfull, as alſo Eſay 14.6. They ſhall call his name Wonderfull, becauſe hee was Wonderfull in his conception and birth, in that a Virgin conceived, man Ioh. 3. was to God united in him, hee that was infinite was contained in a womans wombe, and hee that is in heaven deſcended being ſtill in heaven, and wonderfull in his life and death. And it is to be noted that Chriſt is not onely ſet forth by the name Palmoni here, but alſo by the name Hamdabber, that ſpeaker, or as hee is called, *Ioh.*1. that word, to which we are to take heed, and in it to beleeve, that we might be ſaved. But why is the Angell ſo inquiſitive of the time, that this great judgement ſhould laſt? Anſw. Firſt to ſhew, that the Angels are affected with ſorrow, and do condole together with the Church of God ſuffering, and deſire a ſpeedy end of our miſeries. 2. That they are ſolicitous about the glory of God, who if he doth not ſoon ſtretch out his Almighty hand to deliver his Church conflicting with miſery under the hands of perſecuters, they will hereupon be ready to open their blaſphemous mouths, and ſay, either hee is not able to ſave his people, or that hee regards them not, and therefore it is no advantage to men to be his faithfull ſervants.

3. The Angell thus interpoſeth himſelfe to ask out of a deſire, which hee had to have ſomething anſwered for the comfort of Daniel and ſuch godly ones, as hee was, who could not but be greatly aſtoniſhed at the hearing of thoſe grievous judgements by an heathen King to come upon Gods people Note. and Sanctuary; and therefore the anſwer was made to Daniel, he ſaid unto me unto 2300 dayes. And of the Angels of God wee ſhould learn both to condole and to be ſolicitous for the Church of God in miſery in any place, and Rom.12.15. to ſtand for the comfort of one another, as it is ſaid, weep with thoſe that weep.

Now for the number of dayes, they are reckoned by Polanus to have been ſo many, that they make 6 yeares 3 moneths and 18 dayes. But chap.7.25. in ſpeaking of the time of the little hornes going on in his inſolent doings against Gods people, it is ſaid, He ſhall have power to doe a time and times, and the dividing of time; that is, but 3 yeares and an half. For reconciling of theſe hee taking both to be ſpoken of Antiochus Epiphanes ſaith, that there the time ſpoken of, was that of his ſetting up an Altar to offer ſwines fleſh in the Temple, from which time in the cleanſing of the Sanctuary by Iudas Maccabeus were onely 3 yeares and 10 dayes, but I ſee not there how the whole time from the deſolation made by Menelaus to that wicked King is alſo included, which, as Ioſephus ſaith, was Anno 141. of the Seleucidan Kingdome, but the proceedings of Antiochus here reckoned upon were not till Anno 142. the 6 moneth and the 6 day of the moneth, and an end was put to this judgement Anno 148. the 9 moneth the 25 day. But as hath been before ſaid, the little horn ſpoken of chap.7. and the time of the power thereof doth not ſet forth Antiochus, but Antichriſt riſing up in the Roman State, and therefore it is but loſt labour to ſeeke to reconcile the time here ſpoken of, and there, being ſo divers Hieron. one from the other. Ierome ſaith, that ſome will have Antiochus Epiphanes a type of Antichriſt, and to make him ſo, divide his time of raging againſt the Jewes and God thus, the whole time betwixt his entring the Sanctuary ſo proudly and robbing it, and Iudas his cleanſing it againe, began Anno 143.
1 Mac.1.20. and in the moneth Caſleu the 15 day An. 145. the abomination of deſolation Chap.4 54. was ſet up, and An. 148 the 25 day of the ſame moneth. Iudas cleanſed it. But 1 Mac,4.52. from 143 to 148. although we reckon the whole 143 yeares for one, and 365 dayes to the year the dayes will be but 2100. and out of theſe deduct what is miſſing in the laſt yeare of an whole yeare, viz. 3 moneths and 5 dayes, that is, 95 more, the whole time will be but 2095 dayes. Wherefore the time 1 Mac. 6.16. muſt not be thus reckoned, but An. 143. to An. 149. when this perſecuting Antiochus dyed, and the godly Jews who could not goe on in their continuall dayly ſacrifice before without fear, had not him any more to put them in danger

danger by raiſing more Forces againſt them. And if we pitch upon that 149 yeare of the Grecian Kingdome for the determination of this time, and begin An. 143. there will be 6 whole yeares and ſo many more dayes as will fully make up the whole number of dayes here mentioned, viz. 2300. that is 2090 as was ſaid before, in 6 years and 210 in 7 months out of the odde year. And this the words may well beare, then ſhall the Sanctuary be cleanſed, that is, within the compaſſe of this time, hee being cut off that polluted it, which muſt be before that they could be perfectly delivered to hold and ſacrifice in the Sanctuary going on conſtantly and continually without interruption, and for further confirming of this expoſition, ſee ver. 24. where his death is ſpoken of, as the full period of this viſion. As for the diſtinction of this whole time made again into two, that Antiochus in the time of his rage might be a type of Antichriſt fighting and reigning three yeares and an halfe, I ſee no cauſe, why it ſhould once come in queſtion here, becauſe here is no ſuch diſtinction made, howſoever the other part of his time may be for this myſtical end ſingled out, chap. 12. as may be ſeen there. Laſtly, before we goe from hence, it is to be noted that the Vulgar and Hebrew have not barely 2300 days, but, untill morning and evening 2300 dayes. In anſwering more fully to the queſtion about the continuall Sacrifice, which was morning and evening, and the meaning is, it ſhall be 2300 dayes compleat conſiſting of both parts, morning and evening, wherein the Sacrifice of the Lamb uſed to be offered from day to day continually, ſhall ceaſe according to the deſcription of a day, Gen. 1. So the Evening and the morning were the firſt day, &c. and this is the reaſon why hee counteth the time by dayes.

Exod. 29. 39.

V. 15, 16.
Note.

Then Daniel ſaith, that he heard the voice of a man between the bankes of Vlai calling to Gabriel and bidding him to make Daniel underſtand the Viſion before going, about which hee was ſollicitous, whence by the way note, that it is a ſtudy beſeeming the wiſeſt of men to ſtudy, what may be the meaning of heavenly viſions ſhewed by God unto his ſervants at any time, and he that is ſtudious hereabout and ſeeketh for reſolution, ſhall finde it, as this holy Prophet did, and of this I can alſo ſay the ſame by experience, eſpecially in my reading through the dark paſſages of Ezek. 40, 41. &c. almoſt without any guide but the Spirit of God, whoſe direction I aſſiduouſly ſought.

Note.
Polanus.

Now for this voyce of a man, it was moſt probably the voice of Chriſt called before Palmoni, and Gabriel an Angell, this being as Polanus noteth, the onely name whereby an Angell is called in all the Canonicall Scriptures, whereas other names are by ſome named, as Raphael, &c. They are but humane inventions, Gabriel is a fit name for any Angell of God, becauſe ſignifying the ſtrength or vertue of God. Whereas Michael is afterwards alſo ſpoken of, he is none other, but Chriſt the Archangell, that is, the Prince of Angels, ſo Polanus.

V. 18.

For theſe words, I fell into a deep ſleep upon the ground, the vulg. hath it, I fell down upon the ground, or to the ground, as being aſtoniſhed at the glorious preſence of the Angell, not for adoration, for then it would have been noted, as it is afterwards, and taxed, the word cometh of רדם which ſignifieth ſoporare, to make to ſleep, ſuch a ſleep as that of death, when a man through ſudden feare and paſſion coming upon him ſwouneth away and falleth down. Whereby we ſee, what the Majeſty of an Angell is, and how unable man is to bear his preſence, comming to ſpeak unto him, and how much leſſe then are we able to bear the preſence of God, that we may beleeve and repent at mens ſpeaking, whom God ſendeth, and praiſe him for condeſcending to our weakneſſe ſo far, as to teach us by one another, as we are able to bear.

Note.

V. 23.
Appia. in Alex.

At the latter time of their kingdome when tranſgreſſours are come to the full: a king of fierce countenance and underſtanding dark ſentences ſhall ſtand up. Heb. for in the latter time of their kingdome, it is in the after time, for the Seleucidan kingdom ſtood as Appian ſaith, 270 yeares, therefore Antiochus Epiphanes dying, An. 149. it continued ſtill 121 yeares more in which time many Kings reigned, as the ſaid Appian ſheweth, and who they were. For theſe words, when tranſgreſſors are come to the full, Heb. it is, in making full tranſgreſſors, that is, the tranſgreſſors amongſt the people of God becoming moſt notoriouſly wicked, wherein Jaſons falling 2 Mat.4.7.&c. away to the humouring of Antiochus Epiphanes in conforming the Jews to the Heathens, and after him of Menelaus, by whom many were drawn to the like, is propheſied of. And Antiochus is here further ſet forth to be a man of a fierce countenance and underſtanding dark ſentences, whereby the harſhneſſe of his manners is denoted: for he both procured his Fathers death by ſedition and his elder brothers Seleucus, and prevented his ſonnes injoyning the kingdom. For his under ſtanding of dark ſentences, hereby was meant his ſubtlety to deviſe means to circumvent others, as it is ſaid, Maccab. 1.3. that hee ſent his collectour of tributes to the Jews, who ſpake peaceable words unto them, but when hee was come into the City, committed all manner of violence againſt their goods and perſons, and his fierceneſſe not onely in attaining to that kingdome, but alſo all the time of his reign after appeared.

V. 24. And his power ſhall be mighty, but not by his own power: here it is foreſhewed, how hee ſhould come to this greatneſſe, even as the hiſtory ſaith, that hee did Appian.Alex. by the help of Eumenes and Attalus neighbour Kings come to the kingdome of Syria, unto which they inclined their mindes the rather, becauſe for ſome offences taken againſt them by the Romans they feared them. He alſo increaſed his ſtrength by the ambitious and prophane high Prieſts of the Jews, as hath been already touched according to 2 *Maccab.*4.7.&c.

V. 25. Hee ſhall be broken without hands. Having hitherto ſpoken of the wicked practiſes and intolerable pride of Antiochus, now he ſheweth, what his end ſhould be, viz. not by being cut off by a violent death in war, but by Gods juſt judgement ſeazing upon him, as he was well worthy. How this was fulfilled, ſee 2 Maccab. 9. hee had intollerable pangs in his body through a fall out of his Chariot, when hee haſtened in a great rage towards Ieruſalem, whereupon his inward parts putrefied and wormes bred, and an intolerable ſtench came from him, and ſo hee dyed in extream miſery, making vowes to God, if he would ſpare him, but Gods wrath would not now be pacified againe towards him. Note. Wherefore let none of how great power ſoever they be bear themſelves hereupon, but ſtill walk humbly before God, forſomuch as that the power, which is irreſiſtible by man, is ſtill ſubject to God, as this wretched tyrant before his death was made to acknowledge: but becauſe he did it not ſooner, that his acknowledgement was vain and bootleſſe unto him, that wee may learne to confeſſe our own weakneſſe and wickedneſſe before it be too late, that is, extremity of ſickneſſe forcing us hereunto, becauſe ſo wee may doubt whether wee ſhall be accepted or no, humble our ſelves what wee can, ſith the judgment of death is now begun to be executed, and ſo it is too late for us to repent, as when the great day of judgement of all the world cometh.

V. 26. Shut up the viſion, for it ſhall be for many dayes. After theſe things repreſented and expounded, the Lord would have Daniel keep them ſecret from the Caldees and other Heathens then living, as not concerning them, for which cauſe the language, wherein they were written, is alſo varyed from the Caldee, wherein the 7 chapter was written, to the Hebrew, intimating a concealing of them from them, and an imparting of them onely to the Church, that in all the changes and troubles that ſhould follow, ſhee might have whereupon to ſtay herſelfe and be comforted, as certainly knowne, that all things were by Note. the Divine providence moderated and her perſecutions, although moſt fierce and ſharp, ſhould ſoon have an end again, which ought alſo to be our comfort in the midſt of our greater ſufferings, who be the true faithfull people of God, and ſpeak and underſtand the Holy language. Whereas he ſaith, the viſion is for many dayes, the meaning is, from the firſt to the laſt extending to a long tract of time, viz. from the beginning of the reign of the Medes and Perſians to the time of the foreſaid Antiochus, and his death, that is, as Polanus caſts it up, about 300 yeares, at the end or near the end of which time the faithfull Jewes ſhould have ſpeciall uſe hereof, as being in it moſt concerned.

V. 27. Laſtly, Daniel ſheweth how this Viſion wrought upon him, for certain days hee was ſick and weak, ſo ſtricken was hee at the miſeries foreſeen to come to he Church, but none elſe knew of theſe things then, but hee concealed them as hee was commanded, when he was recovered from his ſickneſſe ariſing and going about the Kings buſineſſe, and making no ſhew in his countenance of any trouble or diſtraction of minde for any thing, that he had ſeene. From hence Polanus argueth again, that Daniel was all this while in Babylon, and not at Suſis before ſpoken of, but onely ſeemed to himſelfe to be there, but this cannot hence be proved, for the ſame divine power that carryed him out could ſuddenly bring him back again, as weak as he was, and then he, as if nothing elſe had befaln him in all the dayes, that he was abſent, went ſilently on about his buſineſſe again.

CHAP. IX.

IN this chapter Daniel ſheweth, how that in the firſt year of Darius the Median hee underſtanding by Jer. 25. that at the end of 70 yeares God would bring back again the captivity of his people from Babylon, ſet himſelf by prayer and faſting moſt earneſtly to ſeek unto God, now that this time was accompliſhed, for the fulfilling of this his gracious promiſe, and in this his devotion he continued confeſſing ſins, & the juſtice of Gods proceedings againſt his people therefore, and entreating for mercy, till the Lord ſent the foreſaid Gabriel unto him, who telleth him, V.24. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and the holy City to finiſh the tranſgreſſion, to make an end of ſin, to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlaſting righteouſneſſe, and to ſeal up the Viſion and Propheſie, and to anoint the moſt Holy. But before I come to ſpeake upon theſe words, it will bee neceſſary to reſolve a queſtion about the fulfilling of the 70 yeares ſpoken v. 2. whether they were now ended or no, or when they ended, and to finde this out, when they began. But touching this I have ſpoken upon 2 King. 25. 9. ſhewing the divers conjectures of divers, but approving that, which beginneth the 11. of Zedekiah, the 19 of Nebuchadnezzar, who reigned 43, and therefore 24 years, in the time of his reign paſſed, of theſe 70 Evilmer. 30. Ragaſſar 3. Labaſſardas 6. Belſhaz. 5. Darius 1. Cyrus 1. But ſince according to others I have gone upon another reckoning, Dan. 5. counting to Nebuch. 35 years, to Evilmerodach 18, to Belſhazzar 17, leaving out the other two mentioned alſo by Joſephus, in making which accounts Authours are ſo divers, that I can determine nothing certainly, only this is certain, that about this time 70 yeares were expired, which is proved by the event, the Jews ſet at liberty to return, and whatſoever others conjecture, the time of reckoning muſt needs begin Anno 11 of Zedekiah, becauſe Daniel calleth them here 70 yeares of deſolations, and the time of Jeruſalem lying deſolate could not begin till then, becauſe that neither from Jehoiakims 4. year, nor his 11. nor Ieboiachins captivity can the reckoning be begun, ſeeing all this notwithſtanding Ieruſalem and Iudah were inhabited till Zedekiah An. 11. And after this Nebuchadnezzars time could not be above 26 yeares, becauſe Evilmerodach was King An. 37. of Ieboiachins captivity, out of which deduct 11 of Zedekiah, and 26 yeares remain, after which if we allow to Evilmerodach 30, as ſome doe, and but 14 to Belſhazzar, whereas ſome reckon 17. we ſhall come to the full time, the firſt of Darius. But to leave this, as touching which we can have no great certainty, let us come to the 70 weekes here ſpoken of, at the expiration whereof God promiſeth farre greater matters for the comfort of his beloved ſervant Daniel, and of all his faithfull people, for our incouragement to ſeek unto God with all earneſtneſſe for the deliverance of his Church in Faith, for in ſo doing we ſhall both prevail in reſpect of the thing deſired, and to hear alſo of far more that the Lord will doe, then we have deſired.

V. 24.

For the computing of theſe 70 weeks, every week being 7 years, together 490. I have ſpoken ſo largely in my continuation of the Hiſtory at the end of Nehemiah, that I ſhall not need to ſay any more thereof in this place, but refer the ſtudious reader thither. For this place, the Angell ſpeaketh here, Contin. hiſtor. p. 190.

1. Generally of that which ſhould be done in the 70 weeks, all together, For thy people and the holy City to finiſh tranſgreſſion,&c. 2. He diſtinguiſheth theſe weeks into 7 weeks, and 62 weeks, v. 25, 26. and one week again into two, in the firſt part whereof the ſacrifice ſhould ceaſe, and then for the overſpreading of abominations he ſhall make it deſolate. V. 27. Touching the generall, that by 70 weeks are not ſimply underſtood ſo many weeks, but ſo many weeks of years is plain, becauſe otherwiſe after their return out of captivity they ſhould have had their City deſtroyed again in one year and 18 weeks, which was before it was built againe, yea which is as ſtrange, both City and Temple muſt have been built in 7 weeks, and therefore the Rab. themſelves ſeeing into this, acknowledge weeks of years to be here meant, as I have in the place before cited ſhewed. In ſaying 70 weeks he alludeth to the 70 years then paſſed wherein they ſuffered by a tedious captivity, but now he ſheweth, that they being returned into their own land ſhould dwell there againe 7 times as long as they had lived in exile, in which time an expiation for ſin ſhould be made, and everlaſting righteouſneſſe by the Meſſiah or Chriſt brought in, and his whole time is ten Jubilees, wherein this reckoning of weeks of years firſt begun, only before it there was a week of years, the laſt whereof was holy, in which they might neither ſow nor reap but let the land reſt, and for the reſt of old upon the 7 year, and the year after 7 times 7, now 70 weeks, conſiſting of ten times ſuch a number are appointed, to ſhew the reſt to come to all the truely faithfull by the Meſſiah. Levit. 25. And as Polanus noteth, here are three benefits coming by Chriſt to the faithfull reckoned up, 1. To keep from defection. 2. To ſeal tranſgreſſions. And 3. to expiate ſin, in which words he rendreth it in ſtead of theſe, to finiſh tranſgreſſion, to make an end of ſin, and to make reconciliation for iniquity. Polanus. By keeping from defection he underſtandeth the keeping of the remnant of the faithfull from falling from Gods grace through unbeleif in Chriſt, when ſo many of that Nation ſhould by ſealing up tranſgreſſions, the forgiving thereof, they being hidden and covered: the expiation of ſinne by Chriſts offering himſelf for their ſins, and the Heb. will well bear this reading and expoſition. But R. Solomon he ſaith, turneth all this another way, viz. to keep them by a longer continued exile, then that of the Babylonian captivity from falling away to wickedneſſe any more, their ſufferings in all this time being ſatisfactory for their ſins paſt, ſo that when there ſhall once be an end hereof, they ſhall be a righteous people for ever. But this is a devilliſh device to keep them in blindeneſſe, and to harden their hearts againſt the true Meſſiah in expectation of another yet to come, and is contrary to the evidence of this place, and the explanation hereof following, verſ. 25. which is ſo clearly for our Chriſt, that it cannot poſſibly be evaded. V. 25. From the going forth of the commandement to reſtore and to build Ieruſalem ſhall be 7 weeks and 62 weekes, and the ſtreet ſhall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times. In which words the proceedings to come according to the generall prediction, verſ. 24. are more particularly ſet forth. 1. The going out of the Decree to build Ieruſalem, and the houſes in the ſtreets thereof and the wall about it, which ſhould not be without great trouble 7 weeks, that is, 49 yeares, the time of a Iubilee. 2. The time which ſhould intervene after this, untill the comming of the Meſſiah and his cutting off, 62 weeks, verſ. 26. that is, 434. yeares. 3. Another week in the midſt whereof the Sacrifice ſhould be made to ceaſe, and in this time the deſtruction of the City, verſ. 27. that is, in 7 years more, all together being 490 years. But before we come to the opening of this further, I will return again to verſ. 24. And firſt, by the keeping from defection the obſignation of ſin and the expiation thereof, Polanus rightly ſaith, that one part of the benefit coming by Chriſt is meant, viz. the taking away of evill, and by the bringing in of everlaſting righteouſneſſe, the other part which ſtandeth in the collation of good. Polanus. The evill taken away is 1. of ſinne, when through ſanctification attained by the ſpirit ſinne is mortified and it reigneth no more in our mortall bodies. Rom. 6.12. 2. Of guilt, the handwriting, that is againſt us, being cancelled. Col. 2.14. 3. Of puniſhments out of Gods juſtice due for our ſins either in this or in the world to come, for from all theſe the true beleever is delivered through him our moſt bleſſed Saviour, and Redeemer.

The good collated is everlaſting righteouſneſſe, which is not only that of ſanctification, becauſe it is but in part, but the righteouſneſs, whereby the beleever ſtandeth righteous, and ſo ſhall ſtand for ever, which is righteouſneſſe every way perfect according to that, which is by the law required; and in none is this righteouſneſſe to be found but in Chriſt alone, who came not to diſſolve the law, but to fulfill it; yet this righteouſneſſe is made ours by faith through imputation, whereby we come to be accepted of before God for perfectly righteous, as if we had in every thing all the dayes of our lives fulfilled all righteouſneſſe.

Mar. 5.19.

Qu. If it be ſo, that Chriſt in fulfilling the law in all things, brought in everlaſting righteouſneſſe, as hath been ſaid, what need was there, that he ſhould dye for our juſtification and ſalvation? Anſw. It was neceſſary for us that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer death for us ſinners, that we might be delivered from everlaſting death, and that by fulfilling all righteouſneſſe he ſhould make a compenſation for our unrighteouſneſſe: for the precepts of the law cannot be ſatisfied but by doing them, and the comminations of the law for tranſgreſſions cannot be ſatisfied but by dying for them: and ſo bearing the puniſhment due therefore: So Chriſt by bearing the puniſhment due to us, and by his obedience covered and aboliſhed our diſobedience. Thus likewiſe Juſtin Martyr taught of old; ſaying, As Adam ſubjected all men to death by ſinning, and made all our nature obnoxious to ſin; ſo Chriſt revoked and aboliſhed all this, by leading a life free from all ſin, and ſuffering death for our ſins: And indeed in ſuffering he fulfilled all righteouſneſſe, which was begun, and in acting whereof he continued all his life; but in his death his obedience was moſt perfected, and the greateſt love of all was ſhewed. If it be ſaid, when God gave Adam a commandment to be kept at the firſt, and annexed a penalty in caſe he ſhould break it; we cannot conceive that any other thing was meant, but either he ſhould keep the commandment, or dye the death; and therefore Chriſt having kept it in every thing, which was ſince given in charge, it ſhould ſeem, that there was no need to the bringing in of righteouſneſſe, that he ſhould ſuffer death alſo. Sol. It is true, if Adam had obeyed that commandment, and never broken it, he could not have been required to bear the puniſhment of death alſo; but he tranſgreſſed, and we in him, and therefore both this puniſhment muſt be born, and Chriſt, who came as a ſecond Adam, muſt obey and perſevere in obedience alſo to the end, that through him, ſtanding in the ſtead of him and his ſinfull poſterity, perfect righteouſneſſe might again be brought in, and we delivered from Adams unrighteouſneſſe in both parts for ever.

Juſt. Mart. de confeſ. fidei.

If it be ſaid, forſomuch as Chriſts perfect obedience is ours, we need not live in obedience to Gods laws, but as we luſt. I anſwer, he obeyed not only to make a compenſation for our diſobedience, but alſo to give us example, as he ſaith, Learn of me, &c. and therefore diſobedience and looſeneſſe of life in us is inconſiſtent with faith in him, for how can he be judged to beleeve in Chriſt that followeth him not as farre as he is able, but rather goeth from him and followeth his enemies, the Devill, the World, and the Fleſh?

Mar. 11.28.

If it be ſaid, Chriſt was bound to keep the law becauſe he was a man, and it is every mans duty to obey the law for himſelf, and when he doth ſo, this extendeth not to another, but to himſelf only; therefore Chriſts obedience and righteouſneſſe cannot be ours. Sol. 1. Although the man Chriſt were tyed to obey, yet Chriſt God was not. 2. He was not made man for himſelf, but for us, and therefore obeyed for us. 3. Man is not bound to obey becauſe he is a man, but becauſe God hath ſubjected him to laws, as Chriſt was not, but only in relation to us; as it is ſaid, God ſent his ſon made of a woman, and made under the law to redeem &c.

Gal. 4.

If againſt juſtification or righteouſneſſe imputed to us, that is, Chriſts righteous living, it be objected, that S. Paul never teacheth ſo, but of juſtification by his death, or bloud; it is anſwered, this implyeth his obedience alſo, Phil. 2.

Rom. 5.

for he ſaith that he came in the form of a ſervant and humbled himſelf herein to ſerve and obey to the death of the Croſſe; yea, it is expreſly ſaid, that as by the diſobedience of one man many were made ſinners, ſo by the obedience of one, many were made righteous. Divers other queſtions are moved and anſwered by Polanus upon this place, but whoſo deſireth to ſee them, may have recourſe unto him, I think divers of them overcurious, and that theſe are enough to be moved and reſolved here.

John 2.

The next thing here ſpoken of, is to ſeal up the viſion and propheſie, whereby is meant, putting an end to all propheſies touching the Meſſiah, as having their accompliſhment in him, for the ſetting forth of whom, they were principally ſtirred up from time to time, that wrote them, and therefore Hebr. it here to ſeal up the Viſion and the Prophet, no Prophet being to come after to ſet forth viſions or propheſies touching him. According to which our Lord ſaith, that the law and the Prophets were till John, and *Hebr.*1. In former times God ſpake divers wayes, but now, by his Prophets: It followeth, and to anoint the moſt holy, that is, Chriſt, with the fulneſſe of the Spirit, as in his baptiſm, of whole fulneſſe we all receive. For the words to anoint, cometh of the ſame radix that the Meſſiah doth; and it is, the holy of holyes, by which name the moſt holy part of the Temple was commonly called Sanctum Sanctorum, and here the Meſſiah is thus called, to ſhew, that he was by the Sanctuary prefigured in his body, as he alſo intimateth, when he ſaith, Deſtroy this Temple, and I will raiſe it up again in three dayes: for he ſpake this of his body. So then here is ſhewed, that within the compaſſe of the 70 weeks, great things ſhould be done for the Jews, if they had grace to make uſe thereof; their City with the Temple and walls, ſhould be built, the expected Meſſiah ſhould come to their everlaſting comfort in reſpect of the expiation of ſin made by him, and introducing of righteouſneſſe, a ſign of whom, ſhould be the anointing with the Holy Ghoſt by coming down and reſting upon him.

Ezra 4.24. chap.6.

Now to come to the diviſion of this time, v. 25. the firſt 7 weeks making 49 years, are the time after the going out of the decree for the building of the City and Wall, which by Polanus is begun anno 2. of Darius Nothus, who gave out his Decree, and to the end of his reign were 18 years; then Artaxerxes in the 20 of his reign ſent Nehemiah to build the Walls, who tarryed there about it, 11 years, which being put all together, make 49 years. But he in reckoning thus bringeth in not only the cutting off of the Meſſiah, but alſo the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, following 36 years after, within the compaſſe of this whole time of 70 weeks; which indeed cannot be done, unleſſe the computation be ſo begun.

But in my foreſaid continuation I have, following others, begun it anno 7. of Artaxerxes, when Ezra was ſent to Jeruſalem, becauſe from thence to the paſſion of Chriſt were juſt 70 weeks, as I have there ſhewed more at large. Neither can it be hence proved, that the deſtruction of the City and Temple ſhould be within the compaſſe of this time, but only that after this, it ſhould be for the abominable wickedneſſes of the Jews: whereas the dividing of one of theſe 70 weeks from all the other, and the dividing of that week into halfs (v.27. He ſhall confirme the covenant with many for one week, and in the midſt of the week he ſhall cauſe the oblation and ſacrifiee to ceaſe,) may ſeem to make againſt the ſuffering of the Meſſiah at the end of the whole time firſt named, it is to be noted, that he ſaith not, he ſhall be cut off in the midſt of the week, but only he ſhall make the ſacrifice to ceaſe, that is, he at his beginning to ſhew himſelf publickly to be the lamb of God that taketh away the ſin of the world, as John the Baptiſt called him immediately after his being baptized, ſhall from thenceforth be counted the only propitiatory ſacrifice for ſin; and that the continuall ſacrifice of a lamb every morning and evening, ſhould upon his offering of himſelf upon the croſſe, ceaſe, and be available no more, to ſhew which further the Temple ſhould be deſtroyed not long after, and never be reedified, ſo that there ſhould then be a ceſſation of ſacrificing per force for ever after. And for the computation made by Polanus, the words before going, after 62 weeks the Meſſiah Meſſiah ſhall be cut off, ſhew that the deſtruction of Jeruſalem cannot poſſibly be brought within the compaſs of the 70, becauſe that 62 and 7 before them being deducted out of thoſe 70, one only wil remain, that is, ſeven years, but Jeruſalem was not deſtroyed til near 40 years after his cutting off; neither is it ſaid, in the ſixty ſecond week the Meſſiah ſhal be cut off, but after 62. To come therefore to the explanation of each paſſage here according to this account In ſaying 7 weeks and 62 ſhall be to Meſſiah the Prince, he meaneth not, that theſe two ſhould ſtrictly be divided, but that within the firſt number the City and Wall ſhould be built, and in the compaſſe of 7 and 62 put together, the Meſſiah ſhould come. For the naming of 7 firſt, it is done becauſe 7 weeks of years make a Jubilee, and ſo it is an holy number, of which the ſpirit of God delighted to ſpeak, eſpecially in ſetting forth deliverance from ſervitude, return to poſſeſſions, and making publick joy. It is not hereby neceſſarily implyed that ſo many years ſhould paſſe, before that all the things here ſpoken of ſhould be done, but in this compaſſe of time they ſhould be done, as they were in the dayes of Nehemiah.

But it may be doubted how the computation of the 70 weeks can be from the 7 year of Artaxerxes, ſeeing no decree came out then, but in the time of Nehemiah in his 20 year: For the reſolving of this, it is ſaid, that the ſame which is ſaid to be the 20 year was the 7; the 20 ſince he began to reign together with his father Xerxes, and the 7 ſince he began to reign alone. Of the time when the Wall was built and the troubles thereof ſee in Nehemiah. V. 26. After 62 weeks the Meſſiah ſhall be cut off, but not for himſelf, Hebr. and ſhall have nothing, that is, be counted by the Jews as vile and nought, Vulg. Et non erit ejus populus qui eum negaturus eſt: a manifeſt place to convince all gainſayers, that Chriſt Jeſus was to be cut off by a violent death, and deſpiſed, as Eſay 53. it is alſo propheſied, whereas the Jews would not beleeve in him for this cauſe, affirming that the Meſſiah muſt continue alwayes, and the Prince of the people that ſhall come, ſhall deſtroy the City and Sanctuary, this is a Propheſie of the judgment to come upon the Jews, after their cutting off of the Meſſiah, by Veſpaſian the Roman Emperour, and is not to be counted within the compaſſe of the time of 70 weeks, and the end thereof ſhall be with a floud, and to the end of the war deſolations are determined: that is, the Roman Army, as a great and irreſiſtible floud bearing down all things, like unto Noahs floud, wherein ſo few perſons were preſerved; ſo the coming of the Aſſyrians is ſet forth by a floud, Eſay 8.7. and to the end of the war, &c. that is, this war being ended and all deſtroyed hereby, deſolations ſhall follow for ever; not deſolation, as in the 70 years captivity, but deſolations without end, as hath been hitherto proved true by experience, the floud that then overflowed Judea, overflowing it as it were ſtill in the ſtupendious effects hereof, even as ground into which the Sea hath broken, that cannot be delivered any more, but lyeth waſte alwayes.

V. 27. And he ſhall confirm the covenant with many, for one week, and in the midſt of the week ſhall make the ſacrifice to ceaſe: This by Rabbi Solomon, is applyed to the Roman Prince before ſpoken of, with whom he ſaith a covenant was made by the Jews for 7 years, but being not kept on the Jews part, in the fourth year after the making thereof, the Romans deſtroyed both the City and Sanctuary, and then the dayly ſacrifice, as muſt needs, when they had no place to offer it in any more, ceaſed for ever. But of ſuch a covenant betwixt the Roman Emperour and the Jews, no Hiſtorian maketh any mention, and therefore it is a Rabbinicall fiction. The truth is, the end of the City being ſpoken of, as by the overflowing of a floud by way of anticipation, to join together the cauſe, the crucifying of Chriſt, and the effect, viz. the coming of the Roman Prince, and deſtroying the City never to be rebuilt, but alwayes to lye deſolate; now he returneth to Meſſiah the Prince again, ſhewing what he ſhould do in the laſt of the weeks before ſpoken, he ſhall confirm the Covenant with many, that is, through preaching the Goſpell and doing miracles, he ſhall convert many unto him, and ſo confirm by his bloud the covenant, called the new covenant, before ſpoken of by Jeremiah, which is the covenant of grace and life; and he ſaith, not to all, but to many, becauſe the generality of the Jews rejected him.

For the Sacrifice made to ceaſe in the midſt of the week, herein reſpect was had to the time of our Lords preaching, before his ſuffering death, which put an end to all carnall ſacrificing, ſith that therein that was perfectly done, which was by oblations and ſacrifices prefigured. For this time was but three years and an half, which is half a week of years; and here the Angell varieth from the one week of the 70 before ſpoken of, to an half week of Chriſts preaching, to denote juſtly by this circumſtance again the very time of his death, as he had ſpoken at large of it before, ſaying, after 62 weeks the Meſſiah ſhall be ſlain, and more reſtrainedly 70 weeks are determined for the expiation of ſin, and bringing in of everlaſting righteouſneſſe, which was the time of Chriſts death. For neither can this half week be referred to the ceaſing of the ſacrifice through the deſtruction of the Sanctuary, becauſe even they that bring that deſtruction within the compaſſe of theſe 70 weeks, ſay not that it was before the laſt year hereof, therefore not three years and an half before that time ended: nor can it be referred to the laſt of the 70 weeks, for then Chriſt muſt have ſuffered before the laſt year of the time here determined above three years, unleſſe we ſhall ſay, as I ſaid before, that his being publiſhed to be the Lamb of God that taketh away the ſin of the world, is here called the cauſing of the ſacrifice to ceaſe.

And for the overſpreading of abominations, he ſhall make it deſolate, even till the conſummation and that determined ſhall be poured out upon the deſolate. The Vulg. in the Temple ſhall be the abomination of deſolation, and even to the conſummation and end the deſolation ſhall perſevere: Hebr. untill the conſummation and conſumption determined poured out upon deſolation: there being nothing in the former words, that ſignifieth Temple, but only to make this to agree with *Mat.*24. where the abomination of deſolation is ſpoken of, but without any ſuch ſupply, that agreeth well with this, and thereby it appeareth, that the abomination overſpreading here ſpoken of, was the cauſe of this deſolation: for Jeruſalem was then ſo full of abominable ſins, as Joſephus ſaith, that if the Romans had not come to deſtroy them and their City, it might well have been expected that God ſhould have rained down fire and brimſtone to conſume them, as he did upon Sodom; as hath been ſaid in my continuation of the hiſtory before ſpoken of; where I have alſo ſhewed the manner of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. Of theſe words the meaning is, that for the Jews abominable ſins univerſally corrupting all the land, the City and Temple ſhould be ruined, and ſo continue after the deſolation, to which it ſhould be brought for ever, deſolation being thus, as it were, added to deſolation. And therefore if any thinke of the reedifying of Jeruſalem again after the Jews converſion, they are by this manifeſtly concluded againſt us holding contrary to the truth. For although the Lord ſaith, thy habitation ſhall be left deſolate, till thou ſayeſt, Bleſſed be he, that cometh in the name of the Lord, and the building of Jeruſalem upon her own heap be ſpoken of, and everlaſting peace to be to Iſrael after this; yet it cannot hence be inferred, that the Jeruſalem and Temple of wood and ſtone ſhal be built there again, but a glorious Church in that land ſpiritually underſtood. And whereas many Rabbins of the Jews blindfold their eyes from ſeeing into the true meaning of this place, by diverting them to ſome other interpretations hereof; none of them yet can deny, but that the time here ſet is long agoe paſt, even ever ſince the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Romans; and by conſequence the Meſſiah cannot be yet to come, as they expect, but came then, and was approved by Gods Angels, and an allmighty power ſhewing it ſelf in him; ſo that nothing but a ſpirituall judgment upon their ſouls, whereby they ſeeing ſee & perceive not, hindereth them from ſeeing to beleeve unto this day. And when this judgment ſhall be taken off, they ſhall ſee and look up to him whom they have pierced, and mourn; which till then, by the greateſt evidence of reaſon out of their own Prophets, they cannot be made to do.

Matth. 23.

And therefore pray we to the Lord to haſten the taking off of the vaile of blindneſſe and give them a ſight of him, who in all their ſacrifices was continually pointed at, that beholding at length his glory and unparalleld love, they may melt into teares for their ſo long continued obſtinacy, and be ſaved.

CHAP. X.

V. 1. HEre followeth the third Viſion of Daniel in the third yeare of Cyrus King of Perſia, at what time he muſt needs be very old, for he was carryed captive into *Babylon ann.*3. of Jehoiakim King of Judah, from which to the end of his reign was 8 years, from thence to that captivity in the 11 of Zedekiah 19: whereunto adde the 70 years of the Babyloniſh captivity, and we ſhall come to 89, and one year of Darius, and 2 of Cyrus, make 92, and unto this adde his age when he was carryed captive, happily but 7 or 8, all together make 100 or thereabouts: Yet at this great age Daniel living in great honour and eſtimation, and without doubt abounding with all comforts of this life, for the high place wherein he was ſet by Darius, *Dan.*6. gave his mind more to underſtand the myſticall things of God, the more had been revealed before unto V. 2. him; and to the end that he might attain hereunto, he ſequeſtred himſelfe from the delights of this life, pleaſant wines and delicate fare, and continued mourning three full weeks.

Note. From whence note, that he who is inlightned in the knowledge of the myſticall things of God, reſteth not ſatisfied in that which he hath attained to, but earneſtly deſireth to be filled yet with more ſuch knowledge, ſo ſweet doth he find that unto him, which already he hath; as David, to whom the Pſal. 19. word of God was ſweeter then the honey comb: which maketh againſt all thoſe that care not for ſuch knowledge, or if they do, they have no ſuch earneſt deſire unto it, any modicum hereof ſufficing them; verily it ſheweth, that they are altogether without divine underſtanding to this time, becauſe that ſo ſoone as this entereth, there is a deſire bred by all means to know more and more.

Again, to get ſpirituall knowledge the fleſh muſt not be pampered, but abſtinence uſed; and becauſe it is not to be doubted, but that Daniel joined unto his abſtinence aſſiduous prayer, for ſo he did ch. 9. it muſt at all times when we addreſſe our ſelves to increaſe it, be ſought by praying likewiſe. Polanus ſaith, that Daniel was affected with ſo great ſorrow, becauſe the decree of Cyrus going out for the building of the Temple, many enemies roſe up and hindered it, and ſo it not going forward, he feared that diſhonour would redound to God, who had promiſed that it ſhould be built.

Whereas it is ſaid *v.*1. in the third year of Cyrus, but *ch.*1. ult. Daniel continued to the firſt year of Cyrus, here is no contradiction, for it is not meant there, that he lived till then and no longer, but he continued in eſtimation and honour among the Babylonian Kings, till the ſubduing of Babylon by the Perſian: But he lived ſtill, and had this revelation the third year of Cyrus: and he was by V. 4. the river Hiddekel, which was one of the four that lay by the garden of Eden, Gen. 2. Vulg. the river Tigris, ſo called from the ſwift running, becauſe the Tigre is the ſwifteſt of foot of all other beaſts: but Quint. Curtius and Pliny ſay, that Tigris is a Median word ſignifying arrow; by which name yet it is agreed, that it was called for the ſame reaſon. The day of the month is alſo ſet down the 24, becauſe the things now revealed were moſt memorable as concerning the Church of God to the end of the world.

V. 5. I ſaw a man whoſe loins were girt with fine gold of Uphaz, in linen, and his face as lightning, his eyes as lamps, &c. This man according to Lyra, was an Angel, Polanus. but Polanus will have him the ſame, that appeared before unto him, ch. 8. 13. who is called Palmoni, the numberer of ſecrets, which he proveth from *Dan.*12.7. where an Angell inquireth of this man, how long it ſhould be to the end of theſe wonders, and he confirmed by oath, that it ſhould be a time and times and half a time, which implyeth, that this man was ſo great in underſtanding, that the Angels had light and underſtanding from him, as a fountaine of knowledge, Revel. 1. 13. we read alſo of the like appearance, where no man doubteth, but that it was Chriſt. He had a linnen garment to ſet forth his Prieſtly Office; becauſe the Prieſts wear linnen garments; a girdle of fine gold of Vphaz, to ſet forth by the girdle his readineſſe, as a ſervant to do his Fathers will, becauſe good ſervants are ſaid to ſtand with their loins girt, and their lamps burning; by the fine gold, of which it was made, his purity, ſtability, when tryed in the fire, and vertue medicinall, that was in him to heal the diſeaſed. His body like Beryll, that is, of a sky colour, ſhewed him to be heavenly; his face like lightening for celerity, ſhewing how ſoon hee ſhould ſhine from one part of the heaven to the other, all over the world; his eyes like lamps, to ſhew his clear ſeeing of all things even in darkeſt and moſt hidden places. Laſtly, his armes and his feet like burniſhed braſſe, his ſtrength being hereby ſet forth to ſtamp upon, and break in pieces all men that oppoſe him, as he that hath brazen armes and feet can eaſily break in pieces a potters veſſels of earth.

Hitherto his parts, now his words were as the ſound of a multitude, ſo Job. 1. 15. Ezek. 1. 14. A ſound of the living creatures was heard as of many waters, hereby was ſhewed the great extent of Chriſts voice piercing further then the voice of any other man, yea more efficacious then the voices of many men together to move the air, as when the Spirit came downe, Act. 2. a great ſound, as of a ruſhing wind was heard, and the Apoſtles were filled with the Holy Ghoſt; ſo at his Word and will we receive the ſanctifying Spirit to lead us into all truth.

Hitherto the deſcription of the man appearing, now followeth the effect of this Viſion, and of the ſound heard in Daniel, and thoſe that were with him by the river. Verſ. 7. He was aſtonyed, and no ſtrength remained in V. 7. him, but fell to the ground into a dead ſleep, being as it were through feare ſtricken dead, as he had been before chap. 8. 18. but thoſe that were with him, who heard only the ſound, but ſaw nothing, fled away and hid themſelves for fear, ſo that Daniel was left alone. He both ſaw this glorious apparition and heard the ſound, as being vouchſafed ſo great a favour, they were by Gods providence onely preſent there at the firſt to teſtifie the terribleneſſe of the voice, and that it was not a feigned, but true thing, that Daniel had then this wonderfull revelation, that we might beleeve: ſo when Saul was perſecuting the Church of Chriſt, and had a Viſion of a light from heaven, whereby hee was ſmitten downe to the ground, and heard that terrible Act. 9. voice, Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? there were others preſent, but heard not the words, onely they heard a ſound of a voice ſpeaking unto him, and ſaw the light. Daniel being aſtoniſht and faln to the ground, as hath been ſaid, was comforted and raiſed up, and then the man, that ſo gloriouſly V. 12. appeared ſaid unto him, Feare not Daniel, for from the firſt day, that thou didſt ſet V. 13. thy heart to underſtand, &c. thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words. But the Prince of the kingdome of Perſia withſtood me 21 dayes, but loe Michael one of the chief princes came to help me, and I remained there with the King of Perſia.

Here it is queſtioned, who is meant by the Prince of Perſia, and reſolved by the Ancients, an Angell ſet over that Kingdom, but whether good or bad, they Rupertus, Caſſianus, Proſper. agree not, ſome ſay, that it was a bad Angell, holding that every Kingdome hath two Angels ſet over it, one good and another evill, the good to move them that inhabit it unto good, and to ſtand for the good thereof, and the evill to inſtigate it to evill, therefore ſay they, an evill Angell is here meant, who ſtirred up the Perſian King againſt the Jewes, to hinder the putting of Cyrus his Decree for the building of the Temple into execution, as I have ſhewed, Baſil. Clemens, Rom. Gregor. Nazianzen. Hieron. Theodoret. Lyra. that it was done upon Ezra, both in the time of Cyrus and Cambyſes his ſon.
Others, that it was a good Angell, who would not have the Perſians to want ſuch a people to ſerve them, as Pharaoh in times paſt would not, but to hold them ſtill in the countrey, that were there, and to give to ſuch as were gone into Iudea ſo great diſcouragement, that they might rather be willing to return again, then to continue there ſtill. Polanus, Iunius, and others of ours hold, that no Angell, but a Prince properly ſo called, viz. Cambyſes, King of the Perſians after Cyrus is here meant. But of what power could a man, though a great Prince, be to withſtand the Son of God, as they take the man before ſpoken of to be, when as one Angell in one night deſtroyed in the hoaſt of Senacharib 185000. 2. It is as great a queſtion, who Michael, whom he calleth their Prince, was, who he ſaith holp him, for if by Michael the Sonne of God be underſtood, as ours hold, and by the man before ſpoken of, Chriſt, how can hee ſpeak of him, as of a third perſon? To theſe, I find nothing ſaid by any man in way of reſolution. And therefore it ſeemeth neceſſary to me to underſtand by the man before ſpoken of, not the Son of God, but an Angell of God repreſenting God, as an Angel many times doth, and ſpeaketh accordingly, one ſuperiour to another of an inferior rank, according to inſtruction given from God, and ſo it may be conceived to have been done, *Dan.*12.7. and then the Prince of Perſia muſt needs be another Angell by God ſet over Perſia, as the Guardian of that Kingdome, or rather one of the Devils Angels ſwaying by his ſuggeſtions the King of Perſia to oppoſe the building of the Temple in enmity againſt the people of God, who moſt earneſtly deſired the going forward of that work. For that God ſetteth any good Angell over an heathen kingdom to be a guardian to it, to intermeddle ſo much, as to argue before God for a wicked Kings being permitted to hinder a good work, I cannot beleeve, although there be ſome that ſtand for this, ſaying it doth not misbecome a good Angell ſo to doe, provided, that when God revealeth his will, hee ceaſe to ſtand any further for it. Of the Devils angels, ſee *Revel.*12.27. where it is ſaid, the Dragon and his angels fought, and Michael and his angels. It is true, the Son of God, Chriſt Jeſus is ſhewed to John in the like manner, that this man here, but it is not therefore neceſſary to conclude, that he was the ſame; for ſome things here ſpoken, are ſaid of the four living creatures, *Ezek.*1. 12,13. verſ.7. their appearance was as lightening and as lamps, and burniſhed braſſe. And if we take that glorious man for an Angel of God ſhewing himſelfe unto Daniel, and the Prince of Perſia for an angel of the devill, and Michael called the Prince of the Jews, for a principall Angel of God placed as Guardian over Judea, and the Jews in chief, all things will very well agree. The angel of the Dragon or Devill might by oppoſing through Gods permiſſion retard a good Angels coming to Daniel to comfort him, and he might in a kinde of duell be held by him in Perſia during the time here ſpoken of, and then by Michael a principall Angel coming in to his help, prevail to come away and aſſure Daniel of the conſtant purpoſe of God to ſtand for his Temple and people. And touching Michael, it is not ſaid any otherwiſe, but Michael one of the chief Princes came to help me, not the Prince over them, as Chriſt is, but one amongſt them, implying, that there were more ſuch Princes of God. And this argueth alſo, that the Prince of Perſia was not the King, becauſe another of theſe Princes, who are called Principalities in heavenly places, becauſe Angels of great power whether they be good or bad. Of Michaels contending with the Devill alſo about the body of Moſes Iude ſpeaketh, ſaying that he durſt not then bring a railing accuſation againſt him, which argueth, that Michael this Archangel was one under an higher power, viz. God, and touching Chriſt, it is ſaid, that he ſhall come with the voice of an Archangel, therefore he is not the Archangel ſo often in Scripture ſpoken of, verſ. 20. He alſo ſaith, that he would now goe forth and fight with the Prince of Perſia, which was done, when Cambyſes being dead, who had beene ſtirred up by the ſuggeſtion of the Devill to hinder the building of the Temple, Darius came to be King, who took order for the going forward of that work until it was fully finiſhed, no evill angel having power any more to hinder it. Whereas he addeth, when I am gone forth the Prince of Grecia ſhall come, meaning the evill angell, that ſhould ſtir up Alexander the Greek Emperour, who ſhould alſo attempt ſomething againſt the Temple and Jews, as he did, although miraculouſly by God inhibited from doing any harm to it or them. From the care taken to anſwer Daniel praying, note that ſo ſoon as the faith-

CHAP. VI.

AND in the firſt year of Darius the Mede, I ſtood to confirme and ſtrengthen him. Here the Angel, that talked with Daniel, to purchaſe the more credit to that which he ſaid, and to make him and his people the more confident in his help,recounteth unto him, what he had already done in favour of them, viz. holpen the King of the Medes againſt the Babylonians, that by this means, the Medes and Perſians prevailing, they might have liberty to returne, which they could not have had, if the King of Babylon had continued ſtill.

V. 2. There ſhall ſtand up yet three Kings in Perſia, and the fourth ſhall be rich above them all. From hence, the Rabbins gather, that after Cyrus, in whoſe third and laſt year of his Monarchy Daniel had this Viſion, as we may ſee chap. 10.1.

there were but three kings more of Perſia: but this is againſt all Hiſtoricall relations, whereby it is ſhewed, that after 3. Cambyſes who reigned 7 yeares, Smerdes 6 moneths, Darius Hiſtaſpis 36 yeares, Xerxes, the fourth here ſpoken of, eſpecially for his exceeding great wealth, 20 yeares, for his wealth was ſo great, that he was able to maintain an Army of 1000000 of men. After Xerxes Artabanus 7 moneths, Artaxerxes Longimanus 40 years, Xerxes 2 months, Sogdianus 7 months, Darius Nothus 19 years, Artaxerxes Mnemon 43 years, Artaxerxes Ochus 23, Arſes 4, Darius Codomanus 6. For thus long the Perſian Monarchy ſtood, but then came under the Grecian, Darius Codomanus being overcome by Alexander, the whole time of the Perſian Monarchy, taking in the time of Cyrus after the Monarchy attained 203 years, whereas three onely are ſpoken of in this place, and a fourth at the moſt ſtirring up of war againſt the Greeks, this is done, becauſe the ſcope of the Angel was not to ſhow how many kings in all ſhould hold that Monarchy, but how many before the quarrell begun betwixt the Perſians and Grecians, whereupon afterward the Grecians invaded and overcame the Perſians, in the time of whoſe reign he intended in the revelation following, to ſhew what doings there ſhould bee in the world, what contentions or concords betwixt the divided Kings, that ſprang from the Grecians, & what the people of God ſhould in thoſe times ſuffer, and how long. For which purpoſe it is nothing availing to ſpeak of any more kings of Perſia, then he doth, he paſſing al thoſe over after Xerxes in ſilence cometh immediately after his moving againſt the Greeks, to ſpeak of them, and the firſt mighty Monarch Alexander, & then of the Ptolemees and Seleucid, betwixt whom after a few years the Grecian Monarchy was divided, or at the leaſt ſo much of it, as whereunto the Jews had any relation in reſpect of ſubjection or prevailings, at any time, becauſe the end of all this was to ſtay them from falling into deſperation for the troubles to come upon them. Thus Ierome, and Lyra, &c. Polanus not differing herefrom in the main, that there were divers other kings after Xerxes, the fourth here ſpoken of, for both of Darius, Artaxerxes, and Ahaſhueroſh we read in Ezra and Nehemiah, yet he giveth this as a reaſon, why they that reigned after Xerxes, are paſſed over unmentioned, the Monarchy was not thenceforth ſo entire, but much ſhaken by the falling away of ſome Nations from obedience to the Perſian. But forſomuch as they continued ſtill mighty Monarchs, I rather reſt in the reaſon before yeelded. From this Angels ſaying, that he ſtrengthened the Median king; Note, that even when one heathen king, that prevaileth againſt another, it is not by his own ſtrength, but ſome Angel of God helpeth him, and hereupon inwardly moveth him to ſhew favour to Gods people, but if after this he doth not, but turneth perſecuter of them through the ſuggeſtions of an evill angel, the time ſhall come, that as he by help from above overcame, ſo he ſhall be by another overcome and deſtroyed: And thus it is to be thought, that the fight and contention is betwixt the Angels good and evill, the good move the Monarchs of the World to favour the people of God, but the evill to perſecute and vex them and to hinder them in any godly enterpriſe, which they take in hand.

V. 3, 4. He foretelleth of Alexander the Great, and of the dividing of his kingdom into four, of which ſee before chap. 7. 6. and chap. 8. 8.

V. 5. And the King of the South ſhall be ſtrong, and one of his Princes, and he ſhall be ſtrong above him, and he ſhall have Dominion, and it ſhall be a great Dominion. Having ſpoken of the diviſion of Alexanders kingdome into four, here leaving two, he declareth onely things to come concerning the other two, with whom the Jews had to doe. And it is to be noted, that the Angel in his predictions of things to be done many years after is ſo punctuall, as that an hiſtorian writing things done cannot more exactly ſet them forth, that the fourth king from Cyrus ſhould be ſo rich, that he ſhould go againſt the Grecians, that from amongſt them a more mighty King ſhould ariſe, that this kingdome ſhould be divided into four, but not of his children, but ſtrangers, and that of them four two ſhould be moſt remarkable, and laſtly, particular paſſages betwixt theſe two, and thoſe in a long proceſſe of time one after another. Pauſanias l. 1.

Diodor. Sicul. l. 12.29 bibl. hiſtor.

For the Kings of the South here ſpoken of, hereby the king of Egypt Ptolemie the ſon of Lagus is meant, who attained a very large kingdome, but yet one of his Princes, that is, a Prince deſcending from him, Ptolemie Philadelphus attained a larger, and was more famous for wiſdome and the love of learning, for he gathered together all ſorts of Bookes, and procured 70 of the Elders of the Jews to be ſent unto him to tranſlate the Old Teſtament into Greek, furniſhing thus his library with that alſo. Thus Lyra, but Polanus ſaith, that by one of his Princes is meant one of Alexanders Princes, Seleucus, who gat the kingdome of Syria, and was a greater King then Ptolemie. And of the Egyptian Kings he reckoneth up 6. Ptolemie Soter, the ſonne of Lagus, whom the Macedonians yet held to be the ſon of Philip of Macedon, the ſon of Amyntas. He was a great King, and called Soter, a ſaviour, from the contrary, becauſe that through the wars, that he made againſt Seleucus, the Syrians ſuffered much and many of them periſhed. For the Monarchy of Alexander being divided into four, each king ſought to enlarge his kingdome what he could, by which means great wars were made, eſpecially by Ptolemie againſt Seleucus and Antigonus, another of thoſe kings, and he greatly inlarged his kingdome. After him was Ptolemie Philadelphus before ſpoken of. 3. Ptolemie Energetes. 4. Ptolemie Philopator. 5. Ptolemie Epiphanes. 6. Ptolemie Philometor. And the King of Egypt is called King of the South, becauſe Egypt lay ſouthward from Judea, and Syria North, for which the king of Syria is called king of the North, betwixt which two were the Jews, and therefore continually ſubject to be oppreſſed by them. Of the kings of Syria he reckoneth up eight. Seleucus Nicanor. 2. Antiochus Soter. 3. Antiochus Theos. 4. Antiochus Calinicus. 5. Seleucus Ceraunus. 6. Antiochus Magnus. 7. Seleucus Philopator. 8. Antiochus Epiphanes. For Seleucus Nicanor, or Nicator, he was at the firſt but a Prince of Babylon, then Antigonus the king falling out with him, he went to Ptolemee the king of Egypt, and having obtained of him 1000 Foot men and 300 Horſemen he returned to Babylon and recovered his principality there, growing after this very wealthy in a ſhort time. Then hee was made king of Babylon, and Media, and inlarged his Empire beyond Euphrates. Hee alſo gat Meſopotamia, Armenia and Cappadocia. He had alſo the Perſians, Parthians, Bactrians, Arabians, Tapyrians, Sogdians, Arachotes, Hircans, and other Nations even to the river Indus ſubject unto him, ſo that except Alexander himſelf, no man ever had ſo large an Empire in Aſia, as he. Thus alſo Diodorus Siculus Appianus, Alex. Mnemon and Livy. But of the hiſtory of this kings proceedings who became ſo great, and of Alexanders kingdome firſt divided amongſt four, then coming into the hands of theſe two, the king of the South and North, ſee my Continuation after Eſther. pag.101.102.

V. 6. And in the end of years they ſhall join themſelves together, for the kings daughter of the South ſhall come to the king of the north, and make an agreement, but he ſhall not retain the power of the arm, neither ſhal he ſtand, nor his arm, but ſhee ſhal be given up, and they that brought her and he that begat her, and he that ſtrengthened her in theſe times. Having before ſhewed, to what greatneſſe two of Alexanders Princes ſhould grow, and one greater then the other, that is, Seleucus Nicanor, & Ptolemeus Solter, now he proceedeth to ſhew further, how that after many battels fought formerly between them, when they were both dead and had ended their dayes which were many, for Ptolomie Soter, and Seleucus firſt dyed, and his ſon Antiochus Theos ſucceeded him, and Ptolemie Philadelphus after the death of his Father was king of the South, that is, of Egypt, after which this was done. According to this propheſie then, by the end of years, is meant the end of the yeares of Ptolemie Soter, when his ſon Ptolemie Philadelphus reigned after him. For then, as is here foretold, the King of Egypt to make peace with Antiochus Theos, gave him his daughter to Wife, Berenice by name: whereas he had another Wife or Concubine before called Laodice, but ſhe was put down and Berenice taken for the effecting of peace.

Note.

Thus it was thought, that a ſure foundation of Peace betwixt the Kingdoms was laid, but God, who hateth ſuch doings, turned it into an occaſion of ſpeedy deſtruction to Antiochus Calinicus; for Laodice, whom he had put away, but being won by the love of her look again, took occaſion for his inconſtancie to poiſon him, and he being dead, Antiochus Calinicus his ſon by Laodice, coming to the Crown, that he might reign the more ſecutely, ſlew Berenice, his other Wife, the King of Egypts daughter, together with her ſon, being inſtigated thereunto by his mother Laodice.

But ſuch abominable wickedneſſes went not long unpuniſhed, for Ptolemie Philadelphus being dead not long after his marrying his daughter Berenice to Antiochus Theos, his ſon Ptolemie Evergetes, that ſucceeded him, to be revenged for the murthering of his ſiſter and her ſon, made war upon Calinicus of Syria, and many of his ſubjects out of a deteſtation of his cruelty, revolted from him to the King of Egypt: by which means he being greatly ſtrengthened, ſubdued much of that Kingdom, took Laodice the mother and put her to death, and followed on his victories ſo, as that, had not newes come of troubles ariſing at home in his own kingdom, which cauſed him to return; it was thought, that he would have brought under all Syria, as I have ſhewed alſo in my foreſaid Continuation, pag. 109. 110.

And thus all was fulfilled, that is here ſaid ſo long a time before, ſhe ſhall not retain the power of the arm, neither ſtand, which is ſo ſpoken, becauſe a Queen, as Berenice was, after joining in marriage with the King of Syria, is of great power with the King to hold him, as it were, by a ſtrong hand from doing hurt unto the family of which ſhe cometh, but with her it fell out contrary; for her husband was poiſoned, and a new King reigning, ſhe was ſo far from having any power, that ſhe was not able to ſave her own life, or her childs, as appeareth by the Hiſtory before going.

And ſhe was taken away by death, when murthered by Antiochus Calinicus, and he that begat her was taken away before that, Ptolemie Philadelphus, who with his Forces, if he had lived, would have been a ſtrengthening unto her, and was as long as he lived; which is meant by ſaying, in thoſe dayes; but when he was dead, her brother being too ſlow in his ſetting forth for her reſcue, ſhe periſhed before that he came.

Note.

From all which, note, that wicked means by unlawfull marriages, of making peace are not available; but through Gods curſe thereupon, ſhall produce cruell and bloudy warres: for Solomons peace was thus turned into trouble.

Polanus.

2. Murther and bloudſhed ſhall undoubtedly be puniſhed with bloudſhed, how cunningly ſoever it be contrived: as it was in Laodice after the ſecond murther by her inſtigation committed. Polanus following Appianus Alexandrinus, ſaith, that Laodice was the daughter of Ptolemie Philadelphus alſo, and that here was the foul ſin of inceſt committed: but this is not probable, becauſe then Ptolemie Evergetes the brother of Berenice would not in way of revenge for the death of one ſiſter have ſlain the other; and becauſe, as I have ſhewed in my foreſaid Hiſtory; that Laodice was but the Concubine of Antiochus Theos.

V.7.

But out of a branch of her roots one ſhall ſtand up in his eſtate, that ſhall come with an army and enter into the fortreſſes of the King of the North, and ſhall deal againſt them and prevail: Having ſhewed v.6. how Berenice the daughter of Ptolemie Philadelphus ſhould be taken away, and her father alſo, who dyed before that Antiochus Calinicus had ſhewed that cruelty againſt her; now he proceedeth to ſhew the manner how this ſhould be done.

By this branch underſtand Ptolemie Evergetes, who made warre, as was ſaid before, againſt Antiochus Callinicus and mightily prevailed; and returning, V.8,9. Hieron. as is ſaid v.8,9. carryed away the Idols of Egypt, which Cambyſes the Perſian King had before taken in great numbers, and pretious veſſels of ſilver and gold, viz. of ſilver 40000 talents, as Jerome ſaith; and he is ſaid to be a branch of his roots, becauſe he ſprang from the ſame parents, Ptolemie Philadelphus and her Wife, and returned again at the hearing of troubles ariſing in his own land, as hath been already ſaid.

Joſeph.lib.2. contra Appion. To this Joſephus addeth, that Ptolemie Evergetes having obtained ſo great victories, although he carryed away the Egyptian gods, yet he ſacrificed not unto them, but going to Jeruſalem, in his return he in way of thankfulneſſe to the god of the Jewes offered his oblations at the Temple there.

V. 10. But his ſons ſhall be ſtirred up and ſhall aſſemble a multitude of great Forces, and one ſhall certainly come and overflow and paſſe through, then ſhall he return and be ſtirred up even to his fortreſſe: Antiochus Calinicus being ſubdued, as is aforeſaid, dyed, his Kingdom of Syria becoming a prey to Ptolemie: but now it is further ſhewed, and accordingly it came to paſſe, his two ſons, Seleucus Ceraunus, and Antiochus Magnus went againſt Ptolemie Philopator, who now raigned after his father Evergetes in Egypt, but Ceraunus the elder brother dying whileſt he was upon the way, Antiochus Magnus hearing of it, went forth in the ſame expedition, and of him it is ſingularly here ſaid, one ſhal certainly come and overflow: But this was not immediately after the death of his brother, at what time he was very young, but having gone through many adventures before, and fought with thoſe of his own ſubjects that rebelled againſt him: For after all this he went againſt Ptolemie Philopator, a ſenſuall man, with a very great army, and gat the victory at the firſt; but Ptolemie being hereby forced to leave his pleaſure for a time gathered a great army and fought with Antiochus and overcame; and then Antiochus having alſo other enemies, made peace with Ptolemie, that he might goe againſt them.

V. 11. And this was according to that which followeth, v. 11. and the King of the South ſhall be moved with choler, and ſhal come forth and fight with the King of the North, and he ſhal ſet forth a great multitude, but they ſhal be given into his hand: that is, Antiochus the King of Syria, who brought into the field as great an army as Ptolemie, even ſeventy thouſand, and yet the victory fel to Ptolemie, as hath been ſaid, and he was forced to make peace with him; of all which ſee more at large in my foreſaid Continuation p. 117.

V. 12. And when he hath taken away the multitude, his heart ſhall be lifted up, and he ſhall caſt down many ten thouſands, but he ſhall not be ſtrengthened by it: that is, Ptolemy by his good ſucceſſe before ſpoken of, ſhall be puffed up with pride, and go to the houſe of God at Jeruſalem, and preſume to enter thereinto, which was in any man a moſt high degree of pride, but the high Prieſt praying God to keep his houſe from being thus prophaned, he was immediately ſmitten, ſo as that they thought he would preſently have dyed, wherefore his ſervants carryed him forth; but he tooke this repulſe ſo indignly at the Jews hands, that he threatned to take revenge upon them. For this the Jewes being filled with feare, were caſt down in prayer and faſting, which was his caſting of many Myriads down; and God was by them intreated miraculouſly to ſave them and their City to the Kings great detriment, he being again ſmitten in his perſon, and his Elephants ſo ſcared, that they turned back upon the Kings Army and ſlew many of them, ſo that he was nothing ſtrengthened, but rather weakned hereby. Lyra by his caſting down of many 10000, underſtands Antiochus his army, but who doubteth but that he was ſtrengthened hereby? this was after that.

V. 13. For the King of the North ſhall come, and ſet forth a multitude greater then the former. This is ſaid to have been done after many years, for it was not till after the death of Ptolemie Philopator in the time of his ſon Ptolemie Epiphanes being but 4 years old. For Philopator having reigned 17 years, in which time he lived in all ſenſuall pleaſure with Agathoclea and Agathocles, the ſiſter and the brother, dyed; and his young ſon was under the tuition of theſe two. Hereupon Antiochus Epiphanes taking advantage of the evill condition wherein things were in Egypt, by means of theſe Uſurpers and this Infant, came with a great Army, which he prepared againſt Philopator, and procured the King of Macedonia to joine with him, it being between them agreed, that the Cities which they ſhould take in Egypt, ſhould be ſhared between them, one part which lay neereſt to the King of Macedon, going to him, and the reſt to Antiochus. V. 14. And this is that which is here ſaid of many coming againſt the King of the South, and of a greater multitude brought by the King of the North, then before. Alſo the Robbers of thy people, ſhall exalt themſelves to eſtabliſh the viſion. This was done, when the Egyptians and Syrians being thus in war on both ſides of Judea: Onias the high Prieſt went into Egypt, where he with his brethren had a place aſſigned unto him in Heliopolis, and there built a Temple, pretending the accompliſhment of the propheſie of *Eſay ch.*19. where it is ſaid, There ſhall be in that day an Altar in the midſt of the Land of Egypt. And by this means many Jewes were drawn thither, and many tooke part with Antiochus.

Lyra. Now becauſe that viſion was pretended, it is ſaid, that they may fulfill the viſion, yet they that did this are called Robbers, Vulg. Lat. Prævaricatores, becauſe it was a manifeſt tranſgreſſion to ſacrifice in any other place, then at Jeruſalem; and they erred in making ſuch application of the propheſie of Eſay, and therefore it is further added, that they ſhall fall; and ſo they did indeed, for the Romans coming into Egypt and ſubduing it, burnt this Temple, and laid it even with the ground, deſtroying the Jewes there in great multitudes.

Note. Note hence, that they are robbers of God and notorious tranſgreſſours, that preſume to ſerve God any otherwiſe then he hath in his word appointed. For to his word we muſt take heed in all things, and not goe therefrom ſo much as in any circumſtance; for the Jews offending herein eſcaped not the vengeance of God.

Note alſo, that any part of the word being miſ-underſtood, will not bear a man out, if he doth contrary to the meaning; ſo that we had need to conſider and ſearch diligently for the true meaning of every place, that we be not unawares intangled with errour, and conſequently come into danger of deſtruction.

Laſtly the pride of thoſe, that goe upon falſe grounds of Scripture is ſo great, that when they doe abominably, they bear it out, as if they were the moſt pious of all others.

V. 15. So the King of the North ſhall come and caſt up a mount, and take the moſt fenced cities, &c. How this was fulfilled, ſee in my foreſaid Continuation *p.*126. Antiochus Magnus having his Army ready to come againſt Egypt with the united forces of Macedonia, the Egyptians ſent Embaſſadours to the Romans, deſiring to take their young King into their protection, and to forbid the two Kings to go on in their war againſt their land; to this the Romans readily aſſented, and ſent to forbid them; but Antiochus nothing moved hereat, went on and fought, and tooke divers Cities of Egypt, the Romans being in the mean time buſied in their wars againſt Philip King of Macedonia. V. 16. v.16. And he ſhall ſtand in the glorious land, which by his hand ſhall be conſumed: touching this, the Jewes ſeeing the good ſucceſſe of Antiochus, fell to him, ſo many as were about Jeruſalem, and he being entered their City, they holpe him to drive out the Garriſon of the Egyptians, which held a tower there; and this was his ſtanding in the glorious land, and the conſuming thereof by his hand, becauſe he conſumed the Egyptians there, and their adherents; there none left now but ſuch as ſtood to him.

V. 17. He ſhall alſo ſet his face to enter into his whole Kingdome, and his upright ones with him, and he ſhall give him the daughter of women, corrupting her, but ſhe ſhall not ſtand on his ſide: the Vulg. for theſe words, and his upright ones with him, hath it, he ſhall do right things unto him, ſo likewiſe Hebr. the meaning is, Antiochus having taken divers Cities of Egypt, not being ſatisfied herewith, ſhall ſeek the overthrow and conqueſt of the whole Kingdome; and to this end ſhall politickly caſt about to doe it, by giving to Ptolemie Epiphanes his daughter Cleopatra to Wiſe, for which, it is ſaid, he ſhall do right things with him, that is, in appearance, becauſe this ſeemed to tend to the ſettling of a peace, although he had another end in his mind, viz. by the means to take advantage. And thus it came to paſſe, for Antiochus, who before deſpiſed the Romans, and ſet light by their charge to deſiſt from attempting any thing againſt Egypt, hearing that they were upon terms of Peace with Philip King of Macedonia, ſent an Embaſſage to them, telling them, that he would make peace with Ptolemie and give him his daughter Cleopatra to Wiſe, and reſtore the Cities which he had taken; which he did, eſpouſing her unto him at the 7 year of her age, and marrying her at the 13. But when as he thought by her meanes the more eaſily to obtain the kingdom of Egypt, ſhe rather ſtood for her husband, and he was diſappointed. And his daughter Cleopatra is called the daughter of women, becauſe ſhe was one moſt rare for her beauty, being alſo wiſe and underſtanding.

V. 18. After this he ſhall turn his face to the Iſles and take many, but a Prince for his own behalf ſhall cauſe the reproach offered by him to ceaſe, without his own reproach he ſhall cauſe it to turn upon him. This was fulfilled when Antiochus falling upon the Iſlands of Aſia, and making warre upon them, tooke many; but they being in league with the Romans, ſoone had aid againſt him. Scipio Africanus being ſent, who is the Prince here ſpoken of, and the reproach cauſed by Antiochus ceaſed, and was turned upon him, when as Scipio overcame and chaſed him away, who before had overcome, and to their great reproach ſubdued thoſe Iſlanders.

Thus Lyra, calling him Africanus, whereas in truth his brother for his victories in Africa had that ſurname, and he for his victories in Aſia, of Scipio Aſiaticus.

V. 19. Then he ſhall turn his face to his own land, but he ſhall ſtumble and fall, and not be found: For Antiochus being beaten from the Iſles of Aſia, thought to returne home into Syria his own country, but in the way he was ſlain and cut in pieces ſo as that his dead body being ſought could not after this be found: Thus Lyra, alledging 2 *Maccab.*1.16. But becauſe, as I have ſhewed in my foreſaid continuation, that this Antiochus dyed in Syria 2 years after his war with the Romans ended; that ſpoken of Antiochus 2 *Mac.*1. muſt be underſtood of another of that name, and not of him; for his falling and not being found, this was fulfilled by his death happening ſo ſoon after, viz. ann. 27. of his reign, it being a common phraſe to expreſſe the ſtate of the dead, he is gone and no more ſeen.

V. 20. Then ſhall ſtand up in his eſtate a raiſer of taxes in the glory of the Kingdom, but in a few dayes he ſhall be deſtroyed neither in anger, nor battail; the Vulg. for a raiſer of taxes in the glory of the Kingdome, hath it, viliſſimus & indignus decore regio: but herein the ſenſe, which he conceived that was the tranſlatour, was rather reſpected then the words: Seleucus Philopator who was the King here propheſied of, (for he ſucceeded his father Antiochus Magnus) was a man ſo ignoble in his life, that in all his time he did nothing of note, although he reigned 12 years; and for this, the Vulg. reads it ſo, a moſt vile man, and unworthy of Kingly honour: whereas Hebr. it is, an exacter paſſing through the glory of the Kingdom: as if he had ſaid, he ſhould be King indeed; but of him nothing elſe ſhould be memorable, then that he ſhould be permitted to reign and wear the ornaments of a King, but all his glory ſhould lye herein only, his imployment all the time being nothing elſe, but as of a Tribute-gatherer of the Romans, to whom he was to pay according to his fathers agreement 1000 talents per annum For his deſtruction, it was by Heliodorus a man in high place about him, who ruled all as he pleaſed, but becauſe the King had ſent his ſon for an hoſtage to Rome, and called his brother Antiochus away, who lay as hoſtage there before; he now fearing at his return, that he ſhould not bear any ſuch ſway any more, poiſoned him, and thus he fell not in wrath, nor battle, but by treachery.

Yet if this were the Heliodorus ſent to rob and bring away the ſpoiles of the Temple; of whom it is ſpoken 2 *Mac.*3. that Seleucus ſent him to Jeruſalem to this end, when he heard of the great treaſures there; but he returned well ſcourged and without the ſaid Treaſures, as there is ſhewed at large: It is worth the noting, that both the King that ſent him, had him made by the juſt judgment of God, the inſtrument of his deſtruction: and Heliodorus went not after that long unjudged; for after that treacherous fact done by him againſt the King, Eumenes the King of Pergamus came and ſlue him, and delivered the Kingdom to Antiochus the foreſaid brother of Seleucus at his return from Rome, hoping by this means to have him ever after a ſure friend: wherefore it is an evill covetouſneſſe in any, to covet treaſures ſanctified, and will undoubtedly bring deſtruction upon the covetors. Note.

And forſomuch as Heliodorus being before puniſhed for his ſacrilegious attempt, was nothing amended, but by his ambition ran into another foul ſin of murthering his King, and then was payed for al together by his own bloudſhed: Note that when a mans ſins come to the full, he ſhall eſcape Gods judgments no longer.

Laſtly, becauſe he is ſaid to have done this in hope to reign, but was thus prevented: Note that murtherers of their Kings judgments ſleep not, but are at the door and ſhall ſuddenly come upon them and they ſhall not eſcape; there being no example to be found of any that have committed this horrible ſin, but vengeance hath been taken of them within leſſe then a year; as upon all the murtherers of Julius Cæſar, and of Kings commemorated in Scripture, that were murthered by ſuch as reigned in their ſtead.

V. 21. And in his eſtate ſhall ſtand up a vile perſon to whom they ſhall not give the honour of the Kingdome, but he ſhall come in peaceably and obtain the Kingdome by flatteries: According to this propheſie, Seleucus being dead, Antiochus called Epiphanes ſucceeded in his Kingdome, although not his ſon and heir, but his brother. For his ſons name that ſhould have reigned in his ſtead, was Demetrius now a pledge at Rome in ſtead of this Antiochus, who was a pledge there before, and becauſe he was young, being but 10 years old, his uncle Antiochus entered the Kingdome at the firſt but as a Protectour, but after he had entered, he ſoon took it upon him as King. And becauſe he was Uncle to Ptolemie Philometor, who now reigned in Egypt, being very young alſo, he ambitiouſly ſought to be Protectour of the Kingdome of Egypt, but being rejected by the Lords of that Country, he prepared to make warre againſt them; whereupon they ſent to Rome and Popilius was ſoon ſent, who came opportunely as he was marching towards Egypt; after ſpeaking with whom, and ſeeing the Senates Letters, he durſt not goe any further, but returned home.

Now he is ſaid to be a vile perſon, becauſe not the heir to the Crown, but of an inferiour condition, and that they gave not to him the honour of the Kingdome, becauſe the father of Seleucus Philopator appointed him and not this Antiochus to be King after him, but he obtains the Kingdome by flattery, pretending nothing, but to be Protectour in his Nephews minority.

V. 22. And with the arms of a floud they ſhall be overflown from before him, and ſhall be broken; yea alſo the prince of the covenant, the Vulg. and the arms of the fighter ſhall be expugned from before him: but the New Teſtament agreeth beſt with the Hebrew, the word שטף ſignifying a floud, and it is word for word the arms of a floud ſhal overflow; the meaning is, that Antiochus being repelled by the Lords of Egypt in his ſute to be Protector of the young King his Nephew; gathered Forces to fight againſt them, and they coming as a floud with Forces bearing downe all things, were overcome by him, and they being overcome, their King called the prince of the covenant was overcome alſo. And by this name he is called, becauſe when Antiochus had beaten his Lords, he told him, that he did what he had done, not out of any ill will, but love towards him, and deſire of his good; and to perſwade him of this he made a covenant with him to be true to him, and ſo he became Protectour of the Kingdom, as he being thus drawn by him agreed with him, and made a covenant with him.

And

V. 23. And after the league made with him, he ſhal deceitfully, &c. For when Antiochus
V. 24. had thus agreed with the young King, he came with ſmall Forces and carryed away out of the chief Cities of Egypt, of which he thus became Maſter, ſo great riches, as none of his progenitours had ever formerly done. This Ptolemie Philometor ſeeing into, ſought to agree with his brother Phyſcon, who had before by his mothers inſtigation, contended with him about the kingdome: the kingdome of Egypt being thus divided between them both, Antiochus Epiphanes hearing this, gathered great Forces again to invade Egypt, but the States of Egypt ſent Embaſſadours to him to know the cauſe, and what would ſatisfie him, that he might abſtain from hoſtility: then he demanding certain Cities which had been taken before, the Egyptians who ſent to the Romans for aid during this parle, having Embaſſadours ſent from thence to prohibit Antiochus to goe againſt them, thought that they ſhould have had peace; but he knowing that the Romans were buſied in another War in Macedonia, went on, and at length, when they ſaw no remedy, they yeelded the demanded Cities unto him, and ſo had peace again.

Joſeph. antiq. l. 12. c.4.5. Joſephus relateth the hiſtory of Epiphanes thus, He coveting to get the kingdom of Egypt, took the opportunity of Ptolemie Philometors childhood, to invade Egypt with a mighty army, but was encountred by Euleus and Leneus two mighty Princes of Egypt; who in times paſt, had uſed to invade and overflow Syria with great Forces; yet Antiochus prevailing, they were both ſlain and their Forces ſcattered: And therefore by theſe the arms of an overflowing floud, which were broken, may be underſtood.

The other Princes of Egypt ſeeing this, ſought to have a covenant made with him about the Tuteleſhip of the young King his ſiſters ſon, amongſt whom Tryphon was the chief, being therefore moſt probably here called the prince of the covenant, who is alſo ſaid to be broken, becauſe after this league made, Antiochus took order to take away Tryphon by cutting him off, that he might not be hindered in his deſigns; and then he entered Memphis not with many, as had been covenanted before, wherein the chiefe ſtrength of Egypt lay; placing a Garriſon of his own there, by which means he kept the countrey in awe, and carrying great treaſures away, as was before ſaid, domineered for a time, as here is further ſaid, at his will. For it was but for a time, for Ptolemie Philometor being grown up to more years, took courage to him to drive the Garriſons of Antiochus out of his land, of which it is ſaid, V. 25. the King of the South ſhal be ſtirred up with a very great army, but he ſhal not ſtand, for they ſhal forecaſt devices againſt him. Hereby the forecaſters of devices againſt him are meant his own Lords, who ſhould under hand take part with Antiochus againſt their own King, becauſe they feared, that he being young and unexperienced, Antiochus would prevail, and then it would goe ill with them: and by this means Philometor was overthrown, as it is here ſaid, but he ſhal not ſtand: V. 26. of theſe wicked devices againſt their King, it is further ſaid v.26. Yea they that feed of the portion of his meat, ſhal deſtroy him; to make it further plain that his

Kings hearts ſhall be to do miſchief, and they ſhall ſpeak lyes at one table, but it ſhal not devices before ſpoken of to have been for the making of peace to the great diſadvantage of the King of Egypt, whereby he afterwards fell; ſaith, that it being concluded, Ptolemie feaſted Antiochus, but whileſt they ſhewed mutuall love either to other in their ſpeeches, and court complements, they neither of them intended what they ſaid in their hearts, and this he calleth their lying one to another, one aiming at nothing elſe but the circumventing of the other; Antiochus aiming at the getting of all Ptolemies kingdoms, and Ptolemie at the getting of his, but it ſhal not proſper; neither of them ſhall have his deſire this way, becauſe the end of either of theſe kingdoms ſhall be at the appointed time, that is, the time ſet by God, and not before by any force or fraud of theirs againſt one another: the Vulg. rendereth it, yet the end ſhal be at another time: or rather this appointed time is that ſpoken of verſ.29. when by the Romans an end was put to the ſtirrings of Antiochus againſt Egypt any more.

Then ſhall he return into his Land with great riches, &c. that is, Antiochus with much wealth by his foreſaid expedition gotten in Egypt, and his heart ſhall be againſt the holy Covenant, and ſhall doe exploits; this is put here in brief to be further dilated upon verſ. 30.

V. 28.

At the time appointed hee ſhall return and come towards the ſouth, but it ſhall not be, as the former or as the latter. From whence we may gather, that he went out againſt Egypt twice before, and that this was the third time, once verſ. 23, 24. when he returned with ſo great riches out of Egypt, as never any king of Syria did before him, the ſecond, verſ. 25. 28. when he carryed away great riches alſo. But now the third time he goeth out, but not with the like ſucceſſe, and hereof the reaſon is ſhewed, verſ. 30. For the ſhips of Chittim ſhall come againſt him, therefore he ſhall be grieved and return, that is, the Romans being ſought unto by the Egyptians, ſent Popilius a Senator unto him with letters from the Senate, forbidding him to meddle with the Egyptians their confederates, and requiring him to reſt content with his own kingdome. And when he deſired time to conſider what to anſwer, he having made a circle with his ſtaffe round about Antiochus charged him not to depart out of it, till he had given that his anſwer to the Senates letters. At this he was much troubled, yet durſt doe no otherwiſe but depart with his army homeward again. But now the wicked plot which he had before in his head againſt the Temple at Jeruſalem called the holy covenant, becauſe the Ark of the Covenant or teſtimony ſtood there in the moſt holy place, he moſt barbarouſly put in practice. He ſhall return and have indignation againſt the Holy Covenant, and have intelligence with them, that forſake the Holy Covenant, &c. Of this ſee my Continuation often ſpoken before, pag. 131. 132. how Menelaus the High Prieſt at that time conſented with him, and went into the Sanctuary before him, which he robbed of 180 talents of gold and ſilver, and having ſlain of men, women and children 80000 and ſold for ſlaves 40000 he returned home into his own country.

V. 29.

V. 30.

V. 30.

And armes ſhall ſtand on his ſide, and they ſhall pollute the Sanctuary and take away the dayly Sacrifice, and ſhall place the abomination making deſolate. This was fulfilled when Epiphanes had a garriſon of Macedonians in Jeruſalem to keep all in awe, that none might dare to ſtir againſt him whatſoever he did, and when within two yeares he ſent to prohibit ſacrificing to God, or keep his laws, puniſhing all ſuch as obeyed him not in moſt cruell manner, and to ſet up in the Temple the image of Iupiter here called the abomination making deſolate, becauſe that for Manaſſeh his doing the like, and ſetting up idols altars to pollute the Temple the land was made deſolate by the Caldees for 70 yeares, and ſo was in danger to be again for this. Whence note, that abominations in a land bring deſolation to it, the one being as inſeparable from another, as the effect from the cauſe, burning from fire, darkneſſe from night, or the deſtruction of the bodily life from poiſon being drunk. And although idolatries of all ſorts are moſt commonly ſet forth by the name of abominations, yet it is certain, that there are other groſſe ſins, which are abominations alſo, becauſe Dan. 9. 27. it is ſaid, for the overſpreading of abominations he will make it deſolate, when as the Jews had left all their Idolatries after their return out of captivity. Wherefore there be other abominations working to deſolation as well as idolatry, yea to a greater and longer laſting, and what theſe principally be, read Mat. 23. 23. O Jeruſalem that killeſt the Prophets, &c. Behold thy habitation ſhall be left deſolate, which intimateth, that bloudſhed, and ſpecially of Prophets and men ſent of God, but above all of Shiloh, that ſent one, bringeth the greateſt and moſt dreadfull deſolation of all other ſins.

And ſuch as doe wickedly againſt the Covenant ſhall be corrupt by flatteries, but the people that know their God, ſhall be ſtrong and doe exploits. This was fulfilled in Alcimus a Prieſt of the ſeed of Aaron, as is ſhewed 1 Mac. 7. who was a vile inſtrument, to promote heatheniſm amongſt the Jews, and corrupted many, and in Eleazarus, and the mother with her ſeven children conſtantly ſuffering torments

God there again that had long ceaſed.

V. 33. And they that underſtand among thy people ſhall inſtruct many, yet they ſhall fall by the moved to join with him in a reſolution to vindicate the Laws and Temple of God from violation, but at the firſt their enemies coming upon them on the Sabbath day, when they made ſcruple of fighting to defend themſelves, many whoſe honoring God thus with their gifts ſee 2 Mac. 3. 2. But this God he regarded not, for he made his dayly Sacrifices to ceaſe, as hath been already ſaid; nor the deſire of women, for as Polanus ſaith, having one wife, that laboured with

with him what ſhee could to hold him from thoſe attempts againſt the God of Iſrael, he yet hardened his heart and would not be moved by her to forbear. For the next words, verſ. 38. But in his eſtate he ſhal honour the God of forces, Heb. mauzzim, which ſignifieth forces, and to render it word for word, it is, for the God of ſtrengths or forces, in his ſeat ſhal he honour, and a god whom his fathers knew not he ſhal honour, &c. By the God of forces the true God, who is Almighty, being meant, it is here prophefied, that in the Temple at Ieruſalem his proper ſeat upon earth hee ſhould honour Iupiter Olympius, as indeed Antiochus Epiphanes did, ſending an old man thither to dedicate the Temple to this idol, and to ſet it up therein. And thus he is ſaid to have honoured with his pretious gifts a god, that his fathers knew not, becauſe this Idol Iupiter was none of their countrey god, but Apollo and Diana, and Atargatis a goddeſſe of the Syrians, as Strabo ſaith. The vulgar tranſlation then, and the New Tranſlation rendring it, he ſhal honour the God Mauzzim, or of Forces, is farre from the true ſenſe, and right grammaticall conſtruction of the words, by joining thoſe things together, which are to be disjoined, as hath been already ſhewed, and this hath cauſed great errour in ſome, taking Mauzzim for devill, ſome for Mahomet, or ſome other, all which are abſurd. And now it is time to make application of all that hath been ſaid of this Antiochus to Antichriſt, the Pope of Rome. That Antichriſt is here ſet forth is the tenet of Jerome and of all antiquity, yea ſome expound it altogether of Antichriſt, or at the leaſt as fulfilled in him, being but in part fulfilled in Antiochus. For theſe words, ſaith Lyra, he ſhal not regard the God of his fathers, or any God, cannot agree to Antiochus, ſith that hee was an idolater as well as his Fathers, and now, when hee put downe all other rites about other gods, yet hee was a worſhipper of Jupiter. But by that which hath been already ſaid we may ſee, that it is not unaptly applyed to Antiochus, becauſe that howſoever it be ſaid, he ſhal not regard any God, yet it is added for further explication, hee ſhal honour a god with gold and pretious ſtones, &c. whereby we are given to underſtand, that by any god is not meant any god at all, but any god uſed to be worſhipped and honoured by his fathers or countrey men. Wherefore it is to be held, that the things here propheſied were all fulfilled in Antiochus, but in ſpeaking thus of him the ſpirit of God had a further aime, in him and the abominations committed by him, to ſet forth the Antichriſt, and that not one yet to come, being one particular perſon, who ſhould reign 3 yeares and an half 1260 dayes, as hath been generally held of old, but the Pope of Rome being, as it were, one continued Antichriſt in each Pope ſucceeding his predeceſſour for ſo many yeares, as the dayes before ſpoken of. And this may well be made undeniably to appear, if we begin with Antiochus his beginning, and from thence proceed throughout all that which is propheſied of him; and lay the Popes beginning and proceedings hereunto in his horrible pride and ambition, and conculcating the Laws and Ordinances of God under his feet, and ſetting up his own upon pain of death to be obeyed and followed by all men. For his beginning, as he was at the firſt baſe in reſpect of that which he afterwards came unto, ſo was the Pope of Rome a poore man, as Peter, whom they reckon for the firſt that ſate in that ſeat, who ſaid to the Creeple that expected an almes from him, ſilver and gold have I none, but if after the example of Peter, he had contained in this poor and humble eſtate, he ſhould never have ſo farre degenerated, as of a Miniſter of Chriſt to have become Antichriſt. 2. As Antiochus, ſo the Pope uſurped a kingdom, that belonged not unto him, and whereunto he had no right, for to be chief Biſhop and above all others is peculiar to Chriſt and not communicable to any other, as one of the Biſhops of Rome himſelfe, even Gregory the firſt, taught in his Epiſtle to Johannes Neſtentes Biſhop of Conſtantinople, averring, that hee who ſhould take upon him to be Univerſall Biſhop, or Biſhop of Biſhops, was either Antichriſt, or the forerunner of Antichriſt, for not a temporall Crown, but croſſes belong to every one of Chriſts Diſciples according to that, he that wil be my Diſciple, let him take up his croſſe and follow me. 3. As Antiochus, ſo the Pope by flattery in a peaceable manner gat his kingdome by inſinuating into Phocas, that murtherer of his maſter Mauritius and reigned in his ſtead: for till Pope Hildebrand otherwiſe called Gregory the ſeventh after an. Domini 600. none of the Biſhops of Rome ever attained unto it, although divers ambitiouſly ſought it, as Silveſter, Boniface and Sozimus, who ſent their Legats to the ſixth Affrican Councell impudently to require to have it confirmed by the authority of that Councell, but had a moſt ſhamefull repulſe, as being detected of forgery about the Decrees of the Councell of Nice, which they ſaid, had long before given the ſupremacy to the Pope of Rome, but the true copy thereof being ſent for to Alexandria, therein their fraud appeared, for there was nothing elſe there decreed touching the Biſhop of Rome, but that he ſhould be Epiſcopus primæ ſedis Conſtantinopolitanus Epiſcopus ſecundæ,&c.

2. Again as Antiochus being grown rich and mighty, his heart was againſt the holy Covenant, ver. 28. and he had indignation againſt it, and had intelligence with thoſe that forſook it, v. 30. ſo as the Pope of Rome hath his heart gone from the ſincerity of the truth of the New Teſtament or Covenant, for he hath made a great defection herefrom, as it was foretold, 2 Theſ. 2.3. There ſhal be a falling away firſt, and the man of ſin ſhal be revealed, and he hath judgment at it, but is all one with thoſe that taking part with him forſake it. For what is the new Covenant, but a Covenant of Grace, not of works? and againſt this both he is and all his adherents, in that he decreeth juſtification and ſalvation to be of works, and not of faith without works of the Law coming in as meritorious before God, and this he grew to after that hee was greatly inriched by Conſtantine the Great, abundance of worldly wealth breeding in him a thirſt after more, and this thirſt a device of the merit of good works done for the benefit of Matth. 15. the Prieſt, as well as of the poor, yea rather for the Prieſts, as the Phariſees of old taught the people to ſay Corban, and ſo not to relieve their very parents being poor, becauſe the Prieſt can offer the ſacrifice of the maſſe for the benefit and good of his benefactours being dead.

3. As armes ſtood for Antiochus, that is warriours to deſtroy the poore Jews to wonderfull great numbers, as hath been before ſhewed, through an hatred in him conceived againſt them, ſo infinite numbers of poore Chriſtians have been ſlain in all parts by ſecular Princes taking part with the Pope, Polanus; and here Polanus reckoneth up as partakers with the Pope, Phocas before mentioned, and Pipin a murtherer of the French King Chilperick, Rudolphus Suevus a perjured perſon and rebel againſt his Lord, Henry the fourth, Henry the fifth, the murtherer of his Father Henry the fourth. Duke Albanus in Belgia, Henry the ſecond, Francis the ſecond, Charles the ninth, Henry the third, Kings of France, all abbettors of the Pope, in favour of him murthering many. In the tumults ſtirred up in Italy by Gregory the ſeventh, Paſchalis the ſecond, Innocent the third, and Gregory the ninth, and in Germany & France they were almoſt innumerable that periſhed, and by the inſtigation of Nicolas the third in great ſecrecie, all the French in Sicily were cut off in one day. And as Antiochus prophaned the Temple ſetting up the abomination making deſolate, and cauſing the dayly ſacrifice to ceaſe, which God had ordained, and the Jews to tranſgreſs Gods Laws. So the Pope hath overthrown the true worſhip and ſervice of God, and in ſtead thereof hath brought in abominable idolatry and ſuperſtition, turning the very hoaſt or offering of Chriſts body upon the Lords Table to be eaten to everlaſting life, into an idol to be kneeled unto and adored, as the Son of God, verſ. 31. V. 32.

4. As Antiochus taught ſuch as brake the Covenant to deal deceitfully, ſo the Pope hath his agents, who are themſelves corrupted with the poiſon of his doctrine, that are moſt cunning and ſubtle to draw others from the truth, and to propagate his ſuperſtition; of this ſort there have been many in former times and ages, but of later dayes the Jeſuites have been moſt notoriouſly pragmaticall. So that herein he appeareth to be the Antichriſt, as Gregory the firſt noteth, becauſe as Chriſt choſe and ſent out ſimple fiſhermen to propagate his Goſpell, ſo he ſendeth out perſons full of craft and ſubtlety to deceive. And both Antichriſts working by the armes before ſpoken of, and the ſubtlety here ſpoken is further notably ſet forth by the ſame Gregory in his Morals upon Job, ſaying touching Leviathan, whom he makes a figure of Antichriſt, in the circuit of his teeth there is feare, when the perverſe powers of this world protect his preachers: For many of the mighty ſeek by raging to terrifie ſuch as they ſeek by ſpeaking to ſeduce what manner of time of perſecution ſhall appeare then, when to pervert the piety of the faithful ſome ſhall rage with words and ſome with ſwords: For who although weak would not deſpiſe the teeth of Leviathan if the terrour of ſecular powers did not fence them about? But they are doubly aſſaulted, when that which is by ſome ſpoken with flattering words, is by others commanded with ſtriking ſwords. Of this double way of Antichriſts dealing John ſpeaketh, ſaying, that the Locuſts power was in their mouths and their tailes, their mouths ſetting forth his preachers, and their tailes with ſtings in them his ſecular powers. But whileſt other by theſe two means are ſeduced, there are ſome that know God, who are ſtrong and doe exploits; that is, both wiſe and made intelligent by the Word of God, and of ſuch a ſtrong Faith in Chriſt, that they moſt valiantly withſtand Antichriſt and his proceedings, wherein they alſo have ſucceſſe by their chriſtian courage and fortitude winning many more unto them, and diſcovering the Antichriſtian fallacies, a Catalogue of whom ſee in my Engliſh Catechiſm upon that Article of the Catholick Church.

5. But fiftly, as they that oppoſed Epiphanes were ſlain with the ſword and flame verſ. 33. ſo the oppoſers of Antichriſt, as is notoriouſly known, eſpecially in England in Q. Maries dayes ſuffered in the flames of fire, and by the ſword and maſſacring ſundry times in France, and noble exploits were done by the Bohemians under their Captain Zizka, as by the Jews under Judas Maccabeus and his brethren. But before I leave this of the Popes bloudy practiſes againſt men of underſtanding, who knew God, I think it not a miſſe to ſhew againſt what Emperours and Princes, who oppoſed his ſuperſtition, he hath raged at ſundry times. Philip Bardanus Emperour, commanded all Images to be taken away out of Churches every where, and that by the conſent of John, Patriarch of Conſtantinople: But Conſtantine the Biſhop of Rome for this excommunicated him for an heretick, and would not ſuffer any image of him to ſtand in any place, nor mention to be made of him in the maſſe, as was uſed formerly to be done. Leo the third going into Italy the tenth yeare of his reign, and finding images in Churches there and in Sicily cauſed them to be caſt out and burnt: but Gregory the ſecond being hereby inraged abſolved his ſubjects from their obedience unto him, whereupon great troubles aroſe in Italy, wherein the Exarch of Ravenna was ſlain, and men denyed to the Emperour tributes and cuſtomes, and by Gregory the third he was deprived of his imperiall dignity. Conſtantine Copronymus his ſon perſiſting in his Fathers ſteps called a Councell at Conſtantinople of 330 Biſhops, wherein Images were alſo condemned, and the calling upon the Virgin Mary and other like ſuperſticions. But Steven the ſecond Pope of Rome ſo raged againſt him for this, that he removed the Empire from Conſtantinople to France, and Hadrian the Pope wrought ſo with Irene the Empreſſe afterwards, who was a great patroneſſe of Images, that ſhee cauſed the body of Conſtantine to be taken up 23 yeares after his deceaſe, and burnt openly, and the aſhes thereof to be caſt into the Sea in deteſtation of his fact.

Polanus.

Conſtantine the ſixth, the ſon of the ſaid Irene, put down Images again, which his mother had ſet up, but ſhe therefore deprived him both of his ſight and life. Henry the fourth of France, whileſt he was a proteſtant, was oppoſed by ſix Popes one after another, Gregory the thirteenth, Urbanus the ſeventh, Sixtus the fifth, Gregory the fourteenth, Innocent the ninth, Clement the eighth, til that he ſhamefully fell away to popery, whereof Clement the eighth triumphed.

Queen Elizabeth was for the ſame excommunicated, but preſerved either from falling or ſuffering. And James 6. King of Scotland had treaſons for this wrought againſt him.

The Medicean Princes, as Volateranus ſaith, were aſſaulted, and one ſlain in the time of the Maſs, by the inſtigation of the Pope. The Count of Tholouſe had a great war made againſt him, by the Popes inſtigation, for defending the Albingenſes, who ſtood againſt the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation. John Frederick Duke of Saxony, and other Princes of Germany ſuffered by warre alſo of the Popes ſtirring up for religion, working in them an hatred of his evill wayes. Count Egmond, and Count Hornius of Belgia were hanged at the command of Duke Albanus for none other cauſe. Theſe with divers others are brought by Polanus as examples of the deſtructions made by the Pope of Rome, who addeth alſo a Catalogue of learned men, who from time to time have oppoſed him in his ſuperſtitions, but many of them have ſuffered therefore, and herein lyeth the comfort of all ſuch ſufferers, they are thus only tryed and made white and ſhining in everlaſting glory.

6. As they that were perſecuted by Antiochus had a little help, yet many were deſtroyed, v. 34. ſo the perſecuted by the Pope had ſome help by the Princes of Germany, who cleaved to Luther, by Bohemians, who ſtood to the doctrine of John Huſſe and Jerome of Prague, and fought in the defence thereof ſometimes with good ſuceeſſe; and Edward 6. of England, although he continued but a ſhort time; and the States of Holland by Queen Elizabeth againſt the perſecuting Spaniard.

As Antiochus exalted himſelf above every god, and ſpake wonderfully above the god of gods, ſo the Pope takes upon him to command the Angels, who are oft called Gods, and preferreth himſelf above Emperours and Kings, who are alſo called Gods; as Innocent 3. who writing to the Emperour, ſaid, as Gold excelleth Lead, ſo doth the Papal dignity the Imperiall; and as the Sun is the father and lord of all the planets, ſo the Pope of all worldly dignities; and as the Moone receiveth light from the Sun, ſo the Emperour his dignity from the Pope.

Jun. canon. diſt. 96. c.

Steuchus de donatione Conſtantini.

For his exalting himſelf above the God of gods, in Jure Canonico Pope Nicholas writeth to Michael the Emperour thus, the moſt godly Emperour Conſtantine the great, called the Pope God, and if he be a God, ſurely no man or men can judge him. Auguſt. Steuchus the Popes Library keeper. Conſtantine adored the Pope as a god, when he ſet forth that famous decree of Donation, as the ſucceſſour of Chriſt and Peter, and as much as in him lay, he gave him divine honour, and reverenced him as the lively Image of Chriſt. The Ordin. Gloſſ. of the Canon law, ſaith, Let it be thought hereticall to beleeve that our Lord God the Pope was not the Author of that Decretall, and that he could not determine as he did. And that this is not diſpleaſing to the Pope, appears, becauſe the ſame book being ſince printed again hath ſtill the ſame paſſage, being reprinted under Gregory 13. who gave ſome authority to expunge, correct or alter what they thought fit. Baldus alſo calleth the Pope God in Lege ultima in Cod. and Decius in c. 1. de conſtitut. and Felinus Ludovicus Gomeſius, ſaid that he was quoddam numen viſibilem deum præ ſe ferens, and he was the Maſter of his Chancery. When Sixtus 4. was to enter into Rome, there was arcus quidam triumphalis, a triumphant Arch ſet up, having this diſtich written upon it,

> Oraclo vocis mundi moderaris habenas, > Et merito in terris diceris eſſe deus:

Thou ruleſt the reins of the world with the oracle of thy voice, and art worthily called a god upon earth. Frederick the ſecond in his Epiſtle to Otto the Duke of Bavaria, ſaith, that man who is called the Pope, being increaſed in riches, thinketh, that it is lawfull for him to do what he luſteth, after the manner of Tyrants, to the great detriment of Chriſtian piety, and as if he were God, he will give account of his actions to no man; he uſurpeth that, which agreeth only to God, that he cannot erre, and moſt impudently and imperiouſly requireth to be beleeved in all things.

Of his wonderfull ſpeeches take alſo ſome examples: Boniface 8. ſaid, we are not willing to neglect our own righteouſneſſe, or that of our ſpouſe the Church, for the Church is the ſpouſe of Chriſt alone, and he only is righteouſneſſe and no man. The ſame Boniface in a year of Jubilee anno 1300, having ſhewed himſelf one day in his Pontificall robes, the next day put on Imperiall, and ſo going out with a naked ſword born before him, ſaid, I am both the high Prieſt and the Emperour, and have both an earthly and heavenly Empire. Sixtus 5. upon Chriſts Nativity day takes a ſword, and to ſhew that he hath all power, begirteth ſome Prince therewith, abuſing that ſaying of Chriſt, All power is given to me both in heaven and earth.

Mat. 28. 18.

8. As Antiochus notwithſtanding all his wickedneſſe proſpered, untill the time of the indignation accompliſhed. *v.*36. And the king of the South coming with a great Army againſt him, yet he ſhall prevail over Egypt, Ethiopia, and Lybia, and be more yet inriched by the ſpoils thereof, and of the glorious land, into which he ſhall come again, *v.*40,41,42,43. ſo the Pope of Rome proſpered and increaſed in wealth wonderfully, obtaining by his agents, many famous victories. As over the Albingenſes being 100000, being ſet upon and deſtroyed by no more then 8000 Catholicks, as Bellarmine relateth out of *Emilius lib.*6. hiſtor. Francorum. And in Helvetia anno 1531. five battles being fought betwixt the Catholicks and the Evangelicks; the Catholicks, although fewer in number, every time prevailed, as Cochleus relateth touching the acts of Luther. Alſo Charls 5. obtained a great victory miraculouſly over the Lutherans in Germany, anno 1547. taking John Frederick Duke of Saxony priſoner, and the other Lutheran Princes that joined together againſt the Imperialiſts. In France alſo and Belgia they had the like ſucceſſe at ſundry times. For the wealth of the Pope, he hath ſo many wayes to rake money together by ſelling Biſhopricks, and Benefices, pardons, toleration of Stews in Rome, Peter-pence out of England, ſelling Archbiſhops palls, &c. as that his Revenues are wonderfull great. And much more cometh in fines and mulcts, which he layeth upon offenders, as upon Henry 2. of England he laid a great mulct of money, for murthering Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury: Gregory 9. exacted of Frederick the Emperour, whom he had excommunicated, 100000 ounces of gold for his abſolution. Alexander 7. ſuborned ſome to poiſon the richeſt of his Clergy, amongſt whom were ſome Cardinals, and then ſeiſed upon their goods, ſo ſaith Onuphrius. Alexander the 6. gathered great tributes of the Jews. John 22. dying, left in his treaſury 25 millions of French golden duckets. Nicholas 9. gathered together out of the Province of one kingdom for indulgencies, in a ſhort time, 100000 florens. The Senate of Paris in their demands made to Lodowick 11. certified him, that out of the whole kingdome of France there went yearly to the Pope, above 946 millions of pieces of gold. Alexander 4. ſaith Mat. Pariſ. rak't together at one penſion 950000 marks, whereupon Abbas Vſpergenſ. ſaith, Rejoice O our mother Rome, for the cataracts of Treaſures are opened, and whole rivers of moneys runne down to thee; rejoice for the iniquities of the ſons of men, becauſe that for them thou receiveſt a price.

Bellarmine from that which is ſaid *v.*36. and 37. beginneth arguments to prove, that the Pope was not prefigured by Antiochus, and therefore is not Antichriſt, for he is well known to be a worſhipper of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoſt, here called the God of Gods, and the God of his Fathers. Anſw. He doth indeed in ſhew, but in truth he denyeth him, and exalts himſelf above him, becauſe he takes upon him above the holy word of God, that being thus preferred which cometh from him. For the Archbiſhop of Magunts having thus flattered the Pope; ſaying, All men do ſo reverence the Pope, the height of the Apoſtolicall ſeat, that they deſire rather ſome Diſcipline of the holy canons and inſtitution of the Chriſtian Religion from his mouth then from the holy pages and the Traditions of the Fathers; the Pope cauſed it to be inſerted into the canon law. Moreover, what was by him ſaid is put in practice, the Pope being bold to diſpenſe with Gods laws, as with that againſt inceſtuous marriages; for Martin 5. allowed a mans marrying with his own ſiſter, ſo ſaith Antoninus Florentinus in Sam.3. and Nicholaus Boerius, and wherein he pleaſeth he makes more laws then God hath made; as againſt the marriage of Prieſts, againſt eating ſome meats upon ſome dayes, &c.

Touching the Popes not caring for the God of his Fathers, ſuch Fathers to him and to all Chriſtian paſtours were the Apoſtles and Apoſtolicall men, that lived neareſt to their time; and for their God he careth not, that holdeth not to the ſame tenets which they received from the word of God. Now their tenets were, that the written Word is the only rule upon which to found our faith: ſo Irenæus ſaith, we know by none other the diſpoſition of our ſalvation, but by thoſe, by whom we have received the Goſpel, who wrote that which they firſt preached, and then delivered it in writing to be the foundation and pillar of our faith. Auguſtine, that which pertaineth to Chriſt, to his Church, or any other thing concerning our faith, or life; he that is to be preferred far before us, hath ſaid, and ſo muſt we ſay, If an Angell from heaven preach any other things then that which ye have received out of the Scriptures, Legall or Evangelicall, let him be accurſed. Yea, Popes themſelves in times paſt, have ſpoken alſo to the ſame effect; as Marcellinus, who ſaith, nothing elſe is to be delivered or taught, but what the Apoſtles have taught and delivered. Clemens ſaith, that a full and perfect rule is to be taken from the holy Scriptures, *Diſtinct.c.*37. But now Apocryphals are by the Pope taken into the canon of faith, and the Scriptures are denied to be perfect. 2. That Scripture is beſt underſtood by Scripture, Clement alſo ſaid, Diſtinct. 37. c. but now the Pope will have the ſenſe taken from his mouth. 3. That to know the true ſenſe of the Scripture we have recourſe to the Hebrew for the Old Teſtament, and to the Greek for the New, Jur.canon. c.6. Diſtinct. 9. But now by the Councel of Trent it is determined, that the Vulg. Lat. ſhall be held authenticall, and that none ſhould either in teaching or diſputing reject, but hold unto that. 4. That a man is juſtified by faith only, ſo Baſil, this is a full and perfect glorying in God, when no man boaſteth of his own righteouſneſſe, but knows himſelf to want true righteouſneſſe, and that he is juſtified only by faith in Chriſt. Ambroſe, a wicked man is juſtified by faith only; Jerome, God juſtifieth a man converted only by faith, not by works, which he hath not. But the Pope oppoſeth this and maintaineth, that juſtification is alſo by works, and by his indulgencies. 5. That the Sacraments of the New Teſtament are two only: ſo Juſtin Martyr, apol. 2. *Tertull. l.*1. *adverſus Marcionem. Ambroſ. de Sacram. Auguſt. de doct.Chriſt. l.3.c.9. Touching the deſire of women, which Antiochus is ſaid not to have cared, herein the Pope is notorious, if by this deſire we underſtand the deſire of conjunction in marriage, for to this he is a great enemie both in Prieſts and religious perſons, whom he maketh to vow a ſingle life, and yet for the deſire of women an other way, both he and his Clergy and Votaries are cryed out upon every where, as being for incontinencie moſt abominable.

9. As Antiochus ſet up another god in the place of the god of ſtrengths, ſo the Pope the Virgin Mary and other Saints departed, to be prayed unto, dedicating the Temple of Pantheon in Rome unto them at the requeſt of Phocas the Emperour, and appointing a day to be kept yearly in the honour of them all, called All Saints. For this was not done, till ann. 600. after Chriſt, but being done, all worſhip of the true God was turned into Superſtition, for that internall of the heart to a ſpirit, an externall being ſet up of bowing the body to Images, calling with the mouth upon Saints departed, who know nothing of the heart, and outward pomp, and coſt of gold, and ſilver beſtowed upon Saints, Images, Churches, and Chappels, and hiſtrionical geſtures at ſeverall feſtivals, and at maſſes, whereby in ſtead of Almighty God, another or many other gods and goddeſſes are ſet up, and abominable Idolatrie committed with them. Bellarmine excepteth againſt this, and ſaith, that by Mauzzim Antichriſt himſelf is meant, for he maketh all men to worſhip him.

Sol. If ſo, hereby it is proved then that the Pope is Antichriſt, becauſe he maketh all men to worſhip and bow to him 3 times and then to kiſſe his toe, ſee Cerem.pontif. l. 1. *c.*3. Sect. 3.

V. 39. Thus ſhal he doe in the moſt ſtrong holds with a ſtrange God, whom he ſhal acknowledge and increaſe with glory, and he ſhal cauſe them to rule over many and divide the Land for gain: Vulg. Faciet ut muniat Mauzim cum deo alieno, &c. & dividet terram gratuito. Expounded by Lyra of ſome ſecret place which Antichriſt had, wherein he worſhiped, and had conference and familiarity with the Devill, by whom he ſought to be defended. And he is ſaid to be one, whom he knew, becauſe he converſed ſo much with him. For thoſe to whom he divided the land gratis, and to whom he gave dominion in many things, he underſtandeth by them ſuch as were active for him, whom he preferred, and for this reaſon he denyeth Antiochus to be meant at all here, but only Antichriſt, becauſe he was caſt out again from Egypt and other places, which he had ſubdued, and ſo had no land to divide unto them, that ſtood for his wayes, Hebr. He ſhal make in the ſtrong holds of Mauzzim with a ſtrange god: that is, he ſhall in the ſtrong holds of the Almighty, comply with Jupiter Olympius, that is, in the houſe of God, which was as a ſtrong hold for all thoſe, that fled thither in time of danger to pray, as was ſhewed in the example of Hezekiah. Or he ſhall do ſacrifice there according to the common uſe of the word עשה, and becauſe that ſacrificing was not to God, but to an Idol: he ſhall with that Idol there ſet up commit abomination, and this ſtrange God is ſaid to be a God, whom he acknowledgeth; and hath a mind to preferre alone in all his dominions. And this is ſpoken not without an elegant paranomaſie, Hebr. עים אליה נשר אשר חכו : And the word למבצ doth moſt properly ſignifie in ſtrong holds: So that theſe words are nothing elſe but an amplification of that, which was ſaid, *v.*38. being not to be rendred thus ſhall he doe, &c. but, And he ſhall do or ſacrifice in the ſtrong holds of Mauzzim, or the Almighty, with or by the ſtrange god, before ſpoken of: of whom it was ſaid before, that he ſhould beſtow gold and ſilver upon it to adorn and beautifie it; now having made it a compleat god, he ſhould ſacrifice unto it in the place where the true God only ought to be thus honoured. For the next words, he ſhall make them to rule over many, and divide the land for gain, Hebr. in many, or many things, and the laſt word is במחיר ſignifying, not gratuito, but pretio, the meaning being them, of whom it is ſaid, *v.*32. that many ſhould cleave to him by flattery: that is, in way of flattering him, ſeeking to promote his abominations, as the Highprieſt of the Jews and many other prieſts did for their own worldly gain and honour; he ſhall make Rulers in Judea dividing the dominion thereof amongſt them, as a reward of their indeavours, as Antiochus Epiphanes did indeed.

Lyra.

10. And herein tenthly, the Pope of Rome was alſo figured out by him, for he likewiſe preferreth to Cardinalſhips, Archbiſhopricks, Biſhopricks, and fat benefices, thoſe that are moſt eminent for promoting the Catholick Cauſe, as it is called; as Bellarmine, who for this was made a Cardinal, and Campeius, and Baronius, and many more; whereas Bellarmine would from hence prove, that the Pope is not Antichriſt, becauſe many that do him greateſt ſervice, have gone all their life time unrewarded; as Ecchius, Gocleus, Roffenſis, Driedo, Tapperus, Petrus a Soto, &c.

*Bellarm.l.*3. *de Rom. Pontific. c.*21.

I anſwer, from ſome particulars, no argument cannot be drawn, he preferred very many, ſome he paſſed over, therefore he is not the man here pointed at, for what is ſaid more of him, but that he ſhall make them, not all and every of them, that flatter him, to rule. It may be theſe men, although they laboured greatly in promoting his ſuperſtition, would not come off, and give liberally for preferments, and therefore lay neglected, for it was an old ſaying, Romæ omnia vænalia.

V. 40. And at the end of the time the King of the South ſhall puſh at him, &c. This was fulfilled thus. There were in Egypt two brothers, Ptolemie Philometor and Ptolemie Physcon, who contended about the kingdom; the younger brother Physcon with the elder, both Epiphanes his ſiſters children, but as ſhe loved the one, that is, the younger, and hated the elder, from whence he had his name per antiphraſin 1 Mac. 5. Philometor, ſo did their uncle Epiphanes, and came with an army into Joſeph.antiq.l. Egypt to help Phyſcon againſt Philometor; at this, Philometer being exaſperated, 12. c.11. gathereth great Forces, and haſtneth to goe againſt him, but is by Epiphanes overcome and expelled, and Phyſcon eſtabliſhed, by which means he returned laden with great riches, not only gotten out of Egypt, but alſo out of Ethiopia V. 41. and Lybia; and then he entered in his return into the glorious land, that is, into Judea, taking ſpoils, wherein he had the Edomites, Moabites, and Ammonites aſſiſtant to him, and therefore it is ſaid that they were ſpared. And this was the cauſe, why Judas Maccabæus fought againſt theſe peoples, and ſubdued and deſtroyed many of them.

11. And herein he was eleventhly, a type of the Pope; for he likewiſe takes upon him to diſpoſe of the kingdoms of the earth, giving them to whom he will, and diſpoſing and putting down ſuch as he pleaſed. He alſo cometh into the glorious land, that is, the Church of Chriſt by his Forces doing much miſchief therein, and ſuch as adhere to him, as the Emperour of Germany and the Spaniard eſcape his hands.

V. 44. But tidings out of the Eaſt and North ſhall trouble him, therefore he ſhall go forth with great fury to deſtroy: Hitherto the ſucceſſe of Antiochus Epiphanes and his prevailings, now the time being come, which God had ſet to put an end to his rage, and to deſtroy him that deſtroyed ſo many, it is ſhewed, how this was brought about, firſt he ſuffered in his Dominions and Forces, the Perſians and Parthians in the North fell from him and invaded ſome parts of his kingdom; and Judas Maccabæus and his brethren in the Eaſt fought and prevailed againſt his Captains, which were ſent to ſubdue them. The rumour of theſe things coming to his ears inraged him againſt the Jews eſpecially, ſo that in his rage he uttered moſt cruel threatnings, and haſtened to be revenged, as is ſhewed, 1 Macc. 3. c. 6. 2 Macc. 9. and by Joſephus. But God immediately took re-which he had done, and of his blaſphemies and murthers, of which he repented, as Judas, but could find no mercy, and ſo he miſerably dyed, even when he was haſtening to Jeruſalem to make it as he ſaid, a common burying V. 45. place, according to which it is ſaid, *v.*45. He ſhall plant the Tabernacles of his palace between the Seas, and the glorious holy Mountain, yet he ſhall come to his end and none ſhal help him: the Vulg. retaineth the Hebrew word Apadno, for in ſtead of theſe words, of his palace, taking it for a proper name, which Cornelius à Lapide ſaith, is not now ſo called, but ſhall be in the dayes of the Antichriſt, from that which ſhall then be done; as alſo a place of fighting a great battell in Revel. 16. called Harmageddon: But forſomuch as this is but conjecturall, and to hold the Antichriſt yet to come is a miſtake, there is no reaſon to take Apadno for any other, then as the word ſignifieth, his palace: He ſhal place the tabernacles of his palace between the Seas in the glorious holy mountain, and go even to his end; for ſo it is word for word Hebr. and the meaning is, that he ſhall be warring againſt Judea and Jeruſalem, even to the end of his life, as the Hiſtory ſheweth, that he was; for tabernacles or tents are uſed in warre, and Kings tabernacles were more ſtately made then others, like palaces: wherefore this is a periphraſis of his preparation for war, hearing what Judas Maccabæus had done againſt his command and captains, he prepared to goe in perſon, againſt whoſe coming without doubt theſe palace-like tents were made, although he lived not to come unto them, but fell ſick by the way and dyed, which is intimated in ſaying, and go even to his end; for he intended to go to deſtroy the Jews, but he went indeed to his end, his death, as God had decreed, and therefore vow and promiſe now to god what he could, he could obtain no help at his hands, but was ſuffered to lye in his torments and ſo to expire in extream miſery. And for the deſcribing of the holy Mountain as lying between the Seas, it is ſo ſaid to do, becauſe betwixt the dead Sea of Sodom, and the Mediterranean. Some there are, that by reaſon of this circumſtance, ſay that not Judea, but Perſia is here meant between Euphrates and Tygris, but he ſaith not Rivers but Seas, and in the glorious holy Mountain, ſo as no country in the world is called, but in Judea and Jeruſalem alone.

12. Now to apply this alſo as a twelfth and laſt thing to the Pope; he hearing of the overthrow of his Forces in Bohemia and in Belgia, and other places long agoe, was wonderfull ſtricken, and at the news of England, Scotland, Denmark, Suevia, &c. falling from him, and expelling his creatures the Monks and Fryers.

2. He not only was ſtricken at this newes, but ſends out his thunderbolts of excommunication againſt all the Princes that favoured the reformation, adjudging them therefore to cruell deſtruction, as againſt Queen Elizabeth of England in particular, and the Duke of Saxony, to whom he threatned both the Apoſtolicall and the Cæſarean ſword.

3. He fixeth the tents of his palace betwixt two Seas the Tyrrhene and Adriaticall, and that in the glorious holy Mountain, that is, the Church of Chriſt, as S. Paul propheſied, that Antichriſt ſhould ſit in the Temple or Church of God.

2 Theſſ. 2.

Laſtly, many Popes have come to miſerable ends already, and it is not to be doubted, but that the laſt ſhall dye likewiſe at the time by God appointed, and then there ſhall be an end put to his antichriſtian tyranny, as there was to that of Antiochus, after he had reigned 12 years, as I have ſhewed in my Continuation of the Hiſtory before mentioned, in three and an half of which, he raged moſt againſt the Jews and their religion, but deſtroyed thouſands of them two years before that.

For the Popes that dyed miſerably, Polanus makes a catalogue of them thus, Sabinianus had a viſion of Gregory 1. appearing to him, and threatning him with death, becauſe he decreed to burn his books; with this he being terrified, ſoon after dyed. Boniface 3. who obtained with great coſt and infamy of Phocas the principality of the Church of Rome, lived ſolitarily and penſively after this, and before the end of one year dyed miſerably. Leo 3. being taken and beaten by the people of Rome riſing againſt him, ſtole away into France, but through vexation of his diſgrace and wearineſſe of his long travell, coming thither he ſoon dyed, when he had ſetten but 20 months. Lando was ſtrangled by him, that was afterwards John 11. Silveſter 13. a Necromancer, was torn in pieces and carryed away by the Devill, when he was ſaying Maſſe. John 13. was thruſt through being taken in adultery. John 15. had his eyes put out by Boniface 7. and after this was famiſhed to death in the Caſtle of S. Angelo. Boniface 7. dyed ſuddenly after he had a little while been in his pontificality, then he was drawn about the ſtreets of Rome by horſes, and pierced with ſpears by the Citizens. Benedict 5. and Benedict 6. were both ſtrangled. Sixe Popes were by Hildebrand taken away by poiſon to make way for himſelf to the Popedome. Gregory 7. who was againſt Henry 4. was by him taken and depoſed, and baniſhed into a barren part of Apulia, dyed there in great diſgrace and hatred of all men. Victor 3. was poiſoned by a ſub-deacon in taking the Maſſe. Paſchalis 2 alſo, Adrian 4. Gregory 9. Boniface 8. Paul 2. Clement 5. Alexander 6. Leo 10. Paul 3. Julius 3. Pius 5. Urbanus 7. Gregory 14. and Innocent 9. came to evil ends.

Polanus. Faſciculus temporum.

Naucler.

Faſciculus temporum.

Now having ſeen the Image of Antiochus in the Pope, in all his lineaments and parts, who can doubt, but that he is the Antichriſt whom the Lord figured out by him, and therefore ſo punctually and fully ſetteth him forth more then any other Syrian King? If it be objected, Antiochus was a King and therefore no fit type of the Pope no King, but a Biſhop. Sol. The Pope wants nothing but the name of a King, being indeed greater and of more power then any King, and the Antichriſt by the conſent of all men is ſet forth by a woman, a whore Revel. 17. although he be a man. Object. 2. Antiochus was but one man, and his time of raging againſt the Church but ſhort, only a certain number of days. Sol. It is Daniels manner, or the angels rather, that talked with Daniel, by dayes to ſet forth years, as chap. 9. by 70 weekes ſo many times 7 yeares, and therefore the dayes of Antiochus Epiphanes his rage may well ſet forth in his antitype Antichriſt ſo many years. Now one queſtion onely remaineth which may be moved about ſubjects riſing in armes againſt their Soveraign being a tyrant, becauſe Mattathias and his ſons did thus, and this was one of the rumours, that troubled Antiochus the King, and theſe are numbred amongſt the faithfull and their exploits, commended Heb. 11. and therefore their taking of armes to deliver themſelves and the houſe of God from tyranny juſtified. Anſ. Although Antiochus were their king, yet he did clean contrary to the office of a King, at his firſt coming amongſt the Jewes without any cauſe murthering ſo many thouſands, then taking upon him above God, and altering his Laws, and prophaning his Temple. And this is ſeldome the caſe of any people in reſpect of their King, and therefore this can be no ground for ſubjects to arm againſt their king, unleſſe their caſe be in every reſpect like this of the Jews in the time of this tyrant. Polanus. Polanus holdeth, that if the King be a tyrant they may by inferiour Magiſtrates be armed to defend themſelves againſt him, but neither he nor Pareus, that held the ſame, nor any other of the reformed Religion ever held it juſtifiable to proceed ſo farre in oppoſing the Kings tyranny, as for this condemne and cut him off, as another man, a murtherer, or otherwiſe guilty of capitall offences.

Note. Laſtly, in this whole propheſie touching Antiochus men like unto him are pointed at, and their deſtiny is read, if any man by flattery and deceitfull means cometh to power, or having attained power is unſatiable through the ambitiouſneſſe of his minde, or abuſeth his power againſt the ſervants of God, the worſhip or houſe of God, to cruelty or rapine, or to the altering of good laws grounded upon the Law of God, or to be lifted up in pride, let him think, that he is in Antiochus threatned with a miſerable end. His riſe out of the duſt to ſit with Princes, his good ſucceſſe in all his undertakings, and the increaſe of his wealth and Dominion, if he bee ſuch an one, are no arguments of Gods favour towards him, but a lifting of him up as it were, for a time on high, that he might take the greater fall, the fatting of him up, that his body being filled with ill humours may break out into diſeaſes moſt tormenting and incureable, and the uſing of him but as a rod in his indignation to chaſtiſe his people provoking him to anger, being afterwards to be caſt into the fire. The time ſhall certainly come when the good ſucceſſe of ſuch ſhall be turned into evill, and joy for overcoming into ſorrow for being overcome, and his greater forces being ſhamefully beaten and put to flight before leſſer. He that is wiſe will conſider this, and not argue from his ſucceſſe in an unwarranted way time after time, that his cauſe is good, and it ſhall never happen otherwiſe unto him, but meaſure the goodneſſe of his cauſe by the true rule of the Word, which only can juſtifie their actions, and not either their good intentions or ſucceſſe in their undertakings.

CHAP. XII.

V. 1. A*nd at that time* Michael ſhall ſtand up, the great Prince that ſtandeth for the children of thy people, and there ſhall be a time of trouble, ſuch as never was ſince there was a nation even to that time, and at that time thy people ſhall be delivered, every one that ſhall be found written in the Book. After the propheſie touching Antiochus Epiphanes, and his rage againſt the people of God, and miſerable end, to which God in his juſt judgement brought him therefore, here followeth an amplification of the ſame for the arming of the ſervants of God with patience to bear their ſufferings under him, and to comfort them by declaring Michael their Prince his victory over the devill and his lims and firſt-born Antiochus and their deliverance, he being deſtroyed, and joyfull reſurrection to follow to everlaſting glory. Touching this Michael, held by ſome to be Chriſt, by others the chief and captain of the good angels, amongſt whom and their armies there is doubtleſſe an order, as well as amongſt men in their warfaring, one being Generaliſſimo over the reſt, I have ſpoken before, chap. 10. 21. wherein I aſſent rather to theſe laſt, and thereof give my reaſon, and Baſil ſaith, Michael eſt angelicarum copiarum dux. Now in ſaying, that he ſhall ſtand up for thy people, he meaneth, that it ſhould plainly appear, that he ſtood for them, when the forces of that tyrant ſhould be routed by Iudas Maccabeus, and thereupon be ſtricken with extream grief cauſing his deadly ſickneſſe and death therefore. Hee ſtood for them before, as is ſhewed chap. 10. but was hindered by the Prince of Perſia, their ſins being the cauſe, but now he ſtood and prevailed for their deliverance by his death, by whom they had ſuffered more then ever they had done, ſince they were a Nation, as is ſhewed in theſe words, there ſhall be a time of trouble, ſuch as never was ſince there was a Nation, whereby is not meant trouble to come after the cutting off of Antiochus, but the trouble in his time touched upon before, chap. 11. 33. 38. and here amplified by comparing it with all their troubles paſt, then any of which it was greater, viz. then their troubles in Egypt under Pharaoh, their troubles in the interims of Judges, and when their City was burnt and deſtroyed, and they were caryed captive by Nebuchadnezzar. If it be ſaid, this ſeemeth not to be true, becauſe under Nebuchadnezzar they ſuffered both more and a far longer time, as Lyra reaſoneth, who will not therefore have this underſtood of Antiochus, but onely of the Antichriſt to come. But Polanus herein ſaith better, that the ſufferings of the Jews under Antiochus were greater then ever, becauſe at other times the tyrants, that prevailed over them, afflicted and put them to ſuffering onely in their bodies and eſtates, but medled not with their religion, to overthrow that, and this was far more grievous, then all ſuch ſufferings. Yet this is not ſpoken without relation to the Antichriſt, as appeareth in that preſently after followeth the propheſie of the reſurrection of the dead, which is not, till after Antichriſt be deſtroyed. Note hence, that as God in wrath againſt ſinne leaveth his own people to extream ſufferings in this world, ſo he alwayes graciouſly provideth for their deliverance, neither doth he keep them long under. And again note, that in time of oppreſſion by war and danger, the hoaſt of good angels ſtandeth for the people of God, and therefore there is no cauſe to fear, but that in Gods good time the battels that are fought ſhall goe on their ſide, although they goe ſometime againſt them. Laſtly, to ſuffer in religion, the courſe of that being perverted, and violence offered to force men therefrom, is of all troubles and ſufferings the greateſt to thoſe that are conſcionable profeſſours thereof. And if any paſſe not for ſuch ſufferings, it argueth that they are ſpiritually dead yet, and without all life of grace, as weathercocks turned about with every winde of Doctrine, and wofull is the caſe of thoſe that ſtirre up ſuch troubles, for both the people of God over a while ſhall be delivered from their tyranny, and look what torments they have put others to, through the juſtice of God ſhall befall them, till they come in miſery to their end.

Lyra.

Note.

For the laſt words of this verſe, that ſhall be found written in the booke, ſee the like *Revel.*20.25. for caſting thoſe that are not written in the book of life into the fire, whereby as is there ſhewed, the reprobate and ſuch as are not elected, are meant, and at laſt this ſhould make men deſperate, as thinking all the cauſe of their election or reprobation to lye in Gods writing, or not writing them down in his book, the Apoſtle ſheweth who are ſuch, ſaying, if any man purgeth ſelfe he ſhall be an elect veſſell of honour. Now the promiſe of deliverance is made to thoſe only, ſome of them dying in perſecution are delivered, yet in their ſoules, and ſome preſerved in life, but in an afflicted condition, are in Gods good time again ſet free herefrom. So that ceſſation of troubles is nothing to reprobates, who are of a baſe life and converſation and lay not religion to heart, but are time-ſervers, they have no part or ſhare in it, but only con-

2 Tim.2.21.

ſcionable profeſſours of the truth, to whom alſo ſoly the comfort of the future reſurrection belongeth, as followeth, verſ. 2. Many of them that ſleepe in the duſt of the earth ſhall awake, ſome to everlaſting life, &c. Lyra. Porphyrius ſaith Lyra, by thoſe that ſleep in the duſt underſtandeth ſuch as fled and hid themſelves from the rage of Antiochus in caves and dens of the earth, but he being dead, they were bold to come forth again. But this cannot ſtand, 1. Becauſe they that did ſo did all doubtleſſe abhor from his wicked wayes, and therefore none of them came forth to contempt, or ſhall, this very hiding of themſelves, declaring them to be faithfull, as is intimated Heb. 11. 2. Becauſe the awaking here ſpoken of is not to come forth and to have comfort in this world for a time again after great ſufferings by being temporally delivered, but everlaſtingly. But if the generall reſurrection of the dead be meant, which ſhall be at the day of judgement, why doth he ſay many and not rather all ? Polanus. To this Polanus anſwereth well, that the word many here is put for all, as many and all are promiſcuouſly uſed, Rom. 5. 17, 18. but many is the word here uſed, implying a diſtinction in the Hebrew, as the accent Zakeph gadol put to it ſheweth. The meaning then is, that as many ſhall dye in times of perſecutions, ſo the time ſhall come, that thoſe many ſhall riſe again, of whom only becauſe it can be ſaid properly, that they awake, it is here ſaid, many of them that ſleep in the duſt ſhall awake. For the riſing again of the wicked is not a waking, but a coming forth, as it were, through a terrifying ſound full of fear and horrour, to judgement, to which they ſhall be moſt unwilling, as counting it better alwayes to lye in the duſt of rottenneſſe, then thus to be forced out to the increaſe of their horrour. For he waketh onely out of his ſleep, that having ſlept enough heareth now ſome Cock crowing or bird ſinging and cheerfully as well refreſhed openeth his eyes and ſleepeth no more, and ſo doe the righteous at the laſt day, the Trumpet ſound or the voice of the Son of man uttered ſhall awaken them as a gentle calling of them up to take a prize, but for the wicked they ſhall be ſtartled, as at the ſounding of an alarum of the enemy, whoſe piercing darts they know no meanes to eſcape. And that it might be thought, that many onely and not all ſhall then riſe againe, it is added, ſome to everlaſting life, ſome to everlaſting ſhame and contempt, as if hee had ſaid, many that fell aſleep in the Lord, when they ſuffered for him, or otherwiſe departed in the true faith, ſhall awake and come forth to their everlaſting comfort ; but it is to be underſtood, that the wicked who dyed in their ſinnes ſhall not then be ſuffered to lye ſtill in the priſons of their graves, but ſhall by a terrifying ſound bee made to come out of their endleſſe confuſion. And therefore to put this out of doubt againſt thoſe that ſay, the wicked ſhall not riſe at all, our Ioh. 5.29. Lord ſaith, All that are in the graves ſhall heare the voice of the Sonne of man and come forth, &c. and Rev. 20. All both great and ſmall, yea this text is plain for it, for who are the ſome, that are adjudged to everlaſting ſhame and contempt but the wicked and reprobates?

V. 3. And they that be wiſe ſhall ſhine as the brightneſſe of the Firmament, and they that turne many to righteouſneſſe as the Starres. Here it is ſhewed, in what a glorious eſtate the Elect ſhall be in the life to come, how greatly ſo ever they be abaſed in this life, and in ſaying, they that turne many, he alludeth to that, chap. 11. 33. they that underſtand ſhall inſtruct many, for who are the wiſe, that turn others, but thoſe thas underſtand and inſtruct many? And who are they, but ſuch as Mattathias and Judas Maccabeus and his brethren; that taught the Law of God both in doctrine and Note. life, abhorring themſelves from doing contrary, yea being leaders to others in ſuffering for the truth, as chap. 11. 33. where after that hee had ſpoken of the intelligent inſtruct many, he ſaith, yet they were ſlaine by the ſword and flame, &c. wherefore here is ſhewed in what an high degree of glory the faithfull Miniſters of the Word ſhall be, that ſtand to their owne doctrine, which they received from God, to the death for the incouragement of us all againſt the malignities and contempts of the wicked world, that neither for feare of dangers nor hope of reward we may ever goe from this our duty but perſiſt in it to our lives end. Aud this is a ground of that tenet touching the degrees of heavenly glory. But when the wiſe and ſuch as turne others are ſpoken of, the faithfull of any calling are not excluded from having a part in this glory, but onely more eminency of glory is promiſed to inſtructers and converters, Heb. for turning many to righteouſneſſe, it is juſtifying many or making many juſt, which is done, when by the teaching and examples of faithfull Paſtours many are converted, for in what inſtant one is converted hee is juſtified, and the Preacher being the inſtrument hereof is ſaid to juſtifie, as St. Paul telleth Timothy, that by continuing in doctrine, exhortation and prayer, hee ſhall both ſave himſelfe and thoſe that heare him, for properly God onely juſtifieth by forgiving ſinnes, man onely inſtrumentally when by his preaching a ſinner is converted, and by vertue of the office committed unto him, he is abſolved from his ſins.

1 Tim.4.16. Rom.8.

V. 4. But thou (O Daniel) ſhut up the Booke and ſeale the words even till the end, many ſhall runne to and fro, and knowledge ſhall be increaſed. Here it may bee demanded, muſt the Booke wherein Daniel wrote theſe things, be ſhut up and ſealed to the end? if ſo, to what purpoſe were they revealed and written? Sol. It is not meant, that hee ſhould doe ſo, but thus ſhut and ſeale it in a figure, to ſhew firſt the obſcurities of theſe Propheſies. 2. The certainty. 3. That it ſhould be a very long time, before that they ſhould have a full end. For ſo the Ancients, ſaith Pierius, made a ſealed Book an hieroglyphick of Antiquity. And the Egyptians painted Sphinxes upon the doores of their Temples, to ſhew the myſticall things lying hid therein. For Sphinx, as Pierius ſaith, was a monſter which had the head and hands of a woman, the voice of a man, the paws of a Lion, the wings of a bird, the body of a Dogge, and the taile of a Dragon, and hee ſtayed men as they paſſed putting darke queſtions and riddles to them. For the running of many to and fro, and the increaſe of knowledge, the meaning is, that theſe Propheſies ſhall be diverſly ſcanned and expounded by divers; but time muſt help to the true underſtanding hereof when they are accompliſhed, as Irenæus ſaith, Every propheſie before it is accompliſhed is a riddle, but being once accompliſhed, it is plainly underſtood. When Antiochus had run his race, that touching him was underſtood, but as a Book ſhut and ſealed before, and that in the ſame Propheſie touching Antichriſt was as a ſealed Booke in the times of the ancient Fathers under the New Teſtament, but ſince, it is, as wee conceive, made manifeſt to concerne the Pope, and ſo knowledge is now increaſed more, and ſhall be in the Revelations of John to the end of the World. Therefore let no man ſay, are yee wiſer then the ancient Fathers, who are but as it were of yeſterday? and therefore give little credit to any new interpretation brought by modern writers, and yet let uone upon this ground be too credulous neither, but ſee good reaſon firſt, before that any ſenſe brought bee received as a new light, by which too many are led in theſe dayes, leſt it prove but a light to lead into a pit, as ignis fatuus doth. For the certaintie of theſe Propheſies hereby intimated, that whereunto ſeales are ſet are certaine, and hereby knowne to come from him, whoſe ſeale it is, or commands it to be ſet to, ſo this to be the Lords, and therefore to be by all men beleeved without any doubting or ſcruplemaking about it.

V. 5,6. Hitherto the conſolation of the faithfull againſt all their ſufferings by that cruell tyrant Antiochus Epiphanes in reſpect of the happy iſſue of their grievous ſufferings. Now becauſe an appointed time, and the time of the end had beene ſpoken of, but this end was yet unknowne, two Angels are brought in inquiring of the man cloathed in linnen ſpoken of chap 10. 3. how long it ſhould be to the end of theſe wonders, and hee anſwereth by ſwearing for further confirmation, lifting up his right hand and his left to heaven, that it ſhould bee for a time, times, and a part; when

V. 7. hee ſhall have accompliſhed to ſcatter the power of the holy people, all theſe things ſhall be fulfilled. The Angells appeare, and are heard to enquire of the Son of God, to ſhew their ſollicitude for the good of the faithfull and their deliverance out of danger, as being miniſtring ſpirits ſent out for their good.
And whereas commonly in ſwearing by him that liveth for ever the right hand onely is lifted up, hee now lifteth up both his right hand and his left, becauſe two Angels ſtood one on the one ſide of the river and the other on the other, as having reſpect to them both together from the place where hee ſtood, which was upon the waters, arguing his power over peoples ſet forth often by waters; ſee the like, Revel. 10. 5, 6. For theſe words, a time, and times, and halfe or part: ſee before chap. 7. 25. This is reckoned Polanus. by Polanus three yeares and ten dayes, becauſe it is not ſaid halfe, but part. And by the hiſtory, 1 Maccab. 1. 57. and chap. 4. 52. the abomination making deſolate before ſpoken was ſet up in the Temple, Anno 145. of the reigne of the Seleucidans, the 15. of the moneth Chiſleu, but Anno 148. the 29 day of the ſame moneth the Temple was againe purged and the Altar of the Lord ſet up again by Judas Maccabeus. And whereas verſ. 11.

to* 1335 dayes. Before in chap. 8 14. the time is ſaid to bee 2300 dayes. To theſe things he ſaith, that by theſe divers numbers are denoted other bleſſed events following after the purging of the Temple, for that 1 Macc. 5. being done at the end of three yeares and ten dayes divers Nations neare, as the Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites had indignation at it and fought againſt the Jewes, thinking to root Iſrael quite out, but Judas went againſt them, and then his brethren obtaining great victories over them, which was done in 80 dayes more, and Antiochus his Forces after this being overthrowne, he ſickened, as was before ſaid, and miſerably dyed at the end of 45 dayes more, and then the comfort of the Jews was compleat, and it might well bee counted a bleſſed time indeed, becauſe then they were put out of danger, which if hee had lived they could never have beene, ſo variable and inconſtant hee was in his wayes. And this may ſatisfie touching Antiochus Epiphanes, and the end of troubles by him. But whereas hee alleadgeth that paſſage chap. 8. 14. of 2300 dayes, I have already ſhewed, how it is to bee underſtood, and that the time, times and part, chap. 7. 25.
are plainly ſpoken of the Antichriſt, and not as prefigured in Antiochus.
Yet hee is made a figure of him, chap. 11. and here again in the time, times and part or half a time, three yeares and an halfe, although the dayes here ſpoken of bee peculiar to Antiochus and cannot be applyed to Antichriſt, whoſe dayes extend not to ſo many, but 1260. where his time is ſpoken of Revel. three wayes. 1. Time, times, and halfe a time. 2. 1260 dayes. 3. By 42 moneths, which are all one. For the laſt words, when hee ſhall have accompliſhed to ſcatter the power, Heb. the hand of the holy people, that is, when Antiochus by hot perſecution ſhall fray away and make to flee from Jeruſalem the godly Jewes, the end ſo often before ſpoken of ſhall ſoone follow of deſtruction to him, and deliverance to them. So when Antichriſt ſhall have fulfilled his ſcattering of the flock of Chriſts ſheepe, his end ſhall draw neare, the time and times and halfe time here ſet being expired.

V. 8. *Then I heard but underſtood not, and I ſaid, (O my Lord) what ſhall be the end Jam.1.5.

V. 9.

Then hee anſwered mee, Goe thy way Daniel, for the words are cloſed up and ſealed to the time of the end, that is, inquire no further into this matter, Let it ſuffice thee to have had ſo much revealed unto thee, as I have already ſhewed thee, and without troubling thy minde any further, then hath beene revealed, goe to thy grave in peace, for no more of theſe myſteries ſhall be underſtood till that the things propheſied of begin to be accompliſhed, untill which time they ſhall remaine cloſed and ſealed up, as was ſaid before, wherein an item is given to us to reſt ſatisfied with that knowledge, which God hath beene pleaſed to reveale unto us in his Word, and not to be inquiſitive into ſuch things, as he hath ſhut up yet from our underſtanding, as his great ſecrets, according to that of Moſes, The ſecret things of the Lord belong to the Lord, but the revealed to us and to our children.

Deut. 29. 29.

V. 10.

And many ſhall be purified and made white and tryed. Here is the effect of ſufferings in the elect, who were before ſet forth by the name of many that ſhould awake out of the duſt, verſ. 2. and the bleſſed effect of their ſufferings is ſet forth by three compariſons or ſimilitudes, as chap. 11. 35. Firſt of purging, as a winnower purgeth the chaffe and duſt from the wheat. 2. Of whiting, as the Fuller whiteth a piece of cloth, not leaving any ſpots therein. 3. Of trying, as the refiner dealeth with gold and ſilver, putting them into the furnace of fire, till all the droſſe be burnt away, and the pure metall onely remaineth. So that there is cauſe rather of joy for tribulations, as is ſaid, Rom. 5. for the good wrought to our ſouls hereby, then of ſorrow. But the wicked ſhall doe wickedly, and none of them ſhall underſtand, but the wiſe ſhall underſtand: when the elect are purified, whited and tryed by ſufferings, yet reprobates ſhall not but doe wickedly ſtill, and gather more chaffe, ſpots ſhall aſperſe them more, and they ſhall be more droſſie by ſinne even being put into the fire of adverſity, and enduring the fulling mill and hard winnowing; and by reaſon of their being ſo deſperately ſet upon ſinning, they ſhall not underſtand, when theſe propheſies are fulfilled, but through Gods juſt judgement upon them for the love of unrighteouſneſſe, they ſhall be ſo darkened in their underſtandings; that they ſhall runne blindly on after Antichriſt, till they come with him to everlaſting perdition, but the wiſe ſhall underſtand, and ſee well what was ſet forth hereby to abhorre from him and his ſuperſtitions for feare of coming into the like danger. It is vaine then for the wicked to enquire into the knowledge of divine Myſteries, for as hard knowledge and profound is not for fooles, but for the wiſe, ſo the knowledge of the things of God is not for the wicked and diſobedient, but for the obedient.

V. 11.

Bellarmin.

From the taking away of the dayly ſacrifice &c. ſhall be 1290 dayes. Upon this Bellarmine argueth, that the Pope cannot be Antichriſt, becauſe that hee takes not away, but upholds the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, neither doth hee ſet up any abomination, or abominable heathen idoll. To the firſt of theſe Polanus anſwereth, that in Hebrew there is no ſacrifice ſpoken of, but onely תמיד, continuall, whereunto the word worſhip may be joined as well as Sacrifice, ſo that he may be Antichriſt, that upholdeth that pretended ſacrifice, but cauſeth the continuall ſpirituall worſhip of God to ceaſe, which is the ſacrifice of praiſe and prayer comming from the Spirit, and not the performing of a ſervice without underſtanding in an unknowne tongue: And indeed, beſides the ſacrifice of praiſe and mortification of our members upon earth, and almes, there is no ſacrifice of a Chriſtian ſpoken of in all the Word of God: For the next, whereas hee denyeth the Images ſet up in Churches to be an abomination, becauſe they are not heathen idols, niether is the worſhip of Latreia, but onely of Douleia given unto them. Polanus anſwereth, that the very ſetting up of an image in the Church of God is an abomination, and cenſured by Auguſtine who ſaith, it is wickedneſſe for a Chriſtian to place an Image in the houſe of God. But there is at Rome in the houſe of Peter, in the Vatican an Image of Jupiter Capitolinus, onely for a thunderbolt hee hath keys in his hands, but his curled hair different from all other Images of Peter, which be commonly bald, ſheweth, that it is not his but Jupiters, and ſo the ſame abomination, that is here ſpoken of. And for the diſtinction of Douleia and Latreia, it is vaine, as appeareth. Matth. 4. and from many paſſages of the ancient Fathers, who commonly teach that Douleia is to be given to God onely, as I have ſhewed elſewhere.

V. 12.

Hieron.
Theodoret.

Bleſſed is hee that attaineth to 1335 dayes. This alſo is by Bellarmine turned into another argument, that the Pope cannot be Antichriſt, becauſe that hee having reigned but 1290 dayes, in 45 dayes more the finall glorification of the elect ſhall follow: for ſo both Ierome and Theodoret underſtand the bleſſedneſſe here ſpoken of, and not of the Jewes, Antiochus being dead, which expoſition came from Porphyrius, and yet might have ſtood, ſaith Ierome, if the Temples defilement had continued three yeares and an halfe, and not three onely. But as hath been already ſhewed, it is not ſaid halfe, but part, that is tenne dayes, and therefore although it came from Porphyrius it may well ſtand, and holdeth not being applyed to Antichriſt. If it be granted according to the dayes here ſpoken of, that the day of judgement ſhall follow Antichriſts deſtruction, the very day might be known, which our Lord denyeth. Mat. 24.36.

V. 13.

But goe thy way to the end: that is, thou ſhalt depart hence before the accompliſhment of theſe things, and at the end of dayes, that is, of this world, thou ſhalt ſtand in thy lot, that is, have the reward of a faithfull Prophet, in meditating upon which be comforted.

OF THE
SMALL PROPHETS.

FOR the time when each of them wrote, I have ſaid enough in my Preface upon Iſaiah, and generally for the ſcope of all the Prophets writings. So that nothing remaineth to be ſpoken here by way of Preface, But 1. Of the title given to theſe all together, the ſmaller Prophets, Prophetæ minores, by the Vulg. Lat. and Septuagint, not becauſe their writings are leſſe divine then the greater, but becauſe ſo little hath been written by them ſeverally in compariſon of Eſay, Jeremy, and Ezekiel, that, as ſome have noted, they have not all together ſo many verſes as Iſaiah alone. For touching Daniel, although he were a Prophet alſo, and a famous one, yet he is not by the Hebrews placed among the Prophets, but the Hagiographa. And whereas each of the other Prophets hath a Booke by himſelf, theſe have been put alwayes into one, being otherwiſe in danger to periſh if they went ſeverally.

Calvin.

2. Touching the places where theſe Prophets were imployed to teach; Calvin noteth, that Hoſea and Amos propheſied to the Kingdom of Iſrael, that fell away to Idolatry in Jeroboams dayes, who made the golden Calves, from which foul ſin notwithſtanding they never departed, till that Kingdom was ruined by the Aſſyrians. Micah, as alſo Iſaiah, propheſied to the Kingdom of Iudah, which alſo fell to Idolatry in Rehoboams time, ſoon after the diviſion of Iſrael into two, and ſpecially in Ahaz his time, and in the time of Manaſſeh, Zedekiah, and the other ſons of Ioſiah, till that Kingdome was alſo ruined by the Babylonians. But Micah and Iſaiah did not alone propheſie to Iudah, but Ioel alſo, as may be gathered ch. 2. and Habaccuk, ſee ch. 1. 8. and Zephaniah, as for Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, they propheſied to them after their return from Babylon. Obadiah to Edom, to Nineveh firſt Ionah, then divers years after, Nahum.

Hieron.

3. Their names are all ſignificative, Hoſea ſalvation, Ioel beginning, Amos pluckt away, Obadiah a ſervant of the Lord, Ionah a Dove, Micah humility, Nahum conſolation, Habaccuk wreſtling, Zephaniah the hidden one of the Lord, Haggai ſolemne, Zechariah the remembrance of the Lord, Malachi my Angel: ſo Hierom.

4. It may be demanded why ſome of them tell the time of their propheſying, but others not? Anſw. They that tell the time, doe it for the certainty of the things ſet forth by them, and becauſe to know the time when, and the place to which they were ſent, conduceth much to the underſtanding of their propheſies. But others propheſying of things more generall, or concerning other Nations do not, becauſe their propheſies pertaine to men at all times alike.

HOSEA CHAP. I.

V. 1. THE word of the Lord, which came to Hoſea the ſon of Beeri, in the days of Vzziah, &c. as Eſay 1. 1. four Kings of Iudah, are alſo named, but here another, Ieroboam ſon of Ioaſh King of Iſrael, is added more then there, becauſe Hoſea began to propheſie under him in the land of Iſrael: And from hence it is conjectured, that he began to propheſie before Iſaiah, becauſe this Ieroboam, in whoſe time 2 King.15. he is ſaid to have propheſied, had reigned 27 years before that Vzziah began to reign, and the next words, *v.*2. ſeem alſo to make for it, the beginning of the word of the Lord by Hoſea. It is therefore generally held, that Hoſea was the firſt of all the Prophets that wrote propheſies, but in his time Iſaiah, Ioel, Amos, Hieron. Obadiah, Ionah, and Micah, propheſied alſo, as Hierom noteth: How long the time of his propheſying was, we may gather by computing the times of the Kings here named, as hath been done already upon Eſay 1. only we know not Calvin. how long under Ieroboam, before that Azariah began his reign. Calvin gueſſeth, that his whole time of propheſying was 60 or 70 years. And becauſe Ieroboam, under whom he began, was a mighty King, and greatly enlarged the bounds of his Kingdome, although a wicked man, he noteth, of what a ſpirit and courage Hoſea was, that was not hereby diſcouraged from ſpeaking what God would have him of the deſtruction of that Kingdome for Idolatry, when it was in a moſt flouriſhing condition. For he might have thought, that his propheſying of things ſo improbable, would have been derided and contemned by all men; yet he was not hereby daunted, but went on reſolutely in his office, giving all the Miniſters of God example, not to forbear to Note. threaten the people, to whom they are ſent, living in ſin, with deſtruction, although there be yet none appearance of any ſuch danger. But why is Ieroboam only named here, and not other Kings ſucceeding him, till the carrying away of the kingdom of Iſrael captive: for he propheſied in the time of the Kings that reigned after him till then, as appeareth, becauſe Hoſhea, the laſt 2 King.17. King of Iſrael, in whoſe 9. year they were carryed away, was of the ſame time with Hezekiah here mentioned, only it is ſaid, that he began his reign the 3. year of Hoſea, and betwixt Jeroboam and Hoſea, were Zechariah the ſon of Je- 2 King.19. 8. roboam 6 months, Shullum, who reigned one month, Menahem 10 years, Pekahiah two years, Pekah 20 years.

Anſ. The Kings that reigned after Jeroboam attained the Crown by bloodſhed Shallum King ſlew Zechariah his ſon, and Menahem, and Pekah Pekahiah, ſo that they were no lawfull Kings, but uſurped, when the line of Iehu, which ended in Zechariah, that was ſo ſoon cut off, was out; and therefore not worthy the naming. And Ieroboam is named to ſhew, that the Lord foreſeeth and threatneth judgments to come long before, and being ſo threatned they ſhall come Note. as certainly, as if they were preſently executed. For betwixt Hoſhea his threatning at the word of the Lord and the execution of the judgment were almoſt, if not altogether 60 years, in all which time wicked ſcoffers might ſay, where is the judgment that Hoſea threatned? and ſo ſleight it as nothing.

Hoſea is ſaid to be the ſon of Beeri, but who this Beeri was, I find not in any Expoſitour: Only ſome think him to have been a Prophet, becauſe Prophets, ſay the Hebrews, do not write their fathers names, unleſſe they were Prophets alſo, but how true this is, ſee before upon Eſay 1. Jerom ſaith, that Ho- ſea

ſeah was of Iſſachar of the town of Bethleemoth, and dying in peace was buried there.

The beginning of the word of the Lord by Hoſeah; From hence, as hath been touched before, ſome gather, that the Lord began to ſpeak by Hoſea before that by any of the other Prophets here following, or by Eſay, Jeremy, or Ezekiel, before going: but this is confuted by Lyra, ſaying, that Obadiah propheſied before him, viz. in the time of Ahab, who, he ſaith, is generally held by Chriſtian Doctours to be that Obadiah ſpoken of 1 King, 18. that hid the Prophets by 50 in a cave from Iezabels fury, and fed them with bread and water. But others there are, who ſubſcribe not to this, as indeed there can no reaſon be brought for it, but againſt it, who hold this to be the meaning of theſe words: here is the firſt, that God ſpake to his Prophets to be committed to writing and put into a book, when his word came to Hoſea, whom he imployed firſt in this kind of all others. If any had rather take it, as meant in reference to the relation following, I will not contend; he may underſtand, as if it had been ſaid, when the Lord ſpake unto him, he began firſt with the command, that he gave him about taking a wife of fornications, and children of fornications, the more lively to ſet forth the caſe of Idolatrous Iſrael, whom the Lord had taken to wife; but ſhe had by ſpirituall fornication with falſe Gods abuſed him, and was full of baſtards, in ſtead of legitimate children, that they might be aſhamed and repent.

V. 2.

Lyra.

The main queſtion here is, whether this were really done by the Prophet, or whether the Lord ſpake thus unto him, and he did thus in viſion only? Calvin ſaith that it was done in viſion, and Lyra likewiſe; yeelding this reaſon: if it had been commanded to be really done, the Lord ſhould have commanded the doing of a thing diſhoneſt; for a Prophet to take an harlot out of the Stews, being common to all men, as the word, wife of whoredoms, implyeth. For as 1 Tim. 3. it is preſcribed, what manner of woman a Biſhops wife ſhould be, viz. for womanly vertues a pattern to other women; ſo doubtleſſe in the time of the law, a Prophets wife muſt be one of unblamable converſation. Moreover it is ſaid, a wife of fornications, and children of fornications: which cannot agree, if it were really done, which is here commanded; for doubtleſs if the Prophet had taken him ſuch a wife, and of her begotten children, they ſhould not have been thus called, for they ſhould have been legitimate: wherefore that which is here ſaid to be done, is parabolicall, as if the Lord had ſaid, propound thy ſelf taking ſuch a wife and children by way of parable, to the houſe of Iſrael, hereby to ſhew them their ſin, and the puniſhment that ſhould follow for it. And further to make this good, and againſt the other; let us conſider, that if it had really been done ſo, it would not have ſo aptly ſet forth the caſe of Iſrael. For that ſtate was not as an harlot, when God took her to wife, but played the harlot afterwards, and had children who did likewiſe.

Calvin.
Lyra.

Some yet on the contrary ſide ſay, that nothing is diſhoneſt which God commands to be done, and therefore not for Hoſea to marry a common whore, and for this reaſon they ſtand for the reall doing, as is ſaid; and Jerom for the doing ſo, by a wife of whoredoms, an Idolatreſſe being underſtood. Ireneus l. 4. c. 37. affirms it to have been truly done, and Baſil, and Auguſtine, Cyril, Theodoret, &c. but the reaſons before going are unanſwerable, and therefore I reſt in the firſt. Neither could the caſe of Iſrael be ſo aptly ſet forth any other way, for ſince the ſeparation of the ten tribes from Judah, Jeroboam that firſt reigned over them, was notorious for the golden calves which he ſet up, the one in Bethel and the other in Dan, thus making all Iſrael to ſin. And therefore this wife of whoredoms and children of whoredoms did moſt aptly ſet them forth in this their ſpirituall whoredom, the Church in generall there being as this wife, and the people as theſe children, of whom the Proverb might be uſed, Like mother like children. Now that this was done to this end, the words following ſhew, for the Land in fornicating hath fornicated from going after the Lord: as it is Hebr. that is, hath been notorious for ſuch fornication, fornication, and not keeping her to the Lord her husband. Touching children of whoredomes, ſome thinke that they were children which ſhe had before; ſome, were thus called, becauſe of like quality.

Hieron.

If it ſhall ſeem better to any man to underſtand this marrying of Hoſea with an Harlot, as really done, as hath been before ſhewed, that many do; then he muſt take her to be called a wife of fornications, not for her whoredomes paſt, but for her whoredoms after marriage; as Iſrael being before Jeroboams time marryed to the Lord, played the whore then, and ſo went on through many Kings reigns, till this Jeroboams time: and as this woman taken by Hoſea playing the whore after marriage brought not forth any legitimate children, but children of whoredoms like unto her ſelfe; ſo the Church of Iſrael turning Idolatrous, the children that came of her were Idolatrous, generation after generation. And thus Hoſeah ſignifying a Saviour, the ſon of Beeri, ſignifying fountains, moſt fitly ſetteth forth the Lord, the fountain of living water, as he is called *Jer.*2.13. and the Saviour of Iſrael, which ſo ungratefully forſook him and dealt falſly with him. For Hoſeah his really taking of a wife, reaſons are brought by Cyril; 1. in parables the perſons are not named, here they be. 2. God teacheth both by hearing and ſeeing. 3. It is commonly ſaid ſo in parables, as that they may be underſtood to be ſo.

V. 4. And he went and took Gomer the daughter of Diblaim, who conceived and bare a ſon, and the Lord ſaid unto him, Call his name Jezreel: Gomer, ſaith the Ordin. Gloſſ.
Gloſſ. Ordin. ſignifieth conſummata, and Diblaim, a maſſe of figs trodden hard together to make Lyra. them laſt the longer, or pleaſure: Jezreel the ſeed of God. Lyra ſaith that Gomer is the womans name, whom he took; Diblaim, the name of her father, or place where ſhe was born; Jezreel, the chief City of the Kingdom, where the King reſided, in Ahabs time. He muſt take her that was called Gomer, to figure out the declining and vaniſhing eſtate of Iſrael; the conſummation whereof ſhould ſoon come, and to ſhew, from whence this originally came, and what was the cauſe of it.

Gomer is ſaid to be daughter of Diblaim, that is, of ſinfull pleaſure, which ſhe took in the fornication of Idolatry, pleaſure being aptly ſet forth by ſweet Note. and full ripe figges made into a maſſe, as the word properly ſignifieth. And from hence we may well note, that deſtruction is the daughter of ſinfull pleaſure in what ſtate or perſons ſoever, they that will have ſuch pleaſure ſhall all periſh. For the next name of her ſon Jezreel; it cometh of זרע ſignifying ſeed; and becauſe ſeed is ſcattered upon the land, it is put alſo for diſ-Calvin. perſion. But by Jezreel, as Calvin well noteth, is meant the Kingdom of Iſrael, and the name Iſrael was honourable, of which therefore they were not a little brag; but the Lord in calling them by this name, ſomewhat altered, takes down their vain pride, intimating hereby both their abominable wickedneſſe, of which the City Jezreel was full when Ahab dwelt there, and beſides Idolatries, to which he and his wife Jezabel were ſo addicted, they added the ſin of ſhedding Naboths innocent bloud, and their diſperſion that ſhould ſhortly be by the Aſſyrians into remote countries to live there in exile and miſery.

The reaſon of the name is next added, I will viſit the bloud of Jezreel upon the houſe of Jehu. Jeroboam that now reigned, was of the race of Jehu, the third 2 King. 15. from him, and having reigned after this 14. years he left his kingdom to Zechariah his ſon, who in 6 months was ſlain, and then this propheſie began to take effect.

But what meaneth he by ſaying, I will viſit the bloud of Jezreel upon Jehu his houſe: For it was Ahab and not Jehu, that ſhed the innocent bloud of Naboth here? Calvin anſwers rightly, it is not meant, that revenge ſhould be taken upon Jehu for acting that bloudy part, or for Jezabels bloud, which he ſhed there, or the bloud of Ahabs children, for he did herein no more then God would have him; but becauſe he made himſelf like Ahab by his Idolatry, he meaneth, that he ſhould in his houſe be likewiſe judged, as Ahab was in his, and becauſe Ahabs judgment was revenge for bloud ſhed in Jez*reel*, by cutting off his houſe, this cutting off of Zechariah, in whom Jehu his houſe ended, is ſet forth by theſe words, revenge the bloud of Jezreel upon the houſe of Jehu. And hereby we may learn that ſuch as puniſh ſin in others, yet live in the ſame ſin, or the like, themſelves come into the ſame predicament with them whom they puniſhed, and revenge ſhall be taken upon them accordingly. For in ſuch true zeal worketh not, but malice and covetouſneſſe, ſo that although the thing done by them be preſcribed, and therefore juſtifiable, yet the executions done by them ſhall in time be brought upon their own heads. And Calvin inſtanceth for this in Henry 8. of England, doing well in putting downe the Popes ſupremacy, but perſecuting ſtill the faithful, and living moſt ſenſually like a beaſt.

Note.

Some others, becauſe they ſaw not how it could be made good in ſenſe, I will viſit the bloud of Jezreel, if bloud be properly underſtood, ſay, that by bloud wickedneſſe is meant, and ſome will have an alluſion to be in the name Jezreel, not to Iſrael, but to ſeed ſcattered, which is true, but not all here intended. For our expoſition maketh alſo the Cald. Paraph. I will viſit the bloud of the Idol-worſhippers in Jezreel upon the houſe of Jehu, becauſe he and his houſe after he had ſhed the bloud of Ahabs children, fell to the Idolatry of the golden calves, although he rooted out the Idolatry with Baal, I will cut off his houſe, as I did that in Jezreel, ſo Ruffinus alſo, and I will cauſe to ceaſe the Kingdom of Iſrael, not only ſhall the houſe of Jehu be cut off, but that kingdom ſhall quite ceaſe; and this was verified 2 King. 17. in the 9 year of King Hoſea 41 years after.

Cald.

Ruffinus.

V. 5.

I will break the bow of Iſrael in the valley of Jezreel: This is added to take away the confidence which they had in their skill to ſhoot, and ſo to ſmite their enemies, for of their skill in this weapon eſpecially it is ſpoken, 1 Chron. 12. 2 King. 1. Pſal. 78. to ſhew therefore, that their bowes and skill in archery ſhould ſtand them in no ſtead, he ſaith, their bow ſhall be broken, meaning, that their ſtrength ſhould be ſo abated by civill warres before the coming of the Aſſyrians their moſt potent enemies, that they ſhould eaſily be overcome by them, and their kingdome deſtroyed. But what is meant by ſaying in Jezreel, when as this was done in Samaria, 2 King. 17? Some anſwer, that the valley of J*ezreel* was very large and extended even to Samaria: for J*udg.* 6. the Midianites, Amalekites, and other eaſterly people gathered together in wonderfull great multitudes, and pitched in the valley of Je*zreel*, and Jo*ſh.* 17. J*ezreel* is ſaid to have ſtood in this valley, which was the Metropolitan City of the Kingdome, and therefore it muſt be very large, and J*erom* ſaith it extended 10 miles, and here the Iſraelites fighting with the Aſſyrians, had their ſtrength broken, and with him agreeth Theodoret and other Ancients, generally. And for the nearneſſe of Samaria to Je*zreel*, ſo that the valley being large might well extend unto it, maketh that which is ſaid 2 King. 10. J*ehu* ſent to the Elders of Samaria, ſaying, Send me the heads of the 70 ſons of Ahab by to morrow this time.

Hieron.

Theodoret.

Gualter.

Gualter thinks it not neceſſary to underſtand here the breaking of their ſtrength by the Aſſyrians at the laſt, but in their conflicts amongſt themſelves, ſome ſtanding for one King and ſome for another, 2 King. 15. and ch. 16. and that moſt probably about Je*zreel*, this being foretold, as a preparative to the deſtruction of the Kingdome, which was now mighty in J*eroboams* reign, and not as a thing to be done at the coming of the Aſſyrians, to which I ſubſcribe.

Note.

Note, that it is not the ſtrength of a Kingdom that can ſave it, for God can eaſily break that without a forreign enemy, by ſending a ſpirit of diviſion within the ſame kingdome, making them to fight one againſt another, and when it is done ſo, it is to be feared, that the ruine of the whole kingdom by forreign enemies is not far off.

V. 6.

And ſhe conceived again and bare a daughter: Here is ſomething more threatned then before, for he doth not only ſay that the Kingdom ſhall be deſtroyed, but

Calvin.

but that he would not ſhew them mercy any more, by reſtoring them to a Kingdom again, but utterly take them away, putting out the name of the Kingdom of the ten tribes for ever. Therefore the daughter now born muſt be called Lo-ruchamah, ſignifying not mercie. For, ſaith he, I will utterly take them away, Hebr. by taking I will take them away; but becauſe it is אשא לחם I will take to them, ſome ſaith Calvin, render it I will bring to them the enemy that ſhall deſtroy them: but ל ſaith he, is ſometimes put for את and therefore the beſt reading is, I will take them away; that of others, I will utterly forget them, becauſe בשה ſignifieth to forget, is not to be imbraced, becauſe that word is not the ſame with this. In theſe words is nothing elſe then but an amplification of the threatning before going, I wil not have mercy, as if he had ſaid, this ſhall appear by my utterly putting downe that Kingdome never to be by any power ſet up again. As indeed it never was, but Judah being afterwards carryed away, was at the end of 70 years reſtored again.

V. 7.
2 Chron. 25.

Touching whom therefore it followeth, I will have mercy upon the houſe of Judah, and ſave them by the Lord their God, not by ſword or battel, &c. For the better underſtanding whereof we muſt look into the Hiſtory of Amaziah the King of Judah, whom Jehoaſh the King of Iſrael overcame and took away his treaſures, and brought Judah very low; therefore in Jeroboams time, who ſucceeded Jehoaſh and was rather more mighty, it cannot be doubted but that Judah continued in the ſame low eſtate ſtill. The meaning then muſt needs be, that in this low eſtate of theirs the Lord would have mercy upon them, and ſave them from their enemies, when Iſrael that was now ſo potent, and for this inſulted over them, ſhould be deſtroyed and ceaſe from being a Kingdom any more for ever: for which it is alſo added, not by ſword or battle, horſemen or horſes; wherein they were then moſt weak. A thing worthy our noting, that the Kingdome which hath little ſtrength ſhall be ſaved and ſtand, when the Kingdom far more potent ſhall be overthrown: ſo great a difference doth ſin and righteouſneſſe make betwixt Kingdoms.

And this was notably ſeen in the dayes of Hezekiah King of Judah a godly King, when the Aſſyrians coming againſt him under Sannerib were deſtroyed in one night to 185000. But even in the ſame Kings time, they coming againſt the Kingdom of Iſrael prevailed, and deſtroyed it. And it was further fulfilled in their deliverance out of the Babyloniſh captivity, when they were brought into their own country again, not by any force of arms, but meerly by a divine power working in the heart of Cyrus to give them leave to return. Jerom and Hilary, becauſe it is ſaid, by the Lord their God, underſtand alſo the ſalvation to come by Chriſt Jeſus, who is our Lord and our God, and this is the greateſt ſalvation of all others: and commonly, as Lyra noteth, prefigured in that ſaving of them out of captivity by Cyrus. Calvin makes a queſtion here how it came to paſſe, that the Prophet ſpake ſo well of Judah in compariſon of Iſrael, and ſo much to her comfort, when ſo terribly againſt Iſrael; forſomuch as Judah was alſo notoriouſly wicked, as is often complained by Iſaiah, eſpecially *ch.*28. But it is the King, at whom God eſpecially looketh, either in judging or ſhewing favour to a Kingdom, and not to the wickedneſs of the people, as we may ſee in the hiſtories of godly and wicked Kings, the one ſort being alwayes a means of bleſſing to his Kingdom, the other of judgments. And ſpecially in Hezekiah and Hoſea, in whoſe dayes Iſrael was deſtroyed but Judah ſaved, the one being moſt wicked, the other moſt zealous about the worſhip and ſervice of God. But to look back again a little to v. 6. where it is ſaid, I will utterly take them away, a queſtion hereupon is made, how this was verified, when as not only the tribe of Judah and Benjamin were reſtored to their country, but alſo they of other tribes, as appeareth 2 Chron. 30. where it is ſaid, after the Aſſyrian captivity, that Hezekiah ſent to them of Ephraim, Manaſſeh, and Zebulon to come to Jeruſalem to keep the Paſſeover. And it is ſaid Ezek. 37.15. and ſhewed by a ſign of two ſticks that Judah and Iſrael ſhould live together under one King.

Anſw. The firſt allegation is of no force becauſe it is plainly ſaid, that they of Iſrael, and the Tribes named there were not any that returned again, but ſuch as eſcaped when others were carryed away. For the next, it may be underſtood of thoſe of Iſrael, who were mingled with the kingdome of Judah; and were carryed away with the Jews into Babylon, for even in Rehoboams time, many of the ten Tribes being moved by the idolatry of Jeroboam changed their habitations and came and dwelt in the kingdom of Judah, where was the place of Gods Worſhip, and by this means, it is ſaid, His kingdome was the more ſtrengthened. And theſe moſt probably continuing in their poſterity there till the Babyloniſh captivity, but then returning again, are meant, being all the Iſrael remaining, the reſt being carryed ſo far off that they never ſince appeared any more; onely we read of them, that they were ſhut up with the Caſpian mountaines, and are there in infinite multitudes at this day. Moreover there is another underſtanding of Iſrael, viz. of the faithfull of all Countryes and Nations, who come to be one with the Jews, that beleeve in Chriſt, Gal. 3.28. of whom the words, verſ. 10. the number of the children of Iſrael ſhall be as the ſands of the Sea ſhoare, are to be underſtood, as Expoſitours generally agree, and not of Iſraelites onely according to the fleſh, of which I ſhall ſpeak more, when I come unto them.

V. 8. And when ſhee had weaned Lo-ruhamah, ſhee conceived againe and bare a ſon. Heb. weaning of Lo-ruhamah is held alſo to be ſignificative, ſetting forth the taking away of Iſrael from being nouriſhed any more by God, by his Word and Sacraments, and carrying her into a ſtrange land, to be fed there with other things, viz. the vanities of the heathen, ſerving their Gods. Lyra. And as one noteth, this daughter ſhewed the weakneſſe, to which this kingdom ſhould grow, being before as a ſonne, now it ſhould be weak, as a daughter. For the ſon next brought forth called Loammi, not my people; Hereby was further ſhewed, that Iſrael being thus put off ſhould no more be accounted of as Gods people, but left to the will of their enemies as ſtrangers to be domineered over with great cruelty, and to be placed where they would.

V. 10. But the number of the children of Iſrael ſhall be as the ſands, &c. This is Hebr. the beginning of chap. 2. and indeed forſomuch as it is the beginning of new matter, viz. of comfort, whereas hitherto nothing but terrour hath been ſpoken, it were beſt to begin a new chapter here, the vulgar tranſlation doth, Iunius not, but hath it as a continuation of this chapter, and for But, hath although, yet Heb. it is And, as if hee had ſaid, thus it ſhall be, Iſrael ſhall be ſo utterly rejected, as before goeth, and having continued long in this eſtate ſhall miraculouſly be increaſed in number as the ſands of the Sea ſhoar. Calvin. Which is added ſaith Calvin, to prevent an objection that might be made, if the children of Iſrael ſhall be utterly taken away and no more be a people, what ſhall become of Gods promiſe to encreaſe Abrahams poſterity to be as the duſt of the earth? Gen. 13. It is here anſwered, the children of Iſrael ſhall thus indeed be rejected for a long time, but the time ſhall come, when they ſhall be againe farre more increaſed by the acceſſion of the faithfull of all countreys and Nations under the Goſpell. For theſe together with the beleevers of the Jewes and Iſraelites bear the ſame name, now the poſterity of Iſrael being not the onely Iſrael, but all the faithfull of any other Nation, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, Rom. 9.24. 25. alleadging the very words of this place, and Eſai. 44. 5. is plain for it, ſaying of the Nations, one ſhall call himſelfe Jacob, and another by the name of Iſrael, and ſo it is here added, in the place, where it was ſaid, yee are not my people, it ſhall be ſaid, yee are ſonnes of the living God, more grace being promiſed to this Iſrael, then ever before. For then they were called onely his peculiar people, and once, Iſrael is my ſon, my firſt born, and the people of God, but here, ſonnes, and ſonnes of the living God, intimating more favour everlaſtingly, cauſing more boldneſſe and confidence, and life of grace and glory for ever.

V. 11. Then ſhall the children of Judah and the children of Iſrael be gathered together and appoint over them one head and come up out of the land, for great ſhall be the day of Iezreel. Here it ſeemeth plainly propheſied, that not only Iudah, but Iſrael alſo, even they of the ten tribes, who were formerly divided from the kingdom of

Iudah ſhould return out of the land whereinto they were carryed, and then be united under one King, Chriſt Jeſus, never to be divided any more. And about their uniting under him hee ſpeaketh ſo, as that it cannot be underſtood only of ſome of the ten tribes, who lived mixt together with Iudah, but of them, that never before after their diviſion were again mixed till the time here ſpoken of: for it is ſaid, that they ſhall gather themſelves together, intimating, that they lived at a diſtance all the time before, and appoint over them one head, intimating that they did not ſo till now. And therefore the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaketh ſo confidently that there ſhall come a time of their converſion, Rom. 11.25. applying hereunto, Eſai. 59. 20. ſpeaking of the Redeemer coming to Zion and to Iacob, as here both are comforted by the like promiſe.

Auguſt. Hieron. Lyra. Calvin.

Yet both Ierome, Auguſtine, Lyra and Calvin expound all this of ſpirituall Iſrael, the faithfull of the Gentiles, making no mention of the converſion of the ten Tribes at all, but by Iudah underſtanding the Iſraelites either of the two Tribes or any other of the Tribes that imbraced the Faith, and by Iſrael the faithfull of the Gentiles.

Hieron. Lyra. Calvin.

And for the laſt words ſome ſay, great is the day of Jezreel, that is, of the ſeed of God, as the word ſignifieth, ſome take it to be ſpoken with reference to the words before going, I will viſit the bloud of Iezreel, &c. verſ. 4. 5. as if hee had ſaid, it may ſeeme incredible which I have threatened againſt Iſrael, but it ſhall certainly come to paſſe, and the day when, ſhall be greatly noted, as wherein great things were done.

Gualter.

Gualter referring it likewiſe to that which was ſaid before takes in all both the threatnings and the promiſes, for in reſpect of both it ſhal be counted a great day, when theſe mighty things ſhal all come to paſſe. I ſee no reaſon, why by Iezreel the kingdom of the ten Tribes may not to be underſtood, and their day of converſion ſaid to be a great day, ſeeing the firſt ſon of Hoſheah by his wife had his name Iezreel, that herein he might figure out this kingdom, which thought it ſelf ſo ſtrong, but for ſin was adjudged to diſſipation, yet being by Gods mercy gathered together again with Judah under the Goſpel, Iſrael ſhould be as honorable and famous, as before miſerable and infamous, and the day when this ſhould be done ſhould be counted a great day of Iezreel, formerly ſo called in deriſion, but now ſeriouſly they comming to be the ſeed of God, as it is expreſly ſaid they ſhall bee called the ſonnes of the living God: and therefore I reſt in this, it is here propheſied, that not onely ſome of the kingdome of Judah, who returned from the Babyloniſh captivity ſhall imbrace the Faith of Chriſt, thus becoming the ſons of God, as it is ſaid, Ioh. 1. 12. So many as received him to them hee gave power to be the ſonnes of God, even to them that beleeve in his name; which began alſo to bee fulfilled in the Apoſtles, and 70 ſent out to preach, and in thouſands of other faithfull people of the Jews, of whom we read Act. 2. Act. 5. Act. 21. And moreover it is propheſied of the kingdome of Iſrael ſo long continuing no people, that the time ſhall come, when even they ſhall bee inlightened alſo and come up, or aſcend to this high honor out of the land, wherein they have ſo long lain dead, as it were, for which Saint Paul calleth their converſion a reſurrection from the dead, and Ezek 37. it is ſet forth by the reviving of dead and withered bones.

Rom. 11.

But touching their coming to their own countrey again, and living all under one King, being a man in this world of the race of David, as ſome conceive, is meant by their appointing one King over them, and their coming up out of the land, underſtanding hereby a locall motion, it cannot be grounded upon this, or any other Propheſie, in which that which is ſpoken in this kind is to be underſtood ſpiritually, for ſomuch as the diſtinction of places now ceaſeth, and the ſerving of God by Sacrifices and incenſe, all worſhip being in ſpirit and in truth.

Joh. 4. 20.

But what is it that he ſaith, they ſhall appoint one head over them? ſhall they or God appoint him? Anſw. it is thus ſaid, to ſhew their willingneſſe to receive him whom God appointed, as Pſal. 110, 2.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. Lyra. Calvin. S*Ay to yonr brethren Ammi, and to your ſiſters Ruhamah*; that is, ſaith Lyra, ye Apoſtles and other Preachers of the Goſpell comfort all the faithfull, that by your preaching are brought to Chriſt by Faith and repentance, telling them, if they be of the Jewiſh Nations, that although they were rejected, as no people a long time, yet now they are the people of God, for the word עמי ſignifieth my people, and your ſiſterhood of the Gentiles, being converted, ye have now obtained mercy, as the word רוחמה ſignifieth. Calvin will have it an exhortation in generall made by one Chriſtian to another, that they might cheerfully praiſe God together for his great grace in Chriſt Jeſus.

V. 2. Calvin. Lyra. Plead with your mother, for ſhee is not my wife, neither am I her husband. Having in the former words comforted the faithfull, of whom the moſt eminent were Jewes; now hee returneth againe to the wicked, who were the far greater part of them, bidding the faithfull to reprove and ſharpely to deale with them, as they were well worthy. And hee ſetteth them forth by the name of their mother, becauſe they from whom they deſcended according to the fleſh remained ſtill in ſinne and infidelity for the moſt part, as is intimated in that ſaying of Chriſt, when the Jews objected unto him, that he caſt out devils by Belzebub, if I by Belzebub caſt out devils, by whom doe your children caſt them out? For hereby hee ſheweth that the Apoſtles and 70 whom he ſent out giving them power to caſt out devils, were the children of unbeleevers, that perſecuted Chriſt as well as others. Calvin underſtands it of the people then going on ſtill in their idolatries, notwithſtanding all his threatnings. For as hee began with threatning, but turned to conſolations in reſpect of the faithfull amongſt them, ſo now againe hee reneweth his firſt theame of threatning againſt them that were nothing moved by all that was ſaid, but went on obſtinately ſtill in their idolatries and other abominations. But for ſo much as it is here propheſied what ſhould be done in time of the Goſpell; I think it beſt to refer this to the ſame time alſo, as Lyra doth. Let the Jews, that are Preachers of the Goſpell, plead with the Synagogue, of which they were, and ſay in the Lords name, thou art not my wife, neither am I thy husband. For thus Chriſt did, Matth. 23. 23. and Paul, Rom. 11. and Rom. 9. and Act. 28. yet becauſe it is whoredome about which they are bidden to plead, that is idolatry, which is commonly called ſpirituall whoredome, and to this the Synagogue was not addicted in the time of the Goſpell nor before, ſince their return out of Babylon, that of Calvin may well ſtand, the faithfull then living, who were moved at Gods threatnings by the Prophet, are bidden thus to plead with their mother, the idolatrous Church that then was. But the former expoſition holdeth good alſo, ſith the Synagogue in the time of the Goſpell hardening herſelfe by unbeleife might well have the whoredome of idolatry laid to her charge, for that which was done of old, the childrens children that live in ſinne, being in the ſame guilt in the ſight of God, that their forefathers were in, as may be gathered from that ſaying of our Lord. All the righteous bloud from Abel to Zechariah, ſhall be brought upon this generation, therefore that generation was guilty of bloudſhed many hundred yeares before, and if of bloud, of other foul ſins alſo, for which the Prophets being ſtirred up to inveigh againſt them were murthered by them; and therefore of idolatry, which was the greateſt.

V. 3.4. Lyra. Let her put away her whoredomes, &c. Leſt I ſtrip her naked, &c. and I will not have mercy upon her children, &c. As before he threatned the ten Tribes as is commonly held, ſo now he threatneth Jeruſalem and the Tribe of Judah, bidding her put away her whoredomes, that is, idolatries whereby ſhee became like unto a whore, laying open her breaſts to allure lovers unto her. Otherwiſe he threatneth to ſtrip her naked, as Lyra ſaith, by the Caldees, and leave her as in the day of her birth, that is, in her filthineſſe of ſin, as Ezek. 31. and make her as a wilderneſſe, her wals and buildings being pulled down, and ſlay her with thirſt, for want of water in time of the ſtrait ſiege, wherewith the Caldeans beſieged them. And for her children, that is, her young men, who were fit for warre, he threatneth, that they ſhould finde no mercy, but be cruelly deſtroyed, all which came to paſſe accordingly. Thus for that which was done then, but Jerome applyeth it to Jeruſalem being otherwiſe adulterous Hieron. by being ſectaries of divers ſorts, and hereticks amongſt Chriſtians, for there be more ſorts of adulterers and adultereſſes, as we may ſee Jam. 4. 1. Such whoredomes if ſhee put not away, he threatned the ſame to bee done by the Romans that was done by the Caldeans, as it was aboundantly fulfilled in the Calvin. deſtruction of their City. Calvin, by leaving her as in the day of her nativity, underſtandeth the time of her coming out of Egypt, when full of feare they fled in the night out of Egypt and came into the Wilderneſſe, where they wanted both bread and water. The Lord here threatens the Jewes, as a King that hath raiſed a baſe perſon to honour, but ſeeing him abuſe it to pride, ſaith, Thou proud begger, whom I have ſo ſet up, doſt thou make this uſe of my kindneſſe, deſpiſing me to follow other Lords? I will pull thee down again, and make thee as low, as ever thou wert, according to the condition, wherein thou wert born. Yet it is to be noted, that he doth not put them out of all hope, for he doth not abſolutely threaten them, but ſaith, Leſt I ſtrip thee naked, &c. giving hope yet, if Judah had any grace to turn from her Note. whoredomes, that ſhe ſhould find mercy. And likewiſe there is hope for any ſinner, whileſt hee liveth, how greatly ſoever hee hath offended, hee is but in danger in caſe that he goeth on obſtinately, but who ſo turneth ſhall eſcape.

V. 5. For ſhee ſaid, I will goe after my lovers that give me my bread, &c. By Lover ſometimes are underſtood Aſſyrians and Egyptians, whom Judah counted her friends to help her in diſtreſſe againſt other enemies, as Ier. 2. and Ezek. 16.
Cald. ſometimes idols, as Ier. 3. Ezek. 23. The Caldee renders it, peoples thy lovers, and Hieron. ſo Ierome underſtands, but it appears that idols are rather here meant, as Calvin Calvin. hath it, becauſe they ſay, which give me my bread, &c. for ſuch was the ſottiſhneſſe of the Jews turning idolaters, that they aſcribed all the good that they injoyed to the idols, whom they ſerved, as we may ſee Ier. 44. and Exod. 22. where they moſt groſſely ſay of the golden calfe, Theſe are thy gods that brought thee out of the land of Egypt, when as they were made but yeſterday of their golden earrings. They aſcribe to their idols their bread, and water, wool, and flax, oyl and drinke, where by bread and water are meant things moſt neceſſary to ſatisfie hunger and thirſt, by drink wine or ſtrong drink, the word is שקוי ſhikui, coming of שקה aboundantly to water, implyeth liberality in their drink. For men in a proſperous eſtate have not onely neceſſaries, but things more excellent and comfortable, by oil is meant that wherewith Pſal. 104. anciently the rich anointed their bodies, which made the face to ſhine, Matth. 6. that is, the countenance more pleaſant and chearfull, wool and flax were for cloathing both woollen and linnen.

V. 6. Therefore I will hedge up her way with thorns, and make a wall, that ſhe ſhall not find Lyra. her paths, that is, the Caldeans, who were both as an hedge of thorns about Ieruſalem, and if they ſhould think, that the hedge might bee burnt, hee ſaith they ſhould be a wall alſo, and ſhe ſhould not finde her paths, that is, to the V. 7. Egyptians her lovers, as it followeth, verſ. 7. Shee ſhall ſeek after her lovers and not finde them, for they were the Egyptians from whom they expected help againſt the Caldeans, but in vain as the hiſtory ſheweth, Ier. 37. 7. where it is ſaid, that Pharaoh, who came out to help them, ſhould return home againe, Joſeph. Antiq. and the Caldeans ſhould take the City. And Ioſephus ſaith, that the King of . 10. c. 10. Egypt, to whom Zedekiah had revolted from the King of Babylon, came out with a ſtrong Army to help him againſt the Caldees, but Nebuchadnezzar leaving the ſiege went and beat him back and returned again, which well agreeth with that which is ſaid by Ieremiah. But how could Ieruſalem go to ſeek her lovers, when her way was ſtopped up, as is aforeſaid? Anſw. It is not meant with her bodily feet, but affection, and expectation upon a former agree-

agreement, and by her lovers alſo underſtanding her idols, ſhee went to ſeek Note. help of them in vain, by praying to them, for which he ſaith, ſhe ſhall ſeek but not finde them, that is, any help by them, ſhe being deſtroyed notwithſtanding. Then ſhee ſhall ſay, I will return to my former husband. After ſufferings repentance followeth, but grievous things are firſt ſuffered, for which it followeth, ver. 9. I will take away my corn, &c.

V. 8. For ſhee did not know, that I gave her corne, and wine, and oile, &c. The ground of idolatry, and likewiſe of living in any other groſſe ſinnes is ignorance, or continuance in ſinne cauſeth ignorance, which was not ſo groſſe at the firſt, but now there is no knowledge or conſcience of it, for which the wicked are commonly ſpoken of as fooles; wherefore wouldſt thou be wiſe and knowing? flee ſin, which puts out the eyes of the underſtanding. And it is to be noted here, that corn and wine are named, for bread and water, and drink before ſpoken of, to ſhew, that by drink, the beſt drink was meant, and for wool and flax gold and ſilver, to ſhew that riches were meant thereby, one or two kinds being put for all others, of all which gold and ſilver is the price, and therefore they that have ſtore of them can ſoon thereby fill themſelves with gold and ſilver. Which thou haſt prepared for Baal, that is, to make and beautifie the idol ſo called, for this was the common name of any idol almoſt, they being called together Baalim, in the plural number, of Gualter. which ſee before in my Expoſition upon Judg. 2. 13. They were, ſaith Gualter, held to be Gods inferiour to the Lord, as the Papiſts at this day hold the Saints departed to be, yet ſuch as ought to be called upon, and have pretious ſhrines and gifts of ſilver and gold offered unto them. But becauſe Judah did thus abuſe the gifts of God beſtowed upon them ſhee was before threatned, that ſhe ſhould be ſtript and made naked, and become a poor deſpicable V. 9. people, as at the firſt, verſ. 3. and verſ. 9. the ſame is threatned more at large, I will take away my corn in the time thereof, and my wine, &c. that is, when harveſt time cometh and the time to gather grapes, there ſhall be neither corn nor grapes, for the land ſhall be as a wilderneſſe, wherein nothing groweth, v. 3. and if vines or figtrees grow, the land being as a Forreſt for beaſts to live in, they ſhall eat them, verſ. 12. And this doth not a little aggravate the judgement to be deprived of neceſſaries for this life at the very time, when wee hoped, Note. that now we ſhould reap and injoy them. For this is the husbandmans comfort in the midſt of all his toil, making him patiently to wait, that harveſt time will come, which will pay him for all. And it is juſt with God, if we bring not forth fruits of righteouſneſſe to him in his time, which is the time of his harveſt, as it were, to take from us our corn in our harveſt time, bringing us in hope even to the entrance of this time: but then by forreign enemies breaking in, or by unſeaſonable weather deſtroying all, as Eſa. 5. Luk. 13. 6. if therefore thou wouldſt be bleſſed doe like the righteous man, who brings forth fruit in due ſeaſon.

And here mention is made of wool and flax again, to cover her nakedneſſe, the one for linnen, the other for woollen garments, which ſheweth the uſe of apparell to be not for pride and oſtentation, but to cover our nakedneſſe, as in Adam and Eve at the firſt. And becauſe he ſaith, my corn, and my wine, Note, that our goods are not our own, but the Lords, and wee are only ſtewards, in danger to have them taken away if we uſe them ill, and to be called to an account. V. 11.

And I will cauſe all her mirth to ceaſe, her feaſt dayes, new Moons and Sabbaths. There are three parts of Gods judgment threatned againſt Judah for her abominations. 1. Poverty in ſtead of riches, wherewith ſhe abounded before, v. 9. 2. Deſolation of the City and Temple, they being deſtroyed no more feſtivals ſhall be kept, and ſo mirth ſhould ceaſe, becauſe thoſe were the times of their meeting together at Jeruſalem and making merry, the Paſch, Pentecoſt and the feaſt of Tabernacles, beſides New Moons, of which Numb. 28. 3. Deſolation of the whole countrey, v. 12. I will deſtroy her Vines and Fig-trees, &c.

Thus they that have the goods of this world, but know not how to uſe

Note. them aright but abuſe them, ſhall be made poor enough, and they that have had by reaſon of their proſperity dayes of mirth and joy, for the like reaſon ſhall have dayes of ſorrow, all joy ceaſing, and their fruitfull country ſhall be turned into a wilderneſſe, becauſe they abuſe the fruits thereof to gluttony and drunkenneſſe, whereby Baal a lord, as the word ſignifieth, is ſerved again, ſith ſuch are cenſured as making their belly their God or Lord, as Philip.
3. 21.

But what is that *v.*10. I will diſcover her lewdneſſe in the ſight of her lovers, Hebr. her fooliſhneſſe, that ſhe was ſo ignorant as was before ſaid; for when by my judgment ſhe ſhall be ſtript of all in the ſight of the Egyptians her lovers, that would have holpen her, but could not, even they ſhall take notice of it, that ſhe was a fool for thus detracting from her God, and aſcribing all her good to other Gods: neither indeed were they ſuch Lovers, but that ſeeing her brought ſo low they deſpiſed her more then ever they loved her, as is intimated Eſay 19.17. at the leaſt, they would when the dayes of her proſperity was at an end and ſhe was now in miſery, do according to the proverb, Dum fueris fœlix multos numerabis amicos, Nullus ad amiſſas ibit amicus opes.

V. 14. Therefore I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderneſſe, &c. R. Solomon, ſaith R. Solomon. Lyra, underſtandeth this of the Kingdom of Judah brought back from Babylon, Lyra. when the Jews enjoyed again the like proſperity to that which they injoyed before; but this cannot ſtand, becauſe *Rom.*9. the laſt words are applyed by the Apoſtle to the Gentiles, I will call them my people that were not my people, as was touched before. He therefore underſtands it of the faithfull Gentiles, and the Church conſiſting of them, for to her when comfort was ſpoken by Chriſt, ſome that they might the more freely intend the ſervice of God, went into the wilderneſſe leading an eremiticall life; then her vineyards were reſtored unto V. 15. her, becauſe Chriſt is a vine, from whom the Chriſtian hath the wine of ſpiritual conſolation, and the valley of Achor for the dore of hope, that is, trouble, as the word Achor ſignifieth, for from inward trouble and ſorrow for ſin, he ariſeth up to hope towards God. At that day thou ſhalt call me I*ſhi and not Baali*, Iſhi ſignifieth my husband, Baali, my Lord, ſo that hereby is intimated conjugall love, wherewith they ſhould be affected, and not ſlaviſh fear, to which they are ſubject V. 17. that are out of Chriſt, *v.*17. And I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth; that is, in deteſtation of her former Idolatries, to which all the heathen were formerly addicted, now Idols ſhall no more be once named.
V. 18. v. 18. And I will make a covenant with them for the beaſts of the field, that is, men of might, who before were perſecutors, but now profeſſours of the Goſpel, and creeping things, that is, under-officers, ſo that none ſhall moleſt V. 19. them, but they ſhall be ſafe and quiet, as it was in Conſtantines time. v. 19. And I will betroth thee unto me for ever, this my favour ſhall not be for a time only, and then have an end, but for ever, for the Church of the Gentiles ſhall ſtand firm againſt all perſecutions afterwards again ariſing by Antichriſt to the V. 21. worlds end. *v.*21. And I will hear the heavens: that is, the Angels of heaven praying for the Chriſtian Countries over which they are ſet as Guardians, and the heavens ſhall hear the earth: that is, the inhabitants of the earth, the gifts and graces of the Spirit coming from heaven, being multiplyed upon them, ſet forth by corn and wine and oil: Or I wil hear the heavens, making them by their influences a bleſſing in temporal things upon earth, corn and wine being brought forth in abundance for the comfort of Jezreel, that is, this my ſeed, *v.*22. And I will ſow her upon earth; that is, multiply her children, as corn ſown multiplyeth upon the ground, and then ſhe that had no mercy, called therefore Loruchamah, ſhall have mercy, and he that was rejected as no people, called therefore Loammi, ſhall be called the people of God. And underſtanding all thus, he maketh the firſt words, v. 14. to cohere with thoſe at the beginning of the 10. chapter, Say to your brethren, Ammi, &c. Hitherto Lyra, Theophylact, Hieron. Theodoret, and Ruffin follow R. Sol. but Jerom and Cyril are for the expoſition of

of grace ſhewed under the Goſpel both to Jews and Gentiles, that beleeve as it is, that which is here ſpoken to the ſame effect, muſt needs be underſtood accordingly. For as v. 1. comfort is ſpoken both to brethren and ſiſters by the name of Ammi and Ruchamah, ſo here I will ſpeak comfortably to her, and as v. 7. I will return to my former husband, ſo v. 16. thou ſhalt call me Iſhi my husband, and *v.*23. I will have mercy upon her that had no mercy, and call them which were not my people, my people, that is, Ammi and Ruchamah, as *v.*1. and the ſame alſo was ſaid before ch. 1.10. when the Lord then ſaith, Therefore I will allure her, he meaneth the Church under the Goſpel, before called Ammi and Ruchamah, but now ſet forth only in one word her, but *v.*22. by Jezreel again, as ſhe had been before, ch. 1.11. But how doth the word (Therefore) cohere with the premiſes, ſhal they therefore be ſpoken comfortably to, becauſe they have fooliſhly aſcribed to Idols that which God gave them, and therefore were ſtript of all again? It may, as one ſheweth, have a good ſenſe thus, becauſe I have afflicted her, as ſhe was well worthy, but ſhe being afflicted repented, and thought of turning to me, as *v.*7. therefore I that love not to chide continually, but after judgment to ſhew mercy again to all penitent perſons, will do ſo by her. But what meaneth he by ſaying, I will bring her into the wilderneſſe: is there any thing in a wilderneſſe whereby one might be allured? Anſw. Calvin ſaith, that the meaning is, after I have brought her into a wilderneſſe of trouble and miſery. But becauſe alluring goeth before this bringing, it is not probable that this bringing is meant of an act done before, but after it. Therefore I ſubſcribe rather to them that hereby underſtand it to be ſpoken in allnſion to that which was done to the children of Iſrael brought out of Egypt to goe through the wilderneſs into the land of Canaan. For with this Meſſage was Moſes ſent to Pharaoh to require him to let Gods people goe 3 dayes into the wilderneſſe.

Calvin.

The meaning then is, I will by ſetting before her the land of promiſe, heaven and happineſſe, perſwade her ſo, that ſhe ſhall not be unwilling to goe into the wilderneſſe of miſery, that ſhe may finally attain everlaſting felicity. For even then his ſpeaking is to her heart, as in the next words. And whereas it is added v 15. the valley of Achor, a dore of hope, the ſame is further expreſſed, as hath been before ſhewed. As the children of Iſrael coming thither had much trouble by reaſon of Achan, who gave the name to the place, but preſently after began great comfort at the ſubduing of Ai, ſo they that are troubled for their ſins, enter by Ai, as it were, into their reſt for ever, as by a dore into a ſpatious and pleaſant place. Calvin in expounding this goeth from all others, by Achor underſtanding the plain and fruitfull place called Achor, giving this for the ſenſe, bringing her into a part of the fruitfull land promiſed; whereby ſhe ſhould have hope of a full poſſeſſion ſhortly after. For thus the Lord begins to fulfill indeed what he ſpeaks to the heart, reſtoring the wine of ſpirituall joy to the faithfull, which before they could not have, but were deprived of for their ſins, according to the former words, I will reſtore to her, her vineyards, and becauſe another comfort lyeth in fruitfull places abounding with cattell, he ſpeaks of the valley of Achor, which is deſcribed by cattell lying there, Eſay 65. 10. which maketh much for this expoſition, and therefore according to it I conclude, that it is meant ſhe ſhould have vineyards, and fruitfull paſtures, ſpirituall joyes and riches: and ſhe ſhall ſing there as in the day when ſhe came up out of the land of Egypt: that is, the Egyptians being drowned in the red Sea, Exod. 15. for ſo the faithfull in bearing the Goſpel were full of joy, Act. 2. Act. 4. Act. 8. and to expreſſe this joy we are bidden to ſing Pſalms and hymns.

Eph.5.19.

Touching *v.*18. I will make a covenant, Calvin underſtands it literally, as for ſin all creatures are ready armed againſt man, as againſt the Egyptians, Aſſyrians, and the children of Bethel, and it is threatned Deut. 28. ſo ſin being forgiven, as it is, to the faithfull, they ſhall no more be indangered by them, but God in his providence will take care over his, that they ſhall be ſafe from them. For thoſe that are not thus protected, ſee in what dangers they are every where, Amos 3.19. And all this he applyeth ſo to the Jewes returning out of Babylon, that he extends it to the faithfull under the Goſpel alſo. But becauſe after beaſts he ſpeaketh of the bow and the ſword, which ſhould ceaſe; I rather think with Lyra, that men, enemies to the Goſpel, are to be underſtood, either when God over-ruled them, to ceaſe from perſecuting, or converted them, as Conſtantine.

V. 19. And I will betroth thee to my ſelf in judgment and juſtice: that is, in judgment being on thy ſide and againſt thine enemies; and in juſtice, juſtifying thee by faith from thy ſins; for which faithfulneſſe is alſo expreſſed v. 20. in loving kindneſſe and mercy, not for any merit of thine, but for my meer mercies ſake.

V. 21. And I will hear the heavens: this is ſpoken with a gemination for the certainty of his hearing; and the meaning is, whereas the heavens being full of watery clouds, deſire to empty and diſburthen themſelves by diſtilling them, ſo I will hear and grant this their deſire; and whereas the earth being dry, deſireth irrigation by ſhowrs from heaven, ſo the heavens by raining ſhall hear this her deſire; and whereas the corn deſires to grow plentifully, and ſo doth the Vine and Olive tree to bear fruit, the earth being watered from heaven ſhall hear them, ſo that they ſhall abound in fruitfulneſſe, and hear Jezreel, or the faithful hitherto comforted, who are the ſeed of God. Euripides. So Euripides, cum eſt ſicca tellus imbrem amat: cum turget æther imbre, cum cœlum tumet: affectat ut in telluris ſinus cadat. So Ariſtotle citeth him Ethic. l. 8. c. 1. The meaning of the Prophet, is not only that the faithfull be bleſſed with all manner of increaſe of heaven and earth, but with riches of grace. V. 22. And I will ſow her in the earth, that is, the Church ſet forth by the name of Jezreel, Gods ſeed, all over the world by my ſowers the preachers of the Goſpel, as Mat. 13.

Note. From all which we may gather, that God is not reconciled or in a way of mercy, when in any kingdome men rage like wild beaſts one againſt another, and waſt and deſtroy one another in war, and the weather is unſeaſonable and the fruits of the earth ſcarce. For when a people profeſſing his faith executeth his judgments and righteouſneſſe, faith given is duly kept and mercy and loving kindneſſe is exerciſed, they are as a wife betrothed to the Lord, and all manner of bleſſings ſhall certainly follow, otherwiſe God will not be as Iſhi but as Baal unto them to their ruine.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. G*O yet, Love a woman beloved of her friend:* Here the conſtant love of God towards the Jews in particular is further ſet forth, who ſo ungratefully rejected him coming amongſt them, and were therefore by him judged, and remain under his judgments to this day, a ſcattered and deſpiſed people in all countries and nations. For to ſignifie this Hoſea is bidden to go love a woman beloved of her friend. This woman being the Jewiſh Synagogue, her friend the Lord, who had alwayes ſhewed ſingular love unto her, and although for her crucifying of Chriſt his dear Son, he dealeth long ſo ſeverely with her, yet as an Hoſea, that is, a Saviour; he loveth her ſtill, and will in the laſt dayes ſhew it when they ſhall be converted unto him, as in the laſt words of this chapter.

Theoph. Theodoret. R. Solom. Calvin. Some expound it of the Jews returning after many dayes out of the Babyloniſh captivity, but Jerom and Lyra, as hath been ſaid. And againſt the other make divers things here ſpoken of: that he ſaith they ſhould be without a king, and a Prince, whereas the Jewes in that time were not, for Jehoiakin lived many years after, and was advanced by Evilmerodach the K. of Babylon: and from him came Salathiel their Prince, and Zerubbabel, although none of them acted as King or Prince till their return.

2. After this long ſpace of time they have David their King, which could not be Zerubbabel, for neither was he a King, nor ever thus called.

3. It is ſaid that this ſhould be in the laſt dayes, whereby the time of the Goſpel is alwayes ſet forth, all the time before being called old, as *Heb.*1.12. but theſe noviſſima tempora, becauſe all things are now new, yea, and at the latter end of them the Jews ſhall be new creatures, as all be that are in Chriſt, and then the world ſhall be deſtroyed and God will make a new heaven and a new earth. 2 Cor. 5.17.

To leave that expoſition then to the Authors of it, amongſt whom Calvin ingenuouſly confeſſeth, that by David ſpoken of in the Prophets, Chriſt is alwayes ſet forth, and therefore this long time of the Jews being without a King, &c. muſt be underſtood of the time immediatly going before their imbracing of the faith of Chriſt, and therefore not of the time of their captivity: for then they had not David for their King, neither can it be underſtood of the time immediately going before Chriſts coming and after their return, for then they had Princes and Prieſts and Sacrifices. And what remaineth then, but to underſtand it of the time that now is, at the end whereof the Jews ſhall turne to Chriſt? and herein Gualter and Toſſarius alſo follow Jerom.

But to come to the words in particular, Love a woman beloved of her friend, or neighbour, for רעה ſignifieth either. This is commonly underſtood of another woman beſides her, whom he was firſt bidden to take to wife, ch.1. But ſome rather think the ſame Gomer to be meant, who after that Hoſeah had marryed her had other Lovers, that is, Gods, with whom ſhe committed ſpiritual adultery. Toſſarius. But he muſt love her ſtill, to ſhew, that although the Church of the Jews were adulterous, yet God ſtill loved her, and at length will manifeſt it, albeit in the mean ſeaſon ſhe be in miſery. For if by a woman beloved of her friend, that is, her husband; as ſome ſay, another woman a wife to ſome other man were meant; Hoſea were bidden to do a thing unlawfull: or if one never marryed before, the ſimilitude would not hold, for Judah ſet forth by her was marryed to the Lord, and in covenant with him; but becauſe ſhe had joined her ſelfe to other Lovers, ſhe ſhould be ſhut up, as it were, a long time, but by the Lord beloved ſtill, that is, a remnant of them, howſoever many years firſt paſſed, before that any ſuch love of his appeared towards her, and according to this the Apoſtle ſaith, they are enemies in reſpect of the Goſpel, but beloved for the fathers ſake. Rom.11.28. And to make it yet further appear, that the woman here ſpoken of was a marryed woman; it is added, yet an adultereſſe; and the Church of the Jews long was ago by the Lord marryed to himſelf, for he ſaith further, according to the love of the Lord towards the children of Iſrael, that look to other Gods and love flaggons of wine, for the Lord loved that Church formerly and married her, and ſtill, although it appeareth not, he loveth her ſecretly, purpoſing one day to ſhew it.

The meaning then is, Love the woman whom before thou tookeſt, although an adultereſſe, for ſo the Lord loveth Judah, although looking to other Gods as friends and worthy of her love; and thus thou ſhalt ſet forth the Lords love towards her, and that, which in love he will doe for her in the end.

But what is it that he addeth, and love flaggons of wine? ſome think drunkenneſſe, for with this ſin the Jews are often charged, Eſay 5. Eſay 28. &c. and not with Idolatry only, which alſo ſeemeth to me moſt genuine, becauſe Idolatry went not alone, but together with it all manner of exceſſe of riot, free drinking of wine and venery, which wrought much upon vain and luxurious perſons to make them turn Idolaters, as Numb.25. the Hebrews were tempted by the Midianitiſh women and idolatrous feaſts to their Idolatry. And of their cuſtome in ſuch ſuperſtitions, Belſhazzar and his Princes may be an example in the night that Babylon was taken, they being all drunken and their concubines with them; Dan.5. yet ſome going to the word here uſed אשישׁ ſignifying fundamentum, underſtand old leaves being rotten, that fall to the bottom of the vine, being good for nothing; and hereby the vanities of Idolatry: but it is beſt to retain the proper ſenſe, ſee ch.4.11.

V. 2. So I bought her to me for 15 pieces of ſilver and for an omer of barley, and halfe an omer: Hereby it ſhould ſeem that the woman by him formerly taken, was not meant, for he needed not to buy her, ſeeing ſhe was his wife before. But this is eaſily anſwered, ſhe was gone from him and followed other lovers; therefore ſhe being not willing otherwiſe to return unto him, he bought her as if he had never had her before. But it was a poor price that he gave 15 ſhekels of ſilver and an omer of barley; Exod.21.32. ſith that in caſe an Oxe goare a maid ſervant, the owner muſt pay 30 ſhekels; hereby then is intimated, that this woman was now in a baſe and poor condition, for ſhe ſetteth forth Judah ſpoiled by the Caldees, and made ſlaves and captives, and ſo bought and ſold for little. The word argenteus here uſed, ſignifieth denarius, a penny, which was the ſame Junius. with drachma, a piece of $7^{d}.^{ob}$. Junius for pieces of ſilver, hath ſhekels of ſilver, giving this for a rule, that when pieces of ſilver are ſpoken of, ſhekels are meant, and ſhekels of the Sanctuary. But as hath been by me already ſhewed upon Acts 19. it is a piece of no more then $7^{d}.^{ob}$. a ſhekel common 15^{d}. the ſhekel of the Sanctuary twice ſo much: and when ſhekels are meant they are commonly named. For an omer and half of barly, Hebr. it is, omer, and לתך rendred by Calvin, half a corus, and ſo in Vulg.Lat. a core and half, by Junius an homer and half, and how much an omer is, ſee Exod. 16. 36. the tenth part of an ephah, anſwering to our buſhell, or ſomewhat more, as I have there ſhewed. Lyra and Toſſarius following Jerom, and for an homer reading corus and half, and determining corus to be 30 meaſures, hereby underſtand 30 dayes, unto which 15 being added, as being the halfe core, together they make 45. and the 15. pieces of ſilver ſpoken of before, 15 dayes; ſaying, that hereby is ſet forth the coming of the children of Iſrael out of Egypt the 15 day of the firſt month, and their coming to Mount Sinai 45 dayes after, that is, the firſt of the third month, Exod.19. But this Calvin rejects as childiſh, and no better is another deviſed by Lyra, viz. by 15 ſhekels or pieces of ſilver underſtanding 15 Prophets, 3 greater and the 12 ſmaller, for Daniel is by Jerom put amongſt the Hagiographa; and by 45 meaſures, 45 generations reckoned up Mat. 1. to 42, unto which 3 Kings there omitted being added betwixt Joram and Uzziah, the number of 45 is made up.

Ribera. But what do I trifling out the time in recounting theſe, when as Ribera Calvin. himſelf rejects them and cloſeth with Calvin, though covertly pretending it to be his own? and this is Calvins, Hereby is nothing elſe meant, but that Judah by this woman ſet forth, was now poor and baſe, yet injoying in this poor eſtate ſome fruit of Gods love although but a little, having ſome money ſtill, and ſome courſe means of living, an homer and halfe of barley meal, one of the ſmalleſt meaſures and the courſeſt grains fed upon only by poor folks in Gualter. time of ſcarcity. And Gualter following the ſame noteth, that God giveth the Jews mony and provideth for them ſo, whereſoever they be even at this day, and howſoever oppreſſed, that they have wherewithall to live, and ſometime grow rich to the admiration of all men. And herein do I reſt alſo, only I conceive further, that in the number of 15 and one and an half, ſome further myſtery lyeth touching the time in which to keep her in this poor manner this is given, whileſt the time cometh of her converſion, and ſo 15 pieces may happily ſet forth 1500 years ſince her rejection, Jeruſalem being deſtroyed, and one omer and an half 150 years, at the end of which time being here called many days ſhe ſhal have the veil taken from before her eies according to 2 Cor. 3. and ſo ſee Chriſt to be the true Meſſiah, whom they yet hate and perſecute. And if ſo, their time will be about anno 1720. but herein I make bold only to ſpend my conjecture.

V. 3. And I ſaid, thou ſhalt abide for me many dayes, &c. The Lord hereby ſhewed, that he would not immediately take this his wife again, but in this poor condition ſhe ſhould remain a long time, till it ſhould be his pleaſure to take her, which he would certainly do at the laſt, for which he ſaith, I will be to thee, but Act.28.28. in the mean ſeaſon ſhe muſt not commit adultery any more with other gods, as ſhe had formerly done. So that he meaneth this ſhould be for her caſtigation in reſpect of ſins paſt, and ſpecially the great ſin of refuſing the Goſpel

fred unto her. And to expreſſe her miſery further in this long time he ith, ſhe ſhal continue many days without a King, a Prince, a Sacrifice, an Ephod, & a raphim; whereby he intimateth, that for a people that have uſed to live under ing, to be without, is a great miſerie, that we may acknowledge the benefit Monarchy and aſpire again after it, when we want it. According to this propheſie the children of Iſrael have been without a King or Prince of their wn ever ſince the deſtruction of their City, and without Sacrifice, becauſe o ſacrificing might be but at Jeruſalem, in the place by God appointed, from which they live ſtill exiles. The Ephod, without which it is alſo ſaid that they ſhould be, was the high Prieſts garment glorioully made and ſet with precious ſtones, whereby he gave anſwers. And therefore when Abiathar fled from aul to David; he carryed with him the Ephod, 1 *Sam.*23.6. and hereby David being in Keilah, inquired of the Lord, *v.*9. And it is ſhewed that as they ſhould be without divine worſhip, or inſtruction all this long time, ſo they ſhould not live in their old ſuperſtition by Idolatry, as indeed they do not, whereſoever they be diſperſed at this day. V. 4. Exod.28.6.

But what meaneth he in ſaying, they ſhould not only be without an image but a teraphim alſo? There were two ſorts of Images, the one called מ עבה a Statue, being the ſimilitude of any ſuch creatures as the heathen worſhipped, of beaſts and fowls and creeping things, as *Rom.*1.23. the other Teraphim, being the ſimilitude of a man, for it is ſaid of Michol Davids wife, that ſhe laid an Image in his bed, ſhewing it to them that came to kill him, whereby they were deceived; which is Hebr. called Teraphim, and *Gen.*31.19. where the tranſlation hath Images, Hebr. it is Teraphim, and *Judg.*17.4, 5. it is ſaid, that Michah had graven and molten Images, which are alſo called Teraphim: of this R. David Kimhi ſaith, that it was an Image whereby they ſaw things to come, the Devil giving anſwers thereby: ſo likewiſe Lyra, Vatablus, Clarius, and Iſidor. but this is doubted of by Calvin, who makes no more of Teraphim but Images in common. But of this, ſee more in my Expoſition upon *Judg.*17.5. 1 Sam.19.13. R.DavidKimhi.

Afterwards the children of Iſrael ſhall return and ſeek the Lord, and David their King: and this he ſaith ſhal be in the latter dayes, Hebr. in the end of dayes, that is, when the World is now near unto an end. By David Chriſt being underſtood, as hath been before ſaid, of the ſame phraſe ſetting forth the time of the Goſpel, ſee Eſay 2.2. of David in this ſenſe, *Jer.*30.9. *Ezek.*34.23. V. 5.

In that the Lord is ſaid conſtantly to love Judah, the children of Iſrael even in the midſt of her grievous ſufferings, here is comfort for the faithful, even when the Lord ſeemeth to be moſt offended with them by their lying long in miſerie, as they did in the Primitive Church, he loveth them ſtill, and this he will one day ſhew; yea, although by their ſins they have brought this miſerie upon themſelves. For all that be of the election ſhall riſe again by repentance, and ſeek the Lord, and whoſo ſeeks ſhall find, *Mat.*7.7. Note.

CHAP. IV.

H*Ear the word of the Lord ye children of Iſrael.* The Prophet having hitherto taught by ſigns, now addreſſeth himſelf further to the ten tribes, to whom he was ſpecially ſent by words of commination for their ſins, as an Herald denouncing war againſt them, yet Judah is not excluded, but ſpoken to alſo by the name of her mother, *v.*5. for this was Jeruſalem: and *v.*15. in threatning them, 1. he inveigheth againſt their ſins touching men, and then concerning God, *v.*6. thus Lyra. But the Prophet putteth all their ſins together, *v.*1. yea, and the want of the knowledge of God alſo, we may rather diſtinguiſh thus: V. 1. Lyra.

1. He mentioneth their ſins in generall, no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God.

2. The ſins againſt truth and mercy in particular, ſwearing, lying, killing, ſtealing, and committing adultery; for the lyar and ſwearer, the thief and adulterer V. 2.

are without truth, the laſt dealing untruly becauſe that through adultery ſtrangers come to inherit in ſtead of their owne children. 3. The ſins againſt God immediately are more at large ſet forth, verſ. 6. to which before that hee V. 3. cometh he threatneth deſtruction to man and beaſt, fowls and fiſhes, verſ. 3.
For by the ſword and famine men being deſtroyed, other creatures that live upon the land periſh alſo for want, ſee Joel 1.18,19,20. Zephan. 1.3. But forſomuch as a ſcarcity upon the land extends not to the fiſhes, how are they brought in alſo? Anſw. That which is tranſlated Sea ſignifieth either ſea or pond, or lake, and by great droughts ponds and rivers have been dryed up, and the fiſhes have dyed. But it is to be noted, that whereas we render it with the beaſts, Heb. it is in the beaſts and fowles, and for theſe words, the fiſhes of the Sea ſhall be taken away, it is ſhall be gathered or added, it being meant, that men, who were the inhabitants of the land ſhould be puniſhed in the beaſts and fowls dying through famine, and not only ſo, but whereas they had part of their living from fiſhes, they ſhould periſh as the other, which is meant by their being added.
For Gods wrath for the ſinnes of men is not provoked againſt the beaſts and
Gen. 2. other creatures, but what is ſuffered by them is ſuffered by their owners, Gen. 9. and ſuch, as for whoſe uſe they were created, and to whom the power of them
V. 4. is given. Yet let no man ſtrive to reprove another, for thy people are as they that ſtrive with the Prieſt, that is, although this heavy judgement ſhall come and they be threatned with it, yet I know, that they will take no warning to amend their lives, ſo that all reproofe will be but vain to them, for they chide with the very Prieſt, when he reproveth them, one ſaying, Am I not old enough to know what to doe to or how to live, but thou muſt tell me and reprove me for this and that? another, Ah baſe fellow, I am a better man then thou, how Note. dareſt thou then thus boldly to controule me in my wayes? I will not be reproved by thee, as the Sodomites ſtormed at Lot, when he reproved them. They with whom it is thus are incorrigible and near to deſtruction, and who ſo laboureth to keep it away from them laboureth but in vain; ſee the like Eſa. 1.5. and here verſ. 14.
V. 5. Therefore they ſhall fall in the day, and the Prophet in the night, and I will deſtroy thy mother. Heb. that day, that is, at the time ſet for the executing of theſe judgements, and the falſe Prophet in the darkneſſe, wherein he hath led thee, meant Calvin. by night. Calvin, the day is ſpoken of to ſhew the ſudden and open carrying away of the Iſraelites into captivity, and the night for falſe Prophets, to ſhew that they ſhould ſuffer likewiſe immediately after them, as the night followeth immediately after the day. But it is ſaid, the Prophet with them in the night; ſo that it cannot be meant of one falling preſently after another. And therefore in the vulg. Latine the word night is diſtinguiſht from the former words thus, thou ſhalt fall in the day and the Prophet with thee, and in the night I will make thy Hieron. mother ſilent, expounded by Jerome of the Synagogue or Jewiſh Church, as alſo Calvin expounds it, and noteth it to be thus ſaid, becauſe they gloryed ſo much in the Church, the children whereof they were, and therefore thought that no ſuch judgements as were threatned, could poſſibly come upon them.
But he ſaith that even this Church ſhould be put to ſilence and not be able to bragge ſo any more, when the night of her calamities ſhould come. The reaſon of the difference is becauſe ו ſignifying and, is joined with ודמתי and of this word properly ſignifying to be ſilent, cometh another in Niphal ſignifying to cut off. But the vulgar may well be juſtified and ſtil retained, becauſe ו is many times redundant, and there is no need here to goe to any other ſignification, but to make ſilent. For the underſtanding of the Synagogue by her Lyra. mother, ſee before chap. 2.2. and Lyra more reſtrainedly will have Jeruſalem meant, which according to the letter was taken in the night when the Caldees brake in.

V. 6. Having thus inveighed againſt their ſins by two, 1. Generally, truth and mercy and knowledge of God wanting. 2. Sins of men againſt men, now thirdly, he cometh to ſins againſt God. 1. Saying, my people are deſtroyed for want of knowledge, that is of the knowledge of God and of his Laws, and herein the Prieſts were guilty as well as the people, becauſe thou haſt rejected knowledge I will reject thee, that thou ſhalt be no Prieſt unto me. As there were two ſorts of Prophets, ſo there were two of Prieſts, the good, with whom they are ſaid to contend, and the wicked, who together with the people perſecuted the Prophets, yea were ringleaders to them, as we read that Paſhur was againſt Jeremiah, *Jer.*26. And theſe are ſaid to have rejected knowledge, becauſe the knowledge given them by the Prophets of Gods judgements to come for ſin, that there might have beene a reformation, they deſpiſed, and ſet light by, continuing as void of all knowledge that might have done them good, as if they had heard nothing thereof. And by their means the people ſlighted them alſo, and waxed bold notwithſtanding to ſin, thus increaſing their ſins. For he taxeth the Prieſts ſo, as that he inveigheth againſt the people alſo, as being moſt ignorant. But how ſaith he, thou ſhalt be no Prieſt unto me, when as they in the Iſrael were already no Prieſts of God, but of idols? Anſw. They went yet under the name of Gods Prieſts, but the time ſhould come that they ſhould go ſo no more, but be accounted of no otherwiſe then the common people, as followeth, verſ.9.

As they were increaſed, ſo they ſinned againſt me. This was ſpoken of them in reſpect of their great proſperity in the time of the ſecond Jeroboam, when they increaſed in children and wealth, but for this waxed the bolder to ſinne, as thinking that God liked well enough of their doings, as is objected to the wicked, Pſal. 50. therefore I will turn their glory into ſhame, that is, bringing them downe from ſo great proſperity to a poore and baſe eſtate, of which they ſhould be much aſhamed, as now they gloryed and thought highly of themſelves for their proſperity.

V. 8. They eat up the ſin of my people and ſet their heart upon their iniquity, Heb. at their iniquities they will liſt up his ſoul. Here again he turnes to the wicked Prieſts, who incouraged the people in their ſinfull wayes as long as they brought in Sacrifices good ſtore from time to time, whereupon they and their families lived. Note. For they that receive gifts, or duties from the people, as Mediatours betwixt God and the people, doing nothing, whereby the people may be reformed by repenting them for their ſins, and ſhewing the danger, wherein they are therefore, (as the end of bringing ſacrifices to be killed and burnt in the fire was to demonſtrate unto them, that they were in the way of deſtruction and then burning in hell, if they repented not: for which cauſe the bringer laid his hand upon the beaſt) but rather contrariwiſe promiſing them mercy, becauſe they duly brought ſuch ſacrifices, did in effect eat up the ſins of the people, becauſe they ate that, whereupon they did bear themſelves going on in ſin. For the next words, they are alſo thus rendred in vulgar Latine, the meaning being, that in doing as hath been ſaid, the Prieſts were an occaſion of the peoples lifting up their heads with comfort and hope, notwithſtanding all the abominations, wherein they perſiſted. Calvin. Calvin, who alſo renders them according to the Hebrew, hath not onely this expoſition in referring them to the people, but becauſe the number is changed, for having ſaid, they will eat up their ſins, and at their iniquities, it is added, and they will liſt up his ſoule, giveth another referring it to the Prieſts own ſoule, which by reaſon of the gain, that cometh in by the ſins of the people, there being many ſacrifices brought have much worldly joy and comfort, expreſſed by this, they will liſt up his head. But I reſt in the former, as taking the change of the number to make plainly for it, becauſe the word people is of the ſingular number, unto which therefore the word his being a ſingular, fitly anſwereth.

V. 10. They ſhall eat and not be ſatisfied, commit whoredome and not increaſe, A puniſhment ſutable to their ſinne in eating up the ſinnes of the people, as if hee had ſaid, Of this their greedineſſe of worldly gain, no good ſhall come unto them, for they may eat now, and fill themſelves, and as men that pamper their bodies, nouriſh fleſhly luſts, and follow them by whoring, as Elies ſons ſometimes did, but the time ſhall come, when of all their ſtore raked together they ſhall not have wherewithall to ſatisfie their hunger, and their ſpurious ſhall be cut off, they being left famiſhed and childleſſe. Thus God puniſheth ſin in the kind, worldly goods by ſinfull means, and a numerous poſterity in a ſhort time coming to nothing.

V. 11. Whoredome and wine, and new wine take away the heart. Of flaggons of wine, ſee before chap. 3. 1. Now he chargeth them againe with the ſame, and whoredoms alſo, which commonly follow upon ſurfeiting and drunkenneſſe. For it is a true ſaying, Sine Cerere & Baccho friget Venus, and again, Venus in vinis, ignis in igne furit. And when the wine is in, the wit is out, which is meant by ſaying, take away their heart. For if there were an heart to underſtanding, they would never have been for idols, which are but ſtocks and ſtones, as followeth, verſ. 12. Or becauſe whoredom is put firſt here, and then wine, ſpirituall whoredom may be underſtood, in committing which there was alwayes great execeſſe of riot, and for this make the words of verſ. 12. The ſpirit of whoredomes hath cauſed them to erre, and they have gone a whoreing from their God. But what meaneth hee by ſaying, they ask counſell of ſtocks, and their ſtaffe declareth unto them? There was a way of foretelling things to come amongſt heathen idolaters by a ſtaffe or arrow, as we may alſo gather, Ezek. 21. 21. where the King of Babylon is ſaid to ſtand in bivio, to uſe divination, and that he made his arrows bright and conſulted with images, which kinde was by the Greeks called Rabdomantria, a prophecying by the ſtaffe.

V. 12.

Calvin.

Calvin thinkes that it is alluded to a blind man, that goeth by a ſtaffe, for they being blinded as it were by errour, and ſpirituall drunkenneſſe, did as if a blinde man ſhould ask counſell of his ſtaffe, which is without all ſenſe. For as this were extream folly in him to doe, ſo was it for them to conſult with ſtocks, that is, idols, which had no more ſenſe then a ſtaffe. But becauſe it is ſaid, their ſtaffe declareth unto them, or ſheweth, it is better to underſtand it with Foſſarius, as meant of a blinde man, who by his ſtaffe feels and findes out the way to goe in.

Foſſar. paraph.

Yet I doubt not but as Jerome hath it, the Prophet herein alludeth unto one of the wayes of Propheſying of foretelling of things to come excogitated by heathens, called as was ſaid before Rabdomanteia, of which and the reſt Celius Rhodiginus writeth, lib. 7. antiqu. Lectionum cap. 29. and Gualter here reckoneth up Pyromanteia, Hydromanteia, Necromanteia, Geomanteia, Alphitomaſeinteia, Coſſinomanteia, &c.

V. 13. They ſacrifice upon the tops of mountains under oakes, poplars and elmes. Of high places, wherein they ſacrificed contrary to Gods command wee read often before, and of oakes, Eſai. 1. 19. and of groves having in them all manner of trees often. Here becauſe they committed ſpirituall whoredome, it is threatned that their daughters ſhould commit whoredome, the like ſinne being puniſhed with the like, as in perſons for idolatry given over to a reprobate ſenſe. Of ſome of theſe and other trees dedicated to idols Virgil ſaith thus, Populus Alcidæ gratiſſima, vitis Iaccho, Formoſæ myrtus Veneri, ſua laurea Phœbo.

Virg. Eclog. 7.

V. 14. I will not puniſh your daughters when they commit whoredome. Thus here, but in the end of the verſe, he ſaith, the people that doe not underſtand ſhall fall: the ſenſe being that they ſhould be left to the ſwing of their own filthy luſts, living notwithſtanding for a time in proſperity, but in the end by one ſudden fall they ſhould come into utter deſtruction. Much like unto this is that which is ſaid Pſal. 49. Pſal. 37. Job 21. For ſometimes it is no favour to be ſpared when a man or woman ſinneth groſſely, but rather a ſigne of Gods wrath, and that he meaneth ſuddenly quite to deſtroy them: contrariwiſe it is a ſigne of favour to be chaſtiſed for ſin, Heb. 12. 9. Pſal. 119. according to which Jerome ſaith well, He that is loved is corrected, but he that is neglected is diſmiſſed, or let goe unpuniſhed.

V. 15. Goe not up to Gilgal nor to Bethaven. Here he ſpeakes to the kingdom of Judah, wherein the Temple was, and worſhip and ſervice of the true God, eſpecially in the times of Uzziah, Jotham and Hezekiah, to confirm her againſt idolatry, unto which the kingdome of the ten Tribes had moſt foully degenerated under the firſt Jeroboam, and continued as long as it was a kingdome, wherefore he ſpeaketh of Iſrael, as deſperately ſet upon this groſſe ſin, and warneth Judah againſt it, and not to be drawn by his example, whereby hee intimateth, that evill examples are of great force to corrupt us, that we may take heed of them.

Joſh. 5.

Touching Gilgal it was a moſt famous place for the circumciſion of the children of Iſrael the ſecond time, and the angels appearing to Joſhua, and the Arkes being ſometimes there, and thither Saul went to have the kingdome confirmed unto him. But why might not Judah goe to Gilgal? Sol. For the famouſneſſe of the place much idolatry was there committed, as we may ſee chap. 9.15. All their wickedneſſe is in Gilgal, and chap. 12. 11. they ſacrifice bullocks in Gilgal, their Altars are as heaps in the field. For it was the manner of idolaters to purchaſe the more credit to their idols to ſet them up in places of greateſt note for holineſſe, and therefore it ſeemeth, that Gilgal was thus abuſed, although not ſpoken of in the time of the firſt Jeroboam, but Bethel and Dan only, where he placed his golden Calves.

Junius.

Junius ſaith, that they are forbidden to goe to Gilgal, becauſe it was a town bordering upon the kingdome of the ten Tribes, to ſhew that there is danger of being infected by idolaters to come and converſe near to idolatry. For in deſcribing the land of Judah he ſaith, that towards the north it looked to Gilgal, Joſh. 15.7. ſo that it was not in Judah, as Jerome ſaith it was, upon 1 Sam. 11. but very near unto it. But that was not the reaſon alone, why Gilgal was now forbidden to be gone unto, becauſe there might be danger in converſing with idolaters, as they that dwell near one another often doe, but becauſe Gilgal was moſt notorious for idolatries for all ſorts. Touching Bethel, that was moſt noted for the idolatry with the golden calfe, and becauſe it began firſt there, Dan is paſſed over in ſilence, and becauſe more remote, ſo that they ſhould not need to be warned againſt going thither. But the Prophet nameth not Bethel here, but Bethaven, the houſe of iniquity, as it ſignifieth, becauſe it was turned ſuch by Jeroboams ſetting up of an idol there. There was a place alſo properly called Bethaven, Joſh. 18. 12. not far from Bethel: but of Bethel it is ſaid, verſ. 13. that it was formerly called Luz. There were two places of this name Bethel. 1. In the tribe of Benjamin, and the other of Ephraim, as may be gathered Joſh. 16. where Bethel is placed in the lot of the children of Joſeph, and yet that lot is bordered upon Luz, by which name Bethel was firſt called, but by Jacob, when God had appeared there unto him, Bethel, the houſe of God.

Lyra.
Gen. 28.

Of Bethel taken by the children of Joſeph, ſee alſo Judg. 1.22. And of this Bethel pertaining to Ephraim, the chief Tribe that came of Joſeph, and the head of the ten Tribes it is ſpoken in this place, under the name of Bethaven, as appeareth further, chap. 10. 5. But what meaneth he by ſaying further, neither ſhall ye ſwear, The Lord liveth, becauſe it is ſaid, Jer. 4.2. thou ſhalt ſwear, the Lord liveth, ſee alſo Deut. 6.13. 10.20. Anſw. The idolaters at Gilgal and Bethel, did not only ſwear by the Lord, but by idols alſo, giving to a dumb idol the title of Jehovah, as we may ſee Exod. 32. where a golden calfe being ſet up for a God it is ſaid of the feaſt kept thereunto, that it was a feaſt of Jehovah. Thus to ſweare was horrible impiety, and therefore Judah is forbidden it, or to ſweare by the Lord and by idols alſo.

Note.

For ſwearing is a part of Gods worſhip, and who ſo worſhippeth idols cannot worſhip him alſo, if he doth, it is abomination.

Col. 3. 5.
Phil. 3. 21.

And therefore the worſhip of the Papiſts exhibited to God is an abomination, ſeeing they worſhip Images alſo and the Saints departed, and the covetous perſon, who is an idolater and the glutton and drunkard, that makes his belly his God, is abominable, hee ſinneth in offering prayers or praiſe to God, Eſai. 1. 14.

doe the next words agree to it, and they ſhall be aſhamed of their ſacrifices, but with the former excellently,when they are carryed away,as hath been ſaid, they ſhall be aſhamed to be ſeen in ſuch baſeneſſe.

CHAP. V.

V. 1. HEre the Prophet otherwiſe inveigheth againſt their ſins, the ſins of the Lyra. Prieſts, the people, the Kings, ſaying, ye have been a ſnare on Mizpeh and a net ſpread on Tabor: whereby ſome think, is meant, that this is ſpoken in regard of ſpies ſet to watch againſt mens going to Jeruſalem to worſhip. But Calvin. Calvin takes the plain meaning to be, that they acted the part of huntſmen, who ſet ſnares upon mountaines and ſpread nets for beaſts to take and deſtroy them, ſo the Princes of Iſrael by ſubtle and crafty means catcht the people, and made a prey of their eſtates. And if it be thus underſtood,they are taxed for their tyranny joined with ſubtlety, and for this threatned with judgement, in that hee ſaith, judgement is toward you; not as ſome would have it, to you it belongeth to doe juſtice, for not onely the rulers, but the whole houſe of Iſrael are ſpoken to. Now two mountaines Mizpeh and Tabor are mentioned, becauſe they were noted for height and greatneſſe. The vulgar renders Mizpeh, as an appellative,by ſpeculation, but I ſee no reaſon for that, conſidering Mizpeh is not named alone but Tabor alſo, and there is the like reaſon, that one ſhould be taken as a proper name as well as the other.
Of Mizpeh, ſee *Joſh.*11.3. of Tabor, *Judg.*4.6. Junius ſaith, that they Iunius. were places, wherein they uſed to hunt, and therefore this allegory is moſt fitly made by them, from hunting Beaſts, to the laying of ſnares either for oppreſſion or ſeduction to idolatry, as ſome underſtand it.

V. 2. And the revolters are profound to make ſlaughter, Heb. And the decliners or fallers away have made deep the ſlaughter, or gone profoundly to worke in killing; it anſwers to their laying ſnares and nets, verſ.1. for why doe hunters lay ſnares to take wild beaſts but to kill them, and ſo the hunters of men, and becauſe they do not this openly but covertly, here is another phraſe of diving or digging deep by wicked policy, to hide what the ungodly goe about. So Eſay 29. 15. they dig deep to hide, &c. Calvin thinks, that by ſlaughter Calvin. ſacrifice is meant, which they being wicked an offering was no more accepted of then murther, as Eſay 66.3. at their hands who declined from, and were without the truth of religion, but in deep diſſimulation made a ſhew of it: A very truth, but not ſo aptly following that *v.*1. in this ſenſe as the former, though I have been a rebuker, or correction to them all; that is, they cannot Prophets inſtructed and reproved them from time to time, ſo that they are without all excuſe.

Here they are terrified by this, that God knew of their doings, neither ſhall V.3.4. they have for their intolerable wickedneſſe any grace ſo much as to ſtudy to do better, but inevitably come to ruine, both Ephraim and Iſrael, the head and the reſt of the ten tribes. And becauſe J*udah* was alſo corrupted in the dayes V. 5. of Ahaz, he threatneth that ſhe ſhall alſo fall together. But is not the Prophet herein contrary to himſelf, *ch.*1.7. where having threatned Iſrael, he yet promiſeth J*udah* that ſhe ſhall be ſaved? Anſw. It is to be conceived that theſe Propheſies were written at divers times, then in the dayes of Uzziah and Jotham, or of Hezekiah, J*udah* was comforted, becauſe the true religion held them in J*udah*, but there came an Ahaz to reign, who corrupted all, and touching Judah in his time this is moſt probably threatned. Calvin diſtinguiſheth otherwiſe betwixt the faithfull in J*udah*, to whom that promiſe was made, and the Calvin. wicked to whom this is threatned. But if the Prophet had meant ſo, good reaſon, that the faithfull in Iſrael, of whom there were 7000. even in the worſt times, ſhould have had ſomething ſpoken to comfort them alſo. v.6. They ſhall go with their flocks and herds, to ſeek the Lord, but not find him. This is ſpoken, leſt they V. 6. ſhould think we wil uſe means to turn away the fal threatned from us, we will ſupply the Lord with abundance of Sacrifices, but this ſaith he, ſhall be in vain, as Eſay 1. 12,13. is ſhewed more at large. For the wickeds ſeeking to the Lord, and bringing him preſents is of no avail, v.7. they have begotten ſtrange children, now ſhall a month devour them with their portions, and before this, he ſaith, V. 7. they have dealt treacherouſly. Here they are accuſed of another great ſin, viz. marrying ſtrange wives, the daughters of Idolaters, by which wives they had children like them, ſo the Cald. and *Mal.*2.11. Judah hath dealt treacherouſly, and hath marryed the daughter of a ſtrange god, makes it plain, that this is the meaning.
For a months devouring them, he ſeemeth herein to point at the ſhort time of Shallums reign, who by killing Zechariah the ſon of J*eroboam*, attained to the Kingdom, but reigned only one month, neither did that wicked Zechariah before 2 King. 15. 13. him reign any longer then 6 months: J*erom* thinketh that it is meant no month ſhould paſſe but they ſhould ſuffer ſome loſſe: Gualter by a month Hieron. Gualter. underſtandeth a ſhort time. But becauſe Iſrael now flouriſhed under J*eroboam*, and his ſon was cut off by a months man, one that continued but a month after, I hold it beſt to underſtand it of him, by whom that wicked royal progeny was devoured, and their portions, or inheritances, whereupon he doubtleſſe ſeiſed, when he had killed him, as Ahab upon Naboths vineyard when J*ezabel* had wrought his death: or elſe underſtand it of Shallum and his adherents, whoſe royalty laſted but one month and then he was cut off.

Blow ye the Cornet in Gibeah and the Trumpet in Ramah; Cry aloud at Bethaven, after V. 8. thee, O Benjamin. The Prophet having threatned Iſrael, now ſpeaks to the other kingdom conſiſting of Judah and Benjamin, naming Benjamin, becauſe it lay next to the kingdom of the ten tribes, in which Bethaven was, which he biddeth howl or cry aloud, as a people, amongſt whom enemies are broken in to deſtroy them. For he ſpeaketh of the deſtruction by the Aſſyrians, as if it were now in acting: and in regard of this, he biddeth blow the trumpet in Gibeah and Ramah, (for the Vulg. Lat. hath buccinam & tubam) both ſignifying the trumpet, as the Hebr. words do: whereby he meaneth that they ſhould

Lyra.

ſound an alarum for fear, when enemies ſhould come ſo near them in the kingdom of Judah. For Gibeah and Ramah were both high and ſtrong places in the tribe of Benjamin, and therefore having mentioned them, he concludeth, ſaying, after thee (O Benjamin,) Or as it is in Vulg. Lat. in one continued ſentence, behind thy back (O Benjamin) Ephraim ſhall be deſolate, joyning to the end of this verſe the beginning of the next, and thus the ſenſe is made full, which otherwiſe is defective and imperfect. Blow the trumpet in thy high places (O Benjamin) to gather thy forces together for thy defence, for deſtruction is near unto thee, even at thy back all over Ephraim or Iſrael, for one is put often for another.

Calvin.

Whereas Calvin by Benjamin underſtands the whole family of Joſeph, as if in theſe words the kingdom of Iſrael were ſpoken to, I ſee no reaſon, why he ſhould ſo expound it, ſith that family was divided, Benjamin belonging to the kingdom of Judah, but Ephraim to the kingdom of Iſrael.

V. 10. Lyra.

The Princes of Judah are like them that remove the bound: This is by Lyra expounded of that, which they did when the ten tribes were carryed away into captivity, viz. inlarging their bounds upon the lots of theſe tribes being then left void.

Calvin.

But Calvin by bounds underſtands the bounds of the law, which through the fault of the Princes were removed, the people by their authority or evill example being carryed beyond them to all manner of ſin and tranſgreſſion, and ſo he takes it to be a metaphor, gathering hence, that Princes and Rulers, who be wicked, are a main cauſe of ſin amongſt the people under them, and conſequently of overflowing judgments, as followeth, therefore my wrath ſhall break forth againſt thee like water: And they in particular ſhall lye deepeſt under when this floud cometh. And to this I rather ſubſcribe, becauſe he ſaith not that they removed the bound, but were like them that removed it. Moreover, that they of Judah incroached upon the inheritance of the ten tribes now is but a conjecture.

Note.

We may alſo note here, what a great ſin it is making liable to Gods judgments, to remove land-marks, but of this more properly ſee upon *Deut.*27.17.

V. 11. Ribera.

Ephraim is oppreſſed and broken in judgment, becauſe he willingly walked after the commandement, Vulg. he went after baſeneſſe, ſordes, and whereas עך the word here uſed ſignifieth precept or command: Ribera anſwereth, it is true עך that cometh of ערח, but not which cometh of צלא for that is, ſordes, ſuch as idols are called, and that worthily. Wherefore the Vulg. is herein to be preferred, and then we ſhall not need to be put upon a doubt that otherwiſe ariſeth here, ſhall any be puniſhed for willingly walking after command: although it be reſolved, the commandment of Idolatrous K. Jeroboam is meant, not Gods commandment; yet it is a ſtrange ſpeech that it ſhould be ſo ſaid without adding the precept of men, as it is Eſay 29.13. if it muſt needs be ſo expounded.

But why is Ephraim ſaid in this caſe, being ſo worthy of judgment, to be oppreſſed and judged? Sol. becauſe the Aſſyrian King did not deal ſo with him, but out of tyranny and oppreſſion, although on Gods part the judgment was juſtly inflicted.

Note.

From the ſin objected, becauſe they willingly went after baſeneſſe, or filthy vanities, Note, that this aggravateth the ſins of Gods people turning Idolaters, that they do ſo willingly, and not being by any force conſtrained: yet they are not juſtified that fall to this ſin by conſtraint through fear of power. Mat. 10.28. for they are not to be feared that can kill the body only, neither did the Apoſtles fear them *Act.*4

V. 12. Lyra.

Therefore will I be to Ephraim as a moth, and to Judah as rottenneſſe, that is, ſooner deſtroying the one and after a longer time the other, as a cloth eaten with moths is ſoon marred, but it is longer before it rotteth, and ſo it came to paſſe: for the kingdome of Judah continued about 200 years after that of Iſrael or Ephraim: thus Lyra.

Calvin.

But Calvin ſaith, that both the corruptions here ſpoken of are in wood, which inſenſibly decayeth hereby in a long time, and that he meaneth, that theſe two kingdoms ſhould likewiſe decay by little and little, and not all at once, as by a floud; and this is followed by others having for rottenneſs, a little worm, that can ſcarce be ſeen, breeding in wood and decaying it, called teredo. I rather think, that in threatning to be as a moth to Ephraim, he meaneth that Ephraim ſhould come to deſtruction as a cloth, to which the moth properly belongeth, and Judah as timber brought to nothing by rottenneſſe, but one in a ſhorter, another in a longer time. And that before the deſtruction of either kingdom coming by the Aſſyrians and Babylonians, their ſtrength ſhould by other means decay, and they ſhould become kingdoms ruining and weakened by degrees by other wars, before thoſe great and laſt Warres, wherein they ſhould no longer be able to ſtand.

V. 13. 2 King. 16. 2 King. 17. Calvin. Then Ephraim ſent to King Jareb, when he ſaw his wound, &c. Both the kingdom of Iſrael and of Judah waxing feeble and being waſted, firſt one, that is Judah, ſent for the King of Aſſyria to help him, then the other ſubmitted himſelf unto him for divers years, as counting it a ſafe courſe ſo to doe; but at length he fell from him to So King of Egypt, thinking by him to be defended, but he was deſtroyed notwithſtanding; and at this the Prophet here pointeth, Ephraim went to the Aſſyrian, when Hoſea ſubmitted to Salmaneſar, and ſent to King Jareb, that is, the King of Egypt, by him to be protected againſt the Aſſyrian, when he revolted from him. Jareb ſignifieth Contender, the Vulg. Lat. hath it, ultor, and to the Egyptian Lyra applyeth it, as I have hitherto done, but Calvin to the Aſſyrian; the proper name of ſome King amongſt whom here meant was Jareb, becauſe ſaith he, not two are meant here by Aſſyrian, and Jareb, but one; and it is not unuſual to give to a King in ſtead of his proper name ſometime a name made, to ſet forth his quality, as the K. of Sheſhak, Jer. 25.26. ſo here King Jareb a contentious King, who took part ſometime with Iſrael and ſometime with Judah, thus animating them againſt the Lord in their ſinnes, to their deſtruction; and this is further confirmed to be the right, *ch.*10.7.

V. 14. I will be to Ephraim as a Lion, and to Judah as a young Lion. Here by other ſimilitudes the Lord ſheweth the deſtruction that ſhould come to Iſrael and Judah one after another with more violence, then in the time that they were weakned as by a moth, and rottenneſſe before ſpoken of; for the Lion teareth with great violence, therefore to ſhew that at the laſt they ſhould be torn in pieces as it were by a Lion, by the Aſſyrians and Babylonians, he ſaith, that he would be as a Lion to Ephraim, &c. intimating yet again, that they ſhould not both be deſtroyed at one time, but when the old Lion, the Aſſyrian, had done deſtroying Ephraim, the Babylonian, as a young Lion ſpringing up, by taking the Aſſyrian Monarchy, in proceſſe of time ſhould deſtroy Judah.

V. 15. I will goe and return to my place, till they acknowledge that they have ſinned: This is not ſpoken to ſhew, that God changeth his place ſometime by removing from one to another, but he is ſaid to goe and return when he appeareth not on his peoples ſide to revenge the cruelties exerciſed againſt them by their enemies, then he is ſaid to turn away into heaven, and ſometime in a cloud to hide himſelf, *Lam.*3.44.

CHAP. VI.

V. 1. C*Ome let us turn to the Lord, for he hath torn and he will heal us*; Becauſe he had ſaid *v.*14.*ch.*5. I will be as a Lion, now leſt the faithfull ſhould deſpaire of ever being reſtored again, ſeeing Lions tear and ſo leave ſuch as are torn and deſtroyed in that lamentable caſe, never looking back unto them any more to reſtore them to ſanity, neither can they if they would: the Lord here comforteth his by his Prophet, by promiſing if they turn that they ſhall be reſtored again. And it is to be noted, that he ſaith not Turn ye, but Let us turn, making himſelf one amongſt others, and a leader to them, that no preacher may think he acquits himſelf well when he preacheth repentance to others, 1 Tim.3.1. himſelf living in ſin, but when he joineth to his teaching his own example of holy and unblameable living.

V. 2. After two dayes he will revive us, and the third he will raiſe us up, and we ſhal live in his ſight: Here according to the common expoſition of all Ancients the Prophet paſſeth from the delivering of the Jews out of the Babyloniſh captivity, and bringing them out of their power, whom he had uſed as a Lion to tear them, to the moſt famous deliverance from the roaring Lion the Devill, and Col.2.15. deadneſſe in ſin, by Chriſt riſing again the third day and triumphing over principalities and powers. For he ſaith not in two dayes, but from two dayes מומים that is, two dayes being paſt when the third cometh, and that betimes in the morning, to ſhew which it is added, v.3. his going forth is prepared as the morning, as indeed he aroſe early in the morning at the dawning of the day. Whereas it is ſaid, he will revive, not him, but us, and we ſhall live in his ſight, it is to be underſtood, that there is ſo near a union betwixt Chriſt and the faithfull, that the things done to him being the head, are common to his body the faithfull, God reviving him reviveth us, and making him to ſtand in his ſight makes us to ſtand alſo; as it is ſaid, Chriſt riſing and ſitting at the right hand of God in heaven, he hath made us ſit together with him in heavenly places.
Calvin. And this is not at the firſt diſliked by Calvin, but by and by he cenſureth it as too argute, holding the plain meaning of the place to be nothing elſe, but that although God doth not preſently ſave and deliver his people out of miſery, in which they lye dead, as it were, yet he will certainly, and this he calleth it reviving of them after two dayes, the third day, that is, in a ſhort time to him, however to men it may ſeem long; according to which Daniel alſo ſpeaks of a time and times and half a time. Thus I grant it may alſo be generally applyed for the comfort of the faithfull in miſery, but not expunging ſo famous a propheſie touching the main article of our faith; wherefore he alſo in fine acknowledgeth this to be meant here: ſo likewiſe Gualter. Gualter, we ſhall not erre if we ſhall ſay that the Prophet herein had reſpect to the myſtery of Chriſts reſurrection, although, he alſo underſtands it as an anſwer to a doubt that might trouble the faithfull in the long continuance in their miſeries: for although deliverance cometh not the firſt or ſecond day, yet it ſhall come at the length, the third day, a time certain being put for an uncertain, dayes for years, and thoſe many, but with God as a day or two.

Gloſſ. Ord. The Ord. Gloſſ. by the firſt underſtands the firſt age of the world under the law; by the ſecond day, the time of Chriſts coming in the fleſh; the third, of his glorious coming when we ſhall be glorified with him, which is not to be diſliked: becauſe the promiſe runneth upon two times, the firſt being paſſed over when the law had dominion, that could not revive.
R. Solomon. Rab. Solomon underſtandeth by one day the day of their deliverance out of Egypt, by two, the time of their deliverance from Babylon; by the third, the time of the Meſſiah yet to come: or by one day the time of building the Temple by Solomon, by two the building thereof by Zerubbabel, by the third, that which ſhall be built at the coming of the Meſſiah. But the Meſſiah being already come, theſe are vaine ſpeculations.

V. 3. Lyra. Then ſhall we know if we goe on to know the Lord, and his going out ſhall be prepared as the morning: that is, when Chriſt is riſen and his reſurrection is preached, we ſhall know, that is, beleeve, if we follow the example of Chriſt in vertuous living and doing good: for he muſt thus follow the Lord that will know him to life eternall, as Joh. 17.3. and then the Lords going out in preaching ſhall be as the morning for light, in reſpect of true light and comfort, that ſhal come to every ſuch beleever, and he ſhall come to us as the rain, that is, in his heavenly doctrine, whereby we ſhall be refreſhed as the earth by ſhowrs of rain, and made to grow in grace as the graſſe when rain falleth, a ſimilitude uſed before, *Deut.*32.1. & *Pſal.*72.6. This is not liked by Calvin neither, for he Calvin. ſaith, ſome underſtand a more full knowledge of divine myſteries under the Goſpel then formerly: but the meaning is, that if we turn to the Lord in the darkneſſe of miſery, the light of deliverance and proſperity again is prepared pared as the morning light after a dark night, and then we ſhall know and find by experience all to be true touching healing and binding up, that he hath promiſed, and this ſhall be no leſſe refreſhing to us, then the rain to the dry and thirſty ground, making the graſſe and corn before ſearing away and dying, to waxe green again. All which is good and true, but not all the truth here ſet forth, nor the chief comfort which is in knowing God to be the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom he hath ſent. And the dew of Chriſts youth is ſaid to be from the womb of the morning, and he is ſaid to come as the rain upon the mown graſſe, *Pſal.*72 6. wherefore the Prophet goeth on in declaring the comforts of the Goſpel by the knowledge that ſhould then abound, being as a day to the nightward that went before, *Rom.*13.12. the morning whereof was the firſt going out of the light in preaching, and the rain the ſame Chriſt preached to true beleevers: for although comfort in being delivered from miſery be ſet forth by light ſometime, yet not by morning or rain, as in this place.

Pſal.110.3.

V. 5. Therefore I have hewed them by the Prophets and ſlain them by the words of my mouth, and thy judgments are as the light that goeth forth: Having comforted the faithful in Iſrael and Judah, v. 1, 2, 3. he turneth to inveighing againſt the wicked again, *v.*4. what ſhall I do to thee (O Ephraim?) your goodneſſe is like the morning dew, wicked hypocrites are ſo inconſtant in a good way, that being now brought into it they ſoon goe from it again, ſo that it maketh even the Lord himſelf to ſtudy what to do unto them. Men in whom there be good motions, but vaniſhing, are ſo deſperately evill, that they are not by any means to be dealt withall for their good, but after all pains, that may be taken with them for their converſion, they muſt needs be deſtroyed, as after their horrible ſins ripped up, it followeth, *ch.*7.13.

V. 4.

Note.

Therefore I have hewed thee by the Prophets, Hebr. I have cut off in the Prophets, the Vulg. Lat. hath it dolare, to plane, expounded by Lyra, I have dealt with thee as a Carpenter by a piece of timber that is knotty, by ſharp reproofs of the Prophets ſought to make thee more ſmooth, and fit for the ſpirituall building, and ſlain thee by the words of my mouth, that is, foretold, and threatned that thou ſhalt be ſlain for thy ſins by enemies coming againſt thee; which threatnings my Prophets have uttered as I required them, and ſo their words were the words of my mouth: thus alſo other Expoſitours generally. Only ſome, ſaith Calvin, becauſe it is ſaid, I have cut off in the Prophets, underſtand it as if he had ſaid, I have cut off ſome of your falſe Prophets; but he followeth the former, which is beſt; and ſo the next words, I have ſlain them by the words of my mouth, are an explication of the firſt, this hath been my way to ſmooth them, by ſharply threatning them with deſtruction, being hereunto forced by their intolerable wickedneſſe, although of my ſelfe I am mercifull and gracious. From hence note, that the words of God ſpoken by his Prophets are not a meer wind, as it is of words commonly ſaid, but as a ſharp cutting plane to ſmooth and frame the hearers into ſquare and equall dealing, or if they will not be thus ſmoothed, they are as a ſharp ſword to ſlay them; which all the diſobedient ſhall one day find and feel, when deſtruction cometh as hath been threatned, and there is no evaſion: and thy judgment is gone out as the light, that is, this deſtruction to come for ſin is not darkly ſet forth, ſo that men may excuſe themſelves, ſaying, we know not, neither did foreſee this great danger, but plainly and evidently as a thing ſet in the light.

V. 6. For I deſired mercy and not ſacrifice, &c. How this is to be underſtood, ſee Mat. 9.13. 12.7. in the firſt of which places it is ſaid, that when Chriſt ſate at meat amongſt Publicans, they found fault therefore with him, as being convinced hereby to favour the wicked, and conſequently to be one of their number. But againſt this he ſaith, the whole need not the Phyſitian, but the ſick; and goe and learn what this is, I will have mercy and not ſacrifice, as if he had ſaid, yee think that ye acquit your ſelves very well in doing ſacrifice, although ye goe on ſtill in your ſins: but the Lord contrarywiſe accepteth beſt of the converſion of ſinners, and of thoſe that labour in this work: but of ſuch as duly offer ſacrifice, but live ſtill in ſin he accepteth not at all, but they are an abomination to him. In the other place his Diſciples plucking the ears of corn upon the Sabbath day, and being for this cenſured, he ſaith, If yee had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy and not ſacrifice, yee would not have condemned the innocent, that is, I ſtand not ſo ſtrictly upon my ceremoniall Laws touching outward performances, but that when the neceſſity of my creatures requireth it, I would have them give way thereunto, allowing my people rather to work upon my Sabbaths then ſtarve for hunger, or to pull a beaſt out of a pit, rather then that by lying there it ſhould dye, Sacrifice being put for all externall Service required by Gods Laws. Some underſtand it as having reference to verſ. 4. Thy mercy is as a morning cloud, for ſo the word ſignifieth, and the ſame word חסד is here uſed againe, as if the Prophet had in the name of the Lord, ſaid, thou didſt ſometime ſhew mercy, but this held but a ſhort time, for which and for thy other ſinnes I hewed thee, &c. And wouldſt thou know the cauſe of this my harſh dealing with thee? I will have mercy, I delight more when mercy is conſtantly ſhewed, then when ſacrifices Calvin. are duly offered. Calvin noteth that two things are here joined together, mercy and the knowledge of God preferred before all burnt offerings, by mercy understanding kindeneſſe towards men, contrary to which is not only hardheartedneſſe towards the diſtreſſed, but alſo rigid dealing with our brethren, according to which both the writings of this place by our Lord are made: for they were againſt the Phariſees, who were rigid cenſurers of Publicans, and then of his Diſciples. By the knowledge of God hee underſtandeth not not onely the theory, but Faith to beleeve in God and in Jeſus Chriſt, ſo that theſe two together are here commended unto us, without both which all externall ſervice done to God is vaine, neither muſt theſe be disjoined in us, 1 Joh. 3. but goe together as inſeparable, ſeeing he doth not know nor love God that loveth not his brother, neither is mercy to our brethren accepted of without Joh. 17.3. the knowledge of God, which is the ſame with faith, for which it is ſaid, this Heb. 11. is life eternall to know thee, &c. as of faith, he that beleeveth hath everlaſting life, and without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. But in denying ſacrifice, as I have ſaid upon Pſal. 41. he meaneth not, that ſacrificing might be neglected at the will of men in the time thereof, but onely hee ſaith thus to drive men living in ſinne from all confidence herein, it never being the will of God, that wicked men ſhould thus ſerve him, but the mercifull and faithfull.

But they like men have tranſgreſſed the covenant, Heb. as Adam, whereupon V. 7. Lyra. Lyra following the Vulgar that alſo hath it ſo, as Adam having received a commandement againſt eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evill ſoon brake it and brought death upon himſelfe and his poſterity, ſo Iſrael and Judah being by Covenant bound from idolatry and all other foul ſinnes, begun ſoon to tranſgreſſe it, and therefore the Lord was about to ſlay them, as verſ. 5. I have ſlain them by the words of my mouth. Calvin counteth this frigid, Calvin. and therefore ſaith, that hereby is meant, as men are commonly inconſtant, how ſtrongly ſoever they binde themſelves by Covenant, and keep it not, ſo theſe peoples. But he alſo mentioneth another of ſome, yet rejecting it, viz.
they have tranſgreſſed the Covenant made with me, as if it had beene made with man, neither indeed will the words bear this ſenſe. But as the ſenſe given by him is good, as man, being oppoſed to God, who is conſtant and certain for his part in keeping Covenant, ſo is not the firſt to be miſliked, but rather to be preferred, for ſo much as it is man in the ſingular number and not men in the plurall, and the ſimilitude agreeth ſo aptly, as hath been ſaid and according to this Toſſarius in Paraph. expounds it.

Gilead is a City of them that work iniquity. Of the firſt giving the name Gilead, V. 8. ſee Gen. 31.47. an heap of ſtones there gathered by Jacobs appointment for a witneſſe betwixt him and Laban, cauſed him ſo to call the place Gilead, as Gilead ſignifieth an heap, he called it alſo Mizpeh, a watch; Gilead lay on this ſide Jordan, where the Tribe of Reuben and Gad, and halfe Tribe of Manaſſeh had their inheritance, Deut. 3.12,13, and Gilead otherwiſe called Ramath-Gilead, was

was a City belonging to the Tribe of Gad, and made a city of refuge, Joſh. 20. 8. and all the Cities of refuge were aſſigned to the Prieſts, Numb. 35. 6. and Levites. So that we may hence gather, that Gilead belonged to the ten Tribes, and was firſt famous for Levites or Prieſts, dwelling there, and the Sanctuary had there for ſuch, as having caſually killed any man, when they were unjuſtly perſued to be revenged by ſhedding their bloud. But now it ſeemeth that the Prieſts dwelling there, that ſhould moſt of all others have abhorred bloudſhed, and therefore were ſet to be protectours of the innocent, were turned horrible ſhedders of the bloud of others, which was a moſt loud crying ſin. And this is here by the Prophet taxed, as a chief cauſe of Gods wrath, that a City of ſuch note, and conſiſting of men of ſo holy an order, was thus greatly degenerated. Gualter ſaith, that the Prieſts here inveighed againſt were not lawfull Prieſts deſcended from Aaron, but ſuch as conſecrated themſelves in Jeroboams time, 1 *King.*1.13. the lawfull Prieſts being gone, ever ſince the diviſion of the kingdom in Jeroboams time, to Jeruſalem, where the true God was at the firſt ſerved, but by the kingdome of Iſrael his golden Calves. And theſe Prieſts moſt probably placed there in ſtead of them that were gone are here complained of as murtherers, becauſe out of their zeale to idolatry, to which they had dedicated themſelves, they treacherouſly ſought to bring to deſtruction ſuch as they could take going to Jeruſalem to worſhip there at feſtivall times appointed by God, by accuſing them that they might be apprehended and ſlain: And to this the words agree very well, Gilead is a City of them that work iniquity and is polluted with bloud. V. 9. And as troops of robbers wait for a man, ſo the company of Prieſts murther in the way by conſent. For polluted with bloud, Heb. is עקבה מדם a beguiler or ſupplanter about bloud, ſo called becauſe that by all the cunning meanes that they could, the Prieſts of that City ſought the bloud of the true worſhippers of God, and for theſe words murther by conſent, Heb. it is murther to Shechem or the ſhoulder, as Shechem ſignifieth. But how to make ſenſe of it ſo I cannot tell, or how a ſhoulder ſhould be drawne to ſignifie conſent. There is another ſignification of the word Mane or diluculo, betimes in the morning, and this agreeth excellently taking the bare word שכמה, as it is without ſupplying to, as they doe that render it to Shechem, or By, as they they that render it by conſent; render we it then, they murther in way early, and ſo their vigilancy to commit this bloudy ſin is ſet forth. Neither were thoſe Prieſts thus guilty of murther onely, but alſo of ſoule murther, as Lyra hath it, many by ſuch means being made for fear to fall to idolatry. Now in naming Gilead when he cometh in particular to charge the Cities of Iſrael more then any other, except Samaria, chap. 7. he intimateth that place to be the moſt notorious for wickedneſſe of all others, when as by ſetting it apart for a Sanctuary and a City of Prieſts it was expected, that leaſt wickedneſſe ſhould there have been committed. But indeed there was moſt, for which chap. 5.1. which Mizpeh is the ſame with Gilead, as appeares *Gen.*31.47. is ſo accuſed. The Vulgar renders it Gilead is a City of them that work an idol, becauſe the word און ſignifieth vanity as well as wickedneſſe, and an idol is vanity, and accordingly Jerome ſaith, that in Gilead was the firſt idol ſet up in Iſrael. But he Hieron. hath this onely from the Hebrew traditions, and not from Scripture, whereby it appeareth rather, that Ophrah in Abiezri was the place, wherein Gideon the Judge firſt of all other Judges or Kings ſet up an Ephod for an Idol, which Judg. 8. 17. was the deſtruction of his houſe. For although the people worſhipped Baal and Aſhteroth before that, yet no Judge or Ruler ever favoured idolatry before but kept the people from it in their times.

I have ſeen an horrible thing in Ephraim, Iſrael is defiled: As the wickedneſſe before ſpoken of was done in Gilead, on the one ſide of Jordan, ſo in Ephraim, the principall of the ten Tribes, and indeed in all the kingdome of Iſrael, on the other ſide there were no leſs horrible villanies committed by idolatries and murthers, neither were they hidden, but ſeen by the Lord. V. 10.

Alſo (O Judah) hee hath ſet an harveſt for thee, when I turn the captivity of my peopl V. 11.

ple: Having inveighed againſt Iſrael apart, now he doth the like againſt Iudah, continuing yet his ſpeech to Iſrael, and therefore it ſhould not be read (O Iudah) as Calvin noteth, but Iudah hath ſet an harveſt or plant for thee, for the word קציר ſignifieth either. And the meaning is beſt given by Gualter, of all others. When I am thinking to turne away the captivity of my people of the ten Tribes, labouring their converſion from ſin, that it may never come, Iudah hath ſet a plant for thee (O Iſrael) that is, a plant of idolatry, whereby thou art the more confirmed in the ſame, and hardened. And if it be rendered harveſt it cometh to the ſame. Iudah hath furthered thee towards an harveſt, which will be to thy coſt, when for thy ſins thou ſhalt bee cut downe by the Aſſyrians, wherein thou haſt been the more ſtiffe by reaſon of Iudahs aſſociating herſelfe herein with thee. For to an harveſt ſometime, and ſometime to a vintage is a time of judgement compared. Note. Hereby we may ſee how dangerous a thing it is, when one Nation or man is incouraged by another in ſin by his doing the like, eſpecially from whom it was expected, that a better example ſhould have been given, as it was from Iudah, wherein the Temple and the ſervice of God was ſetled, the end ſhall be cutting down, neither ſhall they have any power to eſcape any more then the harveſt the Sicle of the reaper.

CHAP. VII.

V. 1. WHen I would have healed Iſrael, the inquity of Ephraim was diſcovered, and the wickedneſſe of Samaria, for they commit falſhood, and the thief cometh in, and the troop of robbers ſpoileth without. Becauſe in the laſt words of chap. 6. hee had ſpoken of the turning of the captivity of his people Iſrael, that is, turning it away, that it might not come, ſhewing therein a willingneſſe ſo to doe, as it hath been expounded, now he proceedeth to a reaſon, why it could not be, viz. their obſtinate perſiſting in divers groſſe ſins, for Iſrael and Ephraim are all one, and this he meaneth by ſaying, when I would have healed Iſrael, the ſin of Ephraim, and Samaria, which was the Metropoliticall City of the kingdome, appeared ſo foul, that it was thereby hindered. Then coming to ſhew theſe ſins in particular, he chargeth them firſt with ſuch as were againſt men, verſ. 1,2. 2. With ſuch as were immediately againſt God. Againſt men was their lying, theft, robbery, and robbing in troopes, being ready to kill ſuch as they robbed, eſpecially if any reſiſtance were made. All which are moſt foul ſins, Note. and here not private perſons ſingly addicting themſelves to theſe wickedneſſes, are meant ſo much, as men armed by authority, who terrifie poor men by their power, ſending Troopers, if they cannot otherwiſe get that away from them, which they deſire, a thing that we are too much uſed to in this kingdom, and therefore may be feared to be a forerunner of deſtruction to the whole nation, which is ſo deſperately ſick of this diſeaſe, that it ſeemeth incurable, and ſo the danger unavertible.

V. 2. And they conſider not in their hearts, that I remember their wickedneſſe. Theſe horrible ſinnes they commit, but carrying things as they doe, they think all to be rightly done, becauſe by order from the higher powers, thus blindfolding mens eyes: but they cannot blind mine, their ſins, with which they are compaſſed round, are before my face in their odious colours, making them odious to me, neither can I ever forget them.

V. 3. For the ſecond, their ſins againſt God they follow, verſ. 3. They make the King glad with their wickedneſſe and the Princes with their lies, that is, their King Jeroboam, who could no ſooner by the advice of his Princes about him propound his new deviſed idolatry, Lyra. but the people were as ready to comply with him as he could deſire. And there was a lying Prophet that perſwaded 1 King. 13. by lying the Prophet, who threatned him and his Altar, to tranſgreſſe the charge given him by the Lord, not to eat in that place, by which means Gods anger was ſtirred up againſt him, and by a Lion he ſlew him, which incouraged the King in his evill wayes, as gathering from hence, that the Prophet ſent unto him was a falſe Prophet.

V. 4. They are all adulterers, as an Oven heat by the baker, who ceaſeth from raiſing after he hath kneaded the dough, till it be leavened; Heb. he will ceaſe, or give reſt to the City, from kneading the dough, Vulg. The City reſted a little from mixing the leaven, till all was leavened, Whereof the ſenſe given by Lyra is; Jeroboam, heat the oven of idolatry, as it were; for he is here compared to a Baker, and having done ſo by making idols, he ſuffered the people to be quiet for a while, not urging them to it by propounding puniſhments at the firſt, but only commending it unto them, & this took effect as leaven, all his City of Samaria, and Kingdom being thus leavened with errour, voluntarily, for as there is a compariſon made from leaven put in three pecks of meal, till all be leavened in a good ſenſe, ſo the corrupt doctrine of the Phariſees is compared to leaven. Matth. 13. But whereas hee expoundeth reſting by forbearing to puniſh, it is rather to be held, if it be applyed to the City, or Kingdome, that he drew them to the idolatry propoſed, by pretending a reſt from travelling ſo far as Jeruſalem to worſhip: yet neither I am thus ſatisfied, becauſe although the word עיר ſignifieth a City, yet here מעיר is uſed coming of עור to raiſe up, ſo that the beſt reading is, he will reſt from raiſing having ſpread the paſte; ſubaudi, with leaven till it be leavened; and thus the ſenſe will be very good, that wicked King did even as the Baker by his bread: He meant to work the people, as the Baker his bread, to the ſowreneſſe of idolatry, and for this end he laid a leaven by making golden Calves, and uſed policy by perſwading to goe to worſhip them being near, a labour of going further off being thus ſpared, but whileſt hee did thus he heat his oven into which he would bring them, that is, he provided all that he could to keepe them within the compaſſe of his Dominion, that they might not revolt to the Kingdome of Judah. And to a Baker heating an oven, he is the rather for this compared, becauſe the fire of Gods wrath was thus kindled againſt them, as verſ. 6. whereas in the beginning of the verſe he ſaith, they are all adulterers, he meaneth by ſpirituall adultery, that is, idolatry, to which they were ſtirred up being heat as with fire; they were ſo enflamed with a deſire unto it, and thus they were as an oven heat by the baker to have the leavened and ſowre diſtaſteſull bread of idolatry put into it. Gualter underſtanding corporeall adultery (as well as ſpirituall giveth this ſenſe, as a baker having heat his oven doth not preſently raiſe up his ſervants to knead and ſet in the bread, but having firſt reſted till it be all leavened; ſo the people inflamed with luſt, although not preſently, yet after a while they break out into act, being throughly corrupted.

V. 5. In the day of our King the Princes have made him ſick with bottles of wine, hee ſtretched out his hand with ſcorners. Here ſaith the ſame Gualter another great ſin is taxed in Iſrael, that upon the Kings day, moſt probably, of his inauguration the Courtyers ply him with wine, as if then for the honour of ſo happy a day both he and they muſt needs drink exceſſively, till he is even ſick; but for this abuſe he is ſo farre from diſtaſting them the more, that he ſtretcheth out his hand with them, that is, joins in this exceſſe of riot, making much of them therefore. Note. A great corruption not onely upon Kings dayes, but at all other times of rejoicing for any inferiour Magiſtrate or Officer newly come into office, or at marriages, there is no expreſſion of joy without exceſſe, and hereby ſuch wickedneſs is much the more promoted, when it is favored by the King, who indeed ought not to ſuffer ſuch rioters about him, but to bring in men grave and ſober, by whom he may be the more contained from any exorbitancy, as it is ſaid of Henry the fifth King of England, that being before his coming to the Crown very diſſolute, and a companion of diſſolute perſons, yet coming to it, upon the ſudden he was ſo changed, that hee put all his diſſolute companions from him, charging them never to come at his Court more. The vulgar Latine: The Princes began to rage from the wine, Heb. the Princes made ſicke, or began to be ſick through heat from the wine; but I rather think, that their making of the King ſick is meant, as hath

Lyra. been ſaid, although Lyra underſtands it of an ardent deſire ſtirred up in them to idolatry, as by wine the body is inflamed.

V. 7. They are alhot as an oven, they have devoured their Judges, and before this, they have made ready their heart as an oven whileſt they lye in wait, their baker ſleepeth all night, in the morning it burneth like a flaming fire. Here he further proſecuteth the ſimilitude taken from an Oven, for having before ſpoken of the baker heating his oven, now he ſheweth that being ſtirred up by the King their baker, their hearts were as ſoon heat, as he could deſire, towards his idolatry, ſo that he thenceforth ſleeping, their fervent deſire went forward to promote that curſed thing, growing from fiery hot into a flame in the morning, that is, betimes, no long delay being made. For their devouring their Judges, Lyra. this is meant of good Judges diſliking, and impugning this wickedneſſe in Iſrael, them they cut off, ſo Lyra, or rather becauſe it followeth, all their Kings have faln, there is none among them that cals upon me, this devouring is to be underſtood of their being devoured by this fire of extream heat to the ſame idolatry; for ſo all the Kings after Jeroboam certainly were, none of them ſtanding for the worſhip of the true God, but all for Jeroboams Calves, by which foul ſin the Judges of the land were devoured or ſwallowed up alſo, Kings, Judges and Princes being all alike, but the originall of all this next unto the King was in his wicked Princes, for which it is, they devoured their Judges.

V. 8. Ephraim alſo is mixed amongſt the people, hee is like a cake not turned: that is, in his idolatrous worſhip he doth not onely ſin by the golden Calves, but as other Nations, by other idolatries being joyned with them in ſuperſtitions, as a cake not turned, that is, laid upon the coales to be baked, whereby it is fouled and made black, ſo Ephraim by this foul ſinne and many more, thus Lyra. Gualter. Lyra, but Gualter better, they mixed themſelves with the Nations about by confederacies with them, which was a thing by God interdicted, and Note. by this means they came in their evill manners to be like unto them, wherewith they that would not be tainted, muſt flee ſuch conſorting with them, as is commanded, 2 Cor. 6. And to a cake upon the embers or coals not turned he is compared, becauſe ſuch a cake muſt needs be burnt on the one ſide and dough on the other, and ſo neither ſide is fit to be eaten: in like manner Ephraim being burnt with the extream heat of affection to idolatry on the one ſide, dough through a vain pretence of the true religion on Note. the other, was altogether unfit for Gods dyet, and ſo are all like unto him, that have zeal as hot as fire to an erroneous way of worſhip, how ever they pretend the truth on their ſide, for none ever were zealous carryed after error, but in an opinion that it was truth.

V. 9. Strangers have devoured his ſtrength, but he underſtandeth not gray haires are here and there upon him. Heb. hoarineſſe, canities, is ſpread upon him, whereby their refractary going on in ſin is ſet forth. Iſrael was a ſtrong Nation, but now is become weak either by confederating with heathens, or being fought againſt and waſted by them: for either way, ſaith Gualter, the ſtrength of a nation decayeth, for even confederates coming to help eat up the proviſion, and muſt have pay, whereby the Nation is weakened. But Ephraim like a ſilly man having experience of this was inſenſible of it to be moved to repentance, yea having done thus a long time hath yet no ſenſe thereof in this kind, intimated by gray hairs. And this is added yet to aggravate his ſottiſhneſſe, becauſe although men in youth want wit or conſideration to make uſe of evill occurrences tending to their ruine, yet in age they uſe to be more conſiderate. This Calvin mentioneth, but rather preferreth another of gray hairs coming by miſeries, although men have not bin long therein But for ſomuch as Iſraels afflictions were long by enemies about weakening him, I rather preferre the firſt.

V. 10. Lyra. The pride of Iſrael teſtifieth to his face, Vulgar Latine, the pride of Iſrael ſhall be brought downe before his face, expounded by Lyra, as his puniſhment following for ſins ſo pertinaciouſly perſiſted in. The Hebrew ſignifieth either anſwereth or humbleth, but becauſe no good ſenſe can be made rendering it thus, the other is better, he goeth on ſtill to aggravate his ſin, for that if he were brought to anſwer face to face, whether it were not thus, he muſt needs confeſſe that it was and yet no grace to ſeek the Lord.

V. 11. Ephraim is like to a ſilly dove, they goe to Egypt and call to Aſſyria, when they go I will ſpread my net upon them. The Dove is ſet forth, Matth. 10.16. by its innocencie, here by ſimplicitie coming into the danger of the net through want of heart or underſtanding to take heed of the fowlers net, and to her is Ephraim compared, who did flee, as it were a far off to Aſſyria or Egypt for help, not perceiving in the mean ſeaſon, that by ſo doing, in ſtead of obtaining help he came into the moſt dangerous net of all, the net of the Lord, who by the Aſſyrians was about to take and deſtroy him. Or becauſe the heart is put for confidence, he is ſaid to be a ſilly Dove without an heart, becauſe timerous and fearfull and not confiding in God, which made him flee to humane help: to Egypt, 2 King. 7 14. and before that to Aſſyria, chap. 15.19. Lyra.

V. 12. I will chaſtiſe them as the congregation hath heard; that is, ſaith Jerome, who reads it as not ſome few, but their whole congregation hath done, for there was a conſent amongſt them in ſinning, according to the hearing of the Congregation, whereunto Calvin addeth, that they made it to be heard, becauſe in their wickedneſſe through their earneſtneſſe they made a great noiſe. Yet he hath another, as was heard many times in their Congregations, although they regarded it not to take heed of thus provoking the Lord, and this I take to be the beſt. And the words before going, I will bring them downe, aptly follow upon the compariſon made, they did flye aloft, as the Dove, being conceited of their freedome from danger, having the whole heaven as it were to fly in, as they would, but they ſhould be brought downe as birds under a net lying upon the ground and no more able to fly, lying bound as it were, according to the ſignification of the next word אסרם I will binde or chaſtiſe them, for it indifferently ſignifies either. Hieron. Calvin.

V. 13. Here is ſhewed the cauſe why the Lord would be thus ſevere againſt them, they have forſaken me; for ſeeking help from men is a forſaking of the Lord, eſpecially from heathens: and they have ſpoken lies againſt me, that is, in magnifying their golden Calves, as whereby they were brought out of Egypt, as they did Exod. 32. Lyra.

V. 14. And they have not cryed unto me with their hearts, when they howled upon their beds, Heb. for they howled upon their beds; and according to this Calvin expounds it, as a reaſon whereby he proveth, that although they cryed unto him, yet their praying was but as an howling in the ſenſe of their miſery after the manner of brute beaſts, not out of penitency for their ſinnes: For none are ſo wicked, but in miſery they will pray as the heathen mariners with Jonah, and although in thoſe corrupt times religion was greatly decayed in Iſrael, and they worſhipped Idols, yet it is not to be thought but they had a form of worſhip in private, of the true God, with their lips, but not with their heart, and ſo worſhiping him thus, are by him cenſured as howling and not accepted of as praying, for true worſhippers worſhip God in ſpirit and in truth, and ſuch as honour him with their mouths, and not with their hearts, are rejected. And in ſpeaking of their beds, he ſecretly taxeth ſuch amongſt us as pray not, but in their beds halfe aſleep and halfe awake; and therefore without an heart: they aſſemble themſelves together about corn and wine, and rebell againſt me, that is, in the wave of theſe worldly things, they come together to ſeek to me by faſting haply and prayer, but generally they live in rebellion againſt me. Some, ſaith Calvin, expound it thus, hearing that there is good ſtore of corn in the market they flock thither, but againſt mee, that giveth it them, they practiſe rebellion continually: but this he cenſures as frigid, and followeth the other: either way the ſenſe is good, and according to this ſecond chap. 2. 8. he ſpake of corn, &c. given her by God, but not to him aſcribed, which ſeemes to make for this, when I ſend plenty they rejoyced together for it, but they ill requite me, by rebelling againſt

V. 15. Cyril. Though I have bound and ſtrengthened their arms, Vulg. I have inſtructed, or chaſtiſed and ſtrengthened: Whereupon Cyril: I have taught them ſo as I have not other nations, for which I expected that they ſhould have done better, adding alſo to my inſtructions ſtrength to fight againſt, and ſubdue the people of the land unto them. But, as was ſaid before, the word here uſed ſignifieth either to Calvin. inſtruct, chaſtiſe, or bind, and therefore Calvin renders it binding, expounding it of the weak eſtate, to which Iſrael was often brought, as the Hiſtory ſheweth, but in Jeroboams time made ſtrong again, as the arm being broken by ſetting and binding up, is againe ſtrengthened, and this is moſt genuine.

V. 16. They turn, but not the moſt high, they are like a deceitfull bow: this is added becauſe he had *v.*15. charged them with rebelling againſt him, leſt they ſhould ſay, they turned and called upon God, and therefore were no rebels, forſomuch as in affliction they cryed unto him: This therefore is here cenſured as no turning to God, ſith not the conſcience of their ſin but their miſerie, urged them unto it. And he ſaith, that they turned indeed unto him like a deceitful bow, wherewith when a man thinketh to ſhoot an arrow from him, it recoileth back upon him; the like phraſe ſee *Pſal.*73. 9. Hebr. for, not to me, is לא על not unto, me being underſtood: their Princes ſhall fall by the rage, or pride of their tongues, that is, becauſe they have been ſo highly conceited of their ſtrength, as to ſpeak proudly againſt all my admonitions, eſpecially bearing themſelves upon the Egyptians, but to thoſe Egyptians they ſhall become a ſcorne when they are brought ſo low.

CHAP. VIII.

V. 1. Hieron. Calvin. SET the Trumpet to thy mouth, he ſhall come as an Eagle againſt the houſe of the Lord: Here he beginneth with Judah, where the houſe of the Lord ſtood, threatned deſtruction to her by Nebuchadnezzar, who is compared to an Eagle, Ezek. 17.3,12. deſtroying Jeruſalem for Zedekiah his breaking covenant with him, as here it is ſaid, he hath tranſgreſſed my covenant, thus Jerom, and Lyra, Cyril, &c. But Calvin will have it ſpoken againſt the Kingdom of Iſrael, becauſe *v.*2. is plainly againſt Iſrael, and likewiſe the reſt of the chapter, and he thinks it ſtrange, that in one verſe of a chapter only one Kingdome ſhould be ſpoken to, and then ſuddenly another, for which reaſon he expounds it of Iſrael, ſaying, that by the houſe of the Lord, here Iſrael is meant, and not the Temple, ſeeing the Church is often as well called the Houſe of the Lord, as the Temple at Jeruſalem. But I rather hold with the current of Expoſitours, firſt becauſe Judah is likewiſe ſpoken to in one verſe, *ch.*5.10. and in the next Iſrael, and ſo forth to the end of the chapter.

2. Becauſe Nebuchadnezzar was undoubtedly the Eagle, neither is the Aſſyrian that came againſt Iſrael, any where by this name ſet forth.

3. Becauſe when Iſrael is ſpoken of, it is commonly ſet forth by the name of the Houſe of Iſrael, and no where of the Houſe of the Lord.

And Hoſeah having before ſpoken againſt Judah, and plainly ch. 5,6,7. now he muſt, to move them the more, take a trumpet and act the part of an Herald from God unto them, in denouncing warre and deſtruction, and firſt to Judah, although to be judged laſt, yet moſt briefly, as being not the Kingdom to which he was chiefly ſent.

V. 4. Then to Iſrael at large, v.2,3,4, &c. They have made Kings, but not by me; and Princes and I knew it not; of their ſilver and gold they have made Idols: They are charged here with two foul ſins. 1. Of dividing themſelves from Davids line, ſetting up Jeroboam whom other wicked Kings ſucceeded ever after. 2. With ſetting up Idols.

But how can this be verified, ſeeing a Prophet was ſent by the Lord to anoint 1 King.12.
Jeroboam to be King? Sol. God indeed for a puniſhment to Solomon, ſecretly appointed it to be ſo, but for the manner of bringing it about, this the people did of their own heads, becauſe Rehoboam by his harſh anſwer had offended them, whereas they ſhould have cleaved to the houſe of David, although they had been oppreſſed; forſomuch as God by promiſe, as they knew, had ſettled the Kingdom of Iſrael upon it for ever, 2 Sam.7. and of this line the Meſſiah an everlaſting King over Iſrael, was to come; ſo that, as Calvin notes, Calvin.
in falling from the line of David through diſcontent they fel from the Meſſiah, and ſo their ſin was moſt intolerable. And for this cauſe, when Judah returned out of captivity, Iſrael did not, although long before her carried away; and when many of the Jews received the Goſpel, none or very few of Iſrael did, they not being where it was preached. So that Kings ſometimes are for a puniſhment Note.
of their ſins by Gods juſt judgment put from their Kingdomes by their ſubjects; but this is an horrible ſin in ſuch ſubjects notwithſtanding, and the ſetting up of others in their ſtead, which God will not ſuffer, but fearfully puniſh, who will have the perſons of his anointed ſacred, as reigning by him, and therefore not to be put down, but by him again, when and as he pleaſeth and appointeth.

They ſhall ſow the wind and reap the whirlwind; that is, whatſoever they pretend V. 7. for their Idolatrous worſhip, it is but a wind, a matter of nothing, as we ſay of words; that they are but wind, and therefore nothing but wind can be expected to come hereof, even a whirlwind, which is violent and moſt boiſterous overturning all things, and to reap the whirlwind then is to reap ruine and deſtruction. As for any good which may be thought will come by their ſetting of a fair gloſſe upon ſo foul a ſin, it ſhall not be ſo much as a ſtalk coming of a mans ſowing; or if their be a ſtalk, and it buddeth or eareth, the ear ſhal have no corn in it; and if it hath any, the enemie and not the ſower ſhall devour it; in a word he meaneth that deſtruction ſhall ſuddenly come when they expect a joyfull time of harveſt: and for any good coming finally of their rebellion and falſe-worſhip, that ſhal either be a meer nullity, or fal to the lot of their cruell enemies, the Kingdome which they have with ſuch policie a long time ſupported, coming into the hands of others with all the glory and wealth thereof: whence the Papiſts of theſe times may ſee, notwithſtanding Note. their daubing to maintain a good opinion of their ſuperſtition amongſt ignorant people, that their Popes Kingdom thus upheld a long time ſhall ſuddenly goe downe, and fall into the hands of others, that abhor from ſuch wickedneſſe.

Iſrael is ſwallowed of the nations, as a veſſel wherein there is no pleaſure, that is, by V. 8. being ſubdued and captived by the Aſſyrians, amongſt whom he was accounted and uſed, as a baſe veſſell; as amongſt men ſome being choſen as veſſels of honour, others are as veſſels of diſhonour, being put to all baſe uſes: the vulg. to expreſſe this hath it; unclean veſſels, v. 9. for they are gone up to Aſſyria, V. 9. a wild Aſſe alone by himſelf, that is, being by the Aſſyrians carryed away captive, the reaſon whereof is rendred in the next words, a wild aſſe alone, that is, Ephraim Lyra.
like a wild Aſſe ran up and down to divers Countries to learn divers abominations, none being able to ſtay him from ſo doing, thus Lyra and ſome others. But Calvin better underſtands it of their ſeeking to Aſſyra for help, Gualter.
and not ſeeking to and truſting in the Lord, of which it was alſo complained before, and herein they did like unto a wilde Aſſe under no maſter: for even ſo they rejecting the law of God forbidding this unto them, like wild perſons that will doe what they liſt, run about beyond all bounds, ſet them by God, yea, and hired Lovers, wherein he ſpeaketh of that Church as of a woman, that is an harlot, and an harlot unlike to all others, becauſe they commonly take gifts, but this gave gifts to her Lovers, as is further complained, Ezek.

them, and they ſhall ſorrow a little for the burthen of the King of Princes, that is, he will gather the people of Iſrael, whereby is meant, that they although they have done thus vilely, by the power of God, ſhould for a time be kept together as a nation and not ſcattered, yet not be left without all chaſtiſement, for they ſhould be under tribute ſome time to the King of Aſhur, which is meant by their ſorrowing a little for the King of Princes, for ſo he is called for the greatneſs of his Monarchy having many Princes under it. Thus Calvin, who ſaith that others by theſe words, he will gather them, underſtand the nations, whom they hired like a baſe conditioned whore, ſo that by them brought in judgment againſt Iſrael, he ſhould be brought under and be made ſorry a little, firſt for tribute, as hath been ſaid. But Lyra is alſo for that of Calvin, only coming to ſpeak of their being ſorry a little for the King of Princes, he following the Vulg. which hath it, they ſhall reſt a little from the burthen of the King of Princes, underſtandeth hereby Iſraels being preſerved for a time from being ſubjected to the Aſſyrian King. But the word יחלו although of divers ſignifications, if it be derived from חול to be ſorry or grieved from חלה to be ſick, or from חלל to begin, yet hath no ſuch ſignification as to reſt, therefore to ſtick to the reading before going, as beſt, let it be taken for being ſorrowfull for their firſt ſuffering at this Kings hands by the burthen of tribute in the time of Hoſhea King of Iſrael, who became his ſervant living under tribute 9 years.

For the compariſon of a wild Aſſe, Job 11. and Job 39. Jer. 14.6. the ſame is alſo ſpoken of; Gualter, I will gather them being deſtroyed into heaps, and they ſhall ſhortly begin to come into this miſery, by, or from the burthen of the Aſſyrian King, which is an Expoſition not to be ſleighted, for the word may as well ſignifie begin as ſorrow, and Hebr. it is, from the burthen, and thus the ſenſe is very good, and may well be followed; yea, it ſatisfieth beſt touching the former words, I will gather them, forſomuch as it is not ſo ſenſible by gathering to underſtand gathering, or ſaving from deſtruction.

V. 11. Becauſe Ephraim hath multiplyed Altars, Altars ſhall be to him for a ſin: Here followeth the cauſe of the judgment before threatned, beſides their ſins before mentioned. They thought by ſetting up many altars to offer unto God, that they did very religiouſly: but contrariwiſe, the Lord here tels them, that he counted them for theſe the greater ſinners, and they ſhould find it to be ſo by the effects, being the more puniſhed therefore; for God appointed one only Altar to be made, and ſo to make more was a ſin, and that very great, as contrary to his expreſſe command. A thing to be noted by Papiſts, who place great holineſſe in Altars building, whereas indeed we have now none Altars, but Communion Tables, ſo that what they counted holineſſe, is turned to ſin unto them, aggravating Gods judgments againſt them.

Note.

V. 12. I have written to them the great things of my law: Here he ſheweth that they did not thus ſin becauſe they wanted means to know it, but out of their own perverſneſs; for they had Gods laws written amongſt them, as a ſtanding rule to be guided by herein, and in all parts of his ſervice. And the written word muſt be our direction in all things pertaining to his worſhip.

Note.
Eſay 8.20.

V. 13. They ſacrifice fleſh for the ſacrifices of mine offerings and eat it, or it may be rendred, they ſacrifice for the ſacrifices of my gifts, and eat fleſh, it being hereby meant, that in ſacrificing they reſpected not ſo much the duty doing, or end for which, to be lead hereby to Chriſt, the only all-ſufficient ſacrifice for our ſins, but to feaſt and make merry at ſuch times, running into all exceſſe of riot, as Gualter well expounds it. Calvin thinks, that whereas holocauſts were to be all burnt in ſacrifice, they did not ſo, but took away part to feaſt themſelves withall, as is the manner of hypocrites to doe duties, but to provide, that they may be at as little charge as may be, ſomething that ſhould goe to the Lord being ſtil ſpared for their own bellies or benefit. Jerom and Lyra following the Vulg. which hath it, they will offer ſacrifices, and ſacrifice fleſh and eat; underſtand hereby nothing elſe, but their doing of the externall duty of ſacrificing euchariſtically by peace-offerings, wherein part went to the offerer to feaſt withall; but forſomuch as they were wicked they were not herein accepted of, as is ſaid in the next words. But in this reading it is varied from the originall, and for Calvins that indeed hath a ground here, becauſe not מנחה but זבחי not meat-offerings, but burnt-offerings, of which no part went to the parties bringing them to eat, are here ſpoken of, ſo that moſt probably the wicked offerers who regarded not Gods laws, kept ſomewhat from being burnt for their own uſe out of their covetouſneſſe, and this is the ſin taxed here, they ſhall return into Egypt, this ſeemeth hard to be underſtood, for when God judged them, as he threatned, they went into Aſſyria, not into Egypt. But if we look into ch.9.3,6. we ſhall find that ſome of them went into Egypt, although the greateſt part into Aſſyria, and in Egypt they were buryed in Memphis. It is therefore to be underſtood of ſome, when Iſrael was deſtroyed by the Aſſyrians that fled into Egypt, and ever after dwelt there again, but with little comfort being but as exiles and runnagates in Egypt, and ſo in Hieron. a ſhamefull and baſe eſtate: ſo Jerom alſo.

V. 14. Iſrael hath forgotten his maker and built him Temples, where they had Idols and Altars, there moſt probably they built Temples, and this is here taxed as a Note. forgetting of their maker, which would be conſidered by Papiſts when they ſet up Images and ſay, theſe are a means to remember God, but the Lord taxeth this as forggetting of him, becauſe doing any thing againſt, or beſides that which he hath preſcribed for a remembrance of him, is a forgetting of him; as building other Temples when as he appointed only one to be built unto his name, and now ſetting up Images, when as he teacheth one viſible way only of remembring him, viz. his laſt Supper, where as in an Image his death and paſſion is repreſented to our ſight; and ſo Gal.3.1. it is ſaid, before whoſe eyes, Chriſt Jeſus hath been ſet forth amongſt you crucified, becauſe in his Supper, which was inſtituted for a remembrance of him, he is ſet forth as broken and ſhedding his bloud for us. And Judah hath built ſtrong Cities, that is, to be a ſtrength unto her againſt her enemies, thinking thus to be ſafe, although ſhe provoke the Lord by her ſins, ſo that here want of truſting in God is taxed, and truſting to an arm of fleſh: but theſe Cities ſhall be fired, as they were afterwards by Nebuchadnezzar: where, as ſome note, that a pronoune of the maſculine gender is affixed to Cities, and one of the feminine to Palaces, his Cities, and her Palaces, underſtanding therefore the Cities of Iſrael and the Palaces of Judah, it is frivolous: for Cities threatned here anſwer plainly to Cities which Judah built or dwelt in, and forſomuch as Judah was a people as well as a Church, both may well be ſpoken of Judah, I will ſet fire on his Cities, and burn her Palaces, although I grant, that moſt commonly Judah is ſpoken of in the feminine gender, and Iſrael in the maſculine, as ch.4.17,18,19. Iſrael being ſpoken to in the maſculine, is by and by ſpoken to in the feminine twice over.

CHAP. IX.

V. 1. T*Hou haſt loved a reward upon every corn floore:* Here again Iſrael is reproved and threatned for doing like an harlot, when as ſhe hath an husband. For in the former words Iſrael is challenged for going a whoring, now it is laid open how baſely minded this ſpirituall harlot was, ſhe took rewards of corn from the floore for conſenting to this foul wickedneſſe: Hebr. it is, the floore of the wheat, and ſo Calvin renders it. The meaning is, as a woman that beareth an whoriſh mind, will proſtitute her ſelf to another man for gifts, although ſhe hath an husband ready enough to ſupply her with all things for neceſſity and pleaſure, which is a thing moſt abominable: ſo the Church of Iſrael having God to her husband, who was ready to ſupply her abundantly with corn and wine and al things, yet out of a moſt corrupt and baſe mind, debaſed her ſelf to ſerve Idols, hoping from them to have theſe things, as they are brought in ſpeaking, as beleeving they had Jer.44.17. whereas this may ſeem to be contradictory to ch.9.8. Ephraim hath hired Lovers, to take rewards and to give rewards. It is eaſily anſwered, ſhe gave to the Aſſyrians to help her againſt her enemies, and to idols brought peace-offerings, for the wo men of Jer. 44. Iſrael are ſaid to have made cakes for the Queen of heaven. But when they did thus, they ſought withall a reward, to have the more plentifull crops of corn and aboundance of all fruits, although moſt vainly, as hath beene already Note. ſhewed: Like unto them doe the Papiſts, who have many particular Saints in ſeverall caſes that they ſeek unto, and not to God onely, ah that they would herein conſider, how they ſhake hands with whoriſh Iſrael, who was Hieron. thus threatned therefore; Jerome expouuds it, thou haſt thought the floore and wine-preſſe to be the reward of thy whoredome, as if for ſerving idols thou wert ſupplyed. But that is ſo full, which I have ſaid out out of Calvin before, that there is no more to be ſaid.

V. 2. The floore and the winepreſſe ſhall not feed thee, &c. that is, in ſtead of getting corn and wine by thy whoriſh doings, thou ſhalt be put from all, and driven to wander and begge in Egypt and Aſſyria, as followeth, verſ. 3. For to Egypt, as it is to be conceived ſome of them fled to avoid the Aſſyrians rage, when they were for the moſt part carryed away into Aſſyria, as was touched before, chap. 8.13.

V. 3. And they ſhall eat unclean things in Aſſyria. This may ſeem to be a thing of Calvin. ſmall moment to be ſpoken of, to aggravate their judgement in being carryed captive into Aſſyria, but it is as much in effect as if he had ſaid, that he would reject them from being his peculiar people, of which refraining from meats uncleane was a ſigne, ſo that thenceforth they ſhould not differ from other prophane people of the world, which was a greater judgement then their captivity it ſelf.

V. 4. They ſhall not offer wine-offerings to the Lord, neither ſhall they be pleaſing to him. Some hereby think it is meant, that now they being ſtill in their owne land ſhould doe no duties to be accepted of, becauſe they were ſo wicked, as is further declared, Eſai. 1. and Eſai. 66. ſo Calvin holding this to be further confirmed by the next words, Their ſacrifices ſhall be unto them as the bread of mourners, all that eat thereof ſhall be polluted; for amongſt the Aſſyrians they would not ſacrifice, ſeeing there was one place onely for ſacrifice. But others underſtand theſe words, as a continued relation of the Lords rejecting them, they ſhould not onely be as other prophane nations eating unclean meats, but without the ſervice of God alſo, and if they ſhould there offer Sacrifice, the Lord would not be pleaſed therewith, but much more offended, their Sacrifices being no better accounted of then the bread of mourners for the bread, that is, unclean and polluting all ſuch, as eat thereof, becauſe all things in the houſe, where the dead be, were by the Law of Moſes uncleane, ſo Lyra, and thus it is determined, Numb. 19. that all things in the houſe, where a dead corps was ſhould be counted unclean. As for wine-offerings, of which he here ſpeaketh, ſee Numb. 15. they were added to their Sacrifices. Whereas it is argued from the place, that there could be no ſacrificing there, no more could there be in the land of the ten Tribes, and therefore it may be conceived, that they paſſed not for tranſgreſſing the Law by ſacrificing in Bethel or Dan, would not, if they thought good, forbear to doe the like in an heathen country alſo, for their bread for their ſoule ſhall not come into the houſe of the Lord, Vulg. Their bread is for their ſoule, it ſhall not come into the houſe of the Lord, the Lyra. Hebrew will bear either reading, the meaning, ſaith Lyra, is, the bread of their meat-offerings is to feed themſelves, there being no other end in their ſacrificing, but to feaſt and pamper their bodies, therefore it is not accounted as a ſacrifice that cometh into the Lords houſe, any whit available before the Lord to procure his favour unto them. And this is the rather to be approved, becauſe their ſoule, Heb. is often put for themſelves, ſee alſo the like before Calvin. chap. 8. 13. Calvin; the ſacrifices which they offer ſhall not be available for the good of their ſoul, becauſe an atonement ſhall not be made hereby, as the end of ſacrificing was, let the reader take it which way he pleaſeth.

What will ye doe in the feſtivall day of the Lord? R. Solomon when the Lord makes a feaſt with your dead carcaſſes for the beaſts of the field and the fowls of the air; but this ſeemeth to be far fetcht, it is rather an addition to that which was ſaid before, ſeeing ye can offer no pleaſing ſacrifice to God for the expiation of your ſins, what will yee doe, when the time of ſacrificing cometh? ſurely ye may even ſit ſtill, and bring no more ſacrifices in vain. For although ye doe, ye ſhall not eſcape Gods judgement, ſo far ſhall ye be from coming into his favour hereby. And therefore verſ. 6. he ſaith, They are gone becauſe of deſtruction, Egypt ſhall gather them, Memphis ſhall bury them, that is, in fleeing deſtruction by the Aſſyrians many ſhall flee into Egypt and dye there, as was partly touched before cha. 8. 13. and Memphis is particularly named becauſe a chief City in Egypt, to which the moſt reſorted, the deſirable place for their ſilver, the nettles ſhall poſſeſſe or inherit, that is, by reaſon of their treaſure hidden there, the ground upon which the moſt ſet their hearts they ſhall leave, and it ſhall long lye deſolate, which is implyed by ſaying, the nettles ſhall inherit it, &c. arguing no ſhort, but a long time of deſolation. Gualter will have it called the deſireable for ſilver, becauſe their coſtlieſt buildings were hereby meant, which ſtood them in much money.

Note.

The Prophet is a fool, the ſpirituall man madde, Vulg. Iſrael know thee a fool, the Prophet madde, but in the Hebrew it is, Iſrael ſhall know, for in the former words he ſaid, the day of recompence is come, now he ſaith Iſrael ſhall know it, and when it is ſo, it will appear, that the falſe Prophet who flattered with them, and promiſed them peace was a fool, and that the ſpirit of which he boaſted, whereby he ſpake to harden them in their evill wayes, was nothing elſe but madneſſe, as in one rapt by an evill ſpirit or poſſeſſed, that uttereth things, of which no good ſenſe can be made: And ſuch are all Prophets, that to pleaſe the people, or the higher powers, regard not ſo much to ſpeak what the Lord hath ſaid in his Word, but what may moſt ingratiate them with theſe, a fault too common in theſe times. But look not at them as they are commonly reputed, godly zealous Miniſters, but as mad and fooliſh, ſo likewiſe Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuites going under the name of learned men, are fools and mad men with all their mitred Biſhops and Cardinals, and Popes glittering ſo by the glory of ſuppoſed extraordinary holineſſe. For thy great iniquity and much hatred: for which thou art left to the ſeducement of theſe fooliſh and mad Prophets. For ſin and hatred of good, and of thoſe that ſeek to perſwade hereunto is the cauſe, why a people is given over to be lead by ſuch Prophets to their deſtruction, as 2 Theſ. 2. 11. For this cauſe God giveth them over to ſtrong deluſions, to beleeve lies, ſo that they, that would not come under this judgement ought readily to hearken to ſuch as teach the truth, and at their teaching to amend their lives.

V. 8.
Calvin.

The Watchman of Ephraim was with my God, but the Prophet a ſnare of a Fowler. According to this reading Calvin ſaith, that ſome make this expoſition; The Prophets of old cleaved cloſe to God, and his Word in all their Propheſyings, venting nothing elſe but what he commanded them, but now contrariwiſe they ſpeak of their own heads, thus inſnaring their hearers as a fowler the ſilly birds. But he rather preferreth another, ſaying that this agreeth not ſo well to the words, and that is, as the Hebrew word for word, The Watchman of Ephraim with my good, the Prophet a ſnare of the fowler, the Watchman and Prophet here ſpoken of are not two divers from each other, but both one, and ſo it is, as if he had ſaid, the Watchman who is the Prophet of Ephraim is become a ſnare; for a Prophet is by God ſet to be a Watchman, Ezek. 3. and therefore ſaid to be a Watchman with God, or Gods Watchman; but becoming a ſnare he is an hatred in the houſe of the Lord, that is, one whom the Lord hateth, although he be bold even to come into the Houſe of God, and there publickly, and not in corners to ſeek to inſnare mens ſoules: and he maketh the ſervice done there to be hatefull and abominable, and this is beſt. For the conjecture of Lyra here, becauſe the houſe of the Lord is ſpoken of, that it is ſpoken to Judah, it is nothing ſolid, for I conceive, that this is ſpoken of all together both Judah and Iſrael, in either of which ſuch wicked Prophets were an hatred, and for Iſrael it is manifeſt, that he is ſpoken to becauſe Ephraim is here named.

V. 9. They have deeply corrupted themſelves as in the dayes of Gibeah. This is ſpoken in alluding to the foul ſinfulneſſe of the men of Gibeah in Benjamin, *Judg.*19. wherein they equalled the Sodomites, and therefore were terribly deſtroyed both men and women.

V. 10. I found Iſrael as grapes in the wilderneſſe, I ſaw your Fathers as the firſt ripe in the fig-tree at her firſt time. Here to make the ſin of Iſrael the more odious, hee ſheweth how dearly God had loved them, as one that findeth grapes in the wilderneſſe, where he never looked for any, becauſe it is a barren place, and as firſt ripe figs, which be moſt acceptable to him that eſpyeth them. But this is not ſpoken of them, as though they were ſuch of themſelves, whereby God was moved to ſeek and finde them, or to looke after them; but hereby is meant, that he out of his meer grace, when they were in the wilderneſſe and might there have periſhed for want, lookt after them, and had a tender care over them, as a man hath of his Vine laden with grapes, or his fig-tree with figs of the beſt ſort. But they requited him ill for this, going to Baal-Peor, that is, committing ſpirituall whoredome with that idol, as the Hebrews uſe the phraſe of going in, to ſet forth the wickedneſſe of a man committed with an whore: of this read *Numb.*25.

V. 11. Their glory ſhall flee away as a bird, from the birth, &c. Ephraim gloryed in this that he was full of people, but this glory of his at the coming of the Aſſyrians ſhall ſoon be gone, ſome of his children being ſlain ſo ſoon as born, others, in the very time of coming forth, and others being yet in the womb, their mothers being ſlain, thus Vatablus; others expound their glory of their multitudes of people at their firſt ſeparating from Iſrael, for herein they gloryed that they were ſo many from the very beginning of that kingdome; but he threatneth, that this glory whereupon they did bear themſelves from the birth and conception, as it were, of the Kingdome ſhould ſoon vaniſh, thus Jerome. But Calvin will have not onely children here meant, but all other things of worth, wherein they abounded and placed their glory; but becauſe of children there be three degrees he proceedeth hereby in ſetting this forth, meaning that he would bring them down by degrees and not all at once firſt taking away children born, and if for this they repented not, then thoſe in the womb ready to be born, and if this moved them not, then ſuch as were but even in the conception, laſtly, if any have in the taking away of theſe eſcaped, and be grown paſt babes, yet they ſhall not be ſuffered to live to be men, which I alſo prefer.

Vatablus. Hieron. Calvin.

V. 13. Ephraim, as I have ſeen Tyrus, is planted in a pleaſant place, Heb. Ephraim, as I have ſeen in Tyrus, a plant in a cottage, that is, Ephraim is as a plant in a houſe in Tyrus, kept within in time of winter moſt tenderly, as they uſe to doe that are flowerists by ſome moſt pretious plant which they highly eſteem of. For Tyre was a rich city ſtanding in the Sea, and having but little ground, of which they made fair gardens, they were curious about the flowers growing therein, and the better to defend them from the cold in winter, they ſet them in pots into houſes, as we may gueſſe, by that which is now by ſome done. For, even as ſome are tender over plants, which they eſteem of, ſo God in ſaying, thus ſheweth that he was over Iſrael, but they ſhould be brought out of the place wherein hee had houſed them as it were, and be deſtroyed without any pity.

V. 14. Give them (O Lord) what wilt thou give them? a miſcarrying womb and dry breaſts. Seeing they abuſe their numeroſity to pride & preſumption, to go on in ſin againſt al admonitions and threatnings, lay this judgment upon them, that they may not increaſe any more, ſo Jerome, but there is a better expoſition of Calvin, the Prophet here propounds himſelf as an interceſſor for them, and ſtudying what to ask for them, ſeeing ſo great a judgment ſhould come to the cutting off of their children, as v.11. both the grown, the new born, and unborn, whileſt they were yet in the womb, he begs this as a mercy in this caſe, that their women might not be fruitfull any more, but barren; rather then to conceive and bring forth to deſtruction by the cruell enemy. For in the like caſe, bleſſed, ſaith our Lord, is the womb that bare not, and the paps that gave no ſuck. V. 15. Ver. 15. All their wickedneſſe is in Gilgal, there I hated them for their wicked doings: of Gilgal, ſee before chap. 4. 15. but the Prophet ſeemeth beſides the wickedneſſe of idolatry now practiſed there, of which ſee chap. 12. 11. to point at their firſt great wickedneſſe in making Saul King in that place, becauſe then God began firſt to ſhew his greateſt diſpleaſure againſt them, ſaying, that they had rejected him, as here it is ſaid, I hated them there. And having entred into this way of wickedneſſe they fell to it againe in ſetting Jeroboam over them, who began a courſe of idolatry to his ſucceſſours and all the people wherein they followed to the end, generation after generation, as hath been before ſhewed, chap. 8. 4. I will caſt them out of my houſe, that is, as they have left my houſe at Jeruſalem and ſacrificed in Gilgal, ſo I will caſt them off, that they ſhall not be as any of the houſe of Abraham, and conſequently not of my houſe or family any more, but as ſtrangers unto me like other Nations; ſee the like ſpeech, Epheſ. 2. 12. it is an elegant paranomaſie whereby he expreſſeth it. V. 16. Verſ. 16. Their root is dryed up, they ſhall bear no fruit, as verſ. 14. he prayed that there might be barrenneſſe amongſt them, and abortiveneſſe, ſo here he threatneth them to the ſame effect by a metaphor of a tree the root being dead and dryed up, or rather propheſieth, that it ſhall be ſo. V. 17. Verſ. 17. is nothing but a repetition of that which was before ſaid, the Lord will caſt them away, as verſ. 15. and they ſhall be wanderers amongſt the Nations, as verſ. 3 6.

CHAP. X.

V. 1. I*Srael is as an empty vine, he bringeth forth fruit unto himſelfe.* Here the Lord goeth on in aggravating and threatning the ſins of Iſrael, he was an empty vine, void of all fruits of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, as Eſai. 5. but he brought forth fruits to himſelfe. Calvin. Calvin for an empty hath a ſpoiled vine contending for this, as the proper ſignication of בוקק, but בוק whereof it cometh, ſignifieth to evacuate, and בקק from which he deriveth it, either to empty, or to ſpoil; And he will have this the meaning, that Iſrael was ſometime ſpoiled and made a prey of by the enemy, but through Gods fatherly indulgence he brought forth fruit again to himſelf, being in this Jeroboams time made ſo whole & ſtrong that now there was no appearance of want or emptineſſe, but they were full both of people and riches again; which expoſition I confeſſe is true, and ſo here is an alluſion to a vine one year broken and ſpoiled, but afterwards growing again & fructifying, as it did formerly. But I ſee no reaſon of going from the word empty, if we doe but read it evacuated or emptyed, for that doth ſufficiently imply the means whereby; Vulg. Latine, A leavy vine is Iſrael, his fruit, or the fruit is adæquated to him, by Lyra Lyra. expounded thus; Iſrael is very populous, covered with people, and his land proportionably bringeth forth fruit for the ſuſtentation of them all: but this their proſperity as a vine with leaves they have abuſed to idolatry, multiplying Altars, and their people were multiplyed in many places and goodly images, according to the goodneſſe of their land. Touching which expoſition I ſee not, what can be oppoſed, but that it goeth upon a falſe rendering of the word בוֹקק, for empty having leavy, whereas the Caldee renders it waſted or ſpoiled alſo. But the Septuagint which is followed by the Vulgar and by Jerome is εὐκληματοῦσα, well branched, and the next words ſeeme to favour this reading, the fruit being adæquated to it. For it were ſtrange having ſpoken of an empty and ſpoiled vine to tell preſently of the fruite thereof, and the word שוה ſignifieth adequate ſuch aboundance as was ſufficient for all this people. Wherefore it is to be thought that the Septuagint reſpected not ſo much the proper ſignification of the word, as the ſenſe, it was as a vine full of leaves, as the barren fig tree in the Goſpell, yet without ſuch fruit as God looked for Eſay 5. however populous enough, and fruitfull enough of corn and wine and oil; and for the vacuity that was of goodneſſe notwithſtanding it is called an empty vine. Let the Reader judge and follow which expoſition he pleaſeth, I prefer that of being empty of fruit.

V. 2. Calvin. Their heart is divided, now ſhall they be found faulty, &c. that is, their heart is divided betwixt God and Idols, therefore their judgment by the Aſſyrians ſhall come, as upon perſons convinced to be faulty. Calvin noteth, that in the word divided, is intimated the originall of all ſin, for this is, when men cleave not to the Lord in their hearts, but are divided from him, which was the cauſe that the Lord ſo often warned the people by Moſes to love the Lord with all their hearts and to cleave unto him. Note. And they that live in ſin ſhew plainly that their hearts in ſtead of cleaving thus were divided from God, and therefore vengeance ſhall come upon them.

V. 3. Lyra. Now they ſhall ſay, we have no King, becauſe we feared not the Lord, what then ſhould a King do to us? that is, being taken in their ſin and judged accordingly, ſome that are righteous amongſt them, ſhall ſay, we have no King that can defend us againſt our enemies, becauſe we feared not the Lord, but ran into ſuch abominations, therefore how ſhould our King do us good? thus Lyra, for the people of Iſrael had great confidence in their Kings, which moved them at the firſt to ask a King: 1 Sam. 9. but for their ſins they fell into the hands of their enemies, and what good could their King then do them? Verily none, for he was carryed away captive as well as the reſt, 2 King. 17. Calvin. Calvin doth not think, that any being moved by repentance ſhould ſay thus, but the thing it ſelf ſhould ſpeak ſo, for wicked men rather murmur under the judgments of God, then in penitency confeſſe their errours. But neither hath it been ſaid to the contrary before, but that the good amongſt them ſhall ſay this, of which ſort there were alwayes ſome in the worſt times, for which a remnant is ſo often ſpoken of, and 7000 in the dayes of Elijah.

V. 4. Thus judgment ſpringeth up as hemlock in the furrows of the field, Vulg. as bitterneſſe, the meaning being, that when once they come to this, that they make no conſcience of their oath and covenant, the judgment that the poor people can look for, is no better then hemlock growing in the furrows of the land. For unto furrows are the poor people compared, ſaith Lyra, for their low lying in reſpect of ſuch Judges and Rulers. Lyra. Calvin. Calvin, they have ſpoken words, and ſworn falſly in making a covenant, ſo judgment ſpringeth up to wormwood; that is, they have ſometimes ſpoken good words, yea and ſworn alſo to cleave to God and his lawes, but what follows of all this amongſt them? verily nothing, but as if the husbandman having ploughed and prepared and ſown his ground with good ſeed, ſhould ſoon after ſee no corn, but wormwood coming up therein: for in ſpeaking of furrows he intimateth labour and preparation, ſith a field is not otherwiſe caſt into furrows but by labour. And then by judgment muſt be underſtood righteouſneſſe and holineſſe after all this fair ſhew made being expected; Lo bitterneſſe of ſin ſpringeth up, and thrives beſt.

V. 5. The Inhabitants of Samaria ſhall fear becauſe of the calves of Bethaven. Now he cometh to touch the ſin, for which eſpecially they were ſo greatly threatned. Samaria is named, becauſe it was the chief City of the Kingdome of Iſrael, by the Inhabitants there of all Iſrael being underſtood. Of Bethaven ſee before ch. 4. 15. V. 6. Bethel is meant hereby, where the golden Calfe was placed. And it is threatned that it ſhould be carryed away to Aſſyria for a preſent to King Jareb, of whom, ſee ch. 5. 13. it is a name made from contention, becauſe the King of Aſhur ſtrove ſo much with the King of Iſrael, firſt to bring him to tribute, then to take him and his people as he did, 2 King. 17. where I have ſhewed how the golden Calves continued till the captivity, but then were carryed away into Aſſyria, and then he ſaith, they ſhould be aſhamed.

V. 7. The King of Samaria is cut off, as the foame of the water: Here the ſame is ſaid over again that was v. 3. or a reaſon is rendred, why there they ſay, we have no

Calvin.

m King, for he is cut off by the King of Aſſyria, and is compared to the foam or froth of the water for his baſeneſſe, although he might ſeem to be above the King of Judah in the number of people, yet he was both baſe and without power to ſtand, when the King of Aſſyria came, for he could as eaſily take him away, as foam of the water. And the compariſon is very apt, becauſe foame is a moſt baſe thing conſiſting only of looſe and refuſe matter gathered together, yet keepeth the top of the water.

V. 9.

(O Iſrael) thou haſt ſinned from the dayes of Gibeah, there they ſtood, the battell in Gibeah againſt the children of iniquity did not overtake them: Having threatned both King and people of Iſrael, *v.*7, 8. repeating again both the deſtruction at Aven or Bethel, and the continuance of the deſolation, till briars and nettles ſhould come up, as ch.9.6. and ſhewing the horribleneſſe of it, by ſaying, they ſhall ſay to the Mountains, Cover us, and to the Hils, Fall on us; as if it were more tolerable tò be cruſhed in pieces under an hill, and there to lye alwayes buryed, then to endure the miſerie of thoſe times.

Lyra.

Calvin.

Note.

Now he rippeth up from the beginning the ſinfulneſſe of Iſrael ever ſince the wickedneſſe ſo notorious committed in Gibeah, which was touched upon before, ch.9.9. which Lyra ſaith, was their ſuffering of the Idol ſometime ſet up in Dan, being taken from Micah, Judg. 18. and not deſtroying it, but having now in the time of the firſt Jeroboam another added to it alſo. And this he ſaith, is meant by theſe words, there they ſtood, that is, at the Idolatry then ſet up and continuing, whereby they were all tainted. And by the next words, the battle not overtaking them, is meant the battle fought by the Benjamites againſt Iſrael the firſt and ſecond time, wherein Iſrael could not prevail becauſe of that Idol permitted, ſo Lyra; the Hiſtory is Judg. 19. Calvin more throughly weighing all the paſſages here, ſaith, that the things done in the time when the men of Gibeah ſinned ſo foully, and were therefore by Gods juſt judgment deſtroyed, are here mentioned, becauſe the Iſraelites ſeeing ſo dreadfull an Example, whereby they ſhould have taken warning not to do the like, yet were as wicked as they. And hereby their wickedneſſe was the more aggravated, becauſe they themſelves then had ſuch indignation at thoſe mens ſinnes, that they bound themſelves by oath and ceaſed not to fight againſt them, till they had utterly deſtroyed them. For this doth not a little aggravate mens ſins, when they have been chaſtiſers thereof in others, to do the like themſelves. And then the meaning is, thou haſt ſinned ſince the time of ſo ſevere a revenge taken upon ſinners, which is intolerable. For the next words, there they ſtood, of theſe ſome give the ſenſe, they were repelled and overcome twice, and were at a ſtand not knowing what to doe; ſome, thereby God ſhewed that they were as great ſinners as the men of Gibeah, in that having an army ſo farre exceeding them, yet they could not a long time prevail. But he, ever ſince that time they have obſtinately gone on in the like foul ſins, his ſaying, that they ſtood, implying perſeverance in evill a long time together. For the laſt words, the battle did not overtake them, the meaning is, that what was done then againſt thoſe children of iniquity in that bloudy battle never entred into their minds to deter them from ſin ſince.

And this is fully ſatisfactory, that I may not trouble the Reader with any other Expoſitions brought by others, as my Author doth, and in explaining the firſt words varieth ſomewhat, I confeſſe, from that which I have ſaid, as if it were meant they were ſinners then, as well as they of Gibeah, but forſomuch as this is ſet forth in the next words, there they ſtood, I reſt upon that which hath been ſaid upon the firſt, as the moſt genuine ſenſe.

V. 10.

Lyra.
Gualter.
Calvin.

It is my deſire to chaſtiſe them, the people ſhall be gathered againſt them when they ſhall bind themſelves in their two furrows, that is, being ſo ſinfull, as hath been ſaid, and ſo long a time, yet I would rather by my chaſtiſements have brought them to amendment, but I ſee this will not doe, and therefore the Aſſyrians ſhall come againſt them and deſtroy them, however they rely upon their two Gods, one in Bethel, the other in Dan; ſome partly worſhiping God ſtill and Idols together, and ſome uniting their forces, which they counted a double ſtrength, and ſo able to reſiſt any enemie; laſtly, ſome, Judah and Iſrael joined together againſt the common enemy. Of all theſe the firſt is beſt, for what furrows are here ſpoken of, we may gather from v.4.viz. furrows of wormwood or hemlock that poiſoneth in ſtead of nouriſhing, and ſuch were theſe two Idols, whereby they were ſo bound, that by no admonitions or threatnings they would be moved to forſake and give over that groſſe ſuperſtition.

V. 11. Lyra. Ephraim is like an heifer that is taught, he loveth to tread out the corn, but I paſſed over upon her fair neck: I will make Ephraim to ride, Judah ſhall plough, and Iſrael ſhall break his clods, that is, as an heifer uſed to tread out the corn loveth ſo to do, becauſe when he treadeth it, he feedeth, for the mouth of the oxe that treadeth out the corn muſt not be muzzled: ſo Ephraim or Iſrael was intent to corn and other things of this life, and although being pricked with a goad, whereby he is made to tread it out, (for this is meant by his being taught) that is, whilſt he thus did, he ſuffered diverſly by Gods judgments, becauſe he looked upon the corn as coming from his Idol, as was touched before, *ch.*1 & 2. and not from God to praiſe and ſerve him. Therefore God by the King of Aſſyria brought her under the yoak, which is meant by his treading upon her fair neck. And he ſhall ride, that is, in haſte be carryed afar off from all his worldly poſſeſſions. Then Judah ſhall plough by repentance, and ſeeking the Lord, as they did in the time of Hezekiah, in whoſe dayes Iſrael was carryed away: for by plowing up the fallow ground of the heart, is repentance ſet forth, *Jer.*4.4. and Jacob, that is, a remnant of Iſrael ſtaying ſtill in the land, when others were carryed away captive, ſhall break his clods, joining in the ſame ſpirituall husbandry, that they might together reap fruits of theſe their godly labours, living after that great judgment upon Ephraim, in more proſperity and comfort. For of Iſrael there were ſome that complyed with Hezekiah in keeping a Paſſeover, 2 *Chron.*30. who moſt probably abode in the land of Judah after that, and ſo eſcaped the danger of the Aſſyrian, being in the time of good Kings, Hezekiah and Joſiah, addicted to the worſhip and ſervice of God together with the faithfull in Judah. Calvin. From this Calvin and others differ not much, and Calvin quoteth Job 30. where that holy man complaineth that he was carryed away as one riding upon the clouds, unto which he applyeth the riding here ſpoken of.

V. 12. Sow to your ſelves in righteouſneſſe: Here he followeth on his allegory begun *v.*11. exhorting the people now, if they would not ſtill lye open to thoſe judgments before threatned, to turn ſincere worſhippers of God, all Idolatry being abandoned, promiſing thus a better reaping unto them, for it is time to ſeek the Lord till he come and rain righteouſneſſe, as he will do at the coming of Chriſt, of whom it is ſaid, that he ſhal come as the rain upon the mowen graſs.

V.13. Yee have ploughed wickedneſſe and reaped iniquity, and eaten the fruit of lyes: Having *v.*12. exhorted them to repentance making them gracious promiſes, if they did ſo, now he complaineth that contrariwiſe they laboured in the way of wickedneſſe, ſet forth by their ploughing, and as they ploughed ſo they reaped, they made a ſhew indeed ſometime, or ſeemed to themſelves to do worthily in the way of worſhip that they were in, both in deviſing and acting accordingly; but when they thought to eat, by ſome good coming to them through their ſo doing, continuing a flouriſhing Kingdom, herein they were deceived, as they had partly found by experience in the dayes of Jehoaz, and ſhould find more in the time of Hoſeah, thus they ate lyes. And all this becauſe in theſe wayes ſeeming good unto them they truſted, and in their own ſtrength having Egypt alſo confederate with them.

V. 14. As Shalman ſpoiled Betharbel; Hebr. as the deſtruction of Salman Betharbel: The Prophet not being content to threaten deſtruction to Iſrael, and all his ſtrong holds, to terrifie them the more, compareth the deſtruction to come upon them, to the moſt grievous that ever was, wherein there was no ſparing of mothers or children, as followeth in the next words, the mother was daſhed in pieces upon her children. But what was Salman Betharbel wehre this was done?

Hieron.

the Vulg. Lat. Salmana was waſted of his houſe that revenged Baal, this Jerom, Lyra, and other Ancients generally following, ſay that it is alluded to the Hiſtory of Gideon, otherwiſe called Jerubbaal, for that which was ſpoken by his father, when he had broken down the Image of Baal, if he be a god let him plead for himſelf, for after this he fought againſt and ſlew the Princes of Midian, Zeba, and Salmana, of which laſt it is here ſpoken, the other being left to be underſtood, but it is ſaid that he was waſted of the houſe of him, that is, Gideon and his people, called his houſe, when only with 300 men he routed their armies and purſued and ſlew them. Jerom further noteth, that in ſome old Greek copies, it was rendred of the houſe of Jeroboam, and therefore, that there might be no more ſo groſſe a miſtaking, for plainneſſe ſake, he rendred it thus by a circumlocution, not of the houſe of Jerubbaal, as in other Greek copies, but of him that revenged Baal. Againſt this expoſition makes, Firſt, the name Salman with ש whereas that Salman was with צ. Secondly, it is not of the houſe, or was waſted, but as the waſting or deſtruction of Salman Betharbel, ſome place called by this name being plainly meant. Thirdly, here is no word Baal but Arbel, therefore Lyra leaving this, flyeth to another, looking to the ſignification of the words, and not to them, as a proper name, as the peaceable of the houſe of the waſter, the lyer in wait, becauſe Shalom ſignifieth peaceable, and Arbel inſidiator, and he referreth us to the Hiſtory of Laiſh, Judg. 18. which was a peaceable and ſecure City, and ſo unawares ſurprized by the Danites, all the Inhabitants being ſlain both male and female and the City burnt with fire v. 27. even thus he ſheweth that Iſrael ſhall be deſtroyed, when they leaſt feared it. Junius will have ſome deſtruction made by Salmanaſar amongſt the Arbelites dwelling beneath Aſſyria meant, to be underſtood amongſt others mentioned 2 King. 18. 34. 19. 13. But it is not Salmanaſar, but Salman, that is here ſpoken of, and if the deſtruction of a place called Arbel, had been ſo notorious, why was it not named as well as others in the places cited, ſeeing Rabſhakeh would ſpeak all that he could to terrifie the Jews, and this might have availed much to make them afraid, leſt they if they withſtood, ſhould be uſed thus alſo. Others partly follow Junius, and partly ſay, it was ſome horrible cruelty wel known to the Iſraelites to have been practiſed, although not recorded. And Ribera ſtands mightily to defend the Vulg. Lat. and Expoſition made thereupon. But I approve beſt of that of Lyra againſt which I cannot ſee how any exception can be taken.

By ſaying, the King ſhall be cut off in the morning, he meaneth, early, when he had reigned but a little while, viz. onely ſixe months, as it befell the ſonne of the ſecond Jeroboam, Zechariah.

CHAP. XI.

V. 1. VV*Hen Iſrael was a child I loved him, and I called my ſon out of Egypt*, that is, when he was a poor child or ſervant under the Egyptians tyranny, my love was towards him, neither was it taken away for his baſeneſſe. This is ſpoken to aggravate the wickedneſſe of Iſrael the more, who ſo ill requited God for all his love, as followeth v. 2.

The next words, I called my ſon out of Egypt, are ſpoken, as God himſelf then ſtiled him, Iſrael is my ſon, my firſt-born, which is applyed to Chriſts coming into Egypt and out again, Mat. 2. 15.

V. 2. As they called them, ſo they went from them, they ſacrificed to Baal, that is, as they my ſervants, whom I imployed to call them out of Egypt, Moſes and Aaron, endeavoured to bring them to me, ſo they contrariwiſe forſaking me, ſerved Baal, Judg.2.11. againſt that which they had been taught by Moſes and Joſhua and the Prophets raiſed up after them from time to time, of one of which ſee Judg. 2. 1.

V. 3. I taught Ephraim alſo to goe, I took him alſo by the arm and he knew not that I healed him: Here he goeth on further to ſhew with what love and kindneſſe he entreated Iſrael after their deliverance out of the land of Egypt, even as a mother teaching her child to goe, holding it from falling, and when it cannot Exod.17. goe, taking it up in her arms to carry it: for ſo the Lord preſented them with kindneſſe in the wilderneſſe, in their going upholding them, when the Deut.32. Amalekites came to fight againſt them, and bearing them up as the Eagle her young upon her wings above all dangers. Yet he knew not, or did not as one acknowledging all this to have come from me, and my ſparing them from utter deſtruction, which they by their ſins then deſerved, which was an healing of them, as Exod. 32.

V. 4. I was as they that take off the yoak from the jaws, and laid meat unto thee: a further expreſſion of his love taken from a man that loveth his oxe, and therefore ſeeing his yoke to preſſe him too hard, in pity helpeth to hold it up and ſo to eaſe the beaſt, and then giveth him meat; ſo the Lord dealt by Iſrael, delivering him from the Egyptian bondages, and when he was in the wilderneſſe miraculouſly feeding them with Manna from heaven. Thus the Lord ſaith, that he drew them with the cords of a man and bands of love, as a man full of humanity ſeeketh to win his rebellious child by loving and not by harſh means, becauſe kindneſſes are as cords drawing the hearts.

V. 5. He ſhall not return into the land of Egypt, but the Aſſyrian ſhall be his King becauſe they refuſed to return, that is, I charged them at the time when I brought them out of Egypt, not to return thither any more, or to ſeek the friendſhip of the Egyptians; but herein they diſobeyed me, and ſought to the King of Egypt, as 2 King. 17. therefore the Aſſyrian ſhall ſubdue them, as I have threatned, becauſe they would not return from this evill way, upon which they were obſtinately ſet, ſo Lyra; or they would not return to me by repoſing their Gualter. truſt in me only, but were diffident in reſpect of my help: ſo almoſt Gualter.

V. 7. My people are bent to backſliding from me, though they called them to the moſt high, none at all would exalt him: vulg.Lat. and my people ſhall hang upon my return, but a yoak ſhall be put upon them, that ſhall not be taken away, Hebr. my people hanging, or ſuſpending upon my return, for the yoak they ſhall call upon him, he ſhall not lift them up. And the meaning is, When I ſhall give them over into the hands of the Aſſyrians, as I have ſaid, and they being preſſed with miſery would depend upon me, and therefore ſhall cry unto me for help, as chap. 5. 15. for the Aſſyrians cruelty againſt them, but they ſhal lie and be kept under it without deliverance; whereas Judah being captived by the Babylonians, was promiſed deliverance at the end of 70 years. For the word rendred bent ſignifieth to depend, & it is למשובתי that is rendred to back-ſliding from me, which moſt properly ſignifieth, to my return, that is, my return from hiding my ſelf, as I threatned, God being ſaid ſo to do, when he appeareth not in the defence of his Iſrael. And for the next words rendred, although they called them to the moſt high, they are את על the word על ſignifying a yoak, as the word בלי יעל without a yoak, although על ſignifieth alſo ſuper, yet את is either a particle ſhewing the accuſative caſe, or uſed ſometime for to, or for, ſo that being the neareſt that may be to the New Teſtament, it will be no more but ad ſuper, not to the moſt high, to ſet forth whom עליון is commonly, if not alwayes uſed. And the laſt word ſignifieth indifferently either to lift up or to take away, wherefore I reſt in the ex-Hieron. poſition given, as Jerom and all the Ancients do. They that follow the other Tranſlation, give this for the ſenſe: Although teachers were not wanting amongſt them, who from time to time moſt earneſtly exhorted them by repentance to turn to the Lord the moſt high: yet look upon them altogether, and herein they were all alike, in that they did not ſet themſelves to exalt or glorifie God by praiſing and ſerving him, but rather Idols. But in this laſt they goe plainly from the word ורומם, which it it be rendred by exalting, muſt be exalt them, not him, and ſo being referred to the Lord without any tolerable ſenſe.

V. 8. How ſhall I make thee as Admah, how ſhall I ſet thee as Zeboim? Here the Lord ſpeaketh as one at a ſtand, for the love he bare to Iſrael, ſtudying as it were, what to doe unto him being ſo full of ſin, to ſhew his unwillingneſſe ſo ſeverely to puniſh him, as now he was about to do, being, as it were, forced to it thereby, even as a father dealeth by his dear ſon degenerating. For the deſtruction of Admah and Zeboim here ſpoken of, they were utterly deſtroyed together with Sodom, Gen. 19. Note. Whereby we may ſee, that God doth not willingly but unwillingly deſtroy his people, although moſt ſinfull, being ready, if by any means they would be brought to turn, to ſave them, which ſheweth that not God but man only is the cauſe of his own deſtruction, Chap.13.9. and is not by any fatall neceſſity put on in a ſinfull way, but of his own will. Jam.1.14. My heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together, this is ſpoken per anthropopatheian, and not properly, becauſe diverſe thoughts and repentance are not incident to God, Jam.1.17. who is without all variableneſſe or ſhadow of change. It is thus ſpoken then, to ſhew how full of compaſſion God is towards man ſinning and hereby provoking him, by reaſon of which, although he ſeverely puniſheth, yet he will not utterly deſtroy all Iſrael, with whom he is in covenant with, for which it is added, V. 9. v. 9. I will not execute the fierceneſſe of mine anger, I will not return to deſtroy Ephraim, for I am God and not man, the holy one in the midſt of thee, and I will not enter into the City: in which words the Lords ſheweth in what ſenſe he ſpake before of repentance burning within him, & the turning of his heart within him. Whileſt he thought upon deſtroying Ephraim and threatned it, he meditated upon ſhewing ſome favor; for which he ſaith, I wil not execute the fierceneſs of mine anger by utterly deſtroying Iſrael for ever, whereby he intimateth that there ſhall one day be an healing even of the people of the ten tribes, and that they ſhall not alwayes be bound up in infidelity for everlaſting deſtruction, as is plainly taught Rom. 11.26. And therefore when in other places utter deſtruction for ever is threatned unto them, it is to be underſtood, as Calvin well noteth, not of all without exception; for there is a remnant of elected ones, who are alwayes excepted, which ſhall finally come in to the faith, as is often taught.

In ſaying, I will not return, &c. he hath reference to former deſtructions that had been amongſt them, a ceſſation whereof there was at that time, but becauſe he was about to bring upon them a greater judgment then ever by the Aſſyrians, he ſaid I will not return, &c. by theſe my judgments threatned utterly to deſtroy Ephraim, for I am God and not man, that is, not as a malicious man, who being provoked is implacable for ever, God is not ſo, but in time when he thinketh that his people have ſuffered enough, he will deale with them again in mercy and loving kindneſſe, the holy one in the midſt of thee, this is added to ſhew that it could not be otherwiſe, forſomuch as the Lord is the holy One, and this is one point of holineſs not to retain anger for ever, to perſiſt alwayes in wrath being a notorious blemiſh and contrary to the beauty of holineſs, as it is called Pſal. 110 3.

If it be ſaid Sodom and Gomorrah were deſtroyed for ever, and reprobates lye under Gods wrath for ever, how then may he be juſtified herein to be holy, if to ſhew mercy at length be a part of holineſs?

Sol. This is ſpoken to Iſrael, not to other nations, becauſe Iſrael was Gods peculiar people, and therefore it is to be noted, that he ſaith I am the holy one in the midſt of thee, not of every other nation, but of thee, with whom I am in covenant. Holineſſe herein ſhineth in God towards the elect, in that what miſeries ſoever they ſuffer and how long ſoever; yet at length God will put an end thereunto: but towards reprobates his juſtice ſhall ſhine for ever to his glory, Rom. 9. and I will not enter into the City, that is, in an hoſtile manner utterly to deſtroy it, as he that hath ſubdued a City by the ſword enters, and burns and kils all, but if upon terms of peace he cometh in, the gates being by conſent opened unto him, although he puniſheth the City, yet he ſpares it Calvin. from utter ruine; ſo the Lord meaneth here: thus alſo Calvin, who mentioneth two other expoſitions.

1. I will not enter any other City to dwell in the midſt thereof, but Jeruſalem.

2. I will not make you a flouriſhing kingdom again any more by ſetting a King over you apart, and other accompliſhments of ſtate, as be in a City having a King.

But of theſe the firſt falleth, becauſe he ſpeaks not to the kingdom of Judah wherein Jeruſalem was, but of the ten tribes; and the ſecond, becauſe his entering here ſpoken of, was in judgment, thus Calvin: but he ſeemeth to me to mean a City oppoſite to Iſrael, for theſe words are added after his ſaying, I am the holy one in the midſt of thee, and into the City of thine enemies, the Aſſyrians, that is, Nineveh, I will not enter, although for thy puniſhment I make them for a time moſt victorious. Lyra hath another expoſition, I will not confine my worſhip to Jeruſalem only, but in all places they ſhall worſhip me, Joh.4.20. but this agreeth not with the words before going.

V. 10. They ſhall walk after the Lord, he ſhall roar as a Lion, when he ſhall roar, then the children ſhall tremble from the weſt: Here it is propheſied of the compaſſion before ſpoken of, that ſhould after judgment be ſhewed to Iſrael, when this ſhall be, he ſheweth, that they ſhall not live in ſin and rebellion againſt God any more, but walk after him in holy obedience, the means whereof ſhall be Gen 49. the roaring of the Lion, that is, of Chriſt Jeſus, who was the Lion of the tribe of Judah, uttering his voice by powerfull preaching by himſelf and his miniſters.

For the next words, the children from the weſt ſhall tremble, Vulg. hath it, Lyra. the children of the Sea ſhall fear, expounded by Lyra, the children of this world, which is compared to the Sea, becauſe tempeſtuous. And by the Sea Calvin alſo rendreth it, as the word properly ſignifieth. And therefore taking it according to the moſt proper ſignification, I ſay with Jerom, that by the chil- Hieron. dren of the Sea here the people of the world are meant, who are ſet forth by fiſhes in the Sea, by the preaching of the Goſpel, being taken and brought to V. 11. Chriſt as in a net, by the labour of fiſhers, the Apoſtles. They ſhall tremble as a bird out of Egypt, and as a dove from Aſſyria, and I will place them in their houſes: Mat.13. which words are added, to ſhew that the trembling or fear before ſpoken of ſhould be to converſion, that they might be taken by the net of the Goſpell caſt out in all parts of the world, as the fiſhers net in the broad and wide Sea. Thus then it is ſhewed here, that they ſhould tremble from Egypt and Aſſyria, and ſo be brought to their houſes, that is, to particular congregations imbracing the faith. And this is ſpoken in way of oppoſition to the ſcattered condition of the Jews for the preſent, and it is ſpoken according to the ſimilitude of a bird, or as the word ſignifieth, a ſparrow, and a dove, which have houſes to flee unto, and being feared preſently haſten thither. But why as ſparrows from Egypt, and as doves from Aſſyria? becauſe Egypt was nearer to Jeruſalem and Aſſyria much farther off; and a ſparrows flight is but ſhort, a doves long. And Egypt and Aſſyria are particularly named, all other countries alſo being meant, becauſe they were the moſt noted for Iſraels being gone Joſh.9.3. thither, as was touched before. Calvin will not have the converſion of Iſrael Calvin. here meant, when it is ſaid, they ſhall walk after the Lord, but his powerfull bringing of them home from all places, where they were ſcattered, they of Egypt and Aſhur, being made to tremble, and ſo not daring to hinder them, as it is ſaid, that the people about Sheehem had a fear from the Lord falling upon them, that none of them durſt purſue after Jacob removing from Shechem, when his ſons by ſhedding ſo much bloud had provoked the neighbouring people againſt them. But I reſt in the former, and by the children of the Sea, the inhabitants of the moſt remote parts of the world are ſet forth, that ſhould be ſtricken with an holy fear to turn to the Lord, becauſe Iſlands are hereby meant, that ſtand in the Sea, and ſo are furtheſt off from the firm land.

V.12. Ephraim compaſſeth me about with lies; here chap.12. beginneth Hebr. wherein Iſrael is againe charged with foul wickedneſſe and threatned. And becauſe it is of new matter having no coherence with v. 11. and ch.12.1. follows on in the like charge, it is better to make it, as Lyra doth, the beginning of that chapter, for ſo doth Junius alſo. For the lyes and deceit here ſpoken of, Lyra, for the (Lyra. Junius.) firſt hath denying, referring it to the denying that they had any part in the ſon of Iſhai, when they rejected Rehoboam from being their king, who was of Davids line, and by deceit he underſtands their deceit towards God about his worſhip, fraudulently tranſlating it to their golden Calves. But becauſe the word ſignifieth a lie, and they are ſaid to compaſſe God about herewith, I rather refer both it and deceit to the ſame fraudulent dealing with God. But of Judah an honourable teſtimony is here given, becauſe Hezekiah being King when Iſrael was deſtroyed, that kingdome was famous for cleaving to the Lord, and beating down all idolatry. Judah yet ruleth with God and is faithfull with the Saints, that is, hath a lot, Davids line, in which it was ſetled, and not as much of the Saints who were perſecuted in Iſrael.

CHAP. XII.

V. 1. 2 King. 17. Ephraim feedeth on the winde, &c. that is, is brought under Tribute by the King of Aſſyria, and on the Eaſt winde, becauſe he ſought for help from Egypt to ſhake off this burthen of tribute, but in both he did but follow and (Lyra.) feed upon the winde, by the Aſſyrian being much impoveriſhed, as by a ſtrong winde ſmiting the fruits of the earth, and leaving the inhabitants inſtead of bread to be fed with the empty air, and by the Egyptian being fed onely with hopes in the end proving vain, he encreaſeth lyes dayly & deſolation, they make a Covenant with the Aſſyrians and oil is carryed into Egypt: the here laſt words ſerve to explain the firſt, for wherein did Iſrael increaſe lyes, but in covenanting to be a tributary to & to ſerve the King of Aſhur, which he perfidiouſly brake, and the carrying of oyl into Egypt was their ſending of a preſent to that King, that by him being ſtrengthened they might be the better able to defend themſelves when by breaking it they had provoked the Aſſyrian; ſo Lyra, who for the Eaſt winde, hath æſtus heat put, as hee ſaith to denote Egypt, which ſtood ſouthward, and was a very hot country, but the word is קדם the Eaſt, and (Calvin.) therefore that note of his falleth. Calvin by Ephraim feeding on the wind underſtandeth his vain imaginations of eſcaping Gods judgements threatned, whereby he fed himſelf with hope, and weighed nothing that was ſaid by the Prophets to be moved to repentance thereby, and hee compareth theſe his hopes to the wind, yea the Eaſt wind which blaſteth, becauſe they were not onely vain, but pernicious. Moreover he calleth the ſame lyes, becauſe they were ſuch in effect and deſolation, that is, cauſing them to harden themſelves in their ſins, till their countrey was made deſolate. Then coming to ſhew what theſe lyes, and windy hopes were, he mentioneth the Aſſyrians and Egyptians; with both which they were confederate in vain, whereby the meaning is ſomewhat more fully ſet forth, and rightly.

V. 2. The Lord hath alſo a controverſie with Judah, &c. It may ſeeme ſtrange that Judah who was but a little before commended for her faithfulneſſe to the Saints, or with them, and their Kings living under the rule of God, chap.11.12. for that is meant by ſaying, ſhee ruleth with God, and as the ancient Saints of God, were faithfull unto him, that this Judah I ſay, ſhould now be accuſed as well as Iſrael. (Gualter.) Gualter reſolveth this well, it is ſpoken by way of anſwering to an objection, becauſe Iſrael was charged, verſ.1. with making Covenants with Aſſyria and Egypt; they might ſay Judah doth the like in the time of Ahaz, why then is not this objected to her alſo? In way of preventing this he ſaith, that he had alſo a controverſie with Judah, and the time ſhould come, when Judah ſhould ſmart for it, and therefore Iſrael was to take no incouragement from hence, but imitate Judah wherein ſhee did well; but where in ſhee did ill leave her. Whence note, that even a State which doth worthily Note. in regard of the main things of religion, is not yet to be juſtified, or imitated in all things. For the Lord had a controverſie with Judah notwithſtanding her reigning with God and faithfulneſſe, in things about which the Saints are faithfull and carefull, that is, not to permit any corruption in the worſhip of God. For there was yet a great ſin, viz. her ſeeking to ſtrengthen her ſelf by carnall means, and not confiding in God onely, and when they had done thus, and ſworn to a Covenant with Nebuchadnezzar in Zedekiah his time, they brake it, which ſhould make any State how holy ſo ever to conſider, whether there be not ſome thing yet done, that may provoke the Lord to a controverſie with it likewiſe.

Hee tooke his brother by the heel in the womb, and by his ſtrength he had power with which might make him weep, viz. the touching of his thigh by the man that wreſtled with him, whereby he was made lame alwayes after, which was that he would not depart away from him before he had bleſſed him. In

V. 7. Gualter. Hee is a merchant, the Ballances of deceit are in his hand, Heb. a Canaanite. Thus ſaith Gualter, he doth moſt aptly upbraid them after he had taught them, how they ſhould doe, that they might be worthy children of ſo worthy a father as Jacob, Ephraim is not an Iſraelite but a Canaanite; worthy rather to bee called by this name for their likeneſſe to the Canaanites in their evill manners, who were had in ſuch abomination by the land, that their land ſpued them out, yet the word ſignifieth a Merchant, as it is rendered. And in two things he ſheweth, that they were like to that wicked people. 1. In their deceitfull dealing. 2. In oppreſſion: and it is common in Scripture to call Note. wicked men by their names, whoſe vices they live in, as Eſa. 1. 10. Ezek. 16. *Jam.*4. 1. &c. therefore Christians, that live in the like ſins are not Chriſtians Calvin. indeed, but Canaanites, Sodomites, or Samaritans alſo. Calvin who conſents in the expoſition reproves the rendering of it, he is a Canaanite, becauſe it is nothing elſe but a Canaanite, which is an abrupt ſpeech, whereby Iſrael is cryed out upon, as if he had ſaid when I came to look upon Iſrael, as he is now, Loe a Canaanite appeareth in every reſpect.

V. 8. But Ephraim ſaid, yet I am become rich, I have found me out ſubſtance; in all my labours they ſhall finde none iniquity in me that were ſin, or is ſin. Here the wicked are brought in juſtifying themſelves notwithſtanding all the ſinnes laid to their charge, as if they had ſaid, we are not ſo great ſinners, as ye the Prophets would make us to be, for we by Gods bleſſing have gotten wealth and live in proſperity, which we ſhould never be able to doe, but that we flee ſin in our dealings, with which ye charge us ſo much.

V. 9. And I the Lord thy God from the land of Egypt will yet make thee dwell in Tabernacles, as in the dayes of the Aſſembly, or the feſtivity. Here the Lord objecteth ſomewhat, that might take down their pride in attributing their riches to themſelves, ſaying that he was the beginning of all their welfare, and becauſe they did not acknowledge it, but were proud, as if by their owne induſtry only they had increaſed their wealth, he threatneth to make them dwell again in tents, being driven from their houſes and leading a poore life, as they once a year commonly at the Feaſt of Tabernacles went out of their Cities for a remembrance, how they had done 40 years together in the Wilderneſſe, and kept 8 Calvin. Gualter. dayes in booths, ſo Calvin and Gualter, who onely differs in this, that by the laſt word מועד he underſtandeth a ſet time, rendering it, according to the days ſet, and giving this for the meaning, I will bring you to ſuch a poore eſtate againe, yet not for ever, but for a time in my Divine counſell determined. Lyra. Lyra contrariwiſe expoundeth both this and the next words as promiſes of comfort under the Goſpell, giving this for the meaning, as I in mercy brought thee out of Egypt ſo after thy other ſufferings, which ſhall come unto thee, I will make thee to ſit in the tents or Congregations of Chriſtians at feſtivall times, that ſhall be kept under the Goſpell.

And I ſpake of the Prophets, that is, of this grace, and multiplyed the Viſion, that is, declaring the ſame often, and I was likened in the hands, of the Prophets, that is being made figures or ſimilitudes of me. Adam being caſt into a dead ſleep and Eve made out of him, of me and my Church; and Jonah being three Iunius. dayes and three nights in the Whales belly. Junius, I the Lord thy God from the Land of Egypt, would make thee to abide in theſe tents, as in the dayes of feſtivity, implying the ſenſe to be, that as I brought thee out of Egypt, and have proſpered thee, ſo I would have been willing ſtill to make thee live here in proſperity, keeping the joyfull feaſts of Tabernacles from yeare to yeare for the aboundance of the fruits of the earth received, without end, thou being never carryed away out of thine own Countrey. But thy pride, and elate minde ſpoken of, v.8. and others ſinnes mentioned before and after, verſ. 11. hinder thee from this happineſſe. And this ſenſe the words will well bear, neither doth any other well agree, not that of Calvin, becauſe of the Note of ſimilitude to a feſtivall time; for it were ſtrange, if the Prophet meant, driving out of their houſes, that he ſhould thus expreſſe it by words, implying joy and not rather ſorrow: nor that of Lyra, becauſe the argument upon which hee now is, is an invective againſt their ſins both before this and after it, ſo that here is no place for promiſes for comfort to come in.

V.10. I have alſo ſpoken by the Prophets, I have multiplyed Viſions and uſed ſimilitudes, by the miniſtery of my Prophets, Junius. Speaking by the Prophets I would multiply viſions: In which words he goeth on, as he began, verſ.9. ſhewing, what more he would have done to make them moſt happy: of all which they by their ſins debarred themſelves, they ſhould not have wanted Prophets to inſtruct and comfort them, but have had many of them, ſometimes by Viſions, ſometimes by ſimilitudes ſetting forth the will of God unto them, eſpecially touching the Meſſiah, in whom the greateſt comfort of all doth conſiſt. Toſſarius paraphraſeth upon all in the preter tenſe, I have made thee dwell in fair Palaces, and taught thee diverſly by my Prophets.

V. 11. Is there iniquity in Gilead? ſurely they are vanity, they ſacrifice Bullocks in Gilgal. Of their wickedneſſe in Gilgal, ſee before chap. 4.15. & 9.15. and of the furrows of the field next ſpoken of, where their Altars were ſet up, chap. 10. 4. Here the Prophet comes to their ſecond way of ſinning, which cauſed, that God could no longer deal by them in mercy, as he would have done. And he beginneth by way of queſtion, is there ſin in Gilead? chap. 6. 8. ſomething hath been already ſaid of Gilead, it ſhould, becauſe it was a City of Prieſts, (2 King. 15.) have been a moſt holy place, but was quite degenerated, and therefore was firſt brought into the power of the Aſſyrians. Now by this place he derideth Iſrael juſtifying himſelf, as if he had ſaid. Doe yee ſtand upon your own juſtification, what think ye of Gilead, was there iniquity therein or no? if yea, as ye cannot deny, ſeeing judgements have met with the Gileadites already, will ye out face the matter and ſay, that ye are not ſinners, when as in Gilgal ye ſacrifice Bullocks, which ought not be done, but at Jeruſalem onely, where the place of the Altar is, that is the onely Altar allowed unto you, but ye contrary to the charge given by the Lord have multiplyed Altars as heaps in the furrows, in ſaying which he alludeth to husbandmens making heaps of ſtones, (Gualter.) which they gather out of the land, but lying there they are an hinderance to the Corn that ſhould grow there, ſo their Altars to the favours of God, which otherwiſe would have grown and increaſed amongſt them, making contrariwiſe Hemlock or Wormwood to grow, as was before ſaid, chap. 10. 4.

V. 12. Iſrael fled into Syria and ſerved for a wife, &c. Becauſe he had ſaid before, v.9. that he was their God from Egypt, now he declareth from the beginning, how graciouſly he had dealt with them from the firſt in their Father Jacob. For his providence over him was even then wonderfull in that hee was by going into Syria preſerved from the fury of Eſau, and God ſhewed himſelfe by dream unto him in Bethel to comfort and confirm him, and when Laban wronged him in matter of wages many times, he ſerving for his daughter, and keeping ſheep.

V. 13. And by a Prophet he brought Iſrael out of Egypt and by a Prophet was he preſerved. Having ſpoken of Gods providence over Jacob in his perſon, now he proceedeth to that great mercy, which he ſhewed to his poſterity in bringing them out of Egypt by Moſes, who was the Prophet here ſpoken of, and by him preſerving them, (Exod. 3.) when for their ſinne about the golden Calf he was ready to have deſtroyed them, but that Moſes prayed for them, and ſo they were ſpared.

V. 14. All this extraordinary mercy notwithſtanding they exceeded in ſinning, and threfore are threatned, that their bloud ſhall be left upon them, hereby, meaning that they ſhould be guilty of their own deſtruction, as it is ſaid *Ezek.*3. the ſinner being warned and yet periſhing by the enemy, his bloud ſhall be upon his own head.

CHAP. XIII.

V. 1. WHen Ephraim ſpake, trembling, he exalted himſelfe in Iſrael, but when he offended in Baal, he dyed: Ephraim ſpeaking an horrour invaded Iſrael, hee ſinned in Baal and dyed, ſo the Vulg. Latine, expounded by Lyra, when Jeroboam who was of Ephraim, ſpake about the worſhipping of the golden Calves, which he had ſet up, Iſrael, that is, the Elders of Iſrael not daring to conteſt with him being King, had an horrour ariſing in their mindes. But afterward they feared not either for this great ſinne or the greater of worſhipping Baal, but fell to that alſo, and thus they dyed in reſpect of the life of grace, whereunto we may adde, that they were in Gods decree declared by his Prophets (which was called before an hewing and ſlaying by the Prophets) no better then dead. But although the words may be ſtrained to this reading, (for רתת ſignifieth either trembling or horrour, and the next words that, or he was taken up in Iſrael, and ſo it may goe, horrour it tooke up the men in Iſrael) yet take the words as more properly they may be expounded, and they muſt goe thus, he was lifted up in Iſrael, and according to Calvin, the meaning is, when Ephraim ſpake, he was of ſuch might, that his very ſpeech cauſed terrour in the hearers, he was ſo high lifted up in Iſrael above other Tribes. For this was the bleſſing that Jacob bleſſed him with, when Joſeph preſented both his ſons Manaſſeh and Ephraim to him, that hee ſhould be moſt populous and ſo moſt potent, which came to paſſe accordingly, eſpecially Jeroboam who was of Ephraim being made King, then he ſpeaking, men trembled, the voice of a King in wrath being as the roaring of the lion. But Iſrael offending in Baal dyed, that is, falling to that foul idolatry of Zidon in Ahabs time, death inſued in that Kingdome, for Ahab was ſlain by the Syrians at Ramoth-Gilead, and after that Syria prevailing, it grew a weak and contemptible Kingdome. Whereas it may be ſaid, Iſrael ſinned before this by the idolatry of the golden Calfe, and was weakened by inteſtine warres amongſt themſelves, one King being ſlain and by a faction another ſet up, and he being ſlain, another, he ſaith, that Baaliſm is mentioned and not the other, becauſe a far greater ſin, as whereby the gods of heathen Nations were worſhipped. But this ſatisfieth not, ſeeing both Jeroboam and his houſe, and Baaſhah and his houſe were cut off for that firſt idolatry, as well as Ahab for the other. I conceive therefore, that it is beſt to render the whole thus, In the ſpeaking of Jeroboam of Ephraim there was trembling, when he firſt provoked them to that foul ſin, but he lifted it up in Iſrael, he ſet up that abominable idol notwithſtanding, and in time Iſrael added thereunto without all fear another of Baal, but then was ſo attrite by forraign Nations, that thenceforth it became as a dead thing, and ſhould by the Aſſyrians be as a ſtake quite ſlain.

V. 2. And now they ſin more and more, and have made them molten images. This is added to aggravate their ſins, it being meant, that beſides the golden Calves they ſet up more images as they deviſed, and not onely kiſſed the Calves, but ſacrificed men to Molock, one ſtirring up another to the abominations, of which inhumane practice of ſacrificing men, it is complained, Pſal. 106. And to ſhew how groſſe they were herein, he putteth together their ſacrificing of a man, and kiſſing the Calf, as if a Calf were of ſo much more worth then a man, that whileſt the one is adored, the other might be killed.

V. 3. Therefore they ſhall be as the morning dew, that is ſoon paſt away, and not abide a Kingdome any longer; to ſet forth which further, two other ſimilitudes are added, of a cloud and chaffe before the winde. Verſ. 4. Yet I am the Lord thy God, of which ſee before chapt. 12. 9. and it hath reference to verſ. 1. 2.

V. 6. Lyra. Gualter. According to their paſture ſo were they filled: In this and verſ. 5. the Prophet ſheweth farther, how God had oblieged Iſrael to him beſides his bringing them out of Egypt. He knew them in the dry and barren wilderneſſe, and filled them there, as if they had been already in the moſt fruitfull Land of Canaan. Thus Lyra, but Gualter better, when they were in the Wilderneſſe, I acknowledged them for my people in my providing ſo miraculouſly for them 40. yeares together, and when they were come into Canaan, they were filled as in a fruitfull paſture a Beaſt is fed and filled. But what followed? they lifted up themſelves in pride againſt me, and as forgetting all this turned to other Gods.

V. 7. I will be as a Lion unto them, of which ſee before *ch.*5.14. only it is here further added, as a Leopard, and v. 8. as a Bear, ſhewing their divers wayes of deſtruction to come without any mercy with all cruelty by the Aſſyrians.

V. 9. O Iſrael, thou haſt deſtroyed thy ſelfe, but in me is thy help. v.10. I will be thy King, where is any other that may ſave thee? that is, thy own ſins have brought this horrible deſtruction upon thee. And as men are deſtroyed temporally, for their ſins, ſo eternally, neither can the periſhing of any be imputed to God as the cauſe thereof. Jam.1.14. Every man ſinneth when he is drawn away by his own concupiſcence, and ſin perfected, bringeth forth death. If we would hearken to God and cleave to him in faith and obedience, we ſhould have help and be ſaved from miſery here and hereafter.

Then having thus laid open the caſe of them that periſh or that be ſaved, he reflecteth upon that which they had done of old, 1 Sam. 8. wherein lay the beginning of all their miſery, viz. their importunate asking a King to be ſet over them, when as the Lord there ſaid, he was their King, and by judges raiſed up from time to time ſaved them from their enemies. But they not being content with this, perſiſted in preferring their own deſires of a King, that might fight for them, as the Kings of other Nations, and ſave them. Therefore he bids them look about them and ſee if there were any in all their Cities that could ſave them, any Judge of their own deſiring, which is meant in ſaying, and thy Judges of whom thou ſaidſt, give me a King, for he that is King is Judge, all other Judges deriving their power from him, and acting it only under him, ſo that in asking a King, they are ſaid to ask a King and Princes in the next words, who might be aſſiſtant to him in ruling the land and fighting againſt the enemy. Now ſaith he, in effect, ye have both him and them, ſee what they are able to doe for you when the Aſſyrians ſhall come, being brought by me, as Lions or Beares to tear you in pieces. Surely they ſhall be able to doe nothing, for although at their importunity I gave them a King, yet it was in wrath, and V. 11. Lyra. 2 King. 17. Gualter. accordingly I will take him away, as followeth *v.*11. where the preter tenſe I took him away, is put for the future, for as Saul their firſt King was given them in diſpleaſure, ſo Hoſea their laſt was taken away in wrath by the Aſſyrian King. And in ſpeaking thus he intimateth that their Kings were ſo far from ſaving them, as that they were corrupted and conſequently deſtroyed by them, firſt by civill wars made through an ambitious deſire of reigning, and laſtly by Hoſea his perfidy towards the King of Aſſyria, which brought him againſt Iſrael, and ſo they utterly periſh.

V. 12. The iniquity of Ephraim is bound up, his ſin is hid: In ſaying thus, he alludeth to the manner of men, who when they will revenge wrongs done unto them, for a time conceal them, but for a remembrance they write them down and put them in a book which they keep faſt under lock and key; but when they ſee their time, they are revenged to the full. Or it may have reference to their juſtifying themſelves, which was partly touched upon ch. 12. 8. ſo did they hide and bind up, as it were, the moſt abominable under a pretext of righteous dealing towards men, and piety towards God.

V.13. For they ſhould not lye long in the place of the breaking forth of children, Vulg. he ſhall not ſtand in the contrition of children, expounded by Lyra, when his children ſhall be daſhed in pieces by the Aſſyrians, there will be no ſtanding for him any longer, but his ruine ſhall then come, and for this maketh v.16. their infants ſhall be daſht in pieces and they ſhall be ſlain by the ſword, Hebr. becauſe the time will not ſtand in the breaking forth of children, and the plain meaning ſeemeth to be, all the verſe being taken together, ſorrows ſhall come upon him as upon a woman in travell, he is a fooliſh ſon, and this argueth his folly, that he knoweth not that when children are come to the birth, the time of their breaking forth will not ſtay; ſo when the ſorrows threatned come upon Ephraim, a farre divers iſſue ſhall break forth, neither can it be ſtayed any longer, and that will be the deſtruction both of men and children, as v.16. and this he like a fool knoweth not, neither will know by all the admonitions of the Prophets, to turn from his ſins, that this may be prevented. Calvin rendring it, becauſe he ſhould not in the time ſtand in the breach of children, ſaith, that the meaning is, his folly appeareth hereby, that he doth like a woman in travell of child-birth, that ſtandeth and holdeth in her breath, whereby the coming forth of the child is hindered, and ſo both ſhe and her child are indangered to periſh. For in like manner Ephraim fooliſhly held in his breath as it were, not ſeeking to God by repentance and prayer in due time, and ſo periſhed without remedy.

I will ranſome them from the power of the grave, I will redeem them from death: Here ſaith Lyra, after threatning of judgments followeth a propheſie of comfort by Chriſt to all the faithfull both of the Iſraelites and the Gentiles: ſo that as in the former part of the chapter mercies paſt were recorded, ſo here mercies to come. I, that is, the Meſſiah, by laying down mine own life and ſuffering death will ranſome thee from death: for thus it is applyed, 1 *Cor.*15.54. comfort is hid from mine eyes, this is ſpoken by the faithfull ſoul, becauſe whilſt we live in this world, no man knoweth whether he be beloved or hated. But it is at the pleaſure of our Lord Jeſus to give to every one his portion, as is ſaid in the next words, he ſhall divide amongſt brethren, he ſhall bring a burning wind aſcending from the deſert, &c. that is, as he ſhall ſave ſome, ſo he ſhall burn others in hell fire for ever, at what time he ſhall burn the heavens, &c. that is, all worldly things, 2 *Pet.*3.10. thus Lyra: But others underſtand this, as ſpoken to ſhew what the Lord would have done for them, if their ſins had not hindred it, reading the words, I would have ranſomed them from the grave, &c. not denying yet, but that it is a ground of comfort againſt the terrours of death to the faithfull, in that they ſhall riſe again and live for ever, as it is applyed 1 *Cor.*15.54,55. the proper meaning yet being, that as the power of God is able to do it, ſo he would have delivered them, although dead, as it were, and laid in the grave in mans account, neither would he ever have repented of thus extending his power to ſave them, if they had not ſo greatly provoked him; according to the next words added, repentance ſhall be hid from mine eyes.

V. 14. Lyra.

Matth. 25.

Gualter.

And touching v. 15. though he be fruitfull amongſt his brethren, an eaſt wind ſhal come, &c. that is, but now Ephraim being ſo full of ſin, his being ſo fruitfull of people (as the word Ephraim ſignifieth, for in ſaying thus he alludes to that name) ſhall not profit him, for the Aſſyrian, as an eaſt wind, that ſmiteth and withereth the fruits of the earth, ſhall come and drye up his ſpring, and ſpoil the treaſure of all pleaſant veſſels. And in concluſion, after ſetting this forth by allegory, he breaks out and ſaith plainly, Samaria the chief City of the Kingdom of Iſrael being put for all the Kingdom, ſhall be deſtroyed, they ſhall be ſlain by the ſword, and their children daſhed in pieces, &c. thus Gualter, but Junius, if Iſrael would turn I will do thus, and he ſaith it is a moſt evident place for the reſurrection to come.

V. 15.

Junius

And the next words he rendreth, Ephraim ſhall fructifie amongſt his brethren, expounding theſe following of the Eaſt wind drying up their fountains, as ſpoken by way of conceſſion, as if he had ſaid, Be it ſo, that I deal thus by him, yet I can make him to reflouriſh again. Calvin differeth little from Gualter,

Calvin.

ter, but that he will not have this taken as a ground of the reſurrection of the dead to come, and he rendreth the next words indifferently, repentance, or conſolation is bidden from mine eyes, for if it bee rendred conſolation, ſaith he, it is all one, the meaning being, I cannot ſpeake any comfort to Ephraim, although I would willingly doe it, or notwithſtanding that which I have ſaid, his ſinnes are ſo great, that without repenting I will certainly bring upon him the judgement, and hee ſhall be fruitfull indeed, according to Jacobs propheticall Bleſſing, but all ſhall be deſtroyed againe as by a piercing ſtrong Eaſt winde, and Samaria it ſelfe alſo in moſt cruell manner, no age or ſexe being ſpared.

Of theſe Expoſitions I know not whether to preferre, but incline rather to that of Lyra, that this is a Propheſie of the benefit by our redemption through Chriſt, of riſing againe to everlaſting life. Onely whereas he expoundeth, conſolation is bidde from mine eyes, as the voice of the faithfull living yet in this world, and their being ignorant of their future felicity, it cannot be ſo meant. For although by outward things a man cannot know whether he be beloved or hated, yet the faithfull know 1 Joh.3.3. that they are the ſonnes of God, and ſhall bee bleſſed with the beatificall viſion of him, and knowledge is often put for faith. In ſaying then conſolation is bidde, he meaneth by the dead's lying long in the grave it doth not appear, that the faithfull ſhall afterwards come to this happineſſe, we ſee nothing with our eyes, whereby to know it, or referre it to Chriſt, and the ſenſe is, in my dying to redeeme from death all comfort was hid from mee.

For the next words, He ſhall divide, by ours rendred, he ſhall fructifie amongſt his brethren: the Vulg. is beſt, for although פרח ſignifieth to fructifie, yet פרא the word here uſed doth not, but a wild Aſſe, which divideth it ſelf from other Beaſts, from whence a Verb coming may well ſignifie to divide, and it is בין אחים not amongſt, but between brethren, at large, and not his brethren; therefore it may well be applyed to Chriſt ſet forth by הוא he, not Ephraim, Chriſt ſhall at the Reſurrection divide betwixt brethren, ſome, that is, ſuch as have done good, being received to life; others, that have done evill, adjudged to death: or becauſe brethren commonly ſets forth the faithfull, the ſenſe may be, hee ſhall diſtribute the benefits of Redemption amongſt them, that which followeth of the eaſt wind being a returning again to his former theam of threatning Iſrael.

For the 16. verſe which may not ſeem to agree with this Expoſition, Hebr. it belongeth not to this, but to the beginning of the next Chapter, ſo likewiſe in Vulg. Lat. and therefore cohereth not with this, but the Prophet having done with his Propheſie of comfort by Chriſt to the faithfull, yet not being ſilent touching the wicked even at the end of the world, and their periſhing by fire now chap.14.1. made by ours v. 16. returneth to threatning, againſt the kingdom of Iſrael again for their wickedneſſe.

CHAP. XIV.

V. 1. O Iſrael return to the Lord, for thou haſt falne by thine iniquity: Having in the laſt verſe chap. 13. which indeed is the firſt of this, threatned Iſrael to the uttermoſt, now to ſhew what is the end of all Gods threatnings, he exhorteth to repentance, as whereby alone, ſuch terrible judgment might be turned away, or being ſuffered, improved to the good of the ſoul.

V. 2. Take words unto you, and ſay, Take away all iniquity: Here is a plaine place

Note. place for a Set Forme of Prayer to be uſed in publicke, as alſo Joel 2. Numbers 6. Wherefore they that ſtand for conceived Prayer onely, are oppoſite to the Prophet, who biddeth Take words with you; Yea, to God, and to Chriſt himſelfe, Matthew 6. Luke 11. which wiſe men ſeeing into, and for good reaſon rendred by Calvin and others, have in all times and ages framed and uſed Liturgies from the beginning of the Goſpell. For the words which the Prophet bids them take, are not left to their owne diſcretion, but ſet downe by him; neither doth he in thus ſaying ſtirre them up to uſe words onely, that is, words uttered with the mouth, and not with the heart, for this is condemned Eſa. 29. 13. but words comming from an heart broaken for ſinne: ſo will wee render the calves of our lippes, that is, give thee praiſe, which is all that wee are able to doe; it is a Metaphor taken from Sacrificing Bullocks and Calves, intimating that praiſing God from the heart for his benefits is the beſt kinde of Sacrifice, as is alſo ſhewed Pſalm 50.

V. 3. Aſhur ſhall not ſave us, wee will not ride upon Horſes, &c. Here implicitly they are taught to make confeſſion of their ſinnes, and a profeſſion not to live in them any more: for wherein lay their greateſt ſinnes, but in ſeeking to the Aſſyrians, and not truſting in God and worſhiping Images, the worke of their owne hands, and who ſo would obtain pardon for his ſinnes muſt confeſſe and forſake them, Proverbs 28. 12.

V. 4. I will heale their back-ſlidings, I will love them freely: No ſooner can the faithfull pray to have their ſinnes forgiven them, but God is in Chriſt reconciled unto them, not for any thing in them, but freely out of his mercy in Chriſt, provided that they doe not onely pray, but alſo leave their ſinnes, as they are here taught to do.

V. 5. Lyra. For that this free love is in Chriſt the next words doe ſhew, I will be as the dew to Iſrael, he ſhall grow as the Lilly, and caſt forth his roots as Lebanus: For to the dew is Chriſt alſo compared, Pſalme 110. 3. becauſe as no man ſeeth the falling of the dew in the night, ſo the Sonne of God came inſenſibly into the wombe of the virgin Mary, ſo Lyra, whereunto wee may adde, that as the dew falling makes the graſſe to grow, ſo Chriſt coming into the heart by faith makes grace to grow in us, ſomething like to this, ſee Eſay 45. 8. And for this of making us grow he is ſpecially compared to the dew, and ſometime to raine coming down upon the mown graſſe.

Cant.2. Gualter. And it is to be noted, that he ſaith, Iſrael ſhall grow as the Lilly, which is moſt white and faire, and therefore the beauty of a Lilly is by Chriſt preferred before the glory of Solomon, to ſhew that the faithfull are not blacke or foule by filthy ſinne, but faire and white by holineſſe, as is alſo ſaid Pſalme 110. 31. and therefore the Church is ſet forth by a Lilly or by him that is compared to a Lilly. Here Chriſt may bee underſtood for his ſpotleſſe purity. And hee ſpreads his rootes as Lebanus, that huge and ſtrong Mountaine, that cannot bee moved, when hee makes his faith to take ſuch rooting in the world farre and wide, that it cannot be rooted up againe, as he promiſeth Matthew 16. 16. Gualter ſaith, that ſome expound it of Iſrael returning out of the Babyloniſh captivity, but he extendeth it to the time of Chriſt.

V. 6. Here the increaſe and excellency of Chriſt in his faithfull people increaſing and giving an odoriferous ſmell by the graces of his Spirit is further amplified by branches ſpreading, and the olive trees beauty and the ſmell of Lebanon, according to which it is ſaid, 2 Corinth. 2. 14. Wee are a ſweet ſmelling ſavour, &c.

V. 7. They ſhall dwell under his ſhadow that returne: this further confirmeth it to bee ſpoken of Chriſt, hee ſhall grow as a Lilly and ſpread his branches: forſomuch as they that turne from Idols to him ſhall bee under his protection, and revive as the corne and vine, at the falling of this bleſſed dew: for to corne ſowne are the hearers of the Word compared, Mat. 13. and to a Vines branches, Joh. 15.1.

V. 8. I have heard and obſerved him, I am like a greene Firre tree, from mee is thy fruit found; that is, him that turneth God will make like a greene tree never withering, or will be ſuch in him, for it is through God that wee are greene in grace and beare fruit. Neither are wee able to doit of our ſelves, as is alſo taught, Joh. 15.

V. 9. Here hee concludeth with ſtirring up to the underſtanding and beleeving of the myſteries of the Goſpell, as foreſeeing by the Spirit, that few would, but the wicked that would not ſhould fall even hereby into everlaſting condemnation according to that, hee which beleeveth not is damned, yea, although they beleeve, but yet walke in the darkneſſe of ſinne, according to that, This is the condemnation of the world, that light is came, &c. Marc.16.16. Joh.3.19.

BEcauſe Joel ſaith not at what time he propheſied, but yet he is placed next to Hoſea, Jerome ſaith, that he propheſied in the reign of the ſame Kings, and as Hoſea was ſent to Iſrael, ſo Joel to the Kingdome of Judah. Others, ſaith Calvin, conjecture that he propheſied in the dayes of Joram, when there was a great famine, or of Manaſſeh, but he followeth the former. R. Salomon ſaith, that it was in the time of Joram, when there was a great famine continuing ſeven years, which Eliſhah foretold, 2 King. 8. and Joel here deſcribeth. This Lyra following holdeth both that he propheſied in Jorams time who was King of Iſrael, and to that Kingdome. But I have already reſolved in my Preface to Hoſea, that he was ſent to Judah, chap. 2. 1. being a ſpeciall confirmation hereof, where it is ſaid, Blow the Trumpet in Zion, &c. Yet becauſe the famine was not onely in the Kingdome of Judah, but all over the land, it is to be thought, that he ſpake to them all, that in all parts they might be brought to repentance.

CHAP. I.

V. 1. THE Prophet having told of his deſcent, and whoſe ſon he was, verſ. 2, 3.
V. 2, 3. he ſtirreth up old and young to diligent attention, and to publiſh what
V. 4. he was about to ſay to their poſterity. Then verſ. 4. he ſaith, what the palmer-worm hath left, the Locuſt hath eaten, what the Locuſt hath left, the Canker-worm, and what the Canker-worm hath left, the Caterpillar. Vulg. Erucha, Locuſta, Bruchus, Ærugo, and Lyra ſaith, that Bruchus is a young Locuſt, yet without wings, but when the wings be grown it is a Locuſt. Theſe are al deſtroyers of the fruits of the earth, as the Locuſts in Egypt are ſet forth to be, but the laſt beſt rendered erugo, the mildew, which makes corn, when it is grown up, to waſt and come to little or nothing, whereas this is ſpoken of as a judgement, the like to which had never been before, and the exordium or entrance to it is ſuch to ſtirre up to hear and record, it is by ſome thought, that this is not to be underſtood according to the letter, but that under theſe deſtroying creatures men are repreſented, viz. the four Monarchies of the world, by whom the Jews ſuffered grievous things, till that at the laſt they were utterly deſtroyed, the Aſſyrian, Babylonian, Grecian, and Roman. Some yet that underſtand it likewiſe make the Aſſyrian and Babylonian 1. the Mede and Perſian 2. the Grecian 3. the Roman 4. and ſome will have the foure times of the Babylonians or Caldeans coming againſt the Jews meant, who if any thing were left, the firſt conſumed the next, and if not the third and the fourth. The firſt time Dan. 1. was when Nebuchadnezzar came againſt Jeruſalem in Jehoiakims time, and car-2 King. 24. ryed away the pretious veſſels of the Lords houſe. 2. When hee carryed Je-2 King. 25. hoiakin away priſoner. 3. When in the days of Zedekiah he tooke Jeruſalem. 4. When Nebuzaradan his ſteward, came and burnt the houſe of the Lord and the Kings, &c. For my part I ſee ſo much for this underſtanding, and ſo little for the literall, that I hold it the beſt. For immediately after this threatned, calling upon the drunkards to awake, Verſ.5, he ſaith verſ.6. a Nation ſhall come up upon my land, which makes it plain, that he meant not the very Locuſts,&c. but men deſtroying like Locuſts and Caterpillars, &c. For any thing, that may be ſaid for the underſtanding of it according to the letter, it is onely conjecturall. For ask them that are for it, when Joel threatned this, or ſpake of it being before done: and they anſwer, in the time of Joram, 2 *King.*8. But there a famine is onely threatned, and by Eliſha, not by Joel, or by ſuch hurtfull creatures. Moreover if any ſuch ſtupendious judgement had come upon the land, it ſhould ſomewhere have been related in the Sacred Hiſtory with ſuch expreſſions as be here, being ſo remarkable as well as the famine in Ahabs time with the drought of three yeares and ſix Lyra. monethes cauſing it: And if it ſhall be ſaid, as Lyra ſaith indeed, Eliſha foretold it, and Joel coming after onely mentioneth it, how then did Joel in thus ſaying propheſie? ſeeing to relate and to urge a thing done to move to repentance is no propheſying, as the Prophets of old propheſied, for that was a ſpeaking before of things to be done afterwards, and yet as if they had been already done in the perfect ſenſe, as Joel doth here. Laſtly, it is not unuſuall with the Prophets to ſet forth men overcoming and deſtroying by beaſts and fowls, as Lyons, Goats, Rams and Eagles, and therefore ſuch may well be ſet forth by Locuſts and Caterpillars alſo, yea Revel. 9.3, ſuch are ſet forth by Locuſts coming out of the ſmoak of the bottomeleſſe pit. But for the men hereby ſet forth, they were either the four Monarchs firſt named, there being no reaſon, that the Perſian ſhould be counted one, who was rather a great friend to the Jews, but all the other deſtroying enemies: or the Caldees coming four times againſt them, or thoſe four, wherewith it is 2 King. 24. 2. ſaid, that God puniſhed them in the dayes of Jehoiakim, viz. Caldeans, Syrians, Moabites and Ammonites. Some there are, that draw it to four times of deſtruction by the Romans. 1. In the time of the Roman Governour Sabinus, of which Joſeph. lib. 2. *de bello Judaico c.*2. 3. 2. Of Felix by divers tumults, ch.12. 3. In the time of Albinus and Florus, when divers of their Cities were deſtroyed, chap. 13, 14,15. 4. In the dayes of Titus when Jeruſalem was deſtroyed utterly. Some to four ſorts of enemies waſting the Church, Jews, Gentiles, Hereticks and Antichriſt. But forſomuch as the Prophets of the Old Teſtament, propheſied not of particular events, but only till the coming of Chriſt, I reſt in the former; yet allegorically ſaith the gloſſe well, by theſe four are ſet forth, Luſt, Gluttony, Vain glory and Wrath, which are the deſtruction of ſouls.

V. 6. A Nation is come up upon my land ſtrong and without number, that is, becauſe this is threatned againſt Judah, the Caldeans and their adherents, as was ſaid before.

V. 7. He hath made my vine bare, and laid my figtree waſt. Where by Vine the Church of the Jews is meant, Eſai. 5. 1. and by figtree alſo, Luk. 13. 6. the branches thereof are made white, that is, by being withered, for branches of trees being barked and withered looke white, and hereby it ſet forth the utter deſolation of Judah.

Lament like a Virgin girded with ſackcloth for the husband of her youth. Having V. 8. ſhewed the deſtroying judgements to come, now he ſtirreth up Judah to lamentation, as having ſo great cauſe of ſorrow, as a Virgin new marryed hath, that loſeth her husband, before that ſhee hath any time of injoying his love, which muſt needs be ſorrow in the higheſt degree; for ſo that Note.

comfort of protection and providence from him, being left to the will of her enemies.

The meat-offering and drink-offering are cut off from the houſe of the Lord, the Prieſts V. 9. the Lords miniſters mourn. After lamentation foretold in generall, now hee cometh to particulars, 1. ſhewing what cauſe the Prieſts ſhould have to mourn for the offerings being cut off through the deſolation to which the diligent and true teaching, and being exemplary in their lives to keep the Church in due obedience to God and to his Laws, and not for fear or flattery to corrupt the truth of God in any thing, or to ſooth up men in their ſins; for if they doe, they may for a time finde the more favour amongſt carnall men, but the time ſhall come, wherein they ſhall have cauſe of extream ſorrow; Let them be, whom they flatter, of what eminency ſoever they may be in this world; yea they ſhall ſuffer moſt, as the cauſe of the Churches ruine, over which they are ſet.

The field is waſted, &c. This is added to ſhew, that offerings of all ſorts V. 10.
muſt needs now ceaſe, becauſe corn, and wine, and oil, of which they conſiſted, by the enemies waſting and ſpoiling the land failed, for which having ſpoken of the lands and fields being waſted, he ſaith, for further explication, the corn is waſted, the new wine is dryed up, the oil languiſheth. Verſ. 11. 12. He amplifieth V. 11,12. this judgement further, by calling upon husbandmen, and Vine-dreſſers to mourn now as confounded for the fruits of their labours being all deſtroyed, as wheat and barley, and the vine, yea all other fruitfull trees, whereupon they lived, the fig tree, pomgranate, palm tree, apple tree, &c. for when forein enemies come in and prevail, all are ſoon waſted and brought to nothing, and ſo there is no more joy to the ſons of men, that is, the whole body of the people, and not ſome onely that till the ground, are in a very evill caſe.

Gird your ſelves, and lament ye Prieſts, &c. Here becauſe the Prieſts were men of V. 13.

Gods wrath coming for ſin, into which moſt probably the people fell, chiefly through their default, he calleth again upon them in more words to mourn, and to make expreſſions of ſorrow by girding with ſackcloth, crying and but when they are added to penitent prayer, for which cauſe he biddeth them with all to cry to the Lord together with the whole Congregation aſſembled to the houſe of the Lord, that all joining together in humiliation and prayer the Lords compaſſion might be the more moved; and old men in particular are firſt called upon, the Elders or Magiſtrates being meant, to intimate that they ſhould be forwardeſt and leaders to others, as through whoſe default ſo much ſin was committed, in that they either went before the people in an evill example of life, or were not ſo carefull to uſe their power to ſuppreſſe ſin.

with all faithfulneſſe, and in caſe of judgements coming to bewail them moſt of all others, as who have been by ſome thing amiſſe either in their life or teaching many of them a cauſe thereof above others. 2. Magiſtrates to doe likewiſe for the like reaſons, for that they are more guilty as Magiſtrates, then the common people. 3. To teach faſting and prayer to be the moſt effectuall means againſt deſtroying judgements; unto which not onely Miniſters and Magiſtrates, but alſo all the people muſt be gathered together, private faſtings not being the faſtings, that will then prevail. 4. To keep ſuch times of humiliation rightly, the Miniſters and people of leſſer Congregations are not to aſſemble together apart, each Village or Hamblet by it ſelf, but they are all about to goe to ſome great houſe of the Lord, there together the more forcibly to move him to mercy. 5. In this holy work the Miniſters are to be the beginners of all others, for the Prieſts muſt call the Aſſembly, and when Kings doe it, it is not to be doubted, but that ſome good Jehoiadah firſt moved them ſo to doe. 6. In a day of humiliation there is no place for coſtly apparell, but the pooreſt raiment is beſt, and no fear of hypocriſie in weeping in publick or other outward expreſſions; but hereby all muſt labour to prevaile with God, and they that expreſſe not their griefe ſome way now, keep not a time of humiliation aright, and therefore ſhall never do good of it.

V. 17. Lyra. The ſeed is rotten under the clods, the garners are laid deſolate. Vulg. Latine, the beaſts have rotted in their dung, that is, ſaith Lyra, for want of ſtraw through the barrenneſſe of the ground wherewith they might be littered. But herein the Vulgar goeth quite from the Hebrew, which is as in the New Translation; yet Ribera ſtands for that, ſaying, that פרדה ſignifieth mula or jumentum alſo as well as ſeed; but what then ſhall we ſay to the clods here ſpoken of, under which it is ſaid to be rotten, not in dung? Moreover he ſpake not before of beaſts but of corn, that ſhould fail, and now he ſheweth how it ſhall rot in the field, as it were under the clods, not that it ſhould doe ſo indeed: for unleſſe it cometh up firſt, how ſhould the locuſt, and mildew before ſpoken of waſt it? Therefore the meaning is, that by reaſon of the enemies waſting all, the land ſhould ly after their ploughing and ſowing, as if there had been a great drought of long continuance, by reaſon whereof the ſeed lyeth under the clods, till is is rotten.

V. 18. How doe the beaſts groan, the heards of cattell are perplexed, becauſe they have no paſture: That is, by reaſon of famine through the coming of the Caldeans, of which ſee 2 King. 25. For all things being by them waſted, and the fields by V. 19. their beaſts, what could remain for thoſe of the land? Verſ. 19. The fire hath devoured the paſtures of the wilderneſſe, and the flame hath burnt all the trees of the field; here the Prophet after an allegoricall expreſſion of the judgment by the enemy, cometh to declare plainly, what he meant by all this, viz. the fire and ſword of the Caldees deſtroying houſes ſtanding in all parts of the land of Judea, and the fruit trees, Vines, Fig-trees, Pomgranates, &c. growing in many places, which yeelded a great part of their living, but now after this deſtruction made in the land, none, whereby they were famiſhed.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. IN this chapter the Lord appointeth Joel to ſound an Alarum to the war before threatned under the ſimilitude of locuſts, palmer-worms, &c. making V. 2. it ſtill more plain, that he meant not thoſe vermines according to the letter, but terrible enemies, touching whom it here followeth, verſ. 2. in more words, but to the ſame effect with chap. 1. 6. A day of darkneſſe and gloomineſſe, a day of thick darkneſſe, &c. a great people and ſtrong, there hath not ever beene the like. By blowing the Trumpet in Zion, Expoſitours generally underſtand, to call the Congregation to faſting and prayer: but forſomuch, as it is not onely ſaid, blow yee the Trumpet, but alſo ſound an Alarum; and immediately the coming in of an Army of enemies is ſpoken of: and for calling the Congregation together to faſting and prayer, he ſpeaks plainly, chap. 1. 14. Sanctifie a Faſt, call call a ſolemn Aſſembly, and here verſ. 12. Turn to me with faſting and weeping, I rather take it with Gualter to be ſpoken, for the terrifying of the ſinners in Zion the more, as if the enemies were even now come, to give warning againſt Gualter. whom he would have them in Zion to ſound an Alarum, that not doubting now any longer of the truth of this threatning they might be all made, whileſt they had time, to tremble and ſorrow to repentance, that this great judgement might be averted, being otherwiſe even at the doores. But how is it ſaid, there hath not been the like before it, nor ſhall be after it for many generations? for whether it be underſtood of the Aſſyrians, as Calvin doth take it, although erroneouſly (becauſe they were the enemies of Zion, of whom he ſpeaks here, not of Samaria) or the Caldees as Jerome, the Romans that came after, were rather more rather terrible. Gloſ. Ord. taking the Aſſyrians and Caldees, for one Kingdome, ſtill called Aſſyrian oft-times till the Perſian ſet up, ſaith generation and generation, Gloſ. Ord. for ſo both the Hebrew and Vulg. Latine have it, there was not the like till Alexander, who is meant by the firſt words, to the years of generation, and the Romans meant by the next and generation; Lyra taking all the Lyra.

Monarchies to be meant, which were foure, as was before ſaid, ſet forth by the foure deſtroyers named chap. 1. ſaith, that of all theſe together it is here ſpoken, as of a great and terrible people, the like unto which never was before, neither ſhall be throughout all generations to come. Ribera Ribera. ſaith, there was not the like in many generations, but then there was in the Romans. But for ſo much as דור דדור is put for ever; I rather ſubſcribe to Lyra, as ſeeing no reaſon, but as he uſed four ſimilitudes to ſet forth all theſe peoples, ſo now coming more properly to ſpeak of them, he might join them all together as one, the Aſſyrian, Caldean, Grecian and Roman, although proving ſuch deſtroyers at ſeveral times, one long after another, & the time be ſet forth by the name of a day, becauſe a day and a time in the Scripture phraſe is all one, and oft by a day a long tract of time is meant, wherein like things are in doing.
And yet I diſlike not that of the Ord. Gloſſe, but reſt indifferent. For the darkneſſe and gloomineſſe here ſpoken of, times of great calamities are wont commonly to be ſo called, as the morning ſpread upon the mountaines, here may ſeem to be a contradiction, darkneſſe and yet a morning ſpread, which is light, but the time is not compared to the morning for the light, but for the early coming of this people, as the morning light is ſoon ſeen upon the mountaines, when the valleys are yet without light, ſo that he would hereby intimate the nearneſſe of this judgement, that they might not put this evill day far off, but be affected with it, as if to come next morning, ſo ſoon as day ſhould appear upon the tops of the mountaines. And thus, although it be long before the day Note. of judgement cometh, we are bidden to make account of it, as being near at hand, and likewiſe ought we to doe for our particular judgement dayes, of death or of miſeries here threatned for our ſins.

A fire devoureth before them, &c. Here the enemies are ſo diverſly ſet forth, V. 3. that which way ſoever they that were threatned might think to eſcape, might them, he ſaith, they were horſemen, and ſo could run more ſwiftly. If that V. 5. they would keep together in rankes ſo cloſe, that they ſhould not be able to break in amongſt them, he ſaith, that they ſhould come in ratling chariots down the mountaines, againſt which, what foot can ſtand? If they ſhall think, V. 6. but our wals ſhall keep them out, he ſaith, they ſhall run up their wals, and not ſtumble or fall, or be diſordered. If they ſhall think, but when they doe ſo we will ſhoot at them, and with caſting darts wound them, he ſaith, although they fall upon the ſword, they ſhall not be wounded. If they ſhall think; but then we will goe up into the higheſt rooms of our houſes, he V. 9. ſaith, that they ſhall climb up into them and enter at the windowes. But if enemies upon earth, he ſaith, the heavens ſhall tremble, the Sun and Moon ſhall be dark, and the ſtars ſhall with draw their light, that is, there ſhall neither be greater nor leſſer comfort from thence, no not ſo much as the light of a ſtar. And V. 11. if yee would know the cauſe why all theſe things ſhall thus be, verſ. 11. the Lord ſhall utter his voice before his army, his campe is very great; that is, ye ſhall not then have to doe with men, but with God, at whoſe appointment they ſhall come, and accompanyed with his power, ſo that they ſhall be altogether Note. unreſiſtible. Wherefore when God is provoked by our ſins, all imaginations of being holpen againſt his wrath ſhall be vain, onely by repentance at the hearing of theſe things ſuch terrible judgements may be averted, for V. 12. which he exhorteth, verſ. 12. Turn yee unto me with all your heart, with faſting, weeping V. 14. and mourning, verſ. 14. Who knoweth, if he will return and repent and leave us a bleſſing behind him, even a meat-offering and a drink-offering, this is ſpoken, becauſe Prophets themſelves, although ſpeaking from God, when they denounce judgments, know certainly, that it is his will, that they ſhould thus threaten, yet they know not, how the hearts of the hearers may be moved to repentance, as Jonah did not, when he threatned Nineveh, after which they repenting, God is ſaid to have repented and did it not. In what ſenſe God is ſaid to repent, ſee Gen. 6. 1 Sam. 15. and leave a bleſſing, becauſe he had before ſaid, verſ. 3. Behind them as a barren wilderneſſe, now contrariwiſe upon their turning he ſpeakes of hope, that it ſhall not be ſo, but that the land ſhall be preſerved, and be fruitfull.

And becauſe of chap. 1. 9. he had ſaid that the meat-offering and drink-offering were taken away, now he ſpeaks of a bleſſing in this reſpect, that they ſhould not onely have to ſuſtain themſelves, but alſo to offer to the Lord, whereby his favour towards them might be further procured, as it is ſaid of Gen. 5. Noah that he offered a ſacrifice, and God ſmelt a ſavour of reſt, and reſolved, not to curſe the earth any more for mans ſake, and by ſacrifice atonements were made.

V. 15. He reneweth his exhortation to faſting and prayer made, chap. 1. 14. onely V. 16. he varyeth a little, for Elders and all the Congregation there, naming here the people alſo, the children and thoſe that ſuck the breaſts, the bridegroome and the bride, and whereas chap. 1. 13. he onely biddeth the Prieſts to put on ſack cloth, to lament and howl, and to lye ſo all night, and verſ. 14, 15. to cry to the Lord, alas for the V. 17. day, &c. here he ſaith, Let them weep between the porch and Altar, Let them ſay, Spare thy people O Lord, &c. Junius conceiveth, that the words of theſe two chapters were uttered as it were in two ſermons, one upon one Sabbath day, and the other upon another, in both they being exhorted to the ſame things, although in this more at large; and hee extends his exhortation to ſucklings, becauſe Gloſ. Ord. the leaſt childe is a ſinner by originall ſin, and to the new marryed, becauſe times of publick calamities are not times of mutuall imbracings, but of ſorrow to all. Between the porch and Altar; that is, the Altar of burnt offerings, where ſucrifice were offered dayly, and it ſtood in the Court, that of incenſe, V. 18. within the Temple. Verſ. 18, 19, 20. It being done as they were exhorted, the Lord promiſeth them all good, and for their enemies, the Caldee, called the Northern Army, he ſaith, that he would remove them far off, and drive them into a land barren and deſolate, his face towards the Eaſt Sea, and his hinder parts Lyra. toward the uttermoſt ſea, &c. which, as Lyra ſaid, is by R. Solomon expounded of the Army of Locuſts, &c. before ſpoken of chap. 1. as if he had ſaid, if upon their repentance, the Prieſts praying ſhall by a ſtrong winde be carryed away to the dead Sea, which lay Eaſt from Jeruſalem, as ſometime the locuſts in Egypt were carryed away by a ſtrong winde. And as multitudes of creatures being dead, a filthy ſtink comes from them: ſo he ſaith, that it ſhould be. But againſt this maketh, that very locuſts were not there meant, but men, and that ſaying, verſ. 19. I will no more make you a reproch among the heathen, and verſ. 20. he hath done great things, or as it is in the Hebrew, he hath magnified himſelfe to doe, being by the pride of his heart carryed on thereunto, which cannot agree to locuſts properly underſtood. Moreover by the Northern Army the Caldees, Lyra. or Aſſyrians are commonly underſtood, as Jer. 1. and therefore Lyra ſaith, that ſome hold Senacherib the proud King of Aſhur to be here meant, who came againſt

againſt Hezekiah: but as he ſaith well, this cannot be, ſeeing he went not into any other but his own land to Nineveh, neither did his army fall towards any Sea but near Jeruſalem, being by the Angell ſo ſmitten, that their bodies were burnt within with fire; and ſo could not ſtink, as being turned to aſhes. Wherein he ſaith well, but in cloſing with R. Solomon in the former, ill, for the reaſons rendred. Calvin and Gualter, who will have the Aſſyrians ſpoken of all the way, ch. 1. ſay that it is ſpoken of Sennacherib, and Jerom is for Sennacherib alſo. Ribera will have Holofernes Captain of Nebuchadnezzar meant, of whom it is written in the book of Judith, that he after his proud carrying of himſelfe was ſlain by her, and then his huge hoſt falling along, as they fled by the Jews purſuing them: But the truth of this hiſtory may well be ſuſpected, becauſe Nebuchadnezzar whoſe Captain Holofernes is ſaid to be, and the Aſſyrian and Babyloniſh Monarchy were at an end before, for chap. 1. it is ſaid, after their return out of captivity, before which Nebuchadnezzar dyed many years.

Ribeara.

It remaineth therefore, that by this Northern army we underſtand the Babyloniſh Empire, which at the coming on of the Median and Perſian was as an army of Locuſts blown away to the Seas; for as theſe lying upon the coaſt all along upon heaps ſtink, ſo the Babylonians being ſlain in very great multitudes in Babylon, and lying unburyed; and although Babylon ſtood in the midſt of waters, and was, whilſt it flouriſhed, very fruitfull, yet the waters being drained away by Cyrus and the people deſtroyed, and none being ſuffered to inhabit there any more, it was turned into a wilderneſſe and deſolation; and for the Babyloniſh King vaunting himſelf, and his intolerable pride, for which all this is threatned againſt him, it is ſo well known, as that I ſhall not need to ſpeak thereof.

These three verſes then together are a Propheſie of more worldly proſperity to the Jews after their grievous ſufferings threatned ch. 1. they being delivered from captivity and their enemies ſlain, by which means their reproach amongſt the Heathen was taken away, they being no longer their captives, but a people planted in their own moſt fruitfull Canaan again, &c. to v. 28. V. 21.
The ſame mercy of God towards the Jews is further amplified, they being bid- V. 22.

times, the trees with the ſmiting of which they were threatned before, ch. 1.

tures, ch. 1. 4. a recompenſe ſhall be made to the full, there being a plenty of V. 25. all things, and whereas they were then put to ſhame and were in reproach amongſt the Heathen, upon which it was touched v. 19. now he promiſeth, V. 26, 27.
that they ſhould no more be aſhamed, either for their poverty or want, even for their enemies proudly domineering over them, becauſe the Lord is in the midſt of them, by his ſtretched out arm ſaving them ſo, that all nations about, ſeeing or hearing of it, ſhould acknowledge that they were in greateſt grace and favour with him, and therefore a moſt honourable people. All this is drawn by Jerom to an allegory, firſt underſtanding the locuſts before ſpoken of properly, which he ſaith came in innumerable multitudes againſt Judea, but the Prieſts praying between the Temple, or Porch and the Altar, they were by a ſtrong wind carryed away into the Seas, where being drowned, they were driven againe to the ſhoares, and then a great ſtench came from them.

Hieron.

Note.

And here he noteth two things, the miraculouſneſſe of their coming out of the North, the coldeſt quarter, whereas they commonly are bred of heat.

2. The imbecillity of theſe creatures, they being ſo tender that with the nipping of a mans finger they are cruſhed in pieces, yet when God will, made ſo ſtrong an army, that whole countries are not able to withſtand them, that man, who is but duſt and aſhes, might learn not to lift up himſelf in pride for his great ſtrength.

Then underſtanding by them the Aſſyrians and Caldeans, and Sennacherib in particular, with his huge hoſt ſlain, as they lay all along towards the dead Sea of Sodom, and the Sea of Egypt. And the myſterie to which he draweth it, becauſe it holdeth not in all things either of theſe wayes, is, that evill ſpirits are hereby ſet forth, waſting all fruits of the godly ſpirit in men, under which judgment they lye, till that by through humiliation they come into grace, and then the early and latter rain of heavenly doctrine makes them to reflouriſh in grace, which bringeth more joy then plenty of graſſe, corne, wine, Eph.3.17. and oil, and coming to this eſtate they are for ever ſartotecti, *God is in the

Before we paſſe from hence, verſ.23. whereas N. Tr. hath it, the former rain moderately, Vulg. Lat. a doctour of righteouſneſſe, and Hebr. it is המורה לצדקה Lyra. a teacher in righteouſneſſe, by a teacher the whole body of teachers that then were, ſaith Lyra, after R. Solomon, being meant, that is, when they returned out of captivity, and I doubt not but Ezra a perfect Scribe and Doctour of the Law then, was here ſpecially meant with the body of Prieſts and Levites joined unto him, and therefore I muſt needs herein approve rather of the Vulg. Lat. as ſeeing no reaſon why our Tranſlatours ſhould goe from it, although the word מורה ſignifieth indifferently, a doctour, or rain, and if ſo it be rendred rain, it is rain in righteouſneſſe, wherein I ſee not any good ſenſe, unleſſe rain be taken for teaching. But underſtand it of a teacher, and then the ſenſe will be very good, being about to ſet forth the bleſſings after their return, he beginneth with the chief concerning the ſouls righteous teachers, and then he proceedeth to thoſe concerning this life; whereas if this be rendred rain, here will be in the ſame verſe a tautologie, and that wherein their bleſſedneſſe chiefly V. 28. consiſted, is paſſed over in ſilence.

And it ſhall come to paſſe afterwards, that I will poure out of my ſpirit upon all fleſh.
That this is a Propheſie of things done under the Goſpel is made plain, Act. 2.
It was moſt notably fulfilled, when the Holy Ghoſt came down upon the Apoſtles in the ſimilitude of cloven tongues of fire, and when Act. 10. Peter preaching to Cornelius and his neighbours, the Holy Ghoſt came downe upon Lyra. them who where Gentiles. By all fleſh therefore Lyra well underſtands men of all Nations, and not of the Jewiſh Nation only, and they upon whom, Ezek.36.16. are called fleſh, becauſe it is ſaid, I will take away the heart of ſtone and give them an Act. 21. heart of fleſh. And your ſons and daughters ſhall Propheſie: for then Philip the Evangeliſt had four daughters, that were Propheteſſes, and of women propheſying as well as men, it is ſpoken 1 *Cor.*11. And women were amongſt the faithfull at the time of Pentecoſt, *Act.*1. and all were filled with the Holy Ghoſt, the meaning is, that both ſexes and all ages ſhould have the ſpirit of God then given them, ſo that it ſhould manifeſtly appear either by ſpeaking with new tongues, or propheſying, or by dreams, or viſions, wherein things concerning the Kingdome of heaven ſhould be revealed unto them, and ſometime concerning other things alſo; as Agabus propheſied of a famine, and of Pauls ſufferings at Jeruſalem, and Paul had a viſion, a man of Macedonia appearing to him, and ſaying come and help us; and a dream wherein he ſaw an Angel of God comforting him in the night, when the ſhip, in which he was, was wrecked, aſſuring him and all his company of coming ſafely to the ſhoar.

V. 30. And I will ſhew wonders in heaven above and in the earth, bloud and fire and pillars of ſmoak: Here, ſaith Lyra, he paſſeth from Chriſts firſt coming to his ſecond, Calvin. before which theſe ſigns ſhall be ſhewed. Calvin having ſpoken of the beginning of the Goſpels going forth, now he proceedeth to ſhew what troubles ſhall accompany it to the end of the world through the malignity of men oppoſing and fighting againſt it, by bloud we may underſtand bloudſhed, by fire, that which commonly accompanieth the ſword, to the burning of houſes, where wars are made; and becauſe fire is not without ſmoak, he ſaith alſo pillars of ſmoak. Such troubles indeed were before the Goſpel, but much more ſince the publiſhing and refuſing it, almoſt all the bloudy warres that have been fought and are fought ſtill, being by reaſon of the Goſpel; either in way of judgment for rejecting it, as againſt the Jewes by the Romans, eſpecially when Jeruſalem was deſtroyed, or Heathens fighting againſt Chriſtians, as the Goths, Vandals and Longobards againſt Italy, the Turks againſt many Chriſtian Princes, or ſuch as are miſ-led by errour againſt the Orthodoxe. And the Lord doth premoniſh his touching ſuch terrible times to come again when he had ſhone moſt upon them by the light of his countenance, that all they which ſhould imbrace the Goſpel might patiently bear them, and not be diſcouraged from following the truth. And hitherto of the ſigns upon earth laſt named, now for thoſe in heaven firſt ſpoken of.

V.31. The Sun ſhall be turned into darkneſſe, and the Moon into bloud, before that terrible day of the Lord cometh: ſee the like Mat. 24.29. and this is done by eclipſes, one moſt notable one of the Sun being at the paſſion of Chriſt, and many more ſince, and when the Moon is in the eclipſe, it looks like bloud. The terrible day of the Lord is the day of judgment by wicked reprobates not to be endured, ſo terrible will it be unto them. Rev.6.16. Before that day the Sun ſhall be darkned by eclipſes, but then it ſhall utterly loſe its light, 2 *Pet.*3.10. for theſe viſible heavens ſhall paſſe away and be no more, and therefore all heavenly lights.

V.32. Whoſoever ſhall call upon the name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved, that is, even in that terrible time there ſhall be ſalvation to ſome, viz. the truly faithfull, who are deſcribed by praying to the Lord, from Mount Sion and Jeruſalem ſhall be deliverance, and in the remnant whom the Lord ſhall call, whereby he meaneth not only amongſt the Jews but alſo the Gentiles, and yet not the community of either ſort, but a remnant, and they are ſuch as the Lord calleth out of the huge multitude both of Jews and Gentiles to beleeve and repent in ſincerity, which is thus ſpoken to meet with the generality of the Jews, who were proud for the priviledges in the fleſh, as being deſcended from Abraham, how wickedly ſoever they lived, as Joh. 8. and Rom. 2. and with falſe Chriſtians, who bearing themſelves upon this, that they are the Catholick Church arrogate therefore generally to themſelves the only right to the Kingdome of heaven, when as indeed that Kingdome is not beſtowed for this, but upon the ſincere worſhippers of God, and they be not the moſt, but a remnant.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. V. 2. Lyra. W*Hen I ſhall at that time bring again the captivity of Judah, &c. I will gather all nations and bring them into the valley of Jehoſhaphat, &c.* that which is here ſaid, is by Lyra underſtood of the day of judgment, of which he ſpake chap.2. it being declared more at large, where and how the Lord will proceed againſt the wicked enemies of his Church at that time. And according to the Letter he ſaith, that he ſhall come down to this valley to judgement, all nations being gathered together, that they may receive the ſentence of condemnation, as they are well worthy for the indignities done to his people, as they are laid to their charge, *v.*3,4,5,6. And the time of turning the captivity of Judah, he takes to be the time of the Jews converſion at the end of the world from Antichriſt, by whom they were formerly miſled. Calvin. Calvin contrariwiſe ſaith, that the judgments of God againſt the enemies of his Church under the Goſpel are here threatned, the Propheſie being extended to the whole time of the Goſpel. And that the turning of the captivity of Judah is named, becauſe

then

then the Lord began this great work, and thereby made a demonſtration of his power to doe for his people in all times and ages to come againſt their moſt potent and malicious enemies. The Hebrew indeed, he ſaith, expound it of their being delivered from the Babyloniſh captivity altogether, when the Caldeans ſet forth by the name of all Nations, becauſe they ruled over all Nations, had their judgement by Darius and Cyrus, and he judgeth it ridiculous to take the valley of Jehoſhaphat properly, and to hold that there the laſt great judgement ſhall be: wherefore he ſaith, that the Valley of Jehoſhaphat is ſpoken of in alluſion to that which was done there againſt an huge multitude of enemies, that came againſt that godly King, they being terribly deſtroyed by ambuſhes of their own, he and his people doing nothing, but after faſting and prayer praiſing God with ſinging, and then the enemies being ſlain, they went into the camp and took the ſpoils, and for this ſpent three dayes in bleſſing God there, whereupon the place was called the valley of Berachah, that is, bleſſing. For they to whom Joel propheſied of deliverance might haply doubt of it, ſeeing the enemies were of ſo great power, they being even all Nations, for all were againſt the Jews, and ſince againſt Chriſtians; but as the Lord then wrought for the deliverance of his people, ſo their mindes might be confirmed, that they ſhould againe from time to time be delivered from all that ſhould riſe up againſt them, and that not onely Jews but alſo Gentiles imbracing the faith. As then Ammonites, Moabites, and Edomites joyned together in a very great company, Jehoſhaphat and his people having no help but in God, yet they were all ſlain, and the people of God miraculouſly delivered: ſo hereby is meant, that Chriſtians ſhould in all countryes be perſecuted, but God will ſtand up for them againſt all enemies, and take care of them as his inheritance, with which whoſoever ſhall dare to meddle, he will ſurely bee avenged upon them, for ſo he ſaith, I will plead with them for my heritage Iſrael. And if we goe to the ſignification of the word Jehoſhaphat, as is ſometimes done, as in Melchiſedeck, Heb.7. it ſignifieth the judgement of the Lord, the ſenſe given will hold very well, no particular place is hereby meant, although the Spirit of God herein points at a place for the moſt memorable fact done there for Gods people, but by the thing done there it is ſhewed to our comfort, that God will always be ready likewiſe to judge and be revenged upon the malicious enemies of his Church, although their power may ſeeme to be ſo great, that we know not what to doe, as Jehoſhaphat ſaid, being full of fear at that time. And to ſhew, that the thing ſpoken of judging them is more reſpected then the name of a place, he ſaith by way of Paranomaſie נשפתי I will judge in the valley of the Lords judgement.

V. 3. They have caſt lots for my people, and given a boy for an harlot, and a girl for wine, After the judgement threatned againſt their enemies, he proceedeth to the ſins laid to their charge, for which firſt, they have ſcattered Iſrael amongſt the heathen, and parted his land, wherein nothing may ſeem to have beene done amiſſe, becauſe God was the authour of Nebuchadnezzars coming againſt Jeruſalem, and Salmanaſars againſt Iſrael, and carrying them away, and placing other inhabitants there, as is plain, 2 King. 17. why then are they threatned for this? Sol. They did it not in obedience to God, and as executioners to him, but maliciouſly and proudly, ſeeking their owne ends, ſo that however God wrought it by them for the chaſtiſement of his people, yet they the agents knew not that, and therefore were worthily adjudged to deſtruction for their cruel deſtroying of Gods people, and injuriouſly invading their inheritance. 2. They took upon them alſo over their perſons ſelling their children like beaſts for a little money, whether they were ſons or daughters, that they might with the price taken for them hire whores, or buy ſtrong drink to make themſelves drunken, which is a fearfull ſin, and is the ſin of thoſe, that with goods taken from the Church, as Glebes, Tithes or Offerings, maintain whores or exceſſe of riot therewith. Some will have by a boy given for an harlot, a beautiull boy proſtituted to mens luſts for gain after the Sodomiticall manner, but becauſe there is the like reaſon of girls added in the next place and boys, I doe rather

V. 4, 5. Calvin. rather with Calvin reſt in the former. 3. He chargeth Tyrus and Zidon in particular with this ſin, and robbing God of his ſilver and gold; which may be conceived, as Calvin hath it, thus to have been done. The Aſſyrians fighting againſt Iſrael, the Tyrians and Zidonians being neer neighbours, haply did help them with proviſion, whileſt they lay there, and for this were together with themſelves made partakers of the prey. And becauſe they had never been provoked by Iſrael to this, but onely their covetouſneſſe put them on to doe ſo, he ſaith, what have ye to doe with me Tyrus and Zidon? and yee have carryed into your Temples, &c. by theſe words noting a further moſt groſſe ſin in them, that they dedicated of the beſt things taken out of the land of Iſrael to their idols, aſcribing virtue thus to ſtocks and ſtones. For the next words, will ye render me a recompence? the meaning is, will ye deal by me, as if ye ought me a revenge, and now will take your opportunity to be revenged upon me? for the Lord counts that which is done to his people to be done to himſelf.

V. 6. Gualter. Note. Yee have alſo ſold the children of Judah and Jeruſalem to the Grecians, that ye might remove them far from their border. Here their ſelling of boys and girls before ſpoken of, verſ. 3. is further amplified by ſhewing, to whom they ſold them, the Grecians being a people far remote in Europe beyond the Sea, and theſe are named in particular, other peoples alſo, that dwelt afar of, being meant, and thus they did to cut off from them all hope of return to their own countrey. And hereby he aggravates their ſin, that they had been no way provoked to it, for the Tyrians and Zidonians were ſometimes confederates with the Jews, in the dayes of David and Solomon, and the Philiſtims here alſo ſpoken of, were brought under by David, and continued Tributaries to them, and ſo were a long time as one people with them, in which time the Lord expected, that they ſhould have been brought to imbrace the true religion alſo. But as the manner of wicked men is in the time of proſperity to live peaceably with and to be friendly towards their neighbours, but in their adverſity, to ſide with their enemies, ſo theſe are here charged to have done, thus Gualter. And this is the higheſt degree of ſinning in any people to take the advantage of their miſery to make a prey of them, and therefore they ſhall be moſt ſeverely puniſhed that doe ſo.

V. 7. I will raiſe them out of the place into which ye have ſold them, and will return your recompence upon your own heads. It may be doubted here, how this was ever verified, for when had the Jews other Nations in their power to make ſale of them as ſlaves? Sol. It was done, when in way of revenge for their wrongs they

V. 8. Note. were ſubdued by the Aſſyrians or Caldees. Then as it is ſaid, verſ. 8. They were ſold into the hands of the children of Judah, and they ſold them to the Sabeans. Thus the wicked enemies of Gods people ſhall ſuffer, as they have made them to ſuffer, God will proceed per legem talionis, as was notably exemplified in the Jews, being by the Romans ſold 30 for a piece of ſilver, as Chriſt had been ſold unto them for 30 pence. And as for the Jews being brought again into their own countrey, this was notably fulfilled in the dayes of Cyrus, wherefore there is no reaſon, why the faithful ſhould in their loweſt ebbe of miſery deſpaire: for enemies may prevail againſt them, and bring them under for their ſins, but ſtay a while and they ſhall have their turn in ſuffering the like, but the faithfull ſhall then be lifted up again.

V. 9. Proclaim this amongſt the Gentiles, prepare war, &c. Here the means of effecting what was before threatned againſt the enemies of Gods people are ſet forth. Other Gentiles ſhall be raiſed up, whom theſe oppreſſours deſpiſed, as being of little ſtrength: even a company exerciſed before in husbandry more then in war, but now at the will of God armed by his power to take revenge upon them.

V. 10. Lyra. For which he ſaith, Beat your plough ſhares into ſpears, and your pruning hookes into ſwords, Let the weak ſay I am ſtrong. This is by Lyra expounded of Antichriſt and his adherents, as being ironically bidden to doe thus, but when they had done all that they could againſt Chriſts Church, they ſhould be brought to judgement in the valley of Jehoſhaphat, as here followeth, v. 12. and to ſhew, that theſe things are ſpoken of the laſt judgement, which ſhall follow

V. 13. follow immediately after the perſecution ſtirred by Antichriſt, ver. 13. he ſaith, V. 14. Put in the ſickle, for the harveſt is ripe, come get ye down, the Preſſe is full; after which he ſaith, multitudes, multitudes in the valley of deciſion, for the day of the Lord is near, the Sun and Moon ſhall be darkened. And to make this good, he ſaith, that the revenge taken upon the Tyrians Zidonians, and Philiſtims before ſpoken of verſ. 8. was taken in the time of the Maccabees, when they obtained many victories over the Captaines of Antiochus, amongſt whom Kendebeus a moſt mighty Captaine was one, who was a maritim man, and Tyrus, Zidon, and Paleſtine were maritim places, and therefore it is probable, that ſome were then taken by the Jews from thoſe parts, and ſold for ſlaves. And the Prophet having thus ſhewed what ſhould be done then, now paſſeth on to ſhew how the enemies of the New Teſtament ſhould be judged, when their ſtrength ſhould ſeem to be greateſt, Calvin. thus Lyra. But Calvin takes this as ſpoken of the Medes and Perſians, a people not accounted of for warriours in times paſt amongſt the Aſſyrians or Caldees, but when God will, it is ſhewed here, that they ſhould be valiant to execute his will upon the preſent enemies of the Jews, amongſt whom the Tyrians, Zidonians, and Philiſtims were moſt noted for their inhumane taking their opportunity to practiſe againſt them undeſervedly, as hath been ſaid. And being thus underſtood, as was before noted, it followes well after the recompence ſpoken of, that ſhould be made, as a declaration of the means whereby other Gentiles ſhall be ſtirred up againſt theſe, and armed and ſtrengthened by God, although they might ſeem too weak to effect ſo great a work, as indeed Cyrus ſeemed, and therefore when he firſt began his ſiege againſt Babylon, hee V. 12. was derided by them, as going about a thing impoſſible to take it. Whereas the next words may ſeem to make againſt this, Let the heathen be wakened and come up to the valley of Jehoſhaphat, expounded by ſome of their being raiſed from death to come thither to judgement, I have before ſhewed, that in ſaying thus, it is onely alluded to the miraculous deſtruction of the Nations gathered together againſt Jehoſhaphat in that place, for ſo they ſhould againe together come to deſtruction, who had ſo notoriouſly wronged the Jews, other heathens being made the inſtruments, as then ſome of one Nation fought againſt another and ſo they were all ſlain.

Thus God ſate to judge the heathen round about, when the Perſians were made inſtruments of the deſtructions of the Babylonians, and the Greci-ans afterward of them, as they had been before the overthrow of the Aſſyri- V. 13. ans. For the next words put in the ſickle, it is true, the cutting down of all the wicked at the day of judgement is ſpoken of by the like phraſe, Rev. 14 and that there ſeemeth to be borrowed from hence: but that alwayes by this phraſe the deſtruction to be made at the day of judgement is meant, I deny, for there is the like reaſon of the harveſt being ripe, and of the winepreſſe being full, which is alſo here ſpoken of, and a reaſon is rendered, Gen. 15. why the Amorites ſhould not be judged till after 400 years, for the wickedneſſe of the Amorites is not yet full. So here their ſinnes being grown to a Note. fulneſſe and ripeneſſe, whom the Prophet threatneth, he ſheweth, that they Gen. 6. ſhall be judged with cutting down likewiſe. And this is the cauſe why the wicked are proceeded againſt no ſooner, the Lord ſtayeth till corruption is grown Univerſall, as in the old World, and till greater ſinnes be added, as Note. in the Nations expelled before the Iſraelites. Againe, note hence, that there is no ſaying of any, they are weake, when God will have them to be executioners of his judgements for wickedneſſe grown to maturity, wherefore Jeremy ſaith, that if the Caldees were but a few and all wounded, they ſhould riſe up againſt Jeruſalem and burn it with fire.

V. 14. Multitudes in the valley of deciſion, the word rendred deciſion, ſignifieth trituration or threſhing, anſwering fitly to that which was before ſaid of the harveſt being ripe. It is as if he had ſaid, at the time when God ſhall judge the enemies of his Church by other Heathens, very great multitudes of them ſhall lye together to be threſhed and beaten in pieces, as it were by his judgements, as the ſtraw of the corn by a threſhing inſtrument, and in varying the word twice before called the valley of Jehoſhaphat, into the valley of deciſion, he ſheweth that he meant no particular place, to which men ſhould be gathered together to be judged, but that according to the ſignification of the words, the Lord would judge and tear them, when his ſet time ſhould come.

V. 15. Then the Sun and Moon ſhall be darkened, that is, the whole courſe of Nature ſhall ſeem to be overturned, which way ſoever theſe wicked ones ſhall looke about them, ſeeing no comfort, but all horrour and confuſion, which is commonly ſet forth by darkneſſe, and ſometimes by the lights of heaven turned into darkneſſe, as *Eſai.*13.10. V. 16. Verſ. 16. The Lord ſhall roar out of Zion, Jer. 25.30. Amos 1.2. it is ſaid likewiſe, and the heavens and the earth ſhall ſhake, but the Lord will be the hope of his people. As the Lion roaring, the beaſts of the forreſt quake, ſo the Lord uttering his voice in judging the heathen enemies of his people, not onely men, but heaven and earth alſo ſhall quake, which is ſpoken to ſhew his wonderfull great power, that the faithfull might not doubt, but that he was able to take revenge upon their enemies, and to doe for them as hath been ſaid, *Hag.*2.6. He ſaith not onely, I will ſhake the earth and the heavens, but alſo the ſea and dry land, which is quoted, *Heb.*12.26. and applyed to prove the vaniſhing away of all viſible things, and the everlaſting permanency of the Kingdome, or Church of God militant and triumphant. And of the quaking of the earth before God uttering his voice, we read *Exod.*20. But whereas the earth onely then quaked, now he ſaith, both heaven and earth ſhall, which becauſe it is applyed by the Apoſtle to the time of the Goſpell, we may likewiſe apply this, when the Lord ſhall ſend forth his Word from Zion, it being preached in all Countreys and Nations, heaven and earth ſhake; that is, no forces either diabolicall in heavenly places, or of men upon earth ſhall be able to withſtand it, but be as weak as a reed ſhaken with the wind, and then his people called Iſrael, whereby the faithfull both of Jews and Gentiles, are meant, ſhall be filled with hope and comfort.

V. 17. Jeruſalem ſhall be holy and no ſtrangers ſhall paſſe through her any more; as if hee had ſaid, my Church hath been prophaned by being brought under the power of the unclean heathen a long time, but now under the Goſpell, all enemies of the truth being by Gods Almighty power ſubdued, it ſhall be ſo no more, Stangers ſhall not paſſe through her, that is, vi & armis, ſubduing her, which was fulfilled in the time of Conſtantine the Great, after which the whole Church was never brought under an heathens feet more, but onely for a little time, the Emperour Julian proving a baſe Apoſtate; For ſince, although the Church hath been in Italy ſubdued by the Goths and Vandals, yet ſhe never was wholly, the Eaſtern Churches then being free, and ſince the Eaſtern being brought under by the Turke, the Weſtern were free, onely Antichriſt exalting himſelfe in the Temple of God, a generall Apoſtaſie befell the whole Viſible Church in the Weſt, it being by divine diſpenſation that this beaſt had power to doe 1260 dayes, but he being again deſtroyed, as he ſhall be, no enemies ſhall have power over the Church any more, but ſhee ſhall be holy, that is, kept ſeparate from ſuch miſuage for ever, for to be holy here is to be ſeparated and exempt from the power of the prophane infidels.

V. 18. And in that day the mountaines ſhall drop down new wine. Here the benefits abounding in the Church in time of the Goſpell are further ſet forth, for unto new wine is the Doctrine of the Goſpell compared, where it is ſaid, No man having taſted new wine will drink old any more, for they will ſay the new is better, but in the text it is old is better, and therefore having taſted old he will drink no new, Luk.5.39. whereby is ſet forth, how the Phariſees ſtood affected to the old rigid wayes, to which they had inured themſelves, but his Diſciples drink new wine by imbracing the Precepts of the Goſpell. Gualter. And whereas milk is here further ſpoken of this Doctrine is ſincere milk, 1 Pet. 2.3. and for rivers of water here we heare of rivers of water flowing out of the belly, *Joh.*4.10. Laſtly whereas it is ſaid, a fountaine ſhall come out of the houſe of the Lord, and ſhall water the valley of Shittim, this is holy Baptiſm; the water

Numb. 25. whereof in true beleevers waſheth away the fouleſt ſins, ſuch as the ſins of Iſrael were, when abiding a time in Shittim in the borders of Moab they committed adultery with the daughters of Midian, and were defiled with their idols ſacrifices. Hereby is alſo intimated, that the Gentiles, for ſuch the Moabites were, imbracing the faith, and being waſhed with this water ſhould be purified from ſin.

V. 19. Egypt ſhall be a deſolation and Edom, &c. as if he had ſaid, ſo great ſhall be the bleſſings of God upon his Church, as hath beene ſaid, but the enemies of the Church ſet forth by Egypt and Edom, becauſe Egypt of old was a moſt cruell enemie to the poore Hebrewes, and ſince the Edomites, although neare kinſmen, as appeares by divers paſſages, as Pſal. 137. &c. theſe ſhall be deſtroyed, and their land reduced to wilderneſſes for this their cruelty and inhumanity. And the ſame is often ſet forth in other words, Pſal. 2. Hee ſhall breake them in pieces like a potters veſſels, Pſal. 110. hee ſhall ſtrike through Kings in the day of his wrath, and judge amongſt the heathen, &c. being fulfilled in Jewes, whoſe City is ſpirituall Egypt, and in countryes ſtill continuing heathen, eſpecially in Africa ſo dry and full of deſerts.

V. 20. Matth. 16. But Judah ſhall dwell for ever, that is, the Chriſtian Church built upon a rock, and not to be prevailed againſt by the very gates of Hell. Verſ. 21. And I will cleanſe their bloud, that I have not cleanſed, where by bloud foul ſins are meant, Eſa. 1. 15. and theſe by the bloud of Chriſt are cleanſed, 1 Joh. 1. 6. And in ſaying, their bloud that I have not cleanſed, hee meaneth the Gentiles converted to the faith, for whom no expiations were formerly made, as there were for the Jewes, and ſo ſinne, that was the onely impediment of Chriſts dwelling in Zion, being done away, the Lord dwells alwayes in her, that is, his Church for evermore, and every ſoule thus cleanſed.

THE PROPHESIE OF AMOS.

THE time when Amos propheſied is expreſſed to be the ſame with that wherein Hoſea propheſied, viz. in the dayes of Uzziah, and Jeroboam, only here it is more particularly ſet forth by the earth-quake, and 2 years before it, of which it is again ſpoken *Zech.*14. this being added, in the dayes of Uzziah, ſo that although in the ſacred Hiſtory no mention be made of it, yet as Joſephus hath it, we may gather, that it was at the ſame time, that he preſuming to offer incenſe was ſmitten with the Leproſie. 2 Chron.26.

V. 1. For the perſon propheſying, he was an herdſman of Tekoah, which we may gather to have been in Judah, chap. 7.12. and Jerom ſaith, it was 12 miles from Jeruſalem, and Joſephus ſaith that it was a village near to a vaſt wilderneſſe which extends to Perſia and India. But although Amos were of the land of Judah, yet he propheſied in Iſrael, that is, the Kingdome of the ten tribes, as is expreſly ſaid ver. 1. and is further ſhewed ch. 7.12.13. Note. In that an herdſman was ſtirred up to be a Prophet, we may ſee that the ſpirit of God is not tyed to Prieſts and ſuch as have education in the ſchools of the Prophets, but when God pleaſeth he doth ſometimes inſpire others that be without learning, as alſo the Apoſtles of Chriſt. Note. But here is no ground for any man to come from a trade to a Propheticall office of his own head, as too many doe now adayes, to the great diſgrace of Propheſying and diſcouragement from learning. For it is a rare thing when any man is thus ſtirred up, and hath not been ſince the Apoſtles dayes, and when one hath been ſo ſent, he hath been indued with gifts accordingly, proving his calling to be from God, as theſe are not, and therefore may well have that ſaying applyed unto them, they run before they are ſent, and it is to be noted, that in Iſrael there was no Prophet at this time, ſo that there was need of one to be raiſed up extraordinarily.

V. 2. The Lord will roar from Zion: Here Amos beginneth almoſt as Joel ended, ch. 3.16. the habitations of ſhepherds ſhall mourn and the top of Carmell ſhall wither: He uſeth the ſame words at the firſt, ſaith Gualter, that Joel doth, but the next words ſhew that he uſeth them in a diverſe ſenſe, there he is ſpoken of, as a

Gualter.

Lion roaring to ſcare away enemies, for the comfort of his people, here to terrifie his people Iſrael and other Nations alſo for their ſins, in that he ſetteth forth himſelf as a Lion coming amongſt ſhepherds, and there tearing and killing, and cauſing by this means great ſorrow in their dwellings, ſo that Carmel, a place of note for feeding ſheep, ſhall through his roaring by his judgments be ill on it alſo; for it ſhall wither through drought that was commonly ſo green with graſſe, and ſo theſe laſt words may be taken as an exegeſis of the former, it being here ſhewed how the Lord would roar, viz. by a drought cauſing the fruitfulleſt paſtures to wither, and conſequently a deſtruction amongſt the ſheep, which ſhould cauſe mourning in their ſhepherds. All which yet may be taken metaphorically, by ſhepherds, rulers and governours of the people being underſtood, that ſhould mourne for the deſtruction of their people and their owne miſeries alſo, as Kings be often called ſhepherds.

V. 3. For three tranſgreſſions of Damaſcus and for four I will not turn away the puniſhment thereof: Vulg. I will not turn it: Calvin, I will not be propitious to it: Hebr. agreeth with Vulg. the meaning is, for the many ſins of Damaſcus, the Metropolis of Syria, I will not, though intreated, turn to it in grace and mercy, forgiving what they have there done. For places moſt wicked and heathen ſeeing themſelves in great danger, will fal to prayer, as the mariners in the ſhip with Jonah: but although Damaſcus ſhould do ſo, the Lord here threatens, that he will not Lyra. turn from puniſhing, as he now threatned. The Hebrews, ſaith Lyra, gather from hence, that ſin is remiſſible to the third time of committing it, but not the fourth: but this is contrary to Scripture, for Manaſſeh ſinned often, and yet was forgiven, and our Lord would have us forgive the repentant having ſinned 7 times, yea 70 times, and therefore this obſervation is trivolous. But Note. Jer.23. we may truly hence gather, that it is moſt difficult for a ſinner to be converted that hath traded long in ſin, as for an Ethiopian to put away his blackneſſe, and ſo to come into favour with God and be ſaved from deſtruction: becauſe they have threſhed Gilead, here the cruelty of the Syrians towards the Gileadites, a part of the Kingdom of Iſrael, is ſet forth, for which they ſhould ſuffer as followeth, *v.*4. Touching the threſhing here ſpoken of, hereby it is meant, that they did moſt cruelly tear them, as Eliſha had foretold Aſahel their King that he ſhould doe, and as he did to Gilead in particular, 2 *King.*10. 32. ſee alſo ch. 7. and the inſtrument here ſpoken of, ſaith Lyra, was an inſtrument not ſo much to beat out corne, but to cut it ſmall with the ſtraw and fire it for provender.

V. 4. But I will ſend a fire into the houſe of Aſahel, which ſhall devour the Palaces of Benhadad: He had charged Damaſcus with three and four tranſgreſſions, that is, Calvin. ſeven, as Calvin noteth, but having mentioned one, he paſſeth away and comes preſently to their puniſhment in this verſe. In this one ſin then, or this one way, they tranſgreſſed foully many times, For both Hazael, and his ſon Benhadad oppreſſed Iſrael all their dayes, 2 *King.*13. 3. therefore doubtleſſe they came often againſt Iſrael and often dealt cruelly with Gods people. For the fire kindled for this in the houſe of Aſahel, it was by the hot war which the Aſſyrians 2 King.16.19. made againſt Syria in the time of Ahaz, not ceaſing till they had deſtroyed it from being a Kingdome, at which time the King being ſlain the people were carryed captive to Kir, as is ſhewed in the Hiſtory according to the prophe- V. 5. ſie here, I will cut off the inhabitants from the plain of Aven, and him that holdeth the Scepter from the houſe of Eden, and the people ſhall go into captivity to Kir, by the houſe of Eden, ſignifieth pleaſure, the Kings houſe being meant.

And it is to be noted that two places of a contrary ſignification are here named, Aven ſorrow, and Eden pleaſure; to ſhew that the people who lead a toilſome life through hard labour, and the King that lived in pleaſure ſhould now be cut off and come to miſery alike: there was alſo a city in Cœloſyria called Eden, by the Septuagint Paradiſe. Whereas he ſpeaketh of two Kings of Damaſcus and their houſes, Aſahel and Benhadad, naming Benhadad laſt, Calvin finds fault with Jerom for ſaying that Benhadad reigned after Aſahel, as commit-

mitting a groſſe overſight, forſomuch as Benhadad was before him, and was by him murthered: but it is a marvail that he obſerved not, that Aſahel had a ſon alſo called Benhadad, that raigned after him, it being ſo plain in the ſacred Hiſtory, 2 King.13 3.

For three tranſgreſſions of Gaza and for four I will not turn, &c. From the Syrians V. 6:

away captives, the Philiſtims alſo invaded them and tooke Bethſhemeſh, &c. this Amos calleth the Philiſtims carrying away of the whole captivity to Edom, becauſe Edom having prevailed in part againſt Judah, and carryed ſome captives away, the Philiſtims came and tooke and dwelt in another part, for which the old inhabitants muſt needs be many of them turned out, and ſo come into the hands of the Edomites alſo. Of the Philiſtims practiſes againſt Judah, ſee alſo 2 Chr.

nant. Here the men of Tyrus are alſo threatned, and the ſame ſin is laid to their charge that was laid to the charge of the Philiſtims, and it is aggravated a-gainſt them by the breach of covenant, which Gualter ſaith, ſome expound of Gualter. the covenant ſometime made betwixt David and Hiram, and Solomon and Hiram King of Tyrus; ſome becauſe it is ſaid the brotherly covenant, of the ſtraight band of brotherhood between Jacob & Eſau, of whom the Iſraelites and Edomites came, and therefore were bound not the one to hurt the other, but the Tyrians holp the Edomites to break this band, when they ſold the Jews for ſlaves unto them, or holp them in their unnaturall wars, whereby they came into their power.
And he followeth both theſe, noting, how great a ſin it is to have an hand in breaking covenants. Of Tyrus threatned likewiſe ſee Joel 3.4. and the Phili- Note.

Hiram, who is ſaid to have called Solomon brother, 1 King.9. And to this I ſub-ſcribe, becauſe it it Hebr. the covenant of brethren, and although Eſau and Jacob were brethren, yet we read not of any covenant made betwixt them, and if there were, the breach of it could not wel be laid to the charge of the Tyrians, but of the Edomites only.

Becauſe he purſued his brother with the ſword: here Edom that came of Eſau, is commemorated, of which ſee *Gen.*27. and of his coming out againſt him with the ſword, *Gen.*32.6. and again of the coming out of the Edomites, in like manner, when Iſrael deſired a paſſage through their country, *Numb.*20. and always after they perſiſted in a deadly hatred of Iſrael. Therefore Teman is threat-ned and Bozrah, two places of greateſt note in the country of Edom, all the reſt being meant hereby, ſee *Eſa.*34.6. *Jer.*49. This fire threatned to Teman came by Nebuchadnezzar, *Jer.*27. And for Bozrah, beſides that in Idumea ſpoken of Eſay Becauſe they have ript up the women of Gilead with child, that they might inlarge their V. 13. border: Here the Ammonites are threatned, who came of one of Lots daughters, and ſo were alſo of kin to Iſrael as well as Edom: but their enmity againſt Iſrael was no leſſe then theirs, upon it *Jer.*49. toucheth, when he ſaith, why doth Malchom occupy Gad, and his people inhabit the cities thereof, that Gilead, which lay within the lot of Gad, and is here ſpoken of; we read alſo of their enmity cruelty to the men of Jabeſh Gilead, and of their inhumanity to David, 2 *Sam.*10. 1 Sam.11.

But here is a greater point of cruelty ſpoken of, for which the Lord would ſuffer them no longer to go unpuniſhed. The cauſe why the Ammonites did thus, is ſaid to be to inlarge their border, it was ambition and covetouſneſſe, which is hereby ſhewed to be a moſt foul ſin, when a Nation not content with its own borders ſhal invade other mens bounds being ſet by God to every Nation, *Deut.*32. Act. 9. And this conſtitution was ſo accounted of amongſt the Romans, that they worſhipped bounds as Gods, and Virgil calleth a bound, Capitoli immobile ſacrum, and againſt the removing hereof, ſee *Deut.*19. and ch.27. it is curſed.

V. 14. I will kindle a fire in the wall of Rabbah, that is, the chiefe city of Ammon, of which ſee 2 Sam. 11.1. and to expreſſe what fire is meant, it is ſaid, with ſhouting in the day of battle, and with a tempeſt in the day of the whirlwind, ſo that hereby is ſhewed that the deſtruction of the Ammonites, ſhould alſo be by enemies fighting againſt them and firing their city, at what time they ſhould come upon them with hideous ſhouting, and this deſtruction ſhould be ſudden, as by a tempeſt bearing down all things.

V. 15. And their King ſhall goe into captivity: the word rendred their King, is Melcham, which was alſo the name of an Idoll amongſt them. But here it is rather to be underſtood of their King, becauſe it is ſaid, both he and his Princes. Thus Note. they that ambitiouſly ſeeke the enlargement of their countries by incroaching upon the bounds of others, ſhall through Gods juſt judgment loſe both that which is unjuſtly thus gotten, and their own land alſo.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. THe ſixth Nation here threatned, is Moab, coming of Lots other daughter, his ſin was, that he burnt the bones of the King of Edom into lime, ſo it is Hebr. but Vulg. into aſhes. After the ſins of other Nations againſt Iſrael laid open ch.1. here before he cometh to Judah and Iſrael, he threatneth Moab for a ſin Ruffin. againſt Edom, as Ruffin noteth, partly to take downe the pride of the Jewes, who thought themſelves the only men in account with God, and that he would revenge their wrongs, but not the wrongs of any other nation beſides; and partly to comfort the poor Gentiles, and to erect them with hope, forſomuch as God hath ſome care of them to revenge their wrongs, that he hath not utterly left them, or caſt off the care of them for ever, but would in mercy one day extend himſelf to them alſo, to ſave them. Touching the thing here ſaid to be done by the Moabites, the burning of the bones of the King of E-Hieron. dom, ſome ſay, that becauſe he joined with the King of Judah and Iſrael againſt 2 King.3.27. Moab, whereby that King was forced in his extremity, in his blind ſuperſtition, to burn his ſon in ſacrificing upon the wal, the Moabite conceived ſuch an hatred againſt him, that when he was dead they took his body and for ſpite burnt it to aſhes. Some that the Moabite having the King of Edoms ſon at that time in his hands, burnt him in ſacrifice upon the wall of the City, he being called the King of Edom, becauſe he ſhould have reigned in his ſtead, and happily was at that time made King together with himſelf, as ſome other Kings ſons have ſometimes been. Laſtly ſome Rabbins, becauſe it is ſaid, burnt into lime, ſay, that one King of Edom being burnt to aſhes before, they took his aſhes and burnt them into lime, but this ſavours of too much boldneſſe to excogitate a reaſon of things ſpoken in Scripture, when the full knowledge of the thing is concealed from us. If it ſhall be thought that they raged againſt the dead body of the King of Edom in this manner, as is moſt generally held, a queſtion will ariſe, how they got it into their hands?
We muſt be content then to remain ignorant of that, which is not revealed, and only make this uſe of ſuch a thing done, as being here related, though no where elſe, and condemned as a moſt foul ſin, to abhor from doing any thing Note. againſt the dead, acknowledging this to be more then barbarous cruelty to take up dead mens bones and to burne them, and the pretended Catholicks have often done. If this be done to very Heathens, God will not paſſe it over unrevenged, as we may ſee in this place. The Poet, as Gualter noteth hereupon, taught more rightly by the light of nature, Gualter.

Paſcitur in vivis livor, poſt fata quieſcit.

For after death neither can he hurt thee any more, nor thou him, and therefore it is folly and madneſſe, and men by this doing degenerate into crowes or dogs. For amongſt men it hath commonly been permitted in time of war to bury their dead on both ſides, and Alexander in particular allowed it to Darius, Hannibal to Marcellus, and Cæſar to Pompey.

I will ſend a fire into Moab and it ſhall devour the palace of Kireoth: Kireoth was a chief city of Moab, Jer. 48. 24. and the deſtruction of Moab by fire, by tumult, and the ſound of the Trumpet was by war, ſee the like before, ch. 1. 14. touching Ammon. V. 2.

I will cut off the Judge, and ſlay all the Princes, meaning hereby that they ſhould be no more a people, becauſe where there is no Judge or Prince to governe, there can be no Common-wealth any more. V. 3.

Having propheſied againſt other Nations about, now he propheſieth againſt Judah, and v. 6. againſt Iſrael alſo, that the Heathen might not object and ſay, alſo thou threatneſt us for our ſins, are there not ſins in Iſrael? why then doeſt thou not propheſie againſt them? V. 4.

Hereby then is ſhewed, that none are ſo near or dear to God, but if they ſin, they ſhall come under the laſh of Gods judgments as well as they that are fartheſt off. And that they are not leſſe ſinners although better taught, then the moſt wicked of the world, and therefore although he cometh laſt unto them, they ſhall not be leaſt puniſhed, nay they that are of the Church and yet are not moved by repentance through all the meanes which they injoy, ſhall one day be moſt ſeverely puniſhed of all others, viz. at the day of judgment. Note. Mat. 11. Mat. 12.

The ſins objected againſt Judah, were, that they deſpiſed the Law of God, and that their lyes cauſed them to erre, after which their fathers walked: For they that ſin under the law, ſhall be judged by the law: To the Heathen he ſpeaketh not ſo, but chargeth them only with ſinning againſt the light of nature. And it is to be noted here, that ſuch as live under teaching, but yet wallow in the mire of ſin like ſwine, may pretend infirmity, through which they do ſo, but before God they are judged deſpiſers of his law, and ſhall be proceeded againſt accordingly. Rom. 2. Note.

For their walking after lyes, hereby the doctrine of falſe Prophets is meant, who out of their owne wicked heads taught them, that it was beſt to worſhip other gods, and incouraged them in their ſo doing, and in other ſins, by promiſing them peace againſt the threatnings of all the true Prophets of God. But for all this they are threatned with deſtruction by their enemies the Caldeans, who ſhould fire their City, as indeed they did.

Here coming to Iſrael, to whom he was ſpecially ſent, he is large in ripping up their ſins, and convincing them of ingratitude for extraordinary benefits received, that after this he might the more effectually by threatning judgments move them to ſpeedy repentance: becauſe they ſold the righteous for ſilver, and the poor for a pair of ſhoes. Coming to lay open their ſins in particular, he beginneth with the chief amongſt them, their Judges and Rulers, firſt taxing their covetouſneſſe, ſhewing it ſelf in taking bribes to pervert juſtice. For this is meant by their ſelling of the righteous for ſilver, they had not ſo much regard to the righteouſneſſe of a mans cauſe that came before them, as to baſe gain, ſo that if any man brought them a bribe, they would judge on his ſide againſt all juſtice and right. That which is added of the poor for ſhoes, ſets forth another kind of bribe, taken of thoſe that had no mony, but in caſe that one poor man contended in law with another, and one that deſired to have the judgment goe on his ſide were a Cobler or Shoemaker, that offered to give the Judge the mending of a pair of ſhoes, or a pair of ſhoes to judge for him; or V. 6.

Lyra. one of another calling, doing ſome like thing for the like reaſon. Lyra ſaith, that the word ſignifieth either Shoes or Cloſes, and therefore it may be underſtood indifferently of the poor man having nothing but a little ground to bribe the Judge withall, and giving this to make him of his ſide.

V. 7. That pant after the duſt of the earth on the head of the poor, that is, are carryed away with a greedy deſire to trample the poor under their feet as the duſt of the earth through tyranny, pride, and diſdaine. For this is another ſin amongſt great ones upon earth, they tyrannize over the meaner ſort of men, taking any occaſion to bring them down to the duſt, that they may even goe over them at their will, they not once daring to ſpeak or mutter againſt their tyrannicall doings.

Note. A moſt high degree of wickedneſſe, and a ſin that addeth more to their unjuſt dealings, and it is too too commonly practiſed in theſe miſerable times, wherein men muſt ſuffer by injuſtice, and ſay nothing againſt injurious proceedings; if he doth, he ſhall be ſure to be kicked down and trodden upon with the greateſt rigour.

And turn aſide the way of the meek, here is another ſin objected, by means of their tyranny againſt them that oppoſe their unjuſt doings, many of meek ſpirits are ſo terrified, that they are made for fear to goe wrong alſo, holding and ſaying as theſe their tyrannicall maſters doe. But they that are ſo meek, being thus made to goe out of the way of the meek, whom Chriſt bleſſeth, are curſed together with them by whoſe feare they are miſ-led againſt the fear of God.

And a man and his father will goe into the ſame maid to prophane my holy Name. Here is a fourth ſin laid to their charge, the ſin of abominable inceſt, the law of God being quite neglected, which forbiddeth the ſame woman to the father and the ſon, and all others that are very neare either in conſanguinity or affinity. (Levit.18.) And in naming this, as Gualter noteth well, he meant any kind of inceſtuous copulation, and generally all fleſhly uncleanneſſe by any whoredome. (Gualter.) And hereby he ſaith that they prophaned the holy name of God, becauſe the Gentiles round about hearing of ſuch wickedneſſe committed amongſt Gods peculiar people, blaſphemed God, ſaying, that he was the Patron of filthineſſe. (Note.) And this he ſaith touching fleſhly uncleanneſſe, to the great reproof of thoſe that make ſo light of this ſin, that they may be aſhamed and abhorre themſelves therefore as unworthy of the name of Gods people.

V. 8. And they lay themſelves down upon cloaths laid to pledge by every Altar, and they drink the wine of the condemned in the houſe of their God. Here a fifth ſinne is taxed, viz. extream unjuſt dealing in their commerce with the poor, contrary to Gods law *Exod.*22. *Deut.*24. where it is injoyned, if any man takes a pledge, and it be cloathing, that is neceſſary for him to cover him withall at night, that he reſtore it before the going down of the Sun, but in Iſrael there were ſuch oppreſſors, who ſo little regarded the law of God, that they kept ſuch cloaths for their own uſe, lying themſelves upon them, when they ſolemnized nights to the honour of their Idols near their Altars. For Idolaters imitated Gods ſervants, of whoſe keeping watch by night in the Lords houſe we read Pſal. 134. And hereby their ſin was the more aggravated in that they came in that, (Note.) which it was unlawfull for them to hold of another mans, about ſuch rites, as they counted ſacred, as if a pawn-taker ſhould come to Church in the beſt apparell of a poor man for his mony layed to pledge unto him, being wrongfully wreſted from him for want of wherewithall to redeem it at the time; thus taking advantage againſt him, and poſſeſſing a thing much more worth without making reſtitution for the over-plus to his great detriment.

For the next words, they drink the wine of the condemned in the houſe of their gods. (Gualter.) Here is a ſixth ſin laid open, of which Gualter maketh three.

1. Idolatry, in that he ſpeaks of the houſe of their god, which was ſome Idol.

2. Intemperance and exceſſe even in places that they counted moſt holy, the houſes of their gods, in which they dranke wine, that is, unto drunkenneſs.

3. Unjuſt getting of money to buy this wine, being againſt the innocent, and condemning him in his caſe brought before him for bribes received from the contrary party to doe it. For herewith they grew rich and feaſted at times ſet apart to the honour of their gods in their houſes. And of theſe ſins the Papiſts are moſt notoriouſly guilty at this day.

For firſt they have Images which they make Gods by giving unto them religious worſhip.

2. They keep feſtivals to the honour of their Saints, at which times they run to all exceſſe of riot, eſpecially in feſtis Encaniorum, vel dedicationis, trium regum, paſchalis, aſcenſionis, Martini, Carniſprivii, & pro defunctis.

3. To theſe feaſts rich men contribute largely, who have gotten their goods by wicked means, thinking that hereby an expiation is made of their ſins, and by Monks and Fryers, and ſacrificing Prieſts, who impoſe by way of penance for ſatisfaction ſummes of mony to be paid by thoſe that confeſſe unto them.

V. 9. Having laid open their ſins, now he cometh to lay open their ingratitude for Gods extraordinary mercies towards them, eſpecially in deſtroying the Amorite ſo tall and ſtrong as the Cedar and Oak, both fruit above and root beneath. Of this comparative ſetting forth of the Amorite, ſee Numb. 13. and he meaneth, that both thoſe Giants and their poſterity were all deſtroyed partly in Joſhua his time, partly in Davids.

V. 11. Calvin. I raiſed up of your ſons for Prophets, and of your young men for Nazarites. Theſe were other great benefits beſtowed upon Iſrael, and are ſo at all times to be accounted by the people of God. Men amongſt our ſelves to be ſtirred up to act the part of Meſſengers or Angels ſent from God, that thus we may be inſtructed in Gods will from time to time, is a wonderfull great benefit, and not common to all Nations, and for Nazarites, ſee Numb. 6. they were certain men moved by the Spirit of God to lead a ſingular holy and abſtemious life, that by their example others might be turned from their prophaneneſſe and exceſſe, as by the teaching of the Prophets, that having both doctrine and example they might be the more effectually ſtirred up or made more inexcuſable as all are at this day alſo, although we have no Nazarites now but godly Note. Miniſters that teach with all earneſtneſſe, and godly livers, that ſincerely apply themſelves to live and do accordingly. The Papiſts hold the profeſſion of Monks and Fryers now, to be anſwerable to that of the Nazarites then, and the vows of theſe to be juſtifiable by theirs. But there is a vaſt difference betwixt them, they vowed to abſtein from wine, not from fleſh or from marriage, theſe are licentious for drinking the ſtrongeſt wines, yea even the Carthuſians, which would ſeem to be holyeſt, but vow againſt marriage and eating fleſh at certain times. They followed none other rules, but what were ſet down by God, theſe croſſing the rules ſet down by God, hold them only to rules of living ſet down by men; for that rule of vowing againſt marriage and meats are cenſured as doctrines of Devils, and therefore moſt contrary to God and his laws.

V. 12. But ye gave the Nazarites wine to drink, and commanded the Prophets, ſaying, Propheſie not: that is, what means ſoever God ſet up amongſt them, they were ſo farre from profiting hereby, that they ſtopt the courſe of theſe his Ordinances, corrupting the young men, that had ſet themſelves apart by vow to more ſtrictneſſe of life, by bidding them contrary to their vow to drink wine, and forbidding the Prophets to propheſie any thing, but what they beſt liked, telling the one that whatſoever vow he had made in this kind, he was tyed thereby; and the other, that if he preſumed to ſpeak any thing againſt them he ſhould ſurely ſmart for it. And theſe are two ſuch great evils, as that where they reign, ſin is grown to ſuch an height, as that God will no longer forbear to puniſh it in any Nation. None are ſo groſſe, as altogether to forbid preaching, but the ſame evill commonly reigneth to forbid, or to be ſevere againſt Note. them that preach unpleaſing things, and ſo the liberty that ought to be in preachers, is taken away, there being no fault more common then this in ſuch as be in authority in theſe our dayes, and much do the riotors of theſe times rejoice, if they can wind in one that is of a ſtrict life to drinke wine unto drunkenneſſe at any time, as if that Hab.2.4. were quite forgotten, where a woe is denounced againſt him that giveth his neighbour drink.

V.13. I am preſſed under you as a cart that is laden with ſheaves, that is, ye may happily count theſe ſins objected againſt you, light and not worth the ſpeaking of; but truly they are moſt heavy, and I am ſo weary of bearing them, as of too heavy a load, that I wil now disburthen my ſelf, not bearing with you any longer, but bringing judgments upon you, as ye are well worthy. And what will ye do then? ſhall the ſwift of foot thinke to flee, or the ſtrong to be ſaved by his V.14. ſtrength, he that handleth the bow by his ſhooting, or the horſman by his horſe? if they do, they ſhall be utterly deceived, for flight ſhall periſh from the ſwift, &c. v.14,15,16.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. HEar this word of the Lord againſt you: becauſe he had ſpoken of judgments, which none ſhould eſcape, and men are averſe from hearing any thing againſt him, therefore he preſſeth them to hear this, and the like ſhould every Preacher do, and not forbear to declare the will of God in any thing, becauſe the hearer will diſtaſte it.

V. 2. And what is it that he would have them hear? You only have I known of all the families of the earth, therefore I will puniſh you: Here he ſpeaks to all the tribes of Iſrael together, which he brought out of Egypt, v.1. whom only, he ſaith, he had known peculiarly to chooſe them, and to do ſuch mighty things for them, and to give them his laws. Of the like compariſon, ſee Pſ:147.20. whereby we may ſee, that to live in ſin is more hainous in thoſe that are of the Note. Church, then in any other people, and they ſhall therefore moſt certainly be puniſhed for all their iniquities, ſo farre will it be from being a ſhelter to ſuch ſinners, that they are of the Church, that they ſhall be puniſhed the more.

V. 3. Can two walk together except they be agreed? that is, the Prophet cannot walk with God in ſpeaking in his behalf, by threatning judgments againſt ſinners, as he doth, but they might be ſure that it was done by the conſent and according to the will of God.

V. 4. Will a Lion roar in the forreſt when he hath no prey? Here is another ſimilitude to ſhew, that his threatning being according to Gods will, is as the Lions roaring, and not as a contemptible mans uttering his voice, of which roaring ſee before ch.1.2. And as the Lion roareth not, but being ſure of a prey, ſo the Lord roareth not by his inſtrument, a Prophet, but the people againſt whom, ſhall ſurely bee made a prey to them, that he ſhall ſend out to deſtroy.

V. 5. Can a bird fall in a ſnare upon the earth, where no ginne is for him? but if a ſnare be ſet ſo cunningly that he cannot eſcape, then he muſt needs fall, and till the bird falleth thus, the fowler will not take up the ſnare that he laid. Now God is the Fowler, of whoſe ſnares to take ſinners it is ſpoken *Pſal.*11. and the meaning is, if God had not by me his Prophet laid a ſnare in threatning judgments againſt you for your ſins; ye needed not to fear the coming of ſuch judgments upon you, but now the ſnare is laid, and ſhall not be taken up again, till ye be intangled with theſe deſtroying judgments, unleſſe yee repent.

V. 6. Shall a trumpet be blown in the city and the people not be afraid? ſhall there be evill in a city and the Lord hath not done it? Here is a third ſimilitude tending to expreſs the ſame, as a trumpet being blown by a potent enemy ſignifying his entrance into a City to deſtroy it by his ſouldiers thus called together and animated to the fight, all the Citizens tremble for fear, ſo the Lord ſounding an alarum by the trumpet of his Word, it ſtands the people in hand, againſt whom, to tremble ble and ſeek to make pecce with him with ſpeed. And if they do not ſo, but harden their hearts, and evill betides them, they muſt not count it a caſualty, but a judgment juſtly ſent by God for their neglecting of his voice; ſee the like to this before, Eſay 45.7. touching Gods making of evill, that is not ſin, but the evill of deſtruction coming for it.

V. 7. Surely the Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth his ſecrets to his ſervants the Prophets. This is added for explication and confirmation of that which went before: for having ſaid, there is no evil in the City which the Lord hath not done, and before ſpoken of the Lions roaring, the ſnare laying and trumpet ſounding to warre and bloudſhed, hereby is all explained, that the Lord was meant in all the former paſſages as hath been ſaid, for he doth thoſe things, and agreeth with his Prophets to publiſh them: and confirmed, becauſe his Prophets denouncing judgments ſpeak by revelation from God, and not of their own heads. Before ſuch revelations they are ſecrets, and it is unknown what kind of evill, or by what means it ſhall come upon a wicked people, but ſuch is Gods candor in his dealing with them, that he will not bring it till the Prophets be acquainted therewith, that they may firſt denounce it, which is alſo partly done to grace his Prophets by thus making them of his privy councell, as of old he Gen. 18. did Abraham.

V. 8. The Lion roareth, who can but tremble? the Lord hath ſpoken, who can but Propheſie? Here by the Lion again is meant the Lord, whoſe threatnings by his Prophets, ſhould make all men to tremble, and when he ſpeaketh by revealing his will to any man, commanding him to declare it to others; no man may refrain from propheſying, whatſoever danger through mens tyranny comes of it, when Jonah did otherwiſe, we ſee, in what danger he himſelf was, and Ezek. 3. the watchman not ſpeaking as he is bidden, muſt anſwer for the bloud of others, and Jeremy 1. 17. Speake all that I bid thee (ſaith God) or elſe I will ſlay thee.

V. 9. Publiſh it in the Palaces of Aſhdod, &c. Here to ſhame the Iſraelites the more, he calleth the Heathen Philiſtims and Egyptians together to be ſpectators of the abominations done in Samaria the head city of the ten tribes, as who ſhould ſay, that they were ſo groſſe, that they exceeded the wickedneſſes practiſed amongſt them that were without teaching and all knowledge of the true God. And yet in Aſhdod, as Gualter ſaith, Gualter. they were ſo croſſe in running to all exceſſe of riot, that at their feaſts they uſed to have a dead mans ſcull ſhewed, and then it was ſaid, Eat and drink freely, for after death ye ſhall be ſuch. And if they were ſo vile and yet Iſrael exceeded them in wickedneſſe, how vile was Iſrael, and worthy of moſt ſevere judgments? ſee the like exprobration, *Jer.*2.10,11. & *Mat.*11. & 12. 1 *Cor.*5. V. 10. See the great tumults in the midſt thereof, and the oppreſſions, of which more particularly, ch. 2. 6, 7, 8. and this he calleth violence and robbery in their Palaces, charging them that they knew not to doe right, not for want of theoricall knowledge, but of an heart well affected, but contrarywiſe addicted to all evill, the like unto which is ſaid Jer. 4. 22. and he ſpeaks of robbery in their palaces to denote their Kings and Judges, who are alſo called for their bribery, companions of theeves, *Eſa.*1.23.

V. 11. An adverſary ſhall be round about thee. Having laid open their groſſe ſinning, now he cometh to ſhew the puniſhment, which ſhould be ſuch, that which way ſoever they made account to eſcape, their hopes of ſo doing ſhould be vaine.

For firſt, if by fleeing, he ſaith, that enemies ſhould compaſſe them round about.

2. If they confided in their palaces or fortifications, he ſaith, thy palaces ſhall be ſpoiled, and in further amplifying the ſame, v.15. I will ſmite the winter houſe, and the ſummer houſe, and the houſes of ivory, and the great houſes.

3. To expreſſe further their great deſtruction, if they ſhould truſt to their multitudes of people, he ſaith: V. 13. As the ſhepherd taketh out of the mouth of the Lion two legs, or a piece of an ear, ſo ſhall the children of Iſrael be taken out that dwell at Samaria, maria, of the corner of a bed, or at Damaſcus, out of a couch, that is, they ſhall be deſtroyed, as ſheep by a Lion who having killed and eaten what hee liſteth of them, the ſhepheard coming findeth nothing but fragments, all the ſheep being deſtroyed, ſo that of great multitudes he hereby ſheweth, that they ſhould be brought to nothing, onely as the ſhepheard coming after ſuch deſtruction takes up theſe parts, hereby to ſhew, how many ſheep are deſtroyed, ſo he meaneth that nothing ſhall be left in Iſrael, but teſtifications of their ruine, and this ſhould be done by enemies, who ſhould be to them as Lions to ſheep.

For, that which is added of a corner of a bed, and a couch; it ſerves to ſet forth their ſecurity, who notwithſtanding the judgments threatned lay ſleeping upon their ſoft beds and couches of eaſe, as fearing nothing. And Samaria is ſpoken of, the chief City in Iſrael for the ſtrength thereof, in which they truſted, counting it impregnable, and therefore ſlept ſecurely there. And Damaſcus, becauſe Hieron. part of Iſraels confidence lay in Damaſcus, that is, the Syrians their confederates, *Eſa.*7.1. ſo Jerome. But Lyra, by the corner of a bed underſtands ſome Lyra. part of Judah, to which the Iſraelites fled in Hezekiah his time, and by a couch in Damaſcus, taking Damaſcus for an appellative ſignifying victual, ſome place, where he made proviſion for ſuch as fled unto him. Some again reading the word Damaſbcus render it, ta bed, the corner of a bed. But both pervert the meaning, which is, as hah been before ſaid, although I doe not think, that a confederacy with the Syrians was in Jeroboams time, any part of the Iſraelites confidence, but rather their having Syria and Damaſcus alſo in their power.
For 2 King. 14. 24. Jeroboam their preſent King is ſaid to have inlarged his Kingdom from the entring in of Hamath to the Sea of the Wilderneſſe, that is, ſaith Raban. Gualter. Rabanus, all over Syria, ſee my expoſition there. And upon this Gualter goeth, ſaying, they had Samaria and Damaſcus both moſt ſtrong Cities, and there-Gualter. fore thought themſelves invincible, for which they are ſet forth as ſleeping ſecurely in a bed or upon a couch.

V. 14. I will viſit the Altars of Bethel, and the horns of the Altars ſhall be cut off. This is added to ſhew again, that as God was provoked by other ſins in Iſrael before mentioned, chap.2. ſo chiefly by their idolatry with the golden Calf at Bethel, which he would have them take ſpeciall notice of, and that the idoll there ſhould be deſtroyed, and for the horns of the Altar, they are ſpecially mentioned, as being the moſt goodly part of it, guilt with ſilver and gold; and whereupon the bloud of their ſacrifices was put for expiation of their ſins. But hereby it is ſhewed, that this ſervice being contrary to the Word of God, yet by them blindly truſted in, ſhould be ſo far from profiting them, as that therefore they ſhould be deſtroyed, and ſo it ſhall be with all the ſu-Note. perſtitions, their pains and coſt about divine worſhip of their own deviſing in ſtead of ſaving them ſhall bring them to ruine.

CHAP. IV.

V. 1. Y*Ee kine of Baſhan, that are in the mountain of Samaria, &c.* By the Kine of Baſhan here Amos underſtandeth the Judges and Rulers of Samaria, and he ſtileth them thus, becauſe that being fed in the fatteſt paſtures, that is, abounding moſt with wealth, and having the honour to judge and rule over others, they regarded nothing leſſe then to govern well and to judge aright, as being addicted more to their eaſe, and pleaſure and gain, whereby their exceſſe might be maintained, like not Oxen that labour, but Cowes who doe nothing but feed and fill their bellies and wax fat againſt the day of ſlaughter. For Baſhan was a moſt fruitfull place of paſture, and therefore they are compared to Kine there, although dwelling in Samaria, and Baſhan was on this ſide Jordan in the lot of the Reubenites and Gadites. And what is it, that he would have theſe Kine to heare? yee oppreſſe the poore and cruſh the needy, and y to their Maſters bring wine, whereby the poore the borrower is meant, and by the creditour the Maſter, the meaning being, that whereas Magiſtrates are appointed to doe juſtice for the relief of the poore debter againſt hard hearted Uſurers, they contrariwiſe fulfilled the deſire of ſuch miſers to the wronging of ſuch poore, and to make themſelves the more merry when they did ſo, they bad these maſters bring wine, as if he ſhould have ſaid, give me a quart or pottle of wine and I will doe it for you, according to your deſire. Whence Note. note how much rulers degenerate, that are led by covetouſneſſe and ſenſuality of men in moſt eminent place, they thus make themſelves very beaſts fit for nothing, but when they are growne enough to bee butchered. Whereas the Prophet may ſeeme to forget himſelfe much in uſing ſuch baſe language to Magiſtrates, whom all ought to honour and ſpeak Gualter. reverently to, as to Gods Vicegerents. Gualter anſwers well. All private men indeed ought to ſpeak to them with reverence, but the Prophet or Miniſter of God, whoſe Office is publickly to reprove ſin in the higheſt, is not alwayes bound to goe by this Law, but if Rulers be beaſts, he may call them beaſts, as Chriſt did Herod a crafty fox, and Jeremy telleth Jehoiakim that he ſhould be buryed with the buriall of an Aſſe; and Samuel tels Saul he had done fooliſhly. But this is rarely to be done, and not without an inſtinct of the ſpirit moving hereunto, as we may ſee in Paul calling Ananias a painted wall, but underſtanding that he was the High Prieſt, he confeſſed his errour, and Note. proved, that a Judge may not, much leſſe a King be ordinarily ſpoken to in vilifying words. And therefore they doe they know not what, who being private perſons, if the Judge or other Magiſtrate diſpleaſeth them, yea or the King himſelf, are ready by baſe language to rail upon them: and it would be noted, that it was thought a juſt cauſe of death in Naboth that he had blaſphemed God and the King.

V. 3. Yee ſhall goe out every Cow at the breach that is before her; and yee ſhall caſt them into the Palace, ſaith the Lord, the Vulg. yee ſhall be caſt into Armon, that is, ſaith Lyra a countrey beyond Aſſyria, and Heb. it is ההרמונה which if it be taken for an appellative, ſignifieth a palace, otherwiſe being taken for a proper name, it is Armon, hereby ſome parts of Armenia being meant, whither the ten Tribes were carryed, and have there remained ſhut up by the mountaines ever ſince. This is alſo Jeromes, and moſt probably the true meaning, and if it be rendred Palace, I cannot ſee, how any good ſenſe can be made, yee ſhall caſt them into the Palace; they that follow this reading, ſay it is meant, ſome ſhall attempt to flee away through the breaches made in the wall of the City by the enemy, but not being able return back to their Palaces ſeeking by the ſtrength of the place to ſave themſelves. But if he had meant ſo, he would not have ſaid, ye ſhall caſt them into the Palace, but rather they ſhall caſt them, making them for fear to recoil thither after an attempt to eſcape away. Beſides this expoſition is plainly forced, after their going out by the breaches, to ſay, that they were forced to the Palaces, from which they were quite gone out of the City; wherefore I reſt in the former as being without all exception. And then by the former words is meant their being carryed away captive through the breaches ſome after other ſome, yet not ſo far diſtant, but that one ſaw another, and followed him, as one Cow another being driven through a gate from paſture.

V. 2. For the words of verſ. 2. He will take you away with hookes and your poſterity with fiſh hookes, if we follow this reading, the ſenſe will be plain, the Aſſyrians ſhall come as fiſhers, and take you away as fiſhes being drawn with fiſhhooks, againſt which ye ſhall have no power, as fiſhes have not, when the hooks are once faſtened in their noſethrils, although they be great and ſtrong. The like metaphor is uſed in ſpeaking of Senacherib, I will put an hook in thy noſethrils; Eſa. 38. and Jer. 16.16. I will ſend for many fiſhers, and they ſhall fiſh them: but the Vulgar Latine hath it, Levabo vos in contis & reliquias veſtras in ollis fetventibus, expounded by Lyra, I will lift you up by ſuch inſtruments, as wherewith great Lyra. burthens are raiſed, this being ſpoken of them, that were carryed away captive tiye, and I will burn you that remain in your houſes. The word rendered contis, but in the New Tranſlation with hooks, ſignifieth alſo ſhields, and not צנות the word here uſed, but צנים ſignifieth pricks, and therefore it ſhould as I take it be rendred with ſhields, as if he had ſaid by armed men, that ſhall come againſt you, one peice of armour then in uſe, the ſhield being named for all.

For the next word, about which the difference is, viz. סירות דוגה properly ſignifying pots of fiſh, it ſeemeth, that the Vulg. in rendring it reſpected rather the ſenſe, then the proper meaning of the words, taking it as meant, that like fiſhes they ſhould be boiled in pots ſeething upon the fire, underſtanding by theſe pots their houſes fired by the enemy wherein many of them dyed & were conſumed to aſhes, as fiſhes would be in a pot being without water ſet upon a moſt ardent fire. But forſomuch as [illegible] ſignifieth hookes, and not סירות, it is not ſo genuine hereby to render it, wherefore I think it beſt rather to adhere to Jerome. Now becauſe the Iſraelites would hardly beleive when their Kingdome was ſo mighty, that it could ever come to this, the Lord here ſaith, I have ſworn by mine holineſſe, that is, by my ſelf, for the holi-Heb. 6. 13. neſſe of God is God, and there being no greater then God to ſwear by hee ſweareth by himſelf, that for the Oaths ſake they might beleeve and tremble, and turn from their ſins, though otherwiſe moſt hard to beleeve.

V. 4. Come to Bethel and tranſgreſſe, and to Gilgal. Here the Prophet proceeds by way of irony, mocking at their ſuperſtition in Bethel, about the golden Calf ſet up by Jeroboam and in Gilgal, of their ſinning in which place alſo ſee Hoſ. 4. 15.
V. 5. And in ſpeaking in like manner of their ſacrificing, and bringing their tithes thither, whereby they thought, that their ſins were expiated, he doth by the way tax one abuſe in their ſacrificing that they uſed leaven contrary to the Law of God, Exod. 12. and Levit. 2. 11. but this he ſaith liked them well, being all done againſt the will and Ordinance of God, who appointed neither Note. Bethel nor Gilgal, but Zion, for the place to bring all Sacrifices and Tithes unto. See here the blindneſſe of the ſuperſtitious, although they do in way of devotion clean contrary to the revealed will of God in many things, yet they ſooth up themſelves in an opinion of doing ſervice to God moſt highly pleaſing unto him, as the Papiſts at this day going to Rome for devotion, eſpecially in a year of Jubilee or to Saints ſhrines, making offerings there, praying unto them, and ſerving God by images ſo flatly forbidden in many places.
V. 6. But the judgement of ſuch followeth, verſ. 6. I have given you cleanneſſe of teeth in all your Cities, that is, famin for want of bread, as is further expreſſed, ver. 7.
I have alſo withholden rain from you, &c. In which words and the words following he ſheweth what judgements had been by God laid upon them, whereby they ſhould have been converted, as firſt famine, ſo that they needed not a tooth-1 King. 18. picker, as a man doth after that he hath eaten fleſh, which is generally by 2 King. 8. Expoſitours referred to the famin in Ahabs time, and to that of ſeven years in Jorams time. 2. Witholding of rain three months before the harveſt, whereby both the corn in ſtead of growing to maturity, and abounding became very ſcarce, and that which was, withered, and their want of water came to pinch them as much as the want of bread, yet that it might appear to have come ſo to paſſe by a Divine providence and not by chance, he ſaith, it rained upon one City and not upon another. And this moſt probably was in the time of the famine of ſeven years, 2 King. 8. for when the rain was with held V. 9. in Ahabs time, there was neither dew nor rain upon any City in Iſrael. 3. Gods ſmiting them with blaſting, and mildew, and the palmer-worme, of V. 10. which I have ſpoken upon Joel 1. 4. I have ſent the Peſtilence amongſt you after the manner of Egypt, Heb. in the way of Egypt, whereupon it is thought, that when they in their ſtraights ſought to Egypt for help againſt their enemies, the Lord thus ſmote them, although it be no where before recorded in the ſacred hiſtory. 5. His ſlaying their young men with the ſword, and the taking away their horſes, whence a ſtink came up into the noſethrils of the ſurvivors, which moſt probably is ſpoken of the great ſlaughters made amongſt them in the days of Jehoahaz, 2 King. 13. 7. when onely fifty horſemen were left and ten chariots and ten thouſand footmen, the reſt being ſlain and taken, and of theſe ſlain ones, the corps lying unburyed ſtank to their great annoyance.

V. 11. Laſtly, his overthrowing of them, as Sodom and Gamorrah, ſo that they were as firebrands pluckt out of the fire: This ſimilitude is uſed not to ſhew, that Iſrael was at any time dealt with altogether as Sodom, but that as God was extreamly provoked by Sodom, ſo he was by Iſrael, and as Sodom was deſtroyed therefore by fire, ſo Iſrael by fire and ſword: but whereas none of Sodom were preſerved from that common burning, ſome of Iſrael were, fifty horſemen, as was ſaid before and ten thouſand footmen, and the deſtruction being ſo great, it was the ſingular mercy of God theſe were preſerved, they being here in dealt with as a brand being in the fire, as other wood, but ſnatcht out and ſo preſerved, through his mercy who bare them ſo great favour. And in concluſion of every of theſe judgements capitulated he ſaith, yet they turned not to me. And that they ſuffered ſuch grievous things, the courſe of the hiſtory in Ahabs time, and in Jeroboams, and in the dayes of Jehoahaz doth aboundantly ſhew.

V. 12. Therefore I will doe thus unto thee (O Iſrael) and becauſe I will doe thus unto thee, prepare to meet thy God. Here followeth the judgement that was yet to come after all theſe things ſuffered which he expreſſeth not, but as men commonly in making an Oath uſed of old to ſay, God doe ſo to me, ſo the Lord here ſaith, I will do thus or ſo to thee, meaning being yet more ſevere to the utter rooting of them out without any favour, prepare to meet thy God; which Calvin ſaith, Calvin. is taken two ways, either ironically, as if he had ſaid, prepare to goe againſt him if thou canſt, and ſtop the courſe of his judgments, or ſeriouſly be moved by repentance to prevent the evils, that are further coming upon thee; which he rather approveth, as there is good reaſon: And that they might be the more V. 13. moved hee addeth; He that formeth the mountaines and createth the windes, &c. in which words the Almighty power of God is aboundantly ſet forth to move their mindes the more to fear and tremble before him. For ſhall wee not fear and turn to him, ceaſing by our ſins to provoke him, that ruleth over the greateſt and mightieſt things that are, the high and huge mountains, the boiſterous and turbulent windes, againſt which nothing can ſtand, for they rend the rocks and mountains, 1 King. 19. he declareth to man what is his thought, by piercing into his heart by his word, ſo that if any evill thought be in him, his Word as a ſword laying it open or entring into it pricks and wounds him, ſo that when God will he ſhall have no quiet within, that maketh the morning darkneſſe, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth. Theſe two are by Lyra Lyra. expounded of the morning of the Goſpel turned into darkneſſe to the Jew, and of the power, which God getteth over Kings and Princes amongſt the heathen, hereby making them to proſtrate themſelves at his feet, this being his treading upon the altitudes of the earth: which expoſition although I reject not, as ſetting forth the allegoricall ſenſe, yet the literall meaning is firſt to be imbraced, he turneth comfort ſet forth by light into ſorrow ſet forth by darkneſſe, to wicked men that goe on obſtinately in their ſins, and treads under foot the greateſt in this world, ſet forth by high places, that by their wickedneſſe provoke him, be they never ſo potent, as at the time of ſpeaking, this Jeroboam the King of Iſrael was, for which he concludeth, ſaying the Lord of hoaſts is his name, that no man might harden himſelf through unbeleife ſaying, how can this be? for how can any potentate of the earth prevent it, ſeeing he that threatneth it is the Lord of hoaſts, all creatures both celeſtiall and terreſtriall are his armies, whom no force is or can be able to reſiſt.

CHAP. V.

V. 2. THe Virgin of Iſrael is faln. Here the Prophet foreſeeing by the ſpirit the deſtruction to come upon Iſrael lamenteth it as Jer.9. that Prophet doth, and the more becauſe he foreſaw not any deliverance to come from her captivity, as to Judah after 70 years, for which he ſaith, there is none to raiſe her up, although under the Goſpell, as is often ſaid by other Prophets, the time cometh that all Iſrael ſhall bee ſaved, as Saint Paul gathereth, Rom. 11.

V. 4. For thus ſaith the Lord unto the houſe of Iſrael, Seek ye me and ye ſhall live. Here a remedy yet is preſcribed againſt this miſery, and becauſe he foreſaw that his exhortation to repentance would not take effect in them, he falleth again to threatning, v. 16, 17, &c. and ſheweth how unpleaſing their devotions were to God, whereby they thought theſe judgements might be turned away, ver. 21. then exhorting again to righteouſneſſe, verſ. 24. But becauſe this never took effect with them, he recounteth, to make them the more odious to themſelves their abominations paſt, ver. 25, 26. and concludeth with threatning captivity unto them, v. 27.

V. 5. Seek not to Bethel, &c. Of Bethel and Gilgal, ſee before chap. 4.4. but here Beerſhebah is alſo forbidden to be gone unto: for that was another holy place, wherein Abraham worſhipped, and dwelt long, Gen. 21.33. and ſuperſtitious men were ready to take ſuch occaſions to worſhip falſe Gods in other places beſides that, which was alone appointed, thus committing two ſins together, one of idolatry, the other of going from Gods injunction in reſpect of the place. For the laſt of theſe none ſhall have to anſwer now, but for the former the papiſts ſhall have an heavy anſwer to make, viz. for their idolatry in any Note. place, as this was the ſin chiefly laid to the charge of Iſrael here. And hence it appeareth, that they ſeek God in vain that do it otherwiſe then he hath preſcribed in his holy word: for Bethel ſhall go into captivity, that is, the Worſhippers in Bethel, and Gilgal. Verſ. 6. Seek the Lord and yee ſhall live, leſt he break out like

V. 6. fire in the houſe of Joſeph, that is, by bringing the enemy with ſword, and fire againſt Iſrael, ſet forth by the houſe of Joſeph, becauſe Ephraim comming of Joſeph was the principall tribe of the ten, and none in Bethel ſhall quench it, that is, your worſhip exhibited there to idols ſhall be ſo far from averting this judgement, as that therefore the flame of that fire ſhall be more increaſed, onely ſeeking the Lord by penitent prayer and turning to him ſhall avert it.

V. 7. Yet that turn judgement into wormwood: Here he ſheweth, who ſhould turn, even the moſt wicked, that hitherto regarded not righteouſneſſe, but ſitting in the Judgement ſeat imbittered the cauſes of the poore by judging againſt

V. 8. them, thus filling them with bitter ſorrow. Verſ. 8. That maketh the ſeven ſtars and the Orion, and turneth the ſhadow of death into the morning. That they might the more be moved to ſeek God, he here ſpeaks more of him to ſet forth his infinite power and ability at his wil to bring enemies upon a land, wherewith he is diſpleaſed. His power ſpoken of firſt is ordinary, appearing in the ſtars of heaven and ordering of the dayes and nights, ſo that the time which is in winter darkneſſe, in ſummer is turned into the morning light, which is meant Gualter. according to Gualter, when he ſaith, he turneth the ſhaddow of death into the morning, &c. and contrariwiſe ſhortening the dayes, which were long in ſummer, he in winter turneth the day, that it is dark as the night long in the morning. And he ſaith, that in ſpeaking of the ſeven ſtars and Orion, all the ſtars are meant, of which God is the Creatour, but theſe are ſpecially named becauſe in theſe the power of God ſpecially ſhineth, for that they alwayes appear and Calvin. keep their times. Calvin for the ſeven ſtars hath Pleiades, and ſaith ſome turn it Arcturus, ſaying that theſe ſtars in ſpeciall are mentioned, becauſe the 7 ſtars or Pleiades appear againſt the ſpring, when milde weather followeth, Orion againſt winter, when the weather is more turbulent. Some others make them both ſigns of rain, and ſtirrers up of windes, they riſing both in the North, Orion ſometime in September, the 7 ſtars in the ſpring, of which alſo ſee Job 9. Calling the waters out of the Sea, and pouring them out upon the Earth, that is, exhaling them up in vapours into the air, and thence at his will cauſing them to deſcend to water the earth: And here again he concludes the ſentence almoſt as ch. 4.27. the Lord, or Jehovah is his name, by ſpeaking thus magnifically of God again ſeeking to ſtrike terrour into the wicked, that they might humble themſelves before him. For the whole verſe, ſome ſeparate it from the former, as a perfect ſentence in it ſelf, and having no coherence, with the former, and ſo read it in the nominative caſe, but I preferre reading it rather in the accuſative, as cohering with v. 6, 7. according to that which hath been already ſaid.

And hitherto of things ordinary in the courſe of Nature arguing Gods almighty power, v. 9. he cometh to other particular acts of his ſhewing the ſame. V. 9. That ſtrengtheneth the ſpoiled againſt the ſtrong, ſo that the ſpoiled ſhall come againſt the fortreſſe: Vulg. who laugheth at waſting upon the ſtrong, and brings depopulation upon the mighty: Calv. who ſtrengtheneth the waſter above the mighty, and the waſter ſhall aſcend upon the ſtrong holds: and this is verbatim according to Hebr. the meaning being, that the Lord ſheweth his power in ſtrengthening enemies againſt the mighty, ſuch as the Kingdom of Iſrael now was, when he is provoked by ſin, ſo as of what ſtrength ſoever he be, he ſhall not be able to ſtand, and if he truſteth to a ſtrong hold, the ſame waſting enemy ſhal break through into that alſo: which is ſpoken to move Iſrael not to ſtand out againſt the Lord exhorting to repentance: but fearing what he is able to do, to turn unto him.

V. 10. They hate him that rebuketh in the gate, and they abhorre him that ſpeaks uprightly: Here again he returneth from ſpeaking of Gods power to ſhew to what an height of ſin their Judges were grown, it was matter enough of hatred in the chief magiſtrate, if any durſt be ſo bold as to reprove him, whether Prophet or other wiſe man, when he erreth from the way of juſtice. For when ſuch men look more at baſe gain, or the diſhonour that is thus done unto them, then the righteouſneſſe of the thing ſpoken, being hereby exaſperated, they lay unto them, and the ſtate where they rule a foundation of ruine, it being the property of godly rulers in all times to hearken to ſuch reproofs, but of the wicked to rage hereat, as of David, who being by Nathan reproved humbled himſelf, and Jehoſhaphat having holpen Ahab, for which a Prophet reproved him, did likewiſe, and Hezekiah being reproved by Iſaiah, and threatned for bringing Merodach Baladans Embaſſadours into the Lords houſe and ſhewing them his treaſures, heard it patiently. Contrariwiſe Aſa being reproved, raged againſt the Prophet and put him in ſtocks, Ahab ſent Michaiah to priſon, and Joaſh and his Princes murthered Zechariah, all which ſuffered therefore, but thoſe godly Kings bearing reproofe proſpered. And David ſaith, to teach other rulers what they ſhould doe, Let the righteous ſmite me: And godly Theodoſius when Ambroſe ſmote him with excommunication ſaid, that he had found him only worthy to be a Biſhop in all his Empire. Wherefore how can this Land and the Rulers hereof but finally come to ruine, ſeeing it is now done contrariwiſe, ſuch as are ſet up to judge others being moſt impatient at any reproof although never ſo juſt, and even hating the reprover, as I have found it in ſome in my own experience. The Lord turne their hearts, and turn away the judgments hanging over our heads for this wickedneſſe. Note.

If any man ſhall ſay, how may it hence be gathered, that Magiſtrates and Judges are here ſpoken againſt, for nothing elſe is ſaid, but they hate him that reproveth in the gate? Sol. this is a deſcription of Judges, for of old they ſate to Judge in gate-houſes at the entrance of cities, to which places all men might freely reſort and hear and ſee the juſtneſſe of their proceedings, and the ſame is in effect ſtill done, there being ſhire-houſes for this end in all places untill that of late a new generation of Judges being ſet up in theſe inordinate times, they fit to judge in private chambers, the dores being locked, as if they were aſhamed that the country ſhould hear how unjuſtly they proceed in many things, or come to know the rules, whereby they proceed to take heed that they fall not into their danger.

V. 11,12. Moreover, that Judges are here inveighed againſt, is plain from that which followeth, v. 11,12. For as much as your treading is upon the poor and ye take from him burthens of wheat, ye have built houſes of hewn ſtone, &c. I know your manifold tranſgreſſions and mighty ſinnes, they afflict the juſt, they take a bribe, and turn aſide the poor in the gate : whereby is meant that when unjuſt Judges proceed violently againſt poorer and meaner men, againſt juſtice and equity, this is a treading upon them, and trampling them under their feet as the duſt, according to that which was ſaid before, ch.2.7. an intolerable indignity to be offered to men by men, if the Proverb be not now verified, homo homini dæmon, I know how it can be. Touching burthens of wheat, they are bribes taken of their beſt corn, which have no money, but a little corn to ſuſtein them and their families, by bribes ver.12. moneys or other things taken by Judges to ſhew them favour are meant, and becauſe hereby they are much impoveriſhed, he calleth it an afflicting of the juſt, and as for poor men, that have nothing to give, they are ſaid to turn them aſide in the gate, that is, ſend them back to priſon to goe from thence to the place of execution ; and thus the German proverb is fulfilled, the rich are hanged up by their purſes, and the poor by their necks. But for all this injuſtice, whereby Judges grow rich, and for their pomp and pleaſure build ſtately houſes, make them pleaſant gardens, and ruffle it out in ſilks and velvets in one faſhion after another, there being no end of their luxury and pride, but they bear themſelves towards the common people like demi-gods ; the Lord who knoweth all this, and what underhand wayes they have to get ſuch wealth, will not ſuffer them to goe unpuniſhed, by turning them out of their houſes and places of pleaſure to live in miſery all their days after. And his knowing of it is ſpoken of, to intimate, that they thought, that he either took no notice of theſe their unjuſt dealings, or elſe accounted them not ſo hainous, but would paſſe them over as light offences.

V. 13. Note. Therefore the prudent ſhall keep ſilence in that time: whereby he meaneth not that they might do ſo, and by their ſilence let ſuch unrighteouſneſſe goe unreproved : but that their harſh dealing with men cordially affected to juſtice ſhould be ſo great, as that it ſhould be of force to make wiſe men ſilent, ſeeing they could do no good by ſpeaking, and many for fear ſhould be ſilent, yet not be herein juſtified. For it is the duty of ſuch men to ſpeak ſtill and not be ſilent, as Ezek. 3. it is commanded, and Jeremiah ſometime ſeeing how deſperately they were ſet upon evill, for which he thought to ſpeak no more, felt the word in him as a fire whereby he was forced again to break out into bitter declamations againſt the ſins of the higheſt.

V. 14. Seek good and not evill, and the Lord ſhall be with you, as ye have ſaid, that is, yee bear your ſelves upon God as your God, preſuming and ſaying, becauſe ye are his people, the ſeed of Abraham and circumciſed, he is with you and will defend you from all your enemies : but do not for this ſooth up your ſelves in doing evil, ſeek good and not evill, and then it ſhall be ſo indeed. And hereby he intimateth two things.

Note. 1. That good is not ſo eaſily done, but whoſo will doe it and ſo have God with them, muſt ſtrain themſelves to ſeek and find it out, and then to walk in it, as it is alſo ſaid, Seek firſt the Kingdom of God, Mat. 6.33. and ſtrive to enter in at the ſtraight gate *Mat.*7.14.

2. That he who would have God to be with him muſt ſo ſeek good, as that he mingle not any evill with it, but flee all and every ſin.

V. 15. Eſtabliſh judgment in the gate : here one good thing in particular which we are bidden to ſeek and love is commended unto us, as whereupon much more good depended, that is, the Judges doing juſtly, and that conſtantly, whereupon he ſaith, it may be the Lord will be gracious to the remnant of Joſeph, which he ſpeaks in reference to that which was ſaid, v. 31. the City that went out by 1000, ſhall leave 100, &c. to this remnant he ſaith here, it may be the Lord will be gracious, which he ſpeaketh not doubtingly, but to ſtirre them up the more to repentance, as whoſe caſe was now come to be ſuch, that Gods favour could hardly be recovered again, therefore it was high time to make haſt to doe this good and to delay no longer.

V. 16. Therefore the Lord ſaith thus, wailing ſhall be in all ſtreets, &c. Having ſince his inveighing againſt their ſins interpoſed an exhortation to good, v. 14, 15. now he returneth again to tell them, if they did not thus, what a lamentable caſe they ſhould be in, as he had begun with lamentation, *v.*1. ſo he ſheweth now, that what he there foretold ſhould come to paſſe in all places, and to all ſorts of men, *v.*17.

V. 18. Calvin. Woe to you that deſire the day of the Lord: Some, ſaith Calvin, underſtand this as if he had ſaid, woe to you that deſire that the Lord would take you out of this world, as being impatient of living, by reaſon of their miſeries, but this he ſaith rightly is farre from the Prophets meaning. He therefore will have this to be the ſenſe, woe to you hypocrites that ſpeak ſo much of God, as if when his day or time cometh to ſhew his almighty power, it would be for your ſafety and the deſtruction of your enemies, forſomuch as ye are his people, and live under his ordinances, as other nations do not: for this muſt be his meaning, although not ſo fully expreſſed, and being thus taken, it agreeth very well, unleſſe we ſhall underſtand it as ſome others do, as ſpoken by prophane mock-gods, who made a ſcoffe of all his threatnings, ſaying in deriſion, Let the day of the Lord come, we fear it not, ſurely he will doe great matters when it cometh, for thou terrifieſt us only with words, which we beleeve not, ſhall ever take effect, ſo *Jer.*17. Let the word of the Lord come, and 2 Pet. 3. Where is the promiſe of his comming? But I preferre the former for the words following, what have ye to doe with the day of the Lord? it is a day of darkneſſe, as Joel 2.2. and not of light to you, which argueth that they who ſaid thus, beleeved that a day was coming, but contrary to that which ſhould then be done againſt them, they hoped that great matters ſhould be done for them, which made them deſire it, as prophane mockers doe not, but hear it ſpoken of only, as a ſcarcrow.

V. 19. And *v.*19. maketh further for this our expoſition, As if a man fled from a Lion, and a Bear met him, or went into an houſe and leaned upon a wall with his hand and a ſerpent bit him: whereby is meant that theſe men, who deſire the day of the Lord in hope of ſome help againſt their enemies contrary to Gods threatnings called the roaring of a Lion, ch.3. doe but herein flee, as it were, from a Lion, but are torn by a Bear, lean for ſome eaſe to a wall, but are bitten by a ſerpent to their deſtruction inevitable, forſomuch as ſome ſerpents biting cauſeth ſwelling, and kils the party bitten without remedy.

V. 20. Whereupon he inferreth *v.*20. Shall not the day of the Lord be darkneſſe, and no light in it? as if he had ſaid, judge now, ſith it ſhall be thus, whether it ſhall not be as I ſaid, a day of darkneſſe.

V. 21. I hate, I deſpiſe your feaſt dayes, &c. Here he preventeth them, if they ſhould think, yet by feſtivals and incenſe and ſacrifices to avert his wrath, by ſaying, that he hates theſe, when they come from wicked men, ſee the like Eſay 1.12.

V. 23. Take away the noiſe of thy ſongs, I will not hear the melody of thy viols, which is added becauſe by ſinging and muſick Gods people ſought to come into favour with him beſides by ſacrificing, but the ſweeteſt melody of ſinging Pſalmes hath but an harſh ſound in his ears when wicked men make it, for ſinging muſt be with grace in the heart. Eph. 5. 19.

V. 24. Lyra. Let judgment run down like waters, and righteouſneſſe as a mighty ſtream: Vulg. judgment ſhall be revealed as water, that is, ſaith Lyra, the judgments of God againſt Iſrael ſhall appear as waters, when it is a great floud, and by theſe ſent in righteouſneſſe for their ſins they ſhall be carryed away into captivity, as things are violently carryed away by a ſtrong ſtream. This is alſo mentioned and not rejected by Calvin, who ſpeaks of two more brought by others. Calvin.

1. Underſtanding by judgment and righteouſneſſe, juſt proceedings in Judges, and all parts of righteouſneſſe in dealing both in them and in all other men, as if he had ſaid, ye Judges give ſentence ſo juſtly in all caſes, which are many that come before you, that judgment may flow from your mouths as a floud, and all ye people be ſo earneſtly ſet upon righteous dealing, that no unrighteouſneſſe may be able to ſtand againſt it, no more then hey or ſtubble in the way of a ſtrong ſtream can ſtand, but all are carryed away hereby, and this is followed by Gualter, comparing this to Eſa. 1. 16. where after ſacrifices alſo rejected, judgment is commanded. Gualter.

2. Underſtanding the judgment and righteouſneſſe of Chriſt when he cometh in time of the Goſpel, who is often by theſe two celebrated. But he brings and prefers another, as if this were ſpoken by way of anſwering an objection, Wouldſt thou not have us ſacrifice and keep feſtivals then, which God hath commanded? Sol. Yes verily, do ſo ſtill, but when ye do abound this way, be ſure to fill all the courts with juſtice as flouds fill all channels and all your habitations with righteouſneſſe carryed on with all earneſtneſſe, and ſo being as a ſtrong ſtream bearing down all unrighteouſneſſe and ſin. Betwixt this and that of Gualter there is little difference, and that wherein, of encouraging them to ſacrificing, I cannot imbrace, becauſe all the ſacrificing of the ten tribes, being done out of the place appointed was ſin, and therefore I reſt in that of Gualter. For Lyra his Expoſition I ſee no ground here, becauſe that having rejected their ſacrifices, and bidden take away their muſick, he addeth, and let judgment roll, as the words ſignifieth, goe on currently without any impediment, by a conjunction copulative, ſhewing, that as he would have the ſervice before named ſo abominable taken away, ſo he would have judgment and juſtice to be with all diligence attended to, as the thing wherein he moſt delighteth. It may alſo be prophetically ſpoken of Chriſts proceeding under the Goſpel, becauſe in every of the Prophets ſomething is ſaid of Chriſt, as being the main end both of the Law and the Prophets. Mich. 6.

V. 25. Have ye offered unto me ſacrifices in the wilderneſſe the ſpace of forty years? Here he reſumes the argument in hand v. 22, 23. againſt their ſacrificing, proving that this ſervice was not of old ſo ſtrictly ſtood upon, becauſe there was a time when it was not performed, and yet they not reproved for this neglect 40 years together; yea in ſtead of ſacrifice offering to God, they moſt impiouſly ſacrificed to Moloch and Chiun, which the Lord would not endure, but therefore threatens their carrying away beyond Damaſcus, verſ. 26, 27. upon which words, I have ſaid enough in my Expoſitions upon Act. 7.42,43.

CHAP. VI.

V. 1. WOe to them that are at eaſe in Zion, that truſt to the Mountain of Samaria: Here the Prophet denounceth Judgments againſt Judah and Iſrael both, eſpecially the great ones in both Kingdoms, leſt Iſrael ſhould bear her ſelf upon Judah, and ſay, there be as great ſins amongſt the beſt and greateſt in Judah, as amongſt our great ones, why then are we ſo greatly threatned, but they not? To prevent this they are now both threatned together under the name of Zion and Samaria, the head cities of either Kingdom. For whereas he may ſeem to ſpeak only to the Princes of Zion, threatning them for truſting to the Kingdom of Iſrael, as Lyra takes it, he indeed threatneth them both, and therefore theſe words are to be ſupplyed between Zion, and that truſt, and to you, as if he had ſaid, Woe to you ſecure ones in Zion, and to you that truſt in the Mountainous ſituation of Samaria; for of the men of Judah this cannot be underſtood, becauſe the ſtrength of Samaria, was nothing to them, and we ſeldom read of Iſraels helping Judah, but of joining with other forces againſt them often: which are named chief of the nations, to whom the houſe of Iſrael came, Vulg. Optimates, capita populi ingredientes pompatice domus Iſrael: Cald. which were famous in the beginning of the Nations, and the houſe of Iſrael went in to them: Hebr. expreſly named the head or beginning of Nations, to whom the houſe Lyra.

of Iſrael came: hereby ſetting forth the honourable eſteem in which Zion and Samaria were moſt anciently, and ſince they became the principall habitations of the children of Iſrael, they were of greateſt note in all the Kingdome for the peoples reſorting thither as to their Metropoliticall cities. And therefore there being many great ones dwelling in both theſe places, who abounded in wealth, and yet taſted not of miſeries by warre or famine, and therefore went on in living in pleaſure, nothing moved at thoſe things which the meaner ſort ſuffered, and ſuch as dwelt about in more remote places, he denounceth a woe againſt them, to awaken them if it were poſſible, from their ſecurity unto repentance.

V. 2. Paſſe yee to Calneh and ſee, then goe to Hamath the great, then goe down to Gath, be they better then theſe Kingdoms, or their border greater then your border? Vulg. and to their beſt Kingdoms alſo, if their border be larger then yours: but the firſt is moſt agreeable to the Hebrew, a compariſon is here made between two Kingdoms of the Iſraelites, and other famous places, that it being made hereby to appear, that Iſrael was more bound to God for his ſpeciall favour in placing them in ſo fruitfull and ample countries, ſometimes being above 30 Kingdoms, the old inhabitants being caſt out, that they might be planted in, their ingratitude might the more appear, and the Juſtice of God in proceeding againſt them, as is threatned ver. 7, 8, 9, &c. Gualter. Lyra.

Gen. 10. 10. For the places here named: Calneh was famous of old in Nimrods time, it being the head of his Kingdome. Hamath the great is ſo called, to diſtinguiſh it from Hamath at the entrance of the Land of Iſrael, of which ſee v. 14. 16. It was alſo a city of great note, and therefore when Rabſhakeh would terrifie the Jews by his Maſter Senacheribs puiſſance, he telleth what places he had already ſubdued, and beginneth with Hamath as the chief. Gath of the Philiſtims is well enough known. 2 King. 18. 34. Calvin. Calvin will have the meaning to be, that they ſhould conſider the greatneſſe and fruitfulneſſe of theſe places, and yet they were unable to defend themſelves againſt the enemie, and therefore much leſſe ſhould they whoſe Kingdoms were not ſo fruitfull and large as thoſe. But then the words muſt be read thus, Are ye better then theſe Kingdoms? whether or no are their borders larger then yours? it muſt be confeſſed that they are not: for although the land of Iſrael were very fruitfull and large, yet all confeſſe that theſe countries were ſome of them more fruitfull and large. And being thus underſtood no force ſhall be done to the words, and the expoſition will be moſt ſenſible, their deſtruction being laid before their eyes, who were of greater power, well might they fear deſtruction alſo. Whether of theſe expoſitions to follow therefore, I leave to the judicious reader to chooſe. But for the firſt make the words before going, verſ. 1. which are named the chief of the Nations.

V. 3, 4. Having ſpoken of their ſin in generall, here he ſets it forth more particularly and at large, ſhewing in what pleaſure and exceſs they lived, and were not affected at the miſeries of their brethren, the meaner ſort of the ten tribes, called Joſeph, becauſe the tribes coming of him, Ephraim and Manaſſeh, were the greateſt part of them.

But what affliction of theirs is meant? It is generally anſwered, the ſufferings in the dayes of Jehoahaz 2 King. 13. in whoſe time Iſrael was brought very low, although in Jeroboams time that ſtate flouriſhed again, but the meaner ſort moſt probably were pulled ſo down, that they could not recover again, but lived ſtill in miſery, although the greater ones about the King, by many victories obtained, came to wallow in wealth, and conſequently in all manner of ſenſuall pleaſure. But I rather think that the Prophet ſpeaks this againſt the men of Zion with whom he began, taxing them for want of all ſympathy with their brethren of the ten tribes when they were in that low ebbe of miſery before ſpoken of, yet the next words ſhew that he ſpeaks thus againſt Zion, ſo that as he began with Zion and Samaria together, v. 1. ſo he taxeth and threatneth them both together, or after the invective drawn out, he in the next words ſingleth out Samaria, to which he

V. 7. he was more ſpecially ſent, ſaying, Therefore they ſhall goe into captivity with them that goe firſt into captivity, and the banquet of them that ſtretched themſelves ſhall be removed, according to that which was before ſaid, they ſtretch themſelves upon their couches, v. 4. And as it is here ſaid, they went firſt into captivity, being taken by Salmanaſar King of Aſſyria. 2 King 17.

V. 8. The Lord God hath ſworn by himſelf, I hate the excellency of Jacob, and abhorre his palaces, therefore will I deliver up the city,&c Hebr. the Lord hath ſworn by his ſoul, or Hilary. life: whereupon Hilary gathereth againſt the Arrians, that the Son of God Calvin is equall with God the Father, underſtanding him by his life, but as Calvin ſaith, this is frivolous, becauſe in ſaying, by his life, he meaneth himſelf, as in other places: For excellency here, the Vulg. hath the pride of Jacob, which is Lyra. both by Lyra and Gualter expounded of their pomp and pride in their buil- Gualter. dings, houſhold ſtuffe, exceſſe in feaſting, and apparell, and elate carriage, to expreſſe which he addeth, their palaces, that by this one part of their oſtenta- Calvin. tion we might underſtand the reſt. Calvin confeſſing that the word גאון ſignifieth either pride or excellency and glory, according to the uſe of the word, Eſay 2. & *Pſal.*46. expounds it yet of that wherein Jacob excelled other Nations, as namely, that they were Gods peculiar people, and were graced with his Ordinances and miraculous works wrought for them above other Nations, wherein they prided themſelves and diſdained all reproofs and threatnings, as thinking that they were by reaſon hereof ſartitecti from the danger of their enemies: this the Lord ſaith he abhorreth in Jacob, becauſe they upon whom ſuch excellency is conferred, being unanſwerable to it in their doings, are to God the more abominable. Let the Reader judge, and take it either this or the former way he ſhall not erre, but I preferre the firſt as moſt conſonant to the words before-going, v. 3, 4, 5, 6. and following after in this and v. 9, 10, 11. For Gods ſwearing by himſelf, by his ſoul, it is ſpoken after the manner of men, becauſe to men hard of beleef, that they might beleeve it and tremble, ſeeing if a King ſwears by his ſoul to puniſh his wicked rebels, he will certainly do it; much more will the Lord.

V. 9. If there remain ten men in one houſe they ſhall dye: Here the Prophet goeth on to ſhew that the Lords hating of Jacob for his ſins, is not to be ſleighted, but by all men to be trembled at: for where he abhors, death follows, and that ſo univerſally, that in a populous family not one is left alive. The plague of God is great, when in a family conſiſting of 40 or 50 perſons, all are taken away to ten, but if theſe ten be not ſuffered to remain, no nor one of them, the deſtruction is farre greater and more to be trembled at. But this he ſheweth ſhould be their caſe, for he ſaith, if there remain or be left ten, intimating the death of many in that houſe before.

V. 10. And v. 10. ſerveth yet further to ſet forth their extraordinary mortality. And a mans uncle ſhall take him up, and he that burneth him, to bring the bones out of the houſe, and ſhall ſay to him that is by the ſides of the houſe, Is there any yet with thee? and he ſhall ſay, Nay, hold thy tongue, for we may not make mention of the name of the Lord: Hebr. the laſt words are, becauſe, not to remember the name of the Lord, ſo that they may be ſupplyed either thus, we may not remember, or there is not one left to remember; and for nay, it is nothing, there is none, Vulg. finis, an end, and for the ſides of the houſe, hath in penetralibus domus. The meaning of all the words is, that the mortality ſhall be ſo great, that whereas the office of taking and carrying out the dead to the buriall is commonly committed to poor mercenary men, now mankind ſhould be ſo waſted in Iſrael, that there ſhould be none to be hired to doe this, but a kinſman whoſe love is moſt to their deceaſed kindred, muſt do this office himſelf, or elſe the dead muſt lye unburied, and becauſe the corps is too heavy for him alone to bring out, he is inforced to burn it in the houſe and then to carry out the bones and bury them only.

And he ſhall ſay to him in the ſides of the houſe, that is, in ſome outer houſe not formerly uſed for men to lodge in, but to avoid the contagion for the preſent made his refuge, is there any in the houſe yet living? and he ſhall ſay, none: approving hereby further that which was ſaid before of the dying of all ten in the houſe remaining, when others had dyed before. For the laſt words al Expoſitors generally read it, we may not make mention, for the underſtanding it, as Calvin ſaith, of ſuch as were ready to dy, to expreſs their deſperate rejecting of prayer in this extremity, as thinking it of no force herein to mention the Lord: ſome of men averſe from hearing of God in this caſe, as being one that they can have no comfort in, becauſe he had alwayes been reproving them, and now it was by his hand, that they ſuffered. And this indeed is Gualters, ſaying that ſome are moſt averſe from hearing God named, of which he giveth an example of one in Germany, who lying upon his death bed deſired his friends, that came to ſee him, not to mention the name of God unto him, for this was ſo great a terrour to him, that he could not bear it: and another example of a Jew brought by a friend of his to hear him, and having heard him, his friend asked, how he liked, he anſwered, he liked all well, but onely when he mentioned Jeſus hee was troubled and terrified at the hearing of that name. But Calvin is for another ſenſe, viz. that this is ſpoken in oppoſition to that which was ſaid before of hypocrites deſiring the day of the Lord, when they ſee the hand of God againſt them indeed, they are whiſt and ſay no more ſo, for now they have too much of it, finding him clean contrary to their expectation of a Patron and defender a moſt ſevere Judge. All which is good, but I prefer rather the reading which I have mentioned before, becauſe not one is left to remember the name of the Lord, for whileſt one is alive of Gods people, although not in ſincerity, yet in extremity he will call upon God, but now every one in the houſe was paſt this, they being all dead and gone into the land of ſilence and forgetfulneſſe. Againſt all other Expoſitions maketh, that the Lord is not before ſpoken of, but onely one being asked is there any in the houſe, he anſwers, None, hold thy peace, but of the Lord nothing is ſaid by the inquirer; whereupon the anſwerer ſhould uſe theſe words. Yet Gualter to make his ſenſe good, ſaith, it is an eclipticall ſpeech, ſomething in the inquirers words being left to be underſtood, as thus, Hath the Lord left no man in the houſe alive with thee? unto which the anſwer will ſo be apt, Be ſilent, make no mention of the Lord. But reading it as hath been ſaid, we ſhall not need to underſtand any other words and yet the ſenſe is perfect.

Calvin.

Gualter.

V. 11. He will ſmite the greater houſe with breaches and the little with clefts, that is, the houſe of Iſrael ſhall be ſmitten ſo, as that it ſhall come to utter ruine, but the houſe of Judah is ſmitten with clefts, which may be mended up, to intimate their return out of captivity again, to become a common-wealth, ſo Lyra; ſome under both Iſrael & Judah and richer and meaner ſort of people called the little houſe, and the Caldee, the kingdom, and the Kingdome, great and little. Calvin the Nobles and great ones of the land and the meaner ſort, for wickedneſſe generally overſpread all ſorts. V. 12. Shall horſes run upon the rock? can one plow there with oxen? for yee have turned judgement into gall, as chap. 5.7. the meaning is, horſes and Oxen will not doe contrary to their nature, but ye doe contrary, when as inſtead of judgement for the comfort of the poore being wronged, yee turn it through covetouſneſſe to their damage, if not undoing to the imbittering of their ſoules; the interlinear gloſſe, ye by your ſins turn Gods ſweetneſſe and goodneſſe into bitterneſſe to your ſelves and others, hereby forcing him to give you the bitter cup of miſery to drink.

V. 13. Have we not taken to us horns by our own ſtrength? Here he reproveth them for their boaſting and confidence in the dignity to which they had attained, ſet forth by horns wherewith they puſhed, as it were, their adverſaries in Jero- boams time getting ſo many victories over them, through the pity, that God took upon them, though wicked, when they were very low, but they proudly and ungratefully aſcribed it to their own ſtrength, as wherein they truſted, but it was as nothing. V.14. And for this God threatneth to ſtir up enemies againſt them from the entering in of Hemath to the river of the Wilderneſſe, that is, throughout all the land from the North where Hemath was, to the ſouth where this Wilderneſſe was.

CHAP. VII.

V. 1. THus hath the Lord ſhewed unto me the former graſſehoppers in the beginning of the latter growth. Amos having hitherto ſpoken plainly againſt their ſins and in threatning judgements therefore, now he proceedeth to ſpeak to the ſame effect by ſimilitudes as God ſhewed them unto him, and theſe were repreſented to him being three in three Viſions: 1. Of Graſſe-hoppers ſetting on to eat up the graſſe ſpringing again after the mowing, 2. Of a devouring fire verſ.4.5.&c. 3 Of a line and plummet held againſt a wall, v.7,8,9. Gualter. By the firſt of which the ſtate of Iſrael, ſaith Gualter, was repreſented after the diviſion in Jeroboams time, when the whole land was as a medow new mown, and he ſpeaks of the Kings mowings in the ſimilitude, becauſe the medows lying together, the King uſed to ſet a day to begin to mow, and then all men mowed. Now the land is ſet forth by this ſimilitude; becauſe at that time it was bare, as being weakened by this diviſion, and although it might grow again, yet as the after graſſe never groweth to the height of the firſt: ſo Iſrael after this denuding could not come to the power, of which he was in Davids and Solomons time. But when Ahab reigned it began to grow; he through Gods mercy obtaining three victories againſt the Syrians, but at length they compared here to graſſehoppers by cutting him off at Ramoth Gilead began, as it were to eat up the graſſe ſpringing up again, onely the prayers of Gods ſervants prevailed then for the averting of this judgement, to ſet forth 2 King. 13. which Amos ſaith, that he prayed, ſo the Lord repented, that is, ſuffered not the deſtruction then to goe forward; for by Eliſhah his means Iehoaſh gate the victory three times over the Syrians, when as after Ahabs death they had been eating the graſſe ſpringing again, all the time of Jehu his reign, or part of it, and in the time of Jehoahaz his ſon. V.4,5. And hitherto of the firſt, touching the ſecond ſimilitude of devouring fire, verſ.4,5,6. The Lord called to contend by fire, and it did eat up the great deep and devoured apart, hereby that which was done by Hazaell King of Syria, and his cruelty to Iſrael is ſet forth foretold by Eliſhah, and recorded 2 King. for great miſchief was by him done by fire and ſword; for which he may well be compared to fire. But againſt this evill Amos alſo prayeth and prevaileth, ſetting forth how the ſervants of God of that time by their prayers kept away deſtruction from Iſrael, ſo that it yet continued a kingdome. Thus it being twice indangered, 1. at the death Note. of Ahab; 2. In the time of Hazael tyranniſing over Jehoahaz and his people, it was ſtill upheld by prayer, which is to be noted, that we might learn what to impute our victories over our enemies now to, viz. not the ſtrength and martiall skil of men, but to the prayers of Gods ſervants, the Prophets, not inferring hereupon, that now certainly we ſhall alwayes prevaile. For the ſins continuing, for which judgements come, although they be for a time kept away, and all good ſucceſſe may be in expeditions againſt the enemy, yet the time ſhall come, that ſuch a wicked Nation ſhall by other enemies V. 7. be deſtroyed, as is here next ſet forth, verſ. 7. wherein is the third viſion of one holding a line and plummet in his hand, the Lord ſtood upon a wall made by a plumb line, with a plumb line in his hand: by which wall Iſrael is ſet forth, being made exactly as a wall made by a line and plummet, there being no unevenneſſe, or exorbitancy in it; and by this means comely and ſtrong. For thus Iſrael was made by God, when he peculiarly choſe this people, and built them by his Word and Sacraments, in which ſtate if they would have ſtood, they ſhould have continued as a ſtrong ſtone wall, or brazen, not to be beaten down. But being now by ſin made full of cracks, and bowing and ruinous, ſo that God the builder took no more pleaſure therein, hee ſtood upon it not to repell the enemies coming againſt it, but with a plumb line of deſtruction in his hand, as denoting hereby all the dimenſions of it in the longitude, altitude and latitude thereof, now denoted to deſtruction by them without any hope of preſervation any longer. For by a plumb line the like is ſet forth, 2 King. 21. 13. and Eſa. 34. it is threatened that a line ſhould be ſtretched over Idumea in the ſame ſenſe. And a line is ſpoken of to ſhew the juſtneſſe of Gods proceeding in judgement againſt a wicked people. Calvin applyeth the firſt ſimilitude to the time of Jehoahaz, but of the ſecond he makes no application. Lyra to the deſtruction by Salmanaſar and Nebuchadnezzar, by the Kings mowing underſtanding theſe Kings cutting down Iſrael and Judah, or one eating them as locuſts, the other cutting them down as graſſe is mown, in Gloſ. ordin. but I reſt in the former, not ſeeing any good ſenſe in theſe applications, but the firſt abundantly ſatisfying in all things.

V. 8. I will ſet a plumb line in the midſt of my people Iſrael. Here the application of the third Viſion is made, as hath been before ſaid, ſhewing Iſrael to be meant by the wall, Heb. it is, I will not adde any more a paſſing, that is, I will no more paſſe over their ſins, ſparing them ſtill for any intreaty, but ſet the ſtraight line of my juſtice amongſt them by bringing utter deſtruction to that Kingdom, as they deſerved, and this was fulfilled in the time of King Hoſhea by Salmanaſar. So that now we read no more of the Prophets praying againſt this judgement, as againſt the two former, becauſe the Lord had declared his reſolution, whereby is intimated that there ſhall come a time, when there ſhall be no Prophet more to make interceſſion for Iſrael, being found after ſundry judgements incorrigible, but deſtruction ſhall go on without remedy to the ruining of ſuch a ſtate, and it ſhall no more be repaired.

V. 9. And the high places of Iſaac ſhall be deſolate, &c. Here he plainly ſheweth what was before ſet forth verſ. 7, 8. obſcurely, approving the Expoſition before going, and ſhewing the main cauſe of this grievous ruine, viz. the abominations committed in places counted holy by reaſon of Iſaacs and Jacobs worſhipping there. For in this regard more holineſſe was thought to be in them, and what devotions were there performed muſt needs be acceptable to God, when as indeed now after one place appointed for all to reſort unto, whatſoever worſhip was exhibited elſewhere was abominable: ſuch was Shechem in the limits of Samaria, concerning which the woman of Samaria ſaid, Our fathers worſhipped in this mountain, and Beerſhebah, where Iſaac built an Altar, and I will riſe againſt the houſe of Jeroboam with the ſword, this was fulfilled in the time of Zechariah his ſon, 2 King. 15. 10. when Shallum ſlew him and reigned in his ſtead.

Joh. 4.
Gen. 26. 25.

V. 10, 11, 12, 13. Amaziah the Prieſt complaineth to Jeroboam againſt Amos, but in his complaint he exceedeth the truth, for he chargeth Amos to have ſaid, that Jeroboam ſhould dye by the ſword, and that Iſrael ſhall be carryed away captive, whereas he ſaid only, I will riſe againſt the houſe of Jeroboam with the ſword, and of Iſrael indeed to the ſame effect that he ſpeaketh, but touching Jeroboam he was plainly miſtaken, for by his houſe was not meant his perſon any more then by the firſt Jeroboams houſe, which was likewiſe threatned, his perſon; and it is to be thought, that as malice moved him to complaine of the Lords Prophet, ſo hereby he was willingly carryed to relate his Propheſying contrary to the meaning, that the King might be the more provoked to ſlay him; and if Jeroboam dyed not by the ſword, his propheſying in all other points might bee made the more contemptible, which was a moſt wicked thing in a Prieſt of eminency, as he doubtleſſe was being ſo near the King to attend upon him, and to come and goe, and to ſpeak to him as he would.

V.14,15.&c. The anſwer of Amos to Amaziah is ſet forth, and firſt, becauſe hee called him Seer, that is, Prophet, Verſ. 12. he ſaith, that he was no Prophet nor Son of a Prophet, but an heardman, and a gatherer of ſycomore fruits, whereby he meaneth, that he was not of that order of men, who were called ſons of the Prophets, he had no ſuch education, as it is certain, that many had in ſundry places, as in Colledges, the Governours whereof were ſome Prophets of note. And this he ſpeaketh, adding his mean manner of living of the fruits of Sycomores, ſo that he could not be ſuſpected, that from his youth had been thus bred up, through ambition to put himſelf upon this Office of teaching of his own head, but muſt needs be conceived to be by the Lord imployed in it, or elſe hee would never have had any ſuch thoughts, but been content to goe on always in looking to Cattell, not knowing what belonged to teaching of men, but ordering of cattell, and there being nothing to move him, that he might have more dainty fare at the Court it could not be thought, that hee was moved hereby, eſpecially in regard of the harſh meſſage that he went upon, for which he was not likely to have any but courſe entertainment there. Thus almoſt Gualter. that excellent Expoſitour Gualter. But Amaziah biddeth him goe to Judah and eat bread there, and propheſie there as being the countrey, whereof hee was, by which words it is implyed, that he would have him to be thought to come to the Court, as drawn by the good cheare which was there to be had, which cauſed Amos to make ſuch an anſwer about his dyet hitherto, wherewith he could doubtleſſe ſtill have been content. Laſtly, Amos having anſwered him, touching his calling to propheſie to Iſrael, for his ſpite that he ſhewed againſt him in ſeeking to ſtir up the King to revenge, and forbidding him to V. 17. propheſie at Bethel any more, he concludeth with a threatning Propheſie againſt him, that his wife ſhould be a whore, and that his ſons and daughters ſhould be ſlain, that he ſhould be captived and dye in an heathen, which hee calleth a polluted, countrey, and confirmeth his Propheſie againſt Iſrael in the words before ſpoken by him. In ſaying his wife ſhould be an whore, he meaneth her ſtupration, or being forced, as he had forced Gods Prophets that they ſhould goe into captivity. Gualter in the former words notes the cunning of Amaziah, when complaining to the King he could do nothing, that he returns to Amos, and biddeth him by way of friendly counſell to flee into Judah, here might be danger to him to ſtay, and it was not likely, but if hee continued, he might ſtarve before any would give him bread to eat. Moreover Bethel which he ſpake againſt was the Kings Chappell, and an houſe by him ſet up for divine worſhip; therefore it was not for him to think by his ſpeak- Note. ing to prevail for any alteration to be made there. And ſuch is the cunning of other adverſaries of the truth at all times, if they cannot get a true Prophet of God ſuppreſſed by force, they will ſeek by ſome means or other to inſinuate into him, ſeeking thus if they can to ſtop his mouth, but who ſo doth thus, let him look to the judgement of God upon ſuch a man, and feare that which may come to him.

CHAP. VIII.

V. 1. BEhold a basket of ſummer fruit; and the Lord ſaid unto me, What ſeeſt thou Amos, &c.
V. 2. And the Lord ſaid, the end is come upon my people Iſrael. Here by another Viſion the ſpeedy and inevitable deſtruction of Iſrael is again ſet forth together with the cauſe: For when are baskets filled with ſummer fruit but when it is ripe, ſo that hereby was ſhewed, that the ſins of Iſrael were ripe, and therefore they muſt ſoon be gathered by cutting down, and ſo be deſtroyed and carryed away into captivity, as the 7 chapter concluded, ſo that this is nothing elſe but a further confirmation of that, which was ſaid before. And it is not unuſuall by ſimilitude taken from fruits that are ripe to ſet forth ſin grown to full full maturity, as Joel 3.13. and here Expoſitours note an elegancy in the Hebrew more then in the Tranſlations, for in ſaying ſummer fruits, he uſeth the word קיץ and for end he hath קץ. For paſſing by it any more, ſee before meant which is an horrible ſin, viz. by oppreſſing men to bring them to ſuch poverty, that they inforced to ſell themſelves for ſervants, and that for a ſmall matter, whereas by the Law of God Hebrew ſervants were to have favour ſhewed them, if by caſualty any became poor, that he was inforced to ſell yeare, and then not to diſmiſſe him empty, but being furniſhed with ſome ſtock out of his chattels. 4. Having thus inthralled their brethren they kept them with food not fit for men, but beaſts, ſet forth in the next words, the refuſe of the wheat, whereby is meant either the bran, wherewith they fed them, or light wheat mingled with ſoil, ſo as that it was food for hogs, or fowls, and not for men, or elſe that they mingled ſuch baſe ſtuffe with better, and ſo ſold it altogether for the beſt, poorer men, who have but from hand to mouth, being neceſſitated to buy it ſo or none. And this reproveth not onely ſuch as Note.

thing to that which is ſold by weight to make it heavy to the detriment of the buyer, or in cloth that, which is vile and makes it ſoon to wear out, but workes. Here again after their ſins follow judgements almoſt in the words uſed before chap. 6, 8. onely there it is ſaid, the Lord hath ſworn by his ſoul, I abhor the excellency of Jacob, here by the excellency of Jacob, the ſame word גאון being uſed, which, as was ſaid there, ſignifieth either pride or excellency, but here the word is manifeſtly uſed for God himſelfe, who was the excellency of Jacob above all other Nations, in that he graced them by his dwelling amongſt them. And he rather ſets himſelfe forth here by this Periphraſis, then in plain terms, to taxe their ingratitude the more, and to intimate, that they were well worthy of the judgements threatened, in that when the Lord had made them ſo much to excell other Nations, they made themſelves ſo baſe by their ſins. And he ſweareth, that none might be unbeleeving but beleeve-ing, and fear and repent. But what meaneth he by ſaying, I will not forget any of their works? Sol. This is ſpoken, becauſe he may be thought to forget mens wickedneſſes all the time that he forbears to puniſh them, but when hee puniſheth, then it appeares, that he forgat them not, ſo that hereby he meaneth, that he would ſeverely puniſh them, as followeth, verſ. 8, 9, 10. Shall not the land mourn for this, and every one that dwelleth therein? it ſhall be caſt out and drowned V. 8. as by the floud of Egypt, which drowneth the whole land, as an huge floud by the overflowing of Nilus, many dayes together, ſo that in all the plain parts no land appeareth, but it is all as a Sea, and he doth not only to expreſſe this out, ſaying, firſt it ſhall be thus lifted up, and then it ſhall be drowned, whereas the meaning is plain, that from land it ſhal be all turned, as it were into a Sea, all places being covered with miſeries, as Egypt with waters, and theſe waters ſhall be as a flood ſweeping and carrying away the inhabitants, and making the land as no land any more to them, or to be inhabited by them.

Eſa. 1. ſhall have ſorrow for this your joy as impious, it being alſo had in abomination.

V. 11. I will ſend a famine, not of bread and water, but of hearing the words of the Lord. Having hitherto threatned corporeall judgements, now he proceedeth to threaten ſpirituall, as Amaziah, chap. 7. had put the Word of God away, bidding the Prophet flee to Judah, and not to propheſie there. As a puniſhment therefore of this ſin, of being againſt the Propheſying of ſome holy men, ſent of God, who are diſliked for their tartneſſe againſt the ſins of the great ones, and rich ones of the land, a famin of the Word is here threatned, as moſt grievous of all judgements, a corporeall famin being nothing comparable to it, as is implyed in the words. And indeed, if it be rightly conſidered, there is no judgement to this, for men conſiſting of ſoules and bodies, if they want bodily ſuſtenance, are in an evill caſe, for hunger is a ſharp ſauce, but as the ſoul excels the body, ſo if ſpirituall ſuſtenance be wanting to them, their miſery is far greater. But when there is no man of God to teach any more, there is a 1 Pet. 2.2. famin of hearing his Words, which be as food to the ſoul, for which teaching being an eating hereof, although not the onely eating, for we are alſo injoined to eat the bread and drink the wine of the Lords Supper, and that often, that we may eat his fleſh and drink his bloud, and live eternally. Therefore they that want preaching, want the food of the ſoul to the hunger-ſtarving thereof, they are in a wilderneſſe, as it were without Manna, and ſo cannot but periſh everlaſtingly, there being nothing in this world, more then in a barren wilderneſſe for the body, for their ſouls to feed upon: which ſhould ſerve to make they doe, that ſeek to ſtop the mouth of any good Preacher as not able to bear his reproofs, or if they give ſuch the hearing, but bring forth no fruits agreeable to their teaching, for this Chriſt threatneth the taking away of the Matth. 21.43. Kingdome of God, which is by withdrawing the Miniſtery of his Word, ſeeing where the Word is preached, Gods Kingdom is, but where not now, but it hath been, it is taken away.

V. 12. They ſhall run to and fro to ſeeke the Word of the Lord and ſhall not finde it: this Propheſie was notoriouſly fulfilled in the Iſraelites, for through their putting of the Word of God from them, and rejecting the Meſſiah ſent unto them, they have ever ſince been like hunger-ſtarved perſons, running ſometimes after one impoſtour, and ſometimes after another, thinking him to be the promiſed Meſſiah, and from one Rabbin they goe to another for comfort in this reſpect, but can no where finde any. But as St. Paul once ſaid unto them, For ſo much as ye put the Word of God from you, we goe to the Gentiles, ſo the Gentiles hear the Word at this day, but the Jews not, wherefore it hath been a famin of a long continuance, and their wandering from one part of the world to another hath been long, even to 1615 years, God have mercy upon them and open their eyes, that they may repent and turn yet to Chriſt; and ſo have bread and not lye ſtill under this judgement of famin, whereby ſo many have periſhed theſe many generations paſt. And Chriſtian Nations for rejecting the Note. Word have alſo many of them ſuffered by the like judgement, as thoſe ſeven famous Churches in Aſia, and ſome others, to which Saint Paul wrote his Epiſtles, ſwallowed up by the Turk and his Mahumetiſm long agoe, and Rome by the Pope and Popery, no true ſervant of God teaching there, or in any of his Dominions, but ſuperſtitious ſworn ſervants of his, that are authours to their blinded Proſelytes of wandering for pieties ſake to Rome from remote parts, and running to and fro to other places in Pilgrimage, but all in vaine, there being in all this no comfort to any poor hunger-ſtarved ſoul, becauſe neither in one place or another they can finde the Word of God, which alone feeds the famiſhed ſoul, that it may live. Let us in England that may ſuffer by famine of bread, bleſſe God yet, that we ſuffer not by this famin, but live in plenty, and feed upon it, not with the ear, but with the heart, that we may never be deprived of this bleſſing, as otherwiſe we are in danger to be. Lyra, whom ſome follow, ſaith, that this Propheſie was then fulfilled, when being beſieged in Samaria three years, and in great ſtraights, they had ſome emiſſaries, who wandered about into all parts to ſome Prophet from whom they might have comfort, as when three Kings being together they were diſtreſſed for want of water, inquiry was made after a man of God, that might ſpeake ſome comfortable word from God unto them, and then Eliſhah came, 2 King.3. from whom alſo ſome words of comfort came at the ſiege of Samaria, in time of famine, 2 King.7. But now he ſaith, they ſhould wander from Sea to Sea, and from North to Eaſt, that is, the Aſſyrians coming to deſtroy them when they ſhould be in greateſt diſtreſſe by famin through a three yeares ſiege, they ſhould ſend out all over the longitude and latitude of the land for a Prophet to comfort them by ſome good words from God, but ſhould finde none.

V. 13. Then in the next words, their faire young maides and men faint for thirſt, he expoundeth of the famin corporeall, which was at that time, when each one had ſo little for himſelfe, that even ſuch as to whom mens affections are moſt moved, could not get a cup of cold water to ſave their lives, whether fair maides or young men. But againſt this it maketh, that he ſaid before, not a famin of bread and water, but onely a ſpirituall famin, and therefore it cannot be underſtood, as Lyra ſaith, but rather as was before ſaid out of Gualter, who therefore expounds this of fair maides, and young mens fainting through thirſt of a ſpirituall thirſt, in the want of teaching, this famin falling ſoar upon young perſons, that grow up in ſtature, and are comely of body, but hearing nothing to form their manners, their ſoules that never lived in the time of teaching to make them well liking in grace, are in a moſt languiſhing condition of all others, ſeeing ſome others, though but a few, might before this defect of bread and water be ſo well fed, that they might walk ſtill in the ſtrength thereof, being holpen by their own private meditations and prayers. Here then is a Propheſie chiefly of the Evangelicall times according to that which was ſaid before. And herein Amos his Propheſying extends further then to the judgements of God by Aſſyrians or Caldeans.

V. 14. They that ſwear, Thy God O Dan, liveth, and by the ſin of Samaria, and the manner of Beerſhebah, ſhall fall and never riſe again: Here the Prophet ſheweth, that the judgement which ſhould come upon them in ſpirituall things was moſt juſt, becauſe that rejecting God and his Word, commanding them to ſwear by his name, they ſware by idols in Samaria, Dan and Beerſhebah, upon which it hath been ſpoken before, which was an abomination, for which they were worthy to hear the Word of God no more, but to come to all miſery, and therein to lye without ever being raiſed up again, he chargeth them firſt with the ſin of Samaria, becauſe that was the ſeat of the Kingdome whereby idolatry was ſet up in other places, that is, by the Kings dwelling there. Then Dan and Beerſhebah are named as the moſt remote places, in which idols were ſet up. Dan in the North, and Beerſhebah furtheſt South, to travell to which therefore they counted the greateſt piety, for which the way of Beerſhebah is ſpoken of, for ſo it is in the Hebrew.

CHAP. IX.

V. 1. I Saw the Lord ſtanding upon the Altar, and he ſaid, Smite the lintell of the doore, that the poſts may ſhake, and cut all of them in the head, &c. This is by Gualter reckoned the ſeventh ſermon of Amos, chap. 8. the 6. chap. 7. the fifth. chap. 5. the fourth, chap. 4. the third, chap. 3. the ſecond, chap. 1. 2. the firſt. And herein he propheſieth firſt againſt Judah, leſt he ſhould be thought partiall to his own country, unto verſ. 7. where he ſpeaketh to all Iſrael together. For theſe words, they ſet forth another Viſion, which the Prophet had of the Lord ſtanding upon his own Altar, for with the Altars in the kingdome of the ten Tribes he would have nothing to doe, either in Bethel, Dan, Gilgal, or Beerſhebah, of which it is ſpoken before, ſo that this was the Altar of burnt-offerings at Zion, where the houſe of God was. Standing here he biddeth an angell ſmite the lintell of the doore, which is ſupported by poſts on each ſide, ſo that they might ſhake, and to cut every one of them, hereby ſhewing, that for the abuſes committed about his Worſhip and ſervice there, ſuch wicked worſhippers ſhould be ſmitten and cut downe both Princes and Prieſts, that were as the ſuperliminare or lintell, and the common people as the poſts. For although they offered Sacrifices, yet they did not that, which the Lord by their ſacrificing would have them put in mind to doe, that is, repent them of their ſins, praiſe God in ſincerity of heart and order their converſation aright, as Pſal. 50. 23. For doing otherwiſe, living in ſin and truſting to be accepted, becauſe they brought God Sacrifices, is rejected both Pſal. 50. and declared to be an abomination, Eſai. 1. and 66. And what he ſaw in Viſion is immediately expreſſed in word, I will ſlay the laſt of them with the ſword, and he that fleeth of them ſhall not flee away, &c. that is, not flee ſo, but to be overtaken with judgement, and if any have eſcaped death at the firſt, he ſhall be deſtroyed afterwards, thus Gualter. But in the Vulg. it is rendered, Smite the hinge and the lintels ſhall be ſhaken, expounded by Jerome, of the lower parts of the doorway, which being ſmitten, the upper parts, the lintell and poſts ſupported hereby muſt needs be ſhaked, the word כפתור ſignifieth a globule, wherewith they uſed to adorn the upper part of the dooreway, and ספים properly ſignifieth groundſels. Now the difference in the Expoſitions ariſe from hence, that the round little globe is by ſome taken for works made in ſuch a form by carving upon the lintell, and figuratively for the lintell it ſelf, but by others for the hinge which is round whereupon the doore turneth which is below, but for rendring the next words lintels or poſts, I ſee no reaſon, becauſe it ſignifieth nothing elſe, but threſholds, and becauſe it is a plurall, I conceive that both limen inferius, and ſuperius are meant, and therefore that it may beſt be read, ſmite the hinge and the limina both beneath and above ſhall be ſhaken, that beneath, being in Engliſh called a threſhold, and that above lintell or tranſome, in Latine Limen and ſuperliminare: for ſtrike that whereupon the doore hangeth extending from the threſhold to the lintell and both of them will ſhake; here by a part the whole houſe is meant that ſhould be ruined. In the next words the Vulgar differeth from ours more, rendring them covetouſneſſe is in the head of all, and in the Hebrew it is, their covetouſneſſe is in the head of them all, Indeed the word בצע doth ſignifie both covetouſneſſe and to cut, and it ſeemeth more to ſtand with ſenſe hereby to render it, becauſe he is ſpeaking of the ſupporters of an houſe, and having ſaid ſmite them, and ſpoken of ſhaking following hereupon; what can be more agreeable in the next place then to bid cut them, that they may fall and the houſe be ruined? And therefore moſt of them prefer that reading even them in the head, all of them, that is, all the ſupporters of the building cut them in the head, that is, where their chiefeſt ſtrength is, hereby meaning as is by and by explained, that both Temple and City ſhould be deſtroyed, neither ſhould the inhabitants eſcape. And this is moſt commonly underſtood of the deſtruction of all made by Nebuchadnezzar; but by ſome, of that made long after by the Romans.

Gualter.

mans. Yet for the other reading covetouſneſſe, it may have a good ſenſe ſo, if we take the firſt words as a ſentence by it ſelfe againſt the houſe, and this againſt the people, they ſacrifice and hear the word indeed, but covetouſneſſe is in the chief of them all, and from them it goeth to the meaner ſort, and therefore I will ſlay them from the firſt to the laſt. Ruffin will not have this taken as ſpoken to the Jews, but to the kingdom of Iſrael, as if the Prophet went on here in the ſame argument, with which he concluded chap. 8. But forſomuch as the altar was not here, which muſt needs be underſtood when the altar is named, and nothing elſe added, it muſt needs be taken for the altar of the Lord, and therefore this propheſie of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and I will ſlay the laſt of them with the ſword. This is the explication of the viſion, as hath been ſaid, ſhewing that not ſome or many, but all of them ſhall be ſmitten from the firſt unto the laſt.

V. 2,3. Gualter. Lyra. Note.

For v.2. it is the ſame in effect that is ſaid Pſal. 139. Although they hide themſelves in the top of Carmel I will ſearch and take them out thence: It may ſeem ſtrange that Carmel an high hill ſhould be ſpoken of as a place for them to hide themſelves in, for where may men be ſeen if not upon the top of an hill? but Gualter ſaith, that there were caverns upon the top of Carmel, and of theſe, wherein men might be hid, he ſpeaketh. Lyra; Carmel is named, becauſe a very high hill, and hereby the higheſt hils, the tops whereof ſeem to touch the heavens, which I think is rather to be preferred, for having ſpoken of aſcending up to heaven v.2. here he further explaineth what he meant thereby, viz. going up to the tops of mountains, where they that are ſeem to be in heaven above the ſight of mortall eyes. If in the bottom of the Sea, I will command the Serpent and he ſhall bite them: where by ſerpent the whale or ſome other dreadfull beaſt in the ſea that devoureth men is commonly underſtood; but becauſe the ſame word is uſed here and before, ch. 5. 10. where a ſerpent biting in an houſe is ſpoken of, the ſame ſeemeth to be meant ſome poiſonous ſerpent keeping in the water or upon the land indifferently. The meaning of all being, that neither being in moſt low or moſt high places, in the ſea or land, the wicked ſhall be ſafe, but drawn forth to deſtruction, or periſh there: and for the Jews it is meant, that by the Caldees he would deal thus by them.

V. 4.

Although they goe into captivity before their enemies, thence will I command the ſword and it ſhall ſlay them: This is by ſome underſtood of their going into Babylon, but becauſe that being once carryed away, this is againſt the law of armes to kill captives, I rather aſſent to them, that underſtand it of their voluntary going away for fear of the Caldees into Egypt. For it is plainly ſhewed Jer. 43. that the ſword ſhould ſeize upon them notwithſtanding.

V. 5,6.

It is he that toucheth the land and it ſhall melt, &c. Here that none might be unbelieving and harden thamſelves in their ſins, as thinking that God could not do ſuch things as were threatned, he ſets the power of the Lord forth, as he had partly done before, ch. 4. 13. 5. 8. but every time he varieth, bringing in only here the ſame words againſt Judah that he uſed againſt Iſrael, ch. 8. 8. it ſhall riſe up wholly as a floud.

Pſal. 104. 3. Lyra. Calvin.

He that buildeth his ſtories in heaven, and hath founded his troop in the earth; the Vulg. that hath built his aſcenſion in heaven, and founded faſciculum ſuum, his little bunch bound together as a faggot upon earth, expounded the one of his glory appearing moſt in heaven, the other of the elementary heavens conſiſting of air and water, which are little in compariſon of all the ſtarry heaven, and that above where the waters are, called by Philoſophers cœlum cryſtallinum, ſo Lyra, and indeed the word אגדתו ſignifieth faſciculum, and the word rendred aſcenſions, upper chambers, as I have ſhewed before Pſ. 104. 3. Calvin renders the firſt words, as the Vulg. by aſcenſions, underſtanding one wonderfull work of God above another in heavenly places, 1. the air, 2. the fire above that, 3. the ſtarry heavens above the element of fire. But the next he rendreth coagmentations, underſtanding by coagmentations founded upon the earth, the earth it ſelf being compacted together, as a ſolid thing. But that which is founded upon the earth and the earth it ſelf cannot be one and the ſame, therefore by aſcenſions or lofts we are rather to underſtand, as was ſaid before, the ſtarry heavens, and by the other the three regions of the air, which are often ſaid to be founded upon the earth, or the earth upon them to declare Gods almighty power the more.

V. 7. Are ye not as Æthiopians to me, O children of Iſrael? Here to ſhew that there was reaſon why the Lord ſhould proceed ſo againſt Iſrael, as was ſaid before, *v.*2,3,4. he declareth the foul blackneſs of their evil manners, as *Jer.*13.23. And for this there was juſt cauſe of his dealing ſo with them, there being now in them nothing amiable, but abominable, as moſt contrary to the moſt holy and pure God, whoſe people he had taken them to be, and that doing miraculouſly for them in bringing them out of Egypt, as in the next words, whereby they above all peoples were bound to keep themſelves white through ſanctity and holineſſe of life and righteouſneſſe in all their doings. Whereas ſome gather, becauſe Iſrael is ſpoken to, that all ſaid hitherto is ſpoken to the ten tribes, and not to Judah, their reaſon is weak, for here after propheſying againſt Judah he cometh to join all Iſrael together, recounting Gods extraordinary mercy towards them and their vileneſſe and unanſwerableneſſe hereunto, in ſtead of keeping their garments undefiled fouling them, and making them black, as the ſwine wallowing in the mire after waſhing. And the Philiſtims from Caphtor, and the Aſſyrians from Kir, the Vulg. from Cappadocia, and the Syrians from Cyrene. And this agreeth beſt to the Hebr. and the meaning of the whole verſe is, Ye bear your ſelves upon this, that ye are Abrahams and Iſraels children, but truly ye are Blackamores to me through your ſins; and if ye think that my love is ſingular to you becauſe I brought you out of Egypt, rely not ſo much upon this, for I brought the Philiſtims alſo out of Cappadocia, as may be gathered Jer. 47. *Deut.*32. and the Syrians, not Aſſyrians, for the word is ארם ſignifying Syria, a part of the fruitfull land of Canaan, or whereof Canaan was a part, in which the Syrians were placed as well as they, being brought from another place thither alſo, yet the Lord for ſin judged both Philiſtims and Syrians, as we may ſee ch.1.3,6. it is threatned. Thus Jerom, Rupertus, and Chryſoſtome, and herein we may well reſt as the genuine meaning. Of the Caphtorites brought hither, ſee *Deut.*2.23. for Kir it was the place to which the Syrians were carryed captive, 2 *King.*16.9. Amos 2.5.

V. 8. Act.15.16. Saving that I will not utterly deſtroy the houſe of Jacob, ſaith the Lord: Having in the former part of the verſe ſaid, that he ſet his eyes upon this ſinfull nation of Iſrael to deſtroy it from off the face of the earth, here he beginneth to ſpeak ſome comfort in Chriſt to the faithfull amongſt them, as the next words *v.*9. and ſpecially *v.*11. which is applyed ſo by James, ſhew.

V. 9. Gualter. I will ſift the houſe of Iſrael as corn is ſifted, yet ſhall not the leaſt grain fall upon the earth: And this Gualter will have ſpoken by way of anſwer to an objection that might be made, Will God deſtroy Iſrael? how then ſhall his promiſe to the ſeed of Abraham and Iſrael be made good, of being their God for ever? Sol. Such as be good corn in this common deſtruction ſhall be preſerved, that is, the faithfull, a remnant, as they are often elſewhere called, and the chaffe and droſſe only ſhall be ſifted out and fall to the ground and be blown away, of which compariſon ſee *Pſ.*1. Luk. 3.

V. 10. In that day I will raiſe up the Tabernacle of David that is faln, and I will cloſe up his breaches: This is by the Jews applyed to the rearing up of Davids temporall Kingdom at the coming of the Meſſiah, but it is certainly to be ſpiritually underſtood, becauſe it being ſo long agoe ſpoken there hath never yet been any ſuch repairing of his houſe or tabernacle, but it hath manifeſtly been repaired in Chriſt, who came when Davids Kingdom was quite decayed and repaired it moſt remarkably, by ſubduing through the Goſpel unto him, all Kingdoms whereſoever the ſound thereof came. And his Kingdom or Church is called a tabernacle to denote, that the faithfull are here as pilgrims dwelling in tents, they have another to which they goe when they depart out of this life. For other things in this propheſie, and the difference in relating it by James in the words, ſee in my Expoſitions upon *Act.*15.13,14.

V. 13. The dayes come that the Plough-man ſhall overtake the Reaper, and the treader of grapes him that ſoweth ſeed, &c. which is to be underſtood ſpiritually of the increaſe of grace in time of the Goſpel, as it is a time of wonderfull plenty when as new ſeed is ſown, and the ground is ploughed for this purpoſe, before that all the corn of that year is reaped, and before all the corn be ſown; the Vintage is ready to be gathered. So fruits of preaching the Goſpel, he meaneth, ſhall come in moſt plentifully, people after people being converted unto Chriſt. And to ploughing and reaping our Lord alludeth, Joh 4. and calleth people ready to be converted regions white unto the harveſt. And the mountains ſhall drop ſweet wine, of which ſee Joel 3. 18 and all the hils ſhall melt, Vulg. all the hils ſhall be tilled, but the word ſignifieth melting, whereby is not meant melting through fear, as v. 5. making the hearts of the Inhabitants of the land to melt, but flowing with milk as the Mountains with wine, according to Joel 3. 18. the word is עסיס muſtum, or the ſweet liquor of Pomgranates, it is an hyperbolicall deſcription of plenty, as it is ſaid often of the land of Canaan, that it was a land flowing with milk and honey, all yet being to be underſtood ſpiritually of things appertaining to the Kingdom of Chriſt.

V. 14. And I will bring again the captivity of my people, and they ſhall build the waſte cities and inhabit them: Here under the reſtitution from the Babyloniſh captivity, and their rebuilding of their ruined cities, which was a figure of turning our ſpiritual captivity by Chriſt, the redemption of the faithfull by him is meant. For that it cannot be reſtrained to that deliverance out of Babylon is plain, becauſe although they built in their own land after this, yet they continued not alwayes there, but were afterwards expelled again by the Romans: underſtand we it therefore of the ſpirituall building under the Goſpel by the Apoſtles in knowledge and faith, and the planting of vineyards and gardens, of planting Chriſtian Churches which bring forth fruit unto God. For this building is upon a rock, Mat. 16. 16. and although in particular places whilſt the Church is militant upon earth, the Goſpel preaching and imbracing may fade away, yet it never ſhall be ſo put down again, but that it ſhall have a place here alwayes to the worlds end. Perſecutors indeed have and may bend their forces to mine this building, but they ſhall never be able to effect it, and in the world to come, which is chiefly the land of the faithfull, the Church ſhall ſtand gloriouſly for ever and ever.

Eph. 4. 8.

1 Cor. 3. 9.

THE PROPHESIE OF OBADIAH:

AFter three Prophets ſent to propheſie to Judah and Iſrael, now follow three ſent to propheſie to other Nations, Obadiah, and Jonah, and after Micah, Nahum. Touching Obadiah, he is thought by ſome to be that Obadiah, who in Ahabs time fed 100 Prophets of the Lord being hid in caves. But the time doth ſo ill agree, that this appears to be an audacious invention of the Jewiſh Rabbins, becauſe as the contents of this Propheſie ſhew, hee lived after the Babyloniſh captivity, for he ſpeaks of this, as the Edomites ſin, that they holp to deſtroy their brethren the Iſraelites, or Jews, that came of Jacob their Father Eſau his brother, and betwixt Obadiah and this were about 200 years. He is ſent to Propheſie againſt Edom, Jonah againſt Nineveh, and Nahum likewiſe, whereby it appeares, that not onely they that live under the meanes and are taken to be the Church of God, but even heathens, that are without the Word, ſhall be ſeverely judged for their ſinnes.

V. 1. Wee have heard a rumour from the Lord and an Embaſſadour is ſent amongſt the heathen, touching theſe words, ſee before Jer. 49.14. for they ſeem to be bor-V. 2. rowed from thence. Verſ. 2. I have made thee ſmall amongſt the heathen, Jer. 49.
15. I will make thee ſmall, both ſpeaking to the ſame effect, for the Prophets in ſpeaking of things to come uſe ſometime the future, ſometime the Pretertenſe, becauſe they ſhall as certainly come to paſſe, as if it had been already done. Therefore Edom is here threatned, as proud as he was, that he ſhould Calvin. be brought to a poore and weak eſtate, and deſpicable. Calvin will have it ſpoken of the ſtraight and rocky places allotted unto Edom, of which Mal. 1.3.
I have laid his mountaines waſt, but I ſee no reaſon for that, ſith that which is ſpoken here is ſpoken by way of Propheſie, and not of hiſtory, to ſhew any thing touching Edom paſt or preſent.

V. 3, 4. The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee. Here is one ſin for which Edom is threatned, and his puniſhment before ſpoken of is ſutable to it, for as he ſwel-led

led and was bigge through pride, ſo hee was threatned that hee ſhould bee made ſmall, and deſpicable, ſo God uſeth to puniſh the wicked in their kinde, as alſo is to be noted, Judg. 1.

V. 5. For the next words, if theeves come to thee, &c. ſee what hath been written before upon Jer. 49.9. touching this paſſe.

V. 7. All the men of thy confederacy have brought thee even to the border. Here the Prophet ſheweth by what means the Edomites ſhould be brought down, even their confederates and friends, upon whom they relyed for helpe, when the Caldeans came, joined with them and holp to doe it, and being ſubdued to bring them to their border, thence to be carryed away into captivity. Or as Calvin hath it, the Caldeans with whom they were for a Calvin. time joined in confederacy turning afterwards their enemies, have laid a wound under thee, that is, thou haſt beene wounded and brought downe thus by them unawares, for of open enemies men may take heed, and if they bee too ſtrong for them, yet they wound them before, fighting, or behind, fleeing; only a feigned friend whileſt he is ſhewing friendſhip, as it ſeemeth to the other, woundeth him under this falſe ſhew, as Joab Abner under his fift rib, that hee dyed. There is no underſtanding in him, that is, in this Edom, hee was a fool to be thus ambitious of the friendſhip of theſe mighty ones, that could ſo eaſily cruſh him when they would. For the words of v.8. ſee before Jer. 49.7.

V. 10. For thy violence againſt thy brother Jacob ſhame ſhall cover thee, and thou ſhalt be cut off for ever; here another ſinne of Edom is mentioned, his continuing in hatred againſt not an enemy, but a brother coming of the ſame father and mother, and for this was alſo ſutably puniſhed by confederates, and friends that did eat bread with him, verſ. 7. for of the hatred of Eſau againſt Jacob in perſon, we read Gen. 27. and from him it was derived to his poſterity againſt the poſterity of Jacob, ſo that they had none more infeſt enemies, then Edomites, of which ſee ſomewhat, Pſal. 137. 2 Chron. 20. and in many other places. Touching Edoms being cut off for ever, ſee the like, Jer. 49. 17, 18. as Sodom. V:11. Verſ. 11. In the day that thou ſtoodſt on the other ſide, &c. Here the Prophet amplyfieth Eſau his hatred in his poſterity againſt Iſrael by that which hee did, when the Caldees deſtroyed their City, by his ſtanding on the other ſide hee meaneth his taking part with their enemies, and ſharing with them when they took the ſpoils of Jeruſalem.

V. 16. As yee have drunk upon my holy mountaine, ſo ſhall all the heathen drinke continually, yea they ſhall drinke and ſwallow it downe, and bee as if they had not been. This is by Gualter expounded thus, as if the Prophet by an Apo- Gualter. ſtrophe had turned himſelfe to the Jewes, telling them that they ſhould drinke, who were the people of his holy mountain, but as they had done ſo ſhould all Nations about them doe, that were their enemies, viz. drink alſo of the cup of Gods wrath, till they were reduced to nothing. Of drinking being put for being puniſhed, ſee Jer. 35. and of the drinking thus of all Nations, and the compariſon made betwixt the drinking of Gods people and theirs, if his people, then much more they. But he ſaith, others expound it thus, as ye (O Edomites) have drunk and made merry at Jeruſalem for the deſtruction thereof, ſo both yee and all the heathen your fellows in this wickedneſſe ſhall drinke in another ſenſe, viz. by being judged of God continually, that is, ſo as that his judgements ſhall never bee taken off you again, but yee ſhall hereby utterly periſh, this as Gualter relates ſo hee ſaith, hath ſomething in it to act, and therefore hee rejecteth it, but I preferre it as moſt genuine, and ſo wee ſhall not need to flee to an Apoſtrophe, which it is not probable, that Obadiah uſeth here, but take the word yee, as it is plainly ſpoken of the Edomites. Jerome and Cyrill, as Hiero. Cyrill. ye Edomites have kept feſtivals for joy for Jeruſalems deſtruction, ſo all Nations ſhall doe for yours, and that continually, intimating their deſtruction not to come all at once, but by degrees, never ceaſing, till that their very name ſhould be quite rooted out, as it is at this day, for ſo much as there are now no people in the world called by this name, but againſt this, though followed by Calvin, maketh that they who drinke are deſtroyed, and not the Edomites only by them, which argueth plainly that this drinking is of the cup of Gods wrath.

V. 17. But upon mount Zion ſhall bee deliverance, and there ſhall bee holineſſe, and they ſhall poſſeſſe their poſſeſſion. Here Obadiah, as all other Prophets, for the comfort of the faithfull, having ſpoken of the deſtructions of Edomites and other Heathens their enemies cometh to propheſie of their happineſſe in Chriſt Jeſus. But in making this gracious promiſe, hee meaneth firſt their deliverance from the Babyloniſh captivity, and returning to poſſeſſe their owne land againe. For he ſaith not from Zion, but upon Zion, intimating the deliverance of that place, in that as for the preſent during their captivity there, it differed not not from other heathen countreys for any holy ſervice there performed, ſo when their deliverance ſhould bee wrought, it ſhould againe be a peculiar place for the holy Worſhip and ſervice of God there again performed. Then our deliverance, who are the Church of God by faith through Chriſt, from ſin and everlaſting death, figured out by the deliverance before ſpoken of.

V. 18. And the houſe of Jacob ſhall bee a fire, and the houſe of Joſeph a flame, and the houſe of Eſau, for ſtubble. Becauſe they might ſay, What is this to us, to heare thee propheſying againſt Edom? here, as alſo verſ. 17. hee ſheweth, that as Edom their ſpitefull enemy ſhould be deſtroyed, ſo they ſhould bee delivered, and the Edomites cruelty formerly uſed againſt them ſhould turn into a fire to the devouring of the Edomites, Gods judgement to their utter deſtruction being hereby procured againſt them; of the fulfilling of this, ſee 1 Mac. 5. 3. & 2 Mac. 10. 15. & Joſeph. l. 11. antiq. l. 17.

V. 19. And they of the South ſhall poſſeſſe the Mount of Eſau, and they of the plaine the Philiſtins, and they ſhall poſſeſſe the fields of Ephraim, and the fields of Samaria, and Benjamin ſhall poſſeſſe Gilead. Having ſpoken of the Edomites deſtruction by the houſe of Jacob, that is, Judah, and of Joſeph, that is, Iſrael, who ſhould be as a fire and flame unto them: and in the myſtery hereof, of the Apoſtles by the ſpirit, in the power whereof as of fire, they went out Preaching amongſt the Gentiles, ſet forth by the houſe of Eſau, being in their ſuperſtitions but as ſtubble before the flame, for ſo the light of the truth comming theſe vaniſhed, being as it were conſumed as ſtubble by fire. Now hee proceedeth to ſhew further, how they ſhould being come into their owne countrey againe inlarge their poſſeſſions more then ever they had done before, they of the South, that is Judah, called before the houſe of Jacob, verſe 18. ſhall poſſeſſe the Edomites Countrey called the Mount of Eſau, becauſe it was all mountainous; they of the plaine, that is, the houſe of Joſeph, as they are before called, ſhall poſſeſſe the Philiſtins land, that is, ſuch of them as being one Kingdome with Judah went with Judah into captivity, and returned againe, viz. men of the ten Tribes as joined themſelves to Judah, of whom ſee 2 Chron. 11. 16.

For the fields of Ephraim, which it is ſaid, that they ſhould alſo poſſeſſe, and the fields of Samaria, hereby are meant the reſt of the poſſeſſions of the ten Tribes, called often Ephraim, as well as the houſe of Joſeph, becauſe Jeroboam was of Ephraim, and it was the moſt populous Tribe and had largeſt bounds, and Samaria was the chiefe City of that Kingdome. For the fulfilling of theſe things according to the letter, ſee 1 Maccab. 5. before named, where the Jewes prevailings againſt the Idumeans, or Edomites, is not onely ſet forth, but alſo againſt Azotus a chiefe City of the Philiſtims; and Joſeph. fil. Gorion lib. 3. 13. tels how Gaza another of their Cities was taken likewiſe, and the Altars therein overthrowne, and their graven Images burnt with fire, for this is ſaid expreſſely of Azotus, and therefore it is not to be doubted, but they dealt likewiſe with Gaza alſo, of the ſubduing whereof it is ſpoken under the name of Gazara, 2 Maccab. 10. And the ſame Joſephus further ſaith, that Alexander the ſonne of Joſeph. fil. Gorionis.

Hircanus King of the Jewes brought it under againe, when it had revolted, lib. 4. cap. 11. For the land of Ephraim, that is, of the ten Tribes, it appeareth to be in the poſſeſſion of the Jewes, becauſe Galilee, and the Cities thereof were in the time of our Saviour Chriſt, who Preached in Nazareth, Bethſaida, Capernaum, &c. to the Jews there. For Samaria although it and the places about it were inhabited by the Samaritans then, as appeareth Joh. 4. yet it was alſo brought under the power of the Jewes; for thus Joſeph. Gorion. alſo writeth thereof. Hircanus went againſt Sichem and ſmote it, becauſe it opened not unto him, hee ſmote alſo Mount Garizim and overthrew the Temple built there by Sanballat the Father-in-law of Manaſſeh, brother to Iddo the High Prieſt An. 200. after it was built. Hee ſmote alſo the Chuthæans of Mount Samaria, who were the people brought firſt thither by Salmanaſar King of Aſſyria to inhabit there, and chap. 4. hee came to Samaria and beſieged it a yeare, and the Lord delivered it into his hands, then hee ſmote all the males with the ſword and overthrew the houſes therein. Thus alſo the other Joſeph. antiq. lib. 13. cap. 17, 18. adding that King Hircanus not being content to lay the City even with the ground, brought in alſo a floud of filthy water, which overflowing it filled all things with filthineſſe. For Benjamins poſſeſſing Gilead, that followeth next, ſee 1 Maccab. 5. where it is ſaid, that Judas tooke Boſor upon the ſodaine and ſlew all the Males therein, and in recounting the places taken by him, it is ſaid hee tooke Cuſhan, Mageth, and Boſor, and the other Cities of Gilead. And Joſephus ſaith, that having overcome the Arabians hee laid tribute upon the Moabites and Gileadites, which argueth, that the land of Gilead, was alſo brought under by the Jewes.

V. 20.

And the captivity of this hoaſt of the children of Iſrael ſhall poſſeſſe that of the Canaanites even to Zarephath; and that of Jeruſalem, which is in Sepharad, the Cities of the South. That is, the two houſes before ſpoken of returning out of captivity ſhall amongſt them poſſeſſe ſuch large bounds, as they never yet did, each one the parts neareſt to him, Iſrael the Canaanites land as farre as Sareptah in Zidon, for there lay their Countrey, and they that went Captives from Jeruſalem and had dwelt in Sepharad in Babylon, the Southern Cities neareſt to which their countrey lay, as was before ſaid. Here by Zarephath Lyra following R. Solomon underſtnnds France, and by Sepharad, in the Vulgar Latine rendered Boſphorus, Spaine, and applying it myſtically to the times of the Goſpell hee ſaith, this of poſſeſſing the Canaanites Countrey even to France was fulfilled, when divers Countreys as farre as France being converted to the faith Saint Saminianus one of the 72 Diſciples came thither and converted the City of Semon then the chiefe City of France and called the golden City, and his fellowes went and converted others. And for Spaine James the Apoſtle and his Diſciples by Preaching the Goſpell there poſſeſſed it for Chriſt, the Cities there being called the Cities of the South, becauſe Spain lyeth ſouth in reſpect of France. Then coming to verſ. 21. where it is ſaid, Saviours ſhall come up to Mount Zion to judge the Mount of Eſau, and the City ſhall bee the Lords, hee ſaith, that here by Saviours Peter and Paul are ſet forth, being ſo called, becauſe by Preaching they converted and ſaved. For their judging of the Mount of Eſau, that was done when Rome ſet forth hereby was converted in Conſtantines time, Peter and Paul appearing unto him, and after this he left Rome to be the ſeat of Saint Peters ſucceſſors, going to Bizantium, and making that the ſeat of his Empire and calling it Conſtantinople; for then the City became the Lords, thus Lyra. But if his ground whereupon he frameth this Expoſition be overthrown, the building muſt needes fall alſo. It cannot be proved that France was ever called Zarephath, or Spaine Sepharad, or Boſphorus: but Zareptah a City of Zidon, is manifeſtly ſet forth by the firſt 1 King. 17. 6. and of the Jewes ſubduing all the Countrey of the Canaanites unto Zareptah in Zidon, and Zidon it ſelfe, it as is plainly intimated when 2 Maccab. 12. it is ſaid, that Judas tooke Jamnia and Joppe, for theſe and Dor, Cæſarea, Paleſtine and Ptolemais were Cities lying from Paleſtina to Zidon, called here the Cananites countrey. And for Zidon and Tyrus alſo poſſeſſed by the Jewes, Joſeph. Gorionis ſaith, that Ariſtobulus the ſonne of Hircanus was a great King, and that hee overthrew Tyrus and Zidon, and ſlew innumerable ſoules, and circumciſed and ſubjected to the Jewes, the ſurvivours to the time of Pompey the Roman Prince. Wherefore this being fulfilled according to the word here uſed, why ſhould any man flee to any other Countrey to draw that in here, as France being never in holy Scripture ſet forth by any ſuch name? Now for Shepharad by Lyra expounded by Spaine, by the Vulgar called Boſphorus, becauſe in the Hebrew it is בספרד which if we take ב for a prepoſition, muſt be rendered, in Seraphad, if for part of the name here ſpoken of Boſphorud, and turning d into s, Boſphorus, which Jerome ſaith in the Aſſyrian tongue is the ſame that צבול is in Hebrew, that is, a bound of a Countrey, ſo that hereby may bee underſtood the uttermoſt bounds of Babylon, where they of Jeruſalem were placed, and in particular a place thus called there, where the Sea was ſo narrow and ſhallow, that Oxen might wade through according to Pliny, and ſuch a narrow Sea was betweene Chalcedon and Byzantium, and an Oxe in Latine is bos. Moreover the ſame Jerome ſaith, that the Jewes have a tradition, that they were not onely placed in Media and Perſia, that were carryed away, but alſo in the furtheſt North parts called Boſphorus. Whereas many beſides Lyra, as Vatablus and the Caldee Paraphraſe and all the Jewes are for Spaine, it is of little moment, ſeeing wee never read of the carrying of the Jews into Spain, and it is to be thought, that R. Solomon hath been herein followed without diſcretion by others. And hitherto of the fulfilling of theſe things according to the letter; now let us ſee, how farre forth all this hath beene myſtically fulfilled under the Goſpell. Deliverance came to Zion, when to the faithfull by Chriſt, and hee was the holy one teaching there, and working miracles for the curing both of ſoule and body, then Jacob, that is, the people of God by Preaching brought Kingdomes and Nations into ſubjection, and ſo tooke poſſeſſion of them as it were for Chriſt, they being made his inheritance. And this was done by being fire unto them through the fiery ſpirit conſuming their former vanities, and that not onely by the houſe of Jacob, that is, the Jewes going forth to Preach, but alſo by Joſeph ſignifying adding, that is, ſome of the Gentiles added to them by the comming downe of the Spirit upon them, whereby they had the gift of ſpeaking with tongues. And nothing ſhall be left of Eſau, that is, in all Countries, where they came preaching the Goſpell, nothing Gentiliſh was left, but aboliſhed, by Eſau here all Heathens living before in idolatry being underſtood. Then the parts, of which they firſt tooke poſſeſſion for Chriſt, are ſet forth, the Mount of Eſau, whereby the proud Nations in generall may bee underſtood, and the Philiſtims, all others before being enemies. Then in particular Ephraim and Samaria being all one are ſpoken of, and touching the faithfulls being diſperſed all over this Countrey, and preaching here, ſee Act. 8. Then Benjamin in particular poſſeſſed Gilead, which, as Jerome ſaith, was the ſame with Arabia, and here Paul of the Tribe of Benjamin preached, as hee himſelfe ſaith, Gal. 1. 17. And for the taking in for Chriſts poſſeſſing the land of Ephraim unto Sarepta, ſee Act. 11. they that were diſperſed came to Phenice, the Countrey wherein Sarepta was, for Tyrus and Zidon, to which Sarepta belonged, were in Phenicia, and againe Act. 8. Philip was carryed to Azotus a City of the Philiſtims, Act. 10. Peter was at Joppe and Cæſarea, which were ſome of thoſe parts before mentioned. Laſtly, the Jewes in Shepharad or Boſphorus, that is, the moſt remote parts, where they are ſtill ſhut up for their unbeleife, ſhall have their eyes opened and bee converted unto Chriſt and returne to their owne Countrey againe called the Cities of the South, as is by Saint Paul gathered out of Prophecies, Rom. 11.

2 Cor. 3.

V. 21.

For the laſt words, Verſ. 21. Saviours ſhall come up to Mount Zion and judge the Mount of Eſau, and the Kingdome ſhall bee the Lords. Here by Saviours underſtand, as often in the Booke of Judges, men ſtirred up by God to ſmite the enemies of his people and to deliver them, ſuch was Mattathias, Judas Maccabeus and his brethren, and others ſucceeding them, as Princes of the Jewes, who mightily ſubdued their enemies, as hath beene before ſhewed, and in particular the Edomites, thus bringing that Kingdome under, and compelling them to receive circumciſion and other rites of Gods people, whereby it is ſaid to become the Kingdome of the Lord. Myſtically this was fulfilled, when men indued with the Spirit of God brought under the Goſpell Heathen Kingdomes every where, and is dayly fulfilled in ſtirring up ſucceſſively faithfull Paſtours, who by teaching beat downe and deſtroy the Devils Kingdome conſiſting of ſinne, that they who were before under this god of the World may turne ſubjects of the Kingdome of God, Chriſt by his Spirit reigning in their hearts, till hee deliver up the Kingdome to the Father, and ſo he reigneth in them for ever by making them to reigne with him in glory.

The Myſtery.

THE PROPHESIE OF IONAH:

TOuching the time when Jonah propheſied, it is agreed by all that it was in the dayes of Jeroboam the ſecond, becauſe of his propheſying then mention is made 2 King. 14. and therefore he is well placed next unto Obadiah, as being contemporanean with him, whereas he is moſt commonly held to be the ſon of the widow of Sarepta, whom being dead Eliſha raiſed to life again: this hath been confuted upon 2 King. 14. 25. He was a known Prophet, as we may gather both from 2 King. 14. and from that which is here ſaid, and not now firſt called to this office. For it is begun with a conjunction copulative, Hebr. and the word of the Lord came, or was to Jonah, implying ſomething propheſied by him before, whereby he was well enough known, and it ſeemeth that there was a greater book of his propheſies, of which this was but a part, and no more is now extant, becauſe God in his providence ſaw that the Church ſhould need no more: and although he propheſied nothing he propheſieth nothing touching Chriſt, yet he himſelf was an eminent type of him both in his name Jonah, ſignifying a Dove, ſeeing the ſpirit came down in the likeneſſe of a Dove and reſted upon him, and in his being in the Whales belly three dayes and three nights, as Chriſt in the heart of the earth, Mat. 12.40.

The place to which Jonah was ſent, was Nineveh that great City, which was the chief city of the Aſſyrian Kingdom built firſt by Aſhur, Gen. 10. 11. having the name Nineveh from the beauty thereof, and the pleaſantneſſe of the ſituation, and not from Ninus, as is commonly held, ſaith Gualter; Calvin leaveth it undetermined, whether it had the name from Ninus or no, becauſe he repaired it. Lyra and ſome others ſay, that the ſame man was Aſhur and Ninus called by two names. It was 400 furlongs about, and had 1500 towers, being doubtleſſe moſt rich and wealthy, as being the lady city of the world, and of ſo long a continuance, viz. 1300 years, in all which time the Kings that made it their ſeat, could not but inrich it wonderfully.

To this City Jonah is ſent, and therefore about a task full of difficulty and diſcouragement, in that he a man alone, and a ſtranger, muſt goe to the chief city of the world of ſo long a ſtanding, to threaten deſtruction to it within 40 days. For to what ſcoffs and dangers might he think that he ſhould by this means be expoſed? yet God would have him undertake it.

1. To ſhew, that as great as Nineveh was, yet it was not too great for God to pull down, neither is any City or Kingdom of the world. Note.

2. That the Iſraelites, amongſt whom he and others propheſied before, might be the more confounded when they ſhould hear of the repentance of Nineveh an heathen City at once propheſying, when as they having had ſo much propheſying ſo long a time, were not by all this moved to repentance, but went on ſtill in their ſins.

3. Becauſe Aſhur was then moſt flouriſhing and ruled farre and wide, and yet full of wickedneſſe, if nothing had been threatned againſt that ſtate, when Iſrael was ſo greatly threatned, the faithfull might have been much diſcouraged, as thinking Gods people in worſe caſe then any others.

Jonah not willing to goe about this difficult task, fled by Sea, to goe to Tarſis a City in Cilicia, where Paul was afterwards born, and went down to Joppa a Port town of his own country and there took ſhipping. Some by Tarſis underſtands the Iſlands in the Sea in generall, which had this name from Tarſus the ſon of Javan, who went and inhabited the Iſlands of the Sea. But ſurely Jonah bent his courſe to one certain place thus called, and paid his fare accordingly, although ſome who ſtand for his going to Sea in generall ſay, that he being full of fear, and unreſolved to what place to goe, might goe with the mariners to any place that they went to, as it ſhould happen, all his deſire being to be gone, not caring whither. Whereas it is ſaid, that he fled from the preſence of the Lord, it may ſeem ſtrange, that ſo wiſe a man as he, who knew well that God is preſent every where, ſhould by fleeing to Tarſis think that he ſhould be out of his ſight or danger. But ſurely he did not thus out of any ſuch opinion, but rather becauſe he thought that if he were out of the land, where commonly God uſed to ſingle out ſome to go upon his meſſages, he would let him goe and take another man. V. 3. Gen.10.4.

But the Lord ſent a mighty wind; which ſheweth that he is the Former of the winds, as he is called Amos 4.13. V. 4.

The men in the ſhip then caſt lots to find out who amongſt them was the cauſe why the Lord was thus angry to toſſe them ſo fiercely up and down in the ſea: and to ſhake their ſhip with ſo great violence. A marvailous matter that they being heathens and untaught, ſhould ſhew ſo much piety, firſt to pray, and to ſtir up others to pray, according to that precept, Call upon me in the time of trouble. Verily this plainly ſheweth, that it is by the light of nature known, that there is a God, and that he ruleth over ſea and land, and over the moſt boiſterous winds, and he only can ſave ſuch as are in perill of death. V. 7. Pſal.50.14. Note.

Secondly, to know and acknowledge, that in time of an extraordinary judgment upon any man or a company of men together, chance or fortune do not work, but God who is offended, and for ſome great offence committed againſt him, ſendeth ſuch a judgment, as Amos 3.7.

Thirdly, that God knoweth the ſecrets of all men, and can and will when need requires diſcover any offender, that he may come to condign puniſhment therefore.

Fourthly, that lots are the means when otherwiſe an offender cannot be found out to bring him and his offence to light, as it is ſaid, that Joſhua did Achan by that which he did, approving the thing done in this place. Wherefore Chriſtians that are ſtrangers to prayer, beleeve not that there is a God, attribute judgments coming upon men to Fortune, not acknowledging their ſins to be the cauſe, think to hide any wickedneſſe that they commit, from God, or that God moderateth not in lots, and therefore in no caſe will uſe them, are worſe then the very heathen, who ſhall riſe up in judgment againſt them and condemn them.

But touching lots, to ſay ſomewhat more, they are by ſome diſtinguiſht into three ſorts, 1. Diviſory, as the land of Canaan was divided by Lots. 2. Divinatory, to find out either one choſen of God to ſome high and eminent office, as lots were caſt to find out who ſhould be King when God appointed Saul; and again, what man ſhould ſucceed in the Apoſtleſhip in the room of Judas, when Matthias was appointed. Or to find out one for whoſe wickedneſſe God did by ſigns ſhew himſelf offended, and many by his judgments were indangered, as Joſhua found out Achan; and this kind of lot was uſed in common both by Gods people and heathens, God working hereby amongſt them, as well as amongſt theſe, and demonſtrating the man, that he might come to condign puniſhment, as his providence is over all every where to bring to light to puniſh notorious offenders, as appeareth abundantly in prophane hiſtories as well as in ſacred. And the common uſing of lots in ſuch caſes amongſt Gods people is intimated, Prov. 16. where it is ſaid, the lot is caſt into the lap, but the whole diſpoſition thereof is of the Lord and amongſt heathens, Eſay 11. 4.23. thou didſt caſt lots upon the nations of the earth, whereby is ſhewed that the King of Babylon uſed to doe ſo, ſee alſo *Ezek.*21.3. Lots conſultory to find out what is to be done in ſome difficult and doubtfull caſe, but of this ſort no inſtance is given, and in ſuch caſes the people of God rather conſulted with him by the Ephod, and heathens with the Oracle of Apollo or Wizards, and ſo did Saul with the Witch at Endor. And hitherto of Lots; now to look back a little to the cauſe of their caſting Lots, it may be demanded whereby they conjectured, that ſome man in the ſhip had committed ſome foul ſin, for which they came into that danger? The Rabbins are bold to ſay, that they ſaw other ſhips at the ſame time ſailing out of this danger; but how do they know this? for it is ſaid, the Lord ſent a mighty wind upon the ſea, and not upon that part only, where this ſhip was. It is therefore rather to be conceived, that it was an unuſuall tempeſt, and ſuch as the Mariners having been long uſed to travell by Sea, had never felt before: happily alſo they were moved by a ſecret divine inſtinct to caſt Lots, that Jonah might be found out, who thought now that he was gone out of Iſrael, that the Lord would no more look after him or queſtion him.

1 Sam.11.
Act. 1.

V. 9. I fear the Lord God of heaven, v. 10. then they were exceedingly afraid: becauſe that by Jonah his ſpeech they conceived, that the God of the Hebrews whom they ſerved not, had ſent this tempeſt, and therefore they feared leſt he would now deſtroy them. For they had doubtleſſe heard of his almighty power ſhewed againſt the Eyptians and Canaanites, and therefore great reaſon why they ſhould fear before him. And it is further added as a reaſon of their fear, that Jonah had told them that he fled from the preſence of the Lord, and they unwittingly had taken him into their ſhip, ſo that for this they thought themſelves now to be in ſo great danger, forſomuch as it muſt be acknowledged to be a great offence againſt an earthly maſter, to receive and convey away a fugitive ſervant of his ſent about another buſineſſe by him.

V. 14. Then they cryed to the Lord, ſaying, Lay not this mans life to our charge we beſeech thee: Having laboured what they could to bring the ſhip to the ſhoar, but not being able to doe it, wherein they ſhewed their humanity, and unwillingneſſe to drown Jonah, although a ſtranger, and offering himſelf to be caſt into the Sea; now they beſeech God not to impute this for a ſin unto them, whereby many Chriſtians are condemned that regard not a mans life, as indeed God requireth that we ſhould all doe; and mark their reaſon, Thou haſt done as it pleaſed thee, we do nothing but as thou directedſt, and this is a plea ſufficient to bear men out in all things to do nothing but what he directeth them to doe in any execution doing upon others.

The allegory.
Rom. 5.
Mat.11.28.

And having caſt Jonah into the Sea it was calme, wherein he was a figure of Chriſt, who being voluntarily hanged upon the croſſe and ſuffering for us, we that beleeve in him, being before toſſed with ſtorms of fears, and indangered of being drowned in the pit of everlaſting deſtruction, attain to peace with God, and ſo come to quiet and reſt in our ſouls.

V. 10. Then the men feared the Lord exceedingly, and offered ſacrifice, and made vows:

Being in danger they greatly feared leſt they ſhould have been drowned, but being delivered, they feared the Lord much more, to turn to him by ſacrificing and vowing from thenceforth to ſerve him, and to continue as his faithfull ſervants in the frequent doing of this duty, and honouring him with their ſubſtance all their dayes. Thus was that ſaying of the Pſalmiſt verified, There is mercy with thee, therefore ſhalt thou be feared: As Jacob greatly feared at Bethel, and made an oblation, and vowed to give to the Lord the tithe of all that he had. Gualter conjectureth that their vow was conſtantly to perſevere in the worſhip of God, adue being bidden to Idols and falſe Gods for all time to come.

Gen.28.

Gualter.

Touching their ſacrificing, he ſaith, that it was ſome oblation that they made of ſuch things as they had, although Jerom ſaith, it was the ſacrifice of praiſe, called by Hoſea, the calves of the lips: I conceive with Gualter, that it was ſome meat-offering of flour and oile made in the ſhip, out of which, although they had caſt their wares to lighten it of them, v. 5. yet they kept ſome proviſion ſtill for their neceſſary uſes. Some becauſe they cannot conceive how or of what they ſhould do ſacrifice in the ſhip, ſeeing they had before caſt out all heavy things, conjecture that this was done when they came aſhoar. Note here, how God works the converſion of ſome ſinners, and what it is for a ſinner to be converted, viz.

Note.

1. To turn from the ſin that he formerly lived in, as theſe men did from calling upon falſe Gods any more, to call upon the true God.

2. To fear the Lord, and that not a little, but exceedingly; for the fear of God is the beginning of wiſdom.

3. To do ſacrifice unto him, that is, all duties of piety, which he hath commanded.

4. To bind our ſelves to go on in all piety the more ſtrongly to vow unto God ſo to doe, and that no covetous deſires of the profits of the world ſhall ever make us to ſerve Mammon by defrauding God of any of his dues, or love of pleaſure to ſerve the belly, by defrauding God of an heart taken up with delight in his ſervice above all things; for when God is ſerved with a pure heart, this is his delight, and herein he takes pleaſure: for the Lord delighteth in them that truly fear him, not in the ſtrength of horſes, or in any mans legs. And happy are they whom the Lord terrifieth with his judgments to make them thus to turn unto him.

Now the Lord had prepared a great fiſh to ſwallow up Jonah: and this is ſaid by our Lord to be a whale, Mat. 12.40. And herein Jonah was ſpecially a type of Chriſt, as is there plainly taught. If any ſhall doubt how this could be, that a man ſhould lye in a fiſhes belly ſo long and not be ſuffocated, let him conſider how all ſorts of wild beaſts and fowls came into the Ark to Noah to be preſerved, and fed by him contrary to their fierce and ſavage nature; again, how the waters of the Red ſea, or of Jordan, could be divided for the children of Iſrael to paſſe through upon dry ground; or how a fiſh came ſo ſoon to Peters angle with money in the mouth; or which is commonly done, how a child can live 9 months in the mothers belly, which is much more ſtraight to hold a child, then the whales to hold a man. God is almighty and can do whatſoever he pleaſeth, therefore we are to beleeve, that he could doe, and did this, unleſſe we will be Infidels. For that wherein Jonah was a figure of Chriſt beſides that which hath been ſaid and is plainly taught, Gualter hath two more,

V. 17.

1. As Jonah being caſt into the Sea the mariners were converted from Idolatry to the ſervice of the true God, ſo Chriſt being crucified, and buried and riſing again, many heathen countries and nations were converted.

The allegories.

2. As after Jonah his comming out of the whales belly, he went and preached to Nineveh, and the men of Nineveh repented and were ſaved from the deſtruction threatned to them: ſo ſhall all they that at the preaching of the Goſpel, ſince Chriſts reſurrection, are brought to faith and repentance, be ſaved from the wrath to come, with which they were before threatned, ned, now is the axe laid to the root of the trees, therefore every tree that brings not forth good fruit ſhall be hewn, &c.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. AND Jonah prayed to the Lord out of the fiſhes belly, and ſaid, I cryed by reaſon of mine affliction: R. Solomon hath upon this a moſt ridiculous comment, that this fiſh was a male, and having ſwallowed Jonah, he having room enough, as in a ſhip, prayed not, but this male fiſh ſoon put him out again into the mouth of a female being big with young, and there he was much ſtraightned, and ſo called upon the Lord, which hee gathereth from the change of the gender, becauſe, firſt it is ſaid, God prepared a fiſh, the word דג a maſculine being uſed; then when he comes to ſay, he prayed out of the fiſhes belly, he uſeth the word דגה a feminine. But how fooliſh and abſurd this expoſition is, appeareth v. 10. where when the fiſh vomited up Jonah again upon the dry land, the word דג is uſed, as at the firſt, and therefore he might as well for this have added another invention, that the female being too much pained with Jonah in her belly, and her young ones alſo, put him out again into the mouth of the male. Thus many times when the Rabbins would ſhew themſelves wiſe, they prove fools, and many times deliver ſuch things, as that it would irk one to relate. The word in the maſculine or feminine, is uſed promiſcuouſly to ſet forth a fiſh at large, either male or female, and ſo it is in this place. Calvin. Gualter. Some will not have it underſtood when Jonah prayed out of the whales belly, that there he uttered theſe words, but being delivered and reſtored to the land again, becauſe the words of prayer here uſed, are not ſo much a prayer as confeſſion and Pſalm of praiſe to God for that which he had done for him; neither do the words, ſay they, agree to him being in that condition, but delivered out of it, for he ſaith, I cryed unto the Lord and he heard me, as of a thing paſt. Hieron. Lyra. Yet others more ancient conceive theſe words to have been uttered in the whales belly, holding that God aſſured Jonah of his deliverance, whileſt he was there, and then he ſaw himſelf in ſafety and therefore ſpake he thus. But I rather aſſent to the former, for how can any man tell, that God aſſured Jonah of deliverance before he was delivered, that he ſhould then ſpeak of himſelf as already delivered? But after his caſting out upon the dry land again, there was great reaſon that he ſhould thus confeſſe to the praiſe of God who had done ſo wonderfully for him. His prayer then is not ſet down, but only in generall it is ſaid that he prayed there, and he ſaid, v. 2. which may be as well referred to the time of his being out, as in, as if he had ſaid, and being heard and brought out of that naſty and dangerous place, he ſaid, as followeth.

V. 4. Then I ſaid, I am caſt out of thy ſight, yet I will look again towards thy holy temple: This further confirmeth, that Jonah compiled this hymne after that he was come to land again, when he had hope that he ſhould again goe to the houſe of the Lord, of which he intimateth here, that he had no hope when he was in the whales belly, but counted himſelf now an abject, and one whom the Lord hated and could not indure to look upon for his rebellion any more, which is implyed in theſe words, I ſaid, that I am caſt out of thy ſight.

V. 6. I went down to the bottome of the Mountains, the earth with her barres was about me, yet haſt thou brought up my life from corruption: In ſpeaking of the danger of death, wherein he was, he diverſly amplifieth it, that the mercy of God in delivering him, might be the more magnified. And he calleth the Sea compaſſed with high Mountains, the bottome of the Mountains for the low lying thereof in reſpect of them, and the rockes keeping any thing therein from coming to land, and theſe are the barres of the earth for this cauſe ſo called. And in that he ſaith, thou haſt brought my life from corruption, it is again plainly intimated, that when he ſpake thus he was delivered. And this he attributes to the V. 7. power of his prayer made in the fiſhes belly, v.7. whereupon he gathereth, that they who obſerve lying vanities forſake their own mercie, that is, they who ſeek V. 8. in a ſuperſtitious way for help and deliverance in time of danger, are far from prevailing for mercy of which they ſtand in need at Gods hands, who alone can and will help and ſhew mercy to thoſe that ſeek to him according to the directions of his holy word, and not according to mens inventions. For whoſo hereby thinketh to prevail, ſhall be utterly deceived, and periſh, but whoſo obſerves the word of God to ſeek to him according to the rules thereof, ſhall be ſaved, and this is called his own mercy, becauſe ſo the mercy of ſalvation promiſed to ſuch as call upon God ſhall be made his, and if any good be hoped for by ſuch as do otherwiſe, it is but a meere deluſion, and they that doe ſo forſake him in whom there is mercy indeed for a vain imagination.

Whereby we may ſee how great pains Papiſts take in vain, in ſeeking to the Note.
Saints departed, going in pilgrimage to the holy land, and to Saints ſhrines for help, making there oblations to their great coſt, and alſo they that ſeek to Wizzards, or obſerve ſigns truſting to them: yea they hereby make themſelves uncapable of mercy, and run headlong to deſtruction: Some, as Calvin Calvin. ſaith, underſtand this of the mariners taxed hereby by Jonah for their calling every one upon his God, and now although for the preſent they ſacrificed to God, yet he foreſaw that they would ſoon turn from him again to Idolatry, and ſo ſhould finally obtain no mercy, but he rejecteth this, and might well do ſo, as uncharitable, ſeeing in all probability they were ſo wrought upon that they truly turned.

And the Lord ſpake to the fiſh, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land: Here ſee V. 10.
the effect of Jonah his praying, and the almighty power of God, who by a word ſpeaking doth whatſoever he pleaſeth, his word and command being alike heard and underſtood by dumb and ſenſleſſe creatures and by thoſe, that are indued with reaſon and underſtanding. And it muſt be a great power that muſt bring ſo great a fiſh to the ſhoar, where it ſeldom cometh for the ſhallowneſſe of the water, for which it declineth places near the ſhoar and keepeth in the deepeſt places of the Sea altogether, that we may admire and praiſe the power of God and fear and truſt in him. The whales caſting up of Jonah did notably figure out not only Chriſts reſurrection, but the reſurrection of all the dead at the laſt day, when the earth ſhal give up the dead therein, and the Sea the dead therein, Rev. 20.

from their evill wayes, which they doing, God repented of the evil threatned, and did it not.

The Septuagint here for 40 dayes have 3 dayes and Nineveh ſhall be deſtroyed, but it is manifeſtly an errour in the Scribe, and can no way be excuſed, ſo that this plainly evinceth that tranſlation to be corrupted. For the Kings requiring man and beaſt to faſt and to be covered with ſackcloth, it may ſeem ſtrange both becauſe beaſts ſin not, and it may ſeem impoſſible ſo ſuddenly to get ſackcloth enough to cover all the beaſts of Nineveh and men alſo both great and ſmall. To the firſt it may be ſaid, that although beaſts ſin not, yet for mens ſins, whoſe beaſts they are, they are puniſhable together with their maſters, and therefore to expreſſe the greater ſorrow they muſt faſt alſo, that they might together with them mourne for want of food, the cry being thus made the greater, and God whoſe creatures all are, hearing this great cry might be the more moved to compaſſion. For putting on of ſackcloth upon beaſts, I conceive that not all generally were thus clad, but ſuch as men to ſet forth their pomp the more, covered commonly with cloth of more worth, and upon which they hanged rich trappers and foot cloths, that as in them they had offended by pride, they might expreſſe humility now by taking theſe rich things off, and putting courſe ſackcloth upon them in ſtead thereof, as the King himſelf layed away his robes at this time and put on ſackcloth and aſhes. How long they faſted and did thus, it is not ſaid, but becauſe Jonah was three dayes in proclaiming this, it is probable that where they heard firſt of it, they thus humbled themſelves all that time. But it was not their faſting or crying to God, but turning from their evill wayes, that prevailed for mercy, as is here expreſly noted. For the Lords repenting, it hath been ſpoken of before, Jer. 18. & 1 *Sam.*15. ſo that I ſhall not need to adde any more here.

CHAP. IV.

V. 1,2. HEre Jonah his weakneſſe is again laid open, in that he was offended and greatly vexed in ſeeing his propheſying of deſtruction to Nineveh not to take effect. If it be demanded, how did he know that Nineveh ſhould not be deſtroyed within 40 dayes, when as this time was not yet expired: for his ſitting without the city to ſee, argueth that the time ſpoken of was not yet come? Sol. The ſame God, who had commanded him to threaten it, revealed now his wil before thoſe days were ended, moſt probably ſoon after his threatning upon the Ninevites repentance that he would now ſpare them. But was Jonah angry becauſe the people repenting were ſpared? this had been great inhumanity in him, and altogether miſ-becoming a Prophet of the Lord, who one would think ſhould rather have rejoiced to ſee ſo good an effect of his propheſying, and gone amongſt them to inſtruct them further in the fear of the Lord, and to ſtir them up to goe on according to this good beginning? Sol. It was not their being ſaved from deſtruction that vexed him, but that hereupon men would have him in deriſion, as being no true but a falſe Prophet, ſo that hereafter there would be danger, as he conceived, of peoples contemning and ſleighting of propheſies to his great diſhonour, from whom they came. But if by revelation from God, he knew now that Nineveh ſhould be ſpared, why did he ſit upon ſome hill without the City expecting the event? Sol. He knew not but that the Ninevites repentance might be momentary, they within the time limited returning with the ſwine to wallow in the mire again, becauſe this is a thing common with many, being in preſent danger to repent for 2 or 3 dayes, and then to fall to ſinning again, when the danger is over, as Pharaoh and Ahab, and *Eſa.*50. And becauſe Jonah was angry in the reſpect beforeſaid, God did but gently reprove him, Doeſt thou well to be angry Jonah?

V. 2. For his prayer made now, I pray thee (O Lord) was not this my ſaying when I was yet in my country? In which words he addreſſeth himſelf to God in the way of ſupplication, yet he expoſtulateth with him for his being offended at his fleeing away to Tarſhiſh, as if the Lord were more to blame then he: but both this and the words following, take away my life, came from his paſſion and diſtemper of ſpirit, as we read of the like before touching Elijah, which blindeth the eye of reaſon for the time, for which the Lord bare with them both, and ſpared them. It is not ſet forth as exemplary to us, that we in time of diſcontent and danger, or diſgrace, as weary of our lives, might doe the like; but to ſhew what infirmities be in the beſt, that he who ſtandeth may take heed leſt he fall, and not be high minded for any grace conferred upon him above other men. The next words are the ſame with Joel 2.13. and ſeem to be borrowed thence.

1 King.19.

Note.

And

V. 6. And the Lord prepared a gourd that it might be a ſhadow over his head. Jonah having made him a booth to ſit in, whereby he might be ſomewhat ſhadowed from the heat of the Sun, but not ſufficiently, the Lord out of his mercy provided this ſhadowing alſo for him, aiming yet herein at another end, as is by and by ſhewed. About the word rendred gourd much contention hath anciently been, it is קיקיון ſignifying either a gourd or Ivy, or a kind of tree that in a ſhort time groweth up with broad leaves, like the leaves of a vine, and thick, and ſo moſt fit to ſhadow him that ſits under it, and it differs herein from a gourd or ivy, that they grow not erect without a ſupporter, this upon a ſtiffe ſtalk ſtanding erect by it ſelf without any thing to ſupport it, but for any name, whereby to expreſſe it in other languages, there is none, for which Jerome rendred it, Ivy, and ſaith in an Epiſtle of his written long after, when controverſie aroſe about his tranſlation, that in the Syriack and Punick tongue it is called Elceroa, which kind of tree groweth here and there in Paleſtine upon ſandy and light ground, and it is a tree which cometh of a ſeed being caſt into the ground, and growing up in two or three dayes, but the Lord by his power made it to grow up in one night.

V. 7. God prepared a worm, &c. As God made a gourd ſuddenly to grow in a night, ſo having ſtood a day he made it ſuddenly to wither, giving us herein an emblem of the vanity of worldly things wherein we delight, that we may not
Note.
V. 8. ſet our hearts upon them which are ſo tranſitory. When the gourd was withered, Jonah his vexation was renewed, becauſe now both the wind and Sun ſmote him exceedingly. Then the Lord ſaid, Art thou grieved for the gourd for which thou labouredſt not, but it came up in a night and withered in a

V. 9, 10, 11. day, and ſhould not I avoid, as a thing that would be grievous to me, if I ſhould do it, to deſtroy Nineveh, wherein are ſixſcore thouſands that cannot diſcern between their right hand and their left, and much cattle? It may ſeem ſtrange here, that omitting to ſpeak of their repentance, he ſpeaks of theſe things, as if he were chiefly moved hereby, whereas it was ſaid before, that becauſe Nineveh repented, God repented and did not bring upon it the evill threatned. But it is to be underſtood, that he ſpeaks not here of their repentance, becauſe it was ſpoken of before, although that were the main reaſon why they were ſpared, and the conſiderations here ſpoken of but additionall, whereby God yet ſheweth his care over little children, that have actually done neither good nor evill, notwithſtanding their originall corruption, for which he might juſtly caſt them into hell fire, yea and other inferiour creatures alſo, the very beaſts, that men in a good way might not be doubtfull, but ſtedfaſtly beleeving that he will much more tender their good and preſervation from evill.

Iſaiah, which argueth the ſweet harmony amongſt the Prophets then, and reproveth our jarrings now to the great hinderance of true piety ſo that to the end of their continuing Kingdomes they wanted not Prophets, but had many to premoniſh them of their ruine to come to the very laſt, that their judgement might which ſheweth that plentifull preaching in a Kingdome is not alwayes a ſign of Gods favour, but ſometimes a forerunner of his wrath approaching, that we of the Kingdome of England, that have ſo many Sermons now preached more then ordinary, may take notice from hence, that this may be our caſe, V. 1. and therefore repent. For this Prophet hee is ſaid to be a Moraſhite, that is, of Vatblus. a City in Judah called Mareſhah, Ioſh. 15. 14. ſaid by Vatablus, and Andr. Maſius, An. Maſ. to be a fair City then, although in Ieroms time it was but a little village two Hieron. miles from Eleutheropolis, and Micah ſignifieth poore, Moreſhah, poſſeſſion, ſo, bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit, for theirs is the Kingdome of heaven, it ſhall be their poſſeſſion; this epithet, the Moraſhite, is added alſo to diſtinguiſh him from Michaiah, who propheſied in the dayes of Ahab 100 yeares before. For the time of his propheſying, it was in the dayes of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, he was of the ſame time with Iſaiah and Hoſheah. Micah may alſo be rendered, quis ſicut? who like him? as being moſt full of divine Myſteries, for which he is noted by Jerome to be placed in the midſt of the ſmall Prophets. And hee is ſaid to have ſeen theſe things concerning Samaria and Jeruſalem, that is, both Kingdomes, Samaria being named firſt, becauſe to be firſt deſtroyed, and becauſe the moſt wicked then of the two, for which it was chiefly threatned; and his ſeeing was common to him and other Prophets, who are ſaid ſo to do, becauſe they had Viſions and Revelations hereof from God. If hee taught all the time of the Kings here named, hee propheſied long, under Jotham 16 yeares, Ahaz 16, Hezekiah 29, in the totall 61. And there were in theſe times divers changes, Jotham a godly King, yet took not away the high places, Ahaz moſt wicked, Hezekiah took away both all idolatry and reliques thereof, ſo that Micah continuing faithfull in the time of theſe changes, not ſparing to inveigh againſt all ſorts of ſin for fear of any man hath ſet us a notable ſample to doe likewiſe.

Note.

V. 2. Heare (all yee people) and hearken (O earth) and all that therein is, Let the Lord himſelfe be witneſſe againſt you, from his holy Temple. The Prophet being about to reprove great and groſſe ſins beginneth with an exordium to ſtir up to attention, not much unlike to Moſes, Deut. 30. & 32. and Eſai. 1. onely Micah cals upon the people of all Nations, and not upon Iſrael onely to hear, that their ſhame might be publiſhed every where all over the World, for which he next nameth the earth and all things therein, both animate and inanimate. For all things, when God will, ſhall in their kinde teſtifie and ſhew the wickedneſſe of men to their more juſt confuſion. And that their judgement might be from the moſt ſufficient witneſſe of all others, hee alſo calleth the Lord to witneſſe againſt them from his holy habitation, that is the Temple at Jeruſalem, of which hee often ſaid, this is my houſe, and here will I dwell for ever.

V. 3. Behold the Lord will come downe and come out of his place, and tread upon the high places of the earth. This is not ſpoken as if the Lord at any time were included in any one place, for he filleth all places with his preſence, but becauſe the Temple which was properly the place of his habitation upon earth, was high ſituated, wherein the wicked Iewes conceived him to be included, as another falſe god or idol, not being able to ſtirre out, eſpecially as long as they felt not his puniſhing hand, but onely heard his Prophets threatning them in his name, hee ſaith, that hee will come out of his place, and that they ſhall ſoone finde and feel to their coſt, when they ſhall be miſerably deſtroyed. Wherefore his coming out here ſpoken of is by his judgements, although as Calvin ſaith, ſome think it to be meant of his forſaking his Temple, of which it is propheſied, Ezek. 9. But it is plainly ſpoken of his coming from his Temple to his Tribunall, which ſhould be ſo terrible to the wicked, that none ſhould be able to abide it, as is intimated in the next words, and ſhall tread upon the high places of the earth.

Calvin.

V. 4. And the mountaines ſhall melt under him, and the valleys be cleft aſunder, &c. Whereby high places, not onely ſuch, as wherein idolatry was committed, and mountainous places, but mighty men, and high in worldly dignity, who thinke for their greatneſſe that no judgments can come at them, are meant. But God wil tread the proudeſt of them under his feet, and their ſtout hearts ſhall then bee like melting wax before him a conſuming fire, that runneth down a ſteep hill. And the like is often by other Prophets ſpoken of God to ſet forth his Almighty power to make even Kings and Princes to tremble before him and not to goe on in ſin.

V. 5. What is the tranſgreſſion of Jacob? is not Samaria, and the high places of Judah, is not Jeruſalem? that is, the great and capitall ſin of both Kingdomes, abominable idolatry hath the beginning from the wicked Kings reigning in both theſe Metropolitan Cities, and hence is upheld and maintained in all parts of the Kingdome, and hereby God is moſt provoked, Exod. 20.

I will make Samaria as an heap of a field and as planting of a Vineyard, that is, of a City full of houſes, and faire buildings, they being all burnt downe to the ground, but it ſhal not ſerve for a place of habitation any more, but be ploughed and ſowen, as a field with corn, and digged and planted, as a Vineyard, ſee this more plainely ſet forth touching both Samaria and Jeruſalem, chap. 3. 12.

V. 7. All the hires thereof ſhall be burnt with fire, that is, the goods gotten by theſe idolaters, whileſt they ſerved idols, and imputed to their bleſſing for their continuall devotions towards them, as they are ſaid to do, Hoſh. 2. all theſe, which the enemies having ſubdued them cannot carry away, ſhall be burnt up: and they are called hires of idols, not becauſe idols as whoremongers gave them, but they were thought by theſe baſe idolaters, often compared to whores, to come in unto them as a reward for their love and voluntary ſubjection to them, as an whore for hire proſtitutes her body to an adulterer, as is further explained in the next words, for they gathered it of the hire of an harlot, and they ſhall returne to the hire of an harlot, that is, as ſacreligious gaine to the fires conſuming, as Achans wedge of gold. Vatablus will have idols the whores, and theſe hires given unto them and laid up in their Temples, but idols are no where ſo ſet forth, but idolaters onely, yet I miſlike not, that the gifts given by blinded people to idols, honouring them therewith, as they are drawne to doe by their cunning Prieſts, ſhould be alſo underſtood, all which as the hire of an whore, comming in in aboundance ſhall waſt and weare away againe to nothing.

Vatablus.

V. 8. For this I will mourne and houle, I will make a mourning as of Dragons, and as the mourning of young Oſtridges. Here the Prophet expreſſeth with what griefe of ſpirit he hee was taken for the calamities to come upon his people, that of him ſome others might learne to be likewiſe affected and eſcape them. And his compariſons to this end are moſt emphaticall, firſt of a Dragon, which encountreth with an huge Elephant, though farre leſſe and killeth him, but the Elephant falling upon the Dragon hee lyeth howling and crying under the weight of his heavy corps, not able to get out, till he dyeth alſo. 2. Of a a young Oſtridge, which being left by the dam in the Egge, becauſe ſhee forgetteth where ſhe laid it, of ſuch extraordinary forgetfulueſſe is the Oſtridge, when by the heat of the Sun in lying in the ſands of the Sea ſhore it cometh to bee hatched, it runneth up and down for want of a damme to provide it meat, making a moſt lamentable noiſe, as being ready to famiſh. Thus Gualter, but the word יענה here uſed ſignifieth an Owl, yet Jerome a man moſt learned in the Hebrew tongue renders it Oſtridge, and if the hiſtory before going be true, it moſt aptly agreeth unto it.

Gualter.

V. 9. For her wound is incurable, he is come to Iudah, that is, ſo great a deſtruction is coming upon the Kingdome of the ten Tribes, as that it is never to be repaired againe, as indeed it was not, for although they of the Kingdome of Iudah returned from captivity in the dayes of Cyrus, yet Iſrael did not. And whereas hee ſaith, he is come to Judah, and to the gates of Jeruſalem, hereby he meaneth Senacherib the King of Aſhur, who tooke all the Cities of Judah, and then bent his courſe to Jeruſalem; but through the prayers of godly Hezekiah hee had his huge hoaſt there deſtroyed, thus Gualter, and Calvin rendring the former words, her plagues are bitter, and ſo indeed the word אנושה ſignifieth, or ful of grief, but Lyra expounds it of the corruption of Samaria infecting even unto Judah, and Jeruſalem alſo, and conſequently bringing deſtruction upon both. But I reſt rather in the former, becauſe the Prophet is hear ſpeaking of the puniſhment of the ſinne, having before laid open the ſinne, and the hiſtory of Senacheribs coming to the gates of Jeruſalem, having before deſtroyed Samaria, doth moſt aptly agree.

V. 10. Teclare it not in Gath, weep not in the houſe of Aphiah, roll thy ſelfe in the duſt. Here the Prophet, after profeſſing to lament the deſtruction, of which he propheſieth, ſtirreth up his brethren of Iſrael to doe likewiſe, or bidding them lye in the duſt, he ſheweth, what they ſhould ſhortly be compelled to doe. The ſenſe is made much more obſcure in our tranſlation then in others, which are alſo more agreeable to the Hebrew. For both Vulg. Calvin, and Junius, make a diſtinction thus, Tell it not in Gath, weep not at all: in the houſe of Aphrah, or of the duſt, roll your ſelves in duſt, for עפרה ſignifieth duſt, and was indeed the name of a city in the tribe of Benjamin, Joſh. 18. 23. but doubtleſſe, as Calvin hath it, he alludeth to the ſignification of the name, it being moſt probably ſo called, becauſe a moſt duſty city, as certain cities in Galilee given to Hiram were called the land of Cabul, that is, durt: and Paris in France hath the name Lutetia in Latine, a luto. The meaning then of this place is, Becauſe the Philiſtims will rejoice and make a mock of your miſery when it cometh, and this will greatly aggravate it, ye ſhall make no outward ſhew to them hereof, by publiſhing it in any of their cities, by crying or howling for it there, but going in ſecret, and there covering your ſelves with duſt, ye that remain ſhall grievouſly lament this your great overthrow. And thus, if any doubt ſhall ariſe, by reaſon of the Prophets firſt words, Hear ye all people, how theſe agree with them, it is reſolved, the judgment ſhould be ſo notorious, that all nations about ſhould take notice of it, but the Jews, as being much confounded hereat, ſhould not be the publiſhers of it, but conceal their ſorrow therefore as much as they could; ſee a paſſage like this, 2 Sam. 1.20.

1 King. 9.13.

V. 11. Paſſe away thou Inhabitant of Saphir, having thy ſhame naked, Vulg. and paſſe yee away, it being ſpoken to them that were bidden before to roll themſelves in the duſt, to ſhew that they ſhould paſſe away into captivity. Yee have a fair habitation, a confounded ignominy: that is, yee of the ten tribes, but it ſhall be turned into confuſion, when this time of your captivity cometh, Hebr. it is, yee have a fair habitation, for שפירי ſignifieth fair, and then the next words are a denuded confuſion, or confuſion made naked, meaning for beauty and glory, which they formerly had, a lamentable change into confuſion that ſhould befall them, and that ſuch as though they would, they ſhould not be able to hide from the view of the world. Junius alſo hath it, tranſi habitatrix elegantis loci, as the word rendred paſſe away, is not a plurall but a ſingular, as anſwering to the words before, roll thy ſelf in the duſt. And for the word Saphir as it goeth in N. Tr. it is not ſo Hebr. but Shaphir, the word Saphir, which commonly ſets forth a pretious ſtone being, ספיר. The Inhabitant of Zaanan came not forth in the mourning of Bethezel, he ſhall receive of you his ſtanding, Vulg. ſhe went not out, that dwels at the going out, the neighbour houſe ſhall receive mourning from you, which ſtood to it ſelf: expounded by Lyra, although this nation be not yet gone away, yet it is, as it were, in departing, and Judah which is the neighbour houſe ſhall ſuffer alſo after it, as ſhe hath received infection from it, that is, from Samaria meant by the nation before ſpoken of, but in the next words, which ſtood to it ſelf, he ſheweth for a time it ſhould ſtand, viz. in the dayes of Hezekiah, although the deſtruction thereof were alſo then attempted by Senacherib King of Aſhur.

Lyra.

Junius.

The firſt words rendred, ſhe that dwelt at the going out went not out, are Hebr. ſhe that inhabited the flock: by Junius rendred locum pecoroſum, and that not unaptly to make ſenſe of it in another tongue, whereby moſt probably are meant the inhabitants of Baſhan on this ſide of Jordan, becauſe that country is ſpecially commended for fruitfulneſſe in graſſe for the feeding of cattle, and ſo it is ſpoken by way of conceſſion, as if he had ſaid, I grant, that the inhabitants of thoſe outermoſt parts of Reubenites and Gadites, are not yet carryed away captive, for which ye be in hope that ye ſhall not, who dwell more within the land of Canaan, but ye ſhall notwithſtanding come into this lamentable caſe, and the houſe near, for ſo the word Ezel in Hebr. ſignifieth, ſhall receive mourning from you, then the laſt word עמדתו there is a ſtanding to him, implyeth a continuance of the Jew ſtill for a time after Samaria captived. As for the N. Tr. which makes צאנן and אצל proper names, I ſee no reaſon therefore, for which cauſe I think it beſt to read and expound it as hath been ſaid. Junius who agreeth with us, in the firſt words in the reading, yet in the laſt and the ſenſe goeth quite from us, by the place of flocks, underſtanding more barren places that were not far off, and depended for corn upon the fair country before ſpoken of, but now it being deſtroyed, mourning ſhould come to theſe places for want of their ſupply of proviſion from thence, as in times paſt, for which he renders it, mourning ſhall be in the adjacent places, which receive from you their conſtitution; confirming it by that which followeth *v.*12.

For the Inhabitant of rough places ſhall lament for the good, when evill ſhall come from the Lord to the gates of Jeruſalem: For which N. Tr. hath it the Inhabitant of Ma-roth waited carefully for good, &c. Vulg. ſhee that dwelt in bitterneſſe was infirmated to Lyra. good: expounded by Lyra of the Kingdom of Judah, ſick of ſin after the time before ſpoken of, in the dayes of Manaſſeh, for which ſhe was deſtroyed alſo by the Caldees and ſo dwelt in the bitterneſſe of great ſorrows. Againſt this tranſlation nothing can be excepted, only I take it to be ſpoken of Samaria before ſtirred up to lament, for of Judah and Jeruſalem nothing hath been yet ſpoken, but of Senacheribs coming to her gates, ſhe yet ſtanding when Samaria came to miſery. And ſo theſe words have reference to *v.*10. and the firſt part of *v.*11. as a reaſon thereof. For even the Kingdom of the ten tribes looked for good by the ſeducement of idolatrous Prieſts who ſpake all good unto them, and that the evils threatned ſhould not come upon them, but they found to their coſt the contrary to be true, being brought to dwell in bitter-neſſe of extream ſorrow, for the phraſe uſed infirmated to good, or made ſick, it is meant, through waiting for good, but it not coming, languiſhing and pining away as one ſick of a conſumption.

V. 13. Thou Inhabitant of Lachiſh bind the chariot to the ſwift beaſt, ſhe is the beginning of ſin to the daughter of Zion: Here the Prophet comes to the Kingdom of Judah, whereof Lachiſh was one city, Joſh. 15. 39. and Achzib mentioned v. 14. another, Joſh. 15: 44. In bidding Lachiſh bind the ſwift beaſts to the chariot he intimateth the enemies coming againſt Lachiſh and taking it, as indeed Senache-rib is ſaid to have done, 2 King. 18. 14. he took all the cities of Judah, and La-chiſh in particular, where for a time he abode, and thither did Hezekiah ſend Achzib ſhall be a lie to the Kings of Iſrael*, that is, according to the ſignification of the name, for it ſignifieth a lie, for they of Lachiſh and Achzib lyingly join-

Therefore

V. 14. Therefore ſhalt thou give preſents to Mareſheth Gath, the houſes of Achzib ſhall be a lie to the Kings of Iſrael: Therefore he ſhall give emiſſaries upon the inheritance Gath, the houſes of lyes to deceit, to the Kings of Iſrael, ſo Vulg. Lat. which is word for word according to the Hebrew, only the firſt word is not thou ſhalt give, but give thou, and Achzib and Mareſheth which are proper names of places, as was before noted out of Joſh. 15.44. for as Achzib ſo Mareſhah is there named one of the cities of Judah: but taking them for appellatives and following the Vulg. Lat. Lyra expounds all thus, He, that is, the King of Aſhur ſhall ſend forth his warriers, for to give emiſſaries and to ſend men forth in warlike manner is all one, Upon the inheritance of Gath the houſes of lyes, that is, againſt the Philiſtines country firſt called an inheritance, one chief city, Gath, being put for all the cities of the Philiſtims, and becoming the Aſſyrians inheritance after ſubduing; and the houſes there are called houſes of a lye, for their lying to the Kings of Iſrael, and deceiving them: which, as R. Solomon ſaith, was by making a league with them, as the Syrians did when they came againſt Judah, Eſa. 7. but for fear leſt Iſrael ſhould grow too potent, not keeping it, and therefore ſtirring up Hoſeah againſt Pekah the King of Iſrael to ſlay him, as 2 King. 16. whereas the word therefore, in the beginning of the verſe ſeemeth to make againſt it, becauſe it implyeth the reaſon to be laid down before, v. 13. and ſo this to be ſpoken to Lachiſh, and not to Gath, he ſaith, that the word therefore hath reference to the words following, but not to them before going, but becauſe this ſtands not with ſenſe, neither do we read any where of the Philiſtims making a league with any King of Iſrael, or breaking it, as hath been ſaid, therefore to paſs this over as a Rabbinical invention, let us ſee what light any other Expoſitour giveth to this difficult place. Gualter ſaith, that the word שלוחים is of diverſe ſignification, properly it ſignifieth emiſſaries, as the Vulg. Lat. renders it, or any things ſent out, but about the things which it is ſaid, that Lachiſh ſhould ſend out, is difference amongſt Expoſitours, ſome holding tribute to be meant, the receivers whereof probably the King of Aſſyria placed in Mareſheth Gath, when he had ſubdued it: Some, arrows or darts, of which the King of Aſſyria ſhould find good ſtore at Lachiſh being taken, herewith to goe againſt Gath to ſubdue it alſo, for ſuch weapons are by a generall name called Miſſilia; Laſtly, ſome, preſents, ſent to the Philiſtims to help them againſt the Aſſyrians, whoſe coming they feared, but he ſaith, they ſhould find them houſes of Achzib, that is, lying to the Kings of Iſrael, becauſe how fairly ſoever they might promiſe, yet indeed they ſhould do them no good. And this he chiefly reſteth in as moſt genuine. Junius ſaith it is an irony, Go to, give gifts, and ſo make thee friends all thou canſt of neighbour cities, ſuch as Mareſheth and Achzib were, they ſhall, when thou haſt done all that thou canſt, prove but lyers to the Kings of Iſrael, by which name he cals the Kings of Judah, after Iſrael carryed away captive, becauſe from thenceforth they reigned over thoſe of them that remained. And whereas Gath added to Mareſheth, ſeemeth to imply not a city in Judah to be hereby meant, but the habitation Gath it ſelf, he ſaith, it might have that Epithet added to it, though a city of Judah, becauſe the men of Gath ſometime inhabited there, but were expelled, as we read 1 Chron. 8.13. And of all other Expoſitions this ſeemeth to me the beſt, for of the Jews confederating at any time with the Philiſtims, we no where read, although Iſrael did ſometime with the Syrians, and Judah with other Nations, but one city might put ſome confidence in others, and her Kings in them, all being ſo many and ſtrong; but in ſo doing they ſhould be utterly deceived at the laſt: yet there is one ſenſe before given of the word emiſſaries, which agreeth beſt of all, viz. tribute paid at Gath to the Aſſyrian, he bids them give it, to ſhew that they ſhould do it, and then addeth, if the Kings of Iſrael had any confidence in the ſtrong houſes or places of Achzib to be defended, that they might not come into this ſervile condition, he ſaith, this ſhould prove but a deceit or lye to them. Hebr. this is ſet forth as an excellent paranomaſie בתו אכוב לאכזיב.

V. 15. Yet I will bring an heir to thee (O inhabitant of Mareſhah) he ſhall come to Adullam lam the glory of Iſrael: That being done, which is before propheſied of, viz.

the cities brought under, and the King, who truſted to the ſtrength thereof, carryed away captive, I the Lord will make thee the inheritance or poſſeſſion of another King, and in naming Mareſhah in particular, he hath reſpect not ſo much to the city properly ſo called, as to the ſignification of the word, in- Joſh.15.35. heritance, as if he had ſaid, (O inhabitant of the inheritance,) ſometime given to Iſrael, both thou and thy country ſhall become to be his inheritance, that ſhall conquer thee. For the next words, Adullam was a city in the tribe of Judah, from whence the cave wherein David lay hid, had the name; and hereby is meant, that the enemy in taking the country into his poſſeſſion ſhould take in all the cities thereof, yea even Adullam with the cave thereof, ſo that if any ſhould think by hiding themſelves here, or in any other obſcure places, they ſhould notwithſtanding be found out and taken: and he calleth Adullam the glory of Iſrael, becauſe David, that was ſo famous, for a time lay hid there, which made it ever after a place of great note throughout the land; to this Gualter. Hieron. Lyra. effect alſo Gualter, Jerom, and Lyra note, that the word כבוד ſignifieth both glory and gravity or heavineſſe, and if it be taken for heavineſſe, the ſenſe is plain, the enemy coming thus and poſſeſſing the country ſhall be the heavineſs and ſorrow of the people of Iſrael.

V. 16. Inlarge thy baldneſſe as the Eagle: that is, becauſe it ſhall be thus unto thee, lament and ſorrow greatly, expreſſing it by outward ſigns of plucking off thy hair, as the Eagle ſheds her feathers being aged.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. WOe to them that think iniquity upon their beds, and work evill. For iniquity Hebr. it is און ſignifying both iniquity, labour, a lye, and vanity: Note. Here the Prophet layeth open the doings of the covetous oppreſſours, when other men be at reſt upon their beds in the night, and nature requires that it ſhould be ſo, they are then working in their minds by ſome cunning means or other to circumvent and make a prey of their neighbours, and yet that which they ſo wickedly work for, and break their ſleep, is but vanity, they have unceſſant labour in their mindes, how to lye and deceive moſt covertly for an advantage, but all which they get by thus doing, is but vanity, and puls a curſe upon them, which is implyed in that a woe is here denounced againſt them, ſo that they are moſt fooliſh of all other men, for which it is ſaid, they that will be rich fall into many noiſom and fooliſh luſts, that drown the ſoul in 1 Tim.6.9. perdition, and he that ſtudyed in the night about the gathering of worldly Luk. 12. goods, is ſaid to be a fool, thou fool, this night they ſhall fetch &c.

V. 3. Againſt this family I deviſe an evill; the ſame word rendred deviſe, is here uſed that was uſed v.1. as if he had ſaid, ye deviſe iniquity or injuſtice upon your beds, which ſhall finally come to nothing, but I am alſo deviſing to bring that upon you, which ye ſhall not eſcape, ye ſhall not draw out your necks, a metaphor taken from beaſts yoaked, and brought under, to ſhew their ſervile condition to come; neither ſhall yee walk on high, which is added, becauſe men growing rich are commonly proud, and are of an elate carriage, but being brought under the yoak of ſervitude to their enemies, they go like poor ſlaves. becauſe this is an evill time, that is, will be a time of miſery for you, and he ſets them forth by the name of this family, to intimate their pride ariſing from the houſe of which they came.

Therefore thou ſhalt have none that ſhall caſt a cord by lot in the congregation of the V. 5. Lord: this is added to v.4. where a lamentation is made for their fields taken away, which they had gotten by fraud and oppreſſion, according to v.2. now he ſaith, theſe being in the enemies poſſeſſion, it ſhall not be in their power any more to divide them by a line, or by lot, wherein he alludeth to that which was done in Joſhua his dayes, and which uſed ſtill to be done in dividing the fathers inheritance amongſt his ſons after his deceaſe, and he calleth the Iſraelites the congregation of the Lord, as they had been, but now ſhould be no more.

V. 6. Propheſie not to them that propheſie, ſay they, they ſhall not propheſie to them, that they ſhall not take ſhame: Here the wicked Jews are brought in as oppoſing the Prophets of God in their threatnings, and forbidding them ſo to doe, as Amos 2. 12. ſo that the firſt words are to be taken as ſpoken by them, and it is to be noted, that the word rendred Propheſie not, ſignifieth Diſtil not, Gualter. but is commonly uſed to ſet forth propheſying, becauſe as the rain diſtilleth drop after drop upon the earth, and ſoftens it, and makes it fruitfull, ſo doth or ought propheſying to doe by mens hearts that hear it; but the wicked Jews moſt probably uſe this word taken from diſtilling to diſgrace propheſying, as a vexatious continuall dropping; in which ſenſe is it uſed of a Prov. 19. 13. ſcolding contentious woman, that ſhe is as a continuall dropping: for ſo Note. prophane men account preaching againſt their ſins no better then railing or dropping down gall upon their mouths, which is moſt bitter and diſtaſtfull. The next word Hebr. is, they ſhall propheſie: wherein the Lord is brought in ſpeaking to the contrary againſt theſe audacious rebellious children, who durſt by their oppoſition ſeek to ſtop the mouths of his ſervants the Prophets, ſo as none but ungracious children will offer to doe to their father. Here then is a kind of Dialogue, wherein firſt the wicked Jews ſpeak ſaying, propheſie not; then the Lord anſwers, they ſhall propheſie; and this is verbatim according to the Hebrew. But then it followeth, they ſhall not propheſie to theſe; Shall they propheſie, and yet ſhall they not propheſie? here is no contradiction as it may ſeem, but a further expreſſion of the unprofitableneſſe of propheſying to theſe wicked ones, it being meant, they ſhall not propheſie to theſe reprobates, but as they are mingled together with the elect, for they indeed are unworthy, and if there were none but ſuch to heare, that precept ſhould rather be followed, Give not your holy things to dogs, &c. and then the laſt words Matth. 7. follow moſt aptly, leſt it apprehend ſhames, as the words properly ſigniſie, that is, leſt the word of God uttered by them, reap nothing but reproaches, as it doth at the hands of ſuch wicked ones from time to time; thus Gualter and Calvin, who ſaith it is a threatning that hereafter they ſhould have no more propheſying, as after Malachi they had not. The Vulg. Speaking ſpeak not, it ſhall not diſtill upon them, the houſe of Jacob ſaith confuſion ſhall not comprehend, joining the beginning of the next verſe to this, expounded by Lyra, ſpeake no more ye prophets of judgment, it ſhall not come upon thoſe being Gods peculiar people; and this is the ſaying of the whole houſe of Iſrael, confuſion ſhall not befall them. This indeed, if the words would bear it, makes all plain very briefly. But here is no participle at all, but two verbs, the one with a negative, the other without, thus, Diſtill not, they ſhall diſtill: then whereas he hath it, it ſhall not diſtill, in another ſenſe, and in the ſingular number, it is the ſame word, and a plural, intimating the ſame ſignification, they ſhall not diſtill to theſe; and therefore I reſt in the firſt, the ſenſe being plainly this. They, the wicked Jews, ſay to the Prophets, Diſtill or Propheſie not; but the Lord ſaith Propheſie, yet not to theſe wicked ones to benefit them, as the moderate rain diſtilling or dropping upon the ground; it, that is, their propheſying, ſhall not remove confuſions from them, that is, the evils before threatned, for the word יסג ſignifieth to remove as well as to apprehend, it being uſed in this ſenſe, Prov. 22. 28. Thou ſhalt not remove the ancient bounds, wherefore tranſlations, which perplexe and trouble the ſenſe, would be corrected thus, Propheſie not, they ſhall propheſie, but they ſhall not propheſie to theſe, for propheſying ſhall not remove or prevent confuſions, that are coming upon them for their ſins.

V. 7. O thou that art named the houſe of Jacob, is the ſpirit of the Lord ſtraightned? Here the Prophet againſt their forbidding to propheſie v. 6. tels the wicked Jewes, that it was not in their power or the power of all the men in the world to reſtrain the ſpirit of God ſpeaking by his Prophets, and therefore it was horrible impiety in them to ſeek thus to doe, are theſe his doings? here againe the wicked are brought in ſpeaking by way of objection againſt preſent Prophets, as if they had ſaid, The Lord is gracious and mercifull and eſpecially to us, the houſe of Jacob, he hath alwayes in former times magnified his mercy in ſaving us from the hands of our enemies, but ye that come now in his name, doe nothing but threaten us with judgements and deſtruction; is it poſſible then, that the Lord ſhould now goe contrary to his owne nature in doing ſo againſt us, as yee ſay? they are ſurely your inventions to terrifie us, God doth not imploy you to threaten, that he will doe any ſuch things. To this he anſwereth in the next words, do not my words good to him that walketh uprightly? if God be now changed towards you, it is not through any mutability in him, but becauſe yee are degenerated and gone from the wayes of your Father Jacob, hee walked uprightly, and had good words from God and performances accordingly, ſo that Gods words did him good, but yee contrariwiſe having nothing but a name from him walk perverſly, and therefore you muſt looke, that the ſame good word of God ſhould be turned to you to ſuch, as yee are unwilling to have it, viz. a word of threatning, condemning, adjudging you to the miſeries ſpoken of by the Prophets whom ye ſo much maligne and oppoſe. Lyra. Lyra, who joineth the firſt words of this verſe to verſe 6. as hath been before ſaid, rendring them, the houſe of Jacob ſaith, contrary to the Heb. verity, which is, that called the houſe of Jacob, give this for the meaning, is not the Spirit of God of as great power as in times paſt? theſe then ſhall not be his works, which yee Prophets ſay he will doe againſt us, we beleeve you not. But it hath been already better expounded, as relating to verſ. 6. in the firſt words there; thus Gualter. Calvin. alſo Gualter, and Calvin, who notes an emphaſis in theſe words, thou that are called the houſe of Jacob, who haſt been continually taught of God, doſt thou now like a madde dogge ſnarl at his doctrine? if heathens ſhould doe ſo, it were not ſo much to be wondered at, but in thee it is altogether intolerable.

V. 8. Even of late my people is riſen up as an enemy, yee pull off the robe with the garment. Having taxed their ſinning againſt God in their oppoſing his Prophets, now he proceedeth to ſhew, how they in ſtead of children became enemies to him by their oppreſſions of men and women: from the men ſtripping them, as they travelled upon the way like moſt cruell theeves and robbers who take away the money of paſſengers, and when they have done ſo, their garments, eſpecially, if they be more coſtly, as robes or other good raiment, thus leaving them naked without all pity. So he meaneth, the great ones amongſt the Jews did V. 10. by the middle and meaner ſort through their oppreſſions, and verſ. 10. they turned the women out of their delightfull houſes, that is, widows, oppreſſing them by their power, till they were inforced to leave their houſes, in which they had long dwelt, and therefore moſt dear unto them, ſelling them away to pay their debts by ſuch oppreſſions growing upon them: Or, they made them to leave them being otherwiſe ready to force them through their vile Note. luſts. But it is to be noted, that enemy-like parts acted againſt men and women, who are the people of God, make the actours enemies to God, for which it ſtands every one in hand to beware of ſuch practiſes, as hee would not declare himſelfe to be Gods enemy, in whoſe favour and peace with whom lyeth all our comfort. And hee ſaith, that they were turned enemies of late, to denote, that of old they were not ſo, but the abominable ſin of idolatry having broke in upon them, and contempt of the Prophets deſtroying or cauteriſing the conſcience, they were now prone to all moſt foule evils, from which even naturall men abhor. Laſtly, note that not onely ſharkes and ſhameleſſe ſhifters are theeves and robbers, but alſo oppreſſours of what eſtate or degree ſoever, yea they are ſo baſe, that they ſtrip men of their garments, and moſt inhumanely turn poore widowes out of their houſes to live ever after harbourleſſe and in miſery. And hereby they are plainly cenſured, that in this land have robbed paſſengers, that were quiet and peaceable, meant by theſe words, who were averſe from warre, and the oppreſſours of theſe times by laying upon the people intolerable taxations, for this hath not been done but of late in theſe miſerable times, wherein many have been turned out of their houſes by being made to flee from thence for fear of greater evils, or have had their eſtates taken from them, not onely to their preſent ſuffering of all manner of want and miſery, but alſo to the impoveriſhing of their children, who ſhould have ſucceeded in their inheritances, which is meant by the next words, from their children yee have taken away my glory, where by glory inheritances ſo wonderfully conferred upon the children of Iſrael are ſet forth, becauſe in bringing them hereunto God procured to himſelfe ſo great glory for his Almighty power and goodneſſe appearing towards his people herein. All theſe, as well as the wicked Jews are riſen up as enemies to God, and therefore wofull is their caſe, although they may flouriſh and proſper for a time.

V. 10. Ariſe and depart, for this is not your reſt, becauſe it is polluted, it ſhall deſtroy you, for ever, Heb. for pollution it ſhall be deſtroyed, and the deſtruction mightily. Here they are threatned againe with going into captivity out of their owne land, which they had by their ſins polluted, as the Canaanites had done before them, who were therefore ſpewed out, and withall with horrible deſtruction, in rendring the words, the Vulgar comes neareſt to the originall, propter immunditiem ejus corrumpetur corruptione peſſima. Verſ. 11. If a man walking in the ſpirit and falſehood lye, ſaying, I will Propheſie to thee of wine and ſtrong drink, hee ſhall be the Prophet of this people. Vulg. Would to God I were a man not having the ſpirit, and could rather ſpeak a lye, I ſhall diſtill to thee into wine and drunkenneſſe, and he ſhall be upon whom this people is diſtilled, Hebr. it is לו איש הלך, where the firſt word לו is ſometime uſed as a ſign of the Optative mood, whereupon the Vulgar goeth, turning it utinam, but the word הלך ſignifieth going, permits not ſuch a reading, although Ribera contends, that הולך ſignifieth as well to recede, as to goe, and לו. ſignifieth alſo Si, ſo that the firſt words here according to the Hebrew are utinam or ſi a man walking in the ſpirit, and falſehood, a lyer, then the words following are, I will diſtill to thee in wine, and ſtrong drinke, and this people is diſtilled, or this is a diſtiller to this people, a paſſage very obſcure, unleſſe it be in more words paraphraſed, upon which Gualter very well doth thus, If not following Gods inſpirations, but my owne vaine imaginations, after the manner of thoſe your ſpirituall men, of whom yee make greateſt account, I ſhould bring forth ſuch things, as be moſt pleaſing to drunkards and covetous wretches, that they might live ſtill in exceſſe and be ſecure from all danger, then I ſhould be an acceptable Prophet to this people. And hee renders the words, If I were a man, walking in the ſpirit, and deceitfully lying would diſtill to thee for wine and ſtrong drinke, then I ſhould be a diſtiller to this people, whereby diſtilling is meant propheſying, as was before ſaid upon verſ. 6. and becauſe the word rendred diſtil is of the firſt perſon, this reading agreeth beſt to make ſenſe, here being nothing inſerted, but I were, onely theſe words, I ſhould be, doe ſomewhat vary, it being in the Hebrew והיה he is, ſo that if I doe but ſupply, ſuch a one, and render it is, the whole will goe thus in very good ſenſe. If I were a man walking in the ſpirit, and deceitfully lying would diſtill to thee for wine and ſtrong drinke, oh ſuch a one were a diſtiller of this people; here by walking in the ſpirit is meant one ſpeaking according to his own imagination vainly, venting nothing but his breath or wind, of which no ſuch effect as is ſpoken of, followeth, for of ſuch a ſpirituall man it is ſpoken, Hoſh. 9. the ſpirituall man is mad, for the next words deceitfully lying ſhould diſtill, or propheſie for wine, and they may be taken either thus, being hired by worldly gaine, whereby I might be able to fill my ſelf with the beſt drink and meat; or thus, that going on in drunkenneſſe and exceſſe and other abominable ſinnes they ſhould have peace. So that theſe words are nothing but an upbraiding of them by their fooliſhneſſe in hearkening to ſuch as pretended themſelves to be Prophets, but were not, but indeed windy and vain in their propheſyings, aiming at nothing elſe, but by ſpeaking pleaſing things to get that unto themſelves, whereby they might live merrily, the ſilly credulous people lying ſecurely open to the danger of Gods ſevereſt judgments. And if any be delighted in the like at this day, they are in the ſame caſe, infatuated to their owne inevitable deſtruction, as being averſe from ſound teaching, which ſuffers them not to be quiet in their ſinnes, till that like a deadly diſeaſe it prevailes upon them and kils them for evermore. They that follow the Vulgar Latine expound it thus, O that my Propheſies might prove no truths, but lyes, but I ſhall diſtill, or Propheſie, the wine and drunkenneſſe of Gods judgements, wherewith his people ſhall be made drunken.

V. 12. I will ſurely aſſemble all of thee (O Jacob) and I will ſurely gather the remnant of Iſrael, and I will put them together as the ſheep of Bozra, as the flock in the midſt of their fold. Here by the conſent of Expoſitours generally joyfull things follow after ſad before ſpoken of, touching the grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt. [Calvin. Onely Calvin, whom Junius followeth, underſtands it contrariwiſe, and his reaſon is, becauſe it is not probable, that being in the midſt of terrible threatnings, that any thing ſhould ſo abruptly be brought in tending to comfort, eſpecially threatnings, and exaggerations of their ſins following againe immediately after, throughout the whole third chapter. But it ſeemeth ſtrange to me, that ſo learned a man ſhould be moved to croſſe the general received Expoſition upon ſo weak a reaſon; For it is common with the Prophets when they have ſpoken moſt terribly, to inſert ſomewhat upon the ſodain conſolatory to the faithful, of which there were always ſome amongſt them, even when there ſeemed to be none, as in the dayes of Elijah, 1 King. 19. as Gualter well noteth here; for the Prophets had their raptus, whereby when they were ſpeaking of one thing they were ſuddenly carryed away to another, as hath been noted upon Eſa.7.14. Leaving Calvin therefore herein and to go with the ſtream of Expoſitours, the moſt naturall and genuine ſenſe may be given of theſe words. I will ſurely aſſemble, that is, I will gather me together a Church, which is often ſet forth by the name of Jacob or Iſrael, not that this Church ſhould be conſtituted of Jacob onely, for it conſiſts of all Nations, to whom the Goſpell is preached, yet he ſaith, all of thee (O Jacob) becauſe ſuch as are converted by preaching are aggregated to Jacob to become one body, and that by ſome of Jacob chiefly who were firſt ſent out to preach. And by this aſſembling hee meaneth not into one place, but to one holy and true faith. But what means he when he had ſaid, all of thee, to adde, the remnant of Iſrael? Sol. this is added, leſt any hearing of all ſhould hereupon preſume that all in the Church ſhall be ſaved, it is therefore to be underſtood onely of a few in compariſon, who in moſt corrupt times continue upright hearted, others although they be gathered together with theſe to Chriſtian congregations, yet being but as Goats to the ſheep, and tares gathered and bound in bundles for the fire to the wheat. And this word remnant is enough to evince that gathering together in mercy, and not in judgement, is here meant, becauſe that when the elect of Iſrael are in any place ſpoken of, they are ſet forth thus, the remnant of Iſrael, and no where the wicked crew, but by more generall words. Moreover the next words are alſo as plain to ſhew the ſame, I will put them as ſheep in Bozra, a moſt fruitfull place in Idumea, and therefore moſt deſireable for ſheep to feed upon, and in the fould, as ſheep, that have a carefull ſhepheard at night are brought up together and put in a fold, that they may be ſafe from Wolves. The people, that are adjudged to deſtruction are rather threatned with ſcattering, but the very Joh. 10. word fold and bringing into the fold is uſed by our Lord in ſpeaking of his ſheep.

Laſtly, to ſhew, that although they were but a few in compariſon, yet ſimply conſidered, when they were thus gathered, they ſhould be a great multitude, he ſaith, they ſhall make a great noiſe for the multitude of men, as when by the coming in of people into the houſe of God a great noiſe is made, or when they riſe up or kneele downe together; it argueth a great company of them, ſo it is meant, the remnant of Iſrael ſhould be.

V. 13. The breaker is gone up before them, they have broken up and paſſed through the gate, and they are gone out by it, and their King ſhall paſſe before them, and the Lord on the head of them. Theſe words Calvin thinkes to be plain for him, for when doe men break through the gate, but when gate and part of the wall is broken down, the that the captives taken may goe through in great throngs? and what is their Kings going before them, but Zedekiah his being carryed away alſo? and to ſhew, that all this is not done by the power of the enemy, but of God offended for ſinne, he ſaith, the Lord on the head of them. But for ſo much as he firſt ſaith, the breaker is gone up before them; then, their King ſhall paſſe before them, it is plain, that not two, but one and the ſame man is by both theſe meant, which cannot be Zedekiah, for he fled by a poſtern gate ſecretly, and he brake nothing up that he might paſſe away. Therefore Chriſt is the breaker and the King here meant, breaking the gates of hell when he aroſe again from death, and aſcended triumphantly into heaven, that is, breaking the power of the divell, who held his people captive before, poſſeſſing them as an houſe, as a ſtrong man armed, for in this ſenſe we read of Gates, *Matth.*16.16. And this is done upon beleeving, ſinne being remitted, and ſo the divels power ceaſing, then the ſaithfull truly goe out of his gates, as they muſt needs doe, the Lord being on the head of them, or in the head, that is, Chriſt before called their King, whom no power can reſiſt, as we commonly ſay, when the King is in an army, he is in the head of the Army, Heb. it is בראש in the head.

to bear, for hereby that is taken away, whereby they and their families ſhould to be cenſured for their covetouſneſſe and looking more at worldly gaine, whereby their bellies might be pampered, then at teaching the truth. They are charged with biting with their teeth and then crying peace, and if men reciting this expoſition rejecteth it as coact, becauſe biting with the teeth, is no where uſed for eating, or being entertained with feaſting and good cheare, which belly-gods have after, but rather to ſet forth Lions and Wolves, ſo that hereby is meant, that the Prophets of thoſe times were ſuch to Gods people, they did by their falſe and corrupt teaching bite, as it were with their teeth, the flock of God, thus tearing and killing their ſoules, and yet crying peace, that is, promiſing all happineſſe to ſuch as being ſeduced by them imbraced their deſtroying hereſies, as they are called, 2 Pet. 2.1. For of Wolves coming in ſheeps cloathing Chriſt ſpeaketh, and Act. 20. Paul, of your ſelves ſhall ariſe grievous Wolves, devouring the flock of Chriſt. Then in the next words their covetouſneſſe, and greedy guttedneſſe is taxed, if they put not in their mouthes they denounce Warre, Heb. ſanctifie warre, an hebraiſm common to expreſſe denouncing, that is, they are further notorious for this, that their aim is at worldly gaine, and not ſo much at the converſion of ſinners; and to this filthy lucre they are ſo bent, that they threaten Gods judgments againſt thoſe, that ſatisfie them not herein, and if any oppoſe them in this ravenous way of theirs, they ſtir up war againſt them, which was never more Note. veryfied, then at this day amongſt the Roman Clergy and their Fryers and Jeſuites, who are very incendiaries of war againſt all reformers; being ſpecially ſtirred up to this for the great loſſe, that comes to their Pope and them, if indulgences be cryed down, and prayers and offerings for the dead, and the pilgrimages to Saints ſhrines, and the merit of works, and workes of ſupererogation, &c. For what elſe was the firſt beginning of wars in Germany in Luthers time, but his oppoſing of Fryer Tekle, that went about with the Popes indulgences to be ſold for mony, as Sleiden in comment. ſhews? But here we muſt not exclude theſe Prophets ſnarling at the true Prophets of God, as meant al- Lyra. ſo, by their biting, as Lyra hath it, for herein they have been alwayes as notorious as for the other, renting and tearing them as with their teeth by Note. their railings and opprobrious ſpeaches: yea this evill hath ſpread it ſelfe amongſt thoſe of the reformed religion; for we have many, that intrude themſelves into the office of Teaching coming from Mechanicall trades, being ignorant ſouls God wot, but very confident of their owne knowledge and parts, who in ſtead of Shepheards play the Wolves, through teaching erroneous things ſeducing many to their deſtruction, the maine thing that moveth them hereunto being an ambitious deſire of honour above their fellow tradeſmen, and covetouſneſſe of the things of this life, whereby they might live more plentifully, then otherwiſe they could doe, yet many of them hereby ſeeke to bring their uſurped Miniſtery into the more credit by declaiming againſt the faithfull and able Paſtours of Gods Church that take tithes, but that this is onely a pretext appeares, becauſe the Miniſters of this ſect inſtead of tithes, rake together benevolences to a farre greater value, ingroſſing all the wealth that they can to be their auditours.

V. 6. Therefore night ſhall be unto you, that yee ſhall not have a Viſion, &c. Verſ. 7. V. 7. Then they ſhall be aſhamed, they ſhall cover their lips, for there is no anſwer from God. Here followeth the judgement of theſe deceiving and ſeducing Prophets. 1. In the occecation of their mindes, it ſhall in the end appeare, whereas they pretended themſelves to be ſeers, that they were blind leading the blind in dark- Ioh. 9. neſſe to deſtruction inſtead of ſalvation. For ſo the Lord alſo ſaith touching the Scribes and Phariſes, that he came to make the blind to ſee, but ſuch as did ſee blind, and to ſuch the ſun, that is, the brighteſt light of the word is dark, and the cleareſt day night, when it is clear daylight by the light of Matth. 5.14. the Goſpell inlightening all parts by the lights of the World, as the Apoſtles are called, it is as dark night ſtill to them. Which was manifeſtly fulfilled, and is at this day in the Jewiſh Rabbins being moſt blind, and ſeeing not the ſcope of the Paſchall lamb and other ſacrifices & types mentioned in the Old Teſtament, to be to ſet forth Chriſt working the great work of our redemption, as is ſhewed, 2 Cor. 3. and is alſo propheſied of Eſa. 29.14. and ſhewed to be fulfilled in them, 1 Cor. 1. For the Sun typifyng the Word, ſee Pſal. 19. and that the time of the Goſpell is the day, Rom. 13.12. And for thoſe times, wherein this was propheſied, he meaneth, that the judgements, which hee threatned, coming, if theſe ſeducers ſhould ſpeak any comfort, it ſhould appear to all men to be moſt vain, a viſion and anſwer from God pretended, but indeed no ſuch matter, for comfort and deliverance, wherewith they did bear the people in hand, but an imagination of their own heads. For whereas they ſpake of day, and ſun, and light, it ſhould be darkneſſe, and night: and the very Sun darkneſs through the miſeries which they ſhould then ſuffer, and the people with them, ſo that now they ſhould be confounded and their mouths ſtopped, which they were before ſo ready to open for filthy lucre, to ſpeak peace and bleſſing to their benefactours, and impugne the true Prophets threatning judgments. Note. And thus ſhall it be to all ſeducers that vent their own imaginations for truths, as their ambition or covetouſneſſe leads them, their ſun or brighteſt light, of which they vaunted, making their proſelytes beleeve that a new light was riſen unto them, ſhall at length be turned into darkneſſe likewiſe, and then they ſhall be expoſed to the deriſion of all men and come to utter confuſion, as the illuminated Elders of the Familiſts, and the Enthuſiaſts of the Anabaptiſts in Germany.

V. 8. But truly I am full of the power of the ſpirit of the Lord, and of judgment and might, &c. As if he had ſaid, thus is it with your Prophets, by whom ye are led: but I am none of that ſort, it is not coveting your wealth whereby I am ſtirred up to prophesie, but by the ſpirit of God, whoſe word is accompanyed with power to doe what is threatned againſt you for your ſins.

V. 9. Therefore hear, I pray you, yee heads of the houſe of Jacob, &c. yee abhorre judgment. V. 10. V. 10. the heads judge for reward and the Prieſts teach for hire. Great reaſon there was, why the Prophet before he comes thus to taxe the greateſt in Iſrael, ſhould declare his endowments to this end and purpoſe, as he did v. 8. viz. judgment to diſcerne the evils to be reproved, and might or courage to lay them open and threaten them. Note. And theſe two are neceſſary in every teacher: for how ſhall he reprove evill that cannot diſcern betwixt good and evill, or knowing it be bold to cenſure it in great ones, unleſſe he hath the ſpirit of courage not fearing what danger may follow unto him hereupon through their wrath and indignation, as Ahab was wroth with Michaiah and put him in priſon, and Aſa with the Prophet that reproved him, and put him in ſtocks, and Joaſh and his Princes with Zechariah ſtoning him to death. And all ſuch as God calleth to reprove the great ones of the world, he will not fail to jndue them with ſuch gifts to do it without fear, as Micah was filled with the ſpirit of the Lord to this end, and ſo was Moſes, and Samuel, and Elijah, and many more at ſeverall times both under the Old Teſtament and New, as John Baptiſt, James and John, Peter and Paul, Chryſoſtome, Ambroſe, Luther, &c. But what is it that Micah here reproveth in the chief? judging for reward and teaching for hire, whereby they built up Zion with bloud and Jeruſalem with iniquity: in Prieſts and Prophets the ſame vice that was taxed before; in the Princes the ſame that was taxed v. 1, 2, 3. and there called a fleaing of the skin, &c. here taking bribes to pervert juſtice, that being thus enriched they might build them fair houſes in Zion and Jeruſalem and inrich their poſterity. V. 12. But build what they could, he ſheweth that the buildings thus made ſhould come to ruine, for Zion ſhould be ploughed, and Jeruſalem become heaps, and the place of the Temple as a Mountaine of the Forreſt: notwithſtanding the confidence that they had in God whereby they leaned upon him, v. 11. and therefore were ſecure in reſpect of any evill that might come. And hereby the utter ruine of thoſe glorious Cities and Temple is ſet forth, the place where all thoſe ſumptuous buildings ſtood, being made a field, the very foundations being razed that the plough might goe there, as it is ſaid ſometime to have been done by Troy, of which the Poet:

Et ſeges eſt ubi Troja fuit.

Note. Whence note, both that nothing is gotten by injuſtice to continue, but both it and all that a man hath ſhall come thus to ruine; and alſo that none are ſo wicked, but that they truſt in God, beleeving that no evill ſhall therefore come unto them whatſoever is threatned to the contrary, which is a wonderfull great blindneſſe and ſelf-deceit.

CHAP. IV.

V. 1. B*Ut it ſhall come to paſſe in the laſt days, that the Mountain of the houſe of the Lord ſhall be eſtabliſhed in the top of the Mountains :* Having ſaid before, that the Mountain of the houſe ſhould be as the high places of the Forreſt : now for the comfort of the faithfull he propheſieth of a bleſſed alteration in the time of the Goſpell by Chriſt, herein ſpeaking the ſame with *Iſaiah, ch.*2. for a further confirmation, and *v.*3. the ſame with *Iſa.*2.4. Joel 3. 10. where ſee the Expoſitions.

V. 4. Only *v.*4. it is further added, They ſhall ſit every one under his vine and fig tree, and there ſhall be none to make them afraid : which is a further amplification of the propheſie touching an univerſall peace, whereas alwayes before there was warre. And this is ſtill to be fulfilled when this world draweth nearer to an end, the fulneſſe of the Gentiles being come in, and the Jews who remain yet blinded, being converted to the faith of Chriſt. And in the mean ſeaſon it is in part fulfilled in Chriſtian people of all Nations who take religion to heart : for they preferre peace ſo, as that they will rather ſuffer at the hands of their enemies then take up the ſword, as Chriſt their Lord and maſter did, and when Peter did otherwiſe, he rebuked him, ſaying, he that ſmites with the ſword ſhall periſh by the ſword : Not meaning, as the Anabaptiſts would have it, that the ſword is not by Chriſtian people to be taken up at all, by Nation againſt nation coming againſt it in hoſtile manner, or to revenge great wrongs done: for David often took up the ſword againſt the Philiſtims and other enemies invading his land, and the good Judges againſt enemies oppreſſing Iſrael, and Moſes ſent Phineas againſt the Midianites that had vexed Iſrael, and Saul by Gods command againſt the Amalekites for injuries done to the Iſraelites long before in the wilderneſſe. Whereas they ſay we have nothing to doe with the Old Teſtament to follow the examples therein ſet down, the contrary appeareth in that it is ſaid, the magiſtrate beareth not the ſword in vain, but for the puniſhment of the evill doers. Rom.11.3. And whatſoever things were written afore hand, were written for our inſtruction. Rom.15.4. And have ye not read, ſaith Chriſt, what David did, and *Hebr.*11. Deborah, Barak, and Sampſon, who were Warriours, are numbred amongſt the faithfull, and their examples commended unto us. It is not therefore meant by our Lord, when he ſpeaks againſt drawing the ſword, that Rulers and Judges ſhould not doe it when need requires : nor herein ſaying, that they ſhall learn war no more, that defenſive wars ſhall not be made by Chriſtians being called hereunto by lawfull authority, or offenſive, to revenge wrongs done by unreaſonable enemies : but that private men, although they be multitudes, who ſuffer grievous things at the hands of their Rulers moſt unjuſtly, ſhall not band together againſt them, as Jeroboam and the 10 tribes did againſt Rehoboam, but patiently ſuffer hotteſt perſecutions, rather then do ſo, as holy Chriſtians did in the times of heathen Emperors, and in caſe of being wronged by private men, ſuffer it alſo, rather then by force of arms or violence to the breaking of the publick peace be their own revenged, leaving that alwayes to God, to whom vengeance belongeth, and to his Vicegerents the Magiſtrates, who if they fear God, will not bear the ſword, but for the puniſhment of evill doers being made known unto them : It is therefore an evill ſign, that Chriſt doth not judge amongſt that people, neither ruleth ſo in their hearts, as he ſhould, who are ſo impatient of wrongs by their Rulers in higheſt power, that they take up arms againſt them, or one private perſon againſt another to the violent ſmiting of him that doth the Note.

wrong, or to the challenging of him to a duell, or without ſeeking firſt to have his caſe righted by peaceable meanes, making warre by entring into a courſe of Law to the waſting of his eſtate by unreaſonable charges, or utterly undoing him and his, by caſting him into and keeping him in priſon, when he hath not wherewith to ſatisfie that which is due.

V. 5. For all people will walk every one in the name of his God, and we will walk in the name of our God for ever: Here the conſtant going on of the the Jewes converted without revolting from the faith any more, is ſet forth by compariſon taken from obſtinate heathens, they walk as they are blindly led in wayes of idolatrous worſhip, neither will they by any means be put by from walking in theſe wayes, therefore the Jew once turned Chriſtian ſhall never revolt from the way of the true God, that is, from the way of faith and holineſſe any more to the worlds end. And what is ſaid of the Jew converted is true of every ſincere Chriſtian, he never fals away again, and if any one doth, or more, they went from us, becauſe they were not of us, &c. may rightly be ſaid of them all. And it is a ſtrong argument to move Chriſtian people to walk in the name or way of their God for ever and ever, that is, in obedience to his will, and faith, depending upon him only. Heathen people do ſo by their Gods ſerving them, calling upon them, and truſting in them, being but ſtocks and ſtones, or imaginary things having no being indeed, therefore much more ought Chriſtians, and will all true Chriſtians doe by the God of Heaven and Earth; and from thence an argument is taken Jer.2. to confound the Jewes that in times paſt did otherwiſe, Will any Nation change their Gods? but ye have changed me. If this ſhall ſeem contradictory to that which was before ſaid, that all Nations ſhall come to the houſe of the Lord, it is well anſwered by Gualter, that it is not meant that all of all Nations ſhould do ſo, for many ſhould adhere ſtill to their ſuperſtitions, not being moved by any means to leave them, as experience ſhewed, that they did for many hundreds of years after the propagation of the Goſpel.

V. 6. In that day I will aſſemble her that halteth, and her that is driven out: Here and v.7. he proſecuteth the argument begun v.1. but more reſtreinedly ſpeaking of the Kingdome of Judah under the word her, as is common with the Prophets or the whole Synagogue or Congregation, which is the feminine. And it is a deſcription aptly agreeing to the Jews; for they halted betwixt two opinions, as Elijah charged them, following both God and Baal, and they did for the moſt part, till they were deſtroyed by the Caldees, and ſhe was caſt out, when carryed captive into Babylon, and afflicted ſo grievouſly, that tears for grief burſt out.

Pſal. 137.

V. 7. And I will make her that halted a remnant and her that was caſt off a ſtrong nation; that is, the precious remnant, of which it is ſaid, although Iſrael were as the ſands of the Sea ſhore, yet a remnant only ſhall be ſaved, they of the houſe of Iſrael, who ſhall finally be converted, being only as a remnant in compariſon of thoſe, that in ſo many ages have dyed in infidelity. But now this remnant, the formerly rejected, and captived, and therefore deſpiſed and by all Nations trodden underfoot, ſhall by the acceſſion of the Gentiles unto them, become a mighty Nation, having no meaner King to reigne over them, then God himſelfe in Zion, that is, his Church.

V. 8. And thou O tower of the flock, &c. to thee ſhall it come, even the firſt dominion: Having ſpoken in generall of the Iſraelites; here he ſingles out Jeruſalem, which he cals the tower of the flock, propheſying of Chriſts coming thither, as indeed he did. Some read it the tower of Eder, as a proper name, underſtanding hereby that ſpoken of Gen. 35.21. where Jacob pitched his tent after his coming from Shechem, and ſetting up a pillar at Lux, calling it Bethel. For of this Jerome ſaith, that it was near Bethlehem, although the Hebrews as he confeſſeth, hold it to be the ſame place where the temple was built afterwards, being here called the tower of the flock, as Eder ſignifieth for the congregations coming together thither from all parts of the Land; and this is moſt probable, becauſe Jacob is ſaid to have journyed from Bethlehem before he came to pitch his tent by the power of Eder, and therefore it was ſome diſtance from Bethlehem, as Jeruſalem was, about 6 miles, and the next word added for explication, the ſtrong tower of the daughter of Zion, Hebr. Ophel of the daughter of Zion, or rather, Ophel, the daughter of Zion, evinceth that Eder otherwiſe called Ophel, was in Jeruſalem, becauſe 2 Chron. 33. 14. Manaſſeh his building or repairing of it there is ſpoken of. The Vulg. renders it, thou dark tower of the flock: but if we will make an appellative of it, we muſt render it high tower, becauſe עפל ſignifieth an high place, and not dark, but tranſlatitiouſly, becauſe an high building darkens the place adjacent. But it is beſt to hold to the proper name, and ſo the Temple is hereby deſcribed for the reaſon before ſaid. Gualter. And the Prophet, ſaith Gualter, doth rather ſpeak of the Temple and City thus, becauſe he would hereby put them in minde in what a low eſtate their father Jacob was, when he pitched there, intimating the low ebbe that the Kingdom of Iſraël ſhould be in, when Chriſt ſhould come to reſtore the firſt or ancient dominion, as here is ſaid, and ſo it is by the Cald. rendred, that is, the dominion or Kingdome, as it was, when it flouriſhed moſt in the time of David and Solomon. I think rather that the Prophet in calling it thus alludeth to the ſignification of the name, having reference to that which he had before ſaid, v. 2. that all Nations ſhould come up into it, for then moſt probably was it made the tower of the flock or congregation, ſo many from all parts congregating unto it, not only of the Jews, but of the Gentiles, it was moſt famous all over the world, and moſt eminent, and hereby made a very Ophel, being lifted up on high.

V. 9. Now why doeſt thou cry out aloud, is there no King in thee? Thus he hath ſhewed how after many ages it ſhould be with Jeruſalem, but now in the mean ſeaſon he hereby propheſieth of a lamentable caſe, wherein they ſhould be making them to cry out exceedingly; and what ſhould this be, but that they ſhould be without a King and Counſellours, and conſequently in confuſion, in the very caſe of a woman in travell full of pangs, deſpairing of being delivered? For ſo it fell out to Jeruſalem when Zedekiah their King was carryed away captive to Babylon, and their Princes alſo. For when any Kingdom is without a King and Counſellours, it is in a miſerable caſe, there being no State ſo bad as Lam. 4. an Anarchy, for which a King is called the light of our eyes, and the breath of our noſtrils; and when there was no King in Iſrael, ſee what evils raigned in Iſrael, Judg. 19. & 20. But for the people of God to be without a King was much more lamentable, becauſe when he failed that was of the line of David, their hopes of the Meſſiah that was to come of him, were greatly damped, which was the cauſe why they thus lamented.

V. 10. And that this is his meaning, is ſhewed v. 10. Be in paine and labour to bring forth, &c. plainly declaring that they ſhould be carryed into Babylon: but he immediately ſubjoineth a conſolation, ſaying, there thou ſhalt be delivered, that is, as other Prophets more particularly ſpeak, at the end of 70 years, ſo that there was no cauſe why they ſhould caſt away all hope when they ſhould be in ſuch miſery, and their caſe might ſeem to be ſo deſperate.

V. 13. Ariſe and threſh O daughter of Zion, for I will make thy horne iron and thy hoofes braſſe: Having ſhewed how that after the horrible deſtruction that ſhould V. 11. come upon Jeruſalem by the Caldees, they ſhould be again delivered, v. 10. he derides the thoughts of thoſe Heathens touching them, being that they ſhould V. 12. alwayes keep them under, whereas the thoughts of the Lord were otherwiſe, viz. to gather their heathen enemies as ſheaves into a barn, where the Jews ſhould threſh them, as in this 13. verſe; and if it ſhould be doubted how they ſhould be able thus to do, he ſaith, that God would make their horns iron Gualter. and their hoofs braſſe, and this, ſaith Gualter, was partly fulfilled in the dayes of Eſther and Mordecai, but moſt fully in the time of the Goſpel, when the Apoſtles were ſent out as Oxen to threſh the corn by treading it out, as Preachers of the Goſpel are compared, 1 Cor. 9. 1 Tim. 5.18. And then he ſaith, I will conſecrate their gain to the Lord, which was done when Emperours turning Chriſtians gave their ſubſtance to the building of Churches, and the maintenance of the Miniſters of Chriſt, which went before another way, to the maintaining of idolatry and idols Prieſts. This alſo was fulfilled when the Medes and Perſians deſtroyed Babylon, which in Gods providence was done in revenge of their cruelty againſt Jeruſalem, and ſo the Jews are ſaid to have threſhed and broken them in pieces: for then were the riches of heathens conſecrated to God, becauſe Cyrus and his Princes gave great and pretious gifts to the Jewes, and ſent them away to Jeruſalem, to build the Temple. And afterwards Judas Maccabeus and his brethren tare the Heathen that fought againſt them, as with horns of iron.

CHAP. V.

V. 1. N*Ow gather thy ſelf in troops O daughter of troops, he hath laid ſiege againſt us:* the Vulg. now thou ſhalt be waſted O daughter of theeves; expounded by Lyra and others, of Jeruſalem, the Princes whereof are compared to theeves, *Eſa.*1.23. and *Mich.*2.8. to robbers upon the way, according to which they are ſaid to have made the houſe of God a den of theeves, but the time was coming, wherein they ſhould ſuffer by a hard and long ſiege, which was fulfilled when Jeruſalem was beſieged by the Romans, according to ſome, by Nebuchadnezzar, becauſe in the 2. verſe he propheſieth of Chriſts coming, which was before the deſtruction by the Romans, but is placed after this beſieging, And to this aſſenteth Calvin and Gualter, yet not following the tranſlation of the Vulg. Lat. but that which renders it by troops, taking Jeruſalem to be ſo called, becauſe the Jews were warlike people and truſted by going out to fight againſt their enemies to prevail ſtill, as they had often done. But contrariwiſe they were threatned with a ſiege, at what time they that had formerly gone far out to fight with their troops or armies, ſhould be forced to keep within the city for fear at the Caldees coming, for which it is ſaid, gather thy ſelf in troops, that is, thou ſhalt gather together and keep within a narrow compaſſe. Junius by this daughter of troops underſtands the Jews enemies, whom he doth here deride for the truſt that they had in their great forces united together, for which they thought themſelves invincible, but againſt this he ſhewed *ch.*4.12. that they ſhould be gathered together, as ſheaves that are bound ſtraight together, are brought to the floore to be threſhed, then having ſpoken of their threſhing, *v.*13. he here amplifieth the ſame gathering of them together by another metaphor of troops of armed men gathered together indeed to beſiege a city; but it ſhould finally be to their own ruine by the power of the ruler that ſhould riſe out of Bethlehem, *v.*2. for he ſheweth that the Aſſyrians ſhould at length be deſtroyed, who had born themſelves ſo proudly upon their multitudes, as Senacherib once did, and his army was ſuddenly confounded. And this I take to be moſt genuine. For firſt this verſe Hebr. is joined to *ch.*4. as being of the ſame argument with *v.*12,13. and *ch.*5. beginneth at theſe words. And thou Bethlehem. 2. Becauſe having ſpoken of the daughter of troops he immediately changeth the perſon and ſaith, he hath beſieged us, plainly intimating Aſſyria to be the daughter of armed troops here meant, beſieging Jeruſalem. 3. Becauſe it agreeth not with the argument in hand where all comfort is ſpoken to Jeruſalem and terrour to her enemies, to ſpeak here to her of being brought into ſtraights, but againſt her beſiegers altogether and to her comfort, as he goeth on v. 2. which might better be made the beginning of this chapter, as it is in the Hebrew, becauſe it is a moſt famous propheſie of Chriſts birth and the place where, which is not ſpoken of by any other Prophet, and of the things done after his coming. For the next words, they ſhall ſmite the Judge of Iſrael with a rod upon his cheek, hereby it is alſo made plain, that the daughter of troops before ſpoken of, was the enemy of Iſrael, and not Iſrael, for who elſe but an enemy would uſe the King of Iſrael, meant by the Judge, ſo indignly? for that this ſetteth forth contemptuous uſage is plain from the like done to Chriſt by his perſecutours, and great was the indignity done to Zedekiah when he was ſmitten and had his eyes put out. 2 King.25.

V. 2. And thou Bethlehem Ephrata, though thou be little amongſt the thouſands of Iſrael, yet out of thee ſhall he come forth unto me, that is to be ruler in Iſrael, whoſe goings forth have been of old from everlaſting: Having ſhewed immediately before the great debaſement of the King of the Jews, intimating that Kingdom utterly ruined, now he comforts them again by a promiſe of another moſt glorious King that ſhould be born in Bethlehem the City of David: out of which he came and proved a mighty and famous King, although it could be little expected, the City being ſo ſmall, his fathers houſe ſo mean, and he the leaſt amongſt his brethren. And in ſpeaking of Bethlehem, he omits not to ſet it forth by the ſmalneſſe, being therefore in mans reaſon moſt unlikely to bring forth ſo great and glorious a ruler, yet the very mentioning of the place could not but put them in mind of David born there, and of Gods promiſe to David touching his ſeed that ſhould ſit upon his Throne and raign for ever, ſo that it was a great thing that they might well hope for, ſeeing the power of God doth not work upon advantages to ſet up any man, but he raiſeth out of the duſt to ſit with Princes, as it is ſaid *Pſ.*113. yea he delighteth ſo to doe, that his almighty power might be the more magnified; as he brought Joſeph out of the Dungeon to be the chief Counſellour to King Pharaoh: Whereas Mat. 2. hath it, thou art not the leaſt: it is reconciled upon that place; for this phraſe, the leaſt of the thouſands of Iſrael, it is to be underſtood that amongſt the Jews there were captains of thouſands and hundreds, and according to that diſtribution he here ſpeaketh. Bethlehem and the Villages adjacent made the leaſt number for the ſupplying of a captain of 1000 of all the cities in Iſrael, ſome having a full 1000, ſome 2000 or more, Bethlehem ſcarce 1000 compleat, yet being a prefecture by it ſelf, as he that is over a regiment of a 1000 is ſo called, although in his regiment there want ſome of that number, ſo Calvin, He ſhall come forth to me, that is to be ruler: that is, the Meſſiah ſhall be born in thee, being ſupernaturally brought forth by a pure Virgin, wherein my almighty power ſhall evidently appear, and therefore I ſay, ſhall come forth to me, at my will and decree and time appointed, whoſe goings forth have been of old from everlaſting: here becauſe goings forth are ſpoken of in the plurall number, ſome, ſaith Calvin, underſtand it both of his eternall generation, as God; and his generation as man; and to make this good, the Rabbines ſay, that the Meſſiah was from eternity in heaven, to be ſent down for the redemption and ſalvation of his people when the Father pleaſeth. But this is a vain fable, that of Lyra is better, here the two natures of Chriſt are ſpoken of, the one, viz. his manhood, when it is ſaid, that he ſhould come out of Bethlehem, and both it and his Godhead, when he ſaith, his goings out, for, as Calvin ſaith, although he were born and brought forth, as man in time, yet the decree of God, that thus it ſhould be, was eternall, and ſo in this reſpect this going out eternall. *Act.*2.23. unleſſe we ſhall ſay with ſome, that the plurall number is uſed for the ſingular, as is uſed amongſt the Hebrews in matters of great moment, as wiſdome is ſpoken of *Prov.*1. by the word חכמות a plurall, and the whale בהמות Job 40.

V. 3. Therefore will he give them up, till the time that ſhe which travelleth hath brought forth, then the remnant of his brethren ſhall return to the children of Iſrael: the Vulg. for give them up, hath, dabit eos, expounded by Lyra, he will give ſome time to them to dwell ſtill in Judea, although unworthy for their crucifying of Chriſt, before that they be deſtroyed, by the Romans, becauſe Chriſt was borne amongſt them, and the Temple and ancient ſervice of God was there, which for honours ſake the Lord would not have buryed inſtantly, but in proceſſe of time according to Auguſtine, and Hebr. it is יתנם he will give them, till ſhe that travelleth hath brought forth, that is, the Church be repleniſhed with children out of the nations by their converſion through the preaching of the Goſpel; then the remnant of his brethren ſhall return to the children of Iſrael: Lyra.

that is, being converted to the faith, which was in the poſterity of Iſrael anciently, as in Moſes and David, and other Peophets and holy men, who all beleeved in Chriſt, and are celebrated for their faith Heb. 11. and theſe are called Chriſts brethren, b cauſe he came of the ſame father Jacob, and a remnant, to intimate a very few in compariſon of the whole nation that ſhould be converted, the reſt being hardened by unbelief. But if we take it thus, the word then muſt not be underſtood of the the time when this graunt of their continuing in Judea was expired, but of the time whilſt it laſted, for then many were turned, as we read, Act. 2. and Act. 4. but not of any turning afterwards. Calvin, although he renders the word alſo by dabit, yet expounds it of the Lords giving the Jews over to ſuffer extream miſeries, till that the body of the people being for their ſorrows like to a woman in travail, be delivered by Chriſt, and then a remnant being converted ſhall have exceeding great joy, as a woman of her child, when her pangs be over and ſhe is delivered and ſafe. But whoſe brethren they be, of whom it is ſaid, the remnant of his brethren, or how this is a returning to the children of Iſrael, he ſaith not. But Gualter who is for the ſame expoſition, ſaith the ſame in effect with Lyra, his brethren are Chriſts brethren, whoſe elder brother he is ſaid to be, and the faithfull are all brethren alſo, as having one father, God; one mother, the Church; and one ſpirit, whereby they are knit together in the unity of faith, their turning to the children of Iſrael, is turning truly faithfull, as all the the worthy children of Iſrael ever were, and in paraphraſing upon dabit, he ſhall give, he addeth, therefore he ſhall give them into the hands of their enemies, till ſhe that ſhall travell be delivered: that is, according to ſome, the bleſſed Virgin Mary, bringing forth the ruler ſpoken of, v. 2. which he juſtifieth not, yet dares not deny, but ſaith, if the Authors of this Expoſition were put to prove it, they would hardly be able to do it. But to me it ſeems moſt aptly to agree, the whole ſentence being thus reſolved, becauſe it ſhall be as is propheſied, v. 2. a ruler ſhall come, therefore be of good comfort, O Church of Judea, even being left for a time to many miſeries, for the time of thy ſufferings is not unlimited, it being to end when ſhe that is ſo famous by the Propheſie Eſa. 7. ſhall be delivered of that holy One who ſhall rule over all; then not only Iſrael according to the fleſh and ſpirit both ſhall have unſpeakable comfort, but alſo the remnant of his brethren, whom alſo he calleth his ſheep, ſaying, I have other ſheep, whom I will gather together, and ſo there ſhall be one ſhepherd and one ſheep-fold, and theſe were the Gentiles, to whom the Goſpell being preached the great work of their converſion followed, and then they were turned to the children of Iſrael by being through faith incorporated into the ſame body with them, and made the children of Abraham, as Rom. 4. 12. That of Lyra before going, is too coact, and the word then, denoting the time of the remnants being turned, pointing at the time of the deliverance ſpoken of, agreeth not to the converſion of thoſe faithfull ones in Judea after the Temple and old Service ceaſing, becauſe it was before even at Chriſts and his Apoſtles firſt going out to preach the Goſpel.

Joh. 10.

V. 4. And he ſhall ſtand and feed in the ſtrength of the Lord, &c. and they ſhall abide, &c. That is, Chriſt the ruler before ſpoken of, ſhall ſetledly continue in his Dominion, no enemies being able to deſtroy it or to ſtand againſt it, but he ſhall prevail againſt all, and he ſhall feed, that is, govern and rule in almighty power over his ſubjects, miniſtring food alſo to their ſouls by teaching them the truth, which is as food to the inner man, and ſo they that are taught and governed by him, ſhall abide, Heb. ſhall dwell, hereby denoting the eſtabliſhment of the Church of Chriſt for ever, the very gates of hell not being able to prevail againſt it, for now ſhall he be great even to the ends of the earth, a propheſie of the propagation of the Goſpel to all countries and nations.

Matth. 16. 16.

V. 5. And this man ſhal be the peace, when the Aſſyrian ſhal come into our Land &c. then ſhal we raiſe againſt him 7 ſhepherds, and 8 principall men: that is, Chriſt, who made peace betwixt God and men, ſo many as beleeve in his name according to Rom. 5. 1. and peace betwixt Jew and Gentile, and Nation and Nation converted to the faith,according to Eſay 2.& 11. But touching the words following, they are ſo obſcure, that Expoſitours are much toiled about finding out the meaning. For in Chriſts time there was no Aſſyrian that came into Judea, but his coming was many hundreds of years before. Therefore it is to be noted, that Hebr. it is not, when the Aſſyrian ſhall come, but this man ſhall be peace the Aſſyrian, for he ſhall come into our Land :and it is a propheſie of two diverſe things.

1. Of Chriſt the great Ruler, of whom he began to ſpeak v. 2. and continues to ſpeak of him to the beginning of this verſe.

2. Of the ſufferings of the people of God before the coming of this Ruler by that raging enemy the Aſſyrian, who came againſt Judah in Hezekiah his time, and took all the Cities of Judah and their palaces, and myſtically of their ſufferings by other Heathens in the time of the Goſpel, perſecuting and deſtroying Chriſtians a long time, that the faithfull being forewarned of theſe things might by faith patiently bear them in expectation of the deliverer here promiſed, and the finall ſubduing of them by 7 paſtours and 8 principall men, as in the words following in this verſe and v.6.

So that Micah herein proceedeth much like unto Iſaiah, with whom he alſo ſpeaks the ſame in divers other things, as hath been formerly noted. As Eſa. 7.14. he being about to give a ſign of comfort and deliverance to the Jewes in the time of Ahaz,when cruel enemies came againſt Jeruſalem,propheſieth firſt of the Virgins bringing forth a ſon, and immediately paſſeth on to propheſie of the deſtruction of both the Kingdoms, that came then againſt her, ſaying, before a child ſhal have knowledge to forſake the evil and chooſe the good,the land that thou abhorreſt, ſhall be forſaken of both her Kings , meaning not the Virgins ſon, but another ſpoken of *ch.*8. that the Propheteſſe brought forth,as there hath been ſhewed. In like manner Micah having ſpoken of Chriſt, that ſhall be peace, immediately turns himſelf to the afflictions before this to come, then proſecuting the ſame argument again for the further comfort of the faithfull. But what meaneth he by the 7 paſtours, and 8 principall men raiſed up againſt Aſhur, and ſubduing the land of Nimrod? To this Expoſitours generally ſay, that the numbers of 7 and 8, certain numbers are for a great many, as where it is ſaid, ſhe that was barren hath born ſeven , that is, many children, and whereas it is not only ſaid 7, but alſo 8, hereby ſtill a greater augmentation of their number is made, as *Eccl.*11.2. Give a portion to 7 and alſo to 8 : that is, to a very great company give alms. And coming to diſtinguiſh betwixt the ſhepherds and the principall men, ſome will have by the 7 ſhepherds, a great number of preachers meant, and by the 8 Princes, Biſhops, to whom the principality of the Church is committed, others Paſtors, and Chriſtian Princes, expounding theſe words, we ſhall raiſe againſt him, of a free election made by the people both of the one and the other, which is alwayes beſt, and not when Kingdoms are made hereditary : but ſome referre the words unto God, who is ſet forth plurally in Hebrew אלוהים for the triplicity of perſons, as *Gen.*1. Let us make man after our Image, which I conceive to be beſt. But for the 7 and 8 diſtinguiſhed one way or the other I cannot ſubſcribe: How can either Paſtours in reſpect of Biſhops be ſet forth by the number of 7 and they of 8, or in reſpect of Kings and Princes, becauſe the number of Paſtors is farre greater then either of them? I ſuppoſe therefore that ſo many and no more as be here named, are meant, that ſhould be moſt famous for the propagation of the Goſpel, and if we conſider well of it we ſhall find that there were juſt 7 and 8 ſuch, the 7 Deacons Act.6. and 8 Apoſtles and Apoſtolicall men, whoſe writings made them moſt famous of all others, being the only penmen of the New Teſtament : that is, Matthew, John, Paul, James, Peter, Jude, Marke, and Luke, whoſe praiſe, although no Apoſtle, was his Goſpel.

Touching theſe it is here ſaid, they ſhall waſte the land of Aſſyria with the ſword, but Hebr. it is better, they ſhall feed, and ſo the Vulg. hath it, for it is meant, that they and others like them ſhould ſubdue by the ſword of the Spirit idolatrous countreys, that being named for all, which was then inſtar omnium, the Monarchy ruling over others, and becauſe the ſame, that is, the ſword ſubduing is the word feeding, it is thus ſpoken. And it is called the land of Nimrod, becauſe he was the firſt founder of the Aſſyrian Monarchy, being ſaid to Gen. 10. be a mighty hunter before God, and therefore a fit type of the Devill, that like a Lion hunteth after ſoules ſeeking to devoure them, and all heathen 1 Pet. 5. 8.

him, the Prince of the air, but now fed with the milk of the Word, 1 Pet. 2. 2. and ſo Gods people come to bee delivered from the Aſſyrian, that is, perſecuters being turned faithfull after this bleſſed rulers entring the Holy Land, and from thence, ſending out theſe principall men to Preach the Goſpell; the word נסכי here uſed ſignifieth either ſuch as be ſet over, or Kings, and Princes, comming of נכך to poure out, Kings being ſo called, and chief Prophets for their anointing, when oyle was poured upon their heads to inaugurate them to theſe Offices, as God bad Elijah to anoint Eliſhah, that hee might be Prophet in his ſtead, and a ſword is attributed to him as well as to Jehu and Aſahel, Kings, and of theſe principall men feeding Aſſyria, it is ſaid, Pſal. 45. In ſtead of Fathers thou ſhalt have children, that thou mayeſt make Princes in all lands. And this doth rather appear to be the ſenſe, becauſe verſ. 7. it is V. 7. ſaid, The remnant of Jacob ſhall be amongſt many Nations as a dew from the Lord, for hereby is intimated, that their feeding of them with the ſword was not to ruine, but revive them that were dead before in ſin, as the dew and raine doth the graſſe grown dry, ſeared and dead for want of ſeaſonable ſhowers.
Calvin underſtands both that before going, verſ. 6. and this otherwiſe, of the Calvin. power, that the Jews ſhould have over their enemies, the Aſſyrians, they although in the midſt of them being as the graſſe refreſhed by the dew, that hath no help to make it grow as corn hath, but from God onely, hereby ſhewing, that the power and providence of God alone is ſufficient, to uphold his people, and to make them increaſe and proſper in the midſt of greateſt afflictions, and oppreſſions, though men put not to their helping hand. But others, as I have ſaid, refer all to the Preaching of the Goſpell by them of the houſe of Jacob in all Nations, by the laſt words of the verſe, that tarryeth not for man, nor waiteth for the ſonnes of man, underſtanding that this dew ſhould not come at the will or ordering of men, but of God only, men being ſo far of themſelves from deſiring it, that if the falling of it ſhould be delayed till they deſire it, it ſhould never come. From all which note, 1. that although the condition Note. of Gods people be moſt comfortable through Chriſt, yet it is not without grievous ſufferings in this World. 2. From all theſe there ſhall be deliverance in Gods good time. 3. The principall means of quelling enemies of the Church are Paſtours by the ſword of the Spirit the Word of God, and of theſe ſome ought to be principall and above others, neither ſhould there be a parity amongſt them all. 4. A land before Preaching therein is, the divels land, and the people under his rule, and are not brought from this by force of armes, but by feeding with the Word. 5. It is a great happineſſe to any people to have Gods Miniſters amongſt them, they being to them, as the dew to the withered graſſe.

V. 8. The remnant of the houſe of Jacob ſhall be as a Lion amongſt the beaſts. This may ſeeme ſtrange, that the ſame ſhould be as dew upon the graſſe, and as a Lion tearing and devouring, but it agreeth as well as waſting and feeding with the ſword before ſpoken of, here is nothing elſe meant, but that luſts in men, which were as beaſts of the Forreſt making them ſavage and brutiſh, before the comming of the Goſpell amongſt them, ſhould by it bee deſtroyed, they not being led hereby any more in ſinne, but in all vertue and goodneſſe.

V. 9. In that day thy hand ſhall bee lifted up upon thy adverſaries, and all thy enemies ſhall be cut off. Here the Lord inlargeth himſelf, ſpeaking not ſo much to Jacob according to the fleſh, as according to the ſpirit, that is, the Church gathered out of all Nations, and he ſpeaks of the enemies of their ſalvation, that fought againſt their ſouls, againſt which he ſaith, their hand ſhould be lifted up, that is, they ſhould prevaile, which he ſaith, ſhould be all cut off, V. 10. naming verſ. 10. what theſe enemies were, viz. horſes and chariots, Cities, V. 11. and ſtrong holds, that is, their pride, wherewith they were puffed up by means of theſe things, and not that they ſhould injoy not them any longer.

Then verſ. 12. other enemies of their ſouls are named, viz. witchcraft, ſoothſayers, groves, graven images, and the Cities ſo far forth as they were adorned with theſe, and they thought them the more holy and glorious therefore. And all theſe, I ſay, are ſpoken of, as adjudged to deſtruction now, not amongſt the Iſraelites by nature, but the Gentiles becoming Iſraelites through the coming of the Goſpell amongſt them, becauſe for the V. 15. abominations laſt ſpoken of, the Jews had left them long before, even ever ſince their coming out of the Babyloniſh captivity. But finally, verſ. 15. he threatneth ſuch vengeance to the heathen, as hath not been heard of, that is, to the heathen ſtill hardening themſelves in the abominations before ſaid, when the light came amongſt them, as many did for many hundreths of of years, and his Eccleſiaſticall hiſtory ſheweth to have been fulfilled in the times of perſecuting Emperours of Rome by the ſword, ſore famines and deſtroying Peſtilences, the like to which had not been in former times.

V. 1. A*Riſe, contend thou before the mountains*, the Vulg. againſt the mountains, Heb. with Hieron. the mountains, where by mountaines and hils are underſtood great men, Lyra. and high in dignity, as they are alſo ſet forth, Eſa. 2. So that the Prophet is here bidden to expoſtulate with and reprove even the Princes and Rulers of the people, againſt whom he inveighed before under the name of heads, ch.

touching ſalvation by Chriſt, chap. 4. & 5. now he is called back to it again, and to recount from the beginning Gods favours towards them, and their ingratitude Gualter. as Eſai. 1.1. he ſaith, hearken (O earth) expounding it of the Jews deſperate going on in ſin, having no ears to hear inſtruction, ſo that that he is forced, leaving them, to call ſenſleſſe creatures to judge of their wickedneſſe. But V. 3. becauſe it is not before, but with the mountaines, it is plaine, that men are underſtood hereby, and therefore he varyeth the phraſe, verſ. 3. ſaying (O my people) and yee ſtrong foundations, thus he calleth them alſo, becauſe Princes are as the foundation of the Common-wealth, and they being ſhaked and made ruinous by wickedneſſe, the whole building is ready to fall, thus Pſalm 11. 3. the foundations are alſo ſpoken of, and David ſaith of himſelfe; I beare up the pillars of it; which is proper to a foundation to doe.

V. 5. Remember what Balak the King of Moab conſulted, and what Balaam the ſon of Bear anſwered from Shittim to Gilgal. Of this read Numb. 22. & 23. & 25.
Joſh. 5. But what meaneth he by ſaying, from Shittim to Gilgal? Sol. Gilgal was the firſt place in the land of Canaan, to which the children of Iſrael came, being miraculous brought through Jordan, notwithſtanding their foul ſinning at Shittim in the borders of Moab, Numb. 25. the meaning therefore is, remember not onely, how I over ruled Balaam in ſtead of curſing to bleſſe thee, contrary to Balaks ſolliciting of him, but alſo, what an horrible ſin thou didſt commit at Shittim, in regard of which I was again pacified by Phinees his zeale, and thenceforth went along with thee by my power bringing thee through the great river Jordan upon dry ground into the land of Canaan, and in particular to Gilgal, the firſt place, where thou pitchedſt there, all which I did, that thou mighteſt be moved to live righteouſly before me, which is meant by ſaying, that thou mightſt know my righteouſneſſes, as it is in the Hebrew: that is, not ſome, but all parts of righteouſneſſe.

Wherewith ſhall I come before the Lord, Vulg. what worthy thing ſhall I offer, but V. 6. the word אקדם ſignifieth to occure or meet with, and it is a fit word to anſwer his kindneſſe before ſpoken of, requiring that he having gone ſo far in mercy towards his people, they ſhould now come forth in officiouſneſſe, but for this end bowing the body is not accepted of, nor offering ſacrifices, V. 7. in what aboundance ſo ever they be brought, for all theſe things are not acceptable from the wicked, no nor the offering of a mans firſt born, as Abraham being commanded prepared to doe, for this was commanded him onely to try his obedience, and if another being diſobedient in reſpect of walking righteouſly before God in all things, ſhould doe the like, he could not be accepted. What then is acceptable, verſ. 8. declareth, to be righteous, V. 8. and mercifull, and to walk humbly with thy God. Verſ. 9. The Lords V. 9.
voice cryeth to the City, and the man of wiſdome ſhall ſee thy name, hear the rod, and who hath appointed it. The Vulgar hath it, and ſalvation ſhall be to them that feare his Name, heare yee Tribes, and who will approve it? expounded by Lyra, heare (ye children of Iſrael,) whom he now calleth Tribes, Lyra. becauſe diſtinguiſht into Tribes, but how many amongſt you be there, that will approve it to be his voice by fearing to ſin, and endevouring to live accordingly in all things, ſurely very few none. And in the Hebrew תושיה is properly eſſence, and becauſe ſalvation is the being, which we deſire above all things, it is beſt rendered ſalvation, by the Septuagint σωτηρία, for the next word יראה if we derive it from ירא to fear as we may well doe, rather then from ראה to ſee, the Vulgar Tranſlation is beſt, Salvation ſhall be to him that feareth thy name, if we follow the New Tranſla-Wiſdome ſhall ſee thy name, I know not, how to make ſo good ſenſe of it.
For the next word מטה it ſignifieth either a rod or Tribe, and for ſo much as if we render it Tribe, the ſenſe will be better then Rod, for a Tribe both can hear, and is a noun collective, there being many in a Tribe, for which it may well be joined with a verb plurall, as here it is. For the laſt word יעדה it ſignifieth appointed, if we derive it from יעד, but if from עוד, to exalt, or extoll, and then it is, who will approve, becauſe extolling implyeth approving, and ſo we may wholly reſt in the Expoſition of Lyra.

As yet are the treaſures of wickedneſſe in the houſe of the wicked? Vulg. a fire in the V. 10. houſe of the wicked, the treaſures of wickedneſſe, in the Hebrew it is אִשׁ, which with the point ·· ſignifieth fire, and whereas it is rendered is, it cannot ſo go, un-leſſe it be read יֵשׁ, which ſignifieth is, but both this would be a manifeſt change of the word, and it being a ſingular would not agree with the plurall, treaſures, wherefore I rather approve of Jeroms rendring it fire, the ſenſe being plain according to that reading, Shall the wicked houſe yet be fire, after ſo many inſtructions and threatnings againſt unjuſt dealers, ſhall they goe on ſtill to puff the fire of Gods wrath till the whole wicked houſe of Iſrael, be all on a flaming fire, and ſo conſumed? and if ye ask, what amongſt us cauſeth it to be ſo, the next words reſolve it, the treaſures of wickedneſſe, goods evill gotten and encreaſed to great aboundance. The ſmall meaſure is abomination, Heb. the light Ephah is wrath, or becauſe the Ephah is a meaſure of dry things, it may be rendred ſmall, as Amos 8. they are charged with making the Ephah ſmal and ſhekel great, the ſin both there and here taxed being deceit in mea-ſures, whereby ſome ſeek to get this worlds goods, but they get Gods wrath, which is fire, as was before ſaid: a warning for all unjuſt dealers, it is no treaſure that is thus gotten, but a fire in thy houſe to burn it up, therefore if none but a madman will ſet fire upon his own houſe; what is Note, hee but mad, that will uſe deceit in his dealing? either in meaſure, weight, lying or diſſembling ſpeaches, or any other way? The word אש alſo with hirie, as it is here pointed is obſerved by Pagnin to ſignifie fire.

Therefore I will make thee ſick in ſmiting thee, in making thee deſolate. Here the V. 13. carrying of Iſrael away into captivity firſt, and then of Judah is threatened, for which a word in the plurall number, ſmitings: hereby firſt the people are made ſick as it were, and weak, and then deſolation comes to their land. And verſ. 14. one thing is ſpoken of that might well make them ſick and weak;

V. 14. Thou ſhalt eat and not be ſatisfied, and thy caſting downe ſhall be in the midſt of thee; that is, thou ſhalt want food through famine, and hereby thou ſhalt fall, not in outer places, where pooreſt people dwell, but in the heart of the City, where the rich dwell, Thou ſhalt take hold but not deliver, and what thou delivereſt I will ſlay with the ſword, that is, the enemies breaking it, and laying hold upon thy children to carry them away captive, if thou ſhalt ſtrive to ſave them out of their hands, thou ſhalt not be able to doe it, and ſuch as thou doſt ſave ſhall come to their death another way, and therefore thy attempting to ſave them ſhall be vain.

V. 15. Then the land being deſolate another ſhall reap what thou haſt ſown to thy

CHAP. VII.

V. 1. W*Oe is me, for I am as when they have gathered the ſummer fruit, as the grapegleaning of the Vintage.* Here the Prophet in the perſon of Iſrael lamenteth the deſolation to come, when there ſhould be ſuch a deſtruction, and captivating of the people of the land, that the whole Countrey ſhould be as a Vineyard without any more grapes, then it is commonly after grape-gathering, there being left onely here and there a cluſter, ſo the whole countrey without inhabitants all but a very ſmall remnant of poore people, as it was, 2 King.25. And becauſe there was amongſt V. 2. them all as great a deſolation of the righteous before this, it is brought in verſ.2. as a prime cauſe of lamentation, The good man is periſhed out of the land, and there is none upright among men. Expoſitours here vary, ſome underſtanding it altogether of the firſt deſolation by deſtruction: ſome of the other by the decay of goodneſſe generally overſpreading the whole Kingdom.
But I ſee no reaſon, but that we may take in both, as meant here, for it is lamentable, when a land formerly repleniſhed with people, and in a proſperous eſtate is laid waſt and moſt lamentable, when they amongſt whom the true religion is profeſſed, are ſo degenerated, that none good are left amongſt them, but all turn oppreſſours of each other, as is expreſſed in the next words, They all lye in wait for bloud, they hunt every man his brother with a net. Whereby yet he meaneth not, that every one without exception did thus, but the rich and the mighty, there being amongſt the meaner ſort yet ſome few good, although 1 King. 19. ſo few and hidden, from mens ſight that they could not diſcern any, as in the time of Elijah, who made the like complaint when as there were 7000 known to God in Iſrael, that had not bowed their knees to Baal, and amongſt theſe of Prophets not a few, as we may gather from the ſpeech of Obadiah to him, ſaying, that he had hid of the Prophets of the Lord by 50. in a cave, when Jezabel ſought to deſtroy them all.

V. 3. That they may doe evill with both hands earneſtly, the Prince asketh and the judge for a reward. Having charged them with cruelty and fraud generally, ver.2. now he particularlizeth them, that were guilty hereof, even the greateſt Princes and Judges, Vulg. They call the evill of their hands good, Heb. for, or upon the evill of their hands, or of both hands, the Prince asketh to doe good, and the judge for recompence or reward; the meaning being, when they doe ſo evill, as hath beene ſaid, the Prince requireth tributes and taxes of the people, under a pretence of doing therewith good to the Kingdome, but indeed it is either to enrich himſelfe out of avarice, or to maintaine pride and exceſſe, and for the Judge ſet up by him, he to gratifie the Prince for this his preferment, ſaith as the Prince ſaith, juſtifying him in all his demands, or having attained this dignity at a dear rate, all that he hunts after is the getting of bribes to recover his money laid out again, and to make advantage of his place to the enriching of himſelfe and poſterity. Then come in a third ſort here alſo complained of, and the great man, he uttereth his miſchievous deſire, and ſo they wrap it up, Heb. for miſchievous deſire, is the pravity of his ſoul, it being meant, that Counſellours, who are greateſt in ſwaying the State, and in caſes to be judged, next unto the two before ſaid, bend their ſtudies likewiſe for gain to make bad caſes good, and ſo, all things amongſt theſe three are done moſt corruptly to the oppreſſion of the poor people, who muſt be patients under greateſt exactions and unjuſt judgments. A very true deſcription of our owne Kingdome, and therefore a dreadfull ſign of horrible judgments coming.

Note.

V. 4. The beſt of them is as a bryer, &c. that is, he that ſeems beſt, as a bryer rends and tears all that live and come amongſt them, therefore in the next words they are threatened, The day of thy Watchmen and Viſitation cometh, and they ſhall be in perplexity. Here ſaith Calvin by Watchmen he underſtands their Princes, whoſe judgement was at hand for all their wickedneſſes before ſaid, and their Prieſts and Prophets that flattered them, and in ſaying thy viſitation, he meaneth the whole body of the people, that ſhould ſuffer likewiſe, for it is no plea for them, that they were miſlead, every one being required to take notice of the truth and to fall on it, and not to be at the will of the greateſt to doe evill, there being alwayes ſome faithfull Watchmen of whom they may learn the right. Wherein I ſubſcribe unto him, but onely by Watchmen I cannot underſtand any other, but Prophets and Paſtours, who only are ſet forth by this name and not Princes, although both ſorts be alike called Shepheards.

V. 5. Truſt not in a friend, put not confidence in a guide, keep the doores of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy boſome. Here the Prophet returns again to the corruption of the times, which ſhould be or was ſo great, that an intimate friend could not ſafely be truſted in by his friend, a captain by his ſouldiers, or a wife by her husband: not only Kings, and Judges, and Counſellors at Law being deceitfull, but all other ſorts of people, no friends being any other now, but feigned friends, and wives moſt unnaturally, inſtead of building their husbands houſes, ſeeking by accuſations brought againſt them, whereby they might be put to great damage, to pull them down, or by other fraudulent wayes and means. Here againſt therefore Micah giveth good counſell, withall laying open the univerſall overſpreading of wickedneſſe extinguiſhing all love, but of a mans ſelf, as David complained, Pſal. 12. and we find it by experience to be true at this day in all, but wives, of whom there is yet but here and there one thus divelliſhly minded againſt their husbands, but more through talkativeneſſe apt haply to tell abroad that which they ſpeake in private, to their great prejudice.

V. 6. For the ſon diſhonoureth his father, and the daughter riſeth againſt her mother, &c. Here he proceedes to more near relations, that he might leave none untouched, but ſhew, not only wicked, otherwiſe they were grown, but in being unnaturall in the higheſt degree, but this ſeems rather to be Propheticall touching the time of the Goſpell, in which alſo our Lord ſaith, that it ſhould thus come to paſſe through the corruption and infidelity of men, then the declaratory, what was in the Prophets days, and yet they being ſo greatly corrupted, doubtleſſe were alſo evill in every kind, all iniquity being grown full and ſo ripe for judgement, but in the time of the Goſpell there was another cauſe, viz. the hatred of unbeleevers againſt the faithfull, then the pride, cruelty and covetouſneſſe, that reigned in mens hearts.

V. 7, 8, 9. We are taught in the example of the Prophet to wait upon God, being aſſured, that although for a time we may ſuffer much by means of ſuch evill men and women, yet we ſhall finally be delivered by his goodneſſe, and theſe V. 10. our unreaſonable enemies ſhall be ſhall be judged.

Gualter. All which ſaith he, ſhe that is mine enemy ſhall ſee, and ſhame ſhall cover her, which ſaid, where is now thy God, being firſt meant, as Gualter hath it, of Babylon, that now inſulted at the ruine of Jeruſalem, although ſome think, that Idumea is meant, then of the Jewiſh Synagogue inſulting over Chriſt, when he hung upon the Croſſe, and they that went by mockt at him, and ſaid, he truſted in God, Let him now ſave him, if he will have him. For Babylon is called often by the name of a daughter, and ſo is Judah, for which he ſpeaks of either of them, ſaying ſhee, and threatning either with moſt heavy judgements, as alſo befell them, deſtruction being by God brought upon Babylon by Cyrus, and upon Jeruſalem by Titus and Veſpaſian. Now it is a great temptation to be delivered into the hands of the heathens, for Gods people, not only to ſuffer all cruelty, but alſo to be derided and ſcoffed at and for their miſeries to heare the great God of heaven vilified; as if he could not help them and therefore there is great need, to be upheld againſt this temptation, to ſet before our eyes, that all this is done by God for our ſins, and that in his good time we ſhall be delivered and our enemies confounded, that we may wait with patience for it.

V. 11. In the day that thy wals are to be built, the decree ſhall be far removed. Having ſpoken of the treading of Babylon under foot, verſ. 10. he now proceedeth to ſpeak more comfort to Jeruſalem by ſpeaking of the rebuilding of her wals, and of the removing of the decree then a far of, the Vulgar for Decree hath Law, for חק ſignifieth either Statute, Precept, or Decree; the meaning is, that thou ſhalt no more be under the command of the Babylonian. Thus Expoſitors generally, but if we look back to *c.*6.16. the ſtatutes of Omri are there ſpoken of, the ſame word חק being uſed, wherefore it is more probable, that the ſame is here meant, they ſhall no more live in the foul ſin of idolatry; as indeed they did not after their return from captivity. Some by the Decree underſtand the Decrees of Kings after Cyrus to the time of Darius, whereby the building of the Temple and City was forbidden, as if it were meant; that theſe decrees ſhould now ceaſe, another King ariſing, that again allowed the
V. 12. building thereof. Verſ. 12. In that day alſo he ſhall come to thee even from Aſſyria, and from the fortified Cities, and from the fortreſſe to the river, and from ſea to ſea, and from mountaine to mountain. Vulg. In that day Aſhur ſhall come to thee and to the fenced Cities, and from the fenced Cities to the river, and from Sea, &c. but Heb. it is, he ſhall come even to thee from Aſhur, whereby the great glory of Jeruſalem, after the rebuilding ſpoken of v. 11. is prophecied of, inſomuch as that people ſhould flock to it from all parts to worſhip there, yea even from Aſſyria, and the moſt mighty Kingdoms meant by fortified, and from all parts of the world far and wide, meant by ſaying, from fenced cities to the river, and from ſea to ſea, and from mountain to mountain. For the word יבוא as Calvin noteth, is indefinite, in force of a plurall, they ſhall come. It is in effect the ſame that was ſaid chap. 4. of the coming of all Nations to the mountain of the Lord, in their reſorting to Jeruſalem after this rebuilding, that great conflux of Nations to the Church of Chriſt being pointed at. So that it is firſt to be underſtood of the reſort of ſome of all Nations thither to worſhip, then of the converſion of all the faith firſt preached there. That they came from all Nations under heaven thither to worſhip, ſee Act 2. and after that Pentecoſt, the Holy Ghoſt, being come down upon the Apoſtles, they went out, and taught, and converted all Nations, which upon their Preaching came in, and were added to the Church. Others expound the words of the people, Gen. 10. that were held captive in Babylon coming to Judea, contending that Aſhur and Babylon are promiſcuouſly uſed, becauſe Aſhur ſprung from Babylon, and that their coming to the defenced Cities of Judah is meant, the bounds of that land being deſcribed both in the longitude from eaſt to weſt, from ſea to ſea, and in the latitude from mountain to mountain, from north to ſouth, as if hereby the repleniſhing of the land in all parts were ſet forth: but the words of the text in the Hebrew wil not ſo well bear this reading, wherefore I reſt in the former as the true meaning.

Not-

V. 13. Notwithſtanding the land ſhall be deſolate, that is, before this cometh to paſſe, there ſhall be a deſolation of the whole land, as was before threatened, c. 3. 12. V. 14. Verſ. 14. Feed thy people with thy rod, the flock of thy heritage, they ſhall dwell ſolitarily in the wood. Having ſpoken of the deſolation of the land, during which time his people were under grievous ſufferings, now he prayeth, that the Lord would turn theſe ſufferings to good unto them, that they might be ſanctified and ſaved: for this ſaith Gualter, Gualter. is meant by feeding them with his rod, the word feeding being put generally for all things done by the carefull Shepheard to his ſheep, to ſave them from danger, whereof one is, if any wanders, to bring her with his crook back again, and with his rod to chaſtiſe the unruly, to make them keep in good order; feeding with the rod, is here ſpoken in this ſenſe, that dwelleth ſolitarily in the Wood, now being expoſed to the danger of ravening beaſts, as a ſheep alone in a wood or forreſt, for ſo was the Jew in Babylon in the time of captivity, and in this caſe God feeds with his rod, when he turns affliction into a means of converſion. In the midſt of Carmel: let them feed in Baſhan, here the words are ill diſtinguiſhed, who dwell ſolitarily in a wood, in the midſt of Carmel, the next coming in as a new ſentence, Let them feed. It may better be rendered, they ſhall feed in Carmel, in Baſhan and Gilead, &c. and ſo it may be taken for the Lords anſwer to the Prophets Petition, as if he had ſaid, they are now indeed in a forreſt, but I will bring them and they ſhall be as ſheep feeding in Carmel, Baſhan, &c. which places are ſpecially named, becauſe moſt fruitfull, as being deſired for their fruitfulneſſe and fitneſſe to feed cattell, by the Reubenites, Gadites, and halfe Tribe of Manaſſeh, in the dayes of Moſes. And if it be ſaid, but how ſhall they come thither? it is anſwered, verſ. 15. V. 15. according to the dayes of thy coming out of Egypt, I will ſhew thee marvellous things, that is, as by a mighty hand I brought thee out of Egypt, ſo I will out of Babylon.

V. 16. The Nations ſhall ſee and be confounded, &c. their eares ſhall be deaf, that is, the Nations ſerving Babylon, and Caldea it ſelf, for when Cyrus came, who delivered the Jews, they were confounded, and whereas before they boaſted of their victories with open mouth, now They laid their hand upon their mouth, that is, refreined their tongues from bragging any more, and whereas before they had their ears open to hear their flatterers extolling them, now they ſtop their ears for fear, leſt they ſhould hear in ſtead of things pleaſing more and more to aggravate their miſery. V. 17. Verſ. 17. They ſhall lick the duſt like a ſerpent, Gen. 3. upon whom this was laid for a curſe in debaſing of him, ſo it is meant, that they ſhould be debaſed to the loweſt degree, and not only as a ſerpent, but as a worm trodden under foot of all men, and deſpiſed; and if this ſhall be thought impoſſible, it is added, they ſhall be afraid of the Lord our God, he that is Almighty ſhall bring them to this by his judgements ſtriking ſuch terrour into them, that they ſhall not dare to mutter. Note. A notable place for all vain glorious perſons to take warning by, they are not ſo high, but God can pul them down as low, neither are they ſo high ſpoken, but God will ſtrike ſuch terrour into them, that they ſhall not dare to mutter.

V.18, 19, 20 Who is a God like unto thee, &c. Here the Prophet concludeth with predicating Gods praiſes upon the premiſes, for his pardoning of ſins, and performing promiſes made to Abraham many ages before.

THE PROPHESIE OF NAHUM:

CHAP. I.

V. 1. THE burden of Nineveh, the Book of the Viſion of Nahum the Elkoſhite: After Jonah his preaching deſtruction to Nineveh, it ſeemeth that although for the preſent they repented and eſcaped, yet they returned again, as the dog to his vomit, to their old ſins, for which Nahum was ſtirred up to propheſie againſt them, not that now there was hope to doe them any good (for relapſes are more hard to be cured then firſt falling into ſin) but for the comfort of the children of Iſrael, who, he foreſaw by the ſpirit ſhould be ſubdued by the King of Nineveh, who was the King of Aſſyria, and kept his Court at Nineveh, as his chief citie. That they might therefore have ſome comfort, that thoſe their enemies ſhould not be ſpared alwayes, but be ſubdued alſo by another, and to give ſome check to the Ninevites inſolency; Nahum here propheſieth againſt them, and he hath his name Nahum from comforting. He is ſaid to be an Elkoſhite, from Elkon a village in Simeon, as Jerome ſaith. For the time of his propheſying, it is not ſet down, but as we have it from the Hebrews by tradition, it was in the time of Hezekiah, between the 6. and 14. of his reign, and ſo after Jonah, who propheſied in the dayes of Jeroboam the ſecond, as hath been ſhewed, betwixt whom and Hezekiah were between 41 and 42 years, ſo that if Jonah propheſied not till the end of Jeroboams reign, and Nahum began about the 10. year of Hezekiah, the whole time between theſe two Prophets was 46 years, but becauſe it is moſt probable, that Jonah propheſied againſt Nineveh, ſome years before Jeroboams death, we may well hold 50 years at the leaſt to have been betwixt them, in which time it is not to be doubted, but that Nineveh had forgotten the danger in which they were in Jonah his time, and ſo grew ſecure Note. and moſt ſinfull again, that God would not now ſpare them of that City any more; neither will he ſpare any whom he hath once ſpared from death upon their humiliation, if they fall to ſinning in like manner again, according to that threatning of our Lord, Go thy way and ſin no more, leſt a worſe thing befall thee.

For the time when the propheſie of Nahum took effect, it could not certainly be long before it was fulfilled in part, for even in the time of Hezekiah, who reigned but 29 years, and long before his death, Merodach Baladan is ſaid to have been King of Babylon, and after that no mention is made more of the Aſſyrian King, implying that that Kingdom was then ſubdued, and if ſo, certainly Nineveh the chief city thereof, was then ſubdued, and this was at the leaſt 14 years before Hezekiah dyed. For he had 15 years granted him to live ſtill after his deadly ſickneſſe, and that ſending of Merodach Baladan to him to congratulate his recovery was moſt probably within one year, ſo that it was about the 15 year of Hezekiah his reign that Nineveh fell, and according to the computation before made, then there were not 5 years betwixt this threatning and the ſubduing of the Ninevites; yet it is noted that the full deſtruction of Nineveh, happened not till after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem: to which, after the 10 years of Hezekiah, at what time Nahum propheſied, were 124.
For, as it is ſaid in the great Chronicle of the Hebrews, called Sedar Olam, and Hieron. aſſented to by Jerom in proœm. Nineveh was deſtroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, ſo Theodoret. alſo Theodoret, Rupertus, Lyranus. Now Jeruſalem was deſtroyed anno 18. of Rupertus.
Nebuchadnezzar, and Alexandria in Egypt after that, ſaith Joſephus anno 23. which Joſeph. l. 10.
is ſpoken of Nahum 3.8. as done before. But to return to the propheſie, to c.11. antiq. V. 2,3. make the Ninevites that were proud of their ſtrength, and all others to fear the threatnings of God the more, he ſets forth his power and terribleneſſe to the wicked, v.2,3,4,5,6. then that his faithfull ſervants might have comfort, when he rageth moſt, his graciouſneſſe to them, v.7. But in his deſcribing of V. 7.
God he followeth that which is written of him by Moſes, Exod.34.6. ſlow to anger, and will not at all acquit the wicked, v.3. which is inſerted leſt the Ninevites ſhould ſay, if the Lord be ſo terrible, why do not we yet feel his fury? oh ſaith he, he is ſlow to anger, his wrath is ſo tempered with patience, that he long forbears the moſt wicked, to make them the more without excuſe, and that his mercy might ſhine the more in not proceeding ſuddenly againſt the wicked, but being firſt admoniſhed, and ſpace of repentance being given unto them.

With an overrunning floud he will make an end of the place thereof, that is, of Nine- V. 8.

the very Heathens were not ignorant. And accordingly ſaith Gualter, Dio- Gualter. dorus writeth, that they had an old oracle, that the city ſhould then be taken, when a river became an enemy to the city; and he alſo addeth that in the time of the beſieging thereof, the waters were ſo increaſed with continuall ſhowers that the wall was hereby demoliſhed 20 furlongs long, and ſo the city was laid open to the enemy to take it, which if it were ſo, the Prophet was in this threatning moſt punctuall, otherwiſe, the floud here ſpoken of is to be underſtood, as *Eſa.*8. where it is threatned, that the Caldees ſhould come againſt Judea as a floud ſuddenly and irreſiſtibly bearing down all things; and dark- neſſe ſhall purſue his enemies, this is added to ſhew that Nineveh being deſtroyed ſhould lye ever after in darkneſſe, never being rebuilt, but lying alwayes in obſcurity, which had formerly ſhone ſo much in worldly glory.

What do ye imagine againſt the Lord? he will make an utter end, affliction ſhall not riſe V. 9. up the ſecond time: Having ſpoken of the Ninivites, as enemies to the Lord, now he ſheweth why he called them ſo, they imagined things againſt the Lord, and what were they? Verily to root out and to deſtroy his people out of an hatred of the true religion by God ſet up amongſt them: for thus Senacherib their King did in the days of Hezekiah but to his own confuſion. They thought nothing leſs then of being againſt God in that expedition, for that tyrant pretended God 1 King.19. to be the Author of his coming againſt Jeruſalem. But we ſee here, that imagina- Note.

utter deſtruction ſhal be to them that plot and practiſe ſuch things, for nothing ſhal be left of ſuch a city for which God ſhould come to make a deſtruction the

V. 10. ſecond time, whileſt they are foulded together as thorns: here by a compariſon from thorns, he ſheweth how unable they ſhould be to withſtand Gods judgments, and by another compariſon from drunkards, and a third from ſtubble: for if fire comes to thorns being ſeare, or dry ſtubble, it burns and flames and cannot be quenched, till that in a ſhort time all be burnt up; and drunkards being falln faſt aſleep lye till they are burnt in the houſe, that is on fire. This doth moſt fitly agree to Senatheribs hoaſt, which though conſiſting of divers nations was foulded together under him as one, and therefore might ſeem hard to be broken, and they were intoxicated as with wine by victories when the Angell of the Lord came out as fire and burnt them all in one night, according to which it is alſo ſpoken of as being done by fire, Eſa. 10.16,17, 18. whereupon ſee what hath been written touching the kind of deſtruction that came upon them.

V. 12. And the next words make it yet more plain that it was ſpoken of that hoaſt. There is one came out from thee, that imagineth evill againſt the Lord: For who could this be but Senatherib, that ſo notoriouſly blaſphemed the living God and oppoſed his own power againſt his? and the next, though they be quiet and many, yet thus ſhall they be cut down, when he ſhall paſſe through, doe moſt aptly agree, for the hoaſt of Senacherib was very great, and as they paſſed through Judah they found little or no reſiſtance, in taking the cities thereof, ſo that they had great quiet and content: but upon the ſuddain even in this paſſing and going on of this proud King towards Jeruſalem, came the fatall blow aforeſaid, although I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more. The Aſſyrians being cut off, as in the former words, now the Lord returns to the comforting of his people, promiſing that although he afflicted them by the Aſſyrians ſundry times, yet after this he would not afflict them by them any more, for they ſhould thenceforth be of no power, and he doth not mean that they ſhould be without all affliction in generall, as none of the children of God ſhall ever be.

V. 14. For the Lord hath given a commandement concerning thee, that no more of thy name be ſown: Here again the Prophet returnes to Senatherib, of whom he had ſpoken v. 11, 12. ſhewing that both he and his race ſhould be cut off, for then is a mans name ſown when he hath ſeed to continue it, but no more ſown, when, if he be a King, there be none after him to raign any more in his ſtead, as there was not after Senatherib, although it be ſaid, that Eſarhaddon his ſon reigned in his ſtead, for the time of his raigning was ſo ſhort, the Kingdom ſoon after Senatheribs death being tranſlated from the Aſſyrians to the Babylonians, that it was counted as nothing. Out of the houſe of thy Gods I will cut off the graven image and the molten image, I will make thy grave, for thou art vile. Here the Prophet pointeth at the death of Senacherib which was in the Temple of his Idol, whileſt he was there worſhipping it his own ſons ſlew him, ſo the molten image Niſrock was his grave as it were, becauſe that in the very act of worſhiping it he was ſlain, which doubtleſſe made that very houſe and the Idols

Calvin. therein execrable, and ſo was their ruine. So Calvin, who ſaith the way wherein Carpentum was drawn over his fathers dead body was abominable to the Romans, and therefore moſt probably the idols Temple was ever after this horrible

Note. fact abominable to the Aſſyrians. And herein it is worthy to be obſerved, how this proud King was puniſhed in his kinde, he being the creature of God inſulted over God, therefore his ſons riſe up againſt him, he would have deſtroyed the Kingdom and Temple ſet up and built to the honour of God, therefore the Temple of his God is his ruine, and is it ſelf together with his Idols prophaned, and ever after abhorred, and his Kingdom tranſlated to the Babylonians, and he that vilified the good King Hezekiah, was made

Joel. 2.20. moſt vile, as alſo is touched in Joel ſaying, and his ſtinke ſhall aſcend and his rottenneſſe, becauſe he hath magnified himſelf; and vilely he was accounted amongſt other nations after this we may gather from that which was done by the Egyptians Gualter. for a remembrance of his wicked practiſes, who ſet up his image, as he was murthered by his ſons, whileſt he was worſhipping his God with this Inſcription, εἰς ἐμέ τις ὁρῶν εὐσεβὴς ἔστω; Let any man looking upon me learne to be godly. So Gualter, who alſo addeth upon v. 15. V. 15. the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, &c. that this is ſpoken, as ſetting forth what ſhould be done after the death of Senacherib, meſſengers ſhould immediately come to Judah to bring word hereof, and thus that all the fears of any more invaſion by the Aſſyrians was at an end, Judah being called the Mountains, becauſe in the principall part ſituated upon Mountains, for ſo was Jeruſalem. And becauſe by this means they ſhould thenceforth have no interruption more in reſorting to Jeruſalem for pieties ſake, as they formerly had, he encourageth them chearfully to reſort thither to keep their feaſts, as they had done ever ſince the time of Hezekiah, promiſing that the wicked one, whom he calleth Belial, as having caſt off the yoak of God, ſhould paſſe no more through the land to trouble it, as being utterly cut off for ever, both King and Kingdom. The Ord. Gloſſ. ſaith, Gloſ. Ord. that Hezekiah could not keep the Paſſeover the firſt month, becauſe the Aſſyrians were in the land, but now they and their King being deſtroyed, here is an exhortation to keep it in the ſecond, and ſo to expreſſe all thankfulneſſe for ſo great a benefit; but the keeping of the Paſſeover the ſecond month was before Senacheribs comming, and therefore this collection is erroneous, yet the Prophet ſtirring of them up to expreſſions of thankfulneſſe, Note. ſheweth that it is our duty after deliverances from great dangers ſolemnly to praiſe God therefore. There is a like paſſage to this Eſa. 52.7. in ſpeaking of the meſſengers of peace under the Goſpel, to which it is to be thought that Nahum here alludeth, and ſo doth myſtically propheſie of the ſame alſo, becauſe there is none of the Prophets, but hath ſomething touching the time of the Goſpel. Hebr. this verſe is the beginning of the ſecond Chapter.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. HE that daſheth in pieces is come up before thy face, keep the munition, &c. Here the Prophet goeth on to ſhew what ſhould be done to the Kingdome of Aſſyria after their King ſo cut off, as hath been ſaid, viz. that the King of Babylon, who is called the daſher in pieces, or the waſter ſhould come and ſubdue it, and withall what preparation ſhould be made by the Aſſyrians againſt him, but all in vain, ſo that they are ironically bidden to prepare thus againſt his comming to withſtand him, but all their preparations ſhould be in vain.

V. 2. For the Lord hath turned away the excellency of Jacob, as the excellency of Iſrael or pride; that is, by uſing Aſhur as a rod to puniſh Judah, as Iſrael the Lord hath turned their pride into humility, for by Salmanaſar Iſrael, that is, the ten tribes were brought very low when they were ſubdued and carryed away captive, Gualter. and Judah when Senacherib came and took all the cities of Judah. But now that work being done, for which Aſhur had ſo great power given him for their chaſtiſement in reſpect of their ſins, his turn to be deſtroyed was coming alſo, thus Gualter, who alſo reſolveth the queſtion, how it could be juſt with the Lord to judge Aſſyria for executing his will upon Iſrael, when as he did nothing but what he imployed him about, ſaying that although it were the ſecret counſell of the Lord, to doe thus, yet the Aſſyrian thought upon nothing leſſe, but was carryed on by ambition and cruelty to doe it, and therefore was worthy to be ſo puniſhed. Calvin. Hieron. And Calvin ſaith the ſame, Jerome yet ſtands for a diverſe Expoſition, that is, the Lord hath abated or brought down the pride of Aſhur, whereby he was greatly puffed up in regard of his ſucceſſe againſt Iſrael in taking Samaria and captivating the people, by now bringing him as low before the Babylonians, and this is followed by Lyra and others. But the phraſe, the pride of Iſrael, would not bear this Expoſition, whereby it is interpreted of the pride of Aſhur, and if Aſhur had ſome cauſe to be proud for his victory over the ten tribes, certainly he had little cauſe for any thing which he did againſt Judah, meant by Jacob, becauſe he received there a greater blow then he gave. For that by Jacob here the Kingdome of Judah is meant, and by Iſrael that of the 10 tribes, all agree, it being often uſed in Scripture by Jacob to ſet forth the moſt ſelected part of his poſterity, as Eſa. 2. Let us goe up to the houſe of the God of Jacob, Luk. 1. He ſhall raign in the houſe of Jacob for ever. Mal. 1.1. Jacob have I loved, &c. for the emptyers have emptyed them out and marred their vine branches: that is, the Aſſyrians have brought them to great ruine and miſery; in which words the thing wherein their humbling and taking their pride down is ſet forth, their land had been by Aſhur brought to that paſſe, that it was as an empty thing, and defaced in the deſtroying of their vineyards, the great ornament of their land.

V. 3. The ſhield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in ſcarlet: Here he returns again to ſpeak of the Caldees that ſhould deſtroy the Aſſyrians, and of their puiſſance, their ſhields were of red braſſe, their mighty men clad in ſcarlet, that is richly attired; his chariots with flaming torches, by reaſon of the poliſhed traſſes wherewith they were garniſhed, which by the Suns reflecting upon them ſhewed like flaming torches; and the firre trees ſhall be terribly ſhaken, the word rendred ſhaken, ſignifies alſo to be poiſoned, and by firre trees darts made thereof, and ſo it is meant that the Caldees darts ſhould be moſt deadly, though by firre trees underſtand the talleſt and ſtouteſt men of the Aſſyrians that ſhould be made afraid; and ſome according to the Letter, thoſe very trees, of which it is ſaid that they ſhould tremble, as in time of thunder and lightning, whereunto the running of the Babylonian chariots is alſo compared.

V. 5. He ſhall recount his worthies, they ſhall ſtumble: From one army the Prophet here paſſeth to another, viz. of the Aſſyrians, ſhewing what ſhould be done by their King E*ſarhaddon*, when he heard of the Babylonians coming, he ſhould muſter his men together to reſiſt them, being very confident that the Kingdome of Aſſyria, which had hitherto been the moſt mighty Monarchy of the world, ſhould be able eaſily to ſuppreſſe al forces riſing againſt it. But the event he ſheweth ſhould be otherwiſe, theſe worthies in going to fight againſt them ſhould ſtumble: ſpeaking by a phraſe often uſed amongſt the Prophets to ſet forth their falling before their enemies, as not ſtumbling is to ſet forth ſtrength and prevailing: they ſhall make haſte to the wall, to defend the City, as in the next words, their defence ſhall be prepared, Hebr. סכך covering, ſomething made under the covert whereof they might fight the more ſafely upon the wall.

V. 6. But how little good this ſhould do them is ſhewed, the gates of the rivers ſhall be opened, and the palace diſſolved: the river Tygris running near Nineveh ſhall be ſo increaſed with continuall rains, that it ſhall break over the banks in ſo great force, that the wals ſhall be made to fall hereby, as was touched before upon ch. 1.8. the word rendred Palace, here ſignifieth alſo a building, and therefore may be taken for a tower upon the wall ſpoken of before by the name of a defence prepared, out of which they fought.

V. 7. Gualter. And Huzzab ſhall be led away captive, her maids ſhall lead her as with the voice of Doves tabring upon their breaſts: Vulg. miles abducitur captivus, Gualter, aſtans, ſhe that ſtandeth by, that is, by the King, at his right hand, as Pſal. 45. and this is rather preferred generally by our new Expoſitours, holding that the Queen of Aſſyria is meant, being either called by this name Huzzab, or by a name taken from firm ſtanding, becauſe that Queens commonly ſtood faſt, although the people were many of them by means of war neceſſitated to goe forth and endure the hard brunts thereof, yea and the King alſo. And the rather becauſe her maids are ſaid to lead her by being made to goe before mourning like Doves. For when it is thus done, the Kingdom where, muſt needs be brought to the loweſt ebbe of miſerie, the common people being much more hardly intreated. But as this reaſon is good to prove the Queen to be meant here, ſo a good reaſon is given by Jerome of the other, becauſe Huzzab ſignifieth to make to ſtand, as the preſidiary ſouldiers, who are the ſtrength and ſtay of a City againſt enemies; and whereas her maids next ſpoken of may ſeem not to agree to this, for touching the ſouldier we rather ſay his maids, it is anſwered, if we put for Souldier the Militia of the City of Nineveh, or munitio fortis, as Leo, Hebr. renders it, it agreeth very well, by her maids the Militia or Munitions of the Kingdom in other places being underſtood, which were but as daughters or maids to her being the chief, as great cities commonly are ſpoken of with their daughters, when the Towns round about them are meant, and they are now not called her daughters, but her maids; intimating their ſervile eſtate, into which they were thus brought for a filiall and free, by the Caldees; and to this aſſent Theodoret, Rupertus, and Lyra, and generally all ancients, and this ſeems to me the more probable.

Hieron.

See verſ. 10. again, where ſhe is ſpoken of in the feminine gender, Nineveh being meant & not the Queen.

V. 8. Nineveh is of old like a pool of water: Here the Prophet ſheweth what a vain confidence, the Ninevites had in the ancient ſtanding of their Kingdome even above 1300. years ſo that now it ſhould be eternall, as Rome is by ſome Paraſites of that State ſtiled Roma æterna, and how proud the Egyptians were of their antiquity it is well known, for they reckon ſo many years of Egypts continuance, that they exceed the age of the world 5000 years. Moreover Nineveh is compared to a pool that hath a long time been ſo, becauſe ſtanding ſtill and not toſſed with waves as the Sea, or running like a river, none ever daring yet to diſquiet that ſtate, and if they have, it hath been but vain, and as ſtanding waters grow muddy and ſtinking; ſo a State living in quiet, and any particular body, according to the ſaying, Cernis ut ignavum corrumpunt otia corpus, Ut capiunt vitium ni moveantur aquæ: a body living in idleneſſe is corrupted like waters that are not moved. Some ſay that Nineveh is thus compared, becauſe now it ſhould not be ſo vaſt, as not to be paſſed over, but little for ſtrength to reſiſt forein forces. Some, as men may walk about a deep pool, but cannot goe into it without drowning, ſo Nineveh was of old, which is not unapt: Stand, ſtand, ſhall they cry, but none ſhall look back: this hath reference to that which was ſaid v.7. of the ſouldiers going into captivity, to ſhew, that howſoever they ſhall ſeek to incourage one another, yet they ſhall not ſtand, but flee and fall before their enemies, and be taken and carryed away.

V. 9. Then to ſhew that the City ſhall be plundered, and all the treaſures thereof taken and carryed away by the Babylonians, he ſaith, take the ſilver, take the gold, there is no end of the ſtore.

V. 10. Shee is empty and void and waſte: that is, Nineveh thus ſpoiled of her goods, being before ſpoken of by the name of Huzzab.

V. 11. Where is the dwelling of the Lions? Having ſhewed the ſubduing and ſpoiling of Nineveh, now he inſults over her, being before a City of Lion-like men, that did tear in pieces and took preys from all other Countries about, whereby they enriched their wives and children, ſet forth by Lioneſſes and whelps, and filled their treaſuries, ſet forth by holes, and dens.

V. 12.

V. 13. And how comes all this to paſſe? v.13. ſheweth the Lord was againſt her, and againſt what ſtate ſoever the Lord is, although it be moſt potent, it ſhal ſoon be brought to paſſe: and the voice of thy meſſengers ſhall be heard no more, wherein he alludeth to Senacherib his ſending meſſengers to Jeruſalem, threatning Hezekiah and moving the people to yeeld to him, and boaſting of his great ſtrength. If this were by cruell tyrants, who have all the power of this world, conſidered, it would be a great curb unto them in their inſolent ways, and it is a comfort to the diſtreſſed by them.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. VV*o to the bloudy City, it is all full of lyes and robbery* : The Prophet having in the former chapter threatned deſtruction to Nineveh, now he declares the cauſe, the groſſe ſins of Nineveh, lying and robbery, and *v.*4. idolatries, V. 2,3. whereof the land was full, repeating again the terribleneſſe of their enemies by their chariots hurrying about the city, and their horſemen to deſtroy them. And it is not to be doubted but that they were well worthy, that it ſhould be thus with them, it being a puniſhment that came upon their great ones in their kind, who in their proſperity had lived in all pomp and pleaſure, having their chariots and attendants to carry them about, all which they got by rapine and robbery.

V. 4. Becauſe of the multitudes of the whoredoms of the well favoured harlot, the miſtreſſe of witchcrafts, that ſelleth nations through her whoredoms: Hebr. of the whore of good grace: that is, glorious in the view of the world, for ſo Nineveh was being a moſt great ſpacious city, there being none like unto it in all the world.
But now the Lord threatneth her with deſtruction for her whoredoms, that is, idolatries, wherein ſhe abounded, and witchcrafts, for harlots, as witches, faſcinate young men with their beauty and other crafty means whereby they allure them, and ſo make them as ſlaves to their luſts, and they that are thus enthralled to ſin are often ſaid in Scripture to be ſold to work wickedneſſe, as Ahab and others, and accordingly here Nineveh is ſaid to ſell Nations through her whoredoms. For what Nineveh did was exemplary to the countries about, which were ſubject unto her, and ſo this infection of wickedneſſe from her overſpread them all.

V. 8. Art thou better then populous No, that was well ſituated amongſt the Rivers? The City called No was a famous city in Egypt, having the Sea on one ſide, mariſh grounds Diodor. Siculus. that were unpaſſable on the other, and a great river on the third, and it was as Diodorus Siculus hath it, 80 furlongs in compaſſe, yet by Nebuchadnezzar deſtroyed anno 23 of his reign, as was before noted out of Joſephus upon ch. 2. and being rebuilt again above 200 years after, by Alexander the great, the name was changed to Alexandria, for which the Vulg. Lat. for No here hath Alexandria, whereas it is ſpoken of by way of compariſon with Nineveh, as if Nineveh were not greater, it is not ſo to be underſtood, for, as the ſame Diodorus writeth, Nineveh was 480 furlongs in compaſſe, yea ſo great that none in all the world was for greatneſſe comparable to it, in Jonah it being ſaid to be a City of 3 dayes journey. But No by reaſon of the ſituation and populouſneſs was as ſtrong, and unlikely to be ſubdued by a foreine enemy, yet was, as hath been before ſhewed, but not till after this propheſie a long time, yet ſpoken of by the Prophet as already ſubdued, becauſe he certainly foreſaw by the ſpirit, that it ſhould be, and that before Nineveh, that when the men of Nineveh ſhould ſee it come to paſſe, they might know that their time of deſtruction was at hand. Ethiopia and Egypt were her ſtrength and there was none end: hereby the ſtrength and ſecurity of No is further ſet forth, it was a member of Egypt, which was, as Pomponius Mela writeth, in the dayes of King Amaſis Mela. 20000 Cities, and at the back of it was Ethiopia, another mighty Country V. 9. which was alſo allyed to Egypt, coming of the ſame parentage, for Chus of whom came the Ethiopians, and Miſraim of whom the Egyptians, and Phut of Gen. 10. whom the Afri, a part of whom was Lybia, were all brethren coming of Ham, and therefore a great ſtrength one to another, for which No might be thought impregnable. In ſaying there was no end, he meaneth that in mentioning Egypt and Ethiopia he had not ſpoken of all the ſtrength of No, for there were ſo many more joined with her in conſanguinity, that it were endleſſe to be recounted, V. 11. ſee the ſame threatned by the name of Noph, Jer. 46.19. V. 11. Thou ſhalt be drunken, thou ſhalt be hid: Jer. 25.19. Egypt is likewiſe ſaid to be made to drink of the cup of Gods wrath, when by the ſword deſtroyed amongſt other Nations

Calvin. Note. Nations, thou ſhalt be hid, that is, be brought to nothing, as Calvin hath it, being as a thing not appearing any more, although ſome expound it of Nineveh hiding her face for ſhame, or being aſhamed, thou ſhalt ſeek ſtrength, becauſe of the enemy, Hebr. from the enemy, the meaning being, thou ſhalt ſeek to thy enemy the Babylonian, when thou ſeeſt thy ſelf ready to be brought into his power to ſpare thee, that thou mayeſt ſtand ſtill upon any compoſition for preſent pay or yearly tribute, but all in vain. And this was a great ebbe of miſery for Nineveh to be brought unto, that formerly ruled over Babylon as Lady and miſtreſſe, and to this miſery doth ſin bring the moſt potent Nations.

V. 12,13. To ſhew how they ſhould be brought to this he uſeth two compariſons, one of a fig tree, the firſt ripe fruits whereof fall with a little ſhaking. 2. Of women who are timorous and fearfull and weak, and therefore eaſily overcome.

V. 14. Tread the morter, make ſtrong the brick kill: from threatning he proceedeth to ironizing, whereby he ſheweth what pains the Aſſyrians ſhould take to fortifie their City, in making morter and brick, and ſo by building therewith fortifie it, but all in vain.

V. 16,17. Thy canker worm ſpoileth and flieth away, &c. Here by another compariſon he ſheweth how eaſily the Aſſyrians ſhould be made to flee as locuſts when the Sun ſhineth out of the hedges, where they lay in the time of cold, having been hurtfull before to other peoples, as the canker-worm to trees.

V. 18. V. 19. Calvin. He ſpeaketh yet more plainly, Thy ſhepherds ſlumber, O King of Aſſyria: meaning, that they that ſhould defend both the King and Country were dead being ſlain by the ſword, and v. 19. the wound now made in Aſſur, he ſheweth to be incurable and by none pityed, but by all people about a matter of exultation and joy. That ſimilitude of Locuſts ſerved to ſhew their numeroſity, to which they truſted, being herein like Locuſts, in that in winter time having lyen ſtill, in ſummer they went out in great companies and made a prey of all green and ſpringing things, and the King of Nineveh his Counſellors he calleth his ſhepherds, who when he had moſt need of their Counſell were like men in a ſlumber, unable to give him any good, whereby he might be preſerved the time of this danger.

THE

THE PROPHESIE OF HABAKKUK:

Calvin. AT what time he propheſied is not ſet down, neither can it be certainly gathered, although the Rabbins ſay, in the dayes of Manaſſeh, and Calvin doth not much diſſent herefrom, for he ſaith that the contents doe ſhew, that it was before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Caldees in Zedekiah his time, and when all things went ill amongſt the Jews, ſinne greatly abounding, as it did in the days of Manaſſeh, for which it is not improbable, that he propheſied then. Lyra. But Lyra ſaith, it is commonly held by Jerom and others, that he propheſied not, till after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar, and the grievous things of which he complaineth, Hieron. ſuffered by the Jews at the hands of the Caldees. The name Habakkuk ſaith Jerome, ſignifieth imbracing or wreſtling, a fit name for him, that wreſtled ſo much with God by prayer.

V. 1. The burthen which Habakkuk ſaw. Of the 12 ſmall Prophets, three begin thus, Nahum, Haggai and Malachi, and Zechariah though he beginneth not ſo, yet he hath it twice in his Propheſie: but herein is the difference between the other Prophets and Habakkuk, that their Propheſies are called burthens of ſuch, or ſuch places, Habakkuks barely, the burthen, whereof the reaſon may be, becauſe he propheſieth againſt many places, each of them againſt one only, for which he ſpareth the mentioning of them, leaving the reader to find them out in his Propheſie. Now he ſaith he ſaw the judgements to come, which hee calleth, the burthen, as plainly as if they had then been executed. And he is aptly placed after Nahum, becauſe as he propheſied againſt Nineveh, that deſtroyed the Kingdome of the ten Tribes, ſo Habakkuk againſt Babylon, that deſtroyed Judah.

V. 2. O Lord! how long ſhall I cry and thou wilt not hear me? of violence, and thou wilt not ſave? Theſe words ſhew, that Habakkuk did not now firſt begin to cry unto God againſt the enemies tyranny, that is, the Caldees in deſtroying Jeruſalem, and the Temple, but that he had long done ſo out of his great love to the people of God and grief for the oppreſſions and miſeries by them ſuffered at the Caldees hands, being not onely deſtroyed and carryed away captive; but alſo ſuffering moſt grievous things in Babylon, where they now lived. So that from hence we may gather, that he wrote this ſometime after the foreſaid deſtruction; ſo Lyra following Jerome and others. Some think, that beforeſeeing by the ſpirit, what ſhould ſhortly come to paſſe, cryed out thus, as if it had been already done, but there is no need to ſay ſo, ſith Habakkuk as Jerome conceiveth, was he that lived in Daniels time and carryed him meat to the Lions den, which if it were ſo, his crying thus to the Lord, was not long before the time of the captivity ended, and then upon his long perſeverance in prayer the Lord anſwered him by ſhewing him the deſtruction of Babylon ſhortly to come, and conſequently the Jews deliverance, as appeareth by his propheſying thereof, chap 2.5,6,7.&c. To this effect Jerome, and others following him. But Calvin expounds this of the ſins of the Jewes, whereby they provoked the Lord againſt them; taking the Prophets crying to the Lord to be againſt them, and an expoſtulating with him out of an holy indignation hereat, becauſe that being ſo wicked they were tolerated, and not proceeded againſt according to their demerits. And to prove this he argueth from verſ.4. where he complaineth, that the law and judgement ceaſed; which cannot be applyed ſo well to the Caldees, amongſt whom the Law was not but to the Jew, and verſ. 5,6. as if anſwered by God he immediately proceeds to declare how ſorely they ſhould be judged for theſe their wickedneſſes, by having the Caldees brought againſt them. And with Calvin conſenteth Gualter, holding that Habakkuk ſpake thus in the time of Manaſſeh, who abounded in all manner of wickedneſſe, filling Jeruſalem with innocent bloud from one end of the land to the other, and groſſe idolatries. At this both he and all the faithfull were greatly grieved, and hee for their comfort is ſtirred up thus to addreſſe himſelfe to the Lord by complaining, and then as being anſwered, propheſying of the revenge that ſhould be taken by the Caldees. And this I take to bee beſt, and whereas it may ſeem not to agree to an holy Prophet full of the ſpirit of love to all, to cry for revenge to be taken upon his brethren: I anſwer, that in ſo doing hee doth no more then the holy ſouls under the Altar did, that cryed for revenge againſt them, that ſhed their bloud, it was his zeal for Gods glory, not an hatred of them, or deſire of their deſtruction, whereby he was moved thus to doe. He ſaw, that ſuch abominations being frequently committed and no judgements therefore executed, the wicked were the more animated in their ſinfull wayes, now fearing nothing whatſoever the Prophets threatened, as Pſal. 50. and the godly were diſcouraged and made to ſtagger and ready to fall, both to the great diſhonour of God and the indangering of many ſouls, and for this cauſe he cryed unto God, as Elijah in the time of Ahab, that it might not rain, and ſo by famin his wickedneſſe being caſtigated it might appear to all men, that there was a God who hated ſuch abominations to the deterring of all men, that went on therein; thus alſo Jeremie cryed againſt the men of Anathoth, and David againſt his enemies, and not otherwiſe tranſgreſſing againſt the rule of love, which prayeth even for the moſt wicked and greateſt enemies, as Stephen did, their furtheſt aim being the vindicating of Gods Word from contempt for want of performance, and that the wicked ſmarting for their ſins, might learn to be wiſe and made to turn therefrom, which before ſuch ſmart they would by no means be moved to doe. The violence then here cryed out of was that whereby the poore and weake ſuffered at the hands of the rich and mighty in the land, which was their grievance, and the wicked prevailed againſt the righteous, and judgement went wrong in all Courts.

they prevaile againſt and bring them under. And moſt intolerable are the indignities, that ſome of them doe unto them ſo vanquiſhed, as Adonibezek, Judg. 1. to 70 Kings, Nebuchadnezzar to Zedekiah, putting out his eyes, and then carrying him into Babylon, Tamerlan the great Tartar to Bajazet Emperour with him throughout out all Aſia, and the Perſian King towards Valerianus the Emperour, uſing him as a footſtool to tread upon in going up to his horſe. But theſe things are not onely unchriſtian but unnaturall, that the conqueror ſhould ſo far forget the mutability of humane things, and not ſhew more commiſeration to the ſubdued for fear of their own fall, and then having the like meaſure meted to them again, as the foreſaid Adonibezek had a comfortable meditation againſt being ſwallowed up with deſpaire, when ſuch wicked tyrants prevaile and ſubdue even Gods people.

V. 12. Art not thou from everlaſting my Lord my God, mine holy one? we ſhall not dye. Againſt the God, to whom the King of Babylon imputed all his victories, he here oppoſeth the true God, as being indeed from eternity and ſo the onely God over all the world, and for comfort to his people he ſheweth, that this judgement was not to death, but the Caldees were ſtrengthened for a time for their neceſſary correction.

V. 13. Wherefore lookeſt thou on them that deal treacherouſly, and holdeſt thy tongue, when the wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous then he? Having ſaid ſomething, whereupon the faithfull might ſtay themſelves againſt deſpaire in the midſt of their grievous ſufferings, in this verſe he ſheweth having laid a foundation for it, that God is of purer eyes then to behold iniquity, he waxeth bold to challenge him for looking upon, that is, ſtrengthening and ſuffering the Caldees, whom he ſaw to be moſt abominable, thus to tyrannize over his own people, whom he termeth more righteous then they were, not to juſtifie them, but aggravate the Caldees ſinfulneſſe. For although the Jews were wicked, yet they were much more wicked, and unworthy to bee made their correctours, which he ſaith not to controll the Lords doings, for that were impious preſumption, but to move the Lord the more to haſten their deſtruction and his peoples deliverance, leſt atheiſm ſhould by this means grow upon men, whileſt they ſaw nothing done againſt, but all for men ſo notoriouſly wicked, and his ſervants ſhould be diſcouraged utterly from fearing and truſting in him, which would be greatly to his diſhonour. goeth, but it alſo ſignifieth armare, accingere, expedire, which when it is applyed to a net, the moſt proper rendring of it is to ſpread it ſtill to take more fiſhes, wherefore Calvin well expounds it of the Caldees going on to devoure men as Calvin. fiſhes, and to kill them, not yet being met withall by any divine power to check them in their thus doing. And the compariſon is very apt, becauſe a fiſher having caught good ſtore of fiſh prepares his net, and fals to fiſhing againe and again in hope of the like ſucceſſe time after time, ſo did Nebuchadnezzar the King of the Caldees goe from one Nation to another, killing and ſlaying them without end. And this is ſpoken, not as laying any evill imputation Note.
upon God that ſuffered it, but by the way of praying, that God would maturely curb this proud tyrant and provide for the peace of his Church, and not ſuffer her ſtill to lye in miſery and diſcomfort, wherein hee gives us example in like time to plead likewiſe with God, and not to ceaſe, till hee heare and anſwer us in mercy, as he did him in the next chapter.

CHAP. II.

I Will ſtand upon my watch and ſet me upon the tower, I will watch to ſee, what hee V. 1. will ſay unto me, and what I ſhall anſwer when I am reproved. The Prophet after his addreſſes to God, chap.1. having laſtly complained of the Caldees being made ſcourges to all other Nations, now he ſaith, that he will ſtand, as it were upon a watch tower, to ſee, if he can eſpy any thing, from whence he and the people of God might be comforted againſt the cruelties complained of, and in thus ſaying he hath reference to that wherewith he began, the burthen which he ſaw, ſo now he would ſtand to ſee. And in ſaying, that he would goe up to a watch-tower, he meaneth, that he would go above humane ſenſe, not weighing things before ſpoken of by mans reaſon, but ſeeking to God to know aright what ſhould finally be done for the taking down of the pride of ſuch tyrants and the comfort of Gods people, and to this effect alſo Calvin, ſo that in ſaying, what he ſhall ſay unto me, he meaneth not any Calvin. other but the Lord. By theſe words, when I am reproved, hee meaneth his being ſhaken with temptations by reaſon of the prevailing of the wicked enemy Gualter.
and the ſufferings of Gods people, the wicked taking advantage hereof to inſult over him and ſuch as he was, reproaching them as moſt vile and unworthy, but he having anſwer from God how he would take their part, and at length judge theſe wicked ones, ſhould have wherewith to anſwer them ſo, as to make them fear and tremble inſtead of inſulting, as proud and confident of their preſent proſperity as they were.

V. 2. And the Lord anſwered me, ſaying, Write the Viſion, &c. As the Prophet excauſe when God hath promiſed any good, which they expect and would have preſently performed, but much time paſſeth betwixt the promiſe and the performance, they count this a tarrying, as 2 *Pet.*3.9. God is not ſlack as ſome men count ſlackneſſe, but according to God it tarryeth not becauſe not one jot longer, then he hath appointed. But what Viſion is it, which is to tarry before it com-Rupert. eth? Rupertus ſaith, Chriſt ſeen and manifeſted in the fleſh, following the Vulgar Latine, which is viſus procul veniet, the word חזון ſignifieth Viſion, and ſo it Euſeb. demonſt. Evang. lib. c. 14. Theoph. is moſt commonly taken, but as Pagnin noteth it is alſo put for viſibile magnum illuſtre, Dan. 8.5. ſome moſt famous thing to be ſeen, and what can better be thus ſet forth, then Chriſt? wherefore Euſebius expounds it of him, and Theophylact. And the Septuagint to ſhew the ſame, change the Gender, for having ſaid, the Viſion is yet for an appointed time, it followeth immediately, he that ſhal come will come, ὁ ἐρχόμενος, which word is alſo uſed by St. Paul, and applyed to Chriſt, *Heb.*10. 37 he that ſhall come will come and will not tarry. And commonly in other places of Scripture Chriſt is ſet forth by this word, which ſhal come, as Gen.

49. Shiloh ſhall come, and he ſhall be the expectation of the Gentiles, *Pſal.*118 Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, applyed to Chriſt, *Mat.*21.9. and *Joh.*1. art thou ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that ſhould come, or ſhall we look for another? and John the Baptiſt ſpeaking of him ſaith, He that cometh after me, and as here waiting is ſpoken of, ſo Gen. 49.18. and *Luk.*2.25. Simeon is ſaid to be waiting for the conſolation of Iſrael, and Jacob, I have waited for thy ſalvation, wherefore all things ſo well agreeing to Chriſt, let us underſtand him here ſpoken of, as being a matter of greateſt importance and moſt worthy to be written, and graven in a table of ſtone with a pen of iron, as Job 19.23,24,25. where he ſpeaks of his Redeemer, he ſaith, Oh that my words were written, that they were graven with a pen of iron in a rock for ever, I know that my Redeemer liveth, &c. and Balaam Propheſying of Numb. 24.17. Chriſt paraphraſeth upon his coming in like manner, I ſhall ſee him, but not now, I ſhall behold him, but not nigh, and Gal. 4. according to this Propheſie it is ſaid, When the fulneſſe of time was come, God ſent his ſonne made of a woman, &c. And the next words alſo agree, in the end he ſhall come, for the time of the Goſpell is called the end, 1 *Cor.*10. upon whom the ends of the world are come, and John cals it the laſt hour. If it be demanded, but what doth this concern the matter in hand, for Habakkuk was complaining of the wicked Caldees prevailing againſt Gods people? I anſwer, he ſpeaks the greateſt comfort that could be in thus ſaying, both againſt worldly and ſpirituall enemies, not omitting yet *v.*5. to ſpeak particularly of the judgments that ſhould come upon the wicked Caldees. For what comfort is there to this to the faithfull, to hear of Chriſts coming to deliver from greater enemies, ſin, death, and the Devill, and to be in certain expectation hereof at a ſet time? But this deliverance is not completed till the day of judgment. And Habakkuk in bringing in the greateſt comfort here by Chriſt, when according to the courſe of his proceedings, he ſhould have ſpoken of comfort in regard of deliverance from the Caldees, followeth *Eſaiah ch.*7.14. who being to ſpeak of comfort againſt the preſent enemies, beginneth with the Virgins bearing a ſon, and then paſſeth on to ſhew the deſtruction of their enemies to come in a very ſhort time. Whence note, that the greateſt comfort in all diſtreſſes and dangers at all times is Chriſt and our deliverance by him, that we may alwayes in miſery have recourſe hereunto and be of a good cheare, because the Son of God is our friend, Note. and therefore whatſoever befals us we ſhall not miſcarry, but in the end be delivered from them all, and for momentary ſufferings injoy ſuch things as eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard, and that for ever and ever in the Kingdom of heaven. 1 Cor.2.9.

V. 4. Behold his ſoul that is lifted up, is not upright in him but the juſt ſhall live by his faith; Hebr. עפלה הנה behold the lifted up, his ſoul is not upright. Vulg. Behold the incredulous, ſome render it munitio or munitus, defenced, he that hath defence in himſelf, and one indeed is hereby ſet forth, that beleeveth not in God, becauſe the juſt living by faith is oppoſed to him, but he truſteth to his own ſtrength, for which he thinketh himſelf to be as a ſtrong tower impregnable, as עפלה alſo ſignifieth, whereupon he proudly contemneth God and all his threatnings. And here ſome think Nebuchadnezzar to be pointed at, to whom he manifeſtly comes, *v.*5. which, although Calvin miſliketh, yet I ſee no reaſon but that he ſhould be firſt and chiefly meant, and then any other proud man and ſelf-confident, becauſe as all Expoſitours confeſſe, he is ſpoken of *v.*5. where it is ſaid, Yea alſo becauſe he tranſgreſſeth by wine, and is a proud man, and keepeth not at home, but enlargeth his deſire as hell. V. 5. For what is this but a further deſcription of him that was called *Ophlah, or high tower, v.*4. He then, that beareth himſelf upon his own ſtrength, therefore fearing no judgments Note. of God to come upon him, but being for this lifted up with pride, his heart is not upright, neither ſhall he live and continue in this his ſtrength long, but dye and be deſtroyed everlaſtingly, as muſt needs follow from the juſt man that ſhall live by his faith oppoſed unto him. Touching whom we are firſt to ſhew who this juſt man is, how he ſhall live by his faith. For the firſt, he is not one that juſtifieth himſelf, but whom God juſtifieth by imputing his faith for righteouſneſſe unto him, as he did Abrahams. A mans own righteouſneſſe cannot make him juſt, although he liveth in the moſt exact manner Gen. 12. Rom. 4. of all other men, as Paul ſheweth of himſelf, *Phil.*3.6,7,8. and bringeth this place to prove it, *Gal.*3.11. wherefore the Papiſt that in part juſtifieth himſelf by holding that by faith he is only put into a ſtate wherein he may live ſo righteouſly, as to be perfectly juſt as the law requireth, is not the juſt man here ſpoken of that ſhall live, but dye and periſh through pride and unbelief: but he that ſeeks juſtification by faith only in Jeſus, rejecting all righteouſneſs of his own as nought worth in reſpect of any power or virtue to make him juſt, is the juſt man, to whom it is here promiſed that he ſhall live. Not that to live righteouſly is not materiall in the juſt, for *not he that ſaith Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doth the will of my father which is in Heaven, Matth.*7.21. and, depart yee workers of iniquity, I know you not, but for that this comes not in as a cauſe why he is counted juſt but faith only, and juſt living and doing declareth him to be the juſt one here ſpoken of, for which it is ſaid, *Jam.*2. Abraham was not juſtified by faith only, but by works, and faith wrought by works.

But who hath this faith, which is imputed for righteouſneſſe, and ſo makes a man truly juſt? Gualter ſheweth very well, ſaying, he that repreſſing and Gualter.

appeaſing all affections of the fleſh dependeth upon God alone, looks to his word, truſts to his promiſes and overcomes all delay made on Gods part in performing by the obedience of faith, wherein Abraham was a perfect pattern unto us, as his hiſtory doth declare. 2. To live by faith is firſt to make the word of God the rule of all our actions, beleeving that we ſhall then do for the beſt when we walk according to this rule in all things all our dayes, and are not tempted by pleaſures or profits to tranſgreſſe hereagainſt in any thing. Secondly, to have all Gods gracious promiſes, performed unto us in his good time, whether they be of bleſſings in this life, or in the life to come, 1 Tim.4.8. for godlineſſe hath the promiſe of both, and he ſhall receive, ſaith Chriſt, an hundred fould in this life, and in the world to come life everlaſting: that is, in reſpect of contentation and joy at the leaſt, and ſometimes much more is reſtored to the faithfull by Gods extraordinary bleſſing then he hath parted withall, as to Abraham, Jacob, Joſeph, David, and Job, a certain number a hundred fold being put for an uncertain, manifold: And to the life to come doth S. Paul apply it, Rom. 1. The righteouſneſſe of God is revealed from faith to faith, as it is written, the juſt ſhall live by his faith: How the faithfull have lived in this world hereby we may ſee in David, who being many times in deadly danger had his life ſaved, but Saul once in danger loſt his: Aſa was likewiſe preſerved, when 1000000 Ethiopians came againſt him, and Jehoſhaphat being in danger by the Syrians, but Ahab was wounded and dyed. Neither can it be expected that it ſhould be otherwiſe, becauſe God upon whom the faithful depend, is almighty and true, and all worldly things to which worldlings truſt, impotent and vain, very ſhadowes without ſubſtance, as if a man ſhould lean upon a broken reed.

V. 5. Yea alſo becauſe he tranſgreſſeth by wine, he is a proud man, and keepeth not at home, he inlargeth his deſire as hell: Vulg. as wine deceives the drinker, ſo ſhall the proud man be, and he ſhall not be decored, non decorabitur, he ſhall not be honoured: Hebr. even when he is tranſgreſſing by wine the proud man ſhall not dwell: for כי ſignifieth either for or when, not how or as, and although בוצר ſignifieth deceiving as well as tranſgreſſing, yet here is nothing ſignifying ſo or be, but it followeth immediately, the proud man ſhall not dwell, and being read word for word according to the Hebrew, the ſentence is plaine, even when the proud man is tranſgreſſing by wine Dan. 5. he ſhall not dwell, the Prophet in thus ſaying manifeſtly pointing at Belſhazzars drinking of wine in the veſſels of the houſe of the Lord amongſt his Princes and Concubines the very ſame night that Babylon was taken, and ſo from theneforth he dwelt no more there, nor any of his ſeed after him, but was miſerably ſlain, and Babylon, of which he was ſo proud, deſtroyed. To this effect Lyra. alſo Lyra, counting Nebuchadnezzar and Belſhazzar as one, becauſe their Empire was one, and therefore they are ſpoken of together and propheſied againſt in the following part of this Chapter, ſometime the one and ſometime the other, as ſhall be ſhewed. Calvin. Gualter. Calvin and Gualter following another reading, how much more he that tranſgreſſeth by wine, expound it of the proud Babylonians that were carryed on to do things unreaſonable as Drunkards, that have no more underſtanding then brute beaſts and cannot be conteined in the houſe, but will run abroad to do miſchief, viz. ſuch as are mad drunk. But the former being juſtified by the accompliſhment, there is no need to ſeek this or any other way of Expoſition to make the ſenſe good. Here be ſixe vices pointed at in the Kings of Babylon, and the judgments threatned therefore in Lyra. theſe and the words following in this chapter, as Lyra hath it, 1. Prophane drinking in veſſels conſecrated, in theſe words. 2. His violence in going with his forces againſt other Nations to ſubdue them, being never ſatisfied with taking them into his Empire, in this verſe alſo, which is ſpoken of Nebuchadnezzar. 3. Covetouſneſſe, *v.*9. Woe to him that coveteth an evill covetouſneſſe. 4. Bloudſhed, *v.*12. Woe to him that buildeth a town with bloudſhed. 5. Making drunken, v. 15. Woe to him that gives his neighbour drink, which the Rabbines think to be ſpoken of Nebuchadnezzar, who upon a feſtivall day cauſed Zedekiah kiah to be brought forth and wine to be given him mixed with ſome purgative things, of which when he had well drank he fell a ſpuing moſt ſhamefully before all that were preſent and could not keep in his ordure, but that came forth alſo, for which he took ſo great grief that ſhortly after he dyed, and Nebuchadnezzar to make ſome amends to his dead body cauſed it to be honorably buryed, as hath been before ſhewed upon Jer. 34.5. 6. Idolatry v. 18 the graven image is a teacher of lyes: of the two former of theſe I ſhall need to ſpeak no more, the hiſtory being ſo full in ſetting that forth, which is here propheſied touching Belſhazzar and Nebuchadnezzars unſatiableneſſe in ſubduing Nation after Nation.

V. 6. Woe to him that increaſeth that which is not his, how long, and that ladeth himſelf with thick clay. As the King of Babylon had unſatiably hunted after the taking of Nations, ſo it is here ſhewed, that the time ſhould come, when he ſhould be the deriſion of Nations, ſeeing the judgments of God executed ſo ſeverely upon him, and then they ſhould tauntingly ſay thus, it being meant when he ſpeaks of his being laden with thick clay, his lading himſelf with abundance of treaſure unjuſtly gotten which is but as clay, and when taken away with violence, the former owners thereof being cut off, thick and heavy clay, preſſing yet more down him that gets it. A phraſe to be noted by all men, that by right and wrong heap up wealth, thinking when they have thus done, that none are ſo happy as they. But in truth none are ſo miſerable if any part of Note. their goods be unjuſtly gotten, for their wealth is nothing elſe but an importable burthen preſſing them with diſtracting cares without end. And indeed what elſe is gold but a kind of clay digged out of the earth, moſt heavy to be born, and conſequently the things purchaſed therewith, houſes and lands, &c. and as Gualter noteth, as thick clay makes the feet ſtick therein, Gualter. that a man cannot goe away, ſo riches hold the owners thereof faſt from going in the way of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe: and as clay cannot be medled withall but it defileth, ſo riches ill gotten. And as here they be compared to thick clay, ſo Mat. 13. to briars and thorns, 1 Tim. 6.9. to ſnares, Mic. 6. to fire, that we may all take heed of getting goods in this manner, as we would not ſet our own houſes on fire, or come into a ſnare to be taken and cruelly ſlain.

V. 7. Shall they not riſe up ſuddenly that ſhall bite thee? that is, the Medes and Perſians to whom thy treaſures ſhall become booties.

V. 8. All the people ſhall ſpoil thee becauſe of mens bloud, that is, the people of the Nations left undeſtroyed, when thou didſt ſhed the bloud of ſo many of them, ſhall join with the Perſians againſt thee, or as Calvin hath it, the Nations left Calvin. by thee untouched, when thou didſt ſubdue many, but cameſt not at them, ſhall, being carryed by Gods putting them on ſecretly, take this revenge upon thee, for the violence of the Land and City, that is, all Lands and Cities to which they had done violence, killing and deſtroying farre and wide. But I rather take it more reſtrainedly for the violence offered to the land of Judea and the City of Jeruſalem, which God ſpecially regarded, ſo likewiſe Lyra. Whence Lyra. note, that of all wrongs they are the moſt dangerous to the doers, and will Note. fall moſt heavy upon them that are done againſt the Church and people of God, that the moſt wickedly bent may be for ever deterred herefrom, or perſecuting any one of the faithfull.

V. 9. Woe to him that coveteth an evill covetouſneſſe to his houſe, &c. Here the third ſin of the King of Babylon cometh to be taxed, his unſatiable deſire to gather wealth, that he might ſet his neſt on high, that is, make his City of Babylon the moſt magnificent of all the Cities in the world, and it extendeth alſo to Note. all ſuch as covetouſly by hook and crook ſcrape treaſure together, that they may build them fair and ſumptuous houſes, as Coniah is taxed Jer. 22. They V. 10. doe but conſult ſhame to their houſes, whereas they think of great glory to redound hence unto them; and finally it is to the dammage of their own ſouls, as Chriſt teacheth, ſaying, What ſhall it profit a man to winne the whole world, and to loſe his own ſoul? And it is called an evill covetouſneſſe, becauſe evill is unſeparable from covetouſneſſe, and it doth evill to others with whom ſuch have to doe, ſo Gualter.

V. 11. For the ſtone ſhall cry out of the wall and the beam out of the timber ſhall anſwer it: which is ſpoken in caſe that the King of Babylon ſhould ſay, who dares ſpeak ſhame of my magnificent buildings? if no man durſt for his greatneſſe and cruelty, yet every ſtone in the wall and every beam of the houſe durſt and ſhould both ſpeak and cry out againſt him and all ſuch covetous wretches. And it is to be noted that he ſaith the ſtone ſhall cry and the beam ſhall anſwer, as in ſinging great men for their more honour have ſome to chant out their praiſes alternis vicibus, ſo for the more horrour to them that make themſelves great and their houſes out of the ruines of others, theſe ſenſeleſs things are ſet forth, the one thus crying out, and the other anſwering by a continuall clamour of one to the other, till that the wo cometh indeed, which they cry, that followeth here v. 12. Note. So that covetous Kings, and Rulers and other rich men may indeed build them ſtately houſes and herein applaud themſelves as doing magnifically, but in thus doing they ſet up things that ceaſe not to accuſe and cry out againſt them in the ears of God, till vengeance comes down upon them, not only to their ruine temporally and in body, but alſo eternally and in ſoul, which is thus loſt for ever.

V. 12. Woe to him that buildeth a Town with bloud: Here the fourth ſin comes to be laid open, viz. bloudſhed, which was in great abundance to get up to this high dignity to be able to build Babylon, which was ſo great and ſumptuous in the building both of wals, towers, and other edifices, elſewhere ſpoken of more at large. For that proud King in getting treaſure as his covetous mind led him, ſhed the bloud of innumerable peoples, which cryed to heaven for revenge againſt him.

V. 13. Therefore the people ſhall labour in the very fire, and ſhall weary themſelves in vanity: that is, when the Medes & Perſians ſhall ſet Babylon on fire, labouring to quench it, but not being able, and therefore in vain; and leſt any ſhould doubt how this could be done, ſeeing Babylon was ſo mighty, he ſaith, that it cometh of the Lord of Hoaſts, thus Lyra, from whom Gualter differeth little, for he ſaith, the meaning is, they labour in vain and in the fire, as it were, the force whereof cannot be reſiſted, that ſeek to defend and ſave Babylon. Lyra. Gualter. For the earth ſhall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the Sea: that is, they ſhall know in all parts of the earth when theſe judgments ſhall come upon Babylon, that God, whom they either thought before not to be, or lived idly above in heaven not regarding humane affairs, is a moſt juſt Judge, in his due time rendring to every one according to his doings, and therefore fearing and ſerving him. See the ſame paſſage before, Eſay 11.9. from whence we may gather, that not only the knowledge of God which ſhould be upon the deſtruction of Babylon is here meant, but at the coming of the Meſſiah by faith, in whom it was ſaid before that the juſt ſhall live, v. 4. For to know the Lord to be an executer of judgment upon the wicked without improving it to fear and ſerve him, is not the knowledge in holy Scripture commended unto us, and therefore the knowledge which the Nations had of him upon the fall of Babylon was not all the knowledge here ſpoken of, they being not any whit the more converted, but going on in their idolatries and ſins ſtill, but the knowledge of the faithfull in all Nations being converted by the preaching of the Goſpel. And for the coherence with the former words in this ſenſe, it is thus, incredulous people with their King lifted up ſo high, of whom before v. 4. ſhall labour in the fire, that is, get nothing by all their labour in heaping up treaſure and erecting ſo many great and ſtrong buildings therewith, but the fire of Gods wrath, whereby all ſhall be deſtroyed again, yet I have rightly ſaid, that the juſt ſhall live by his faith, when it ſhall be thus with the proud and covetous that truſt to their own ſtrength, for there ſhall come a generation of ſuch in all Countries and Nations, which ſhall know the Lord, for he that beleeves in him and liveth accordingly knoweth him, and ſuch ſhall live and be bleſſed for ever, when the people before ſpoken of, ſhall dye and be in everlaſting miſery in hell fire, which is in fine all that the wicked get in working ſo induſtriouſly both with wits and frauds the evils before ſpoken of, or here following, *v.*15, & 18. For eternall life being theirs that know God and Chriſt, ſee Joh. 17.13. Lyra and all others that I have ſeen, reſtrain this to the knowledge of Gods juſtice in taking revenge upon Babylon, and ſo farre goeth Jerom herein, that he expounds the filling of the earth with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord of the filling of Babylon with the Medes and Perſians, and theſe words, as the waters cover the Sea, ſaith Lyra, are to be underſtood of Babylon overwhelmed by Gods judgments ſo as the bottome of the Sea is with water, never appearing any more, but lying under this floud of judgments everlaſtingly: but how rightly, let the reader judge. Calvin, although he reſtrains it, as hath been ſaid, and counts our Expoſition before going too much forced, yet in concluſion ſaith, if any ſhall ſtand for it, I will not gainſay him. But truly in it there is no forcing, but the full ſetting forth of the Lords meaning, being by others not ſet forth to the full, but ſuppreſſing one famous Propheſie ſerving further to ſtrengthen that, Eſay 11. 9.

V. 15. Woe to him that gives his neighbour drink, that puttest thy bottle to him and makeſt him drunken alſo: Here followeth the fifth ſin of the King of Babylon, not only prophane drinking, of which before, *v.*5. but urging drink upon another to drunkenneſſe, a common but a moſt foul ſin, not only in the Babylonian but in the drunkards of theſe times, whoſe delight it is to make others drunken, and to this end they doe not only offer him wine or ſtrong drinke, but deal with him to this end by ſuch wayes and means as are moſt prevalent to bring him to it, as 1. Friendſhip, Wilt thou not, ſaith he, drink with thy friend? 2. Commendation of the liquor. 3. Being ready to quarrel and fall out with him if he refuſeth. 4. Propounding healths of ſuch as he honoureth. 5. Mingling ſomething which intoxicateth the brain; and what is his end in doing all this, but, as is here added, that thou mayeſt look on his nakedneſſe, or ſhame, when by drinking he is bereaved of his underſtanding, and doth ſhamefully like a brute beaſt, yea worſe, and making himſelf more ridiculous? Rightly therefore doth the Prophet cry out, Woe to ſuch above all other drunkards, Ahaſhueroſh that Heathen King ſhal riſe up in judgment againſt them and condemn them, for he gave order at his feaſt that no man ſhould be compelled to drink but what he pleaſed. How odious drunkenneſſe was amongſt the very heathens, appears by the law of wiſe Solon, decreeing that a Prince being found drunk ſhould be puniſht with death, and when Philip King of Macedon being drunken, gave ſentence againſt a certain woman unjuſtly, ſhe to his diſgrace replyed, I appeal from Philip drunken to Philip being ſober, thus Gualter. But Calvin will not have drunkenneſs by wine or ſtrong drink properly underſtood here, but metaphoricall drunkenneſſe, that is, the drunkenneſſe of a diſtempered ſpirit making others to join with him in his wars without al equity or reaſon, to come upon peoples and nations like mad men to deſtroy them, that his covetous mind & ambitious might thus be ſatisfied by treaſures coming in in abundance, and he made great by the ruines of others. The word חמת ſignifying a bottle, is by him rendred heat, thou addeſt thy heat, becauſe it ſignifieth to rage as one heat with wine, it ſignifieth moreover gall, and therefore is ſo rendred Vulg. Lat. or poiſon, it being hereby meant, that the King of Babylon made other Kings in a rage as with wine, as well as himſelf, and thus drunken, that their nakedneſſe might be ſeen, that is, they might appear to deal ſhamefully for all this their mad going on with him, reaping nothing but the curſes and exclamations of many peoples, whom they holp him to ſpoil, thus getting their hatred upon opportunity offered to come againſt and bring them as low and making them as naked and bare of all wordly comforts as they now were, and in the mean ſeaſon that proud and covetous King, who made them thus drunken had all the glory, they nothing but labour and blows, how fairly ſoever he bare them in hand, of which, when they ſaw how they were deluded, they could not but be much aſhamed. A courſe, ſaith he, further, further, now taken even by Chriſtians in high and eminent place, they make many drunken by bearing them in hand, that all their undertakings are for the Weal Publick, and hereby they are madly carryed on with them to any deſigne, whether right or wrong, when as they indeed aim at the ſatisfying of their own covetous and ambitious deſires, and in the end it appears to be ſo; which makes their adherents greatly aſhamed: and I would to God it were not ſo in our own land.

V. 16. Thou art filled with ſhame for glory, drink thou alſo: Here the Prophet foretelleth, that at laſt the King that made others drink thus, ſhould drinke of the cup of Gods wrath, when he ſhould ſuffer ſo greatly, as he did indeed by the Medes and Perſians, and he ſpeaks of his glory, as already turned into ſhame for the certainty of it. And this Expoſition cannot be rejected, becauſe drinking Revel. 17. is familiarly ſpoken of by the Prophets, and being drunken in this ſenſe, and the whore of ſpirituall Babylon is ſaid to have made the Kings of the Earth drunken with the wine of her fornications. Whether that formerly related out of Lyra in opening this ſin be true or no, I know not, but that the King of Babylon made other Kings drunken in the ſenſe that hath been ſaid, is certain, and whether he made Zedekiah drunken ſo or no, it is not be doubted, but that drunkenneſſe was a great ſin at his Court, and City, becauſe they were for the moſt part drunken when the Perſians tooke the City, as the Trojans were, when the Greeks ſurprized theirs, and therefore drunkenneſſe properly underſtood is here alſo ſpoken of, and from hence another drunkenneſſe V. 17. pointed at, as hath been ſaid. For the next words, The violence of Lebanon ſhall cover thee, and the ſpoil of beaſts, that made them afraid; that is, this judgment ſhall come upon thee becauſe of thy violence done not onely againſt other peoples, but againſt Gods owne inhabiting Judea and his Temple, for the ſpoil of the beaſts*, that is, ſaith the ſame Lyra, being by the Caldees deſtroyed, making the ſervice of God in the Temple to ceaſe, ſhal at that time be reckoned

V. 18. thoſe before, v. 8. What profiteth the graven image that the maker thereof hath graven it? Here is ſet forth the ſixth ſin of the Babyloniſh King, he was a worſhipper of images and dumb idols, and truſted by theſe to be eſtabliſhed in his Kingdom, and therefore the Prophet ſaith, what profiteth the graven image? deriding both him and all others that truſted in ſuch dumb and dead things. And to prove this he addeth, for the former thereof hath graven it, as it is in the Hebrew, it being a reaſon, why it cannot profit to ſave, it was made by a weak and frail man, he by graving it hath made it ſo glorious in outward ſhew, but it was not in his power to put any ſpirit or life into it, but when hee hath done all that he can, it is ſtill a dumb and dead thing, and therefore farre from having any ability to help them, that truſt in it, or ſeek unto it. 2. Hee the Barbarians would have worſhipped them, rent their cloathes in deteſtation of their fact. 3. It is a ſenſeleſſe thing, for he ſpeaks to it being but wood or ſtone, ſaying, Awake, ariſe, as if it could, when as it cannot, and therefore he is taught hereby to lye; of the like, ſee *Jer.*10.8.14. and againſt idolatry both heatheniſh and popiſh in many places before. Onely it is further noted here by Gualter, that the heathens themſelves were a long time without images, as thinking it an unworthy thing to repreſent ſo high a majeſty by baſe earthly things. Strabo writes of the Perſians, that they had anciently no Temples, but that they ſacrificed in open and clean places, being without all images, and when at any time they prevailed againſt the Grecians, they burnt their Temples and images, not out of a contempt of the gods, for they worſhipped them but out of a deteſtation of the idolatry therein committed. The Grecians, ſaith Cornelius Tacitus, thought the greatneſſe of the heavenly Gods to be ſuch, that they could not be kept within any wals or ſet forth by any ſimilitudes of mens faces. Auguſtine out of Varro ſaith, that the Romans worſhipped the gods without any images 170 years, which cuſtom if it had ſtill remained, they ſhould have been worſhipped more purely: for they that firſt ſet up images took away the fear of God and added errors. Lactantius citeth Lucilius the Poet thus, deriding image-worſhippers: As little children think all brazen images to live and to be men, ſo theſe think all ſeigned things to be true, but images made by Painters are nothing true, all things are ſeigned, and hereupon he ſaith, the Poet thinks fooliſh idolaters like little children, but I think they are much more fooliſh, 1. Becauſe children think images to be men, theſe gods. 2. It is by reaſon of their tender age diſabling them to judge aright, that they think ſo, and when they come to more yeares they think ſo no more, but theſe want no age, but wit, which makes them think ſo, and when they have more years on their backs, they leave not this their folly, but encreaſe it. If it be ſaid, but the images ſet up by Chriſtians are not by them thought to be thoſe, whom they repreſent, but only figures and ſhapes of them for a remembrance. Yet they agree with heathen images in this. 1. That they are made of the ſame matter. 2. Formed with head, eyes, mouths, hands and feet as they be. 3. They are teachers of lyes alſo, for they are either images of God, who cannot be repreſented by any image, or of men who conſiſt both of ſouls and bodies, whereas thoſe images repreſent bodies onely. Thus Gualter, who alſo addeth, if it be ſaid, they are lay-mens books, and therefore good for this, to ſhew things done, that tend to inſtruction, and ſo ſaith Calvin, Gregory writing to the Biſhop of Maſſilia, (who had, becauſe he ſaw the people ready to give divine honour to images, put them out of Churches) commends his zeal, but ſaith, there is a good uſe of images, as was before ſaid, and therefore they ought not altogether to be taken away. But whether Gregory be rather to be hearkened to then Habakkuk, and Jeremy and the reſt of the Prophets, let the reader judge. And that images are a groſſe corruption in religion appears by this, moſt anciently for 600 yeares there was none allowance for them, but they were firſt allowed and commended in the 2^d^. Nicene Councell called by an uſurping unnaturall woman Irene, the mother of Conſtantine Copronymus, whereupon one well ſaith, as long as there were golden Doctours in the Church there were neither golden nor wooden images permitted, but when for golden leaders and wooden Doctours ſprung up, then Churches were filled with images both golden, brazen and wooden. And what followed hereupon, to ſhew the wrath of God procured againſt Chriſtians hereby, but deſtruction and miſerie by the Turkes, who are no greater enemies to the Chriſtian religion then they are to images? For Mahomet aroſe not long after, and his Empire hath ſince ſpread it ſelf farre and wide, and beene a grievous ſcourge to Chriſtendome to this day, neither is there any hope of the fall thereof, till this abomination be taken out of the Church of God. But then expect we power from above to fight againſt them and ſubdue them of that damnable ſect, as Judas Maccabeus had againſt the heathen that were much more mighty then he, when he purged the Temple from idolatry, and Gideon long before againſt the Midianites, when he had deſtroyed the image of of Baal. whereas before the Iſraelites were mightily oppreſſed by them, whileſt they worſhipped images, and before the captivity when they laboured with the ſame vice they were ſubject to grievous ſufferings by divers mighty enemies from time to time, but after their return, this ſin being aboliſhed their condition, although under the Perſian Kings, and afterwards others, was much more tolerable. Oh that Papiſts, who are ſo betwitched with this folly, would conſider it, and caſt away their idols to the Moules and to the Bats, Eſa. 2. as Eſay ſpeaketh, and not deviſe vain reaſons, whereby to defend them. And truly me thinks, would they but conſider this ſeriouſly, and the ſtate of the Church at the firſt both in Moſes his dayes, and the dayes of Joſhua and then in days of the Apoſtles and all the famous martyrs, they would not be hard to be reclaimed from this groſſe errour.

V. 20. The Lord is in his holy habitation, Let all the earth be ſilent before him. Having ſhewed the vanity of idols, now he ſets forth the true God by the place of his habitation, that is, heaven, although his Temple at Jeruſalem be here meant alſo, as wherein he was pleaſed to dwell for the comfort of his people. It is, as if he had ſaid, Jehovah alone is the true God, that can hear ſuch as call upon him and riſe up by his power to help and ſave them, which idols made by men cannot doe, they are but earthly and have no being but upon earth, he is in heaven, and therefore moſt glorious and mighty, and offers himſelfe in his houſe at Jeruſalem to hear them that pray to him; therefore let images and idols goe, let no man upon earth once open his mouth to call upon them, or to ſpeak to defend them, as being convinced of their vanity by that which hath been ſaid, and of the greatneſſe of the ſin of thoſe that call upon them, Gualter. thus let all the earth be ſilent before him. Calvin, The Lord can in a moment confound all thoſe that ſtand for images, of how great power ſoever they be, and ſo puts them to ſilence, wherefore it ſtands them all in hand to be ſubject and quietly to ſubmit to him only, adue being bidden to images and idols. And it ſeemeth to be a Propheticall prediction, that it ſhall be ſo under the Goſpell, as it came to paſſe indeed amongſt the Nations being converted to Chriſt. Lyra. Lyra too frigidly, by attributing his divinity to none other. Gualter, Gualter. let every one quietly rely upon him alone to be ſaved from all dangers, as being alone ſufficient to repreſſe the fury of all ſuch as riſe up againſt him or his Church at any time, and therefore if at any time he ſeemes to neglect him by leaving him to ſuffer grievous things, let him not once murmur or mutter againſt him, as David ſaith of himſelf, that he was as dumb, Pſal. 39. 2. all which expoſitions if we take together, we ſhall attain to the full ſenſe and meaning.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. THe prayer of Habakkuk the Prophet upon Sigionoth, Heb. על־שגיונות ſee the like in the Title of Pſalm 7. The word שגה ſignifieth to erre through ignorance, or want of conſideration, therefore the Vulg. hath it ſuper ignorantiis. Some think a kind of muſicall inſtrument to be meant hereby, intimating Gloſ. Ord. it to be in the nature of a ſong. But to follow the ſignification of the word, Lyra ſaith, that this prayer anſwereth to that, which the Prophet had ſpoken by way of complaining, chap. 1, 2, 3, 4. as being a confeſſion of his ignorant Calvin. complaining of that, which he had there made. But I rather aſſent to Calvin, that this prayer was made for the uſe of the people, that were ſhortly to live in captivity, for the cheriſhing of ſome true piety then in them, when they were likely to have greateſt diſcouragements, which might be by the diligent uſe and ſerious conſideration hereof. And it is intituled of Ignorances, becauſe they had greatly overſeen themſelves in many things, and ſo did dayly beſides their groſſer ſins, not yet omitting to name them, becauſe he would have them all come under the notion of ignorances, but rather to intimate, that beſides ſuch ſins, there be others, that we know not, whereby we offend God dayly, and have need to crave pardon of them, as Pſa. 19. Who can tell how often he offendeth?

V. 2. O Lord, I have heard thy ſpeech, and was afraid. Here the Prophet ſheweth what it was that moved him thus to pray, and with what fear and reverence he did addreſſe himſelfe to pray. He heard firſt the words of God, that is, his threatnings of judgements by the Caldeans, of which he ſpake before. Note. Rom. 10. And accordingly it is the hearing of the Word of God, that ſtirreth up any man to pray, for faith comes by hearing, and whoſoever hath faith prayeth, and the right addreſſing of our ſelves to God in prayer is with reverence, becauſe we are all ſinners, and there is cauſe why ſinners ſhould tremble before God in all their approaches unto him, conſidering his threatnings againſt ſin, as being ſo contrary to his holineſſe. Revive thy worke in the midſt of the years, in the midſt of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy. Having ſhewed what moved him to make this prayer, now he beginneth it, by his work underſtanding his Church or Congregation of faithfull, as Epheſ. 2. 10. they are called, and his work of delivering them being moſt oppreſſed by their enemies, wherein he lookt at their dying eſtate in their being ſubjected and captived by the Babylonians. And this he calleth, the Gualter. midſt of years, that is, betwixt their deliverance out of Egypt, and the deliverance to come by Chriſt. As if he ſaid, we are now betwixt two deliverances a dying people, doe thou therefore deliver us in the midway by ſtretching out thine arm and mightily bringing us out of Babylon, and thus make knowne thy power and mercy again: in wrath remember mercy, we are worthy to lye under thy wrath ſtill for our great and groſſe ſins, but deal with V. 3. us in mercy, not in extremity of juſtice as we deſerve. Verſ. 3. God came from Teman, and the holy One from Mount Paran, Selah. Here the Prophet to ſtrengthen the faith of the people of God recounts things done of old for their comfort, as Moſes preparing to bleſſe the children of Iſrael doth, Deut. 33.2. where the like ſpeech is uſed. Teman ſignifieth the South, and the Wilderneſſe of Paran lay ſouthward from the land of Canaan extending even to Mount Sinai to which the Lord came down to give the Law. So that in ſaying thus, the Prophet layes a foundation of comfort and confidence to Iſrael, to whom the Lord had vouchſafed this great favour to ſhew them ſuch terrible ſignes; and with a lively voice to ſpeak unto them ſo, as the like was never done to any other people, His glory covered the heavens, whereas to that which was ſaid before he addeth, Selah, he ſheweth it to be worthy the noting, as a favour above all others for the Lord to come and declare his Will and Word unto a people; and therefore from hence Gods favour toward Iſrael is extolled, Pſal. 147. 19, 20. Now for his glory covering heaven, and his praiſe in all the earth, this is added, that his people by recounting his majeſty and glory then appearing might be aſſured that hee was ſtill the ſame all glorious God, although he ſhewed not ſuch ſignes hereof as then he did. And he addeth from his hands horns coming, and there was the hiding of his power, that is, hee came not onely in glory, but alſo in power, ſet forth often in holy Scripture by horns. And he ſaith, there was the hiding of his power, that is, the Divine power hid from other Nations, becauſe not ſo manifeſtly ſhewed amongſt them, but onely amongſt his people of Iſrael, and it was hid alſo to them, becauſe all the Mount from which God ſpake was covered with darkneſſe, nothing but V. 5. ſigns of might and power being ſeen. Verſ. 5. Before him went the Peſtilence, and burning coales at his feet. Here in ſetting forth further the terribleneſſe of Numb. 16. 45, 46, 47. the Lord, he doth it by his judgements of old after the Law given upon Mount Sinai, for one time when the people ſinned he deſtroyed them with Numb. 11. the peſtilence, and another time with fire, for which the place was called Taberah: but others expound it of the plagues wherewith the Egyptians were ſmitten, by Peſtilence the men, and by murrein the beaſts, and of the fire and hail coming upon Egypt, but forſomuch as this was before, not after the giving of the Law with ſo great terrour, and therefore it were prepoſterous thus to take it. V. 6. Hee ſtood and meaſured the earth, he drove aſunder the Nations. Here by his ſtanding, ſaith Calvin, the Rabbins underſtand the ſtanding or abiding of the Ark in Gilgal, whileſt the Lord, a ſign of whoſe preſence it was, cauſed the land of Canaan to be divided by lot amongſt the children of Iſrael. But he ſaith, that by his ſtanding is meant his powerfull acting of that, which is here ſpoken of, and that he takes to be the dividing of the lands in all countreys all over the world, for ſuch a race hath ſuch a land and another another, not accidentally; but as God hath divided them amongſt them; the like unto this, ſee *Deut.*32.8. The everlaſting mountaines were ſcatterred, the perpetuall hils did bow, his wayes are everlaſting, from whence hee further confirmeth, that the words before going are ſpoken of this World in generall, and not of the land of Canaan in particular. The Prophet brings this as an argument of Gods infinite power, that he ſcatteringly placed the mountaines in all parts of the earth at the beginning of the world, which are ſet ſo faſt, that they are, as the earth it ſelf, everlaſting, that is, continuing through all ages: and yet ſuch mighty hils and mountains are made to bow at the preſence of the Almighty, as Mount Sinai ſhaked when hee deſcended; and in ſaying, his wayes are everlaſting, he intimateth, that he had not this power only then, and that he then onely bare ſuch ſingular love to Iſrael, but that he doth ſtill bear the ſame, in which regard they might well be comforted, expecting help in their diſtreſſe: To this effect almoſt Calvin, but I rather hold with Gualter, that he meaneth the dividing of the land of Canaan to the Tribes of Iſrael, which were as ſo many Nations, becauſe in order that followed Gods appearing upon Mount Sinai, in that terrible manner, but the dividing of the earth in generall to all other peoples long before. Moreover for theſe words, he drove aſunder the Nations, which may ſeem to imply a dividing of countries, he rendereth it, he beheld, and diſſolved the Nations, wherein neither doth Calvin differ; thus alſo the Vulgar Latine and Hebrew it is, he ſaw and the Nations were removed, the word being ויתר of נתר to remove, that is, the Canaanites, Hivites, Perizzites, &c. being expelled, and the Tribes of Iſrael planted there. For the next words, the everlaſting mountaines were ſcattered, and the hils bowed, herein he plainly alludeth to the commotions that were made when the Lord brought the children of Iſrael into Canaan, the waters of Jordan were made to ſtand up as huge mountains on heaps, and then the Ark being come out of the River, they ſcattered themſelves as it were abroad again, for which ויתפצצו a verb in Hithpael is uſed, and for the hils bowing, their ſhaking and prodigious moving which were about Sinai, and of Sinai it ſelf is meant, of which David ſpeakes in like manner, *Pſal.*114.3,4,5. the motion cauſed through fear being called a bowing, or low dejection, as they bow and crouch low that are ſtricken with terrour before him, whoſe preſence is ſo terrible to them. Wherein I confeſſe I have gone from my authour before named a little to make theſe paſſages the more plain. For he coming to ſpeak of the mountaines, &c. mentioneth the waters of Jordan onely divided, and the wals of Jericho falling down, and high hills whereon they ſtood. Now for everlaſting, Heb. it is [illegible]עד, montes ſeculi, the mountaines of the World, that is, of the ſame durance that the world is of; which is ſometime rendered for ever, or everlaſting, when compariſon is made betwixt them and men, that come out of the earth, as *Eccleſ.*1.4. One generation paſſeth and another ſucceedeth, but the earth endures for ever; and accordingly the next words are rendered by him, the journeys of the world are his, the ſenſe being, not onely mountaines and hils are made to bow before him, but alſo the courſe of all things in the World is ordered by him, both in heaven and earth and in the deep waters, the ſun, moon and ſtars move at his appointment, and at his decrees the Seas ebbe and flow, the earth ſtanding unmoveably, yet being ſhaken when he pleaſeth, which is ſpoken to ſhew, that he, who doth all theſe moſt mighty acts, can much more in his good time bring back the captivity of his people, that they might not deſpair, but be herein comforted, patiently waiting for it.

I ſaw the tents of Cuſhan in affliction, the curtains of the land of Midian trembled. Gualter, for iniquity, I ſaw the tents of Chuſhan, and the curtains, &c. that is, I Iſrael was ſometime ſubdued by Cuſhanriſhathaim King of Meſopotamia, Judg. 3. becauſe of my foul ſin of idolatry, and another time by the Midianites, Judg. 6. therefore having now groſly ſinned again, no marvell though I bee faln into the hands of the Caldees, yet as then deliverers were raiſed up, ſo my hope is, that I ſhall again be delivered from their hands alſo. The words in the Hebrew are, תחת און that is, under iniquity, or under affliction; but I rather take Gualters rendring it, which is alſo the Vulgar Latine, to be beſt. But the better ſenſe here is that of Calvin, who alſo followeth the ſame reading, I have ſeen and call to minde, what became of the tents of Chuſhanriſhathaim, that ſo long oppreſſed Iſrael, viz. they paid in the end for this their iniquity, Othniel being ſtirred up to take revenge upon them, and to deliver Iſrael, and likewiſe the trembling of the curtains or tents of the Midianites covered with skins, when they had long oppreſſed Iſrael, Gideon coming with his Trumpets of Rams horns and pitchers about them, and making them to tremble and flee, from which I gather that the time ſhall come, when the Caldees ſhall be animadverted againſt alſo to their terrour and Iſraels comfort.

V. 8. Was the Lord diſpleaſed at the rivers, was thy wrath againſt them? The Prophet here goes on to lay another ground of comfort againſt the fear, that the Jews might be in of being alwayes left in miſery in Babylon, and this is from the conſideration of the Lords ſaving them formerly by dividing the red Sea and Jordan to give them a paſſage through to the land of Canaan, and drowning the Egyptians their enemies, that purſued after them. For he ſmote not the red Sea with the rod of Moſes, becauſe he was wroth with it, but to give them a paſſage, who otherwiſe were in apparent danger of deſtruction. For no man can be ſo ſenſleſſe, as to think, that God could doe this in wrath to a dead and dumb creature, wherefore it muſt needes be conceived to have been done in way of relieving his diſtreſſed people, and if ſo, then why ſhould they doubt and not be in good hope of being ſaved from the Babylonians, although they could not ſee by what means it could poſſibly be effected. That thou didſt ride upon thine horſes and chariots of ſalvation, this is added in alluding to the manner of the Egyptians purſuing them, which was with horſes and chariots, for God contrariwiſe rode as it were upon his horſes and chariots, when by his Almighty power he came thus on to bring his people out of their danger, and them to deſtruction by bringing the waters together againe, whereby they were drowned in the bottom of the deep.

V. 9. Thy bow was made quite naked according to the oathes of the Tribes, even thy Word, Selah, thou didſt cleave the earth with rivers. Vulg. Stirring up thou ſhalt ſtir thy bow, the oathes which thou ſpakeſt to the tribes, thou ſhalt cleave the rivers of the earth. Heb. making naked thou madeſt naked thy bow, the oaths of the Tribes the Word, or ſpeaking oathes to the Tribes, for to muſt neceſſarily be ſupplyed to make ſenſe, thou cleavedſt the rivers of the earth. For the firſt words here they are eaſie to be underſtood, God is ſaid to make his bow naked, when he puls it as it were out of a caſe, and bends and puts his arrow to it and ſhooteth, that is, executeth judgements upon enemies. But what is meant by the next words is hard to conjecture. Gualter will have Gods oathes meant, which he made to Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, and the Tribes that came of him, with whom he made a Covenant to be their God and Protectour for ever, as if it had been ſaid, he mightily ſubdued the Egyptians and ſaved Iſrael, his words being herein as firm as many oathes, which none will break, which indeed is ſpoken with ſo good ſenſe, that it may well be received. Neither doth Calvin differ much herefrom, who ſaith, the oathes of the Tribes, the Word, is as much as if he had ſaid, the oath of God made to Abraham, and often repeated, called therefore Oathes, although but one, and oathes of or concerning the Tribes, for they were the ſeed of Abraham, to whom God made that oath, were approved then to be a word never to be altered but ſtanding firm to all generations.

So that when they conſidered the conſtancy of the Lord towards their Father Abrahams ſeed brought out of Egypt, they might well be confident of the like conſtancy in ſaving them from Babylon. But for ſo much as שבעות ſignifieth as well ſeventy as oathes, and מטות Rods, as well as Tribes, for the word שבעים is ſeventy, and שבע properly ſeven, and מטות being a feminin, and that word a feminine, it may well be taken for 70 rods, and then in brief Numb. 17. here is a touch given of another great miracle upon the rods of the 70 Elders laid all night in the Ark, when Aarons rod bloſſomed by the morning, to ſhew that he was choſen for High Prieſt by God, thus to appeaſe the tumult made by Korah and his company: and if we render it thus, that which is here ſaid will well cohere with the words before going, being taken as a tranſition from one miraculous work in overthrowing the Egyptians to another wrought in Aarons rod, further declaring Gods Almighty power, that they might in all ſtraights and difficulties rely upon him, and then take we it thus; the 70 rods are as a ſure word; teaching him to be of ſo great power, that he can doe any thing, which that it might be the more marked, Selah is added, thou cleavedſt the earth with the rivers. Vulgar, thou ſhalt cleave the rivers of the earth. Hebrew, the rivers, thou cleavedſt the earth, a defective ſpeech, as I take it, thus to be ſupplyed, thou cleavedſt the earth, and the rivers flowed out, it being a recounting of another miracle in cleaving the rock ſo, that the waters came out in aboundance, when they murmured for want of water, which if we take to be ſpoken of that Numb. 20. it follows in order after the other of the rods bloſſoming, and ſo one moſt famous fact is recounted after another, as it was done, whereas if we take the former words according to the common reading, there is without reaſon an inſerting of another thing, the courſe of the hiſtory of miracles being interrupted, which he plainly ſets himſelf to follow. V. 10. Gualter. Verſ. 10. The mountaines ſaw thee and trembled, the overflowings of the waters paſſed by. Here the Prophet returns again, ſaith Gualter, to amplifie that which he had ſpoken more briefly of before, verſ. 6. touching the things done about Jordan, the waters gathering themſelves into heaps like mountaines ſtood trembling, as overawed by thee, and the waters downward ran away, leaving the channell dry. And becauſe this was not done without a great noiſe, he ſaith, the deep uttered his voyce, and the waters that came, but were made to riſe up into heaps, are ſaid to lift up their hands by a Proſopopeia: Some others by mountaines here underſtand the Kings of Canaan, and by the waters the common people, but the ſenſe already given is beſt.

V. 11. Joſh. 10. The Sun and Moon ſtood ſtill in their habitation. Here he proceeds to that other great miracle wrought by Joſhua of the ſtanding ſtill of the Sun and Moon an whole day, when the Sun was even now ready to ſet. At the light of thine arrows they went, and at the ſhining of thy glittering ſpear, that is, as Calvin well ſaith, the Moon and Sun, which from their creation had hitherto kept their courſe, went now in a new and unwonted manner, that is, delaying an whole day together their wonted motion, being aſtoniſht as it were, at Gods bright arrowes and ſpears, for ſo ſaith he, he calleth the arrows and ſpears, wherewith his people fought being ſtrengthened and having ſucceſſe by his might; Gualter. Joſh. 10. 11. and this is alſo preferred by Gualter, who yet mentioneth another, underſtanding by arrows, the hailſtones caſt down upon the Canaanites deſtroying more then the weapons of the Iſraelites, at the coming down whereof moſt probably it lightened alſo, as ſometimes it had done in Egypt, when there was fire mingled with hail. And to this doe I rather ſubſcribe, becauſe the hailſtones were moſt properly Gods arrows, and the caſting down of them in battell was moſt prodigious and aſtoniſhing even to thoſe celeſtiall bodies the Sun and the Moon, as to ſee men fighting with arrows and ſpears is not.

V. 12. Thou didſt march through the land in indignation, thou didſt threſh the heathen, Still he proceeds in recounting the ancient geſts of the Lord, continuing his compariſon begun, taken from a man of war, he went through and conquered the whole land tearing the inhabitants in pieces, as a threſher the ſtraw of the corn threſhed.

Thou wenteſt forth for the ſalvation of thy people, for ſalvation with thine anointed. Some here by anointed underſtand the godly Kings mentioned in the ſacred Hiſtory, with whom God was in their expeditions to proſper them from time to time, both David, Aſa, Jehoſhaphat, &c. after that before he had beene with the Judges, who ſucceeded Joſhua. But Gualter will have Chriſt rather underſtood here, who although he were not yet come in the fleſh, yet he was come in Gods Decree, for which he is ſaid to be the Lamb ſlain from the begining of the world; and if it be thus underſtood, then here is both a declaration of the Divine vertue yet lying hid amongſt the Jews, Chriſt the ſeed of Abraham to come, whereby they went on ſo victoriouſly againſt the Canaanites, and a propheſie of ſalvation by him to all the faithfull. And indeed the word מחצת of the ſingular number makes rather for this Expoſition, Thou woundedſt the head out of the houſe of the wicked by diſcovering the foundation even to the necke, Selah; that is, thou (O Chriſt) according to the propheſie, that went of thee from the beginning, that the ſeed of the woman ſhould break the ſerpents head, haſt done this to the divell, when thou cameſt to ſave thy people by dying for them, according to that Heb. 2.15. By death he deſtroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the devill: by diſcovering the foundation, or laying it naked, that is, ruining thus all his ſtrength, becauſe the ſtrength of a building lyeth chiefly in the foundation; but becauſe there is ſtrength alſo in the wals founded hereupon from the bottom to the top or neck, which is next the head, hee ſpeaketh thus, to ſhew, that whatſoever covering or defence ſoever there was about the body of his kingdome, it was all by him diſanulled for ever, and he uſeth this metaphoricall ſpeech from a body laid naked from the bottom to the neck, becauſe men uſe to cloath their bodies ſo high: to this effect almoſt Calvin, whereby we are taught, that all former deliverances in times of greateſt danger ſprang from this fountain, Gods Covenant with his people by Chriſt, which becauſe it is everlaſting, the faithfull might well hope without doubting to be ſaved out of Babylon, yea and for a greater ſalvation from ſin, the divell and everlaſting death, which was the chief end of Chriſts deſtroying or wounding the head of this wicked one.

V. 14.

Thou didſt ſtrike through with his ſtaves the head of his Villages. Vulgar, Thou haſt curſed his ſcepters, the head of his warriours, and indeed the word here uſed firſt ſignifieth to curſe, and then alſo to ſtrike through, but it is במטיו with ſtaves or rods, and therefore cannot be ſo underſtood, and the word rendred warriours is without wals, as towns and villages are, or inhabitants of ſuch places. Calvin ſaith, that hereby is meant Gods making of the enemies of his people to deſtroy one another with their own weapons, as the Midianites did, but he ſhould rather have ſaid, the Ammonites and Moabites, &c. 2 Chron. 20. who did ſo at the prayer of Jehoſhaphat. And this ſenſe is alſo followed by Gualter, and it agreeth excellently with the argument in hand, another miraculous fact of God being herein recounted, as he had mentioned divers before, viz. a judgement, whereby he made the enemies of his Church to fight one againſt another; when they roſe up, as a whirlwinde, that is, moſt fiercely combining together to deſtroy her: for in ſaying, they came out as a whirlewinde to ſcatter me, he takes upon him the perſon of the Church, againſt which it was thus attempted. And here Gualter addeth more hiſtories of the like done by Ammonites againſt Midianites, who were both enemies to Iſrael, Babylonians againſt Aſſyrians, the Grecians dividing Alexanders Empire amongſt them, and fighting one aggainſt another, this making way for the Romans to ſubdue them all, and the Romans civill wars whereby advantage was given to obſcure Nations to riſe up againſt and ſubdue them. And hence we may note, that it is a great judgement of God againſt a people, when they mutually bend their weapons and make war one upon another, but the comfort is, that this ſhall be turned to the ſaving and delivering of the faithfull in the end, and he that did ſo great things for them in times paſt, is able, and will not faile to do the like for them in captivity.

Note.

V. 15. Thou didſt walke through the Sea with thine horſes. Here for a concluſion hee repeats againe what the Lord did in making a way for the children of Iſrael to paſſe through the red Sea to eſcape the danger of the Egyptians purſuing them, as is often uſed in ſongs. And hee calls this the Lords walking through the waters upon his horſes in alluſion to Pharaohs coming after Iſrael with horſes and chariots, which could not carry them through the waters without drowning, but he went through with his people preſerving them, making the waters, as a wall unto them on the V. 16. right hand and the left. Verſ. 16. When I heard, my belly trembled, my lips quivered, rottenneſſe entered into my bones, that I might find reſt in the day of trouble; when hee cometh up to the people, hee will invade them with his troops. Here the Prophet repeats alſo again what he had begun withall, verſ. 2. knowing what terrible judgements ſhould come upon the Church of God by the Caldees, hee ſheweth, how greatly hee feared and trembled at the apprehenſion of it, and to the ſetting forth of this his extream feare he uſeth all this oratory. For ſuch feare pierceth the very inward parts of the body and the bones, and makes the lips to quiver. But to feare thus at the apprehenſion of Gods wrath for ſin hath a good effect, when the ſaid judgements come, hee that feareth thus hath reſt and comfort. Some think, that the Prophet ſpake thus, as knowing that hee ſhould bee taken out of this life, and ſo bee at reſt before the execution of this great judgement; ſo indeed it hath beene with ſome of the good ſervants of God, as with Joſiah, and Abijam the onely good ſon of Jeroboam before, and Eſai. 57. 1. and Auguſtine a little before the Vandals ſacking of his city of Hippo, departed alſo to his reſt, and ſo doubtleſſe did Habakkuk, for he propheſied in the dayes of Manaſſeh, from whence to the deſtruction of the City by the Caldees were 50 yeares. But the meaning of the Prophet here is not, that he ſhould reſt by death, but both hee and whoſoever elſe trembles Note. at the Word of God, threatning judgements for ſinne at any time, ſhall have reſt, when others are full of trouble. See Eſai. 66. 2. and Joſiah being thus affected, when hee heard the threatnings of the Law, was comforted, ſee alſo Mat. 11. 28. Pſal. 51. For the laſt words of the verſe, they ſet forth the Lords bringing of the Caldees againſt Judah for their ſins, at what time, although the faithfull ſhall have comfort, yet the multitude of the wicked ſhall ſee nothing but horrour and miſery by troopes coming againſt them to deſtroy and take them for captives, ſo that the people to whom he comes up, are the Jews, and he of the Lord, with whoſe power the Caldees being armed ſhould come againſt them and ſo be unreſiſtable.

V. 17. Although the figtree bloſſome not, and no fruit be on the vines, &c. Here the Prophet further ſheweth the benefit, that ſhould redound to him to every one that trembles at Gods judgements in the greateſt want and of all things, when the dearth by droughts and devaſtation made by enemies V. 18. in the land is greateſt, which is meant by theſe words, it was to rejoice
V. 19. and have joy in the Lord. For hee is my ſtrength, and will make my feet like hindes feet, and hee will make me walke upon mine high places, where hee ſpeaks in the words of David, Pſal. 18. 2 Sam. 22. 34. In ſaying, God is my ſtrength, hee meaneth, to ſtrengthen mee to beare any ſufferings, that hee layeth upon me, and in ſaying, hee maketh my feet like hindes feet, and to walke in my high places, a pacifick and quiet eſtate, wherein the land of Judea ſhould be againe, ſo that a man might ſecurely walke up and down therein, ſo Gualter; or rather by theſe words hee denoteth the high converſation of the faithfull, through which it comes to paſſe, that they have joy in the Lord amidſt the miſeries of this world, making them to ſeem nothing to them, as that which is done below toucheth not him, that converſeth farre above, for their converſation is in heaven, Phil. 3. 20. above the altitudes of the earth, Eſa. 58. 14. as hee had ſaid chap. 2. 1. that hee would get him up to the tower. And the compariſon taken from the hinde

hinde is apt to expreſſe this, it being a beaſt moſt light of foot and ſoone mounted up to the top of the higheſt hils. To him that excelleth on Neginoth, ſee this often prefixed before Pſalms, but here it is put after, being by ſome, ſaith Calvin, underſtood of God, who is præfectus, or Calvin. over the holy ſongs made, and ſung by his ſervants unto him, but rather to be underſtood of the Prophet himſelfe, who by Gods mercy towards him being made to rejoice in the midſt of miſery concludeth that this his elevation and ſtrengthening ſhould be to make him abound or excel in praiſing God upon ſtringed inſtruments of muſick, hereby Note.
alſo teaching us, that this ſhould bee the effect of Gods great mercies towards us, to make the harmony of praiſe therefore to ſound in his ears, as new matter of praiſe is from time to time ſupplyed unto us.

Having thus by Gods aſſiſtance gone through the prayer of Habakkuk ſo profound in the ſenſe, let me, before I paſſe on to the next Prophet (judicious reader) acquaint thee with another expoſition more myſticall made hereupon by Lyra, underſtanding it for the moſt part, as a propheſie touching Chriſt, in declaring which hee proceedeth thus. The prayer of Habakkuk, of ignorances, it is thus intituled, becauſe through ignorance and error ſuch groſſe idolatry was committed, and upon the publiſhing of the Goſpell hee foreſaw, that many errors would ariſe in the Church of Chriſt, for which hee begins thus, I heard thy ſpeech and was afraid, through reverence of that great myſtery of Chriſts incarnation touched upon ch. 2. 20. the Lord is in his holy Temple, for his body is ſaid Job. 2: to be his Temple, in which hee was by being incarnate, and to know this to come the Prophet attained by hearing it from God. Verſ. 3. God V. 3. came from Teman, that is, the ſouth, to which part when the Sunne gets, it ſhines moſt as being noontide: and the holy One from Mount Paran, that is, a dark mountaine, it being meant, that all things touching our redemption by Chriſt were in darkneſſe hidden under types and figures, till that hee came and ſhone as the Sun at noon day, that the heavens were filled with his glory, and the earth with his praiſe, the Angels ſinging glory to God on high, on earth peace and good will towards men; For the hornes coming out of his hands, and the hiding of his power there, hereby was foretold his ſuffering death upon the Croſſe, when his hands were ſtretched out, and his power to ſave himſelfe for a time lay hid, then his enemies having their will of him. Verſ. 5. Before him went the Peſtilence and burning coals at his feet. Vulgar, Before him death and the devill at his feet; that is, hee ſuffered death, and ſo the Devill was deſtroyed, Heb. 2.15. and lay as caſt at his feet. For the next words verſ. 6. to ſet forth his V. 6. power the more, hee recounts divers other acts thereof of old, hee ſtood and meaſured the earth, by dividing it and giving it to the Tribes, &c, to verſ. 13. where againe hee returnes to Chriſt, touching whoſe power he had ſaid, that it was hid, when hee hung upon the Croſſe.

V. 13. But now hee ſaith againe, thou wenteſt forth for the ſalvation of thy people, that is, in conquering and ſubduing in Chriſts name Countreys and Nations by the preaching of the Goſpell, then the Divell, whoſe force was before broken at his death, was actually caſt downe amongſt the heathen, and lay wounded, idolatry being beaten downe every where, and the deceits of the Divell and idolatrous Prieſts his Miniſters being thus denuded and laid open to make them odious, as one having his cloathes ſtript off to the neck, hath his ſhamefull parts diſcovered, bringing to him great confuſion.

V. 14. Thou didſt curſe his ſcepters and the head of his warriours, that is, the Divell ſtill ſeeking to advance his Scepter by making warre ſpiritually againſt the faithfull, as it is ſaid, Epheſ. 6. 12. by the power of Chriſt hee was beaten downe ſo, and is from time to time, that hee cannot prevaile againſt the faithfull, but is overcome by them being armed with the armour of the Spirit, They came out to ſcatter and devoure mee V. 15. ſecretly. Verſ. 15. Thou didſt walke through the Sea with thine horſes, a metaphorical ſpeech, to ſet forth the many troubles of the faithfull by reaſon of their enemies like a Sea of waters ready to overwhelm them, and in ſpeaking thus hee alludes againe to the red Sea, ſo mightily by God divided, and then brought againe upon the Egyptians: for calamities of Gods people are often ſet forth by waters, and in the former words, the violent proceedings of the wicked enemies of the Church are ſet forth, and the Divels ſubtle ſtratagems deſtroying in ſecret, thoſe that are not aware of them.

V. 16. When I beard, my belly trembled, &c. that is, the things before ſpoken touching Chriſts paſſion, as his ſoule was heavy to the death before it, ſo the Prophet was extreamly troubled at it; when hee heard of it to V. 18. come, and beleeved it, yet I will rejoice, ſaith he, in the Lord, verſ. 8. for the good effect following upon Chriſts paſſion, viz. Salvation to his people, although as verſ. 17. the fig tree budded not, neither did the Vine beare fruit, that is, the Nation of the Jewes often ſet forth by the name of a Vine or fig tree: though the flock bee cut off, that is, from being V. 19. the Church of God. For God is my ſtrength, and makes my feet as hindes feet, &c. that I may ſoone come to my deſired bleſſedneſſe, and bee filled with matter of praiſe and ſinging to God in the heavenly quire for ever, wherein hee concludes in the words of David, and hath often Selah, a note of things diligently to be attended to, as being of great conſequence, ſo as none other holy Writer elſe hath it, further to ſhew, that this prayer is like one of Davids, ſetting forth the myſteries of the Goſpell.

ZEPHANIAH:

CHAP. I.

Zephaniah, ſaith Jerome, ſignifieth according to ſome a Hieron. watch tower, according to others, the ſecret of God, both which notably agreed unto him, for as a Prophet he was a watchman, for ſo Ezek. 3. that Prophet was alſo called, and God revealeth his ſecrets to his ſervants the Prophets. Here the pedegree of Zephaniah V. 1. is firſt ſet down, to ſhew that he came of parentage of good note, as alſo Eſay did, otherwiſe he would not certainly have named not only his father, but alſo his grandfather and great-grandfather, &c. from whence Gualter gathereth that Gualter. the Lord ſtirred up men of all ſorts to propheſie, ſometime ſuch as were nobly deſcended, ſometime the ſons of Prieſts, as Jeremiah, and ſometime men of the meaner ſort, as Amos, to ſhew, that he beareth an equall reſpect to all ſorts, Note. namely, to ſuch amongſt them as fear him, and is no reſpecter of perſons, that no miniſter of his might be deſpiſed for his parentage, or low condition formerly, and that none might think themſelves too good to be of this calling, and laſtly that all ſorts having lights of their own condition might be the more moved to the obedience of Gods will. For the time of his propheſying, it was in the dayes of Joſiah, at what time Jeremiah propheſied alſo, which is to be noted becauſe he was a moſt godly King, but by Zephanies threatning of judgments now it ſeems that the people for the moſt part were corrupt, notwithſtanding all his godly care, and ſo they will be in the reign of the Note. beſt Kings, wherefore too much diligence and circumſpection cannot be uſed by godly Magiſtrates to beat down ſin, ſo that there is need at all times of the greateſt zeal hereabout. Yet by ſome it is thought that Zephaniah propheſied thus by way of threatning Judgements before the 18 year of Joſiah, and con-ſequently before his beating down of Idolatry, and I know no reaſon to deny that that this Prophet ſpake as here followeth, before his deſtroying of Idols, but that was not anno 18, but the 12 of his raign, 2 Chron. 34. 3. yet moſt probably the people for the moſt part by his godly care were only reformed outwardly, not in heart, as appears by their ready falling to Idolatry again in the dayes of his ſons immediately after his death.

V. 2. I will conſume all things of the land : a threatning againſt Judah much like unto
V. 4. that Hoſ. 4. only here is more added againſt the Chemarims, rendred by Jerome ædituos, the keepers of the houſe, by which name he calleth the Prieſts of Idols in way of diſgrace, and he addeth with the Prieſts, that the Prieſts of the Lord, who ſerved both him and Idols alſo, might know that their wayes were alike diſpleaſing to the Lord with the wayes of the profeſſed Prieſts of Idols, V. 5. as is further ſhewed, v. 5. in his ſaying, that ſwears by the name of the Lord and of Malchom, which was the Idol of the Ammonites, for they were ſuch as ſerved them both, their ſwearing by both being named, as a ſign of ſerving them both.

Touching Chemarim, ſee more 2 King. 23. it comes of Chamar, to heat or to be black, intimating that they put on black cloaths and were kindlers of fires, for Idolatrous ſacrifices, an inferiour order to Prieſts, called otherwiſe Myſtæ, being as houſhold Chaplains. For their worſhiping of the hoaſt of heaven upon the houſe top, here alſo ſpoken of, it hath been often mentioned before, this hoaſt was the Sun, Moon and Stars, and they had Battlements upon their houſe tops to walke upon and there they bowed themſelves and made oblations to them.

V. 7. Hold thy peace at the preſence of the Lord, for he hath prepared a ſacrifice : This is ſpoken in way of reproofe of the wicked ſwearers before ſpoken of, and to make them whiſt and ſilent from ſuch wicked words, he threatned them with deſtruction under the name of a ſacrifice, for which beaſts were killed, meaning, that thus they ſhould be killed up, and have their bloud ſhed by the Caldees, ſee the like threatned in the ſame terms, Eſay 34. 6.

V. 8. I will puniſh the Kings children and ſuch as are cloathed with ſtrange apparell : Here he ſheweth that the judgment by the Caldees ſhould be in particular upon the ſons of Joſiah, Jehoiakim, and Jehoiakin, who degenerated from their fathers piety and were notorious for their Idolatry, and therefore delivered into their enemies hands. By ſtrange apparell is moſt commonly underſtood apparell made after the faſhion of other countries, unto which vain men are much addicted, eſpecially at Court, but women more, from whom ſo many new faſhions come into the country, and truly this cannot be without ſin, it being as a banner to diſplay the levity and pride of the heart. But becauſe the argument in hand is a reproof of Idolatry and the Jews are not noted by any writer to have altered the faſhion of their apparell, I rather hold with them, that by ſtrange apparell here underſtand ſome kind of veſtments uſed in the worſhip of Idols. For as God appointed apparell for Aaron and his ſons to be uſed in their miniſtration before him, and David a pious King put on a linnen Ephod, therein dancing before the Ark, ſo the Devill Gods ape would have his Miniſters ſerve him in worſhiping Idols in garments peculiar to ſuch ſuperſtition, as appeareth in that which Jehu ſpake touching the worſhipers 2 King. 10,22. of Baal, Goe into the Veſtry and bring forth veſtments : And ſince that Chriſtians degenerated to Image-worſhiping, they fell to uſing ſtrange apparell in their worſhip, Copes, Surpleſſes, &c. and divers orders of their religious perſons uſe peculiar veſtments, as the black Fryers and the white, and the Capuchins, placing great holineſſe in them, and even we of the Church of England muſt cry every one of us peccavi, in that after the light breaking out amongſt us we were ſtill ſetled ſo long upon theſe Lees. What a vanity this was Julius 2.
Gualter. Pope of Rome, himſelf ſometime ſhewed, as Gualter hath it, when in a hot Summers day two Cardinals coming in their Cardinals apparell to viſit him, he having put off for the heat of the weather his pontificall apparell, he would have them do the like, and having done it, ſaid, What would the people ſay if they ſhould ſee us thus to walk through Rome, would they not ſay we were mad? and they anſwering yes, he replyed, we ſee then how much we are beholding to our apparell that procures us ſo great reverence. But we learn here, that it is not only vanity but wickedneſſe, that God will viſit, yet the uſe of different apparell in the Miniſters of God from other men, as an Enſign of their calling, which is moſt grave and furtheſt from levity or pride, is not to be condemned but commended, and they are to be blamed, who being Prophets affect to habit themſelves more like unto other men, then the Elders that have been before them, whoſe practice ſhould be exemplary unto them. For a Prophets going in a different garment from other men it is plain that of old they did, as Elijah in his mantle, and Samuel, and John Baptiſts garments are deſcribed, and Chryſoſtome wiſheth that it had been recorded in what apparell the Apoſtles went, ſo much did he affect to conform himſelf to the moſt ancient and beſt patterns. And indeed if change of faſhions in apparell in any be taxable by this place, I ſee not how ſuch miniſters ſhall eſcape cenſure as now adayes goe from grave habiting of themſelves, as hath been anciently uſed by men of our calling, to the faſhions of other men of the world, and not only ſo, but by their examples teach the people to deride and vilipend ſuch of their brethren as keep conſtantly to their ancient moſt grave way of habiting themſelves. The Judge keeps him to his habit, the Counſellour to his, and Aldermen in Corporations to theirs, why then ſhould not the Miniſter, but as being aſhamed of it caſt it off preferring a confuſed going with the multitude, from whom God hath ſeparated and choſen him peculiarly to ſtand before him?

Note.

V. 9. All thoſe that leap on the threſhold, and fill their Maſters houſes with violence and deceit: Here other ſins are ſet forth which God will puniſh, the word rendred leaping ſignifieth dancing or paſſing or leaping over, whereupon ſome think that hereby is denoted the ſuperſtition of the Philiſtims, that after the fall of Dagon trod not upon the threſhold of his houſe, which ſuperſtition it is not improbable but that the Jewes prone to the ſuperſtitions of all Nations uſed alſo. Others think that the readineſſe of wicked ſervants to run and goe in wayes of oppreſſion againſt poor men that were in their danger, is here pointed at, becauſe it is ſaid, to fill their Maſters houſes with violence, when they bad them goe they made ſuch haſte that they leaped, and being over the threſhold and gotten into the houſe, fetched out a pledge or took a diſtreſſe before the poor debter was aware to ſhut the doore. Calvin ſaith that he doubts not but that hereby the Prophet meant the readineſs of the ſervants of wicked Princes to humor their Lord in their oppreſſions of the poor, to whoſe houſes they came as victors proudly bearing themſelves as maſters over them. For of Princes he had ſpoken before, v.8. and threatned them, now he alſo threatneth their wicked ſervants: whence we may note that ſouldiers who come at their Maſters or Generals appointment into mens houſes, and there take power upon them, as if they were maſters of them, as too many doe now adays, ſhal be viſited for by Gods judgments as wel as they that ſet them awork when neceſſity requires it; I grant they may come amongſt the people of the Country being friends in a friendly and ſubmiſſe way, acknowledging their hoaſt, under whoſe roof they come, being tender of oppreſſing him, but who ſo doth otherwiſe is here ſentenced as a great offender, and the time ſhall come that he ſhall bear his ſin. Thus in following Calvin. But for the Expoſition firſt mentioned, which he rejecteth as frigid, to me it ſeems worthy the conſidering, becauſe the Prophet is in deſcribing the manners of Idolaters, and having ſpoken of their ſuperſtition in apparell, why may it not be thought that he here addeth another ſuperſtition in leaping over the threſhold of the idols houſe? If the next words, which fill their maſters houſes with violence and deceit, ſhall ſeem to make againſt it, Hebr. it is filling their Lords houſes, and it may well be taken as ſpoken of the Idols which they had choſen for their Lords and Gods, the true God being forſaken. For it is well known the Prieſts and Chamerims of thoſe Gods uſed fraudulent means to inrich their Temples, amongſt which the Temple of Apollo was moſt famous for exceeding great treaſures of gold and ſilver, and unto deceit violence was added, whereby to bring in this wealth, it being for the moſt part raked together out of the ſpoils of many in warre and dedicated to thoſe falſe Gods.

V. 10. There ſhall be a noiſe of a cry from the fiſh-gate, &c. Here the Prophet comes by the effects to ſhew how great the judgment of their enemies coming upon them in Jeruſalem, ſhould be, it ſhould make them cry from the entring of the City 2 King.23. which was the fiſh gate, of which ſee Ezra 3. to the ſecond, where Huldah the Propheteſſe dwelt, the one, as Jerome ſaith, being next to the Sea, the other at the ſecond wall of the City, and from thence the cry went to Mount Zion, ſet forth by the name of the hills, and the moaning is in all parts, that they might not think in any place to eſcape.

V. 11. Howl ye inhabitants of Makteſh, Hebr. Machteſh, ſignifying a morter wherein Calvin. ſpices and other things are beaten, or any hollow thing, for which Calvin hath, habitatores concavi, Vulg. pila, and Calvin underſtands it of ſome lower part of the City in the middle where Merchants dwelt, and therefore might ſeem to be more ſecure: and to make this the more probable, he turns the next words by Merchants, and argueth from the laſt words, all that bear ſilver are cut off, for ſilver is not more ſtirring amongſt any then Merchants, Call all Hieron. ye laden with ſilver, Vulg. involuti argento, I prefer that of Jerom, who underſtands it as ſhewing that the Jews ſhould be powned in every place by their enemies, as in a morter, being in the next words called Canaanites for their Idolatries, whereby they were made like the old inhabitants of the land, which ſhould now alſo ſpue them out as it did the Canaanites; by their being laden or wrapt about with ſilver he ſets forth their riches by wicked means acquired. In a word, he ſheweth that Jeruſalem ſhould be all made as a morter in which they ſhould be beaten to pieces, even the greateſt and wealthieſt of them.

V. 12. I will ſearch Jeruſalem with candles: this is added, ſaith Calvin, to ſhew that Calvin. in the day when enemies ſhal ſpoil Jeruſalem, no treaſure ſhall lye ſo hidden in darkeſt places but it ſhall be found out and taken away. And he chargeth them with being ſetled upon their lees, to ſhew their great ſecurity and contempt of Gods judgments threatned, whereby they were no more moved to repentance then the lees of wine being once ſetled there is any ſtirring in that veſſell afterwards, and the ground of all this was their atheiſm, whereby they thought that God did neither good nor evill, as not caring for humane affairs, how Note. they went, well or ill, which is in effect to deny God. Hereby alſo is meant that none can ſo cunningly hide their ſins but God will finde them out, although acted in the greateſt darkneſſe, and he takes a ſimilitude from one ſearching with a candle to ſpeak the more to our capacities, becauſe men do V.14,15. ſo when they would find out any thing in the dark; *v.*14,15. are the ſame with Joel 2.11.

V. 17. They ſhall walk like blind men, becauſe as a blind man ſeeth no end of his way, ſo they being in ſtraights ſhould ſeek to get out, and conſult and ſtudy how, but as blinded in their underſtandings not find any means, but continue to walk up and down in them, as in a maze. And this he ſheweth ſhould come juſtly upon them becauſe they had ſinned againſt the Lord, who by his Prophets had often given them good counſell, but they would not follow it, ſought to open their eyes by the light of his word, but they ſhut them againſt Note. it. And to the like judgment they all may look to be given over that ſinne againſt the Lord likewiſe by ſhutting their eyes, or ſuffering themſelves in the midſt of the light of the Goſpel to be blinded by the Devil, as all the children of diſobedience do, they ſhall for this walk as blind men another day, being involved in miſery and never ſeeing a way how to get out.

CHAP. II.

V. 2. B*Efore the decree bring forth, and the day paſſe away as chaffe:* The Prophet having in the former chapter threatned them with Gods judgments now exhorteth them by repentance to prevent them in time, before the decree brings forth, that is, the decree of bringing deſtruction upon you publiſhed by me and other Prophets which is as a woman with child, but the child is long hid in the womb, but at length is brought forth, ſo will it be with this decree although ye ſee nothing now but only hear words, that ye think to be as wind, it ſhall ſhortly bring forth terrible deſtruction unto you: For theſe words, and the day paſſe away as chaffe: Hebr. it is, as chaffe paſſeth the day, the ſenſe being, that day being come as chaffe ſuddenly is blown away by the winde, although it be a great heap, ſo ſhall ye in a ſhort time, the Lord will not be long in bringing you into your enemies hands, and ſo ſcattering you into other Nations, although your power may ſeem unto you to be great, and that no forces raiſed againſt you can ſo ſuddenly bring you to deſtruction.

V. 3. Seek ye the Lord all ye meek of the earth, ſeek righteouſneſſe: Having bidden them gather themſelves again and again, *v.*1. that is, to the Lord by turning to him to prevent the judgments that were coming v. 2. now finding that the multitude would not be moved by all that he could ſay, he turns himſelf to ſome few amongſt them, viz. the meek, that did righteouſneſſe, not being carryed away by the common ſtream to the contrary, and exhorts them to conſtancy. For he ſets them forth to be ſuch as did righteouſneſſe, and yet ſtirreth them up hereunto, as needing continuall exhortations to this end, as being by humane frailty otherwiſe ready to faint, ſeeing them moſt averſe from it, and themſelves as much indangered in the world as them. Whence note, that even the beſt have alwayes need to hear the word of God, that this their godly care may be continued, and that which is good in them increaſed, and evill beaten down: it may be ye ſhall be hid in the day of the Lords anger: that is, when his judgments come upon the Land, ye happily ſhall be exempt from them, and he ſaith not that they certainly ſhould, leſt they ſhould expect it as a due, and not coming from Gods grace. For ſuch is the modeſty of the righteous, that when they doe that which is required, they challenge nothing at Gods hands as due therefore, but all this notwithſtanding depend upon his grace only, becauſe they have done but their duty, and their righteouſneſſe is mixed with many imperfections, there being yet this difference in reſpect of everlaſting ſalvation and being temporall preſerved, for that they look certainly by faith for this if God pleaſeth to favour them ſo far, being otherwiſe ready to bear patiently any ſufferings in this world, beleeving that a greater good in the world to come ſhall hereby be wrought unto them, yet Jeremy and Baruch and Daniel, and the three Children were temporally ſaved in times of greateſt danger even miraculouſly, and ſo are many more from time to time.

Note.

V. 4. For Gaza ſhall be forſaken and Aſhkelon a deſolation: Having put the faithfull in hope of being preſerved in the evill day, he now proceedeth to propheſie of the deſtruction of their enemies, of which the Philiſtims were the chief, and therefore are firſt threatned. For there were two things that might trouble them in the day of Jeruſalems deſtruction by the Caldees.

1. Becauſe no difference was then likely to be made betwixt the righteous and the wicked, all pell mell then ſuffering at the hands of their enemies, to think upon which was a great diſcouragement unto them; againſt this comfort hath been already ſpoken in ſaying, peradventure they ſhall be hid.

2. Becauſe the people of God being ſubdued and captivated, their heathen enemies that would inſult over them were ſpared, againſt this ſcandall oppoſed, which is here ſaid.

Gualter.

The Philiſtims ſhould ſuffer alſo, and which was more, after a time the Jews who could never get their land into poſſeſſion before ſhould poſſeſſe it, *v.*7. And he mentioneth the Lordſhips of the Philiſtims which were five, in particular, all but one, Gaza, Aſhkelon, Aſhdod, Ekron, but Gath is omitted, of which place Goliah was; it may be, as Gualter conjectureth, becauſe then obſcure and brought under one of the other, as the Heptarchy in England was ſometime brought to an Hexarchy, then a Duarchy, and finally a Monarchy. And it is to be noted, that the Prophet in ſetting forth the ſame judgment uſeth an elegancie of ſpeech threatning it in one terme to one, and in another to another by a Paronomaſie in the laſt and the firſt, עזה-עזובה Gaza ſhall be forſaken, and עקרון-יעמר Ekron ſhall be rooted, whereby it appears, that although the Prophets many times ſpeak plainly, yet their ſpeeches to the people and ſermons were not uttered in a rude, but a well poliſht phraſe, becoming the gravity of that which they taught, againſt them that condemne all eloquence in preaching, becauſe humane eloquence is denyed, 1 *Cor.*2.1.

V. 5. The Nation of the Cherethites, thus the Philiſtims altogether are called, becauſe they were cutters off, or deſtroyers, as the word Chereth ſignifieth: and from hence one band of men about David was called Cherethites, becauſe they were his ſtouteſt ſouldiers, and commonly did moſt execution upon the enemies whenſoever they went out. And in ſpeaking thus of the Philiſtims he intimateth their great valour whereby hitherto they kept themſelves unſubdued by other Nations, although they had many times been overthrown in battle: but now he ſheweth that ſo great a deſtruction ſhould come upon them, that their land ſhould be left deſolate, ſo that if they rightly conſidered it, they had no cauſe to rejoice at the fall of the Jews, after which their own muſt ſo ſoon follow: the word of the Lord is againſt you, O Canaan; the Philiſtims are alſo thus called, both becauſe they dwelt in that land aſſigned to Iſrael, but could not by Iſrael be expelled, but were purpoſely left to be as thorns and goads to the Iſraelites for their ſins, and to intimate that they ſhould be as the Canaanites ſpued out of the Land never to be replanted therein again. The Hebrews by the Cherethites underſtand a part of Philiſtia ſpoken of 1 *Sam.*30.14. But Jerome, as hath been ſaid, and Vulg. Lat. hath it gens perditorum, and the text is plain, for the Philiſtims in generall meant here, becauſe it is added for explication, the land of the Philiſtims.

Judg. 2.

V. 7. 1 Macc. 10. 11, 13. The coaſt ſhall be for the remnant of the houſe of Judah, they ſhall feed thereupon in the houſes of Aſhkelon, they ſhall lye down in the evening: This was fulfilled in the time of the Maccabees, when Simon the brother of Judas is ſaid to have taken Gaza and Aſhkelon, together with his brother Jonathan, and the evening is ſpoken of, and that they ſhould lye down then, in oppoſition to that which was ſaid *v.*4. of the Philiſtims being deſtroyed at noon-day, the meaning being, that whereas they could not be ſafe in the very midſt of the day, when there is leſſe danger of being ſurpriſed by enemies, all men ſtanding upon their guard, theſe new inhabitants ſhould be ſafe both day and night, reſting quietly without any thing to terrifie them, as they had walked abroad in ſafety in the day.

V. 9. Moab ſhall be as Sodom, and the children of Ammon as Gomorrah, and the reſidue of my people ſhall ſpoil them: Here to the greater comfort of the faithfull amongſt the Jews, two peoples more infeſt enemies of the Jews are alſo propheſied againſt after the ſame manner or more terribly. But that it might not be expected that they ſhould be deſtroyed by fire from heaven, he addeth for explication, that all their land ſhould be nettles and ſalt pits, as Strabo ſaith, that it was, becoming moſt barren ever after their carrying away, and coming to be the poſſeſſion of the Arabians the great Turks Subjects. So that this is not to be underſtood of the Jews returning out of captivity, that they ſhould poſſeſſe this land as the Philiſtims, but of ſome of them under the Goſpel, who ſhould take it into poſſeſſion for Chriſt by ſubduing them to the faith, for this was done and herein they continued, till that by Mahomet, being corrupted they fell away again. Thus Gualter. But whereas he denyeth that the Jews poſſeſſing of the Moabites and Ammonites countries is to be underſtood as of the Philiſtims, the contrary appeareth 1 *Mac.*5,6,7. where it is ſaid that Judas Maccabæus went againſt the Ammonites, and after many hot battles fought ſubdued them. And when Alexander was King of the Jews, Joſephus fil.Gorionis ſaith, that he ſubdued Edom, and Ammon, and Moab, &c. and Lyra followeth this. Joſeph.Gor. lib. 4.c.12.

V. 11. He will famiſh all the gods of the earth: Vulg. he ſhall attenuate, Calvin, he hath conſumed: but the word ſignifieth to attenuate or to make lean, the deſtroying of Idols and Idolatrie in all places indeed being meant, to ſhew which it is added, men ſhall worſhip him, even the Iſles of the earth, being by Lyra firſt expounded of ſome of all Countries, who being drawn by the fame of the Temple at Jeruſalem, ſhould come thither to worſhip the true God, Idols being left, *Act.*2. then of the fall of Idols in the time of the Goſpel in all Countries, and the coming in of all both farre and near to worſhip God and his ſon Jeſus Chriſt, which converſion, becauſe it ſhould not be ſo univerſall but that ſome would ſtill continue hardened in their ſuperſtition, Lyra.

V. 12. He addeth further, Tee Ethiopians ſhall be deſtroyed by my ſword: But in joining this to the Propheſie of the converſion of the Nations, I cannot aſſent unto him becauſe it is a continuation of his propheſying againſt the Jews enemies, beginning *v.*4. and here, and *v.*12,13. continued againſt the Ethiopians and Aſſyrians, and becauſe there is a plain propheſie of the converſion of the Ethiopians in the Pſalms, they of Ethiopia ſhall ſtretch out their hands to thee, and in this propheſie, *c.*3.10. wherefore he proceedeth here in comforting the Jewes by telling them of Gods judgments, that ſhould come upon all their V.13,14,&c inſulting and cruell enemies, briefly upon Ethiopia joining to Egypt, and more largely upon Aſſyria, of the overthrow whereof propheſied of, becauſe ſo much hath been ſaid already upon Nahum, I will here ſay no more, eſpecially becauſe all is eaſie to be underſtood.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. WOE to her that is filthy and polluted, to the oppreſſing City, Vulg. Wo to the provoking and redeemed City, to the Dove. For מוראה is derived from מרה ſignifying to change or to be diſobedient, but no where put for filthy, but נגאלה is either polluted or redeemed. יונה if a Nown a Dove, if a Participle oppreſſing, Jeruſalem is by the conſent of all hereby meant, that alwayes provoked God by her groſſe ſins, and may well therefore have this epithite of provoking and for the ſame reaſon polluted, becauſe ſin polluteth; or if it be rendred redeemed, ſhee was redeemed many times from great dangers, and thus moſt probably ſhe is ſet forth by way of exprobration being one that God had done ſo much for, but why it ſhould rather be dove then oppreſſing, I ſee not, becauſe although the pure and undefiled ſpouſe of Chriſt be ſometime ſo called, yet a polluted Church no where.

V. 3. Her Judges are evening wolves, they gnaw not the bones till the morning. Hebr. They break not the bones to the morning: ſome, they leave not: but to hold us to the ſignification of the word, the Judges are hereby accuſed to be unreaſonable bribe-takers, devouring ſuddenly all that they can get, even as hunger-ſterved Wolves that have eaten nothing all day, coming in the evening and getting a prey devour it preſently, both fleſh and bones, ſo that hereby men moſt greedy of gain and unſatiable are ſet forth, that ſtand not breaking the bones of ſuch as come unto them about their caſes unto the morning, that is, are not long in devouring all their ſubſtance, for they wil do it quickly either by taking great bribes, or judging againſt them wrongfully if they bribe them not, to their undoing: of the like phraſe ſee before, *Mich.*3.2,3.

V. 4. Her Prieſts have done violence to the Law: Heb. have contemned, removed, or caſt away the Law, as Pſal. 50. 17. it is ſaid, thou caſteſt my words behind thee, they then at whoſe mouth others ſhould inquire the law rejected it, and were not themſelves ordered by it, which was a great abomination. The word חמס Note. alſo here uſed, ſignifieth rapere, to raviſh; ſo that here is another great ſin in the Prieſts noted to corrupt the law by falſe gloſſing upon it, as did the Phariſees and all ſuch preachers as turn the word of God to any other ſenſe then that intended by the Holy Ghoſt.

V. 5. Gualter. Every morning he bringeth his judgment to light, but the unjuſt knoweth no ſhame: In this verſe, as Gualter ſaith, an objection that might by the Jews be made is anſwered thus. God, ſay they, is in the midſt of his Temple amongſt us to defend us, and by being there, ſheweth that he beareth a great love towards us whatſoever thou ſayeſt in way of reproof and threatning us. Anſw. It is true he is in the midſt of his houſe indeed, and of you, but it is not to approve your evill doings, but to teach you his will, and for your walking contrary to it, to lay his judgments upon you, for this is meant by his judgments bringing forth as the light morning by morning. But the unjuſt know no ſhame, that is, lay neither his word nor judgments to heart, to be aſhamed, under a pretence of piety and nearneſſe to God to do ſo wickedly, they hold God to be in the midſt of them to behold their ſins, but are not aſhamed even in his ſight to commit them.

V. 6. I have cut off the Nations, their towers are deſolate: Here the Prophet ſheweth that beſides his word which was continually amongſt them, whereby they might have been reformed, he ſet divers examples of his judgments upon others before them, whereby they might have been made to fear, to turn from their ſins leſt they ſhould likewiſe be proceeded againſt. By his cutting off Nations he meaneth the Egyptians and Canaanites of old deſtroyed before them, and more lately divers Countries ſubdued by the Aſſyrians, whereof 2 King. 19. Senacherib boaſted when he came againſt Jeruſalem, and even Iſrael it ſelf carryed away captive by Salmanaſar. But by none of all theſe were they moved, but hardened their hearts to goe on ſtill in their ſins.

V. 7. I ſaid ſurely thou wouldſt fear me, ſo ſhouldſt not thou be cut off: the Lord expected that Judah ſhould have taken warning by theſe examples, that ſhe might have ſtood ſtill, but ſhe profited nothing hereby, but rather waxed worſe and worſe.

V. 8. Therefore wait upon me, ſaith the Lord, till the day that I riſe up to the prey: Vulg. therefore wait for me in the day of my reſurrection hereafter: and the verſe before going, I ſaid, yet thou ſhalt fear me, and receive diſcipline, and her habitation ſhall not Lyra. periſh for all in which I have viſited her, expounded by Lyra, of the converſion of ſome of the Jews by the preaching of the Goſpel, which is hereby ſhewed ſhould be after that heavy viſitation by the Babylonians, they not being thereby quite cut off, as it might have been feared. But when ſome beleeved, but they were for the moſt part hardened, ſet forth in the next words, they roſe early and corrupted all their doings, he foreſheweth their long continuance in their infidelity even till towards the end of the world, ſaying, therefore wait for me in the day of my reſurrection, that is, ye ſhall abide in ſin and miſery till towards the end of the world when the dead ſhall riſe againe; but then yee ſhall acknowledge the true Meſſiah and turn to him; and for their riſing early and corrupting themſelves before ſpoken of, he expounds it of their great diligence in perſecuting Chriſt unto the death, about which they went late at night and early in the morning, not ceaſing till they had gotten him crucified. Thus Lyra, and for the rendring of the words in the Vulg. Lat. it agreeth ſo well with the Hebrew, that it cannot be excepted againſt, the word rendred in N. Tr. to the prey, being Hebr. לעד ad uſque, or ad prædam. But Expoſitours generally underſtand v. 7. as hath been ſaid before, the Lord expected that by the means before ſpoken of, the Jews ſhould have been reformed, but loe the contrary, they dayly grew more and more corrupt. Therefore as is ſaid v. 8. they ſhould expect the Lords riſing up againſt them to make a prey of them, or in the time to come to deſtroy them & their city by the Romans, after which he ſaith v.9. I will turn to the people a pure language: intimating the converſion of the Gentiles under the Goſpel, but leſt when judgments ſhould come upon all peoples by Nebuchadnezzar they ſhould deſpair of any ſuch work ever to be wrought amongſt them, he ſaith, my determination is to gather the Nations to poure out mine indignation upon them, as meaning, that great deſtructions ſhould before this paſſe through all Countries by the Caldees, then by the Perſian Kings, after that by the Grecians, and finally by the Romans, laſt of all which ſhould the converſion of the Nations to the Goſpel follow. And this I alſo take to be the beſt becauſe it is the manner of the Prophets in inveighing againſt the wicked Jews by all wayes to aggravate their ſins, and then to threaten them with judgments before he ſpeaketh any comfort, and likewiſe in propheſying againſt other Nations. Now for the pure language to which all Nations ſhould turn, the Jews ſay, that it is the Hebrew tongue which the people of every Country ſhall ſpeak when the true Meſſiah is come and they are converted to him: but hereby nothing elſe is meant, but godly and holy ſpeeches in praiſing of God and Jeſus Chriſt, and praying and confeſſing Jeſus to be the ſon of God and the Saviour of all that beleeve in him in all places, as the next words ſhew, that they may all call upon the Lord and ſerve him with one conſent, but the lip is ſpoken of to intimate the Holy Ghoſt coming down in fiery tongues upon the Apoſtles, in whom he ſent a pure lip unto them, when to all Nations they went preaching to them in their own language, being in them ſanctified or made pure for this end and purpoſe.

V. 10. From beyond the river of Ethiopia my ſuppliants, the diſperſed of my daughter ſhall bring mine offering: Having ſpoken in generall of the Nations that ſhould be converted to Chriſt, here he proceedeth in particular for examples ſake to Ethiopia, and beyond the rivers thereof to ſhew that none were ſo remote, but they ſhould be gathered and joined in ſpirit and tongue to this number. Of which Ethiopia this is ſpoken, is queſtioned by ſome ſtanding for an Ethiopia in India, and by others ſtanding for Ethiopia joining unto Egypt, for Geographers ſpeak of two Countries in the world of this name. But it is moſt commonly taken of Ethiopia Egyptiaca, becauſe that was well known to the Hebrews but the other not, and it was beyond Nilus the great river of Egypt with his 7 ſtreams. And it is not to be doubted but Zephany ſpeaks of the ſame Ethiopia with Eſay ch. 18. of which ſee more in that place. But who are meant by the diſperſed here ſpoken of called the diſperſed of my daughter, whether the Jews, who are commonly thus ſet forth, or the Gentiles here nominated? Sol. It is agreed that the Gentiles are here meant, that is, ſuch amongſt them as were the elected in Gods ſecret counſell to come into the faith of Chriſt, and becauſe they lived amongſt others of the Nations, ſome in one place, ſome in another, they are called the diſperſed, and the daughter of the diſperſed, according to the phraſe often uſed ſetting forth a Congregation, or City, or Nation by the name of a daughter. Note. For offering, which he ſaith they ſhall bring, it is of praiſe and prayer, as Pſal. 50. in the dayly offerings hereof every one that is elect is continually after his converſion, it being ſo inſeparable from faith, that it is ſaid of Saul beleeving, Behold he prayeth, and Rom. 10. How ſhall they call upon him in whom they have not beleeved, which implyeth that every one that beleeveth, calleth upon God, and they call not upon God, is ſaid of the Atheiſts, Pſal. 14.

V. 11. In that day thou ſhalt not be aſhamed for all thy doings wherein thou haſt tranſgreſſed againſt me: By theſe words it ſhould ſeem that not the elect amongſt the Gentiles but the Jews were before ſpoken to: for he ſaith, thou ſhalt be no more haughty becauſe of thy holy Mountain, which cannot be applyed to any but the Jews only, and therefore they are the daughter of his diſperſed, and his ſuppliants before ſpoken of. This indeed muſt needs be ſo, if the ſame were ſpoken of there and in this verſe. But they are plainly diſtinguiſhed, for it is not ſaid, as there, the people, but thou, that is, thou Jew, herein propheſying of the converſion of the Jews after the Gentiles, who might well be aſhamed before of their blindneſſe, infidelity, and malice againſt Chriſt, but being now by faith juſtified, and ſanctified by his grace they ſhould be ſo holy and zealous for the truth, that the ſhame for their former miſ-doings ſhould be done away.

So that it is not meant that one converted is now no more aſhamed of his evill doings paſt: for to the Saints at Rome the Apoſtle ſaith, what fruit had ye Rom.6. of thoſe things whereof ye are now aſhamed? or from henceforth of any evill that he doth, becauſe he is a juſtified perſon, and it is no ſin in him, as the Antino-Note. mians of theſe times fooliſhly contend. For we ought alwayes to be aſhamed and caſt down in our ſelves for groſſe ſins paſt, as the Apoſtle 1 *Tim.*1.15. and 1 Joh. 1. of our imperfections ſtill remaining, as the ſame Apoſtle, *Rom.*7. 2 *Cor.*12. and Jam. 4. to confeſſe them and crave pardon dayly therefore, although our lives now be led ſo blameleſly, that men cannot judge us, neither do we know any thing in our ſelves, as he ſaith, 1 *Cor.*4.4. I will take away from the midſt of thee them that rejoice in thy pride: that is, ſuch as in times paſt gloryed in this, that they were the ſeed of Abraham, and Gods peculiar people, &c. having nothing ſutable to his people in them, but being full of hypocriſie and ſin, inſulting over other Nations only for outward priviledges. And this pride was then taken away when all theſe and the Temple it ſelf, meant by Gods holy Mountain, were not any more confided in, but counted vain things, without uprightneſſe of heart and holineſſe of life, and faith, as was in Abraham.

V. 12. I ſhall alſo leave in the midſt of thee, an afflicted and poor people: Here is ſhewed further, that all their former pride ſhould be beaten down, and their ſins mortified, which ſhould follow upon their ſufferings as the fruit thereof. So that by afflicted and poor, he meaneth poor in ſpirit, and afflicted in ſoul for their V. 13. ſins paſt. And for time to come they ſhall no more doe iniquity or ſpeak lyes, for ſo doth the ſpirit of grace work in them that are ſanctified, as 1 Joh. 3. 9. If Note. any then be workers of iniquity, or lyers, or deceivers, that beleeve in Chriſt, they are no true Jews but counterfeit, *Rom.*2.29. They ſhall feed and lye down, Rom. 5. and none ſhall make them afraid: that is, they ſhall live in reſt and peace, as being then by faith juſtified, and ſo at peace with God: of lying down in reſt and peace for this reaſon ſee alſo *Pſal.*4. and of feeding by faith, *Joh.*6. upon the true manna Chriſt Jeſus.

V. 14. He propheſieth of the joy that ſhould be to the Jews, as Eſay 12.6. c.54.1.
For the fruition of good through Chriſt now beleeved in, and the ceſſation of V. 19. miſery for all time to come, *v.*19. I will ſave her that halteth, and gather her that was driven out, as was before ſaid, *Mic.*4.7.

THE PROPHESIE OF HAGGAI:

THis and the two Prophets following were ſtirred up to propheſie after the Jews return out of Babylon, as was before noted, Ezra 5.1. and here again chap. 1. touching Haggai. And theſe were the laſt Prophets which the Jewes had, till the coming of the great Prophet Chriſt Jeſus. Haggai ſignifieth feſtivus or pleaſant, as Jerome noteth, it cometh of חג a feaſt, and it is a name not unfit for him, at whoſe propheſying the Temple was built, and feſtivals were againe kept with great joy. For the time, when he began, it is ſhewed, verſ. 1. the ſecond year of Da- V. 1. rius, the ſixth moneth the firſt day, of which Darius I have ſaid enough before upon Ezra 5. and of Zerubbabel the Prince and Joſhua the High Prieſt, to whom it is ſpecially directed, as the rulers of all.

Is it time for you (O yee) to dwell in ſeiled houſes (O yee) and this houſe of mine V. 4. to lye waſt? He taxeth the people before for ſaying, the time is not come to build &c. wherein Gualter noteth a double ſin. 1. That in ſaying thus they intima- Gualter.
ted it not to be the Lords will, that his houſe ſhould yet be built, whereas it was their negligence, and not that it would have been unpleaſing to him, that the building thereof ſhould have been gone about long before, although impediments came in the way after Cyrus his making of a Decree for the doing of this work. For God made his will knowne ſufficiently by ſecretly ſtirring up the mind of Cyrus to this work, and therefore when enemies ſtood up to hinder them, they ſhould notwithſtanding have gone on therein, but they contrariwiſe ſhewed great negligence and lukewarmneſſe all the reſt of the time of Cyrus his reign; for it is noted, that the foundation of the houſe was laid An. 2. of their returning from Babylon, neither did the King Ezra 5. countermand their proceeding therein al his days. And although in the days of Artaxerxes it were forbidden, yet it was a foul negligence in the time of this Darius to goe on two yeares and an half more without doing any thing in this work. They ſinned then in their negligence about a thing of ſo great moment, and aggravated their ſin. 1. By laying the fault upon God, ſaying

ſaying in effect if it had been his will, that the Temple ſhould yet have been built, hee would have taken away the impediments. 2. They ſinned in charging them alſo in effect with temerity and raſhneſſe, who went firſt about this work as attempting it before the time was come. They are therefore ſharpely here reproved, and their pride and covetouſneſſe, which made them more to mind worldly things, are taxed. The labour and coſt and fear of enemies made them, that they did nothing towards the building of Gods houſe,but in the meane ſeaſon they could build themſelves ſumptuous houſes, not ſparing for either,which he meaneth by ſaying, is it time for you to dwell in ſeiled houſes?

V. 6. Yee ſow much, but reap little, yee eat, but have not enough. It ſeemeth by this that God puniſhed them by a famine, for their negligence before ſpoken of, and this would Haggai have them lay to heart, it was even againſt their worldly profit to be thus ungodly; and therefore, as they would have Gods bleſſing upon their labours,he ſeeks to move them to goe on in this work,and not Note. to let it lye ſtill neglected. Whence note, that to be remiſſe about Gods worſhip, and the promoting of the right way thereof, is highly diſpleaſing unto V. 7. 8. him, and bringeth a curſe upon mens labours in ſtead of a bleſſing, verſ.7.for the removall of this judgement of famine he exhorteth them to fall to building of the Lords houſe, recounting over again the judgment of drought and famin more largely, for their negligence herein. Then verſ. 12. Zerubbabel and Joſhua, and the people did as Haggai moved them, and had incouragement further from him, and their falling to the work of building is expreſly ſpoken of the 24 day of this moneth, wherein they were exhorted to it the Note. firſt day,to teach all the people of God to doe likewiſe in edifying or building themſelves, and not to defer this moſt neceſſary work from year to year, even from youth to old age,and from health to ſickneſſe.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. IN the 7. moneth the 21 day of the moneth. The Jews having begun to build the Temple, as they were by Haggai ſtirred up, another temptation occurred to hinder them in this work, viz. the conſideration of that, which the Temple had formerly been as it was built by Solomon, and that which it now was likely to be, then ſo large and magnificent, but now much inferiour to that. To incourage them therefore againſt this Haggai hath another word of propheſie put into his mouth,as followeth verſ.2,3.&c. to the 9. that this houſe ſhould be filled with glory, and be more glorious then the former.
Ezra 3. And great need there was, that they ſhould be thus incouraged, becauſe by the foundation laid they ſaw, that it came much ſhort of the former Temple in outward glory, and not that in ſo few dayes as they had now again been in building, (wherein it cannot be conceived, that much could be done, it being but from the 24 day of the 6 month to the 21.of the 7, ſince they began) they could ſee ſuch a difference. Now their diſcouragement might bee from their calling to minde, what other Prophets had propheſied touching the rebuilding of the Temple in a more glorious manner,then that of Solomon, V. 7. as *Eſai.*54. *Ezek.41.&c.* wherefore againſt this he ſaith, verſ.7. Yet once it is a little while, and I will ſhake the heavens and the earth,the Sea and the dry land. Verſ.8.
And I will ſhake all Nations, and the deſire of all Nations ſhall come, and I will fill this houſe with glory: whereby it is meant,that his ſon Jeſus Chriſt ſhould come into this houſe,and in it teach, and ſo from thence the Goſpell ſhould goe out into all Nations,and this ſhould be the glory of this houſe, and not any outward glory ſtanding in ſhining gold and ſilver, and pretious ſtones, but in graces which are far more pretious,then they, wherewith the houſe of God, that is,his Church,is indued,and every true faithfull ſoul, of which it is conſtituted: for their faith is more pretious then gold, 1 Pet. 1. 7. Revel. 3. 18.

For the ſhaking of the heavens here propheſied of, it was when the Angels came down from heaven to bring tidings to the ſhepheards with joy, and ſinging of Chriſts moſt bleſſed birth, and the heavens bare a new ſtar, and at his death the Sun was darkened. For the earth, it was ſhaken by an earthquake, and the opening of the graves, and coming forth of dead bodies at the ſame time: Laſtly, for the Sea, it was ſhaken, when the Iſlands thereof were moved at the Apoſtles Preaching to turn to Chriſt, and to deſtroy idols in all places. And to this the Apoſtle doth apply the ſhaking here ſpoken of, ſaying, that the earth was once before ſhaken, when the Lord deſcended upon Sinai to give the Law with an earthquake, but now it ſhould be ſhaken once more, and the heaven alſo, applyed by him to the aboliſhing of the carnall and earthly ſervice formerly appointed in the Temple by the Lord, that came downe from heaven, but now by his Son coming down from thence, having an end put thereunto, and another ſervice eſtabliſhed, viz. in ſpirit and truth, to continue everlaſtingly. And the deſire of all Nations ſhall come. Thus Chriſt the glory of the ſecond Temple is called, not that the Nations deſired him before he came by his Goſpell amongſt them, for of them it is ſaid, I was found of them that ſought not after me, but becauſe when he was preached amongſt them, they moſt earneſtly deſired him, as in Samaria, Joh. 4. and when his ſtar appeared, the Magi who were the firſt fruits of the Gentiles coming preſently ſo long a journey unto him, and ſo diligently ſeeking to find out the place where he was born, thus Gualter. But Lyra, by the moving of all Nations, underſtands that moving of them by the decree of Auguſtus Cæſar, that all the world ſhould be taxed, before which the Sea and dry land being ſhaken, is by him underſtood of the worlds being brought into ſubjection to the Romans. Againſt the former expoſition of Gualter, maketh the time of Chriſts coming here propheſied of, becauſe it is ſaid firſt theſe commotions ſhall be, then the deſire of all Nations ſhall come, therefore the earthquake at his paſſion and reſurrection, which were after, cannot be meant, nor the eclipſe of the Sun which was then, but only the ſhaking of the heavens before in the coming down of the angels to the ſhepheards, and in the direct motion of the new ſtar. And Julius Obſequens writeth, that in the time of Auguſtus Cæſar about his ſeventh year three Suns appeared in the heavens, which came all together into one. For the ſhaking of the earth Joſephus ſaith, that at the time when Auguſtus Cæſar fought againſt Anthony at Actium, there was ſo great an earthquake, the like unto which had not formerly been, whereby many periſhed, and this was in the 7. year of Herod King of the Jews. For the ſhaking of the Sea and the dry land, it was by the wars made in all places by the Romans in the time of their diviſions under the Triumviri by Land and by Sea, the Iſlands ſet forth by the dry land, according to Auguſtine, not being free. And well may they be underſtood by the dry land, becauſe they were the dry lands in the midſt of Seas ſurrounding them. For the time which he calleth a little while, it was not much above 500 years, which with the Lord is but a little while, ſith 1000 years are with him but as a day. For his being called the deſire of all Nations, the Jews ſeeing this ſo plain an evidence of Jeſus being the Meſſiah, if it be underſtood of him, ſeek by all means to blindfold mens eyes by ſaying, that this is not ſpoken of the Meſſiah, that ſhould come, but of the Gentiles coming, the verb באו here uſed being a plurall, and therefore they read it thus, I will ſhake all Nations, and they ſhall come with the deſire of the Nations, ſupplying the letter ב, and by the deſire of the Nations, underſtanding their deſirable and moſt pretious things, they give this for the ſenſe, they ſhall come with their coſt to beautifie and adorn this Temple, which was partly done by the Perſian Kings and Princes, Ezra 7. and when Herod not thinking the Temple built by Zerubbabel magnificent enough made it more glorious, then that which was firſt built by Solomon, in height, length and breadth, making it equall to it every way, and beſetting it with pretious ſtones, and paving it with gold, and adding another large Court for the Gentiles to come into, of which ſee more in my Preface to the Goſpels, and of the Nations coming as drawn by the fame of the Temple, thus magnificently made to ſee it,and to worſhip here,they ſay it is thus ſpoken. But although it be read,they ſhall come,yet it is not ſaid,with the deſire,but the deſire of all Nations; the meaning being , I will after the commotions before ſpoken of in heaven and earth,&c. move the hearts of the Gentiles,and they ſhall come to him,that they ſhall being come and beleeving deſire unanimouſly above all worldly things,that is,the Meſſiah. And in making out the ſenſe thus, I ſupply nothing but to, which is often in Hebrew underſtood. Or we may ſupply it thus, they ſhal come,and the deſire of all Nations ſhal come.Some nothing moved at this that it is ſaid ובאו,as if it muſt needs be therefore underſtood of the Nations coming, ſay, that a verb plurall may well be joined with a nown ſingular ſetting forth the Meſſiah,becauſe although he be but one,yet two came in him, God and man, or many graces and favours coming to the faithfull with him.

The reader may take it which way he pleaſeth,but to me it ſeemeth beſt to underſtand theſe words,and ſhall come,as hath been ſaid. The Nations ſhall come for devotions ſake to this Temple,as obſcure as it might ſeem to be, ſo as they never did before to that built by Solomon, and beſides the glory, that thus this Temple ſhould have,that deſired and longed for one, the Meſſiah of whom Jacob Gen. 49. 18. ſaid, I have waited for thy ſalvation, and of Simeon it is ſaid, that he waited for the conſolation of Iſrael, ſhall come into it.For there were after this Temple built Act. 2. ſome of all Nations under heaven that came to it for devotions ſake , and Chriſt at 40 days old was brought to the Temple,and afterwards came many times , and taught and wrought miracles there. Thus this houſe was filled with glory,and with greater glory then the former,as followeth,v.9. And that of this filling with glory it is meant,appeareth by the words added, and here I will give peace. For what was the peace in the time of this houſe in comparison of that in Solomons,unleſſe in regard of that which came with Chriſt and by Chriſt the Prince of Peace,externally it being a time of the greateſt and longeſt continuing peace in the time of Auguſtus Ceſar,that ever was ſince Rome Rom. 5. 1. was built,which was many hundreths of years before,and internally of conſcience through peace with God. What little peace there was after this Temple built till now, the hiſtory of the Jews war declares,viz. very little, and if there had been al peace externally,there was not that which could give internall through juſtification from ſin,the greateſt trouble of all others. Some ſaith Lyra,hold,that it is ſaid,the glory of this houſe ſhall be greater,becauſe it ſtood longer a few years then that of Solomon, which is abſurd,ſeeing the glory of an houſe ſtands not in the long continuance,but in the ſplendor of it, and the things belonging to it,in which regard that built by Solomon excelled this, becauſe the golden Ark with Aarons rod that budded , and the golden pot of Manna,all moſt glorious things were wanting in this, but not in that as long as it ſtood. Moreover the Lord ſaith,v.8.the ſilver is mine,and the gold is mine,intimating the little regard, that he had to theſe things when he ſpake of glory, and the little worth that was in them,to make an houſe glorious,as Pſal.50. it is ſaid of beaſts offered in great aboundance, that they are not of that value to procure acceptation to the offerer, but this is done onely by a ſpirituall offering of praiſe, for ſomuch as all other things are the Lords, as there is ſaid , the whole world is mine and all that therein is; wherefore they are too groſſe that expound the glory here ſpoken of,of glory externall ſtanding in the pretious things of this world, and it is certainly Chriſt, God and man, Jeſus our Saviours being in this Temple,that made it ſo glorious,as that the glory of the Lord filling that built by Solomon, and the fire coming down from heaven made it not ſo glorious, as Chriſts preſence here did this.
For that was but the glory of power and majeſty not to be indured by mortal man,for it is ſaid,that the cloud filled the houſe,ſo that the Prieſts could not ſtand there to miniſter,but this was the glory of grace,mercy and peace,giving unto men acceſſe to God,ſo that they may draw near unto him with boldneſs and confidence;then the glory of God only appeared,which was naturall to him,now the glory of God ſhone in a man,and man was divinely glorious, although the only begotten Son of the Father full of grace and truth. This place thus opened, and the ſenſe confirmed is moſt plain to prove, that the Meſſiah is not yet to come, but already come, even whileſt this Temple ſtood, becauſe otherwiſe this propheſie muſt fall, it being impoſſible, that in the ſenſe given, it ſhould be fulfilled, yea and ſome Hebrew Expoſitours alſo underſtand it of Chriſt as Rab. Aaquiba, of whom it is ſaid in Lib. Sanedrin, that he is authenticall. For he Rab. Aaquiba. ſaith in commenting upon this place, that after Zerubbabel the Jewes had Princes of their own, and they being worn out, Johannes the ſon of Hircanus took the Crown upon him, and after him his ſon, &c. untill Herod an alienigena, in whoſe days the Meſſiah was born. And therefore ſome Chriſtian Expoſitours are greatly to be blamed, who underſtand this of Chriſt indeed, but not of his firſt but ſecond coming, for by this means they ſuppreſſe one of the moſt convincing propheſies that is to prove Jeſus Chriſt the true Meſſiah, which how unadviſedly it is done appears by the advantage hereby given to the Jew to harden himſelf ſtill in unbeleif to his deſtruction. Whereas v.8. it is ſaid the V. 8. ſilver is mine and the gold is mine, Lyra underſtands it as meant, that they ſhould take no care to provide themſelves of theſe things, for he would furniſh them with them ſufficiently, but I reſt in the former.

for their ſacrificing whileſt they lived in their ſins, which made them particular the ſin here taxed, was their groſſe negligence about building the houſe of God, as appeareth by the words next following.

V. 20. Alſo the word of the Lord came to Haggai the 24. day of the month, Vulgar, for more expreſſion, the ſecond time, ſo that he had the former Viſion, and this both in one day. And what is the word that now came unto him? Verſ.21. Speak to Zerubbabel, ſaying, I will ſhake the heavens and the earth, and I will overthrow the Thrones of the Kingdomes, verſ.23. In that day I will take thee (O Zerubbabel) and make thee a ſignet; Here by another ſhaking of heaven and earth hee ſheweth, that he meant the overthrow of earthly Kingdoms, which ſhould all be under one Throne, and the eſtabliſhing of that which ſhould come of him, that is, the Kingdome of Chriſt, and thus make him in it as a ſignet on his right hand never to be plucked off. For that this is meant by a ſignet may be gathered from *Jer.*22.24. Though Coniah were as the ſignet of my right hand, &c. But to explain all things here more particularly, His directing of this propheſie to Zerubbabel the Prince ſhewed that it was a ſingular propheſie worthy to be conſidered by the higheſt and nearly concerning him and his poſterity. The Lord had ſaid before he would ſhake the heavens and the earth, and now hee repeats the ſame again in another Viſion after that, to ſhew, that Chriſt the deſire of all Nations being come, and thus the houſe then built made more glorious then the former, there ſhould after this be great commotions in the world again, in heaven the Sun darkened at the paſſion of Chriſt, and in the earth by an earthquake wherein graves were opened, and many dead bodies aroſe at his reſurrection. And after theſe commotions and others fore-running the deſtruction of Jeruſalem propheſied of by our Lord, Matth. 24.7. where it is ſaid, Kingdome ſhall riſe againſt Kingdomes, and there ſhall be famins, peſtilences and earthquakes. The Throne of Kingdomes ſhall be overthrown, which is diverſly underſtood by divers, by ſome of the Perſian Kingdome overthrowne by Alexander and the Grecian, again by the Romans: and by ſome of the Roman, which after the diviſion made thereof by Conſtantine the Great, into the Eaſt and Weſt between his ſons, loſt the ſtrength, which it formerly had, and decayed firſt in the Weſt by the Goths and Vandals ſubduing it, and then in the Eaſt by the Turks winning of Conſtantinople, in the midſt of which changes yet Zerubbabel, that is, Chriſt and his Kingdom, called here Zerubbabel, as elſewhere, by the Prophets, David ſhould be kept as a ſignet, which Kings uſe to ſeal withall, and therefore have a ſingular care about the keeping thereof. And ſo this propheſie and that, *Dan.*2.44. are all one. And this I ſee no cauſe to reject, but the time maketh againſt the former. Wherefore I conclude, that the Roman Empire, to which many Kingdoms were ſubject, is here meant, and much more all other earthly Kingdomes ſubject thereunto, one fighting againſt another, and deſtroying one another, and ſome by it deſtroyed, as that of the Jews, before which in ſpeciall the heavens were ſhaken by battels ſeeming to be fought in the air over Jeruſalem, and the earth where the Temple ſtood, was ſo ſhaken, that the great brazen gates thereof that could not be opened, but by the ſtrength of 20 men, opened alone. And hereby the care of God over his Church appears to be ſuch, that all Kingdoms ſhall be overthrown by the commotions made in the world, but Chriſts Church which is his Kingdome ſhall ſtand firmly, as Matth. 16.16. not onely in the midſt of theſe commotions, but alſo doe all wordly powers what they can againſt it.

ZECHARIAH:

CHAP. I.

V. 1. THE 8 month of the ſecond year of Darius the word of the Lord came to Zechariah the ſon of Barachiah the ſon of Iddo the Prophet: That Haggai might with the greater courage and confidence execute his propheticall office, God joined Zechariah at the ſame time unto him, and the more to confirm that which he taught, that the faithfull might be the more comforted and the wicked moved to repentance. Thus before the captivity God ſent more Prophets together, as Iſaiah and Hoſea, &c. as hath been before noted, and in the time of the Goſpel Chriſt ſent out 12 Apoſtles, then the LXX, two and two together. This Zechariah is thought by ſome more probably to be the Prophet ſpoken of by our Lord, Mat. 23. that was ſlain between the Temple and the Altar, then that Zechariah who 2 Chr.24.20. was ſlain there in the dayes of Joaſh King of Judah, both becauſe the name agreeth beſt, the other being the ſon of Jehoiadah, this of Barachiah, and it is not likely that our Lord would make that Zechariah the laſt Prophet ſlain, as he ſeemeth there to doe, for he beginneth at Abel the firſt Martyr, and therefore doubtleſſe endeth with the laſt Prophet of note ſlain by the Jewes. But after that Zechary to this, many others of note ſuffered, as Eſay and Jeremiah, and divers others in the time of Manaſſeh, who filled Jeruſalem with innocent bloud.

If it be objected, this Zechariah is not ſaid to have been ſlain, and if he were, it could not be done betwixt the Temple and Altar, becauſe it was not yet built: I anſwer, that Chriſt and his Apoſtles bring ſome things to light touching Hiſtory, which before were not ſpoken of, and therefore this Zechary might alſo ſuffer thus, although not ſpoken of before; and touching the Temple, it being finiſht in the 6 yeare of this Darius, in whoſe ſecond he began to propheſie and went on in his fourth ch. 7.1. after which he had many viſions more moſt probably above two years, and if ſo, he lived till the building of the Temple was finiſhed: yea it is plain by Ezra 6. 14. that Haggai and he both propheſied, till the building was fully ended: of this ſee more in my Expoſition upon Mat. 23. The ſon of Iddo, this Iddo is thought by ſome to have been the immediate father of Barachiah, being a man of great note: but forſomuch as Iddo a Prophet that lived long before, is famous in Scripture, moſt probably he is meant, other progenitors of his being omitted. Some hold him to have been the Prophet that came to Bethel in Jeroboams time to threaten Gods judgments againſt the Prieſts that ſacrificed upon the Altar there.

V. 2. The Lord hath been ſoar diſpleaſed with your fathers: He beginneth to move them to repentance from the conſideration of Gods dealing with their fathers in times paſt, when they ſinned, and being admoniſhed by his Prophets would not turn, to whom therefore it came to paſſe according to their threatnings, although thoſe Prophets did not many of them live to ſee execution done upon them, as was threatned. And he beginneth thus, becauſe as the hiſtory of Ezra ſheweth, they lived in many groſſe ſins, eſpecially the neglect of piety towards God, as touching the building of his houſe, and taking ſtrange wives, being from their former lawfull wives divorced, as their luſts led them.

V. 7. Upon the 24. day of the 11. month, called Sebar, which anſwered to our February. V. 8. I ſaw by night a man riding upon a red horſe, and he ſtood amongſt the myrtle trees: After reproof and exhortation to repentance, here followeth, as Calvin conjectureth, matter of comfort, they being effectually moved by that which had been ſaid before. For the meaning of the Viſion, it is ſhewed by the man upon the red horſe ſtanding by the myrtle trees. V. 10. Only it may be demanded who that man was, and why he appeared riding upon a red horſe, and who the other coloured horſes white and ſpeckled, and what is meant by their running through the earth? Anſw. The man upon the red horſe was Chriſt Jeſus for a præludium of his incarnation appearing in the likeneſſe of a man, as he alſo did at ſome other times. For the other horſes with the men riding upon them (for ſo it muſt be underſtood, although none but horſes are named, becauſe v. 11. they are brought in anſwering this man, as horſes cannot do) were behind him, as ſouldiers at the back of their Captain; and who ruleth over the Angels of heaven as Captain but Chriſt? called elſewhere the Archangel Michael, who is, as the word ſignifieth, one like God; upon a red horſe he is ſeen riding to ſhew the bloudſhed of the enemies of his faithfull people, as bloud is red and makes garments look red. See Eſay 63. 1, 2, 3. Chriſt then appeareth thus to ſhew his wrath, whereby his heathen enemies ſhould have their bloud ſhed and be deſtroyed, and he rides upon an horſe to do this, to ſhew that it ſhould be done by war, becauſe horſes be for war, and horſemen of greateſt force: and for this cauſe the ſame Chriſt appeareth almoſt in like manner Rev. 6. and ch. 19. 13. only there the horſe is white, but his garments red with bloud, to ſhew peace and comfort to ſuch as embrace and follow his word, but deſtruction and terrour to unbeleevers and deſpiſers, according to which alſo here be ſome horſes white, and ſome particoloured, red and white, to ſhew the ſame. And this man upon the red horſe appeared in the night, to ſhew that Chriſts incarnation was yet only darkly ſet forth by types and figures, for which the time of the Old Teſtament is called the night, Rom. 13. 12. and he was by myrtle trees with great leaves making it ſhadowie like the night, to ſhew the ſame. The horſes behind him with their riders repreſented the Angels of God, by whom, as by his horſmen, God makes war where he pleaſeth in all the world for the good of his people, and the deſtruction of the wicked, the white horſes being with theſe, to ſhew that they ſhall be victorious in the end, but the diverſe coloured with thoſe, to ſhew that although ſometimes they prevail, and by ſubduing all have peace, yet this laſteth not long, but horſes both white and red are ſeen with them, intimating the variableneſſe of their condition, although they be in peace and reſt for a time,

V. 12.

as they upon the party-coloured horſes ſay, that they had gone through the earth and all were quiet and at reſt.

V. 13. Whereupon requeſt is made to the Lord by the man upon the red horſe, that his own people who had been in miſery 70 years might now come to have reſt alſo, ſith it could not but be counted an unworthy thing that heathens having reſt every where, Gods own people ſhould ſtill be troubled and interrupted, eſpecially in ſo excellent a work as the building of the Temple was, which was no ſooner ſaid, but comfort was ſpoken to his people, and that both Temple and City ſhould be built, and v. 18, 19, 20, 21. deſtruction and diſperſion is threatned to them that had ſcattered the Jewes. Note Note. from hence that the Lords horſmen walk up & down in the earth, that he doth not neglect humane affairs, as the Prophane think, for he ſends out his Angels, and they are alwayes walking about for the good of his people, and nothing done in the world is hidden from them, that we may be incouraged in doing good and deterred from evill, as being ſure that we have them to guard us, and to ſtand for us when we fear God, but otherwiſe upon horſeback and armed as it were, to deſtroy us. Now God can do all this without the miniſtry of his Angels, but becauſe we cannot ſo well conceive of our being in ſafety, but by having a guard about us, God is pleaſed to uſe them and their miniſtry in doing this office about his.

V. 12. How long wilt thou not have mercy on Jeruſalem againſt which thou haſt had indignation now 70. years? Here a great queſtion is made by ſome, how it could be ſaid thus, ſeeing it was 70 years long before this, in the firſt year of Cyrus, who reigned after this 7 or 8 years, and after him Cambyſes, or Ahaſuerosh called alſo Artaxerxes, Ezra 4. 9 years, and becauſe they ſee not how it may be otherwiſe reſolved, they anſwer, that the time may be counted two ways, either from the 1 year of Nebuchadnezzar, & ſo the 70 ended the 1 year of Cyrus, or from his 19 year, and ſo the 70 years ended not till now. But there needs no ſuch device, for here is no word ſhewing that juſt now the ſaid 70 years of deſolation were ended, but only that they were at an end, as they were indeed long before, for the word is זה this or theſe 70 years, that is, the 70 years determined, Jer. 25. and certain years longer alſo they being ſtill moleſted by their enemies, when as the people of other countries returning to their habitations in the time of Cyrus lived in peace. And this is ſaid to move the Lord the more, becauſe not only the full time ſet by his Majeſty for the Jews puniſhment was ended, and many years more alſo had paſſed ſince, ſo that it was time now not only to bring them back from their captivity, as he had graciouſly done in the dayes of Cyrus, but alſo in their own land to grant them peace, delivering them from their enemies who diſturbed them in that neceſſary work of building the Temple and City again, that they might come to the ſtate in which they had formerly been. And for this Expoſition is Lyra, Calvin, and Gualter, Lyra. rendring the words therefore, theſe 70 years, v. 16. my houſe ſhall be built and a line Calvin.
ſtretched out upon Jeruſalem: that is, a meaſure taken of the dimenſions of the Gualter.
City, that it alſo might be built and divided amongſt the Jewes as in times paſt.

V. 18. Then I lifted up mine eyes and ſaw and behold 4 horns, what was meant hereby the next words ſhew, theſe are the horns that have ſcattered Judah, &c. It is uſuall in ſcripture by horns to ſet forth ſtrength and power, and conſequently mighty and ſtrong Kingdoms, and becauſe that of theſe there were four chiefly which afflicted the people of God, the Caldean that deſtroyed Jeruſalem, the Perſian that domineered over the Jews, and at their pleaſure reſtrained them from building the Temple and City, the Grecian that after Alexander, both in the Egyptian and Syrian Kings, were infeſt enemies againſt the Jews, and the Romans, that by force and might ſet up Herod a ſtranger to reign over them, the Lord ſhewed Zechariah the 4 horns which R. Solomon will have to be enemies R. Solomon. about Jeruſalem in the 4 parts of the world, Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South, but becauſe the Jews were not by them ſcattered, although many times annoyed, the former Expoſition, which is moſt commonly followed, is to be preferred.

V. 20. preferred. Againſt theſe 4 horns, 4 Carpenters are next ſhewed, which are ſaid
V. 21. to come to fray them and to caſt them out for their ſcattering of Judah. Theſe 4 Carpenters were ſuch as God ſtirred up to bring the enemies of the Jews to Calvin. Gualter. ruine, whom Calvin and Gualter will not have to be the 4 Monarchies before named, but Ammonites, Moabites, and Syrians, &c, diſtinguiſht thus by Gualter by the 4 parts of the world, the Ammonites, Moabites, and Edomites, on the Eaſt, the Philiſtims on the Weſt, the Egyptians and Ethiopians on the South, and the Syrians on the North, confirming thus that of K. Solomon before mentioned, but they were rather figures of them that brought the 4 Monarchies to ruine, becauſe it was a propheſie of things to be done, not a repreſentation of things already done, as was the deſtruction of all thoſe enemies near about Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar. Wherefore the carpenter deſtroying the Babyloniſh Monarchy was the Perſian, he that deſtroyed the Perſian was the Grecian, and he that deſtroyed the Grecian the Roman, each one of theſe 3 being firſt an horn and then a carpenter, and although the Perſian had acted his part already, yet that all four might be put together, as oppoſite to the 4 horns, he is ſhewed together with the reſt, and the Goths in the Weſt, and Turks in the Eaſt were the fourth carpenter confounding the Roman Monarchy.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. B*Ehold a man with a meaſuring line in his hand*; It was ſaid before ch.1.16. A meaſuring line ſhall be ſtretched forth upon Jeruſalem, now therefore one is ſeen with a line in his hand going to meaſure the length and breadth of that City, it being hereby intimated that it ſhould be built again, as it was indeed in the time of Artaxerxes by Nehemiah, and it was expreſly promiſed, chap. 1. 17.

V. 4. Tell this young man, Jeruſalem ſhall be inhabited as a Town without wals, for the multitude of men and cattle: This is not a proſecution of the ſame, but a new reve-
V. 3. lation touching the ſpiritual Jeruſalem which is the Church under the Goſpel. And therefore it is to be noted, that he ſaith, v.3. The Angel that talked with me went forth and another Angel went out to meet him, and he ſaid, Tell, &c. The man with the meaſuring line had told him before of the building of Jeruſalem properly underſtood, but now another cometh forth from God and bids the Angel aſſigned before to talke with him, to tell him that the Church of Chriſt ſpiritually called Jeruſalem ſhould be ſo populous that no wals ſhould be able to contein the number that ſhould be thereof, as other Prophets alſo, eſpecially Iſaiah often foretold.

V. 5. And about this, he ſaith, The Lord will be a wall of fire round about, and a glory within, ſo that the Church under the Goſpel was more ſafe from the danger of enemies, then Jeruſalem of old ſo well fenced with wals and gates, for that was deſtroyed by the Romans, but againſt this the gates of hell neither could nor ever ſhall prevail, as it is impoſſible for any to prevail againſt God, who is as a conſuming fire ready to burn and devour all enemies that come near him or the place which he takes into his protection, and much leſſe to extinguiſh the light and glory thereof, which he is to his Church, although the Kings who were the glory of the materiall Jeruſalem, might be, and were divers times taken away. Some make no diſtinction betwixt this and that which was ſhewed, v.1,2,3. but expound all of the ſpirituall Jeruſalem taking the man with the meaſuring line to be Chriſt in this viſion ſhewing himſelf in the humane nature which he afterwards took, who is the builder of this Jeruſa- Gualter. lem his Church. But if it were ſo, where were the preſent comfort in reſpect of any materiall building, or by what viſion ſhewed? And if none, Zechary came ſhort of his office, of whom it is ſaid together with Haggai, of whom it is ſaid Ezra 5. they propheſied to the Jews and then they roſe up to build: And if this and that *v.*4,5. be all one, why are Angels imployed after this to tell Zechary here called a child, for ſo he was, although a man of good years, in compariſon of the Angel that ſpake ſo. For theſe things ſeem to me certain arguments of a new matter further revealed of the ſpirituall Jeruſalem diſtinct from that which was before ſpoken of, which was the type of it. Laſtly that had wals after this by Nehemiah built about it, this had none, but the Lord as a wall of fire round about it to defend it, as *Pſ.*125. and it appeared by experience in the time of the Primitive Church, which had all powers humane againſt her, and none but the Lord for her defence, whileſt ſhe conſiſted only of the common ſort of people, and there were not many noble of her.

V. 6. Lyra. Ho, ho, flee from the North, ſaith the Lord, for I have ſpread you abroad as the 4 winds: This is by Lyra expounded of errours after which the Nations were before the preaching of the Goſpel diverſly led by the Devill, for which they are ſaid to have been diſperſed abroad as the 4 winds.

V. 7. And to the ſame he applyeth the words following, Deliver thy ſelf O Zion that dwelleſt with the daughter of Babylon, that is, thou Church of Chriſt that art at Rome, called ſpirituall Babylon for the enmity of the Romans and their Emperours againſt Chriſtians whileſt they were Heathens, for by the name of Babylon, ſaith he, Rome is called 1 *Pet.*5.13. For of Babylon properly taken it cannot be underrſtood, becauſe that was long before this deſtroyed. Deliver thy ſelf, that is, by being ſtill intangled with none of her ſuperſtitions, or unequall yoaking with infidels, and the North is it called, becauſe that of old the people of Iſrael were both corrupted and ſuffered from the North, whence their greateſt judgments came by the Aſſyrians and Babylonians, whoſe evill manners they followed.

V. 8. After the glory he hath ſent me to the Nations that ſpoiled you, he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye: that is, after the Romans coming to that height of glory to be rulers over all countries under one head Auguſtus Caeſar, who raigned in peace, the Lord hath ſent me, the Lord Jeſus his ſon by mine Apoſtles to preach to the Gentiles, and to convert them to the faith, after that it was rejected by the Jews, and after the faith imbraced ye ſhall be ſo dear unto me that I ſhall count them that touch you to doe you hurt, as men touching the apple of the Lords eye, which he will not ſuffer to goe unrevenged, and this he ſpeaketh in threatning both the Jews perſecuting his Church, and ſuch of the Gentiles, as being ſtirred up by them joined herein: thus Lyra, ſaying, that becauſe it is the Lord of Hoaſts that ſpeaketh of himſelf as ſent, it muſt needs be underſtood of God the Son ſent by the Father. And herein Calvin. Calvin agreeth with him, but for the glory of which it is here ſaid, after the glory, he diſſenteth much, as alſo in expounding *v.*6,7. for he underſtands all of the Jews remaining ſtill in Babylon and the adjacent parts, who are bidden to flee out of the North, that is, thoſe parts being ſlack ſo to doe, happily projecting in themſelves that Cyrus gave them leave to return only to try them, and when he ſaw what they would doe, intending to ſet upon them and cut them off, which made them fearfull, and becauſe alſo they would avoid the trouble and tediouſneſſe of removing ſo far, although into their own country, they reſolved ſtill to ſettle there having no heart to returne. Therefore the Prophet in way of taxing them for this, and to ſtir them up to haſten their return to join with their brethren that were already returned, in building the Temple and City, and to look at Zion their proper habitation, and not to be taken with any pleaſures of Babylon to ſettle their abode there. And here *v.*8. to move them the more effectually ſo to doe, he addeth, Thus ſaith the Lord of Hoaſts, &c. hereby aſſuring them of the Lords ſingular care over them, after the glory, that is, after that he had begun to glorifie his power and mercy and truth in working upon the heart of Cyrus to give them leave to return, ſo that now they ſhould not need to fear any thing, but reſolvedly apply themſelves to the journey, and for the enemies they had beſt take heed how they did any thing againſt them, for the Lord would take that which was done againſt them as done againſt himſelf. Some he ſaith, by the glory underſtand the glory gone from Iſrael, when the Jewes hardning themſelves by unbelief, the glory of being Gods people removed to the Gentiles; and ſome the glory of the Nations that had ſubdued the Jews, and triumphed gloriouſly over them, which went away when they were ſubdued by the Medes and Perſians.

Whereas he ſaith v.6. I have ſcattered you as the 4 winds, he takes this alſo as ſpoken to intimate the greater hope of deliverance and ſafety now in their return, becauſe the ſame Lord that had ſcattered them, promiſed it unto them, and moved them therefore unto it. If they had been thus ſcattered indeed by the will of man, and not of God, they might well have feared ſucceſſe in returning, but forſomuch as their ſcattering was Gods act for their ſins, he being now pacified, they might well hope, that he would as ſurely gather them home now again, as he then ſcattered them. Theſe divers Expoſitions conſidered it is very hard to determine the truth. But that it cannot be altogether underſtood of the Jews yet remaining in Babylon and refuſing to return appeareth, becauſe they were not diſperſed as the 4 winds, but hereby the elect both of Jews and Gentiles muſt needs be underſtood, as Eſa 43.5,6. where the gathering together of the Jews from all the 4 parts of the world ſpiritually ſo called, is ſpoken of. It is to be held therefore, that this is a mixt propheſie both touching the Jews yet in Babylon, for it was not ſo deſtroyed, as Lyra ſaith it was, but that many Jewes were dwelling there ſtill, as appeareth Ezra 7. and touching the faithfull in all Nations. The Jews ſtill remaining there are ſtirred up, as Calvin hath it, and all Chriſtian people, as Lyra, and then by theſe words, after the glory, is meant after the glory of being the redeemed people of the Lord offered to the Jew, but refuſed, I was ſent to the Nations, or underſtanding Chriſt by the glory, as Hag.2.7. For the laſt words, he that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of his eye, they are by ſome, as Calvin ſaith, turned another way, he hurteth himſelf in that part of which he is moſt tender, but by other like places it is plain, that the meaning is as hath been ſaid, viz. by Deut.32.10. Pſal. 17.8.

V. 9. I will ſhake my hand upon them and they ſhall be a ſpoil to their ſervants, or a prey, which is ſpoken by Chriſt to ſhew that the Romans who had domineered over and perſecuted the faithfull, ſhould be converted and thus become ſervants to Chriſt and his Church, bringing in their worldly goods for the maintenance of Gods worſhip and ſervice, ſo Lyra and Calvin agreeth alſo, neither can it be otherwiſe underſtood: and ye ſhall know that the Lord hath ſent me, here Chriſt continueth ſtill ſpeaking and ſhewing that when it ſhould thus come to paſs, the Jews ſhould be convinced that he was the Shiloh or ſent One of God, ſo long agoe ſpoken of by Jacob, Gen. 49. Lyra. Calvin.

V. 10. Sing O daughter of Zion, for I will come and dwell in the midſt of thee: that is, I Chriſt, which was fulfilled, when having taken fleſh he came and dwelt ſometime amongſt the Jews, according to that which is ſaid Joh.1. And he dwelt amongſt us and we ſaw his glory.

V. 11. In that day many Nations ſhall be joined to the Lord: a plain propheſie of the converſion of the Gentiles at the time of the Goſpell of Jeſus being preached in all places unto them, for then do men join themſelves to the Lord, when they beleeve in his name.

V. 12. And the Lord ſhall inherit Judah in the holy Land, that is, in heaven, ſaith Lyra, but rather in the Kingdoms of this world, being ſanctified to the Lord to be his inheritance by the converſion of the inhabitants, according to which it is ſaid Pſ.2. I will give thee the Heathen for thine inheritance.

V. 13. Be ſilent all fleſh before the Lord, for he is raiſed up out of his holy habitation: Here is added an inſulting concluſion againſt all enemies of Gods Church, as if he had ſaid, tell not me what your power is to oppreſſe my people, neither brag thereof; ye are truly but fleſh, and therefore moſt frail and weak to withſtand me, therefore ſpeak nothing of this more, for now God that ſeemed formerly to ſleep is raiſed up for the defence of his, and who dares then mutter againſt him?

CHAP. III.

A*Nd he ſhewed me Joſhua the high Prieſt ſtanding before the Angel of the Lord*: V. 1.
Of Zorobabel the Prince, Haggai propheſied, ch. 2. 23. that God would make him as a ſignet, intimating hereby the reſtitution of the care that God anciently had of the line of David, that he might ever have a light amongſt his people unextinct, as he had in the poſterity of Zerubbabel, and finally in Chriſt that came of him, who liveth and reigneth for ever, although for a time ſuſpended from the principality. Now becauſe the ſtate of the Jewes could not be compleatly flouriſhing, unleſſe the Prieſt were alſo brought to that ſplendor by glorious apparell which he formerly had, and the authority to judge in things pertaining to God, which by his office belonged unto him, his reſtitution to theſe dignities by God aſſigned unto him, is here propheſied of. Zechary ſeeth him ſtanding before the Angel of the Lord, in doing the office of his miniſtry unto him, and Satan ſtanding at his right hand to reſiſt him: where by the Angell, Chriſt is commonly underſtood, who is alwayes neare to thoſe his ſervants in the miniſtry, that miniſter to God to aſſiſt them in this holy ſervice, for the comfort of all ſuch as are called to this office, and their Note. incouragement if they be faithfull, he will ſee that they ſhall not want gifts which be neceſſary for their function, if they ſeek unto him. But what is this, Satan ſtanding at his right hand to reſiſt him? His accuſing of him before the Lord as unworthy here to miniſter for his ſins: for if there be any thing amiſſe in any of Gods ſervants, the Devill is ready to accuſe him of it, to procure, if he can, Gods rejecting of him, ſo that we had need to walk circumſpectly, that we lye not open to his accuſations. Touching this Joſhua, he might certainly, ſaith Gualter, find ſomewhat againſt him, as namely a neglect Gualter.
in common with others of building the houſe of God ſo long a time, and that he ſuffered ſo many Prieſts under him to ſin ſo foulely in marrying ſtrange wives, Ezra 10. and that it was in regard of his ſins, appeareth v. 4. where the Lord ſaith that he had taken away his iniquity.

And the Lord ſaid, the Lord rebuke thee Satan, even the Lord that hath choſen Jeruſalem: V. 2. here the Trinity is thought by ſome to be intimated in that the Lord is thrice named, the Lord the Son ſaid, the Lord the Holy Ghoſt rebuke thee, even the Lord being the Lord the Father that choſe Jeruſalem; thus when the Devill oppoſeth and accuſeth the ſervants of God, the Lord taketh their part Note. and reproveth him, which may be a great comfort to them that have been humbled for their ſins, and ſo have through Gods grace attained juſtification therefrom, as it ſeemeth by the next words that this Joſhua had been. For he is ſaid to have beeen a brand pluckt out of the fire, that is, out of the fire of adverſity in Caldea and brought back to Jeruſalem. And *v.*3. he was cloathed V. 3. in filthy garments, further to expreſſe his poor and low eſtate, to which he had been brought. And *v.*4. the doing away of his iniquity, is ſpoken of, to V. 4. ſhew that he was now juſtified, and therefore the Devill could have nothing againſt him, and in his coming to ſtand againſt him he had nothing but a check, and he an happy change of his raiment from filthy to glorious, viz. ſuch pontificall robes as God anciently appointed his high Prieſt to be clad withall in his miniſtration, even exceeding the robes of Kings. Whence note Note. that ſin cauſeth abaſement in this life, but in Chriſt is remedy for all the faithfull againſt all their ſins, and ſin being done away the Devill may accuſe them, but ſhall not be able to hurt them, but they, notwithſtanding his malice, ſhall when they have been abaſed, be glorified, if not in this world, yet in that which is to come.

And I ſaid, Let them ſet a fair mitre upon his head: Here the Prophet ſeeing a V. 5. preparation of prieſtly garments made for Joſhua the high Prieſt, but no mitre Gualter.
yet ſpoken of, which yet was one ornament by God appointed out of his zeal to the worſhip and ſervice of God, that there might be no defect of glory in any

any thing about the high Prieſt, moveth for this alſo to be ſet upon his head, and it is done accordingly. Of the high Prieſts garments and mitre, ſee *Exod.*28.4. and what the Mitre was v. 36. a plate of Gold, whereupon was ingraven, Holineſſe to the Lord. The Vulg. Lat. for mitre, hath Cidarim mundam, and the word ſignifieth either, or a crown or diadem: and for I ſaid, he ſaid, but the word with the pricks, as it now goeth אמר amar, I ſaid, but the pricks taken away, he ſaid, and it is moſt probable that it ſhould goe ſo, for what authority had the Prophet to appoint what ſhould be done, but only the Lord, who before commanded to cloath him in pontificall raiment, and as that, ſo this upon his word was immediately done; whereas if the Prophet had ſpoken, there ſhould have been ſome word inſerted intimating his humble ſuit to have it thus done. Moreover it is to be underſtood, that the moſt ancient tranſlation of the Sept. hath it alſo, he ſaid, and R. David was the firſt that rendred it thus, whom others ſince have followed, and if it be read without pricks, as all Hebrew was till the dayes of the Maſoreth, firſt inventing the pricks, being of a later time, it ſignifieth he ſaid. And by all theſe glorious ornaments put upon Joſhua the preſent high Prieſt, was ſet forth his reſtitution that now ſhould ſoon be, that he might miniſter in the Temple being built, in as great perfection of glory as ever any high Prieſt did Ezra 3.10. before. But till the building was finiſhed, although the ordinary Prieſts are ſaid to have been ſet in their apparel to praiſe the Lord, yet the high Prieſt was not, yet all things being finiſhed and the Temple coming to be dedicated, it was not to be doubted but that he was, and thenceforth the high Prieſt ſucceſſively miniſtred there in the like glory, as Joſephus expreſly ſheweth in many places.

V. 7. If thou wilt walk in my wayes and keep my charge, then ſhalt thou judge my houſe, and I will give thee places to walk amongſt thoſe that ſtand by: Here is a further dignity of the high Prieſt ſet forth of judging in difficult caſes, as was of old appointed, *Deut.*17.8. but then he muſt walk uprightly as God injoined him, not pri-1 Sam. 1. ding himſelf in his high dignity, or abuſing his power by himſelf or his ſons, as Eli ſometime did, wronging God in his ſacrifices and grieving the people, till they had them in abomination.

For the next words the Vulg. hath it, I will give thee walkers of theſe, who ſtand by theſe, Hebr. and I will give to thee walkers amongſt theſe ſtanders: They that follow the N. Tr. will have the meaning to be, that Joſhua doing, as was before ſaid, ſhould have after this life ended, a place amongſt the Angels in heaven. But becauſe the words will not bear that reading, the better ſenſe is, I will give thee of my Angels to guard thee, as *Pſ.*34. and to aſſiſt thee againſt Satan and his Angels, who will be ready to oppoſe thee. For of good Angels ſome ſtand to miniſter unto him and to praiſe him continually, as Eſay 6. and ſome are ſent out for the good of thoſe that are appointed to life, Heb.
Note. 1.14. And this could not but be a great comfort unto him, and it is a comfort and incouragement to all the faithfull at all times, that they have, whileſt they keep their charge, a guard ſo mighty and glorious about them, but fail hereof, and this guard ſhall be withdrawn and in ſtead of it Satan cometh.

V. 8. Hear now Joſhua, thou and thy fellows that ſit before thee, for they are men wondred at, behold I will bring forth my ſervant the Branch: Heb. for men wondred at, it is men of portending, that is, men in whom other things to come, as in ſtrange and prodigious ſigns are ſet forth, for ſuch was Joſhua the high Prieſt and his fellows, other holy Prieſts under the law, in them things to come under the Goſpel being portended, and to this agreeth well that which followeth touching the Branch, that is, Chriſt Jeſus, as if he had ſaid, I would have you to hearken to that which I ſhall now ſpeak, which is fuller of comfort then any thing hitherto ſaid, yea, and in you it is portended or foreſhewed, as in ſigns and figures, and therefore worthy by you eſpecially to be attended to, that is, the coming of my ſervant the Branch, that is, Chriſt the high Prieſt, that excels all others in glory and the perfection of prieſtly glory. For ſo he is ſet forth at large and proved, *Heb.*7.8,9,10. And that of him the high Prieſt and other Prieſts, and that which they did in their miniſtration were types, is there alſo plainly ſhewed, the high Prieſts going into the moſt holy place with bloud for the expiation of ſin typifying his offering of his own bloud, and then entring into heaven, as it were, with it to make propitiation for our ſins, and the Prieſts killing and offering ſacrifices dayly, typifying his ſuffering death upon the croſſe to purge us from the uncleanneſſe of ſin; thus Gualter, and before him Lyra, but more briefly Calvin yet will not have Joſhua and his fellow Prieſts called portentous ſigns for this, but becauſe they were wondred at as Monſters by the wicked of thoſe times for their rare piety, and forwardneſs about the works of the Temple, wherein they are much commended Ezra 3.10. c.6.20. as Eſa.8.18. he ſaith, I and my children are ſigns and wonders, the ſame word being uſed that is here. But Gualter reaſoneth againſt this out of the conſideration of the time when this was ſpoken, and the perſons then in authority, Zorobabel and Joſhua, and other holy Prieſts that were ſo far from being wondred at in way of deteſtation, that they were had in honour, as appeareth in Ezra the Prieſt, who came in the dayes of the next King Artaxerxes, and the Prieſts joining with him in the ſervice of God, and were much honoured by the people, and to him doe I ſubſcribe. And for Chriſt being here ſet forth by the name of a Branch, it was moſt apt to ſignifie, and foreſhew him ſpringing out of the ſtock of Jeſſe, becauſe he came even a branch growing out of the ſtubbe of a tree long before cut down, from which therefore no man would have expected it, nothing ſo long a time appearing, but it being thought dead. Of his calling him his ſervant, that hath been often ſpoken of before, and the Lord ſaith of himſelf that he came, not to be miniſtred to, but to miniſter, or ſerve.

Eſay 11.1.
Jer. 23.5.
Ch.33.

V. 9.

Behold the ſtone that I have laid before Joſhua, upon one ſtone ſhall be 7 eyes, I will ingrave the graving thereof, and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day: Here by the ſtone the ſame is doubtleſſe ſet forth, that was by the Branch, even Jeſus Chriſt called by Eſay alſo a ſtone of foundation, and he is ſaid to be laid before Joſhua becauſe here propheſied of unto him. But what are the 7 eyes upon this one ſtone? divers conjecture diverſly, ſome ſay the ſpirit dwelling in Chriſt without meaſure filling him with eyes of underſtanding, ſo that he alone had a great number of eyes as it were, and becauſe 7 is a number of perfection, it is ſaid 7 eyes upon that one ſtone; others by theſe eyes will have the eyes of all the faithfull meant, which are ſet upon Chriſt, as Simeon ſaith, mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation, and of Abraham it is ſaid, Abraham ſaw my day, and many Kings and Prophets deſired to ſee that which ye ſee: Laſtly ſome underſtand 7 Angels ſent out by Chriſt into all parts for the good and preſervation of his Church bringing for the proof hereof, ch.4.2. where a golden candleſtick is ſeen with 7 lamps to give light.

And v. 10. theſe are ſaid to bee the Lords eyes that run to and fro through the whole earth, and Rev.5.6. where 7 eyes are ſpoken of, and expounded to be 7 ſpirits ſent out into all the earth, and ſaid to be in the Lamb. But why theſe ſpirits ſhould be thought to be Angels, I ſee no reaſon, yea there is rather reaſon why they ſhould not be Angels, but the Holy Ghoſt becauſe they are not ſaid any where to be in Chriſt, but the ſpirit came down upon him, and he was full of the ſpirit, wherefore it is beſt underſtood by Jerome of the ſpirit with his manifold light and graces as eyes in Chriſt, ſo that although he be a ſtone we muſt not thinke him to be a dead thing, as a ſtone, but living and full of light, from which fulneſſe his miniſters receiving light inlighten and convert others unto him, and they truly are the eyes of his underſtanding, or the 7 lamps ſpoken of ch.5. or ſpirits ſent out to preach the Goſpel.

For that other conceit of many mens eyes ſet upon him, it is altogether from the purpoſe, for although 7 be a ſacred number ſetting forth the Spirit with his manifold gifts, yet the faithfull are no where thus called or ſaid to be upon him, but in him, and they put him on, and it is not the eye, but the ſight of the eye that is upon him, when the faithfull ſee him. For the Lords ingraving the graving, hereby is ſet forth the piercing of his body upon the croſſe with nails and ſpear, becauſe thus iniquity is done away in one day, the ſacrifice expiatory being thus at once offered therefore. And well might this be ſet forth by graving upon a ſtone, becauſe that is done with an inſtrument of iron piercing it, and to be the Lords doing, becauſe by his predeterminate counſell, he ſuffered. Act.2.23.

V. 10. Ye ſhall call every one his neighbour under the vine and fig tree: Here the Prophet concludeth with the great benefit of peace that ſhould be by Chriſt, iniquity being done away. In time of war men betake themſelves to ſtrong holds, or hide themſelves in ſecret places, but in time of peace they ſit ſecurely abroad and recreate them in the ſhade of their vineyards, & therefore to ſet forth ſuch peace that now ſhould be to the faithfull, this metaphor is uſed. Yet by peace here not externall peace is ſo much meant, but internall, that of conſcience ariſing upon juſtification from ſin, yet amongſt the faithfull themſelves there followeth unity and peace when Chriſt dwels in the heart, there being none amongſt them now that hurt or devour one another, as Eſay 11. & 2. *Mich.*4. *Hag.*2.9.

CHAP. IV.

V. 2. A Candleſtick all of gold with a boul upon the top of it, and 7 lamps thereon, and 7 pipes on the 7 lamps, on the top thereof: Here is another viſion further to comfort and confirm both Zerubbabel the Prince and Joſhua the high Prieſt againſt all attempts of Satan and his inſtruments ſeeking to hinder the building of the Temple, that they and all Gods faithfull people might go on therein with a good courage. A golden Candleſtick with its 7 lamps is ſhewed unto him, and 7 pipes through which the oil was poured and did run into the lamps, as was in the Tabernacle of old by Gods appointment, *Exod.*25. and now by the like appearing again it was ſhewed that the Temple ſhould be fully built, forſomuch as the golden Candleſtick and the lamps could not be therein ſet up, till all was fully finiſhed.

V. 3. By this Candleſtick and the boul upon the top thereof appeared alſo two Olive trees, one on the right ſide, the other on the left: By the golden Candleſtick of old there were bouls and branches of Almonds ſtanding up, here of Olives.

V. 6. V. 7. The ſignification of all which followeth v.6. This is the word of the Lord to Zerubbabel, Not by might or by power, but by my ſpirit, ſaith the Lord. V.7. What art thou, O Mountain? before Zerubbabel thou ſhalt become a plain, and he ſhall bring forth the head ſtone thereof with ſhoutings, crying, Grace, grace, unto it: that is, this viſion ſets forth the word of the Lord to Zerubbabel the Prince, that had begun to lay the foundation of the Lords houſe, and was now going on in this work; and what was his word? that no impediment, if it were as a great Mountain, ſhould ſtand in his way, but become as a plain before him, being eaſily overcome. Yea, Satan himſelf who is ſaid before to ſtand at Joſhua his right hand to hinder him in this work, who was as a moſt huge Mountain in the way, at the Lords rebuke ſhould vaniſh. And if it be demanded by what mighty power this ſhould be effected, it is added, not by might or power, that is, humane power, but by the power of the Lord, and by his ſpirit moving the heart of Darius hereunto, at whoſe letters commanding that the Jews ſhould goe on in this building all their enemies on this ſide the river, that before hindred them, were quaint, and durſt not once ſtirre againſt them more, as is ſhewed Ezra 6.13. but ſupplyed them with neceſſaries for the work: and he ſhall bring forth the head ſtone thereof, &c. Vulg. and he ſhall make grace equall to his grace, Hebr. תשרותי acclamations, grace, grace, to it, the meaning being then, there ſhall be acclamations in token of rejoicing for this great and glorious work of Gods houſe finiſhed, wiſhing abundance of grace and glory and renoune unto it.

And it is by Rabbi David, whom new writers follow, underſtood of the laying on of the laſt ſtone upon the Temple, the whole work being now finiſhed by Zerubbabels godly care. R. David. But Jerome, whom the ancients follow, by the head ſtone underſtand Chriſt, who Pſ.118. is ſaid to be the head ſtone of the corner, ſaying, that hereby is meant, that Chriſt ſhall be revealed to the Jews towards the end of the world to be the Meſſiah, which was a thing before hid from them, as by a vail before their face, but then brought to light, and ſo the grace ſhewed to the Jews, ſhall equall that before ſhewed to to the Gentiles at the firſt going out of the Goſpel. Hieron. 2 Cor. 3. Some that follow this, ſeeing that the word here uſed ſignifieth not equality, but ſhoutings, and that in the plurall number, not in the ſingular, ſay that שוה ſignifieth to equalize, and if א be put for ה as it is ſometime done, the word may be rendred equality, and becauſe herein muſt be a concurrence of abundance of grace, it is put in the plurall to ſhew this. Or yeilding, that the beſt reading is, ſhouting, Grace, grace, to it: the ſenſe will be good if the former words be expounded of Chriſt brought forth to the Jews, for hereupon ſhall be great ſhoutings for joy, and crying, O the grace, the wonderfull grace in this ſtone towards us ſo deſperate enemies to him ſo long a time. I think, that the literall Expoſition is ſo to be followed, both in theſe and the words going before touching the Mountain being made a plain before Zerubbabel, meerly by virtue of the ſpirit, and not by humane power, as that we exclude not the myſticall, but take what is ſaid to Zerubbabel ſo eminent a type of Chriſt, as myſtically ſpoken of him, for it was the Zerubbabel, to whom it was ſaid, not by might, but by my ſpirit, &c. for no humane power was uſed to ſubdue the Devil, and to make him of a Mountain to lye flat before him as a Plain, and when Zerubbabel laid the head ſtone of the Temple, Gods laying of Chriſt for a foundation ſtone of his Church was pointed at, and in his bringing it forth, Chriſts bringing to light to the Jews, as hath been ſaid, whereupon ſo great rejoicing ſhall follow by ſhouting and ſinging of his wonderfull grace, for which the joy at Chriſts coming is ſaid to be like the joy in harveſt, or when men divide the ſpoils after victory. Eſay 9.

V. 10. For who hath deſpiſed the day of ſmall things they ſhall rejoice and ſee the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel with thoſe ſeven, they are the eyes of the Lord which run to and fro through the whole earth: Having plainly ſet forth Zerubbabel finiſhing the houſe, as he had long before begun in the time of Cyrus, ſo now he falleth upon them, that ſeeing the foundation then laid deſpiſed it as nothing in compariſon of the former Temple, and ſaith, that the faithfull ſhall rejoice ſeeing the plummet in Zerubbabels hand, that is, the meaſuring line and plummet, intimating a progreſſe in this work till the full finiſhing of it. Ezra 3. Then in the next words he openeth the myſtery of the 7 lamps, ſaying, theſe 7 they are the eyes of the Lord, and not with theſe 7, as in N. Tr. the meaning is, they figure out the eyes ſaid likewiſe to be ſeven upon one ſtone, ch. 3. which are, as was ſhewed before out of *Rev.*5. aſcribed to Chriſt the Lamb, and ſet forth the manifold graces of the Spirit in him; and they are ſaid to run to and fro through the world, as denoting the going out of the Apoſtles furniſhed with theſe graces as eys giving light to them and to the whole body of the Church in all Countries and Nations, and ſometime returning to Jeruſalem and then haſtening forth again. Calvin by theſe 7 eyes underſtands nothing elſe but ſuch perfection of ſight in the Lord, ſeeing all things before, behinde and on either ſide, paſt and to come, that nothing can lye hid from him, and therefore if there be any impediment in the way to hinder the going forward of his Temples building he ſaw it, and would provide againſt it, and what he ſpake of the bringing it to perfection, he would ſee that undoubtedly it ſhould be fulfilled that the faithfull who ſee and know but little, and ſo cannot foreſee dangers to come to prevent them, might confidently rely upon his providence in Calvin. Note.

all things, who hath eyes enough for himſelf and them alſo, and truſt in him for the accompliſhment of any thing by him promiſed, and wicked enemies might fear, as not being unſeen in any attempt againſt his Church, or in any other evill way, which I muſt needs ſay, is a very pious Expoſition, and may be confirmed from 2 Chron. 16. 9. the eyes of the Lord run to and fro, &c. But becauſe 7 eyes were ſpoken of before upon one ſtone, which is the Lord Chriſt, this is more properly to be applyed to him, and the proceedings of the Goſpel through the gifts of the Spirit, wherewith he ſent out his Miniſters into all parts, yet I deny not, but that it was alſo ſpoken for the comfort of the faithfull then intending Gods building, wherein they found ſo many difficulties and dangers, and knew not more might occur.

V. 14. Theſe be the two anointed ones that ſtand by the Lord of the whole earth. After the myſtery of the 7 lamps and the golden Candleſtick opened, now is ſhewed the myſtery of the two Olive trees or branches, by anointed ones here ſpoken of, meaning Zorobabel and Joſhua, and they are ſet forth by Olives yeilding oil, becauſe the Prince or Magiſtrate uſed to be anointed to his ſupream office, and the high Prieſt to his. Now they are ſaid to ſtand before the Lord of the whole earth to ſhew the Lords continuall care of them, that none in all the earth ſhould hurt or hinder them from their work begun, as Eſay 49. 16. it is ſaid of Jeruſalem, thy walls are continually before me. But according to ſome, here is a further aim at ſetting forth Enoch and Elias, whom they ſuppoſe to be the two witneſſes ſpoken of Rev. 11. 3, 4. but that they are not, and who they are, I have there ſhewed at large, viz. Moſes and Elias, or the Law and the Prophets, the one given by Moſes, the other Books called the Prophets, ſet forth by Elias, who was the chief of them, and therefore they are ſpoken of as one, and generally all ſuch inſpired writings as ſet forth the truth of God, whether of the Old Teſtament or new, and all the faithfull preachers, who ſet forth nothing but the ſame, Gualter. Gualter aſſenting to that which was firſt ſaid touching Zorobabel and Joſhua, ſaith, that all godly Magiſtrates and Miniſters are alſo hereby meant, who labour in the work of building the houſe of God, which is his Church in all times and ages, the one ſort in teaching and doing other Miniſteriall Offices, and the other in defending them and the whole Church, puniſhing evill doers and incouraging them that doe well, and providing for them that labour properly in this work. For if it had been meant only of Zorobabel and Joſhua the preſent Prince and high Prieſt, the comfort had not been ſo great, but in ſaying, that they ſtand before the Lord of the whole earth, intimating hereby, that ſuch ſhall never be wanting to his Church any where or at any time to the worlds end, he layeth a ground of continual comfort, and herein I ſubſcribe unto him.

CHAP. V.

V. 2. I See a fleeing roul the length 20 cubits, and the breadth 10 cubits. After joyfull things of finiſhing the Temple, and furniſhing it, &c. ch. 4. now follow ſad things, threatnings of judgments againſt the wicked, leſt they ſhould apply to themſelves the comforts before propounded, and goe on in their ſins without any ſenſe of their miſery to come therefore, after the great grace before ſpoken of done to Zerubbabel and Joſhua men of ſo great piety, and the eyes running to and fro all over the earth, in the Apoſtles coaſting about being now indued with extraordinory gifts of the Spirit. So that here is not a viſion repreſenting things paſt, as moſt hold after Lyra, for God uſed not by viſions to ſet forth things paſt, but to come, and therefore this may beſt be underſtood of the judgments upon the wicked Jews degenerating again into groſſe vices, although not into Idolatry as in times paſt, but into the foul ſin of theft, and ſwearing here particularly taxed, as may well be conceived, that they of the ſect of the Phariſees did, who were a ſect ariſing about 200 years before before Chriſts incarnation, and are noted by him to be very covetous and to bear with all ſwearing commonly, ſo that perjury were avoided, and although covetous perſons haply will not all play the theeves directly, yet indirectly they will by bribes taking and oppreſſion, or otherwiſe unlawfully getting their neighbours goods, which make men theeves as well as plaine ſtealing, witneſſe Eſa. 1.23. Thy Princes are companions of theeves, they love gifts. And Burgenſis noteth, that they compiled the two Targums, one called Targum Hieroſolymitanum, the other Targum Babyl. containing many falſe doctrines by way of Expoſition upon the Laws of Moſes, tending to the allowance of theft from ſome men. But for this the Lord here ſheweth his curſe coming in the form of a flying roul or parchment twenty cubits long and ten broad, which was juſt the longitude and latitude of the porch of the Temple. And this moſt probably was repreſented thus to intimate, that the ſinnes of the people, who heard the Law there taught, were written before God, as it were in a long and broad roll, as being very many equalling the commandements, which were ten in all their extent, and long lived in, which made twice as hainous, as the ſimple committing them, for which the length is twice as much as the breadth. And this appeared flying, to intimate the ſwiftneſſe of the judgments for ſin intimated hereby coming upon the wicked, becauſe although it be long before they come, yet when they come, they come ſuddenly, as the ſerpents in the Wilderneſſe upon the Iſraelites, that murmured.

V. 4.
V. 3.

And it is ſaid, that it ſhall enter into the houſe of the thief and of the ſwearer as the curſe of God, and it is ſaid, verſ. 3. To goe over all the earth, and every one that ſtealeth ſhall be cut off on this ſide according to it, and on that ſide according to it, that is, according to the curſes written herein, and the threatnings often iterated, ſuch and ſuch ſhall be cut off from his people, for ſo the Law of Moſes runneth, Deut. 27. and in many other places, on this ſide and on that ſetting forth whether he be a thief or a ſwearer, and here although by all the land is firſt and chiefly meant the land of Judea, through which this curſe ſhould fly, yet like ſinners of other lands, where they have teaching, are not excluded, but meant alſo. And he ſpeaks of entring into the houſe of the thief and ſwearer, alluding to the threatning of the Law, Deut. 28. Curſed ſhalt thou be in the houſe and in the field, and becauſe it is ſaid, verſ. 3. ſhall be cut off, the Septuagint hath it, for a roul, an booke, to which cutting off properly belongeth, and the word differeth but little מגל ſignifying an book, and מגלח a roul. Now touching the two ſins here threatened Furt and Swearing, I hold the reaſon of Burgenſis to be good, that is taken from the conſideration hereof, that this Viſion cannot be demonſtrative, ſhewing what the Jews had formerly ſuffered, and for what, becauſe it is plain, that they were delivered into the hands of the Caldeans, chiefly for idolatry, 2 King. 25. and whereas Lyra juſtifieth his expoſition, becauſe idolatry for the robbing of God of his worſhip may be called theft, it is weak and cannot hold here, ſeeing this is a theft, whereby ſomewhat comes in towards the building of a mans houſe, as appears by his threatning, that the curſe ſhould enter into the houſe of the thief, and conſume the ſtones and timber thereof, as intimating it to have been gotten by ſtealth and unjuſt dealing. But as Gualter ſaith, Let no man, becauſe theſe two ſins and none elſe are named, that no curſe ſhall come upon men for other ſins, for theſe are mentioned onely as moſt notorious, and commonly going together, for he that ſtealeth is moſt vilely accounted of, of all other men, and is moſt aſhamed to have it known, and therefore will not ſtick to deny it and ſwear to it alſo, as is intimated, Prov. 30. 8. Give me not poverty, leſt I ſteal and take thy name in vain. And indeed almoſt all ſins may be referred to theſe two, diſhonouring Parents, murther, adultery, falſewitneſſe-bearing and covetings; in the firſt, parents being robbed of their honour, in the ſecond, a man of his life, in the third, a woman of her chaſtity, in the fourth, of juſtice in his cauſe, and in the fifth the ground of ſtealing any thing of our neighbours is laid.

V. 6.

This is an Ephah that goeth forth, and this is their reſemblance throughout all the

Lyra. Calvin. Gualter. earth. Here Zechary hath another Viſion, by Lyra and ſuch as follow him, thought to be Propheticall touching mercy to be ſhewed to the Jews, their ſins, ſuperſtition and idolatry, wherein they had formerly lived, being hereby ſhewed to be ſo taken away and fixedly ſet in the land of Shinar, that is, Babylon, that they ſhould never return thence again, but here abide together with the judgements thereunto belonging, to bring it to deſolation. And they expound the two women bearing the Ephah thither of the two wicked Kingdomes Iſrael and Judah carrying the burthen of their ſins, as it were, to Babylon, their captivity thither being ſuffered for them, but now the remnant of the Jews returning, that great ſin of idolatry was ſetled upon the baſis there, and ſtirred not from thence to Judah any more. But forſomuch as this going away into captivity was long before, and this a propheſie of things to come, and although Judah were carryed to Babylon, yet Iſrael was not, but into the countrey of the Medes, this Expoſition cannot ſtand, no more can that, which is of the Medes and Grecians made by ſome, nor that of others underſtanding by theſe two women weak means, for they were mighty and ſtrong, that carryed them away. Therefore it is rather to be held, that by the Ephah being a meaſure amongſt the Jews, wherein a woman ſat, that is, iniquity, their fulfilling of their ſins, or ſin amongſt them growing to the full is to be underſtood, as it is ſaid, Gen. 15. that the wickedneſſe of the Ammonites is not yet full, but when it ſhould be full, the great judgement of the lands ſpewing them out ſhould come: ſo the Jews wickedneſſe growing ſo great, that it filled this great meaſure, they ſhould be carryed away, and the talent of lead being a moſt heavy weight of more then 60 pounds laid upon the top of the Ephah, did ſet forth one other moſt heavy ſin, viz. the crucifying of Chriſt, which being done, they could not ſtand long, but be thus carryed away, as our Lord threatened, ſaying, Fill yee up the meaſure of your Fathers ſins, behold your habitation ſhall be left deſolate, and it was accordingly done, the Romans deſtroying them and their City, and carrying away the ſurvivours into other countries. Of their iniquity before this deſtruction by the Romans Joſephus ſaith, that it was ſo great, that wiſe men thought, if the Romans had not come to execute that wrath upon them, fire muſt needs have come down from heaven upon them, as upon Sodom, there being no foul ſin, but it was there commonly committed in the height. The two women having wings of ſtorkes, that took up this Ephah between heaven and earth, and carryed it into the land of Shinar, were Pride and Hypocriſie, whereby they were lifted up in their own conceits above other men of the earth, becauſe both Matth. 23. and Rom. 2.17. their pride is ſhewed to have been very great, and their hypocriſie palpable, and by women are theſe vices ſet forth, becauſe they are moſt apt by painting and decking their bodies to deſire to ſeem more beautifull then they are, and they are moſt proud. And being thus elevated they are carryed into the land of Shinar, and with their iniquity together with them is ſetled, as it were, in an houſe in judgement prepared, and as upon a baſis or firm foundation to continue, not for a little, but a very long time. Herein it being alluded to that which was done Gen. 11.2,3, &c. where they being all of one language found a plain place, and there conſulted together to build a tower, the top whereof might reach to heaven, but when they were in building God divided their tongues and ſo made them ceaſe, and that Tower was called Babel, that is, confuſion, and they were ſcattered all over the earth. So it is ſhewed here, that it ſhould be full the Jews, they ſhould be carryed through their pride and hypocriſie to the building of another Babel, which they did when they compiled the foreſaid Talmud Babylon: that is ſo full of abſurdities, wicked inventions, and a confuſed Chaos of untruths, that it is worthy to be called by this name, and ſpecially touching the Meſſiah to come, ſeeking by falſe gloſſes to blind the light given to the truth touching Jeſus; and herein it is ſhewed, that they ſhould continue long ſetled, as it hath indeed faln out, for it being now almoſt 1600 yeares agoe ſince they ſuffered by the deſtruction

ction of their City and Temple, they yet continue a ſcattered Nation, in all parts, and ſetled in their firſt Principles of malice and enmity againſt Chriſt to this day, whereas many ancients by their carrying into the land of Shinar, underſtand the Jews being carryed after Antichriſt, that ſhould ariſe in Babylon and fight againſt Chriſtians, and ſubdue all Nations in three yeares and an halfe, it is rather to be counted a common errour, wherein one was carryed after another rather then a truth, ſeeing Antichriſt hath been already long acting his part, pretending to be for Chriſt, but indeed being againſt him and his faithfull people, and for this he is called the myſtery of iniquity. Whereas verſ. 6. it is ſaid, this is the eye in all the earth, he V. 6. hath herein reference to that, which was ſaid before of the ſeven eyes of the Lord going out into all the earth, chap. 4. 10. touching the New Tranſlation, this is their reſemblance in all the earth, I ſee no reaſon of thus rendring it, the word being עין which ſignifieth nothing but an eye and ם ſignifying their, affixed to it, and therefore the Vulgar beſt renders it, this is their eye in all their earth. But how is the Ephah ſaid to be their eye? Anſw. not actively, whereby they ſee, but paſſively, whereby their iniquity was ſeene by the Lord, this is their eye then, is as much as if he had ſaid, it is that which mine eye ſet upon them ſeeth, as it alſo doth all wickedneſſes, that are committed all over the world. Some by their eye in all the earth, underſtand their ſin continually in their ſight, whereſoever they be. The Septuagint for eye hath, this is their iniquity in all the land, by the change of one letter עון for עין but to the ſame effect. This Viſion then and that of the roul before going are not touching divers things, but the ſame, viz. the great ſins of the Jews, into which they ſhould fall after the worke of the Temple finiſhed, firſt repreſented in a rool of curſes coming upon their habitations, which were therefore demoliſhed at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Romans, and then by an Ephah, whereupon followed their carrying away and ſcattering, as hath been ſaid. And from hence note, that it Note. is moſt dangerous for a people to ſin ſo much and ſo long that the meaſure comes now to be full, and the roul of writing againſt them extended to ſuch Cyril. a length and breadth, that it is now ready to flee. When we ſin of infirmity, God hath patience for a time, and ſtill ſpares, expecting that his goodneſſe ſhould lead us to repentance; but if his patience be abuſed and ſins be ſtill multiplyed, he ſtayes but till they are grown to a certain meaſure and undoubtedly deſtruction ſhall come as the ſwifteſt fleeing fowl upon wings therefore.

CHAP. VI.

V. 1. V. 2. BEhold four chariots came from between two mountaines of braſſe, in the firſt were red horſes, in the ſecond blacke, in the third white, and in the fourth divers coloured. After ſad things ſpoken of and ſhewed, chap. 5. here follow joyfull things again, at the leaſt in a great part, although mingled with things ſad and heavy. For by theſe four chariots with their horſes, the Lord ſhewed what had already, and ſhould hereafter happen in the world concerning the Jews, For by theſe four chariots are ſet forth four Monarchies. 1. Of the Babylonians repreſented by red horſes, becauſe they were ſo cruell and bloudy towards the Jews, and becauſe this was already paſt, nothing more is ſaid of their going forth. 2. Of the Perſians, the chariot repreſenting whom was drawn by black horſes, bending their courſe to the north, becauſe they took revenge for the Jews upon Babylon, lying north from Jeruſalem, yet they were black, to ſhew, that the Jews both had and ſhould find them inſtruments of black and heavy things unto them. For ſo they had been in the time of Cambyſes, who hindered their building of the Temple, after leave given by his father Cyrus, all the reſidue of his time, he being far off, and buſied in forein wars, and in his own time alſo. And after this Darius under whom they had incouragement to bring the work of the Temple to perfection, they were again by the Perſians put under Tribute, from which they had been formerly freed, although through the default of ſome amongſt themſelves, viz. Joannes and Jeſus, who ſtriving for the High-Prieſthood one ſlew the other in the very Temple, which Darius Ochus, that then reigned, tooke ſo hainouſly, that he both tooke away the allowance before given by Darius Hiſtaſpis, and laid a tribute upon the Jews, came and deſtroyed many of them, and baniſhed ſome into Hircania near the Caſpian Sea, as I have more at large ſhewed in my continuation of the Hiſtory from Nehemiah. And it V. 5. is to be noted here, that theſe four chariots are ſaid to be the four ſpirits of heaven, that goe out from the Lord of the whole earth, and the chariot drawne by the black horſes went out from him into the north, and therefore whileſt Cyrus did ſo he proſpered, but becauſe he would goe out of a deſire to inlarge his Dominion againſt other Countreys, as againſt Scythia, he was there ſuffered to periſh by Thomiris queen of the Scythians, who cut off his head from Satia te ſanguine quem tam diu ſitiſti. his dead body, and filling a veſſell full of bloud, caſt it into it with this exprobration, fill thy ſelf with bloud, which thou haſt ſo long thirſted after. In that theſe chariots are called 4 ſpirits of heaven, it is meant, that 4 angels of heaven went out with them, by whoſe vertue they ſo greatly prevailed, as long as they went but the way, that theſe, as their Princes led them. For angels are ſaid by Daniel to Dan. 10. 13. be Princes of particular countries, as the angel ſet over the Kingdom of Perſia is called the Prince of Perſia, and Michael the Prince of the Jews. So that Note. there is nothing done in the whole world, but by the Miniſtry of angels ſent from heaven, by whom, as by his Lord Deputies he ruleth over all Kingdoms, and when one Nation cometh to be under another or more are ſubdued to one, it is by the power of the Lord, and not by the proweſſe of the conqueror, or by chance or fortune of war; and that potentate, who now ſubdueth all, is when God will ſubdued by another, that no man may be inſolent, but walk before God in reverence and fear in the higheſt pitch of worldly dominion. Or theſe chariots are called ſpirits of heaven, to ſhew, that theſe Kings were caryed per impulſus cœlitus venientes, to doe ſo as they did, according to Calvin.

V. 6. And hitherto of the black horſes, now of the white, it is ſaid, they goe forth after them, hereby the Kingdom of the Grecians was ſet forth, of which Alexander the Great was the Monarch, that went againſt and ſubdued the Perſian King, after that he had ſubdued the Babylonian, and continued long the Monarch of the World. And he and they after him, that divided his Empire amongſt them are ſet forth by white horſes, becauſe as white, and light is an embleme of comfort, ſo under that Empire the Jews had comfort by Alexanders favour towards them, and the favour ſhewed them by Ptolemie Philadelphus King of Egypt, who reſtored the pretious veſſels of the houſe of the Lord, that were in his land, and honourably entertained the 70 Interpreters of the Bible, for whom he ſent to this end and purpoſe. Laſtly, touching the griſled horſes, that went towards the ſouth, by them the Roman Empire was repreſented, being ſet forth by horſes of divers colours, becauſe that Empire was diverſly governed, ſometimes by Kings, then by Conſuls, after by the Decemviri, V. 7. then by Tribunes of the people, after by Dictatours, and laſtly by Emperors, wherefore theſe horſes were not onely griſled, but alſo bay, v. 7. that walked to and fro through the earth, as they had done firſt towards the ſouth, that is, Africa, where they ſubdued Carthage, that great and mighty City, which had long contended with them for Dominion. And towards the Jews they were as party-coloured horſes, becauſe ſometime receiving them into friendſhip, and ſometime turning their enemies, eſpecially Pompey the Great, that went proudly into their Temple and Craſſus, who robbed it of all the pretious things thereof, and finally both City and Temple were deſtroyed by Titus and Veſpaſian; for the word אמצים rendered by Pagnin aſh-coloured, it ſignifieth ſtrong, being therefore in Vulgar robuſtiſſimi, according to which if we read it, the ſenſe will be good, the griſled or party-coloured horſes, that were ſtrongeſt, ſought to goe not onely towards the ſouth, but alſo all over the earth, and they were permitted, and as in the ſouth, ſo they prevailed prevailed every where. And theſe things it pleaſed God to reveal for the comfort of his faithfull people, that knowing all worldly mutations to be Note. moderated by the power of heaven they might upon all occurrences continue unſhaken in their faith in their greateſt ſufferings expecting an happy end of them all, and not look at men, as if by their will it came ſo to paſſe, but at God onely. And theſe things were ſhewed by chariots and horſes, becauſe with theſe wars are made and Kingdoms and Nations ſubdued according to the old manner of fighting. And whereas the other chariots and horſes went but one towards one part and another towards another, theſe walke to and fro as Lords all over the earth, to intimate their Dominion much more inlarged then any of the Monarchs that went before them, and the ſame touching theſe foure Monarchies is by Daniel repreſented, ſometime by an image of gold and ſilver, braſſe, and a compound of iron and clay, ch.2. and ſometime two of them onely by a Ram and a Goat, chap.8. Only hitherto nothing hath been ſaid of the brazen mountaines, from which theſe chariots came, wherefore of theſe to ſpeak a little, and then I ſhall have done with this Viſion, and come to the Kingdome of Chriſt ſubduing and bringing under all other Kingdoms, as is ſhewed, *Dan.*2. Theſe mountains of braſſe intimating height and ſtrength ſet forth the Almighty power of God ſtopping the courſe of theſe chariots and horſes, till he be pleaſed to open them a way to come forth, teaching us, that no humane force, or any other can come out to prevail, but when God permits and gives way unto them, or as Calvin hath it, they come forth between two mountaines of Braſſe, to Calvin. ſhew, that things, which are done in this World are from eternity decreed by God, and till they come to paſſe are hid from us, as it were by mountaines of braſſe, none being able to pierce into thoſe ſecrets any more, then to break through ſuch mountaines, untill that he be pleaſed to reveale them: but when the time is come, that things ſo decreed by God ſhall be effected, very mountaines of braſſe cannot ſtop the courſe of them, but they ſhall undoubtedly come to paſſe, which the heathen ſeeing into held the ſame touching fate or deſtiny, that all the world cannot hinder, but we, Gods providence or eternall Decree. Wherein we may well goe with him, but whereas differing from other Expoſitours he underſtands by the black horſes the Babylonians, and by the white the Perſians, and by others of a divers colour the divers events in all the earth, the people of God in all places being ſometime in adverſity and ſometime in proſperity, as God pleaſeth, without reſtraining them to any particular people, by whom, he cannot but be thought to erre, if we conſider, that the black are ſaid to be foreſeen to goe out, as the red ſpoken of before are not, of which ſilence touching them, but telling of theſe going towards the north, no reaſon can be rendered but that which hath been given before, nor of the going of the black towards the north, if the Babylonians be by them underſtood. For when their coming againſt the Jews is threatened by the Prophets, it is commonly ſaid that they ſhould come out of the north, which is contrary to going towards the north. And for ſo much as there were four ſuch Monarchies ſucceeding one another, it cannot be turned another way without ſome derogation from the preſcience and providence of God to ſay, that hee onely foreſhewed things in generall, which indeed he did particularly, intimating his ſingular wiſdome and providence in theſe moſt remarkable mutations in the world. Again whereas it is ſaid, theſe that goe towards the north have V. 8. quieted my ſpirit in the north countrey, how can this be applyed to the Babylonians, unleſſe the Spirit of God liked well and were quieted, when they had deſtroyed Jeruſalem with ſuch pride and cruelty? but to the Perſians it agreeth very well, when they by deſtroying the Babylonians revenged his ſet forth by Zerubbabel in reſpect of his Kingly dignity before, and now by Joſhua the High Prieſt in reſpect of his Prieſtly, to denote both which, not a Crown, but Crownes muſt be made and ſet upon Joſhua his head, to intimate both theſe dignities in one perſon. And by the way hereby was ſhewed that a Prieſt ſhould ariſe, that ſhould come of Joſhua and be both Prieſt and King, as was Ariſtobulus and Alexander. And whereas it may ſeem unfit by a Crown to ſet forth the Prieſtly dignity, becauſe the Prieſt did not wear a crown, but a Miter, it is underſtood, that Chriſt was a Prieſt after the order of Melchiſedek King of Righteouſneſſe and King of Peace, as his name signifieth, and therefore he might well be ſet forth by more then one Crown; and that this is a propheſie touching Chriſt, under whom all other Crowns ſhould

V. 13. hereby the branch, whom hee would bring forth, that ſhould ſit upon the Throne and build the Temple, and ſit as Prieſt upon the Throne and beare the glory of both Crownes, and by both ſettle peace. But what is meant by his taking of Heldah, Tobijah, &c. Anſw. This was done becauſe the people returned out of captivity were faint-hearted, and feared, that they ſhould now live in a miſerable caſe by reaſon of their enemies about them, and theſe potentates propheſied of, from whom they might perceive, that although they ſhould receive ſome good, yet much more evill. To incourage and comfort them therefore againſt all this, the Prophet is bidden to goe and take from theſe men, which the Lord knew, that they would willingly give, ſilver and gold to make Crownes of for the uſe here declared. What theſe men were we know not, but moſt probably they were both able and godly Gualter. in high place, as Calvin conjectureth againſt Lyra, Gualter and others, for he will have the Prophets going to them, and placing the Crownes made afterwards in the Temple for a memoriall, to be placed there to their ignominy for a remembrance of their faint-heartedneſſe, that both they might be aſhamed, and now gather more heart, and others warned by them not to be ſo timerous and diſtruſtfull. For why they ſhould be thus conceived of I ſee no reaſon, but rather of the contrary, ſeeing hee took from them ſilver and gold, which cannot be conceived to have been done, but they voluntarily giving it out of their great piety, being herein exemplary to others to move them to liberality towards the Temple and the appurtenances thereof, as Gualter ſaith. And for the placing of the Crowns, that were made hereof in the Temple for a memoriall, when they had beene firſt ſet upon Joſhua his head, how can it be thought, that they were placed there for any other end, but that by ſeeing them men might from time to time be held in expectation of the Meſſiah, as the Caldee renders the word, which wee read Branch, and remember the goodneſſe and bounty of theſe men, who contributed readily at Gods appointment, ſo bountifully to the making of theſe Crowns to their everlaſting praiſe, as our Lord Jeſus ſaid of the woman, that was at ſo great coſt in providing a box of ointment, whereby to anoint him to the buriall, This ſhall be ſpoken of for a memoriall of her in all countries. For the ſignification of theſe names, ידעי ſignifieth knowing [illegible] טבות the goodneſſe of God, and both the other names are compiled in part [illegible] יה ſignifying God. Touching Joſiah in particular, to whoſe houſe he is bidden to goe and make Crowns, the Hebrews ſay, that after the Jews return from their captivity Cyrill. they made a treaſury and that Joſiah was the Keeper thereof, ſo Cyrill, and Jerome Hieron. calleth him æditum the Keeper of the houſe.

V. 12. Hee ſhall grow up out of his place, and he ſhall build the Temple of the Lord. This he ſpeaks of Chriſt, the branch, as he was alſo called before chap. 3.8. Heb. it is, he ſhall branch from under him, ומתחתיו יצמח, whereby it is meant, as Jerome hath it, he ſhall grow into many branches, who ſhall by the Preaching of the Goſpell ſpring out of him, for which cauſe he is ſaid to be the Vine, and beleevers the branches, and the Olive tree into which the Gentiles are graffed by faith, and they are ſaid to branch from under him, becauſe by vertue coming from him, and not by humane force or might, whereby they were compelled, for which cauſe, and to ſhew which he ſent not out great men or learned men at the firſt to preach the Goſpell, but poore and ignorant men, yet not to ſhew, that it was his will, that ſuch ſhould alwayes bee the inſtruments of converting ſoules, but that the Goſpell might appear to be the very power and wiſdome of God, and therefore after the 12 he called Paul, a learned man to goe out preaching alſo, who planted more Churches, then any of the other Apoſtles, as branches of this Vine or Olive tree, for the confutation of thoſe, who in theſe confuſed times, (wherein every one, that will, becomes a Preacher, as in the days of Jeroboam, men of the baſeſt ſort became Prieſts) plead for the Preaching of illiterate men, as ſent of God, and cry down learning. Theſe words are alſo by ſome underſtood of his owne ſpringing up, by virtue in himſelfe and not borrowed from any other. But the former is the beſt, and approved by the words following, he ſhall build my houſe, &c. this is done by thus branching out, ſith the houſe of God hereby meant is nothing elſe, but a company or Congregation of beleevers, as Epheſ. 2.20. 1 Tim. 3.15. V. 13. And for further confirmation of the ſame, he ſaith again v. 13. Even he ſhall build the Temple of the Lord, and he ſhall bear the glory, that is, the glory of the crowns before ſpoken of, being both King and Prieſt for ever, in pointing whereat, David ſaith, Thou haſt ſet a crown of pure gold upon his head, and Pſal. 110. Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedech, and ſit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footſtool: and of this glory, ſee before ch. 2.8. After the glory he hath ſent me to the Nations, where by glory is meant Chriſt filling the ſecond Temple with glory greater then the firſt, as was propheſied Hag. 2.7, 8. not of ſilver or gold, but of an high Prieſt a King of Kings that ſhould come into it, whereas none but an high Prieſt after the order of Aaron came into the other, adorned only with pontificall robes wrought with gold and ſilver, the glittering & glorious things of this world, but he ſhining in heavenly glory, although not ſeen with carnall but ſpiritual eys, unleſſe when he pleaſed by a few in his transfiguration upon the Mount, and by John, Rev. 1. And he ſhall ſit and rule upon his Throne, and be a Prieſt upon his Throne, and the counſell of Peace ſhall be between them both. As he hath two crowns, ſo he hath alſo two thrones, ruling as a King by powerfully ſubduing all enemies, either making them to yeild and ſubmit unto him, or breaking them in pieces and deſtroying them, and as an high Prieſt, ſacrificing and making interceſſion for his people. And between theſe two, he ſaith, is the counſell of peace, that is, when men are ſubdued unto him by beleeving and obeying, and their ſinnes are done away by his ſacrificing of himſelf and continuall interceſſion for them, there followeth peace with God, who in his eternall counſell hath thus provided to make peace betwixt ſinfull man and himſelf, and betwixt Jew and Gentile, and Nation and Nation, and the people of a Nation amongſt themſelves, there being otherwiſe no peace to the wicked, ſo alſo Hag. 2.8. Eſa. 11. And in me, ſaith Chriſt, ye ſhall have peace. If it be at any time otherwiſe in the Church, there being ſtrife and contention, it is for want of one of theſe, Chriſt doth not rule in the heart, or in the Church, all things in worſhip and diſcipline being ordered according to his will, as indeed it is ſeldom done, and to be ſure is not done at this day in our Church, wherein either there is no government, or they have a ſtroak in the government thereof to whom the Lord never committed it, being neither Biſhops, Presbyters, Paſtors, or Teachers, or Deacons, who only are his Officers, all others being introduced by men. The Jewes expound this counſel of peace between theſe two, of the good agreement betwixt the King and the Prieſt, Zerubbabel and Joſhua, whereas in times paſt there were ſometimes jarres, as betwixt Uzziah the King that would offer incenſe and Azariah the Prieſt reſiſting him. But becauſe the crowns were ſet, not upon two mens heads, but only the head of one, this falleth to the ground and the Expoſition before going muſt needs ſtand firm.

V. 14. And the crowns ſhall be to Helem, and Tobijah, Jedajah and Hen: where two of the names before mentioned are named again, Tobijah and Jedajah, the goodneſſe of God, and the knowledge of God, but for the other two, Heldai and Joſiah, here are new names, Helem and Hen, the firſt חלם ſignifying a dream, the other חן grace. Hereupon the Rabbins, bold to invent any thing, ſay, that by Helem was meant Daniel, ſo called for his expounding of dreams, and by them Ananias, Azarias, and Miſael, for the great grace that was in them, not to be moved through fear of the fiery furnace to worſhip Nebuchadnezzars image, for to theſe, ſay they, coming from Babylon and bringing much treaſure with them, the Prophet was bidden to goe for this gold and ſilver. But to paſſe this over as a conjecture, it is moſt commonly held, that Heldai before ſpoken of, had two names, and ſo had Joſiah, and therefore having ſpoken of them by one before, now he ſpeaks of them by the other, being moſt ſignificative to ſet forth the men to whom Chriſts glory ſhall be communicated, viz. the knowers of God, and ſuch as have goodneſſe like that of God in them, ſuch as God reveals himſelf to, as by dreams he did of old, ſo that they underſtand his myſticall things; and laſtly ſuch as have grace to walk before him in holineſſe as they ought, and righteouſneſſe all their dayes. Now to them it is ſaid, that theſe crowns ſhall be to them for a memoriall in the Temple of the Lord, that is, having been ſet upon the head of Joſhua and then taken and laid up in the Note. Temple, ſo that all who ſhould ſee them ſhould remember and praiſe their piety, out of whoſe bounty theſe were made. And conſequently, hereby was ſhewed, that able men, who are liberall in doing any thing in the Church of God, according to his will by their purſes to his glory, ſhall not be forgotten but be had in everlaſting remembrance in heaven, which is chiefly Gods houſe.

V. 15. And they that are far off ſhall come and build in the Temple of the Lord, that is, Heathen Kings contributing hereunto, as after this Darius did Artaxerxes, ſpoken of Nehem. 1. and Ptolemie Philadelphus, who ſent pretious veſſels unto it. But it is ſpecially meant of the Temple, which the Branch Chriſt Jeſus ſhould build under the Goſpel. For to building of this ſpirituall Temple the Miniſters of Chriſt in moſt remote places, being ſtirred up from amongſt the Gentiles, came and laboured, as in Eph. 4. 12. not only Apoſtles, but Paſtors, and Teachers are ſaid to build the Church of Chriſt which is his body. And this is ſpoken for the incouragement of the Jews to goe on in building and to ſhame thoſe that were not forward herein, when as foreiners that had not ſo much reaſon, ſhould come to doe that, which they either for fear of danger, or for the coſts and charges of the building refuſed to do: and this ſhall come to paſſe, if yee diligently obey the voice of the Lord your God; this is added to ſhew that Gods promiſes of good take not effect, but are fruſtrated to them that diſobey and ſin againſt his commandements, as is further expreſly ſaid, Jer. 18. 9, 10. And therefore if ſo much were not done for the Jews as was promiſed by the Lord, it was through their own default in not injoying ſo happy a time after their return out of captivity as the Prophets ſpake of. Whereas the Hebrews ſay, that this Propheſie of Foreiners building was fulfilled in Herod, who built their Temple moſt magnificently, becauſe he neither came from far nor had they peace, but were full of troubles and vexation under him for his cruel practiſes againſt their high Prieſt and his many other enormities, which made them ſometimes to flee to the Senate at Rome to complaine; It was therefore fulfilled only ſpiritually to the full, as was before ſaid upon Hag. 2. 7, and but in a little part before according to the letter by that which forein Kings did.

CHAP. VII.

THe 4 year of Darius the 4 day of the month Chiſleu: The time of the Lords ſpeaking to Zechariah was noted twice before, ch.1.1. the 8 month of the 2 year of Darius: and v.7. the 11 month called Sebat, whereby it appeareth that the Jews reckoned their years by months, two of which were called Sebat and Chiſleu, and of the firſt called Niſan, ſee Eſth.3. of the third called Sivan, Eſth.8. of the tenth called Tebeth, Eſth.2. and of the twelfth called Adar, Eſth. 14. of the names of the other months we read not in ſacred Hiſtory, but elſewhere the ſecond month is called Jiar, the fourth Tamuz, the fifth Ab, the ſixth Elul, the ſeventh Tiſbri, the eighth Matheſan, all which are Caldee names, and hereby the Jews began not to call their months, till the time of their captivity and living amongſt the Caldees. Before, their firſt month was called Abib, Exod.13. the ſecond Zio, 1 King.6. the ſeventh Ethanim, ch. 8. &c. But it is to be underſtood, that the firſt month ſo accounted amongſt the Hebrews was not the firſt amongſt the Caldees, or other Nations. For they reckoned from the time of their deliverance out of Egypt; as God commanded Moſes, and their holy feaſts were appointed by months, the Paſſeover in Abib, and their feaſt of Tabernacles in Ethanan the 7 month: Abib anſwering to our Aprill in part, and to March in part, thereafter as the Moon happened to change, becauſe they began their month with the Moon, we not. And then the 7 month anſwered to September in part, and in part to October, which was to the Caldees and other Nations the firſt month of the year. So that the year was reckoned two wayes, either civilly from September, &c. or religiouſly from March, the firſt account holding in all civill matters, the ſecond in holy things, as feaſts. Some hold that the months are here counted by the reign of Darius, and according to the time of the year wherein he begun his reign, but this is ſufficiently proved to be falſe, by the reckoning of the months already made, it was then in the 9 month of the year, according to the common account that this word came to Zechariah, almoſt two yeares after his revelation had before, not that he went all that time without Preaching to the people, but many things being in the mean ſeaſon ſhewed unto him, as appears chap. 2.3. 4.5.6. onely this was the next moſt remarkable time of a new revelation about 2 years after their ſetting on to build the Temple againe, in which it ſeemeth that although they had both this Prophet and Haggai amongſt them continually inculcating good unto them and diſſwading them from evill, yet they lived wickedly, and therefore had need as well to be quickened to holineſſe of life and to leave their ſinnes, as to the building of Gods houſe, for which he here proceedeth as he doth in telling them of their fathers wickedneſſe, v.9,10,11,&c. and their own abuſive faſting, v. 5,6,7. and exhorting them to juſtice, ch.8.16,17. But to proceed as the words of the Prophet ly in order. V. 2. When they had ſent to the houſe of God Sharezer and Regemmelech and their men to pray before the Lord. Heb. Regemmelek ſent and Sharezer and his men; and both Calvin and Gualter follow this reading, Calvin rendring it, Regemmelek had ſent, in which words the occaſion of this propheſie is intimated. This Regemmelek and Sharezer, were prime men and of great authority amongſt thoſe Jews, who yet remained at Babylon and returned not with the reſt to their own countrey, as they had liberty to doe, but being there long ſetled and probably grown wealthy they preferred to continue there ſtill in a certain eſtate before removing to uncertain. They now hearing of the welfare of the Jews, the captivity alſo being long agoe at an end and of the going forward of the work of the Sanctuary by the preſent Kings allowance, began to conceive, that whereas faſts had been kept by the Jewes in Babylon during the 70 years captivity, and now a long time after, that the cauſe being removed theſe faſts ſhould ceaſe and be kept no more. But becauſe they would doe nothing raſhly, before they would ceaſe from keeping them, they

they thought it neceſſary to ſend to the prieſts at Jeruſalem and the Prophets there to inquire the will of God in this matter, and did therefore ſend, as is here ſaid, and it is not meant, that others ſent them, as in the New Tranſlation which the Hebrew will not bear, but Sharezer ſent Regemmelech and his men, that is, the men of the place where he lived by his motion, being therefore called his men, becauſe drawn by him to ſubſcribe to this embaſſage and to contribute to the bearing of the charge. He ſent principally ſome about whom they agreed to Jeruſalem to inquire about this matter, and to pray there for them as God of old appointed, Deut. 17. 8. touching inquiring in difficult caſes and controverſies, and touching praying in the houſe of God, when Solomon had built and dedicated it. Hereupon the Lord by his ſpirit ſpake unto Zachariah to ſay, as followeth, verſ. 5, 6, &c. To which words before we come, note 1. that the Jewes who lived far from Jeruſalem, yet were not without piety towards God, for ſo much as they ſent thither ſome to repreſent their whole congregation, and to pray for it, as God had appointed, that the length of the way may not be a hinderance to any of Gods people in comming to the place, to which they ſhould, for devotions ſake. 2. They would alter nothing in the ſervice of God without advice taken with thoſe at Jeruſalem, where the Synedrion or great councell of the Jewes was, by the determination whereof things were to be ordered: a manifeſt ground for a Synod in a Chriſtian Kingdome for the ordering of things in the Church of God, and againſt thoſe particular conventicles, that without conſulting with ſuch a councell dare alter things in Gods publick worſhip, holding an independency, and liberty for every one to follow his own conſcience in matters of religion. For if theſe men, that came ſhort of their duty in not returning to help build the houſe of God, yet had ſo much goodneſſe in them, as that they would not upon their own heads go from the cuſtome of the Church to the making of a ſchiſme herein, how much are they to be condemned, that without any regard of this by their tenet of independency lay a ground of innumerable ſchiſmes? Laſtly, for the queſtion made, verſ. 3. whether they ſhould weep ſeparating themſelves in the 5 moneth any more, as they had done for many years, that is, ever ſince the beginning of the captivity, note, that faſting ought to be joyned with weeping, as alſo is commanded Joel 2. and then a man ought to ſeparate himſelf from worldly imployment, that he may wholly intend his duty.

V. 5. Now to come unto verſ. 5. Speak to the prieſts and to all the people of the land, ſaying, when ye faſted the 7. moneth and the 5. moneth, did ye faſt unto me? The men comming from Babylon moved the queſtion, but the Prophet in ſtead of anſwering them is directed by the Lord to turn to the prieſts and people inhabiting at Jeruſalem, taking occaſion from this queſtion moved to taxe them for their formall faſting the 5. and 7. moneths all that long time that they had continued ſo to do, as thinking that the very duty doing was a great point of piety, although without reformation of their manners. But why did he thus, and not rather anſwer the inquirers? Sol. It is probable, that this queſtion being moved to the prieſts, they ſtood for mens going on in keeping the faſt, affirming it to be ſuch a duty, as that none could queſtion, whether they ought ſtill to go on in keeping it without being branded with the note of prophaneneſſe. And this is the more probable, becauſe the Phariſees, that roſe up afterwards boaſted of their often faſting, as if for this very thing none other men were comparable to them. To take them down then, who now bare themſelves upon their continuall going on in faſting in the moneths aforeſaid, and deſpiſed theſe, that were come to inquire, the Prophet being asked by theſe ſpeaks to them, vilifying their faſting all this time, as nought worth, becauſe they faſted not from ſin, as they ſhould chiefly have done, no faſt, that is kept, being otherwiſe a faſting unto God, but unto our ſelves, and ſo altogether unacceptable to God, and he ſaith, that they faſted to themſelves, becauſe that although their preſent caſe required faſting and prayer extraordinary, yet to keep ſet times month after moneth was their own in-invention, neither had they any warrant for it from Gods word but only ſometime to call a faſt, and the judgement ſtill continuing to call another, there being danger by cuſtomary keeping of it, to bring it to be a formall thing, and ſo rather a ſin then a vertue, as the Phariſee's faſting afterwards twice a week, according to the tradition of the elders, puffing him up above other men. Moreover the people, amongſt whom Zachary was ſet to teach Note. being wicked, and without all power of godlineſſe in their lives, there was good reaſon that he ſhould firſt by reproving the abuſes amongſt them ſeek to reform them, before that he dealt with others further off. For hereby he intimated, that a paſtour ſhould firſt and chiefly look to his own flock, and every private man to his own houſe, before that he intermeddles with matters concerning others, which yet is alſo to be done, becauſe by the Lord required, ſaying, Thou ſhalt not hate thy brother in thine heart, but tell him, and not Levit. 19. 17.

ceaſed faſting and fell to eating and drinking, as ye thought good, and not as I require. For God would have us, when we eat and drink, to do it to his glory, looking up to him to give him praiſe, taking heed of exceſſe herein, and not following our own appetites, but in our eating and drinking having reſpect unto this, viz. to be hereby refreſhed and ſtrengthened, and ſo to be 1 Cor. 10. 31. made the more fit to labour in our vocations, and to ſerve him in duties of piety. Whoſoever doth not thus, but intends meerly the filling of his belly with things moſt delicious, he doth not eat unto the Lord, but to himſelf, and ſo offendeth.

Should ye not hear the words which the Lord hath cryed by the former Prophets? Here V. 8.
Zachary cometh plainly to declare his meaning in that, which he had challenged them for before, viz. that their faſting could not be acceptable to God, becauſe they did their own wils, and were unjuſt and deceitfull in their dealings one towards another, and when they did ſo, Iſaiah had taught them how much the Lord deſpiſed all their faſtings, and outward humiliations, yea and Eſa. 58. 1. this he did by extending his voice to the uttermoſt, for which it is ſaid, he cryed, and accordingly the Lord ſaid there, cry aloud, lift up thy voice as a Execute true judgement, &c. In calling upon them thus to do it is intimated, V. 9. that they did it not, but ſinned one againſt another by injuſtice and wrong, as their forefathers had done, when the kingdome of Judah flouriſhed, but was therefore come into their enemies hands and brought to deſolation, which is here commemorated for a warning to them, that they might now beware and not go to do likewiſe, as they would not ſuffer by the like terrible judgements.

caſion of thoſe Jewes queſtion about the faſt which came from Babylon, taxed them at Ieruſalem for their unjuſt dealing, and not being made any whit the better for all their faſting 70. years together, ſeeking by all means their reformation, now he cometh to them that were ſent from Babylon to inquire about the faſt, whether it ſhould ſtil continue or no. And that he might win them the more and make them willing to return to Ieruſalem, the countrey being left in which they ſtill continued to their great ſhame, he propheſyeth of a moſt proſperous eſtate, wherein Ieruſalem ſhould now be, their enemies who had ſpoiled them being ſeverely animadverted againſt, and brought down ſo, as that they ſhould not be able to ſtand up to hurt them any more. For theſe

But Calvin and Gualter, of his wrath againſt her enemies, into whoſe hands ſhe had been long delivered for her ſins, and had been vilely entreated: but now the Lord profeſſeth all his fury againſt her enemies, as laying to heart the indignities by them offered to her, his Spouſe. For the prepoſition here uſed is ל, ſignifying, not againſt, but for, and a jealous husbands wrath is not only againſt her, when ſhe proveth falſe unto him, but alſo being reconciled againſt ſuch as abuſe her. And this ſeems to be beſt, becauſe in explaining himſelf what he meant hereby, verſ. 3. he ſaith, I am returned to Zion and will dwell in the midſt of Jeruſalem, which could not be done without judging their enemies, that formerly kept them under. Touching the application of this Propheſie, it is by them, that are of ſoundeſt judgement made firſt unto the Jewes, towards whom it was fulfilled in part, when after their ſetting on again to build the Temple they had plenty, being before in great want and ſcarcity, as was ſhewed, Hag. 1. Touching which plenty ſee verſ. 12. here following, and when after contention with their neighbours, of which ſee Ezra 4. they had peace, as is ſaid, verſ. 10, 11. But moſt perfectly were all gracious promiſes here made fulfilled to the faithfull under the Goſpel conſiſting both of Jews and Gentiles, Jeruſalem ſhall be called a city of truth, and the mountain the holy mountain of the Lord, the Church or congregation of the faithfull being hereby underſtood, as in many other places.

V. 7. I will ſave my people from the eaſt country and from the weſt. This is manifeſtly ſpoken of the faithfull gathered together from all parts into the Church of Chriſt, becauſe the Jewes are every where ſaid to have been carryed not into the eaſt or weſt, but into the north. And therefore this our Prophet ſpeaking of the ſame, chap. 2. nameth not only eaſt and weſt; but alſo north and ſouth, and our Lord Jeſus in ſpeaking of the nations, that ſhould come in Luk. 13.29. ſaid, they ſhall come out of the eaſt and the weſt, and ſit down with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, &c. the children of the Kingdome, that is, the Jewes, who beleeved not, being ſhut out of doors.

V. 10. Before theſe daies there was no hite for man or beaſt. That is, men and beaſts labouring in tilling the ground, it payed them not with her increaſe. And there was no peace to him that went in or out. That is, neighbouring nations were at ſuch enmity with the Jewes, that a man could no ſooner go out of the city, Hieron. Cyrill. but ſome were ready to ſeaze upon him to rob or kill him, and every one was againſt his neighbour, without the city it was as hath been ſaid, and within it was as ill, becauſe there were falſe brethren ſeeking advantages againſt their brethren the Jewes. Thus almoſt Jerom and Cyrill. And this is premiſed as done before the building of the Temple, that the mercy to be ſhewed after, might be the more magnified, viz. the mercy of peace and of the plentifull en-

Hieron. Rupert. from thence into Egypt, v. 25. But Jerom aſcending higher, beſides theſe reaſons of keeping theſe 4. faſts, aſſignes others for two of them, viz. Moſes his breaking of the Tables, when he came down from the Mount, which was done, & Gods wrath declared againſt Iſrael for their idolatry with the golden calf. For that Exod. 32. this was in the 4. moneth of their departure out of Egypt appeareth, becauſe they came out in the moneth of Abib, which was the firſt moneth, and came to Mount Sinai in the 3. moneth, and them Moſes was called up to the Mount, where he ſtayed 40. daies, and comming down again he brake Exod. 19. the Tables out of indignation at the aforeſaid idolatry. For the fifth moneth he giveth this reaſon, the heavie tidings came then of Gods wrath againſt them for murmuring at the return of the ſpies out of the land of Canaan, who Numb. 14. therefore threatned them that they ſhould never come there, but periſh in the wilderneſſe. For that this was in the fifth moneth may be gathered from Numb. 10. where it is ſaid the cloud was lifted up and they began to travell in the 2. moneth the 20. day, then comming to Kibroth hattaavah they tarryed Numb. 11. there an whole moneth, and for Miriam ſmitten with the leproſie 7. daies, Numb. 13. after which the ſearchers were ſent into Canaan, and returned not, till after 40. daies, and then was that murmuring for which they were threatned. But however the times may agree to the ſad things by him mentioned, yet it is not to be thought, that theſe faſts were now kept therefore, but the reaſons before ſaid, for it is ſpoken of faſting theſe 70. years, whereas if they had be- Chap. 5. gun upon theſe occaſions, they had now continued many hundreths of years.

But now he by way of anſwering them that were come from Babylon, ſaith, in effect, that they ſhould keep theſe faſts no more, the cauſe why, being at an end, and that in ſtead of faſts they ſhould keep their feaſts again with joy, as they could not do all the time of their exile, becauſe they were to be kept at Jeruſalem, from whence they had been in theſe 70. years far removed. And in ſaying thus he doth in a manner invite them, leaving the parts where they now lived to return to Jeruſalem, that they might have indeed a time of perfect rejoycing in Gods great mercy in delivering them from their long continued miſeries in Babylon.

V. 20. Thus ſaid the Lord of hoſts, there ſhall yet come people, &c. Having ſpoken all comfort to the ſincere and peace loving Jew, verſ. 19. now he propheſieth of the converſion of the Gentiles by the preaching of the Jewes, that is, the Apoſtles under the Goſpell, which ſhall tend further to the increaſing of their joy; and in ſpeaking of the Lord, that ſhall do this, he ſaith, the Lord of hoſts. As he alſo doth very often in this propheſie, leſt any ſhould doubt of the power whereby ſuch mighty things ſhould be effected. In ſaying, there ſhall yet come people, he meaneth, that the joy and feaſting before ſpoken of ſhall long hold, untill, as the word עד ſignifieth, peoples come in unto God through the Apoſtles preaching, the vulg. hath it uſquequo, or it may be read, untill that.

V. 21. And one city ſhall ſay to another, Let us goe to pray, and I will go alſo: a notable expreſſion of the earneſt deſire of the nations unto Chriſt being once inlightened by the word, as Eſa. 2. and Mich. 4. and finally the city, that exhorteth another is brought in ſaying, and I will go alſo, that is, not move you to that, which I will not do my ſelf, but I will be one of the forwardeſt. And in ſtirring up one another to go to Jeruſalem he meaneth, to the Church of Chriſt, verſ. 22.

V. 23. Then ſhewing in what great numbers they ſhould come in he ſaith, Ten men ſhall lay hold of the ſkirt of a Jew. By ten a multitude being underſtood, as in many other places, and in ſaying, they ſhould lay hold of his ſkirt, he alludeth to the Jewes manner of apparell, being a long garment with fringe upon the ſkirt thereof, and intimateth that the nations hearing of Chriſt, ſhould be as ready to follow the preacher and to be led unto him, as a childe, that takes hold of his fathers ſkirt, of whom he is moſt fond to goe with him to any place.

CHAP. IX.

V. 1. T*He burthen of the Word of the Lord in the land of* Hadrack and Damaſcus ſhall be the reſt thereof. The Lord having before comforted and incouraged his people by promiſing after the temple built, happy times unto them, now leſt they ſhould be afraid of the interruption of their joy by their enemies round about them, he here comforteth them againſt this fear. By the land of Hadrack ſome underſtand Arabia, but others more probably Syria, becauſe Damaſcus here alſo ſpoken of is the chief city of Syria. And that the Syrians were great enemies of the Jewes, and nigh unto them, we read in ſundry places.
Now that they may not fear the Syrians, he ſaith not only the burthen, whereby alwaies ſome great judgement tending to deſtruction is meant, but Zech. 5. alſo, that Damaſcus ſhall be the reſt of this burthen, that is, being laid on, it ſhall there continue, as was ſaid before of the Ephah, that it ſhould be ſetled upon the Baſis in the land of Shinar, When the eyes of man and of all the tribes of Iſrael ſhall be towards the Lord. Here the time is pointed out, when the enemies of the children of Iſrael ſhould thus lye under Gods heavie judgements, viz. when their eyes ſhould be towards the Lord, and this is by hearkening to his Commandements to do them, as Pſal. 113. 1. As the eyes of a ſervant are towards the hand of his maſter, ſo are our eyes toward thee, and by not truſting in an arme of fleſh, but in God alone, whereas heretofore they had truſted in their own ſtrength, wiſdome, and wealth, which whoſo doth, cannot have his eyes towards God, and ſo the help and comfort before ſpoken of from him. And he ſaith firſt, the eyes of man, and then of all the tribes, to intimate that they had done before but like carnall men, and they not a few, but generally all the tribes of Iſrael, for there was a generall corruption amongſt them, but this being purged out, they, he ſheweth, ſhould generally above man depend wholly upon and truſt in him.

V. 2. Hamath alſo ſhall border thereby, Tyrus and Sidon though very wiſe. That is, theſe cities, how mighty and politick ſoever, ſhall fear no better then Syria before ſpoken of, touching two of which, Tyrus and Sidon and their wealth and pride the Prophets often ſpeak; of Hamath, as a very great city of Syria the Prophet Amos ſpeaketh, it was furtheſt remote from Damaſcus, and ſo a place which thought to eſcape, when the burthen ſhould take up Damaſcus for the reſt thereof. The diſtance of a place from that, upon which God ſends Note. his judgements, is nothing to hinder their piercing thither alſo, God can and will joyn places furtheſt diſtant one from the other being alike in ſin in the like heavie judgements, he hath both a ſword and bow, to ſlay nigh at hand and afar off.

V. 4,5. Aſhkelon ſhall ſee it and fear, and Gaza, &c. and a baſtard ſhall dwell in Aſhdod.
Tyrus and Sidon being deſtroyed by Gods judgements, the Philiſtims come next to be threatned, whoſe the cities or lordſhips here named were:
for they were moſt infeſt enemies to the Jewes. For a baſtard inhabiting Gualter. Aſhdod, the vulg. hath a ſeparator; Gualter, a ſtranger, the word is ממזר of זר to be a ſtranger, as a baſtard is called, becauſe he comes of another, a ſtranger and not of a wedded husband. And if we take it for a ſtranger, the ſenſe is plain, the enemy being a ſtranger having ſubdued Aſhdod ſhall dwell there, as Arrianus ſaith, that Alexander having ſubdued the Philiſtims countrey, after Tyrus and Sidon, placed ſome of his forces in Aſhdod, as he ſaw it moſt commodious for him for the ſubduing of other peoples thereabouts.
Lyra upon the word ſeparatour ſaith, that Alexander might well be ſo called, becauſe he divided the land there amongſt his ſouldiers, yet as the word ſignifieth a baſtard, ſo he ſaith Alexander might well be thus called, for he was begotten by Kendebeus in the likeneſſe of Jupiter Ammonius lying with his mother, Calvin. as his Hiſtory ſheweth. Calvin by a ſtranger here underſtands a few of that city left, and keeping there now but as ſtrangers, here one, and there another. And why did the Lord thus to the Philiſtims? The next words ſhew, For their pride, and I will take the bloud out of his mouth and the abomination from between his teeth. Whereby is meant, that the Philiſtims were great ſhedders of V. 7. bloud, and therefore he ſpeaks of them as of Lions, or Wolves, out of whoſe mouthes ſilly ſheep are plucked, which they are devouring bloud and fleſh and all, & by victories and getting other mens goods into their poſſeſſion they were greatly puffed up with pride. But he addeth, he that remaineth ſhall be for our God, and a governour in Judah and Ekron, as a Jebuſite, wherein he propheſieth of their converſion to Chriſt alſo, after all this ſuffered, ſo many of them, as eſcaped. But why ſhall Ekron alone be as a Jebuſite, one of the old inhabitants of Canaan, whom the Lord expelled before Iſrael without any mercy. Some, ſaith Calvin, think, that hereby it is meant, that they of Ekron ſhall have the honour to dwell in Jeruſalem, as the Jebuſites long did, but he rejecting this, ſaith, that the meaning is, Ekron, although it ſhall be longer in deſtroying, then the other cities of the Philiſtims, yet it ſhall be but as the Jebuſite, who kept the tower of Sion till Davids time, but then they were by him expelled. But forſomuch as the judgements to come upon the Philiſtims cities or principalities went before, whereof Ekron was one, and here the Prophet turns from ſpeaking terrour to ſpeak comfort, I rather hold that as of them, which remained he ſaith, that they ſhould be to God, and be as princes in Judah; for ſo the word ſignifieth, that is, in high and honourable account in the Chriſtian Church ſet forth by Judah, ſo the inhabitants of Ekron in particular, that remained, ſhould be as the Jebuſites dwelling amongſt the Jewes, when the Amorites, and Canaanites were expelled, and that in the chief part of the land Jeruſalem, which anciently was called from them Jebus, according to the diſtick. Solyma, Luza, Bethel, Jeruſolyma, Jebus, Elia, Vrbs ſacra Jeruſalem, dicitur atq; Salem: for ſo it is ſaid, Joſh. 15. The Jebuſites dwelt with the Jewes in Jeruſalem to this day, neither could they be expelled. But of theſe Philiſtims it is not meant ſo much, that they ſhould be, as the Jebuſites, in that place, but that they ſhould be by faith incorporated into the Church, the company of which it conſiſteth being called Jewes within, according Rom. 2. 29. to the ſpirit, though not in the fleſh. Lyra expounds it of their being at length ſubdued to the faith of Chriſt, as the Jebuſites were finally ſubdued by David.

V. 8. And I will encampe about my houſe because of the army. Having hitherto ſpoken of the heavie judgements to come upon the Jewes enemies, ſo that they ſhould not need to fear them, but chearfully go on in the work of building God houſe, now he addeth further for their comfort, if any other enemies ſhould ariſe, ſomething of his continuall keeping watch and ward about it. For theſe words, becauſe of the army and him that goeth out and returneth, the vulg. hath it, of the army paſſing and repaſſing: expounded by Lyra of Judas Maccabæus with his army ſubduing the enemy and purging Gods houſe from idola- Lyra. try, of which we read in the Maccabees, and the Hebr. will well bear this reading, although the prepoſition מִן here uſed be moſt commonly tranſlated from, and it may well go either way, it being hereby ſhewed, as from whom his ſhould be ſaved, ſo by whom, and thus the oppreſſour or exactour, Antiochus Epiphanes, who raged ſo much againſt Gods people, he ſheweth ſhould be kept from doing ſo any more, and as a reaſon hereof, he ſaith, for I have ſeen with mine eyes, that is, ſaith Calvin, I have ſeen the great ſufferings of my Calvin. people to come by that tyrant, and therefore out of my great compaſſion to mine own, I have thus decreed to ſuccour and help both them and my houſe ſo horribly abuſed. For neither doth the Prophet ſpeak this of himſelf, as if nothing were meant, but that by the ſpirit he foreſaw it, according to ſome, nor of the bare foreknowledge, or foreſight of God, according to others.

V. 6. Rejoyce, O daughter of Zion. Here the Prophet commeth plainly to propheſie of Chriſt, of whom he ſpake but obſcurely before, in ſaying, that the remnant of the Philiſtims ſhould be as princes in Judah. That which is here ſaid, is ſo well explained Matth. 21. that I ſhall need to ſay nothing more upon it in this place: only whereas he ſaith here, poor and ſaved, there it is meek, for the word, נושע ſignifieth to be ſaved, vulg. poor and a Saviour, New Tranſlation, Bringing ſalvation, Calvin, ſaved, expounding it of his being ſaved in his members through his humbling himſelf to the poor and to ſuffer. Calvin.

V. 10. I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim and the horſe from Jeruſalem, and the battell bow ſhall be cut off and he ſhall ſpeak peace, &c. Here leſt any ſhould imagine, when the comming of Zions king is ſpoken of, that he would gather the people of Iſrael and by force of armes joyning the two kingdomes together ſubdue the nations unto him, he ſaith ſo, as that they might eaſily gather the contrary, that none of his people ſhould be armed to ſet him up as king over all either with chariots, horſes, bowes or other warlike inſtruments: but that by ſpeaking peace whereſoever he ſhould come with his word this ſhould be done, as indeed it was, when he bad his diſciples comming to any city or houſe ſay, peace be to this city or houſe, and going thus out into all nations ſet up his kingdome there, and by preaching ſubdued the world unto him, of which large Empire of his he ſpeaketh in the next words, And his dominion ſhall be from ſea to ſea, and from the river to the ends of the earth.

V. 11. As for thee alſo, by the bloud of the covenant I have ſent forth thy priſoners out of the pit, wherein there is no water, the vulg. Thou alſo haſt ſent forth. Hebr. Thou alſo I have ſent forth. Here for אתה thou a maſculine is את thou a feminine which the Rabbins expound of the Church of the Jewes, as if the Prophet had turned his ſpeech to them, thus ſeeking to elude a plain evidence touching Chriſt Jeſus, as if it had been ſaid, alſo thou O Judah, I have ſent out thy priſoners, making uſe of the letter ſignifying thy being a feminine alſo further to confirm the ſame. Some to avoid this inference, ſay that the Jewes have corrupted the Text, putting את for אתה, and שלחתי or שלחתיה. But Calvin ſaith alſo; that this ſpeech is directed to the Church of the Jewes, as a wife by God marryed to him, rendring the words, heus tu, O thou, I have ſent out, as if he had ſaid, thou haply muſt ſlight all that hath been ſpoken of the king riding upon an aſſe to come bringing ſalvation, &c. becauſe thou haſt many enemies ſtill, and ſuffereſt much miſery, but fear nothing, by the bloud of thy covenant, which thou haſt from me confirmed by bloud, Exod. 24. when Moſes ſprinkling the book, wherein it was written, bound the people unto it, for which he ſaith, by the bloud of thy covenant, I have ſent out thy bound ones, &c. that is, thy members in the bands of many and great miſeries, wherein they lay, as in a pit without water, that is, both in miſery like a dark deep pit without all comfort, and a place, where for want of water there is danger of dying through thirſt. And likewiſe Gualter ſaying, he argueth from their deliverance paſt to confirme them in the hope and expectation by the King or Meſſiah to come, taking Babylon to be the place here compared to a pit without water for the uncomfortable and dangerous caſe, wherein they were there, but God had graciouſly delivered them from thence, and therefore this might be a ground of confidence, that as by the bloud of the Old Teſtament, or covenant in circumciſion they had been delivered from thence, ſo by Chriſts bloud, which is the bloud of the New Covenant, or Teſtament, they ſhould have everlaſting deliverance and life through faith in his name. Theſe words then hang together with the former, and carry this ſenſe thus. He had ſaid, that this King in appearance poor ſhould ſpeak peace to the nations, and extend his dominion amongſt them farre and wide. Now that the Church of the Jewes might not be without hope in him he addeth, alſo thou my firſt wife, by the bloud of thy covenant, that is, the bloud of my ſon, the ſaid King, whereby I have made a new covenant with thee, not of works, but of faith, I have brought out thy priſoners, or bound ones, that is, long bound up in infidelity, but towards the end of the world converted, out of the pit, wherein was no water, that Calvin. Gualter.

is, the foreſaid pit of infidelity, ſo called, becauſe deep, and no hope of a mans ſelf to get out; and through darkneſſe uncomfortable, for no man, ſaith Christ, cometh to me, except the Father draw him. And when one by believing comes to Chriſt, he comes out of darkneſſe into a marvellous light; and it is a pit without water, that is, water of which Chriſt ſpeaketh, ſaying, If any one thirſteth, let him come to me, and I will give him of the water of life: and all this is ſpoken of in the preter tenſe, as already done; for the certainty thereof, whereas Ribera ſuppoſeth a corruption in the Hebr. to be here, it may be conceived, by that which hath been ſaid, how vain an imagination that is; beſides that, it is dangerous to yeild hereunto, as being derogatory to the credit of Gods Word in the Originall, which is by all means, in every title to be upheld. And whereas Lyra, by the pit wherein there is no water, underſtands Limbus Patrum, where the faithfull were before Chriſts Aſcenſion, but then taken up with him, they being the bound here ſpoken of, it is not ſolid, neither is it ſeconded by any other place of Scripture, teaching, that there ever was any ſuch place. To conclude, for corruption here in the Text, it would nothing avail the Jewes, to make it for the avoiding of a Propheſie touching Chriſt; ſeeing it is neither thus avoided, as I have ſhewed, neither is there an evidence touching Chriſt, in the words before going, ver. 9, 10. more full and plain wanting, although this ſhould not to him be applyed. Yea, ſo plain, as Chryſoſtome, and other ancients ſay, that alone it is ſufficient to convince any Jew, that Jeſus is the King, who was to come, becauſe never any other King but he, rode into Jeruſalem upon an Aſſe whilſt the city ſtood.

V. 12. Turn ye to the ſtrong hold, ye priſoners of hope, even to day doe I declare, that I will render double unto thee. Here the Prophet upon the premiſes, cometh to the Jewes ſent from Babylon, chap 7.2. bidding them to return to Jeruſalem, under the name of the ſtrong hold, and not to dwell any longer in Babylon; and he calleth Jeruſalem a ſtrong hold, for promiſes of God made of incamping about his houſe there, becauſe they might think it, being yet without walls, that it was weak, and in continuall danger of enemies; and he calls them priſoners of hope, to diſtinguiſh them from the wicked Jewes, that would not beleeve any thing ſpoken by the Prophets touching the future happineſſe of their Nation; wherefore the Prophet ſpeaks not to them, but giving them over as deſperate, he addreſſeth himſelf to ſuch as beleeved; that although they had long been priſoners in Babylon, yet they hoped ſtill for a better, and more joyfull time, according to Gods Word, and then he ſaith, I will render double unto thee: that is, making thine eſtate far more happy than ever it was: Which, becauſe it was not done before the coming of the Meſſiah, muſt needs be underſtood of the time of the Goſpell, at their converſion to Chriſt, and then myſtically by the ſtrong hold muſt be meant the Church of the faithful under the Goſpell, which is built upon a rock, ſo ſtrongly, that it cannot be ſhaken, and the priſoners of hope muſt be thoſe before ſpoken of, thy bound ones, but by being turned to the faith, looſed and brought into perfect liberty.

V. 13. When I have bent thy ſons for me (O Judah) filled the bow with Ephraim, and raiſed up Zion againſt thy ſons (O Greece) and made thee as the ſword of a mighty man: Here the Prophet goes on in particular to foretell to the comfort of the Faithfull, what mighty acts he would inable the Jewes to doe in the time of the Grecians power, which he foreſaw by the ſpirit in the time of the Kingdomes in Ægypt and Syria raiſed up out of Alexanders Empire. For then ſpecially did this Propheſie work according to the letter. Judah was bent as a bow, by the ſtrength not of man, but of God, and Ephraim, as arrowes filled it, &c. when Mattathias roſe up, and his ſons, Judas Maccabeus, and his brethren in the time of that tyrant, Antiochus Epiphanes, and ſo mightily prevailed againſt his Armies, and Captaines, as in the books of Maccabees is ſhewed at large. For then God moſt apparently made them his Bow, and Arrows, and Sword, as it were, againſt this Grecian King. And the ſons of Zion were raiſed up againſt the ſons of Grecia, becauſe the Captaines, and moſt renowned, uſed by God, in theſe expeditions, were men of the Church, or Houſe of God in Zion, which the Heathen intolerably prophaned, and for this they [illegible] ſtirred up againſt them, and ſo miraculouſly prevailed. But all this is ſpoken of, as done by God, becauſe by his power: and ſo it is alwayes, when the people of God prevail againſt their enemirs; Note. it is not by their own ſtrength, but God uſeth them as his inſtruments, they being able of themſelves to doe nothing, no more then a bow, or a ſword, but by the hand of a mighty man, ſhooting, or ſmiting therewith.

V. 14. The Lord ſhall be ſeen over them, &c. Here the ſame is further proſecuted, in alluding to that, which was done of old, when the Heathen enemies ſaw, and confeſſed, that God fought for his people, and that by thunder, and lightning, as in the dayes of Samuel: 1 Sam. 7. and ſo he did afterwards, when in the time of Marcus Aurelius, at the interceſſion of the Chriſtian Legion in great want of water, he ſent thunder and lightning, and rain, whereby the whole Army was relieved, and the enemies, by the tempeſt, being upon their faces, confounded. With the ſound of trumpet, and whirlwinds out of the ſouth: in adding this, he puts them in minde of Gods powerfull preſence amongſt them of old, when with the ſound of a trumpet he came down to mount Sinai, and the Prieſts in war at his appointment, ſounded with the ſilver trumpets, at it is particularly noted in the dayes of Abijah, and a wonderfull victory was obtained. 1 Kings 14. For the whirlwinds out of the ſouth, this is ſpoken to ſhew the irreſiſtible force, whereby God came upon their enemies, for the ſouth, Hab.3. ſpeaking to the ſame effect, ſaith, God came from Teman, which lay ſouthward from Jeruſalem, when from that wilderneſſe, where he had ſhewed himſelf ſo full of terror, he went as a whirlwind overthrowing the Canaanites.

V. 15. And they ſhall devour and ſubdue with ſling-ſtones, and they ſhall drink, and make a noiſe, as through wine, and be filled like bowls, and as the corners of the Altar: that is, as David with a ſtone out of a ſling ſlew Goliah, ſo ſhall they their mightieſt enemies; and for devouring, and drinking, it is allegorically ſpoken, their ſubduing of their enemies being likened to a feaſt unto them. For as at a feaſt men eat fleſh, and drink wine abundantly, till they are filled herewith; ſo they in deſtroying their enemies, did, as it were eat their fleſh and fat, for which, in the like caſe it is ſaid, I will make a feaſt in Bozrah of fat things, and of wine upon the Lees. Eſay. And Revel. 19. there is an invitation to a Supper. Revel. 19.18. But what is it, that is added, as the horns of the Altar? verily, that they ſhould, by the ſlaughter of their enemies, be outwardly, as dipt in bloud, or ſprinkled, becauſe, when a ſacrifice was killed, the prieſts put ſome upon the horns of the Altar: and this is added, to ſhew, that the ſlaughter of the enemies made, ſhould be as an holy offering acceptable to God, and well-pleaſing, although bloud-ſhed generally be moſt defiling. And it is ſaid, they ſhould make a noiſe; as men having drank wine plentifully, ſing and ſhout for mirth, ſo they ſhould make a chearfull noiſe, in chanting out Gods praiſes.

V. 16. For they ſhall be as the ſtones of a crown, lifted up as an enſigne upon his land. This is ſpoken in reſpect of the honourable account, wherein they ſhould be had, even as pretious ſtones adorning a Crown after the ſubduing of their enemies before ſpoken of. And truly the Maccabees were for this had in high honour amongſt the Romans, who take them for their friends, and other great potentates of the Earth a long time, as may be ſeen in my continuation of the Hiſtory after Nehemiah.

V. 17. How great is his goodneſſe, how great his beauty? corn ſhall make the young men cheerfull, and new wine the maids. Here he concludeth with an Epiphonema to the Lord, as good and gracious to his people beyond expreſſion, and returning again, to the great increaſe of the Vine, and of the earth before ſpoken of, chap.8.12. he concludeth with it, Corne ſhall make young men cheerfull, and wine the maids; not hereby to countenance maids drinking of wine, but to ſhew the abundance ſhould be ſo great, that not onely parents ſhould have enough of the beſt, and moſt refreſhing Corne and wine for themſelves, but for their children all to give them ſome with them, whereas at other times, when there is no ſuch plenty, their ſons are fed more courſly, and there comes little wine to their daughters ſhare, but water, and to this effect almoſt Calvin. But in all this, as moſt Expoſitours agree, the ſubduing of Nations to Chriſt in the time of the Goſpell, is Myſtically ſet forth, and the great joy then of both Sexes, from the oldeſt unto the youngeſt, in him who is the true Bread, that came down from Heaven; and wine cauſing more chearfulneſſe to the heart of the Faithfull, then that wine, which the Vine yeildeth to make glad the heart, and the Corne, which the earth bringeth forth to ſtrengthen man. For then Judah was bent as a bow, &c. when the Apoſtles, who were Jewes, went out by preaching, and miraculous operations ſubduing Greeks, and Barbarians, as if conquered by bow and arrows, and the ſword, as the penetrative force of the Goſpell is called, Pſal. 45. Thy Arrowes are ſharp and keen; and Heb. 4. 12. The Word is ſharper then any two-edged ſword; and theſe went out of Zion. And to thunder and lightning the Lord compared ſome of them, when he called them Boanerges, and preaching is ſpoken of, as the trumpets ſounding, 1 Cor. 14. and as a whirlwind the Goſpel went out with ſuch celerity, overthrowing ſtrong holds, and of the Apoſtles being pretious ſtones, ſee Revel. 21. Eſai. 54. Then the Spouſe, the Church makes acclamations of Chriſts beauty, as in Cant. and the ſpirituall joy coming by him.

A*Ske rain of the Lord in the time of the latter rain.* Having ſpoken of the great plenty, that ſhould be, now he ſhews the means, that muſt be uſed for this, viz. Prayer for ſeaſonable rain, and then it ſhould follow accordingly, and the ground ſhould be fruitfull. And he ſpeaks of the latter rain, ſaith Gualter, becauſe in thoſe hot countries it was then neceſſary to make the corne the more flowery, and the graſſe to grow again after mowing. And for the producing of rain, the Lord would gather bright clouds together, or lightning clouds, as the word ſignifieth. Whereby we may ſee, that the good things of this life, which are needfull for us, and God hath promiſed, are yet by us to be ſought by Prayer, and to incourage us thus to ſeek them, he ſaith, that God being prayed to for it, clouds ſhall gather together, and rain ſhall follow, againſt thoſe that ſay God will ſend what weather he pleaſeth, whether we pray for it, or not. And the Prophet ſpeaks of this, becauſe that now the Temple was in building, which was the houſe of Prayer; and before they applyed themſelves to this work, they had ſowed much, and reaped little, as Hag. 1. therefore now God being more propitious upon their turning from their former negligence, he would have them to make uſe of this houſe by pouring out their prayers here for this great bleſſing.

Myſtically alſo, heavenly Doctrine is by rain ſet forth, as Eſay 55. and Deut. 32. 1. and how we ought to pray for this, where it is ſaid, Pray the Lord of the harveſt to ſend forth labourers into his harveſt; which labourers in harveſt are alſo waterers, by diſtilling heavenly Doctrine, as the rain upon the ground of mens hearts; for which, unprofitable hearers are compared to ground, that receiving the early, and latter rain, bringeth forth bryars and thornes. And as the rain cometh out of the clouds, ſo doctrine out of the Scriptures, out of which only the true men of God raiſe them, and not from unwritten Traditions, or Apocryphals, as Saint Paul ſaith, that he taught nothing but what the Prophets had foretold, and then the graſſe by this means made to grow, is all manner of grace increaſing in the heart.

Therefore they went away, as a flock, they were troubled, becauſe there was no ſhepherd. After comfort, and inſtruction to the faithfull, here the Prophet ſheweth the cauſe of the Jewes former ſuffering, viz. their ſerving of falſe Gods, and their being led by their prophets dreams, and divinations. For by this means they were carried away into captivity, as a flock of ſilly ſheep, not able to defend themſelves, but as wanting a ſhepherd to defend them, lying open to the violence of wolves, and lyons, ſuch as the Caldees were unto them. And he aptly cometh here to inveigh againſt their former Idolatry, having, ver. 1. exhorted them to ſeek to the Lord, as convincing them by their grievous ſufferings, whilſt they ſought to idols, that this was a dangerous vanity. For what followed hereupon, but their being made a prey, like ſheep unto wilde and ſavage Beaſts, God not vouchſafing to be their ſhepherd, as otherwiſe he would have been to ſave them from thoſe great evills, thus Calvin. Calvin.

V. 3. Mine anger was kindled againſt the ſhepherds, and I puniſhed the Goats, for the Lord of hoſts hath viſited his flock, and hath made them as his goodly horſe in the battell. Here the Prophet proceedeth, to ſhew how full of wrath the Lord was againſt the diviners, and dreamers ſpoken of, ver. 2. whom he now calleth ſhepherds, becauſe of the office in which they were. He was full of wrath againſt them, becauſe that by their means the people came to ſuch miſery, through their ſeducing them, inſtead of leading them in the right way. For as the people thus miſlead, ſhall periſh; ſo above all others, ſuch ſhepherds ſhall ſuffer the fierceneſs of Gods wrath; and not only the ſhepherds, but the Goats, that is, wicked Princes and Rulers, by whoſe Authority and evill example the people are thus miſled, and wronged: ſee alſo Ezek. 34. 17. where ſuch Princes are likened unto Goats, hurting the ſheep, and Mat. 25. In the next words he propheſieth comfort yet to come to the faithfull, and elect amongſt them, for he ſaith, that he will viſit them, and make them as goodly horſes; upon which he rode out conquering, and of whom he had a ſingular care, as a great man of his fair horſes, cauſing them to be well lookt to, and fed, as taking great delight in them; and not uſing them as Husband-men doe Aſſes, and Oxen, in carrying burdens, and doing their work, beating them, and pricking them with Goads: of ſuch a fair Horſe, highly eſteemed of by Alexander, we read of in his Hiſtory, called Bucephalus; and of another of Julius Caſars, that would ſuffer none to ride them but their Maſters. This is not much unlike to that, which he had ſaid before of bending Judah as his bow, and filling it with Ephraim, chap. 9. 13. and therefore we may well apply it likewiſe, and myſtically to the conquering of the world, and ſubduing it to Chriſt, by his preachers, to ſet forth which alſo, a repreſentation is made by a white horſe, Revel. 6. 2. Note.

V. 4. Out of him came the corner, out of him the nail, and the battel-bow, and oppreſſour together. To ſhew further, that out of Judah, called his goodly horſe, ſhould come all things neceſſary to an happy being, he ſaith here, Out of him ſhall come the corner; that is, the Prince, as the Corner ſtone, joyning the two Kingdomes of Judah, and Iſrael, before divided, whereby they ſhould be greatly ſtrengthened. Out of him the nail; that is, one upon whom all the glorious veſſels of Gods Houſe ſhould be hanged, as it was ſaid of Eliakim, I will make him as a nail in my houſe, and they ſhall hang all the glory upon him. Out of him the battel-bow, and the exactour: that is, warlike prowelle to ſubdue, and bring under, all enemies, and to make them pay Tribute unto him, which being partly fulfilled in Judas Maccabeus, were all moſt perfectly accompliſhed in Chriſt, the chief Corner ſtone, and the moſt glorious Eliakim ſubduing all peoples farre and wide, and exacting by his Spirit from them, the tribute of Praiſe and Prayer, and of liberall contributions to his Church. Eſai. 22.

V. 5. And they ſhall be as mighty men, that tread down their enemies as the mire in the ſtreet; that is, as they before ſpoken of, likened to a fair Horſe, ſhould ſubdue peoples unto Chriſt by the Word, ſo through the power of God, obſtinate unbeleevers, here called enemies, who perſecuted them, ſhould be caſt down before them, to be trodden upon as mire in the ſtreet, that is, moſt baſe, which was done in the dayes of Conſtantine the Great, who overcame all his enemies, after his embracing of the Chriſtian Faith.

the great river Jordan, hereby intimating, that nothing ſhould hinder their ted to the Faith, and that no locall motion is meant, when he ſpeaks of their bringing to their place, but onely their coming in to the Church, becauſe the land of Canaan, ſince the Jewes expulſion thence, lyeth under the curſe for ever. And yet they apply that which is here ſpoken in part to that which God did for the Jewes in the time of the Maccabees, in which they grew ſo ſtrong, and mighty, and had their dwelling by their many Victories ſo greatly eſtabliſhed. And for bringing them out of Egypt & Aſſyria here ſpoken of, and their being ſown & increaſed, this is ſpoken in oppoſition to their carrying down into Ægypt by Iſhmael, Gedaliah being ſlain; after which many miſeries were there indured by them, & great ſlaughters made of them in the time of Ptolomee Lathurus, who ſlew 30000 of them, and made the ſurvivours to eat of the fleſh of them, that he had killed. Now this being done to them in Egypt, that remained of Judah, after the City and Temple deſtroyed; it is well known, that the Aſſyrians carryed away thoſe of the Tribes, for which he names them now together, promiſing a multiplication of them again after all this, and that the pride of Ægypt and Aſſyria ſhould be pulled down, which was done as touching Aſſyria, when Alexander ſubdued both Perſians, and Aſſyrians; and as touching the Ægyptians, when the Romans ſubdued Ægypt in the dayes of Cleopatra, their laſt Queen, with whoſe love Anthony had been long intangled; but at length, that ſhe might not come into Ceſars hands, who was the Conquerour, ſhe ſlew her ſelf. But becauſe thus the things here propheſied of, were but done in part, their perfect accompliſhment is to be looked at in Chriſt, no Ephraim, or Joſeph, having this any way made good unto them before his coming. And touching the Iſraelites coming to their proper place again after their converſion; nothing can be certainly ſaid, but of their con-

CHAP. XI.

V. 1. OPen thy doores, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy Cedars.* After joyfull things propheſied of to Judah and Iſrael for Chriſt to come, and the multiplication of the children of the Church and their great ſafety, here becanſe the Prophet foreſaw by the Spirit that the wicked Jews would reject and crucifie Chriſt coming unto them, for which Gods judgments ſhould follow to the deſtruction of their City and Temple, and of all the principall men amongſt them by the Romans, he propheſieth of this. And in calling upon Lebanon to open that the fire might enter, he foretelleth what ſhould be done in way of revenge for their malicious perſecuting and murthering of the Lord of life, viz. that the Temple built of Cedars out of Lebanon ſhould lye open to deſtruction by fire, and in way of prodigious foreſhewing this a litle before the Romans coming and beſieging the City, the eaſt brazen gates of the Temple, which were ſo heavy that 20 men were few enough to open them, opened of themſelves at the 6. hour of the night, as Joſephus ſaith, and Rabbi Johanan thereupon ſaid, Now is the propheſie of Zechariah fulfilled, the Lord hath taken away his protection from the Temple, that the fire may come in and deſtroy it, as indeed it fell out ſoon after. For although Titus having taken the City, would have ſpared the Temple, and gave a charge to his Souldiers to let it ſtand, yet the deſperate Jews themſelves who fled thither and made of it a ſtrong hold, fired it ſo that it could not be quenched, although endevoured by the very enemie, till that it was all burnt down and demoliſhed. Now for the Temples being ſet forth by Lebanon, ſee ſomething that may give light hereinto, *Jer.*22.20. where the Prophet challenging Jechoniah for his wickedneſſe, and having told him that he cloſed himſelf with Cedar, bids him goe up to Lebanon, and to Baſhan, and cry for all his lovers being deſtroyed, in ſaying which he giveth this name of Lebanon to the fair and ſtrong houſe which he had built of Cedars of Lebanon, and Oakes out of Baſhan, whereby he thought to be ſafe from all violence. Some indeed hold that by Lebanon the paſſage to Jeruſalem and the Temple is meant, which was ſo thick with trees, as Cornelius Tacitus ſaith, that it ſeemed impoſſible for an enemy to enter that way, and this ſeemeth to be favoured by the word paſſages, there added, cry from the paſſages: but v.23. O inhabitant of Lebanon, that makeſt thy neſt in the Cedars, ſheweth plainly that the Kings houſe built of Cedars out of Lebanon is called Lebanon, and ſo may it beſt be conceived that the Temple is called here, and that the gates of Lebanon are the gates of the Temple, which according to this propheſie opened miraculouſly, as hath been ſaid, and after that the vail between the Temple and the Sanctum Sanctorum was rent from the top to the bottom at the time of Chriſts paſſion, portending not only the abolition of the legall ſervice, but Gods laying open of that moſt Holy place to deſtruction by the ſame judgment of fire. Thus Gualter, who alſo by the firre trees next ſpoken of underſtandeth the Princes, by bidding whom to houl he foretelleth the miſeries that ſhould at that time come upon them, and by the oaks all rich men in Jeruſalem, who for their wealth thought themſelves ſtrong enough to ſtand againſt all violence of enemies. And it is not unuſuall in Scripture by theſe trees to ſet forth ſuch men as being moſt eminent amongſt men as theſe trees are amongſt the trees; and for ſuch ſet forth by the Oaks of Baſhan, ſee Eſay 2.13. and that by the firre trees the Princes are meant, the next words here declare, for the mighty are ſpoiled, the Cedar, as he otherwiſe calleth the Temple, is faln, implying by thus ſaying their ruine together with it. But herein Gualter differeth, by the firre trees underſtanding common people who in all reaſon ſhould not have been named firſt, and the Oaks after, which were greater, and the very height of the firre tree argueth, that the lower and meaner ſort cannot be meant hereby. From this Expoſition others differ not, but generally acknowledge this to be a propheſie of the deſtruction of the ſecond Temple, as Lyra ſaith, by the Romans.

V. 3. There is a voice of the howling of Shepherds, for their glory, a voice of the roaring of young Lions, for the pride of Jordan is ſpoiled. The Temple being deſtroyed the Prieſts that ſerved there and were thereby maintained, had great cauſe to howle as Shepherds doe when their ſheep are deſtroyed by Wolves, for the Temple was their glory, by reaſon whereof and their high office about it, they thought themſelves very glorious. By the Lions ſaid to roar, they were the Princes of Judah, who as Lions made a prey of the poor people, but now coming into miſery, they roar and cry as hunger-ſterved Lions: for the glory of Jordan is ſpoiled, herein he continues the allegory taken from Lions, which kept about Jordan, and when it was dryed were in an evill caſe for want of water. By Jordan the whole land with the fruitfulneſſe thereof is meant, which being conſumed by the enemie, theſe Lions who before by ample poſſeſſions therein were made glorious and great, had cauſe to roar and cry out for ſorrow.

V. 4. Feed the flock of the ſlaughter; whoſe poſſeſſours ſlay them. Here the Prophet proceedeth to ſhew wherefore the Lord brought ſo great judgments upon the Jews, the cauſe of all this was, for that Chriſt coming by his Fathers appointment as the moſt faithfull ſhepherd to feed them by his moſt heavenly inſtructions out of his meer grace and mercy, they rejected him, and were led and fed rather by the corrupt teaching of the Phariſees. For theſe words, thus ſaith the Lord, Feed the flock of the ſlaughter, are the words of Chriſt, here brought in ſpeaking thus. For he affirmed himſelf to be the true ſhepherd, and that others pretending themſelves to be ſhepherds, were theeves and robbers, but that the ſheep which heard his voice and followed him, ſhould find paſture. And he often profeſſed that the divine doctrine wherewith he fed them, was his Fathers that ſent him. This then is as much as if the Prophet had ſaid, Would ye know why I threaten you ſo terribly in the name of the Lord? Hear the Meſſiah himſelf by me thus complaining, God my Father hath ſent me into the world to feed the flock of his people, who were not formerly fed but ſlaughtered by cruell tyrants reigning over them, but their poſſeſſours, that is, they to whom they had betaken themſelves as guides, lead them in a way to death and deſtruction, by hardening them againſt my teaching, and making them with open ears to hearken to them in their ſuperſtitions and wicked traditions, whereby they were prevented in reſpect of receiving any light or grace to ſalvation, and were indangered touching everlaſting death, and not only ſo, but of horrible deſtructions alſo in this world, for which he ſaith, their poſſeſſours ſlay them, and the more graphically to point out the Scribes and Phariſees, who turned this to their own advantage in reſpect of worldly gain, he ſaith that they bleſſed God for their being made rich, when they had devoured widows houſes, and for a colour made long prayers, as our Lord chargeth them. And being authors of ſo great a deſtruction to them, he ſaith that they pityed them not, wherefore neither would he pity them, but deliver them every man into the hand of his neighbour, and of his King, that is, to kill up and deſtroy one another, and to be deſtroyed by the King whom they ſhould preferre, that is, the Roman Emperour, of whom they ſaid, when they would have Jeſus crucified, and Pilate asked, ſhall I crucifie your King, we have no King but Ceſar.

Joh. 10.

Mat. 23.

V. 6.

And this was notably fulfilled when the Romans beſieging Jeruſalem, they within the City were divided amongſt themſelves under ſeverall Captains fighting and killing up one another, and at length thoſe that remained being partly ſlain at the Romans breaking into the City, and partly falling into their hands, from which their greateſt deſtruction of all others God never delivered them again, for which he ſaith here, I will pity them no more, nor deliver them, and although they ſhall finally be converted, yet this judgment, as we may hence gather, ſhall never have an end, which is laid upon their City, it ſhall never more be built or inhabited by them, but what is ſaid by the Prophets touching this, is all to be underſtood of the ſpirituall Jeruſalem to be built and made ſo glorious by grace abounding therein more then ever in former

Gualter. former times ſince they were a people. Gualter goeth higher in ſpeaking upon their being delivered into the hands of one another, viz. to the time when Alexander being King of the Jews many battles were fought betwixt him and the Phariſaicall faction, and many thouſands of them were ſlain, as I have ſhewed in my Continuation of the Hiſtory from Nehemiah, at what time indeed it cannot be denyed but that this propheſie began to take effect, for then they came into their Kings hands and Jewes killed up Jewes, but the full accompliſhment of the propheſie was not, till the time before ſpoken of, as Gualter alſo and other Expoſitours agree.

V. 7. And I took unto me two ſtaves, the one called Beauty and the other Bands: what is meant by theſe two ſtaves is hard to conjecture, Hieron. Jerome will have by the one the ſtate of the world in the time of Noah underſtood, when all were under one King, Almighty God, for this put a decorum upon the world, as Jerome reads it, vocavi unum decorem, for ſo much as a multitude of Subjects is the glory and beauty of the King, and for brethren to dwell together in unity is good and comely, but diſſenſion miſcoming and diſgracing them. The ſecond ſtaffe was called Bands, according to Jerome, funiculus, a line ſetting forth the ſtate of the people of Iſrael, of which David ſaith, Pſal.16. the lines are fallen to me in a good place, I have a goodly heritage: and of Iſrael as Gods line, it is ſpoken *Deut.*32. and Bands or Line this ſtate is called, becauſe to Iſrael God bound himſelf by Covenant to be his God, and the land of Canaan which he gave to them for an inheritance, was meaſured by lines and ſo divided by lot. Now the firſt of theſe ſtaves God brake when leaving other Nations in their ignorance and idolatry he called Abraham out of Ur of the Caldees, and bound himſelf to him and his poſterity, to be their God throughout all generations; and the other ſtaffe he brake when Iſrael was divided from Judah, that is, ten tribes from two in the dayes of Jeroboam, and this was moſt fulfilled after that the Jews for 30 pieces of ſilver had Chriſt delivered unto them by Judas, and crucified him. For then that took effect, which the Lord ſpake before, I came not to ſend peace but a ſword, the father ſhall be divided from the ſon, the mother from the daughter, &c. the Jews that were all of one religion before were ſo divided that ſome perſecuted other ſome to the death, and theſe divided themſelves from them going and preaching to the Gentiles. For the three Shepherds cut off in one month, he referreth to Moſes, Aaron, and Miriam, Numb.20. who were in one month cut off, becauſe one of them was taken away by death, and the other two had the ſentence of death paſſed againſt them at the ſame time, the firſt month when Miriam dyed. Gualter. Thus Jerome, but Gualter by the two ſtaves Beauty and Bands, underſtandeth two ſhepherds ſtaves which Chriſt took unto him, of whom it is here propheſied, whereas another ſhepherd hath but one, intimating hereby his exceeding great care over his people the Jews, to govern them well, the firſt being the Statutes, Laws, and Ordinances, whereby they were made more glorious then any other Nation in the World as is ſaid *Deut.*4. and therefore worthily called Beauty; the ſecond his knitting of them together as in one way of worſhip, ſo in one fore-father Iſrael, of whom they all came, whereas the people of any other Nation are mingled, ſome ſpringing from one country, ſome from another, and ſo are not by ſo ſtrong a tye bound to one another as the Iſraelites were. For the three Shepherds, by them three orders of men are meant, whom he placed over them to govern and feed them as ſhepherds, Kings, Prieſts, and Prophets; the laſt mentioned of which, ceaſed after Haggai, Zechary, and Malachi, for they had after them no Prophets more, Kings ceaſed in part at the time of the Captivity, becauſe after Zedekiah there was no King of their brethren any more, and although after this they had Princes a long time, yet they ceaſed in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, when the principality removed to the Prieſts; laſtly, Prieſts ceaſed when Herod found means to drown Ariſtobulus the high Prieſt and ſought to extinguiſh this order, by making the high Prieſt-hood venall, and ſetting up for Prieſts, any, as in Jeroboams time, that would, for then the Prieſts that were, were no true Prieſts of the ſeed of Aaron, but a miſcellanie company of intruders. And for their cutting off in one month, hereby is meant not preciſely a month, but a ſhort time, as the word month is uſed *Hoſ.*5 7. and although the time in which theſe three orders were going down was long with men, viz. 500 years, yet with God it was but as a month, with whom 1000 years are but as a day. For the breaking of the firſt ſtaffe called beauty, that was done, when in ſtead of an orderly Common-wealth all came to confuſion, the orders before ſaid ceaſing, and the Jews being under Heathen rulers had loſt all both Kingly and Prieſtly power and holineſſe. And the other ſtaffe was broken, when in the time of Titus and Veſpaſian, Jeruſalem being deſtroyed, they were ſcattered into all parts of the world, and in the dayes of Ælianus the Emperour that built the City Jeruſalem again upon another foundation, and having finiſhed it prohibited the Jews coming thither any more for ever, all means of unity being thus taken away, neither could they ever ſince be joined together again, as by Bands, as formerly they had been. Lyra differing from both theſe underſtandeth the two ſtaves of the two Kings ſet over Iſrael, and Judah, Jeroboam and Rehoboam, the one ſpeaking fairly to the people, and the other roughly, and therefore well thus named Beauty and Bands. And by the 3 ſhepherds cut off in a month, Jehoram, Ahaziah, and Jezabel, who by Jehu were all cut off in a few dayes; and the ſtaffe called Beauty was broken when the King of Iſrael was deſtroyed, 2 King. 1. and the other ſtaffe, when the Kingdom of Judah was deſtroyed by the Romans after Chriſts ſelling for 30 pieces of ſilver, and his crucifying, which therefore in the propheſie cometh between the breaking of the one ſtaffe and of the other. Junius by theſe ſtaves or ſhepherds crooks will have the preaching of the Goſpell meant, viz. the forgiveneſſe of ſins and ſanctification by the bloud of Chriſt, making beautifull and fair without ſpot or wrinkle by the one, and the offering of this grace to all thoſe that were of the poſterity of Iſrael, which were in the land now united together as one again and no more divided by the other. For what greater beauty can there be then that of the ſoul, all blemiſhes of ſin being done away? and how could their being bound together in one, who had been ſo much and long divided, be better ſet forth, then by bands, whereby the Lord at the firſt, yea even till after his paſſion ſought to bind them and them only, commanding his Apoſtles not to goe amongſt the Gentiles yet, but to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael? But when they would not be governed by this beautifull crook of his, nor be gathered, but excommunicated ſuch as were, and finally he was bought and ſold amongſt them, he brake both the one ſtaffe and the other in reſpect of them going from amongſt them ſometimes with indignation at their hardneſſe of heart and maliciouſneſſe againſt him, and ſometime into deſert places, and not teaching them any more, but by way of denouncing woes and judgements: for thus he brake the firſt ſtaffe, and when they had crucified him, he brake the ſecond by ſending his Diſciples forth to teach all Nations, leaving the Jews and the gathering of any more of them, whom hee found to bee unreclaimable.

2 King.9.

Junius.

For the three ſhepherds cut off in a month, they were three ſorts of teachers, which they had gotten them, the Phariſees, Sadducees, and Eſſees, for at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem all theſe Sects ceaſed together, and were never heard of any more. And this, that I may not adde to the number of Expoſitions brought, any more, or any other new, I embrace as the beſt and moſt genuine, becauſe it agreeth beſt with the Prophets order of proceeding, who before brought in Chriſt ſpeaking of his feeding the ſheep of ſlaughter, whom their poſſeſſours deſtroyed.

And v.7. having again repeated his care of feeding this poor and afflicted flock, he now tels what he did for the whole Nation of the Jews, and how unworthily they dealt by him, for which he at length gave them over. If we ſhould here bring in what the Lord did of old to all Nations or the Jews, or touching the Kings of Iſrael and Judah, or the fair eſtate of the Church of Iſrael at the firſt, we ſhould plainly goe againſt and not follow the order of the Prophet, which is to relate things done by our Lord Jeſus at his coming amongſt the Jewes, to convince them of their great ingratitude, and that Gods judgements came therefore moſt juſtly upon them, when they were beſieged and deſtroyed by the Romans, and to comfort and confirme the poore of the flock, that is, ſuch of them as beleeved, and all the faithfull every where, when they ſaw thoſe judgements brought upon them, that it was the Lords doing, being hereby approved to be the true Meſſiah againſt all the Jews, that oppoſe this truth moſt pertinaciouſly to this day, according to verſ. 11. So the poore that waited upon me, knew that it was the word of the Lord. The ſtaffe then called Beauty, which this great ſhepheard took, was plainly his gracious teaching accompanyed with many miracles, which made his ſtaffe or arm moſt glorious, and that called Band, his going according to Gods Covenant made with Iſrael in ſeeking their good, all other Nations being for the time neglected. For the word rendered Toſſarius. bands, it is □חובלים ſignifying bands or cords, but by the alteration of ſome pricks proditores, betrayers, which is followed by ſome, and then by the firſt ſtaffe the faithfull amongſt the Jews are underſtood by them, and by the other the wicked, who were the deſtroyers of their countrey by their ſinnes. How this can be made to agree I ſee not, forſomuch as that the ſtaffe called Beauty in this ſenſe is never broken, but by their deformation through errours and abſurdities to which they were left, the ſtaffe Beauty was manifeſtly broken, and the other called Bands by their diſperſion.

V. 8. For the three ſhepheards cut off in a moneth, whom he ſaith, his ſoule abhorred, it cannot without blaſphemy be applyed to Moſes, Aaron and Miriam, who were in ſo great favour with God, and of whom Mich.6.4. ſaith, I lead you by Moſes, Aaron and Miriam. They were therefore ſhepheards of another ſort, even their poſſeſſours, that deſtroyed, them before ſpoken of, moſt probably the Scribes, Phariſes and Sadduces, for amongſt the Eſſees John the Baptiſt was brought up, an auſtere ſect, and it is not to be thought, but that many of them were converted; to be ſure they are not by name mentioned in V. 9. holy Writ or reproved. Verſ. 9. that that dyeth let it dye, and that which is to be cut off, &c. in theſe words the ſtate of the Jews, when the Romans beſieged them, is exactly ſet forth, as it was. For then many dyed by peſtilence, many by the ſword, and many by a ſore famin, making them even to eat the fleſh of another, yea mothers their own children, to which extremity they were brought by three captains filling all things with rapine and confuſion in the City, Eleazarus, Jonathan and Simon. But they were finally all deſtroyed by the Romans in taking the City, when they united their forces againſt them, and this was done in a ſhort time indeed, for which I commit it to the readers conſideration, whether they might not be the three ſhepheards before ſpoken of, that were cut off in one moneth, and the ſame the poſſeſſours of the people, that deſtroyed them; for if we ſhall ſo hold, I ſee nothing, that can bee objected againſt it, ſith Princes, as well as Prieſts and Teachers, have the name of Shepheards oft given them in holy Scripture.

V. 12. And I ſaid, If yee thinke good give me my price: and they weighed for my price 30 pieces of ſilver. This makes it plaine, that the propheſie ſpeaketh of Chriſt Matth, 27. in the words before going, as hath been ſaid, becauſe this is noted to have been fulfilled, when they gave Judas 30 pieces of ſilver to betray him unto them, and he afterwards being ſtricken for it brought the money againe to the Prieſts, who bought therewith a Potters field for a burying place for Matth.21.37. ſtrangers. Whereas he bringeth in Chriſt ſpeaking, give me, if you think good, my price, this is to be referred to his requiring of the husbandmen the fruits of his Fathers Vineyard, but he compelled them not to give them, for he left this to the liberty of their own will, ſaying, if it ſeemeth good unto you. But they in ſtead of rendring him ſuch a price for all his labours and good deeds done unto them, gave for the price of his betraying 30 pieces of ſilver to Judas. Verſ. 13. And the Lord ſaid unto me, Caſt it to the Potter, and I caſt it to the Potter in the houſe of the Lord. Matthew relating Judas his fact, ſaith, that he brought it to the chief Prieſts and caſt it down in the houſe of the Lord, and they upon conſultation bought the Potters field, which is the ſame in effect, that is here ſaid. The Lord ſecretly moved Judas being inwardly terryfied for that which he had done to return his money to the Prieſts againe, and for ſo much as it went to the buying of a field of a potter, it was in effect caſt to the Potter, but to ſhew, that it came not to him immediately, but firſt to the houſe of the Lord, it is ſaid, I caſt it to the Potter in the houſe of the Lord; neither needs the reader to be troubled for that the Lord is brought in ſaying, I caſt it, when as the Prieſts did it, and Judas did firſt bring it into this houſe: for nothing elſe is meant hereby, but that the Lord by his providence had an hand in all this. And in ſaying, Give me my price, if yee will, he meaneth not, ſaith Gualter, that man hath any free will, but ſpeaks thus indignabunde, as if a faithfull ſhepheard ſhould ſay to them, whoſe ſheep he hath kept with all good care, but findes all his care and pains but ill accepted of, I will keep theſe ſheep no longer, give me therefore my hire, if ye will, that I may be gone, if ye will not, I will goe away without it, for it is not a price, that I ſtand upon for mine one benefit. And to the ſame effect he ſaith by way of Irony, a goodly price that I was valued at, and therefore in contempt he ſaith, caſt it to the Potter. For any thing further touching this text ſee my Expoſition upon *Matth.*27.

V. 15. Take yet unto thee the inſtruments of a fooliſh ſhepheard. Here the Lord proceedeth to ſhew further, what other judgements he would lay upon the Jewes for their malicious perſecuting and vilipending of Chriſt, and theſe are judgements, that ſhould come upon them in reſpect of their ſouls, which ſhould be infinitely expoſed to danger by fooliſh ſhepheards, that is, impoſtours, who ſhould pretend themſelves to be that Shepheard, the Meſſiah, who came from heaven out of a tender care of his ſheep to guide and feed them, that they might be ſaved. The chief of whom was one notorious man calling himſelf Barchobab, that is, the ſon of a ſtar, making the credulous Jews to beleeve that he was the ſtar propheſied of by Balaam, ſaying, a ſtar ſhall riſe out of Jacob. This deceiver aroſe in the dayes of Ælianus the Emperour, and drew innumerable companies of Jews unto him, and with them took many Cities and Towns: but Julius Severus being ſent for by the Emperour againſt him, many thouſands of them were ſlain and he fled away. Now Zechariah muſt as well perſonate this man by taking the inſtruments of a fooliſh ſhepheard, as the true Meſſiah before by taking two ſtaves. And then he ſheweth what miſchiefe ſhould inſue to the poore ſeduced ſheep, V. 16. he ſhall not viſit thoſe that be cut off, nor ſeek the young one, nor heal that which is broken, nor feed that which ſtandeth ſtill, but he ſhall eat the fleſh of the fat and tear their clawes in peices; where by the ſheep cut off, ſuch as goe aſtray are underſtood, and not to viſit them is not to ſeek to reduce them to the fold; by the young one the ignorant, and not to ſeek him is not to ſeek by inſtruction in the truth to bring him to ſaving knowledge; by that which is broken the diſconſolate, and not to heal ſuch is not to preach remiſſion of ſinnes and ſalvation by Chriſt unto them; and by them that ſtand ſtill, ſuch as continue in the faith, whom not to feed is not diligently to preach unto them for their confirmation againſt the corruption of nature, the ſubtlety of Satan, or other temptations which are incident unto them. So that from hence we may gather, what the duties of a good and wiſe ſhepheard are, viz. to doe all theſe things. But they are fooliſh and wicked ſhepheards, that doe them not, but contrariwiſe are intent to their own gain, that they may live plentifully eating and drinking of the beſt, out of the fat gotten from the flock, and to rule with tyranny over them, exerciſing all manner of oppreſſion and cruelty towards them, that make any reſiſtance; to this effect Gualter. And ſuch ſhepheards through Gods juſt judgement had the Jewes ever ſince their rejecting of Chriſt, not onely the foreſaid Barchobab, other-another, that pretended himſelf to be a man ſent of God to lead them through the Sea, as Moſes, to their own land, perſwading them to plunge themſelves into the water after him, and that ſo the waters ſhould be ſo divided by which means many of them periſhed. And by this fooliſh ſhepheard alſo all the rabble of their Rabbins was meant, who pretending themſelves to be the only men of knowledge in the laws and Prophets, have from time to time in ſtead of ſolid matter fed them with fooliſh and vain inventions to hinder them Hieron. from coming to Chriſt. Laſtly, the Antichriſt, as Jerome and Rupertus have cut it off, the ſword ſhall be to bring his power and might at length to nothing, and upon his right eye to darken it, by bringing all his counſell and cunning, whereby he formerly prevailed, to nothing, ſo that he ſhall neither have ſtrength to reſiſt, nor providence to foreſee and prevent his own

CHAP. XII.

V. 1. Gualter. THe burthen of the word of the Lord for Iſrael, ſaith the Lord, that ſtretcheth out the heavens,&c. It may ſeem ſtrange, ſaith Gualter, that the Prophet being about to propheſie good to Iſrael and to Jeruſalem, their chief City and judgements to come upon her enemies and deſtroyers ſhould begin with ſaying, the burthen, ſith this alwayes implyeth heavy and grievous things to come.
But it is to be underſtood, that he ſaith not upon Jeruſalem, but upon Iſrael, intimating, that the heavy part of that, which is here ſaid, ſhould fall only upon thoſe of the children of Iſrael, who continued ſtill at Babylon, and would not return to build the houſe of God when they might. For there were many ſuch, who derided the indeavours of their brethren in this kind, that returned to Jeruſalem, and ſet to this coſtly and great work, as not beleeving, that ever it ſhould be perfected, or if it were, that it ſhould not be ſuffered by the heathen enemies to ſtand long. In reſpect of them therefore it is called a burthen, becauſe they cannot without grief ſee or hear of the proſpering of that, which is undertaken contrary to their liking. And becauſe the things here following were ſuch, as might ſeem incredible, he promiſeth miſeth a deſcription of God by his Almighty power in ſpreading the heavens as a curtain, laying the foundation of the earth, and creating the ſpirit of man, that is in her. For what can be impoſſible to him, that doth theſe mighty workes? Having thus given a title to his propheſie, which is continued to the end throughout this, and chap. 13. 14. he cometh next to the matter, verſ. 2. I V. 2.

will make Jeruſalem a cup of trembling to all the people round about, when they ſhall be in the ſiege both againſt Judah and Jeruſalem, the Vulgar, Judah ſhall be in the ſiege againſt Jeruſalem. Heb. and alſo it ſhall be againſt Iudah in the ſiege againſt Jeruſalem, that is, and this cup of trembling ſhall be to Judah, as well as to other people, when ſome Jews ſhall join with them againſt Jeruſalem. So likewiſe it is rendered by Gualter and by Calvin, who pointeth it thus, and upon Iudah, it ſhall be in the ſiege of Jeruſalem. Here are two ſimilitudes, whereby it is ſhewed, what ſhould come to the enemies of Jeruſalem, for the incouragement of them that inhabiting there put to their helping hands towards the building of the Temple, and to the terrour of their enemies, who, it is hereby intimated ſhould never be wanting, although for the preſent all were daunted by Darius his being their friend. The firſt ſimilitude is taken from men drunken with wine, who goe greedily to it, but anon their heads being intoxicated they goe ſtaggering and trembling away ſcarſe able to keep themſelves from falling, ſo the enemies of Jeruſalem that came with great courage againſt her, within a while found her ſuch a cup unto them, they greedily ſought to devoure her and her pretions things, and ſometimes prevailed much, but they joyed not long after, Jeruſalem becoming unto them a moſt diſtempering and deſtroying cup, the like unto which they had never met withall before. And as the heathen were ſuch enemies, ſo ſome of the Jews themſelves joined treacherouſly with them, to whom it happened likewiſe. For heathens haſtily invading Jeruſalem; Artaxerxes Ochus was the firſt after this, who came into the Temple and took away the pretious veſſels thereof, the occaſion whereof was this, Johannes being High Prieſt, his brother Jeſus ambitious of that honour procured Dagaſus the Perſian preſident to aid him againſt his brother to the obtaining of the High Prieſthood. But when they came together to the Temple to this end, Johannes ſo ſtrongly reſiſted them that hee ſlew his brother Jeſus in the Temple, for which fact the King laid a great tribute upon the Jews, from which they had been before freed by Cyrus. But he went not long unrevenged, for he was poiſoned by Bagoas one of his own men, and all his children ſlain except one called Arſame, whom hee alſo ſlew within four yeares after. The next enemy was Seleucus King of Syria, after that the Jews had lived in peace in the time of Alexander the Great, and of the Kings ſucceeding him 100 yeares. For he took away the treaſure of the Temple being aſſiſted by Simon a Jew, who was the Preſident, that diſcovered it unto him; whereupon he ſent Heliodorus to fetch it away, but God made him an example by ſtriking him with his judgement, as is ſhewed, 2 Macc. 3. Then Antiochus Epiphanes another King of Syria perſecuted the Jews, being put on ſo to doe by Jaſon and Menelaus two Jewes, and he moſt horribly prophaned the Temple, ſetting up an idol there, and ſacrificing ſwines fleſh. But God then ſtirred up Mattathias the High Prieſt and his ſons, Judas Maccabeus and the reſt, and ſtrengthened them ſo againſt his captaines, that they gave them great overthrowes, and that wicked King through grief hereat fell into moſt grievous diſeaſes, whereby being extreamly tormented he dyed. And he being dead Eupator his ſonne was ſlaine by Demetrius his Uncle, then Alexander another ſonne of Antiochus ſlew Demetrius, and finally his ſonnes making warre one againſt another were all ſlaine, and Lucullus and Pompejus hereupon taking advantage ſeiſed upon that Kingdome, and made it a Province of the Romans. Demetrius was alſo aſſiſted by Alcimus a Jew againſt the Jews, and then he periſhed, as was before ſaid. Ptolemie Philopator alſo King of Egypt, who did much miſchiefe to the Jews, ſped no better, for he living but a while after in great infamy for his foul letchery ſuddenly dyed, after whom his ſon ſucceeding, who was but five years old, the Romans taking advantage hereof ſubdued that kingdome. Finally, Pompeius and Craſſus Romans having robbed the Temple, both periſhed ſoon after, the one being ſlain, and the other having moſt evill ſucceſſe in his wars againſt the Parthians, where he with his Army periſhed. Of all which I have written more at large in the continuation of the hiſtory from the time of Nehemiah, which giveth great light into many Propheſies, and eſpecially of Daniel.

V. 3. Hieron. Now followeth the ſecond ſimilitude, I will make Jeruſalem an heavie ſtone to all nations. Wherein, ſaith Jerom, he alludeth to the cuſtome of the countrey of Iudea and all Syria, where both in cities and villages ſtones of great weight were laid to be taken up by young men to try their ſtrength, ſome lifting them up to their knees, ſome to their breaſts or heads or above, as each ones ſtrength was, and at Athens near the Temple of Minerva, he ſaith that he ſaw a moſt heavie brazen ball, by lifting up of which a man tryed his ſtrength before that he entred into the Palæſtra. Calvin going upon the common ſignification of the word סף a poſt, and רעל contrition, although the words ſignifie alſo a cup of drunkenneſſe, making to tremble or ſtagger, as hath been ſaid, will have it meant hereby that Ieruſalem ſhould be ſo hard to thoſe that aſſault it, that as a man ruſhing with his body againſt a poſt ſhall but bruiſe himſelf and not hurt it, ſo he that haſtily aſſaulted that city being by God protected. And for the other metaphor of a ſtone, he ſaith, that hereby it is meant, that as an heavie ſtone ſhall lye firme, what attempts ſoever be made to take it up and carry it away, and they who ſtrain themſelves about it, do but hurt themſelves, not it, by breaking ſome nerves of their bodies, ſo it ſhould be to them, that ſtrive to overthrow Ieruſalem; and what is ſaid of Ieruſalem taken according to the letter, ſhalbe verified touching the Church at all times, the enemies of the Goſpell may lift at it, but ſhall never be able to overthrow it, they may ſmite with their feet or hands againſt it but as a poſt it ſhall hurt them, that do ſo, and continue finally it ſelf unhurt; and to this I aſſent. They ſhall be cut in pieces, although all nations be gathered together againſt it. This is the ſame in effect, that is ſpoken touching Chriſt, upon whom this ſtone, that is, the head ſtone of the corner falleth, it ſhall grind him to powder, and the ſtone cut out of the mountain without hands becomes great, filling the whole earth and breaking in pieces all kingdomes, the golden, ſilver, braſſe, iron, and clay.

Calvin.

V. 4. I will ſtrike every horſe with aſtoniſhment and his rider with madneſſe. Here by horſe and rider all warlike preparation is to be underſtood, which ſhould be made void, when it ſhould be againſt Ieruſalem. And this was fulfilled according to the letter, when one of the Ptolemies having brought his Elephants and Army before the gates of Ieruſalem, there appeared two men like terrible giants without the gates, whereby the Elephants were made ſo mad, that they threw off their riders and turned upon the horſe and foot behind them, ſo that many of his army were deſtroyed by them, the king being ſo ſtricken withall, that he could not for a long time ſtir from his place, as I have ſhewed in my foreſaid Continuation.

V. 5. The inhabitants of Ieruſalem ſhall be my ſtrength in the Lord of hoſts their God, the governours of Iudah ſhall ſay in their heart. Vulg. Let the inhabitants of Jeruſalem be comforted to me in the Lord, Hebr. the governours of Iudah ſhall ſay ſtrength to me, or, I have ſtrength, the inhabitants of Jeruſalem in the Lord, &c. that is, Gods protection over this city ſo plainly appearing, as is aforeſaid, they ſhall exultingly look upon it, as their invincible ſtrength, and not only the leaders, but all the people of the city ſhall make joyfull acclamations to the Lord of hoſts, as having by his divine power done all this.

V. 6. In that day I will make the governours of Judah like an hearth of fire amongſt the wood, and as a torch of fire in a ſheaf. Here by another metaphor the Prophet further ſheweth, how dangerous a thing it ſhould be to all thoſe that ſhould come againſt Ieruſalem, they ſhould be but as wood or ſtraw in the fire, which is ſeen conſumed thereby. And then he addeth, that Jeruſalem ſhall be inhabited in the proper place, that is, notwithſtanding all the Perſians, Egyptians, and Romans machinations to the contrary, as it was indeed till the finall deſtruction by the Romans for their barbarous cruelty againſt Chriſt.

V. 7. The Lord alſo ſhall ſave the tents of Judah firſt, that the glory of the houſe of David and of the inhabitants of Jeruſalem magnifie not themſelves againſt Judah. Here the Lord further magnifieth his favour towards Judah before ſpoken of, and he ſaith, the tents of Judah, to intimate their undefenced habitations like unto tents, as before in the wilderneſſe, wherein how eaſily may enemies comming ſurprize them? And ſaith, that he will ſave them firſt or chiefly, that dwelt thus ſcatteringly about in the land, and ſo expoſed to greateſt dangers, that his ſingular providence being conſpicuous in their preſervation, it might not be thought that in Davids time, when they had ſo mighty a King, and when Jeruſalem ſtood ſtrongeſt being fenced with wals, bars and gates, they were in a more ſafe condition, then the poor Jewes now returned from Babylon, being without King or walled city to defend them. For it being ſeen, how through Gods protection alone they lived in ſuch ſafety, if the people had been living, who were in Davids time, they could not have magnified their happineſſe above Judah in her preſent condition. To which effect almoſt Calvin, but whereas it ſaid, I will ſave the tents of Judah firſt, he conceiveth, that it is beſt read, as at the firſt, but the ſenſe is full, as hath been ſhewed, without underſtanding any thing.

V. 8. Then in further extolling Gods goodneſſe towards them, he ſaith, he that is feeble amongſt them ſhall be as David, overcomming Goliah, and the houſe of David as God, as the Angel of the Lord before them. The Vulg. ſupplyeth it thus, as the houſe of God, as it may well be ſupplyed, and then the meaning is, every one of the common people that is faithfull, ſhall be accepted before God, as David was for his upright heartedneſſe, and ſucceſſefull againſt his enemies, as he, and the rulers amongſt them, as Gods houſe moſt glorious for divine vertues ſhining in them, and as Angels farre more mighty then many men, as was ſeen in that one Angell, deſtroying Sennacheribs hoſt in one night, and the firſt born in Egypt. An hyperbolicall extolling of the Jewiſh ſtate now, eſpecially of the Jewes within, the faithfull of all nations, who are the Houſes or Temples of God, and as Angels leading an heavenly life, and as meſſengers of God declaring his will to others.

V. 10. And in that day I will pour out the ſpirit of grace and ſupplication, &c. Here the Lord to ſhew how the Jewes ſhould be made capable of ſo great favours, as have been ſpoken of, foretelleth that they ſhould be converted many of them after their crucifying of Chriſt, as it is ſaid many were Act. 2. at Peters ſermon, being pricked at their hearts for that abominable wickedneſſe. And as he had before done, ſo he now again ſpeaks of them by diſtinguiſhing them into the houſe of David, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, becauſe that family was the chief there and moſt eminent, and he ſpeaks of his houſe in particular, the rather, becauſe he was about to particularize ſome other families alſo, as the family of Nathan, Levi, and Simeon. Hieron. Auguſt. Rupert. Cyrill. Lyra. Jerom and many other ancients expound this of the Jewes ſeeing Chriſt to their terrour at the day of judgement, as being conſcious of their crucifying him, for which they ſhall know then, that they ſhall go into everlaſting torments. And therefore to expreſſe the greatneſſe of their ſorrow he compareth it to that for Joſiah in the valley of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddo, 2 Chron. 35. and becauſe the chief amongſt them and the Prieſts and Scribes had an hand in this bloudy fact eſpecially, he nameth the family of the houſe of David, ſetting forth their elders, of the houſe of Levi ſetting forth their Prieſts, and of Simeon ſetting forth the Scribes becauſe they were of that tribe, and Nathan is put in, as a noble ſon of David, of whoſe line after Solomons extinct Chriſt came; and to prove this, Joh. 19. 37. is alledged, they ſhall look on him whom they have pierced, and Matth. 24. at his ſecond comming in glory, all the families of the earth ſhall mourn. But againſt this expoſition maketh the firſt paſſage in this text, I will pour out the ſpirit of grace and ſupplications, whereby it plainly appeareth, that the mourning here ſpoken of is that, which proceedeth from the ſpirit of grace and humble ſupplication, and not the mourning cauſed meerly by fear or deſparation, which is the mourning of thoſe, that ſee for their notorious wickedneſſe the judge comming to condemn them to everlaſting deſtruction. The word rendred ſupplications, ſignifieth alſo miſerations: and therefore it is by ſome ſo rendred, but the former is to be preferred, as beſt agreeing with the matter in hand, the meaning being, that abundance of grace ſhould now be conferred, making the miſerable Jewes, who were before hardened in infidelity, to relent for their wickedneſſe, and in extream ſorrow therefore to pray again and again for pardon, being inwardly vexed and troubled, when they came to beleeve, that Jeſus whom they had crucified and hitherto deſpiſed, was the true Meſſiah. And to this Calvin agreeth, although at the firſt he underſtands by the ſpirit of grace and miſerations powred out, abundance of grace and compaſſion, wherewith the Lord would deal with the Jewes to make good all the promiſes before going. Whereas to make the expoſition before going the more probable, it is ſaid, that the families of David, Levi and Simeon are particularly mentioned to ſhew, that the chief rulers, Prieſts and Scribes, who had been chief actours in that bloudy tragedy of killing Chriſt, ſhould have the greateſt puniſhment. It is rather to be held, that theſe are particularly ſpoken of to magnifie the grace of God the more in converting and ſaving them, that had been of all others moſt ſpitefull againſt him, that the greateſt ſinners being throughly humbled for their ſins and converted, might not deſpair of Gods grace. And that there were ſome ſuch converted, the Hiſtory of the Acts ſheweth, where Joſes a Levite is ſaid to have come with the price of his land, and laid it down at the Apoſtles feet, and Gamaliel a principall man amongſt them gave advice for the Apoſtles, & Saul a man of no mean rank, but in authority alſo, from a perſecuter was turned a moſt laborious and faithful preacher. And amongſt the many Myriads, who are ſaid to have beleeved of the Jewes, it is not to be doubted, but that ſome were of theſe families. Of the fathers, as ſome referre this mourning to the day of judgement, ſo ſome, to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, as if the extream ſorrow, that ſhould then be to the Jewes were meant and nothing elſe; but forſomuch as the Jewes looked not then upon Chriſt, as for the cruelty exerciſed againſt whom thoſe miſeries befell them, this cannot ſtand. And for anſwer to the place alledged, Mat. 24. it is but an alluſion to this, not an obſervation of this propheſie now fulfilled, as it ſhould have been made by Matthew ſpecially, who is moſt of all the other Evangeliſts in making ſuch obſervations. Wherefore nothing elſe can be gathered from thence, but that all the wicked of the world of all nations ſhall then be filled with ſorrow for their judgement coming at that day. For the place of John, there nothing elſe is meant, but that in piercing Chriſts ſide with a ſpear that was done, which the Prophet here ſpeaketh of proving Jeſus to be the Chriſt by his being thus pierced. And indeed a moſt ſtrong argument to prove this may be drawn from hence, ſith he, whom the Jewes pierced in his body, and after at the comming down of the holy Ghoſt mourned for it, is undoubtedly the true Meſſiah, and therefore in expecting one that ſhould reign as a King in this world, and being offended at Chriſts poverty and croſſe, gathering hence, that he could not be the Meſſiah, they ſhewed their palpable blindneſſe: to this effect alſo Cyprian ſpeaketh L. 2. adverſus Judæos, Touching this text I ſhall ſay nothing more, but whereas it is ſaid, they ſhall mourn, every family apart, and their wives apart, and as for his firſt born only ſon, the particularity and extremity of their ſorrow is ſet forth, and how in that our moſt ſerious humiliations we ſhould not only do it together, but each one in ſecret, as is preſcribed in faſting, Mat. 6. and Pſal. 4. and men for the time ſeparating from their wives, as is intimated, 1 Cor.

CHAP. XIII.

V. 1. I*N that day there ſhall be a fountain opened to the houſe of David and the inhabitants of* Jeruſalem for ſin and uncleanneſſe; for menſtruous uncleanneſſe, ſaith Gualter and the vulg. Lat. becauſe the word ſignifieth uncleanneſſe, for which one is ſeparated from the company of others, according to Numb. 5. The Prophet having ſhewed in the latter end of the former chapter, with what ſorrow the Jews ſhould be ſtricken for the crucifying of Chriſt, now for their comfort and the comfort of all, that mourn likewiſe he ſheweth that in Chriſt ſuch ſhould finde a never failing fountain of clean water, whereby their ſins and uncleanneſſe, although never ſo great, ſhould be waſhed away. And here by ſinne we are to underſtand any actuall breach of the ten commandements, by uncleanneſſe, originall ſinne, of the which it is ſaid, 1 Joh. 1. 6. The bloud of Jeſus Chriſt his ſon cleanſeth us from all ſin, and behold the Lamb of God that takes away the ſin of the world. But it is to be noted that this comfort belongeth not to any but to mourners, as was before ſaid, that ſuch as rejoyce in iniquity may not apply it to themſelves, as all commonly doe: Note. And the houſe of David, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem are ſpoken of, becauſe they were ſaid before to be the mourners in ſpeciall for the grievous ſufferings of their Saviour, whereof their ſinnes and ours were the cauſe.

V. 2. I will cut off the names of the idols out of the Land. Such as be of the houſe of David, that is, of Chriſt the Sonne of David, being thus waſhed through the ſpirit of faith and by baptiſme, here is further ſhewed, what a reformation ſhould follow in the Land. Idols ſhould be no more once named, as indeed it came to paſſe in all nations after the faith imbraced and not amongſt the Jews only. However the Church being corrupted again in time, images and idols were ſet up, although not of Iupiter or Iuno, of Baal or Aſhteroth, yet of Chriſt hanging upon the croſſe, and of both he and ſhe Saints, about an. 600. by the 2^{d}. Nicene councell, after that all the learned and holy fathers, Chryſoſtom, Ierom, Auguſtine, &c. were dead and gone, and another ignorant and ſuperſtitious generation aroſe, that preferred their own profit and worldly greatneſſe before the purity of religion. Whereupon one ſaith well, all the while that there were golden Doctours in the Church of Chriſt no images were permitted either of ſilver or gold, but when wooden Doctours came up, the Church abounded with images both golden, ſilver, and wooden. And Epiphanius expreſly ſaid, when in viſiting the Churches under him he found a painted cloth behinde the door having an image upon it in one of them, he ſharply reproved the rectour of the Church and tore the image in pieces. And he addeth further as appurtenances of idols, their Prophets and the unclean ſpirit ſpeaking in idols, as in the image of Apollo, which he ſaith, ſhould paſſe out of the land, that the people of God might be no more deluded by them. For of ſuch Prophets it is to be underſtood, of which ſort we read, that Jezabel nouriſhed ſome time 400. and by the unclean ſpirit the devill is meant, who when idolatry is put down, is fugated and made to paſſe away, but where it is, he both keeps his reſidence and reigneth as Lord and King, as he did here in England in the time of Popery, when all places were ſo full of Robbin-good-fellowes, as they were called, and Fairies, which ſince the breaking out of the light of the Goſpell vaniſhed.

V. 3. And if any yet ſhall propheſie, his father and his mother ſhall ſay unto him, Thou ſhalt not live, for thou ſpeakeſt lies in the name of the Lord. Here is ſet forth another effect, that ſhould follow in them, that were waſhed in the fountain before ſaid, they had ſuch zeal to God, and to the purity of his worſhip, that if one, although moſt dear and near unto them, as their own ſon is, ſhould ſeek to draw them, or others, to this abomination, pretending the Lord therefore, as Jeſuites, and Popiſh prieſts doe, affirming, that Images are good for ignorant people to learn by, as by books, the things of God, and that they are a good means to remember God and his Saints in Prayer, and that they are thus honoured, the honour given to their Images redounding to them repreſented hereby, they ſhould not ſuffer themſelves to be thus deluded; but as a juſt reward of ſo great an abuſe offered to the Lord, by telling lies in his Name, they ſhould both paſs ſentence againſt ſuch an one, and doe execution upon him, by thruſting him through without all mercy. And forſomuch as this is ſpoken of, that which ſhould be done under the Goſpell, it appears, that the Magiſtrates hands are not tyed now from ſentencing even to death, the ſeducers to Idolatry in theſe times, and therefore our law is juſtifiable, whereby Prieſts and Jeſuits the great ſeducers of theſe times, if they come into this land ſo to doe, are adjudged to dye, and we ſhould want Zeal, and be guilty of the ſinne of Lukewarmneſſe, which God loatheth, if we ſhould not ſo doe, according to Deut. 13. whereas he ſpeaks of Father and Mother, thruſting him through, it is not to be underſtood of their doing a private execution upon their own heads, but by proceeding to law, bringing him before the Judges, that they might give this ſentence againſt him, as by Moſes his law it was provided, and the like is to be held touching any other dangerous lie in point of Religion, becauſe it is Hab. 2. 18. ſaid, for that thou haſt ſpoken lies in the name of the Lord: and as Images are the teachers of lies, ſo are they that hold any thing blaſphemous, pretend Revelations for the abetting of any Errour, as the Anabaptiſts doe.

V. 4. And the Prophets ſhall be aſhamed every one of his viſion, neither ſhall he wear a rough garment to deceive any more. Here is a third effect of this waſhing, or ſanctification, the Prophets of Idols themſelves alſo being warned by the deſtruction of ſome of their own ſect ſhall be aſhamed, and turn from this their evill way, being alſo by their friends ſharply reproved, and threatned, as was ſaid before, that the falſe Prophets Father and Mother ſhould firſt threaten him, ſaying, thou ſhalt die, and then he, perſiſting ſtill in his wickedneſs, thruſt him through. But ſuch of them, as are appointed to like being thus V. 5. admoniſhed, he ſaith, ſhould repent, and ſay, I am no Prophet, but an husbandman.

And one ſhall ſay, what are thoſe wounds in thy hands? and he ſhall ſay, thoſe with V. 6. which I was wounded in the houſe of my friends. It being meant hereby, that he ſhould acknowledge his ignorance for want of being bred up as a ſon of the Prophets, which was the cauſe of his running into ſo great errours, and ſo as aſhamed, give over this office, and return to his old trade again, to which he had been brought up. For the wounds in his hands, hereby are meant the piercing reproofs and threats of his friends before ſpoken of, as Gualter ſaith, or Gualter. rather ſome puniſhment which he was put to in his hands, haply by burning with ſome hot iron upon his repentance; the puniſhment death, being remitted, as is often done in Courts of Juſtice, a Malefactour in ſome caſe is branded, & ſpared from death, by the benefit of the Clergy: or he might, for his former preſumption, be laſhed on the hands with a ſharp whip by way of correction, Note. till that the print of the ſtroaks appeared therein. And from hence we may gather what an Errour any tradeſman runs into, that takes the office of a Prophet upon him. 2. That ſuch repent not, unleſs they return to their old trade again. 3. That for any errour cutting off ſhould not be ſuddenly, but firſt means uſed by inſtruction, and teaching to reduce therefrom. With Gualter, underſtanding the wounds of that which was done to a falſe Prophet by his Calvin. friends, agree alſo Calvin, Jerom, Cyrill, and Lyra. Hieron. But upon due conſideration I think rather, Cyrill. that the wounds made in the hands of Chriſt, when he was Lyra. Crucified, are meant, to ſpeak of whom the Prophet here returneth after his declaring the benefit redounding to his Church by his crucifying, or piercing ſpoken of, Chap. 12.10. For having ſhewed, that thus a fountain of Sanctification ſhould be aſſigned to all Beleevers, and what effects ſhould follow hereupon amongſt them in beating down Idols, & cutting off falſe Prophets, and the repentance that ſome of them ſhould be moved withall: Now he returneth to ſpeak of Chriſt again, who was wounded in his hands, feet, and ſide; thoſe in hands onely being mentioned, the other left to be underſtood. And hereabout one is brought in as King, What are thoſe wounds in thy hands? to which he anſwereth, Thoſe that I received in the houſe of my friends: for ſo it is ſaid, He came amongſt his own, and his own received him not: And his friends the Jewes are called, becauſe he came of them according to the fleſh. And to this agreeth Rupertus, Tho: Aquinas in Pſal. 22. R. Samuel, in Epiſt Galatinus, lib. 8. c. 7.

V. 7.

And to this agreeth the words of ver. 7. Awake, O ſword, againſt my ſhepherd, againſt the man that is my fellow; ſmite the ſhepherd, and the ſheep ſhall be ſcattered, which is plainly ſpoken of Chriſt, as is obſerved Matth. 26. 31. For the repentance of Prophets before ſpoken of, and returning to their trades again; this, ſaith Gualter, hath been fulfilled, ſince the breaking out of the light again in many, who have had fat benefices; but turning from Popery, have left them, and fallen to working for their living, as knowing their own inſufficiency for a miniſteriall calling. And for wearing a rough garment, this was ſpoken of their habiting themſelves after the manner of Prophets, that ſo they might the better be taken for ſuch, and deceive others, and draw them from truth to errour. For Elijah wore a rough garment, and John the Baptiſt likewiſe; and therefore it is probable, that it was their common habit at all times. But to come to ver. 7. Awake (O ſword) if it ſhall ſeem not to agree to the ſhepherd, Chriſt, becauſe he was not ſmitten with the Sword, but Crucified, he might well yet be ſaid to be ſmitten with the Sword, becauſe the Magiſtrate is ſaid to bear the Sword, when he is ſet forth, as having power of puniſhing with death, ſo that when a man is cut off by death in any kind, the ſword may be ſaid to awake and ſmite, ſo Pſal. 22. Chriſt is brought in ſaying, deliver my ſoul from the ſword, when as it is foretold of his ſuffering by piercing his hands and feet, and Amos 9. They ſhall all dye by the ſword, which as Jerom confeſſeth, cannot be underſtood properly, but of any kind of death. My fellow, or equall, theſe be the words of the Father touching Chriſt, to whom he thought it robbery to equall in Glory, Phil. 2. 7. as being one Eſſence. And the Lord is brought in ſpeaking thus, becauſe he ſuffered by his decree, Acts 2. 23. And I will turn my hands upon the little ones; that is, the ſheep before ſaid to be ſcattered, who ſhould by the power of God be again gathered together, as we ſee that they were, Acts 1. to the number of 120 ſouls. And the Lord commonly calleth ſuch little ones, as Mat. 18. Whoſoever ſhall offend any of theſe little ones, it were better for him, that a mill ſtone were hanged about his neck, &c.

V. 8.
Hieron.

And it ſhall come to paſſe, that in all the land two parts ſhall be cut off, and die, but the third ſhall be left therein. This is by Jerom underſtood of Jewes and Gentiles hardning their hearts in unbelief, and their cutting off, and dying, of their periſhing everlaſtingly; and of Chriſtians, who are the third part that ſhall live. But becauſe he ſpoke before of turning his hand upon the little ones, that is, the faithfull, unbelievers cannot here be meant who ſhall be cut off, and die; neither can all the land here ſpoken of be taken for the whole world, but for the pale of the Church, wherein all that are, ſhall not be ſaved, but onely a third part; two parts periſhing for their wickedneſſe, adhered to, although they outwardly betake themſelves to the profeſſion of the Faith. For it is but a little flock that ſhall have the Kingdome: Many are called, but few are choſen, and ſtraight is the way that leadeth to everlaſting Life: and there are but few that finde it. And when the ſower goeth out to ſow, there is but one ground good of four, upon which the ſeed falleth, whereunto Calvin, and Gualter ſeeme to aſſent.

And I will bring the third part through the fire, and I wil refine them as ſilver, &c. Here is ſhewed what grievous things the faithfull ſhould ſuffer in this world, who are called the third part, others not having the courage to ſtand in time of perſecution, no more then the corn upon ſtony ground to keep from withering in the heat of the ſun. And this was fulfilled in the time of the Primitive Church, when perſecutions were ſtirred up by one wicked Emperor after 2 Tim. 3. 12. an other 300 years together, yea, And all that will live godly (ſaith the Apoſtle) gold, as Mal. 3. 3. Eſay 1. 25. ſo Pſal. 66. 12. Thou broughteſt us through fire and water.

CHAP. XIV.

V. 2. I Will gather all nations againſt Jeruſalem to battell, and the city ſhall be taken. Having concluded the former chapter with the ſufferings of Chriſt, and of Chriſtians; now he proceedeth to threaten Jeruſalem, wherein theſe wickedneſſes were committed, and with a great deſtruction, which muſt Rupert. needs be underſtood of that by the Romans, as Rupertus and Euſebius have it.
Euſeb. de præpar. Evang. Some referre it to the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, as Burgenſis, and Gualter; ſome to the time of Antichriſt, as Lyra, but moſt improbably, as Euſebius noteth, if we conſider the circumſtances of the place. For when Antiochus in the dayes of Onias and Jaſon was by Jaſon called in to help him againſt the other to the high Prieſt-hood, all nations were not gathered againſt Jeruſalem, but they of Syria onely; neither did that Tyrant carry any away captive, but raged againſt them in the City; and that which is ſpoken in the following part of the chapter agreeth not: laſtly, the order of placing this Propheſie, ſheweth, that it was after Chriſts death. And touching that expoſition which referreth it to Antichriſt, who is yet to come, all the ſtory of him being but an imagination (for the Antichriſt now is, and hath long been at Rome, the City ſtanding upon ſeven Hils) this may be paſſed over as an imagination alſo. But how can that expoſition be made good, whereby it is Hieron. referred to Jeruſalems deſtruction by the Romans, ſith it is ſaid, Half of the people ſhall goe forth, but the reſidue ſhall not be cut off from the City: ſeeing that Ribera. when Jeruſalem was deſtroyed by the Romans, they all either periſhed, or were carryed into captivity for ſlaves? To this ſome anſwer, that the inferiour part being taken, the ſuperiour ſtood ſtill, where the Temple was, ſome of that part conſiſting of ſtrangers, who had come from farre parts to keep the Paſſeover at Jeruſalem, wanting proviſion, periſhed through Famine there, before that the City was taken; then the other part came into the enemies hands, and they were carryed away captive. But how can they be ſaid not to be cut off, that periſhed in the City? We muſt therefore finde ſome other way of reſolving this doubt, which may be done, if we conſider that it is not ſaid, The other part ſhall not be cut off from the City, but the reſidue ſhall not be cut off, wherein he doubtleſſe hath reference to that which he had ſaid, chap.
13. 8. Two parts ſhall be cut off, and the third ſhall be left therein: For of theſe left ones, the Elect of God he here ſpeaketh, calling them the reſidue, which ſhall not be cut off, and die, and the two parts there called Heb. the mouth of two, are the part here ſpoken of, that ſhall goe into Captivity, although called two there, becauſe many more, then thoſe that are ſaved, yet one part here, as the whole company might be divided into two, Sheep and Goats, Elect and Reprobate, are ſaid to be carryed away, the other not cut off from the City, becauſe by an admonition from Heaven warned to goe out to Pella before the ſiege began, being by this means preſerved from the common de-ſtruction: and ſo, although they removed out of the City, they were not de-V. 3. ſtroyed from it, as others were, but lived both here to glorifie God, that had preſerved them, and after in the new City of Jeruſalem, deſcribed, Revel. 21.

Then ſhall the Lord goe forth, and fight againſt thoſe Nations, as when he fought in the day of battell. Here unto the comfort before ſpoken, another comfort is added, a remnant, as hath been already ſaid, ſhall be kept from cutting off; and not only ſo, but the enemies, that fought againſt them, ſhall be ſubdued by the Almighty power of God, as in former times, when they had many Battells againſt the Canaanites, by Gods apparent aſſiſtance, who fought for them, they deſtroyed them all, and their Kings being in number 31. For I cannot

Hieron.
Calvin.

cannot hold with Jerom, that the overthrow of the Ægyptians in the Red ſea is onely meant here; but with Calvin all other overthrows given to the Canaanites, as I have already ſaid. And this is not only ſpoken for the comfort and confirmation of the Jews, that were faithfull then but alſo of all true Jews to the end of the world. Grievous ſufferings we muſt goe through, the City of the Church coming many times into the power of malicious enemies. For as a remnant of them ſtill continued, ſo in times of hotteſt perſecutions of Chriſtian people, and not only ſo, but enemies that riſe up have been at ſundry times, and ſhall be ſubdued again unto them, and Antichriſt their head. And if by the Nations we underſtand the Romans, this propheſie was verified in them ſpiritually by their being ſubdued many of them to Chriſt through the preaching of the Goſpel, as appears in the Epiſtle to the Romans, ſhewing a famous Church to have been there, and the whole Empire afterwards in the dayes of Conſtantine, their Idolatry being all overthrown. And finally it ſhall be verified again when the Antichriſt, that ſits in the Temple there with his adherents ſhall goe into deſtruction.

Note.

V. 4. And his feet ſhall ſtand that day on the Mount of Olives, on the Eaſt before Jeruſalem, and the Mount ſhall cleave towards the Eaſt and Weſt, and half ſhall remove towards the North, and half towards the South: Here Chriſts much frequenting of the Mount Olivet is pointed at, as we read in the Goſpels that he did, here privately inſtructing his Diſciples ſometimes, and ſometimes repoſing himſelf here after his great labours in Jeruſalem, and finally giving his laſt Commiſſion to his Apoſtles to goe and teach all Nations, and from hence aſcending up into heaven, for which this Mountain was famous above all other Mountains about Jeruſalem. And it cannot but be conceived, that it being near to Jeruſalem, the Roman Army in part fortified themſelves here in their beſieging the City. But now the Sun of righteouſneſſe ariſing in the Eaſt, as this was ſituated in the Eaſt, ſtandeth here to oppoſe all enemies that are againſt his Jeruſalem. And by his power the Mountain cleaveth in ſunder both towards the Eaſt and the Weſt, and part thereof removeth to the North, and part to the South, all the quarters of the world being thus denoted. And in ſaying thus he deſcribeth an Earthquake making the ground to cleave being moſt formidable to all men and deſtructive to many, others that flee away from ſuch gaping of the earth, being ſafe.

V. 5. For which he addeth v. 5. that they ſhould flee away as from the Earth-quake in the dayes of Uzziah, of which mention was made Amos 1. And in ſaying that the Mount of Olives clave in ſunder, hereby was intimated that the Goſpell with the grace thereof, being the glad tidings of ſalvation by Chriſt, was ſpread after Chriſts aſcenſion thence into all parts of the world, but not without great terror both to the unbeleeving & to the true beleeving, for all Cities and States where it was preached were troubled, and great commotions were in all places as by an Earth quake, the ground opening wide, whereby a ſhew is made of horrible deſtruction at hand, the vaſt gulf of hell being repreſented, into which all unbeleevers and impenitent perſons are now threatned to be caſt, according to that of John the Baptiſt, Repent, for the Kingdom of heaven is at hand, and again, whoſe fan is in his hand, and he will throughly purge his floore, and caſt his chaffe into unquenchable fire: For the repreſenting of the Goſpel by Mount Olivet, where Olive trees grew in abundance, of which oil figuring Grace was made, it was moſt apt in this regard for the purpoſe. And yee ſhall flee to the valley of the Mountains, which ſhall reach to Azel: As the Goſpel ſhall be in fine moſt comfortable to all the faithfull, ſo it is hereby ſhewed, that it ſhall be at the firſt very terrible even to the elect making them to flee for fear as men flee from an Earthquake, according to the words of John the Baptiſt, who hath forwarned you to flee from the wrath to come. To be terrified in hearing the word preached is the firſt degree of grace, as is alſo noted, Eſa. 66.2. To whom is the Lord nigh? even to him that is of a broken heart, and trembleth at his word. And whither ſhall yee flee? even to the valley of the Mountains reaching to Azel, Vulg. ad proximum, and the word ſignifieth juxta, nigh, ſome take it for a proper name,

Luc. 3.

Luc. 3.
Note.

Euſeb. renders it, the help of God, the meaning is, Ye, that ſhall not be cut off, as was ſaid before of the remnant elect, ſhall flee out of the danger which ſhall come upon others that repent not at the preaching of the Goſpel, ye ſhall flee to the valley of true humiliation, and through this yee ſhall come to the next mountain, the Tabernacle of the moſt high, where ye ſhall be ſafe, for of the Lord, as an hill above the reach of all dangers David ſpeaks, when he ſaith, Pſ 121.1. thou haſt ſet me upon a rock that is higher then I, and mine eyes are lifted up to the hills, from whence cometh my help. And the Lord my God ſhall come, and all the Saints with him: that is, although ye his Saints be made for a time to fear, yet it ſhall finally come to paſſe, that the Lord Jeſus ſhall come in great majeſty and glory, and then ye ſhall come joyfully with him alſo. Note. At what time this ſhall be, is ſhewed *Jud.v.*14. Behold, the Lord cometh with thouſands of his Saints to execute judgment, &c. and thus the end of thoſe that fear, to repent and humble themſelves for ſin, ſhall be moſt happy.

Hierom. Some underſtand this fleeing of the Jews, fleeing and adhering to the old ſervice of the Temple which ſtood upon a Mount next unto this here ſpoken of, whereunto one muſt paſſe through a valley: but of this, little reaſon can be yeilded, ſeeing this is ſpoken for the comfort and confirmation of the faithfull againſt all fear of danger, with which, although they be ſurpriſed for a time, yet it is for their good, to bring them to the Lord and to everlaſting happineſſe in the end, and there needed nothing to terrifie the unbeleeving Jews to make them to hie them to that carnall ſervice, becauſe they never departed from it, and at this time the Temple was demoliſhed, the City being taken and it burnt, as *v.*2. The Jews many of them taking this propheſie literally, uſe it as a proof that the Meſſiah is not yet come, becauſe when he cometh it will appear by this ſign, Mount Olivet, upon which he ſhall ſtand, ſhall cleave, and as it is *Eſa.*2. the Mountain of the Lords houſe ſhall be elevated and made higher then any other Mountain, which yet is not done. But of that I have ſaid enough there in what ſenſe it is ſpoken, and of this here.

V. 6. In that day it ſhall neither be light nor dark, but it ſhall be one day known unto the Lord; Vulg. it ſhall not be light, but cold froſt, Hebr. light of beauties and coagulation, that is, fair day light, or thick darkneſſe. Ribera. This day is by ſome taken for the day when the Lord ſhall come with his Saints, as was before ſaid, that is, the day of judgment which ſhall neither be light enough to ſee to flee away from that judgment, and it ſhall be ſo cold that mens limbs ſhall waxe ſtiffe by reaſon of the cold and froſt, ſo that they cannot run. But this is abſurd, becauſe the Lord ſhall then come in flaming fire burning all things. Lyra. Lyra following the ſame reading of cold and froſt, ſaith, that this cold ſhall be within through fear, and that it ſhall not be a clear light day, and whereas it is ſaid to be known to the Lord, that was according to the ſaying of our Saviour, Of that day or hour knoweth no man, but one, my Father which is in heaven: not day nor night, becauſe of the light and darkneſſe mingled; and for that it was a moſt ſhort time of which he ſpeaketh, being not ſo long as either day or night. Euſeb. Theodoret. Some by this day will have the day of Chriſts ſuffering death meant, and that it is ſaid neither to be light, nor dark, becauſe the Sun was that day darkened, and in the Evening, as here followeth, it was light, becauſe the darkneſſe was but from the 6 to the 9 hour of the day. Calvin. Gualter. Others underſtand no particular day, but generally the time following this propheſie that immediately, there ſhould be a mixture of miſeries with joyes, and this is the comfort of the faithfull, that it is known to God, how it is with them, and all light ſhall never be extinguiſhed unto them, and in the end it ſhall be light and conſtant comfort ſet forth by the evening light; and in the dayes of the Goſpel often called the day, Chriſtians being ſometimes in proſperity, and ſometimes in adverſity; and finally in the evening of this life and of the world coming to everlaſting light in heaven.

V. 8. And this I take to be beſt, as whereunto the next words agree beſt, v. 8. In that day living waters ſhall goe out from Jeruſalem, half of them from the former, and half from the hinder Sea, both ſummer and winter, ſo that by that day is plainly meant not one day preciſely, but many, by the day the time in generall being ſet forth, and it is a time, as was ſaid before, *ch.*13.1. of the flowing of waters, that is, graces coming by the Goſpel all over the world, ſignified by the former and hinder Sea, that is, as Gualter renders it, the Eaſtern and Weſtern, of which two extream parts it is commonly ſpoken when Chriſtians coming in of all Nations is ſpoken of, and the flowing of theſe waters of comfort both ſummer and winter, ſheweth Gods conſtant going on in watering the Church with his grace to the worlds end.

V. 9. And the Lord ſhall be King over all the earth, and there ſhall be one Lord and his name one: that is, all Nations by embracing the Goſpel ſhall be made ſubjects of the Kingdom of Chriſt, he being now the only Lord, and other Gods and Lords, as Baalim, and Aſhteroth, Jupiter and Apollo, &c. ſhall not be once named any more, as *ch.*13.2. And according to this it is ſaid, Rom. 10. 18. their ſound went out into all the earth, and the word to the ends of the world: ſo likewiſe Euſeb. and Auguſt. for although the names of the Lord be many, yet becauſe he is one eſſence only, and all theſe names ſerve to ſet forth one and the ſame, it is ſaid, his name ſhall be one. Euſeb. Auguſt. But this is by Calvin expounded of one and the ſame way of worſhiping the Lord in all Chriſtian Churches, Calvin. divers wayes according to mens divers phantaſies, not being permitted, but all being brought to goe herein according to one rule, *Phil.*3.16. which although it is not yet attained to in theſe our times, but divers particular Churches goe divers wayes, yea in the ſame Nation, now eſpecially in the Church of England, through the diverſity of mens opinions, yet it cannot but be acknowledged a blemiſh, and to goe all in one way of publick worſhip is earneſtly to be deſired by us all; and in the Primitive Church, that it was ſo, is apparent *Act.*2.46. and ſo this propheſie was fulfilled; and thus it ſhall be againe the Jews being converted. *Rom.*11. They can no way therefore be juſtified who maintain others, as having a name in the Church; Note. one over one Country, another over another; one over this diſeaſe, another over that; one for women in childbed, another in other dangerous caſes, as the Papiſts. Neither they that would have every particular Church, yea every man left to his own conſcience for way of the religious Tenets or performances, as the Independents of theſe times.

V. 10. All the Land ſhall be turned into a Plain from Geba to Rimmon. This was never fulfilled according to the letter to the Jews after their return from captivity, and therefore muſt needs be underſtood ſpiritually of the Church under the Goſpell. For of this time it is ſaid, *Eſa.*40.3. The voice of a cryer in the wilderneſſe, Make ſtreight the way of the Lord, every valley ſhall be fulfilled, and Mountains made low, &c. which was done by John the Baptiſt ſent to prepare the way of the Lord. Luc. 3. Then Jeruſalem ſhall be lifted up and inhabited in her own place: of which laſt words ſee *ch.*12.6. and for her lifting up *Eſa.*2. above all Mountains. The Jewes from hence alſo gather that the Meſſiah is not yet come, becauſe the Mountains ſtand all ſtill about Jeruſalem as they did, but the making all plain is by taking away all impediments hindring men from ſeeing the beauty of Chriſt and his Church, and conſequently from coming unto them, and ſins are as ſtrong holds upon high and Mountainous places, that is, idolatry and ſuperſtition and other wickedneſſes, *2 Cor.*10.4. but by the Goſpel preached through the power of God beaten down, and of ſuch high and cragged places two are here mentioned, Geba and Rimmon, of the latter of which it is ſaid *Judg.*20. that the men of Benjamin fled to the rock Rimmon, but where theſe ſtood and the gates here further ſpoken of, we ſhall not need anxiouſly to inquire, ſeeing it is but allegoricall, the amplitude of the Evangelicall Church being ſet forth hereby to be much more then the Church of the Jews in former times, as Eſay 54. and preciſely know no man now can, where the places here ſpoken of were.

V. 12. And this ſhall be the plague wherewith the Lord ſhall ſmite all them that fight againſt Jeruſalem, their fleſh ſhall conſume away whileſt they ſtand upon their feet, and their eyes ſhall conſume away in their holes, and their tongue in their mouth. Having ſaid *v.*11. that Jeruſalem ſhould be ſafely inhabited, here it is intimated, that this is not ſo to be underſtood, but that ſhe ſhould have enemies ſtill from time to time, but herein lyeth her comfort, that the ſtrength which hath been raiſed againſt her ſhall conſume, although it ſhall not appear how or by what means this may be done, even as a body full of fleſh pineth away whileſt a man is yet living, and his eyes conſume, and his tongue or ſpeech faileth him, that was before ſtrong and loud ſpoken, yet now is made feeble, and as if he had loſt his tongue. So that hereby is foreſhewed, that although the Church of Chriſt ſhould be perſecuted by the Potentates of the Earth, yet through Gods juſt judgments upon them, their ſtrength ſhould come to nothing, although in the Church perſecuted by them there were no ſtrength to oppoſe them, but only, as of old, it was ſaid, preces & lachrymæ, which was notably verified in the Roman Emperours, in the time of the ten perſecutions, there being ſo many of them cut off in a ſhort time, and none living near the time of Conſtantine who came to be Emperour after them.

V. 14. Judah ſhall fight againſt Jeruſalem, and the wealth of all the Heathen round about ſhall be gathered together: Heb. It is, in Jeruſalem, the meaning is, that not only by forein enemies the Church of Chriſt ſhall ſuffer grievous things, but alſo one by another, as v. 13. *ch.*12.2. *ch.*11 6. and hereby it is meant that the Church ſhould ſuffer by Hereticks riſing up amongſt themſelves, as well as by profeſſed enemies of the Chriſtian religion. For the wealth of the Heathen here ſpoken of, it is meant of their treaſures which they ſhould bring with them for the maintenance of their wars, implying huge armies which could not be brought forth and maintained without abundance of gold and ſilver, which hath been many times verified, as when the Arrians perſecuted the Orthodoxe, and the Neſtorians likewiſe, and the Antichriſt of Rome the reformed Churches, the Goths Chriſtians in Italy, and the Turk in all places.
Note. And for Judahs fighting againſt Jeruſalem, it was never more verified then in theſe times in our own Church of England, wherein one party fighteth againſt another without end.

V. 15. So ſhall the plague be of the horſe and the mule &c. as this plague: that is, the plague or ſtroak before ſpoken of, *v.*13. upon the enemies of the Church conſuming them, for as they, ſo all their warlike preparations ſet forth by horſe and mule, &c. ſhall come to nothing.

V. 16. Shall goe up from year to year to worſhip the King the Lord of Hoaſts, and to keep the feaſt of Tabernacles. It was ſaid before, v.9. that the Lord ſhould be King over all the earth, now in alluding to this, he ſaith, that the converts of all Nations ſhall do thus. But how can this be under the Goſpel, when neither at Jeruſalem Joh.4.20. nor in this Mountain men ſhall worſhip the Father? It muſt be ſpiritually underſtood, going to Jeruſalem ſetteth forth coming to the Church of Chriſt, and being joined hereunto, which whoſo doth, he only can acceptably worſhip him. For keeping the feaſt of Tabernacles, that was once a year, coming up from all parts of the Land to Jeruſalem, and thence going out to abide in Booths made of green boughs 7 dayes in remembrance of their dwelling in the Wilderneſſe in tents 40 years, in all which time they were miraculouſly preſerved. And hereby is meant, that the faithfull ſhould acknowledge Col. 3. 1. themſelves pilgrims here, and therefore not have their minds ſet upon this world, but lifted up to things above to their Country heaven, where Lev.23. they hope one day to inhabit. For there were three principall feaſts in the year, in regard of which they muſt come up to Jeruſalem 3 times in the year, but the Prophet pitcheth only upon one moſt fit for his purpoſe, to expreſſe that Note. which I have ſaid. But it is to be noted, that this is done by the truly faithfull from year to year, that is, they are conſtant in heavenlineſſe of mind to the end of their dayes, not now going up thus, and then with Demas going down again to the imbracing of this preſent world, as the manner of many is.

V. 17. And it ſhall be, that whoſoever will not come to Jeruſalem of all the families of the earth, upon them ſhall be no rain. Here it is intimated that in the time of all Nations turning to the Lord, there will be ſome particulars that will harden their hearts and not turne true worſhippers of this glorious King, but either keep out of the Church perſiſting in infidelity, or if they come in, being but outward profeſſours, having Lamps but no oil in them. Againſt thoſe that be ſuch, it is here threatned, that it ſhall not rain upon them, whereby is not meant ſo much, that they ſhall ſuffer by ſcarcity and famine, which muſt needs follow upon long continued droughts, for even the worſt are not alwayes thus puniſhed, ſeeing God makes his Sun to ſhine, and Rain to fall upon the good and the bad. But hereby is meant the dew of Gods heavenly grace making to bring forth fruit to everlaſting life, and the watering of ſound teaching, whereby this fruitfulneſſe cometh. So that hereby two things are meant.

1. That out of the Church there is no ſalutiferous grace, as it may be gathered where it is ſaid, God added to the Church dayly ſuch as ſhould be ſaved. Note. Act. 2.

2. Such as are externally in the Church, but goe not up in their minds from worldly things to heavenly, but notwithſtanding their Chriſtian profeſſion, are barren or bring forth briars and thorns in ſtead of good fruits, are void of all ſaving grace alſo. For although it raineth upon them often by doctrine, yet they are like to ground in the ſame caſe, which for bringing forth briars is accurſed, and the end of it is to be burned. Heb. 6.

And if the family of Egypt comes not up, it ſhall not rain, &c. Here a queſtion may be made, why of all other Nations Egypt alone is ſingled out and ſpoken of by way of threatning in particular, the reſt only in generall. But it is to be underſtood that Egypt was watered by the river Nilus, and ſo needed no rain to make it fruitfull. By Egypt then he is meant that ſeemeth to himſelf good enough without grace coming from above, even by the goodneſſe of his nature, upon ſuch a proud one it ſhall not rain, and then at laſt he ſhall be ſmitten with the plague before ſpoken of, viz. the conſuming of his fleſh, that is, the vanity of his carnall confidence diſcovered and proving nought worth, his carnall wiſdom ſet forth by his eyes failing alſo and his ability to ſpeak excellently ſet forth by his tongue ſtanding him in no ſtead to ſave him from deſtruction, as Gualter very well noteth, and laſtly it is added that this plague ſhall be upon all that come not up thus to keep this feaſt. V.18. Gualter.

In that day there ſhall be upon the bels of the horſes Holineſſe to the Lord, and the pots of the Lords houſe ſhall be like the bouls before the Altar: Vulg. that which is upon the bridle is holy to the Lord: Hebr. מצלות ſignifieth bels, trappers, or bridles about horſes put upon them for ornament, being wrought with gold and ſilver; wherefore the meaning is, that horſes, that were before ſet forth ſumptuouſly to the battle, in the ornaments whereof either bels of gold about their necks, or rich trappers, and bridles, ſtood the treaſure of the Gentiles in part, which was ſpoken of *v.*14. ſhould now be uſed for war no more, but all ſuch pretious things ſhould be turned to the maintenance of Gods houſes and of his ſervice, and the beautifying of the places where he ſhould be worſhiped. Cyril thinks, that it is ſpoken of Conſtantines bridle which was adorned with one of the nails wherewith Chriſt was pierced upon the Croſs, found by Helena his mother, and brought from thence as a moſt pretious thing, but this is rather to be accounted a ſuperſtition, to which they were then too prone, then a thing ſo worthily done, as to be propheſied of, as tending to the honour of God, before whom neither the Croſſe nor any other inſtrument of Chriſts ſuffering is acceptable, but ſo far forth as it is improved to the crucifying of us to the world and the world unto us, as S. Paul ſpeaketh *Gal.*6.17. For the pots being as the bouls of the Altar, that is, the pots or caldrons wherein holy fleſh was boiled for Sacrifice, ſhould ſend up as ſweet a ſmell as the bouls full of incenſe. Thus ſome, but forſomuch as the bouls were not uſed for incenſe, but cenſers, and bouls for bloud to be ſprinkled upon the Altar, the force of the compariſon ſtands rather in this, that the pots which were more remote, ſhould be as holy as the bouls that were brought nearer the Altar that ſanctifieth all, whereby is meant, that all things ſhall be V.20. Cyril.

Gualter. holy to them that are by faith juſtified & ſanctified, not only being immediate inſtruments in Gods ſervice, as the Scriptures and Sacraments, but alſo things 1 Tim.4.5. of common uſe for the body, as in thoſe pots meat was boiled for the feaſting of thoſe that came to the feſtivals at Jeruſalem to eat & drink there with thanksgiving before the Lord, and therefore not only the pots and caldrons in the Court of the Lords houſe were hereby meant, but alſo in private houſes, and Tit.1.15. according to this the Apoſtle ſaith, to the clean all things are clean: to this effect alſo Gualter, who upon the former words, the bels of the horſes, and holineſſe to the Lord, ſaith well, that herein it is alluded to that which was graven upon the plate of gold on the forehead of the high Prieſt, Holineſſe to the Lord, the meaning being, when it is ſaid, that this ſhould be upon the bels of the horſes, 1. That all the ſuperfluous wealth that was ſpent formerly upon things pertaining to worldly pompe either in time of war or peace, ſhould now be ſpent in maintaining the worſhip of the Lord and his poor people, this pomp and pride being left. 2. That no wars ſhould now be made any more through covetouſneſſe or ambition, but for the neceſſary defence of the Church againſt enemies invading her, wherein God would be extraordinarily aſſiſtant, as he was to Conſtantine the great againſt Licinius, and to Theodoſius againſt Argobaſtus.
3. That true Chriſtians, although of divers Nations, ſhould make no warres one againſt another, but horſes and their complements for the war being left, live in peace and unity one with another.

V.21. Yea every pot in Jeruſalem ſhall be holineſſe to the Lord, and all they that ſacrifice ſhall come and take and ſeeth therein. Having ſpoken of the pots of the houſe of the Lord, and of their holineſſe, now he inlargeth himſelf further, ſaying that all pots in Jeruſalem and Judah ſhall be holy likewiſe, there being under the Goſpel no difference in reſpect of holineſſe betwixt common beleevers, and thoſe that are ſet apart for the work of the Miniſtry, for all are Kings and Prieſts of life, by dividing the word of truth aright, both for their better information and their maſters alſo, who is but to teach what he hath from them, and not out of his own skill or judgment, as it is ſaid *Mal.*2.7. The Prieſts lips ſhall preſerve knowledge, and they ſhall inquire the Law at his mouth: And therefore here is no ground for promiſcuous preaching of any Chriſtian, againſt which alſo maketh the Apoſtles ordaining of ſome ſingularly to this office, *Act.*14.23.

*1 Tim.*3. *Tit.*1. And there ſhall be no more the Canaanite in the houſe of the Lord, the Canaanites are well known to have been an unclean generation, but could not be all expelled out of the Land where the houſe of God was. But in the Church under the Goſpel, he ſaith that they ſhould, ſo that not one ſhould remain, that is, the notoriouſly wicked being by the cenſures of the Church expelled from the congregation, being not ſuffered to come amongſt them any more then Heathens, who were not denyed to come into their Oratories to their prayers and preaching, as means of converſion to all, but not to their Sacraments, which are as ſeals of their covenant with God, if we reſpect the one, viz. Baptiſm, or Commemorative of Gods unparalleld love towards them in Chriſt, if we reſpect the other, viz. the Lords Supper, which he inſtituted peculiarly for the worthy, that is, thoſe that keep their garments, as is expreſſed, *Rev.*3. and as is in the inſtitution amongſt his Apoſtles only intimated, amongſt whom if Judas the traitor were, which I doe not beleeve, yet it is no ground for admitting the wicked who are apparently abominable in the courſe of their lives, becauſe the evill that was in his heart, either was not yet hatched, for it is ſaid, that after the ſop Satan entred into him, or elſe lay ſo cloſe hidden there, that it could not be diſcerned by any but God alone.

Therefore his being permitted there, argueth only that hypocrites who cannot be diſcerned from ſincere profeſſors of the Goſpel, may be amongſt them in receiving this holy Supper, but not any whoſe notorious ſinnes goe before, as Paul ſpeaketh, as were the ſinnes of the inceſtuous man amongſt the Corinthians. No man yet can rightly reaſon from hence that there is or can be by mans induſtry, a particular Church conſiſting only of the clean, and therefore ſeparate they what they can, and gather new Congregations what they can, they ſhall be but troublers of the peace of the Church that do ſo, and their labour ſhall prove vain; there will be goats mixed with the ſheep in the ſame flock, till the ſeparation at the laſt day; only let us terrifie them by uſing the Keys given by Chriſt againſt them, which being done, it is ſo ratified in heaven, that the gates there ſhall be lockt againſt them keeping them from entring, till looſening again by the ſame power, and without who are but dogs, murtherers, witches, &c. and what comfort? verily none, but utter darkneſſe and torments cauſing weeping and gnaſhing of teeth for evermore. The Vulg. Lat. renders it, Mercator, a Merchant, as the word ſignifieth, and being ſpecially taken thus, the ſenſe will be good, one ſhall come who ſhall whip the buyers and ſellers out of Gods houſe, and not ſuffer one to remain there more, as it is ſaid that Chriſt did. And hereby is meant that Simony in buying and ſelling of holy Orders, or of Benefices, ſhall not be ſuffered, but as at the firſt this was oppoſed by S. Peter in Simon Magus, ſo it ſhould be in all Simoniacks at all times in the true Church of God, buying and ſelling of ſpiritual things ſhould be cryed down and provided againſt as it is in all reformed Churches at this day, which proveth us to be the true houſe of God, and diſproveth the Papiſts, amongſt whom all ſuch thing are venall, Orders, Benefices, Biſhopricks, Maſſes, Pals, Cardinals hats, Prayers for the dead, Holy water, &c. as Gualter ſheweth at large.

THE PROPHESIE OF MALACHI:

CHAP. I.

THE burthen of the word of the Lord to Iſrael by Malachi. As this Prophet is placed laſt of all the ſmall Prophets, ſo he is generally thought to have written laſt, and that by moſt after the building of the Temple finiſhed certain yeares, even in the time of Artaxerxes, who ſent Ezra the Scribe to Jeruſalem, becauſe the un-lawfull marriages, that were then made with heathen women are by him reproved, and they began now that they had a Temple again to be weary of the charge of the ſacrifices and of Tithes paying, and of the Temples building he ſpeakes nothing, as Haggai and Zechariah did; which he would not certainly have done, if it had been ſtill in building. Hee propheſied therefore as is moſt probable above 30 yeares after the Temple finiſhed, becauſe Darius reigned 30, and the Temple was finiſhed, An. 6. of his reign.
Ezra 7. And when Ezra came into the Holy Land it was the 7 year of Artaxerxes, and he continued there till the coming of Nehemiah, An. 20. Who this Prophet was, but onely that his name was Malachi, my Angel, it is not ſaid, whence ſome conjecture, that he was an angell, but this is a very weake ground for it, ſith men, Miniſters of the Churches of God are called Angels, Rev. 1. & 2.
Some will have it to be Ezra, and what is to be thought hereof, and what V. 2. arguments are brought, pro and con, hath been already ſhewed, Ezra 7. Hee beginneth his Propheſie with recounting Gods love to Iſrael, by which name he now calleth the Jews that returned out of Babylon, amongſt whom ſome of other Tribes were mingled.

V. 3. I have loved Jacob and hated Eſau: of which love he ſheweth that they were unworthy, becauſe they ſleighted it, ſaying, wherein hath hee loved us? And thus he makes a way to the ripping up of their groſſe ingratitude and to the juſtneſſe of his challenging them for all their reluctings againſt him and his ſervice. Of Gods loving Jacob and hating Eſau, whileſt they were yet unborn, ſee my Expoſition upon Rom. 9. 23. Here a demonſtration of Gods love to Jacob and hatred to Eſau is made onely from this, that Eſau his habitation was as a deſert, but Jacobs, although it be here expreſſed ſo but left to be underſtood, fruitfull and pleaſant. But it may be ſaid, What is this to ground the extraordinary love of God upon more to Jacob then to Eſau, ſeeing the countrey of Babylon was more pleaſant and fruitful, then Canaan, and yet given to heathen people that were idolaters? To this Calvin anſwereth very well, Calvin. that the land of Canaan is not to be looked upon, when Jacob was promiſed it and his poſterity planted in it as a moſt fruitfull countrey onely, but as an inheritance conferred upon him as the firſt born, and choſen hereunto by God out of his meer mercy and grace, although his brother Eſau were born before him, and ſo a type of the everlaſting inheritance to come. And on the other ſide upon Mount Seir, a rough, a barren countrey where Eſau was placed as upon a curſe following his ſleight eſteeming and ſelling away his birthright, and a ſigne of Gods reprobating him for ever. And of this Malachi put-teth them in minde to make them aſhamed, when Gods love was ſo extraordinary toward them above others, that might as well have challenged inter-eſt herein for the ſake of their parentage, whereas they commonly boaſted of this, that they came of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, moſt famous for Gods gracing them above all others in the world, for which they thought God ſo faſt bound unto them; that whatſoever they did they ſhould not be rejected, which made them bold to live in all manner of wickedneſſe, and the neglect of holy duties towards God injoined them; of this therefore Malachi telleth them, and ſharply reproveth them for it, ſeeking the more to move them from the conſideration of Gods free love and not any merit of theirs more then in the Edomites, from which this his beneficence flowed, and threateneth them with rejection for it, and the taking in of the Gentiles into favour through Chriſt in their ſtead, verſ. 11. And this ſerves for an admonition to us, who Note. injoy together with the true religion the like worldly bleſſings above the inhabitants of many other peoples, that we by our ingratitude doe not likewiſe provoke God to reject us, and drive us from theſe injoyments.

Wherein Edom ſaith, We are impoveriſhed, but we will return and build the deſo- V. 4. late places, thus ſaith the Lord, they ſhall build, but I will throw down. Here the judgement upon Eſau and his poſterity is further ſet forth by ſhewing, that it ſhould not be as that which came upon Iſrael, as hath alſo been before taught by other Prophets. For although Jacob ſhould be likewiſe judged by enemies coming and poſſeſſing his countrey, yet he findeth ſo much favour, that he is againe to his ancient dwelling reſtored, which is meant, when he ſaith V. 5. honoureth his father, and a ſervant his maſter, &c. Here the Prophet cometh plainly to tell them of their ingratitude, when as God had ſo greatly obliged them unto him, dealing with them as a moſt gracious Lord and Maſter, yea as a loving father, but they contrary to the common Law of Nature had not honoured him accordingly, but deſpiſed him, yea their very Prieſts deſpiſed him, wherein he ſpeaks much like unto the Prophet, that was ſent to Eli the High Prieſt to expoſtulate with him in Gods name about the wickedneſſe of his ſons, who were Gods Prieſts. For he telleth him of ſevere judgements to come upon his family, concluding with this ſaying, I will honour them that honour me, but ſuch as deſpiſe me ſhall be light- 1 Sam. 2. 30. ly eſteemed. He meaneth here doubtleſſe the exorbitances of the Prieſts, who went before others or joined with them in taking ſtrange wives, as Eli his ſons had, joining themſelves to ſtrange women, committing adultery with them, when they came to the the Tabernacle, as we may ſee Ezra 10. 18. yet ye ſay, Wherein have we deſpiſed thy name? ye offer polluted bread, &c. and that the table V. 7. of the Lord is contemptible. For the better underſtanding hereof it is to be noted, that the bread here ſaid to be offered was ſhew-bread, concerning which

the Lord made a Law, that it ſhould be of fine flower, and by bread is not only meant that and the bread of the meat offerings; but the ſacrifices of beaſts alſo, all which together are ſaid to be polluted bread, becauſe they brought them not of the beſt, but courſe bread and ſacrifices of Beaſts blemiſhed, for the Lord required the beſt of every thing, as appeareth Levit. 1. and V. 8. chap. 2. For that this is the polluted bread here meant, is ſhewed, verſ. 8. When yee offer the blind, is it not evill? or the lame or ſick? And thus they are ſaid to have made the Table of the Lord contemptible, touching which it is to be underſtood, that as he had an altar, ſo then he had a Table alſo for ſhew-bread for offering of baſe things, upon both which they are here ſo ſharply reproved, having named the Altar before to intimate the baſeneſſe of the beaſts offered upon it, ſo now he nameth the table, intimating, that there is no leſſe fault about the making of their Shew-bread. For it was Gods wil, that theſe things ſhould all be of the pureſt and perfecteſt, becauſe the pure and immaculate Lamb of God was hereby figured out, and the ſame the bread that came down from heaven, more excellent then the Manna, that fell in the wilderneſſe. The Prieſts moſt probably having part of all ſacrifices, to the end that the more might be brought refuſe none, but if any man ſhould ſay I have a lame beaſt or ſheep, or blind, and ſo not fit to be kept, and if it might be accepted, I would be willing to offer it, as men doe in reſpect of their own diet, kill up and eat ſuch beaſts being otherwiſe likely to loſe them: ſo the Prieſts hearing this ſaid, bring it notwithſtanding, we will make it ſerve the turn as well in the Lords houſe, as in one of your own. Now to doe thus was an intolerable contempt, and likewiſe it is now under the New Nott. Teſtament, when ſuch as deſpiſe knowledge, and ſo are blind, and ignorant, the lame and ſick of notorious ſins are permittted to come to the Lords Table, for which it ſtands the Miniſters of the Goſpell in hand to prohibit them, and to require them firſt to get knowledge, and by repentance to ſeek the cure of their ſoules diſeaſes through faith: wherein yet they are not to take themſelves to be ſo tyed, as that if upon ſuch prohibition the unworthy will not be made to refrain, that ſhould forbear their adminiſtration. For the Apoſtle in ſuch caſe giveth not any ſuch order, but only, he 1 Cor. 5. ſaith, Put ſuch an one from amongſt you, not adding, if ye cannot, forbear celebrating this holy feaſt altogether, as many in our Church through miſtake doe to the grief of many good ſoules, children, that by this means cannot have their bread. It is true indeed, they make the Lords Table contemptible, that countenance them in their preſſing to it, or invite them without reformation, but for their ſakes to deny acceſſe unto it to the godly and righteous of life, is to make it, if not contemptible yet ſuperfluous, and unneceſſary to ſalvation.

V. 9. Gualter. Calvin. And now I pray you beſeech God, that he will be gracious unto us, this hath been by your meanes, will he regard your perſons? Some think, that the Prophet here exhorts the Prieſts to repentance, but others, that he ſpeakes ironically deriding their prayers, as being of no force with the Lord, becauſe coming from men ſo vitious, although they by reaſon of their Office were mediatours to God for the people, repreſenting the mediatours to come, and for this thought highly of themſelves, and would be ſo accounted by others, that all might come to them to crave their prayers. For theſe words, this hath been by your meanes, Heb. it is, this hath been from your hand, and he ſhall accept faces from you, truſt may be given to your prayers, from whoſe hands ſuch ſacrifices have been offered, and the perſons by you commended unto him ſhall be therefore doubtleſſe accepted, in all which he doth but deride them and their doings, as being moſt unlikely to prevaile for any good at Gods hands. And this is moſt gennine, as will appear from the words before going, Offer it to thy Governour, will he accept thy perſon? and the words following, V. 10. verſ. 10. I have no pleaſure in you, neither will I accept an offering at your hands, ſaith the Lord, here being alſo more words premiſed as ſhewing the cauſe, why they were not accepted, Who is there amongſt you, that would ſhut the doore for nought?

neither would yee kindle a fire upon my Altar for nought, that is, I know well enough, what yee ſeek when yee open the doores of my houſe to goe in to pray, and when yee kindle fire for ſacrifice upon mine Altar, verily your own worldly gaine, not the diſcharge of conſcience of your duties towards men. And who ſo in ſo baſe mindedneſſe miniſters at Gods Altar can never be accepted, ſeeing God accepts of nothing done in his ſervice by any man, unleſſe he doth it out of duty to him, being ſo diſpoſed to the doing of it, that although he ſhould have no worldly reward for his labour, yet he would goe on in doing of it, that God may have glory, and mens ſoules, at the leaſt ſome be edified, and benefited thereby, and their temporall good alſo, which hee out of his love deſireth, procured. Yet he may lawfully deſire the wages due unto him, and by God ordained for ſuch as preach, to live upon, declining only the filthy lucre, being given to which is by the Apoſtle condemned in every Biſhop.

Note.

1 Cor. 9.

V. 11. For from the riſing of the Sun to the going down thereof my name ſhal be glorified amongſt the Gentiles, and they ſhall offer incenſe. Here follows the rejection both of theſe wicked Prieſts & people, another being taken in their ſtead to offer the incenſe of prayer and the ſacrifice of praiſe all over the world; of which alteration, ſee Rom. 11. Jerome I grant, underſtandeth this ſacrifice of the Euchariſt, which is a pure ſacrifice and cannot be defiled or made unacceptable by the unworthineſſe of the offerer, and with him agreeth Auguſtine and many more of the Fathers. But this is laid hold upon by the Papiſts to prove the reall preſence by tranſubſtantion, and conſequently, that the Prieſt in the maſſe offereth up Chriſt againe and again, of whom Saint Peter ſaith, that he was but once offered: and yet they doe worſe hereupon to infer adoration to be due unto it, which none of the Fathers ever thought of, and but for burning incenſe withall after the manner of the old carnall ſervice, which is done away. But for thankſgiving being a ſacrifice, and the beſt ſacrifice, ſee Pſal. 50. and incenſe, prayer, where it is ſaid, Let the lifting up of my hands be as incenſe, that we may ſedulouſly apply our ſelves hereunto, morning and evening, yea continually.

V. 12. But yee have prophaned it in that yee ſay, the Table of the Lord is polluted, and the fruit of it contemptible. Here the Prophet reflects againe upon that, which he had before ſaid, meaning by their prophaning of his name their offering of polluted bread to his diſhonour. Now he ſaith not onely ſo, but that they were ſo audacious as to ſay, the Table of the Lord was polluted, that is, no more then one of their Tables, any bread would ſerve to be ſet thereupon; and then he varyeth the word and ſaith, the fruit of it is contemptible, the ſame thing being meant, but ſet forth in other words, ſo Calvin: but by the fruit thereof I conceive rather, that the good coming by offering here was ſo little, that it was not worth the ſpeaking of, as the wicked are brought in by Job, ſaying, What profit ſhall we have if we call upon him? although as Calvin ſaith, it is not probable that they would be ſo groſſe, as to ſay thus openly with their mouthes, but their practice ſhewed that they ſaid thus in their hearts.

Job 21.14.15.

V. 13. Yee have ſaid alſo, what a wearineſſe is it, and yee have ſnuffed at it. Here partly in more words, and partly in the ſame he further ſetteth forth the ſame ſin which is alſo to be underſtood, not as ſpoken out, but muttered or ſpoken in their hearts, and unto the lame and the ſick, for which he challenged them before, the torn is alſo added here, Vulg. Yee have brought in of things gotten by rapine, the lame and the ſicke, de rapinis, and ſo the word גזול ſignifieth: ſo that they are here charged not onely with bringing blemiſhed and vile things for ſacrifice, but alſo wrongfully gotten, or by violence taken from others, which was moſt abominable, and ſuch an offering doth he make, that out of goods ill gotten giveth to any good uſe, without firſt making reſtitution with Zacheus: he offers the lame, that doth good, but it is with an evill heart, ſeeking more his own praiſe then Gods glory, or grudging at that which he doth; and the ſick, that doth good, but liveth ſtill in ſin.

V. 14. But curſed is he that in his flocke hath a male, but voweth and ſacrificeth a corrupt thing. This is added to meet with them, that ſaid, we are poore men, and bring as good as we have, but this, he ſheweth was to pull down Gods curſe upon them, having a better ſheep in his flock meat by a male, yet bring the worſt. So the great God will never put it up at his hands, that ſerves him ſo unworthily, as to uſe fraud about his dues, giving the worſe for the better, as is the manner of too many now a dayes.

CHAP. II.

ANd now O Prieſts this command is to you, if ye will not hear, nor lay it to heart, I will curſe your bleſſings, ye I have curſed them already. Having laid open the great ſin of ſleighting the ſervice of God, ch. 1. now he applyeth it to the Prieſts, his Miniſters in ſpeciall, threatning them above others therefore, becauſe that by their means it came to paſſe, that ſuch groſſe abuſes were committed, ſeeing it was their duty to have taught the people better, & that their blemiſhed mutilated ſacrifices were not acceptable, but abominable to God, giving them to underſtand, that God was ſo farre from being therefore reconciled unto them to pardon their ſins and to ſend down his bleſſing upon them, that he was hereby more provoked to wrath and diſpleaſure againſt them. They might haply ſaith Calvin, lay the fault upon the people and excuſe themſelves, ſaying they offered ſuch ſacrifices as they would bring, and no better could Note. they offer, as is the common manner, one to excuſe himſelfe by laying all the fault upon another; but God ſaw, that it was through their fault that it was thus done, they had the commandement about ſacrifices, what manner of ones they ſhould be, but they layed it not to heart to preſſe the people to bring them accordingly without blemiſh and of the beſt, and this is Note. the thing for which they are ſo ſharply reproved here. A man may then hear Gods commandements, but unleſſe hee layeth them to heart with all good care to doe accordingly, wherefore he repeateth the ſame again at the end of the verſe alſo, as a thing by all men ſeriouſly to be conſidered. I will Numb. 6. 23. curſe your bleſſings. This is ſpoken in alluding to Aarons bleſſing of the children of Iſrael by Gods owne appointment, after whom other Prieſts did the the like, but hereby he ſheweth that they might bleſſe, but he for this intolerable abuſe about ſacrificing would curſe, and ſo their bleſſings ſhould prove curſings both to themſelves and all the people. And how this curſing ſhould work V. 3. he ſheweth, v. 3. ſaying, I will corrupt your ſeed and ſpread dung upon your faces even the

in the ſeed committed to the ground, it yeelding no increaſe, and by ignominy and reproach coming upon you, none having you in any eſteem any more then men beſmeared & ſtinking with dung upon their faces, againſt whom coming themſelves the baſeſt of all others by their ill demeanure in their place and calling, ſo that they are juſtly had in abomination and vilified amongſt the people, God being the authour of this their debaſement, whom they have ſo greatly diſhonoured. And by reaſon of ſuch the Miniſtery of England, which was wont to be had in ſo high eſteem amongſt the people, is now generally vilified more then any other ſort of men. But let every one take heed, how for the ſake of ſome, upon whoſe faces God hath ſpread ſtinking dung, they promiſcuouſly vilifie others alſo, whoſe faces, yea their

for their zeal to God and their King, which it is to be feared, cryeth aloud for vengeance in the ears of the Lord of hoſts, even the dung of your ſolemn feaſts, and one ſhall take you away. This is added because that many beaſts being at ſuch times brought together for ſacrifice, abundance of dung came from them; but for their wickedneſſe he ſaith, that they having their faces ſpread with this dung, ſhould be taken and carryed away and caſt upon a dunghill in an out baſe place, as this dung was, being there trodden under foot of all men, even the vileſt. And it is to be noted, which was ſaid before verſ. 2. that the Lord ſaith not only, I will curſe your bleſſings, but I have curſed them already, for hereby their ſtupidity is intimated, in that by the ſenſe of Gods judgements they were not moved to repentance, as any man, but a ſtock or a block is, even children and beaſts being by the rod and whip wrought upon to do better, as Calvin noteth: but why he ſhould reject the common received expoſition before going, about Curſing bleſſings, as too dilute, I cannot ſee, and referre it only to Gods curſe upon the bleſſing of the earth plentifull fructification, ſeeing the prieſts bleſſing was by the Lord appointed as a means hereof, and of all other bleſſings alſo.

V. 4.
V. 5.

And ye ſhall know, that I ſent this commandement unto you, that my covenant might be with Levi. V. 5. My covenant was with him of life and peace and I gave them to him, for the fear wherewith he feared me. Here the Lord by his Prophet ſeeks to ſtirre up the prieſts to repentance by recounting, how the Lord firſt choſe the tribe of Levi, making a covenant with it, that none of any other tribe but only of this ſhould ſerve at his altar, and how faithfull at the firſt they were, both Aaron, Eleazar, Phinees and others. But they now bearing themſelves upon this dignity conferred upon their tribe, thought that howſoever they miſdemeaned themſelves they muſt needs be accepted. But the Lord hereby teacheth, what manner of men all his miniſters ought to be, or elſe they are falne from the dignity of their order, and become moſt baſe and vile, as theſe wicked prieſts are ſaid to be verſ. 9. So that there is no pleading for Biſhops now adayes, that the Apoſtles were men of great eminency and to them the keys of the kingdome of heaven were committed, therefore we that are their ſucceſſours are partakers and ought to be partakers of the ſame dignity, and all men ought to be obedient unto us. Note. For this argument is of no force, but only to ſuch as are in conditions like unto them. 1. For the fear of God. V. 6. 2. The law of truth in his mouth and no iniquity in his lips. 3. His walking with God in peace and equity. 4. Turning many from iniquity. For thus every miniſter of God ought to be qualified, and then he ſaith ſomething in challenging reſpect and ſubmiſſion from the people, but otherwiſe not.

1. Aaron and the prieſts feared God and eſchewed evill, as the fear of God is further ſet forth Iob 1. 1. But the prieſts now had no ſuch fear of God in them, being wicked and licentious in their lives.

2. They duly and truly taught people the Law and will of God, holding them unto it in their ſacrifices and offerings bringing to his tabernacle, but theſe allowed any ſacrifices, though never ſo imperfect. See the like unto this ſaid of Levi by Moſes, Deut. 33. 9. in ſpeaking of his zeal for God, and commending it when he ſlew thoſe that committed idolatry with the golden Calf, not ſparing any how near or dear ſoever unto him. Exod. 32.

3. They led a moſt holy and righteous life meant by his walking with God in peace and equity, as Enoch is ſaid to have walked with God. Gen. 5.

4. His care was by all means to convert ſouls. But theſe minded nothing leſſe then the converſion of ſouls; yea they walked in the way of the wicked inſtead of walking with God, whereby others were the more incouraged in their evill wayes. And the like hath been done by the community of our miniſtry, eſpecially of late daies, and ſpecially by popiſh prieſts, which made them ſo infamous.

V. 7.

For the prieſts lips ſhould keep knowledge, and they ſhould ſeek the Law at his mouth. This is added in reference to that which was ſaid before, The Law of God was in his mouth, for hence he inferreth that now it ſhould be with the prieſts likewiſe, whereas in ſtead of the truth, iniquity came from their lips, or at the leaſt they did ſo, as that their doings were more then their ſpeaking, or elſe they were mute like dumb dogs, when men brought imperfect ſacrifices not reproving them therefore. To intimate this knowledg in them Jerom obſerves well, that in the prieſts breaſtplate was put a Rationale, and in that Vrim lights, to ſhew, that he ſhould be full of learning and light ſufficient to inlighten all that came unto him, and Thummim perfections, for his integrity in ſetting forth the will of God, not depraving it in any thing: to which purpoſe excellent is the ſaying of Vincentius Lyrinenſis, upon the depoſitum, or that which was committed to Timothy. It is that, ſaith he, which was committed to thee, not found out by thee, which thou haſt received, not excogitated, not a matter of wit, but of learning, not of private uſurpation, but of publick tradition, a thing brought out by thee, not from thee, in which thou oughteſt not to be author, but keeper; not an inſtitutor, but a follower. Thou haſt received gold, render gold, I will not have thee render, other things for theſe, I will not for gold have lead impudently rendred or braſſe fraudulently. Here is then both a charge to Gods miniſters to ſtudy to be knowing men, and accordingly to be diligent in teaching and ſincere, and alſo to people to frequent their teaching, as if God ſhould ſend an angell from heaven to bring a meſſage from him unto them, as the word מלאך, He is a meſſenger of the Lord, ſignifieth, and therefore by Jerom it is rendred Angell. And hereby all men are taught to beware, how they deviſe any Expoſitions of holy Scripture of their own heads, but follow thoſe only, which they receive from Gods faithfull Miniſters, who in their teaching aime at nothing elſe but their converſion, and hereby may be known; and by this, that they ſtudy to divide the word of truth aright, as Timothy is exhorted to doe.

V. 10.

Calvin.

Have we not all one fathen? hath not one God created us? why then deal we treacherouſly againſt his brother by prophaning the Covenant of our Fathers? Here the Prophet proceedeth to cenſure not only the prieſts, as hitherto, but even all the wicked Jewes; and here by father we are to underſtand Abraham, not God, as ſome doe, taking the next words to be ſpoken exegetice, Hath not one God made us. For as Calvin well noteth, here are two things joyned together, the conſideration of this, that they all come of one father Abraham, and that they all above other peoples were Gods creation, and therefore in them being ſo ſtrongly bound one to another it were an intolerable ſinne to deal treacherouſly one with another. For it is not to be thought, when he ſaith, Hath not one God created us, that he meaneth his creating of all men, as theſe words are commonly taken in other places, but a ſpirituall creation, according to which the elect are in ſpeciall called His creation. Rom. 8. 22. As I have ſhewed is meant by the words, πᾶσα ἡ κτίσις, upon that place, and Eph. 2.10. We are his workmanſhip created unto good works, and Pſal. 23. He is our maker, and Eſa. 60. 21. the Church is called the work and frame of God. The meaning then is, God in Abraham hath made us all a royall generation, ſo that root by means of ſo holy a father alone they came to be an holy and peculiar people; but of this God was the author, Abraham the inſtrument or conduit pipe, whereby this great grace flowed out unto them by reaſon of the covenant, which God made with him and his poſterity. But break this covenant, as the wicked Jewes then did, and fruſtrate this grace in reſpect of them, for which cauſe it ſtood them in hand to hearken to this reproof, ſhall we deal treacherouſly and break the covenant of our fathers? that is, whereby God tyed himſelf to them, and through them to their poſterity? Oh fear and tremble to think upon your running by your treachery into ſo great a danger. And for us, whom God hath made his people peculiarly by Chriſt, and faith in his Name, this reproof alſo ſpeaks to us, ſhall we, that have one Father Chriſt, and one creator in the ſenſe before ſaid, deal treacherouſly one with another, and not hold match together within our ſelves, and ſo break the covenant of our common fathers, Abraham and Iſrael, whoſe children we are ſaid to be, and after whoſe name we are called, Iſrael Rom. 9. Joh. 1. 43. For of mixt marriages with ſtrangers ſerving ſtrange gods he here ſheweth, that he ſpeaketh in ſaying, ſhall we deal treacherouſly, and then verſ. 11. Judah hath dealt treacherouſly, and hath prophaned the holineſſe of the Lord, which he loved, and marryed the daughter of a ſtrange god. Here for holineſſe, the vulg. hath ſanctification, Hebr. it is קדש ſignifying as Calvin hath it, ſanctuary. But the meaning is the ſame, for it is ſpoken of the Church of Iſrael, which was ſeparated from the people of other countreys, as holy to God, as the Church in the New Teſtament, is often called Gods houſe, and Iſrael his ſanctuary, Pſal. 114. although literally by the ſanctuary is underſtood the place of publique worſhip, but here as the Caldee hath it, the ſouls of the faithfull are meant, which God loveth, the Church of the Jewes then conſidered, as a body ſeparated from others to be holy, and delighted in by the Lord, was prophaned by ſuch marriages, becauſe he that joynes himſelf to a woman an idolatreſſe becometh one fleſh with her, and ſo is made a member of her in ſtead of being a member of Gods holy Church. Now that this was to deal treacherouſly, and to break the covenant, appeareth, becauſe God ſtrictly tyed them from making any ſuch marriages, Deut. and the ſame is injoyned Chriſtians, 2 Cor. 6. 16. He then prophaneth Gods ſanctuary alſo, who being a Chriſtian marryeth with an infidell, or if not an unbeleever, a misbeleever, becauſe a worſhipper of idols or images, for they are all one, the ſame being an idoll in Greek, that is an image, in Latine imago, and therefore he that marrieth a papiſt deals treacherouſly, and prophaneth Gods ſanctuary, which he will not indure: an idolatreſſe is called the daughter of a ſtrange God, not becauſe ſhe was made by him, but becauſe he was honoured by her as a father.

V. 12. The Lord will cut off the man that doth this, the maſter and the ſcholar out of the tabernacles of Jacob. Hebr. The watchman and the anſwerer. But here by the maſter the teacher that watcheth here unto is meant, and the ſcholar that anſwereth him by learning and being conformable to his Doctrine, whether good or evill, but here they are meant, who being taught by the evill example of their teachers, that is, the prieſts, followed them in making ſuch unlawfull marriages, and therefore further to declare whom he meant by ſuch a watchman, he addeth and him that offereth gifts. A plain deſcription of a prieſt, whoſe office it was to offer the gifts brought by the people, for of the prieſts being faulty in the ſame kinde, it was ſpoken before.

V. 13. This have ye done, and covered mine altar with tears. That is, cauſed it to be covered with the tears of your wives of your own nation, whom ye have unkindly put away, that ye might take unto you wives of the heathen, being moved more by fleſhly luſt, then by the Law and fear of God. And in ſaying covered, he meaneth, that their offerings were by this means ſo covered, that although laid upon the altar, they could not be ſeen to be accepted of, as is ſhewed in the next words, inſomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, nor receiveth it with good will at your hands. Hereby it ſeemeth, that their wives being ſo put away, as hath been ſaid, came before the Lord at his altar to complain, whereby he being juſt, was ſtirred up to reject them, and their ſervice, that did them ſo great wrong; thus Gualter and others generally, but Lyra and Calvin otherwiſe underſtand this of the prieſts weeping at the altar, becauſe that although they offered ſacrifices, they ſaw, that they were not accepted, but lay under the curſe of unſeaſonable weather and barrenneſſe of the earth ſtill. And this he ſaith, ye have done again, Hebr. the ſecond time, for he had firſt laid to their charge that they offered mutilated ſacrifices, now for ſecond ſin to the provoking of God to continue in his wrath againſt them, they hypocritically thought to pacifie him by their tears, without turning from the ſin of mixt marriages with the heathen, wherein they lived, which tears yet were not ſhed for that ſin, for then they would have put ſuch wives away, and reſumed their former wives again, but for that the judgements of God continued after their offering of many gifts, whereby they found that they were not accepted before God, as they expected, So that this paſſage is not much unlike to that, Eſa. 58. Why have we faſted, and thou regardeſt it not? and this expoſition is rather approved by the words following, Hebr. מאין עוד פנות אל המנחה, from no more face to the ſacrifice, that is, from hence ariſeth your ſorrow, viz. that Gods countenance is not towards your ſacrifices to the removing of his judgements. Here note, that Note. ſorrowing and praying under the laſh of Gods ſcourge, is ſo far from pacifying him, if there be no reformation of life, that his wrath is more ſtirred up, and good reaſon, becauſe thus the ſinne is doubled, according to the words here, This thou haſt done the ſecond time.

V. 15. Did he not make one? yet had he the reſidue of the ſpirit: and wherefore one? becauſe he ſought a godly ſeed. Hebr. Did not one make the reſidue of the ſpirit in him? and wherefore one? becauſe he ſought a ſeed of God. Here the Prophet to convince them of the errour of their way in putting away their former wives and taking others, brings them to the originall of matrimony, and becauſe the ſaying is imperfect, Did not one make, no more being added to ſhew what he made, it is to be ſupplyed thus, Did not one God make man and woman, as Chriſt for further explication ſaith, Matth. 19.4. Have ye not read, that he who made them at the firſt, made them male an female? That is, did he not make one man and one woman, joyning them two together in marriage, not for the man to live with and keep his wife during his pleaſure, and then to put her away and take another, but as long as they both live, and the reſidue of ſpirit in him, or rather, for him; that is, did he not make man, breathing into him the breath of life, or Gen. 2: ſpirit of life, and the reſidue into the woman whom he made for him, being in the frame and lineaments of her body like unto him, and in an underſtanding and immortall ſoul, and ſo an help meet for him? And what was Gods main end in doing thus, but that his ſeed might by their living all their life long together be increaſed? to which end he made man and woman, Gen. 1. 26. not man and women: and man and woman both holy and righteous, for he made man in his own image, male and female created he them: ſo that it cannot be the ſeed of God, which cometh of polygamie, or of mixt marriages with the unholy and unclean, ſuch as heathens were, but that ſuch as come of Monogamy, and Hagiogamy are reputed Gods ſeed, as is taught 1 Pet. 2.9. and 1 Cor. 7. where it is ſaid, otherwiſe your children were unclean, but now they are holy; and what is a royall generation but the generation of God, the King of kings, according to that Act. 17. we are his generation? To this effect Jerom and Chryſoſtome, &c. Hieron. Chryſoſt. Lyra. Gualter. But the Hebrews whom Gualter followeth, by this one underſtand Abraham, taking this to be the meaning. Why doeſt thou object to us (O Malachi) our leaving one wife to take another? did not that only rare man ſo greatly in Gods favour, Abraham, doe the like, in whom the ſpirit was more then in thee or Prophets of this time? which is meant by the reſidue of the ſpirit in him; and why did he it, but in zeal to ſeek the ſeed, which God had promiſed ſhould come of him, which was the Meſſiah, he ſeeing, that he could no have it by Sarah, ſought it by Hagar, a ſtranger an Egyptian: Or rather in theſe words the Prophet anſwers their objection, (as if he had ſaid, Do ye to juſtifie your ſelves in your wickedneſſe, object that man alone or one man, as he is called Eſa. 51. 2. his example will not verily bear you out: for he did not ſo out of luſt, but zeal, ſeeing that he and his wife Sarah were now old and not likely to have a childe between them, but ye through fleſhly luſt carrying to theſe ſtrange marriages: he did it not without the conſent of his wife, ye altogether againſt the will of your wives: he not giving over to love and dwell ſtill with his wife, preferring another woman before her, but continuing a loving husband unto her, and when Hagar deſpiſed her, delivering her into the power of her miſtreſſe to caſtigate that her petulancy. Calvin reproving all expoſitours, that went before him, renders it as in the New Tranſlation, Did he not make one, giving the ſame ſenſe yet with Calvin. the firſt, but he preferres this reading, becauſe otherwiſe the ſaying is imperfect, Did not one make. For my part either rendering and expoſition ſtandeth to ſo good ſenſe, that I know not whether to preferre, but becauſe the word אחד one goeth before עשה made or did, I rather follow that reading, being for the expoſition indifferent, Therefore take heed to your ſpirits, and let none deal treacherouſly againſt the wife of his youth; that is, take heed that ye be not carried away by the ſpirit of luſt in you after ſtrange women, your wives, whom ye firſt took, when they were young, and lived ſweetly together with them, being caſt off. For of the ſpirit in man, and its luſting, we read, James 4. 5.

V. 16. I hate putting away, for one covereth violence with his garment, Hebr. for hatred putting away, or putting away is hatefull: the Vulg. Cum odio habueris, dimitte. For theſe words, One covereth violence with his garment, Hebr. it is, And violence covereth over his garment, Vulg. Iniquity ſhall cover; but the word חמס ſignifieth either rapine, or iniquity wittingly committed. The Lord here ſheweth, how odious to him a mans putting away of his wife before ſpoken of is, and that he who doth ſo, is all over covered with ſin, as with filthineſs, and ſhall be covered, or overwhelmed with Gods Judgments therefore to his deſtruction, for which he giveth warning againſt this ſinne again, as before, ver. 15. Some following the Vulg. ſay, that the Prophet biddeth him that hateth his wife, put her away rather then keep her as a ſervant, giving her a bill of Divorce, it being more tolerable ſo to doe, then keeping her ſtill, and ſhewing ſuch palpable neglect of her, by marrying another, a ſtranger for her Beauty, to vex her the more. Yet if any man doth this, iniquity will cover his body, which is the garment of the Soul, as Jerom hath it, he ſhall be thus perpetually blemiſhed, and liable to Gods wrath for ſo doing: and as ſome, by putting her away with a bill of Divorce, ſhe ſhall depart with the more credit, as Eſay 50. 1. it is on the contrary ſide uſed as an argument to aggravate Iſraels ſinne, that ſhe had a bill of Divorce, the fault will not light upon her, but upon him, ſhe being made known hereby, not to have gone away from her husband in an whoriſh manner, but onely for ſome particular diſlike, through his moroſity, or fleſhly luſt to another woman taken for her, which ſhall cover his garment, rendring him to all honeſt men loathſome, as one clad in filthy rags, and moſt of all to God: To this effect almoſt Calvin and Gualter, who render the words, as the Vulg. Latine, but Junius is for the former reading, which I alſo prefer.

V. 17. Ye have wearied the Lord with your words, when ye ſay, Every one that doth evill, is good in the ſight of the Lord, and where is the God of Judgment? Here the Prophet cometh to another ſinne, viz. their exclamations againſt God, and blaſphemous clamourouſneſſe, when he did not for them what they deſired forthwith, they as impatient of any delay complained againſt him; or if he delayed to lay his judgments upon their Heathen enemies; for in this caſe they exclaimed upon him, ſaying, that he favoured evill doers; and both in this, and the former, they cryed out, no God; the interrogative, where is the God of Judgement? being a moſt vehement affirmative, and therefore it is as if they had hence argued, and concluded, that there was no ſuch juſt God. Galatin. And their Argument, as Calvin hath it, ſeemes to ſtand thus, He that is a juſt God will hear, and doe for thoſe that call upon him, and be revenged upon the wicked enemies of his People doing them miſchief, but God doth neither, therefore he is not juſt. Note. See the blaſphemy that impatient men fall into, that will not wait upon God, but will ſet him the time when he ſhall help them, or elſe look for no help from him at all, that we may learn contrariwiſe to wait Gods leiſure, till he will come and help us, as David ſpeaketh, Pſal. 123. They that doe otherwiſe, make the Lord weary, and ready therefore to depart from them, and leave them in miſery.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. B*Ehold, I will ſend my meſſenger, and he ſhall prepare the way before me ; and the* Lord whom ye ſeek, ſhall ſuddenly come to his Temple, even the Meſſenger of the Covenant. In Hebrew, this is the third verſe of this chapter ; the two laſt verſes of chap. 2. being taken from that, and ſet before this, in Vulg. the laſt verſe onely. But foraſmuch as this is a new Propheſie touching Chriſt, and ſo differs from the Argument handled there, it being altogether reprehenſive, this conſolatory, it is beſt to begin this chapter here. The firſt words, are the words of Chriſt touching John the Baptiſt, as appeareth, Matth. 11. 10. where our Lord being asked touching him, ſaith, This is he, of whom it is ſaid, behold, I ſend my meſſenger before thee : The third perſon being put there for the firſt here, as is uſuall amongſt the holy men of God, when they ſpeak of themſelves out of modeſty, as Matthew, and John the Evangeliſt doe. Now he prepared the way before Chriſt, by Preaching, and Baptizing, in way of preparing men to his Preaching, and Baptizing. And the word my Meſſenger, is Hebr. Malachi, my Angel ; the ſame with his name, that wrote this Propheſie, happily given him becauſe he wrote of Malachi, my Angel, John the Baptiſt, and of Malach haberith, The meſſenger of the Covenant : And John the Baptiſt might well be ſet forth by this name of Chriſts Angel, becauſe he pronounced of him, that he was more then a Prophet, and what can ſuch an one be but an Evangelicall man ? The Lord, whom ye ſeek, ſhall ſuddenly come to his Temple ; that is, Chriſt, who ſoon after Johns preparing his way, came to the Temple, and Preached, and did Miracles there ; for betwixt Johns beginning to Preach, and his, there were but ſix months. And he ſaith, The meſſenger whom ye ſeek : becauſe the Meſſiah was generally deſired by the Jewes, although not received by his own when he came, becauſe they would not beleeve that he was the Lord promiſed. And he is alſo called, The Angel, or Meſſenger of the Covenant, whom they delighted in. For although he were equall with God the Father, yet he humbled himſelf to become his Meſſenger, ſent John 3. 16. out into this world, That all who believe in him, ſhould not periſh, but have life everlaſting ; and therefore the delight of the Soul. And he addeth again, He ſhall come, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, to ſhew his double coming ; 1. To convert Souls.
2. To ſave all the converted, but to deſtroy the hard-hearted, and unbeleiving, for ever in Hell fire.

V. 2. For which he ſaith further, Ver. 2. But who ſhall abide the day of his coming, and who ſhall ſtand, when he appeareth ? the Vulg. Who can think of the day of his coming ?
Lyra. expounded by Lyra (whoſe is alſo the foregoing expoſition) by that of our Math. 24. Lord, Of that day and hour knoweth no man : But the word מכלכל ſignifieth ſuſtinere, bear, or endure, wherefore the Sept. hath it, τίς ὑπομένει, and they that follow the Vulg. by conceiving underſtand, in the very thinking of that Auguſt. de Civit. day who can bear it, becauſe it ſhall be ſo full of Glory. Auguſtine is for the
lib. 18. cap. 35. expoſition touching two comings, brought by Lyra, and Euſeb. and Theodoret Euſeb. l. 5. c. 28. alſo ; but Rupertus, and Cyrill, hold onely one to be ſpoken of here ; that de demonſtr. is, his firſt coming ; neither doth Jerom expound it of any other, who alſo Evang. ſaith, that theſe words, The Lord whom ye ſeek, ſhall ſuddenly come, are ſpoken Theod. in way of anſwer to thoſe in the end of the former chap. Where is the God of Hieron. judgment ? as if he had ſaid, ſeek ye after this God ? he ſhall come ſuddenly, and when he cometh, he ſhall be like fire, ſo that ye ſhall not be able to endure his coming. And as Jerom, ſo Calvin, and more fully ſaith, that this is Calvin. an anſwer given in an ironicall manner, The Lord whom ye ſeek, as if he had ſaid, whom ye make a ſhew to ſeek, but neither ſeek indeed, nor will receive when he cometh ; but he ſhall come to his Temple, being firſt preſent there at 40 dayes old, then at 12 years old he ſhall ſit there amongſt the Doctors, poſing them, and asking them queſtions, being admired of all men for his underſtanding ſtanding, and anſwers laſtly, to teach, and work Miracles at 30. And of this his coming, let no man doubt, for it ſhall be, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, to the joy and comfort of ſome few; for which he ſaith, the Meſſenger of the Covenant, that is, The Mediatour of the N. T. in whom ye delight: But to the far greater part, his coming ſhall be intolerable, for the Jewes generally ſhall not indure him, but through the tartneſs of his reproofs, be ſtirred up to maligne, and crucifie him, which ſhould turn to their deſtruction. So he ſhall be like a Refiners fire, and a Fullers ſoap, fire to burn up ſome, and ſoap to cleanſe, and make white and ſhining by Grace others. And indeed that which is here ſpoken, cannot be applyed to any but his firſt coming. For at the laſt day there ſhall be no refining, but they that have been refined, and made to ſhine by righteouſneſſe, ſhall then ſhine in Glory; and after that time, offerings by the ſons of Levi ſhall be made no more, as it is here ſaid, that they ſhall; V. 3. He ſhall purifie the ſons of Levi, that they may offer to the Lord an offering in righteouſneſſe: V. 4. then ſhall the offerings of Judah and Jeruſalem be pleaſant to the Lord. For this is done under the Goſpell, when holy Miniſters of Chriſt ſet forth by the ſons of Levi, and the reſt of Gods faithfull people ſet forth by Judah, offer prayers and praiſes from a pure heart continually unto him. Gualter. Gualter alſo ſaith hereupon, ye think long for the Meſſiah, of whom ye have heard, ſuppoſing, that then ye ſhall enjoy all worldly happineſſe: then, and therefore ye are ſo obſtreperous againſt God, for that he is not yet come. But alaſs (poor ſouls) he ſhall come indeed, but his coming ſhall be nothing pleaſant unto you, for he ſhall firſt come into his Temple, and whip the buyers and ſellers out thence; and he ſhall come as a refiners fire to burn up the droſſe by his Word and Spirit, which ſhall be as piercing as a two-edged Sword, and as fire to conſume the droſſe, by giving judgment then againſt them, and ſhewing them their damnable eſtate, ſo that the wicked rabble, who were ſo importunate about his coming, had little cauſe to deſire that time, being all droſſe, and no ſilver or gold, and therefore ſuch as muſt be conſumed to their great pain and horrour. Note. And as Chriſts firſt comming, ſo his ſecond, much more ſhall be to ſome few indeed a time of joy and delight, but to innumerable others a diſmall and ſad time for their utter rejection from the preſence of God, and of holy Angels into utter darkneſſe for ever.

V. 5. For I will come near to you to judgement, and I will be a ſwift witneſſe againſt the ſorcerers, the adulterers, &c. Here he goeth on again, as having reference to their words, chap. 17. Where is the God of judgement? As if he had ſaid, doe ye deſire to know where the God of judgement is, I am he, and I will come near, &c. that is, by executing judgement upon you, will make you know, that howſoever ſometime through my exceeding great patience I ſuffer the wicked going on in their evill wayes, yet the time ſhall come, when I will aſſuredly come thus nearer unto you, then you deſire; and when that time cometh, I will no more be ſlow either to teſtifie againſt you, or to puniſh you for your adulteries, ſorceries, falſe ſwearings, and oppreſſions, in which enumeration, as Calvin obſerveth, Calvin. the ſinnes againſt all the commandements, that is, the Capitall ſinnes are briefly run over, Sorcery againſt the firſt Table, and likewiſe falſe Swearing, Adultery, and Oppreſſion againſt the ſecond, to ſhew, that in the dayes of Gods judging no ſinnes ſhall be forgotten. Note. And this is threatned here, becauſe they were diſpleaſed with God for his delaying to take his judgments off from them, when they made offerings unto him, intimating, that we had need in our approaches to God, to conſider our ſinnes to turn from them, being with all fear and reverence alwayes before him, and not provoked by his delaying to help us to ſpeak any words that may be provocative unto him: for then, inſtead of ſpeeding of our deſires, we ſhall have him draw near us to our confuſion.

V. 6. For I am the Lord, I change not, therefore ye ſonnes of Jacob are not conſumed; Hebr. and Vulg. And ye ſonnes of Jacob are not conſumed; ſo likewiſe Calvin. He perſiſteth ſtill in the ſame argument ; being put to it to prove, that he was not mutable, having been indeed formerly the Patron and Protectour of his people, but now not moved by their prayers and teares to doe for them or againſt their enemies, as they were ſaid to complaine, chap.2. But here he proveth that he was not mutable both by his name, Jehovah, Eſſence, being alwayes the ſame, and by his immutability in his mercies towards the ſons of Jacob, in that they having deſerved deſtruction by their ſinnes a thouſand times, yet through the unchangeableneſſe of his moſt mercifull and patient nature they remained a people to this day, and ſo ſhould doe to the end of the world, which is the meaning of theſe words, as if he had ſaid, I change not, and that appears by this, that ye being ſo ſinfull and wicked are not conſumed, and to this Expoſition giveth light, that ſaying of Jeremiah, *Lament.*3. It is Gods mercy, that we are not conſumed, becauſe his compaſſions fail not, thus alſo Calvin, although the firſt bringeth another Expoſition, viz. rendring ו by but, ſaying, but yee ſonnes of Jacob, &c. that is, it may be ſaid, yee have eſcaped my judgements hitherto, therefore yee hope to goe on ſo ſtill, it is true yee are not yet out of my reach to bee proceeded againſt when I pleaſe ; but this is ſo farre from the meaning, that it is not worth the naming. But the former is moſt genuine, and being ſo V. 7. underſtood the next words follow aptly, From the dayes of your Fathers yee have gone away from mine Ordinances ; as if he had ſaid, if I were changeable from my graciouſneſſe I would not have been with you thus long, who have traded ſo long in ſin, whereby to provoke me to deſtroy you, &c.

V. 8, 9. Here he layeth open another ſin intolerable amongſt them, viz. their robbing of God in his Tithes, which no barbarous or heathen Nation will doe to their gods. For the tithe of the increaſe hath alwayes been holy to God even before the writen Law of Moſes, and therefore it is ſaid, *Levit.*27. all the tithes are the Lords: and it appeares that this was known by tradition from the father to the ſonne, not onely amongſt thoſe of the holy line, as Abraham and Jacob, of whom the one gave, the other vowed tithe of all that hee had, but even amongſt the wicked of the world, the Gentiles, who alſo many of them gave tithes to their Prieſts, as Carleton ſheweth in his treatiſe of Tithes : which may ſerve to diſcover their weakneſſe, who ſay, that paying Tithes is Jewiſh and a part of the ceremoniall Law, which is done away. It is true, there were ſome things ceremoniall before the time of Moſes, which are now abrogated, as the diſtinction betwixt beaſts and fowles cleane and uncleane, the offering of ſacrifices and abſtaining from bloud. But tithes were not of this ſort, becauſe they are not figurative, as thoſe were, bloud, of Chriſts bloud, ſacrifices of his offering himſelfe a ſacrifice for our ſinnes, the beaſts cleane and uncleane of thoſe that are within the Covenant, and of thoſe that were excluded herefrom. But of what tithes were a figure let him tell that can, for although י as it is a numerall letter ſignifying ten, is the firſt letter of the name of Jeſus, yet it cannot hence be gathered that tithes figured out Jeſus, becauſe they are never by this letter ſet forth, but by the word מעשר. And paying tithe was an honour done to Melchiſedek as the Prieſt of the moſt High God, to whom that which was done had no ground in the Ceremoniall Law, either in the offering that was brought him bread and wine, or the giver of tith to him, that is, Abraham, in whom Levi and conſequently Aaron paid tithe, as the Apoſtle reaſoneth, *Heb.*7. The honour which was once due to God and his Prieſt is alwayes due, if not by God abrogated : but ſuch was this of tithing, and therefore ſtill due to him, that is after his order, viz. Jeſus, and that what is done to his miniſters he affirmeth is done to himſelf, proveth, that although no Law be by him made for Hierom. this under the New Teſtament, yet Chriſtian people ſhould voluntarily give them in ful, as they would not be counted ſuch as rob their God. Jerome compareth that which is here ſpoken with *Nehem.*13.10,11. where it is ſaid, that the Levites had not their portions, by means whereof the houſe of God was forſaken and their Covenant made chap.10.35,36,37. of duly paying firſt fruits and tithes broken, and that which is implyed by the Lords ſaying, bring al the tithes into my houſe, and I wil open the windows of heaven and powre you down a bleſſing,&c. with *Nehem.*5.2,3,4. where mention is made of a dearth, whereby they were greatly impoveriſhed, and ſaith, that what is there ſpoken by way of hiſtorical relation, the Prophet Malachi (whom he taketh to be Ezra) goeth upon in this place. Tithes and firſt fruits were not paid, as God had commanded for the maintenance of his Service, whereby his Miniſters were diſcouraged from attending ſo duly upon their ſervice about the Temple, and God was wronged by the holding back of that which he reſerved of their encreaſe to himſelf. Hereupon God in wrath ſmote the land with dearth, by withholding rain and ſending Caterpillars and Cankerworms to eat up and conſume their fruits. And for this he challengeth them for robbing God, and promiſeth upon the amending of this fault to bleſſe them with great plenty. And this indeed ſerves well for the opening of this Text, not being without looking to that relation ſo fully underſtood. And although the caſe of the Levites be here peculiarly handled, to whom Tithes by Gods Ordinance were then due, a part whereof was to goe to the poore, yet it cannot hence be gathered, that tithes ſhould not be paid to Gods Miniſters now under the Goſpell, becauſe our Lord Jeſus was ſo far from releaſing theſe, that he required much more in his followers, viz. to ſell all and to give it to the poor, and therefore, becauſe few would truly doe this, namely thoſe extraordinarily ſtirred up, who ſold their poſſeſſions and brought the price and laid it downe at the Apoſtles feet, Tithes at the leaſt are to be given, or elſe the hire ſhall be denyed, of which our Lord ſaith, that the labourer is worthy, and the double honour, of which the Apoſtle ſaith, the Elders, that rule well, are worthy of double honour, eſpecially they that labour in the Word and Doctrine. Gualter alſo ſaith, that according to Gods example godly Princes have aſſigned tithes for the maintenance of his Miniſters, and the relief of the poor, and the keeping of Churches in repair, as Jerom writeth to Nepotianus, and therefore it is ſacriledge for Noble men to take them away in any place, as they have done, and to aſſign them to Monks and Fryers, and for Miniſters of Cathedrals, to extend their revenues thus by robbing of others in their particular places, which abuſe the Princes of the earth had need to reform, and in the meane ſeaſon let all men pay what they have uſed and is allotted to the Miniſters maintenance, as they would not together with them be guilty of the foul ſinne of ſacriledge. For the words here in the Hebrew it is ▭קבעי coming of a word ſignifying to take by rapine to deſtroy, and according to Jerome ſuffigere, to fix, whereupon he conceiveth, that the nailing of Chriſt to the Croſſe is here intimated, but how this ſhould be I ſee not, but the word having other ſignifications, that is to be preferred, which agreeth beſt to the matter in hand, and that is committing rapine about Tithes, or robbing, or ſpoiling God, as a man that hath his goods taken from him, for ſo tithes are the goods of God whereby he maintaineth his ſervants the Miniſters, that attend upon him in his houſe. For which cauſe he pronounceth them accurſed, as ſacriledge commonly hath a curſe accompanying it, a curſe waſting and conſuming his eſtate, that committeth it, and the curſe of unſeaſonable weather in the land where it is generally committed, and conſequently of great fan ins Thus even ſome heathens, that have robbed their gods, have been puniſhed, and it is not to be paſſed over without obſervation, how many men of fair eſtates in this land have had all waſted by this meanes, and the Proteſtant Princes of Germany, ſpecially the Count Palatine of the Rein, taking all tithes into their hands have loſt all. For offerings here ſpoken of the Vulgar hath firſt fruits, but the word ſignifieth offerings, onely whereas the firſt fruits were an heave offering lifted up, as the word ▭רו ſignifieth, they may come under this name alſo. Touching tithes ſaid before by Jerome going in part to the poore, that was a by miſtake of the tithe of the third year, *Deut.*14.28. upon which ſee my Expoſition there.

V. 14. Yee have ſaid, it is vaine to ſerve God, and what profit is their that we have kept kept his Ordinance. Here the Prophet goeth on to accuſe them of another groſſe ſinne of prophane ſpeaking againſt God, as if hee had no regard to mens well or ill doing, they that doe well and are obſervant towards him, being no whit remunerated with good therefore, nor they that doe evill the leſſe bleſſed. Wherein he proſecuteth more at large the argument, upon which he was, chap. 2. 1. And this ſhewed the height of impiety to be in them, as in the wicked brought in ſpeaking likewiſe, what profit Job 21.15. ſhall we have if wee call upon him? And indeed if we look onely at otward Eccleſ.9.2. things of this life, it is to the uncleane, as to the cleane, to him that ſacrifieth not, as to him that ſacrificeth, yea the wicked often flouriſh moſt here, as is complained, Pſal. 73. Job 21.7, 8. and it is a thing, wherewith even the righteous through their weakneſſe are ſometimes much affected: But V. 16. they recollect themſelves, as David did, and then they ſpeak one to another, as is here ſaid, and what doe they ſpeak, but although it bee thus for a time in this worke for their triall, and the making of the wicked more unexcuſable, and the aggravatings of their finall condemnation, yet in the end they that fear God ſhall have ſo great a weight of glory, that the 2 Cor. 17. momentary afflictions ſhall bee no way comparable thereunto, and the wicked that laugh now ſhall waile and weepe world without end.

V. 17. And they ſhall be mine, ſaith the Lord of Hoaſts, in that day that I make up my jewels, and I will ſpare them, &c. Heb. in the day that I make my peculiar, for it is סגל peculium, ſo likewiſe the Vulgar Latine, and Calvin, the meaning is, they ſhall bee my peculiar people, in whom it ſhall appeare that I delight in the day that I ſhall make, that is, a day of diſtinction and ſeparation betwixt the vile and the Pretious, the Sheep and the Goates, that V. 18. fear God, and that feare him not, as verſ. 18. So that the day here ſpoken Note. of is the day of judgment, wherein every mans worke ſhall be made manifeſt, and it ſhall appeare even to men what every one is, which lyeth hid from them here being knowne onely to God, but then it ſhall both 1 Cor.3.13. be known, and ſuch as feare God ſhall as his peculiar people be taken up to remaine ever with the Lord, the wicked being put down and ſent into the everlaſting flames of hell fire. And it is called the day, becauſe as in the day all things are made manifeſt, but in the dark night, ſuch as the time now is, unſeen.

CHAP. IV.

V. 1. F*Or the day cometh that ſhall burn like an oven, and all the proud and the wicked ſhall be as ſtubble.* Here it is further made plaine, that the day before ſpoken of is the day of judgment, when the wicked ſhall burn for ever, as things in a a moſt hot fiery Oven. And in the Hebrew this whole chapter goeth on, as a part of the third without any diſtinction from it. The day of the Lord ſhall burn them up, and leave them neither root nor branch, this is added, to ſhew the deſperate condition of the wicked in that day, they being like a Cyrill. a tree cut down and burnt the very ſtub ſo, as that not ſo much as one branch remaineth, whereby there may be hope of growing up againe, for ſo they ſhall periſh and never be delivered.

V. 2. But to you that fear me the Son of righteouſneſſe ſhall ariſe with healing in his wings, and yee ſhall go forth and grow up as the calves of the ſtall: the word פשתם here uſed ſignifieth, yee ſhall be multiplyed, the Vulgar, and Calvin yet render it, ſalietis, yee ſhall leap, which beſt agreeth with the ſimilitude taken from Calves of the ſtall, which being let out run about and leap moſt joyfully as full of good bloud, ſo the people of God ariſing out of their graves at the laſt day, ſhall Gualter. be as fair & fat cattle exulting and rejoicing exceedingly. Some underſtand this as ſpoken firſt of ſpirituall comfort and joy, that the faithfull ſhall have in Chriſt

Chriſt, and the joy which the Jewes had after victories obtained over the captaines of Antiochus Epiphanes in the time of the Maccabees, extending it alſo, as verſ. 1. to the threatnings againſt the wicked alſo. And Calvin noteth a like place, *Eſa.*60.1,2. where it is ſaid the glory of God ſhall ariſe upon the righteous. But I prefer that which went before, as being the moſt ancient and commonly received Expoſition, and beſt agreeing to the words, being a more large explication of that which was ſaid more briefly chap.3. 18. of the difference apparently put betwixt the righteous and the wicked, and to that which he ſaid of the day, which the Lord ſhould make, ſith that under the Goſpell inlightening the world this is not done, but ſtill all things fall out alike unto all. But then the Sun of righteouſneſſe ſhall ariſe to them that fear God, not to the wicked. The ſame that is called the Sonne of God, our Jeſus, and our Redeemer, is here ſet forth as the Sun for the bright Math.25.31. ſplendour and glory, wherein he ſhall come at the laſt day, his face ſhining as the Sun, *Revel.*1.2. for his turning the darkneſſe of affliction and ſorrow to his people into the light of comfort everlaſting. 3. For the making of them glorious, as by the reflexion of the Sun beams things are made to ſhine, that are made of gold. 4. For his being thence forth the onely light making one perpetuall day, for then there ſhall not bee day and night any more, Sunne, Moone or Starres, but God and the Lamb ſhall be our onely Revel. 21. light for ever. 5. By this Sunnes light things ſhall be ſeen in their proper colours, which before were obſcured. And healing is ſaid to bee in his wings, that is, his beams, which are ſpread as wings farre and wide over all his people, healing all their infirmities, if any of them have been bruiſed or broken in body by perſecution, or crooked or lame when they were laid into the grave, or any way blemiſhed, making them at their 1 Cor. 15. comming forth ſound and ſpecious, for the body ſown in weakneſſe ſhall riſe in glory.

V. 3. And yee ſhall tread the wicked under the ſoles of your feet, as aſhes: whereby the baſe condition of the wicked, wherein they ſhall then be, is ſet forth, and the high honour, to which the righteous ſhall be advanced, as the Iſraelites ſometimes troad the Canaanitiſh Kings under their feet, being brought forth out of the Cave by Joſhua, where he had before ſhut them up.

V. 4. Remember the Law of Moſes, which I commanded to him for all Iſrael, &c. that is, to the end yee may attain to this high honour and glory, think continually upon my commandements, wherein the fear of me is taught to live and doe accordingly, for this is to fear God, to eſchew evill thereby forbidden, and of giving them warning here to doe ſo, the reaſon of Calvin Joh. 1, 13 is good, becauſe they ſhould have no more Prophets till the coming of Chriſt, but they had the Law as a rule to walk by.

V. 5. Behold I will ſend you Elijah the Prophet before that great and terrible day of the Lord cometh. The Septuagint for Elijah the Prophet hath Elijah the Tiſhbite, whereby the Fathers generally have been deceived, taking the coming again of Elijah to convert the Jews to be here meant, only Jerome underſtands it to be ſo ſpoken of John the Baptiſt, as Chriſt expounds it, Matth. 17. and Rupertus after him, of which alſo ſome reaſons are rendred, as firſt becauſe it is here added leſt I come and ſmite the earth at once, for in the time of John the Baptiſt there was no danger of this, but at the great and terrible day of judgement next ſpoken of. 2. John the Baptiſt denyed himſelfe to be a Prophet, but this Elijah is affirmed to be one. 3. In Eccleſiaſticus his coming is ſpoken of with this epithite, the Tiſhbite. But to all theſe I anſwer, 1. That although it were long before Chriſts coming to judgement in the dayes of John Baptiſt, yet in regard of God it was not long, but noviſſima hora, the laſt houre. 2. John denyed not himſelfe to be a Prophet, but the Prophet, which was one of the names, whereby Chriſt was ſet forth. 3. The book Deut. 18,18. of Eccleſiaſticus being Apocryphall is no ground of faith for us to goe upon. This then is no more then what was ſaid before, chap.3.1. I ſend my meſſenger before my face, where likewiſe the day of the Lords firſt coming is ſet forth, as terrible to the Jews for the moſt part being therefore likened to a refiners fire. And it is ſpoken in reference to the words before going about taking heed to Moſes his Law, whereby the faithfull might be diſcouraged, as deſpairing of any Prophets coming amongſt them more, for in this regard hee telleth them, that he will ſend Elias the chief of all the Prophets to prepare them for the Meſſiah, leſt in ſtead of bleſſing ſmiting ſhould by him finally come to them all, and to the whole earth for ſin, For the laſt words; Hee ſhall turne the hearts of the Father to their children, &c. ſee Luk.1.17.
